The ſecond is ſent to the Biſhops of England, who had conſulted him upon many Articles, and particularly about Simoniacal Biſhops; he orders, that ſuch ſhould be try'd in a Council. He afterwards gives them a ſatisfactory Anſwer to their other Queſtions: Concerning the firſt he ſays, 1. That the Hierarchy conſiſts of Biſhops and Clergymen. 2. That every Biſhop is to govern his Dioceſs, by his Prieſts and other Clergy, and make his Viſitations. 3. That Prieſts ought not to be obliged by them to carry the Eulogies to the Councils. 4. That Charms are a ſort of Witchcraft. 5. That no Body ought to marry his Kinſwoman. 6. That the Biſhops ought to regulate their Judgments, by the Canons of the Councils, and the Decrees of the Popes Silveſter, Siricus, &c. but might alſo make uſe of the Authorities of St. Jerom, St. Auguſtine, and St. Iſidore.

We have ſome Fragments of a Letter of Leo, againſt Nomenoeus Duke of Britain; of another to Lotharius, in which he refuſes the Pall, to the Biſhop of Autun; and of a third to Hincmarus, concerning the Council of Soiſſons.

Laſtly, There is a Diſcourſe attributed to this Pope, directed to the Prieſts and Biſhops, containing a great many Inſtructions relating to their Miniſtry and Duty. [All theſe Letters of Pope Leo, are put into the 8*th*. Tome of the Councils, p. 30.]

Benedict III. Benedict III. of that Name, was choſen in July, 855. after the death of Leo the IV. His Election was oppoſed by a Prieſt, called Athanaſius, who through the favour of the Commiſſioners of the Emperor, poſſeſt himſelf of the See and Palace of Rome; he alſo put Benedict into Priſon: But at laſt, ſuch as eſpous'd Athanaſius's Cauſe, were forc'd to yield, and to depoſe him themſelves, and to acknowledge Benedict. This Pope was but two Years and an half in the Papal Seat, and we have but two Letters of his; one to Hincmarus, concerning the Council of Soiſſons, and the Privileges of the Church of Rheims; and the other to the Biſhops of Charles's Kingdom, by the which he cites to Rome, Hubert Son of Boſon, who had quitted his Profeſſion of a Clergyman, and liv'd a lewd and irregular Life.

There are alſo two other Letters attributed to this Pope; one to confirm the Privileges of the Abby of Corbey; and another to ratifie thoſe of the Abby of St. Denis. But ſince theſe Writings are doubtful, and particularly the laſt, we ſhall inſiſt no longer upon them. Theſe four Letters are printed together in Tom. 8. of the Councils.

Nicholas I. Nicholas the firſt, Son of Theodorus a Roman, was ordain'd Subdeacon by Pope Sergius, and Deacon by Pope Leo IV. He acquired a great Reputation under the Pontificate of Benedict III. He was choſen after the Death of this Pope by the Clergy and Grandees of Rome to his See, in the Year 858. and was conſecrated in Preſence of the Emperor Lewis, the 22*d*. of April. He had at the Beginning of his Pontificate a Difference with John Archbiſhop of Ravenna, againſt whom many had brought Complaints to the Holy See. He cited him three ſeveral Times to a Synod of Rome. But this Arch-

Archbiſhop not appearing, he excommunicated him. John upon this had immediate Recourſe to the Emperor, who was then at Pavia, and afterwards came to Rome with ſome Officers, which that Prince ſent to accompany him. The Pope told thoſe Officers, That they ought not to join themſelves with one that was excommunicate; and at the ſame Time cited John to the Synod that was to be held in November. But inſtead of obeying, John immediately left Rome. The Senators of Ravenna, and the People of Æmilia pray'd the Pope to come himſelf in Perſon to Ravenna to reform the Diſorders that John had cauſed there. He went and reſtored to the People of Æmilia and Pentapolis the great Riches that John and his Brother had got into their Poſſeſſion. John fled to Pavia to beg the Aſſiſtance of the Emperor Lewis, but this Prince counſelled him to ſubmit to the Pope, and to reconcile himſelf to him. Which he did; and the Pope gave him Abſolution from the Hereſie of which he cleared himſelf, and received him again into his Communion. And upon the Complaints of the Biſhop and People of Æmilia, he order'd him to come every Year to the Synod at Rome: To ordain no Biſhops but ſuch as were choſen by the Duke, Clergy, and People, and whoſe Election was firſt confirm'd by the Holy See. To permit the Biſhops of Æmilia to come to Rome when they pleaſed. To exact nothing of them, and not to ſeize upon any Revenues, under Pretence that they belong'd to him, till it was plainly determined by the Holy See, or Commiſſioners from it, that they did really belong to him. This Decree of the Pope was approv'd of by the Synod.

This Affair was follow'd by many others of greater Conſequence, which Nicholas maintain'd with a great Deal of Courage and Vigor. The Principal are the Intruſion of Photius, and the unjuſt Depoſing of Ignatius; the Divorce of Thietberga; the Depoſing of Rothadus, and the Converſion of the Bulgarians: Which are not neceſſary to be any farther ſpoken of here, becauſe I have treated of them in other Places of this Volume. And this is alſo the Reaſon that I have but little to ſay of his Letters, which are near an hundred; becauſe the Courſe of our Hiſtory about theſe Affairs, hath obliged us to make an Extract of them upon other Occaſions. The firſt ſixteen are a Collection, which he made himſelf of thoſe, which related to the Caſe of Ignatius and Photius. The reſt concern the Affairs of France, the Peace between the Kings, the Divorce of Thietberga, of Lotharius, the Excommunication of Waldrada, the Pardoning of Count Baldwin, the Affair of Ingelrunda and Boſon, the Judgment pronounc'd againſt Rothadus Biſhop of Soiſſons, the Affair of Ebbo, the Privileges of ſome Abbys, the Promotion of Hildacius to the Biſhoprick of Cambray, the Diſpute between the Biſhop of Mans and the Monks of St. Kallais, the Pall granted to Egilo Archbiſhop of Sens, the Biſhopricks of Brittany, which the Dukes of that Country had a mind to take away from the Metropolis of Tours, and the Objections of the Greeks againſt the Church of Rome, about which he conſults the Biſhops of France.

But there is one of theſe Letters, in which he anſwers Rodulphus Archbiſhop of Bourges, about ſeveral Points of Diſcipline, which we cannot paſs over in Silence. It contains ſeven Articles. The firſt relates to the Ordaining of Prieſts and Deacons by Suffragans. Some Biſhops of France depoſed thoſe they had ordained; and others re-ordained them. Becauſe, ſays he, Suffragans were created in Imitation of the Seventy Diſciples, who might perform Epiſcopal Functions. But becauſe the Canons forbid Suffragans to execute theſe Functions, he orders the Canons for the Future to be obſerv'd.

The ſecond is upon the Complaint the Archbiſhop of Narbonne made, That the Archbiſhop of Bourges forc'd his Clergy to commence their Differences in his Courts, and be tried by him; and that he diſpoſed of ſeveral Matters that belong'd to his Dioceſs, without conſulting him about it. Nicholas admoniſhed the Archbiſhop of Bourges of this, and told him, That his Quality of Primate and Patriarch did not allow him that Privilege. And that he ought to content himſelf to be Judge of Appeals of Cauſes which had been tried before by the Archbiſhop of Narbonne. He repeats anew, upon this Occaſion, the Canons that conſtitute the Rights of Patriarchs and Primates.

In the third he declares, That in the Church of Rome they never anoint the Hands of thoſe Prieſts and Deacons that are ordain'd with the Chryſm: Adding, that he never read that it was practiſed.

The fourth permits the Archbiſhop of Bourges to moderate the Penance, and relax ſomething of the Rigour of Canons made againſt ſuch, as having undertaken a State of Penance, return again to the World.

The fifth is about thoſe that are obliged to bring to Confirmation ſuch Children as their Wives have had by a former Husband. He ſays, That if they have been guilty of the Neglect of it thro' Ignorance, they ought not to be parted from their Wives, but only made to do Penance.

The ſixth orders, That ſuch as have kill'd their Wives, unleſs they have taken them in Adultery, ſhall be made to undergo the Penance of Homicides.

The ſeventh intimates, That the Biſhops ought to repeat the Gloria in Excelſis, on Holy-Thurſday at Maſs. But it is not permitted to any to wear the Pall on this Day, unleſs they have Leave from the Holy See.

Father Dacherius in the twelfth Tome of his Spicilegium, has publiſh'd another Canonical Letter of Nicholas the firſt, ſent to Herdnicus Archbiſhop of Beſançon, in which the Pope preſcribes the following Rules.

First, he proves by the Canons, That ſuch as have married two Siſters, may not marry any more for the Future.

Secondly, That thoſe that have married their Relations, and are upon that Account divorc'd, cannot marry as long as either of them lives; but that it is not forbidden when one of them dies.

Thirdly, he alſo believes, That Marriage ought not to be abſolutely forbidden to ſuch as have committed the Crime of Sodomy, provided they repent of their Sin, and have left off that curſed Habit.

Fourthly, he ſhews, That the Election of a Biſhop by the Clergy and chief Men of the Dioceſs, ought to ſtand good.

In the fifth Article he ſays, That it is forbidden Suffragans, not only to ordain Prieſts and Deacons, but alſo to conſecrate Churches and confirm Children, which only belongs to the Biſhops, as we may obſerve, not only by the Cuſtoms of the Church, but alſo by the Acts of the Apoſtles.

The laſt ſhews, That a Prieſt that is once fall'n into, and convict of a foul Crime, can no more be reſtored to his Function.

There is another Work of Nicholas the firſt, concerning Church Diſcipline, yet more conſiderable than the former. 'Tis his Anſwer to the Queſtions of the Bulgarians, which contains * above 100. Articles. viz. 106.

In the firſt he ſays, That the Religion of Jeſus Chriſt conſiſts in Faith and Good Works.

The ſecond is concerning the Spiritual Affinity between God-fathers and their God-children, which hinders their ever marrying together.

The third is about the Ceremonies of Marriage. He ſays, That after the betrothing, the Prieſt ought to cauſe the Perſons to come into the Church with their Offerings, and there give them his Benediction and the Veil, which is not to be given in ſecond Marriages. That being gone out of the Church, they ſhould wear Crowns upon their Heads. Theſe are the ordinary and ſolemn Ceremonies, which, as the Greeks ſay of theirs, need not nevertheleſs always be obſerved. That conſent, according to the Laws, might ſuffice; and that if that be wanting, the reſt ſignifies nothing.

The fourth ſets down the Faſts which are obſerved in the Church of Rome; 1. Lent; 2. The Faſt after Whitſunday; 3. That before the Aſſumption of the Bleſſed Virgin; 4. That before Chriſtmas; 5. The ſixth Day of every Week; and 6. All the Vigils or Eves of great Feaſts.

In the fifth he ſays, That the Faſt on Wedneſday is not commanded, but that of Friday is.

In the ſixth, That it is not forbid to bathe on thoſe Days.

In the ſeventh and eighth he approves of the Cuſtom of carrying and kiſſing the Croſs, and of the Relicks, in Lent.

In the ninth he extols the Cuſtom of communicating every Day in Lent, provided the Communicant be engaged in no Sin, nor has any mortal Crime lying upon his Conſcience.

The tenth is about the Celebration of Sunday.

The eleventh ſets down the Feaſts in which we muſt forbear working, to aſſiſt at Divine Service.

In the twelfth he ſays it is to be wiſh'd that Men would on thoſe Days forbear alſo trying civil and criminal Affairs.

In the thirteenth he excuſes himſelf for not ſending them Civil Laws.

In the fourteenth he aggravates the Cruelty which was us'd towards a Greek, who had his Ears and Noſe cut off for pretending to be a Prieſt, and baptizing a great many People.

In the fifteenth he ſays, That ſuch Perſons ought not to be re-baptized in the Name of the Holy Trinity.

In the ſixteenth he ſays, That thoſe that did thus abuſe this Prieſt ought to be put to Penance.

In the ſeventeenth he blames the King for executing the principal Leaders of a Rebellion raiſed againſt him by the Bulgarians, whom he had cauſed to be baptized. And he ſays that he has committed a great Sin, and particularly in the murthering their Infants who were innocent. But ſince he did it thro' a violent Zeal for Religion, and a blind Ignorance, he hopes he may obtain Mercy, if he repent.

In the eighteenth he ſays, That thoſe that have been baptized, and after forſake Chriſtianity, ought to be firſt admoniſhed by them, that held them to the Font; that if they do not reform, they ought to be accuſed to the Church; and that if they refuſe to obey the Church, they ſhould be puniſh'd by the Prince's Authority.

In the nineteenth he ſays, They may make uſe of the Rigor of their Laws againſt thoſe, as would take away the Lives of their Princes. Nevertheleſs, he exhorts the King to pardon ſuch Offenders. This, and the following Articles relate more to Civil Policy than Church Diſcipline.

In

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 41*st.* he forbids forcing Infidels to the Faith, and adviſes them to avoid communicating with them.

In the 44*th.* and thoſe that follow, he forbids Hunting, Examining Cauſes, Playing, Marrying, or Feaſting in Lent; and in the 50*th.* leaves it to the Prudence of the Biſhop or Prieſt, who have the Care of Conſciences, to determine after what Manner a Man ſhould live with his Wife during that Time.

In the 51*ſt.* he expreſly forbids Men to have two Wives at a Time. In the 53*d.* he ſays, That it is permitted to all Believers, to make the Sign of the Croſs upon the Table, and to give a Benediction thereupon in the Abſence of the Prieſt. In the 54*th.* he does not diſapprove of the Cuſtom of the Greeks, who thro' humility uſed always to waſh their Hands before they went into the Church; but nevertheleſs, he does not command it. In the 55*th.* he ſays, he does not think it needful to force People newly converted to pay their Debts, that they may be received into Communion. In the 56*th.* he approves of the Cuſtom of ordering Prayers and Faſts for Temporal Neceſſities, as in a Time of Drought, &c. In the 57*th.* he rejects the Superſtition of the Greeks, who would not eat any Beaſts kill'd by Eunuchs. In the 58*th.* he orders, according to the Precept of the Apoſtle, that Women ſhould have their Heads covered in the Church. The 59*th.* and 60*th.* relate to their Habits and the Hours of Eating. In the 61*ſt.* he recommends continual Prayer to them. In the 62*d.* he forbids them to make uſe of a certain Stone that they believ'd would heal or cure a Diſeaſe. The 63*d.* and 64*th.* ſhew the Time when it is moſt proper to abſtain from the Uſe of Marriage. The 65*th.* commands to receive the Euchariſt faſting, and allows thoſe to come to the Communion, who have bled much at the Noſe or Mouth; for which he makes Uſe of the Example of the Woman in the Goſpel, who being ſick of a Bloody-flux, touched Chriſt's Garment; which makes it credible, that he doth not debar Women from it that are under the like Inconvenience. In the 66*th.* he forbids them to enter their Church with their Turbans on their Heads. In the 67*th.* he forbids the Bulgarians to ſwear by their Sword, or by the Name of any Creature. The 68*th.* allows Women newly brought to Bed, to enter into the Church. In the 69*th.* he ſays, That the ſolemn Times of adminiſtring Baptiſm are the Feaſts of Eaſter and Whitſuntide; but that it is not neceſſary to obſerve this in regard of the People newly converted, no more than in reſpect of ſuch as are in Danger of Death. The 70*th.* directs that they ought not to depoſe a Prieſt who hath a Wife; and that it is not lawful for Laymen to judge of Prieſts. The 71*ſt.* ſhews that Prieſts, how wicked ſoever they are, cannot defile the Sacraments; and that they may be received from them with Security. The 72*d.* is about the Queſtion propounded to him concerning a Patriarch: He ſays, he cannot anſwer whether he ſhall grant them one, till he knows their Number of Chriſtians: That a Biſhop may ſerve their Turn in the mean Time; and that if their Number of Believers encreaſe, and that there be divers Churches and divers Biſhops, he will make Choice of one of them for their Patriarch, or rather Archbiſhop. In the 73*d.* he ſays, that the Patriarch, Biſhop, or Archbiſhop muſt not be ordained but by the ſupreme Biſhop; and then he that is ordained by him, having receiv'd the Privilege of Metropolitan from the Holy See, may ordain other Biſhops. That after this there would be no more Need of coming to Rome for the Ordination of their Archbiſhop, who then might be ordained by the other Biſhops, upon Condition that he doth not execute any Part of his Office till he has received the Pall. The 74*th.* aſſerts that Men may pray any where. The 75*th.* and 76*th.* That the Biſhops that he will ſend them, ſhall bring the Rules of Penance which they deſired, together with a Miſſal. In the 77*th.* he forbids them to have any thing to do with Lots, by putting a Pin into a Book to find out any Thing they are in Suſpicion of. The 78*th.* declares, that Penance ought to be refus'd to none. In the 79*th.* he forbids ſuperſtitious Ligatures made uſe of to cure Men. The following Articles relate to Peace, Agreements or Bargains, Judgments and Civil Puniſhments. In the 87*th.* he forbids forcing Widows to become Nuns. The 88*th.* ſays, that it is not lawful to pray for ſuch as dy'd in their Infidelity. The 89*th.* recommends to them the Cuſtom of offering the Firſt-fruits of the Earth. The 90*th.* ſays, that it is lawful to eat Birds which have not been bled in killing them. The 91*ſt.* forbids Chriſtians to eat Beaſts kill'd or hunted by Infidels. In the 92*d.* he declares that they are the proper Patriarchs who govern the Churches founded by the Apoſtles, which are only Rome, Alexandria, and Antioch. That the Biſhops of Conſtantinople and Jeruſalem are alſo called Patriarchs; but they have not ſo great Authority as theſe three. In the 93*d.* he declares that of Alexandria to be the ſecond Patriarch. In the 94*th.* he declares the Cheat of the Greeks, who ſaid that Chryſm came firſt from their Country. The 95*th.* ſays, that they ought not to be taken from the Church who have fled thither for Sanctuary. In the 96*th.* he forbids Husbands to be divorced from their Wives, if it be not for Adultery. In the 97*th.* he exhorts Maſters to pardon their Slaves that have offended them. In the 98*th.* he is willing that ſuch as kill themſelves ſhould be buried, for fear their putrid Bodies ſhould occaſion Infection; but he would have no Obſequies beſtowed upon them, nor any Sacrifice or Prayer offer'd for them. In the 99*th.* he permits ſuch to be buried in the Church as have liv'd well. The 100*th.* approves of the Cuſtom of carrying dead Bodies into their own Countries. In the 101*ſt.* he commends Alms. In the 102*d.* he forbids doing violence to Pagans to convert them. In the 103*d.* he commands them to burn the Books of the Saracens. The 104*th.* is concerning the validity of Baptiſm adminiſtred by a Jew, who had no Religion. Nicholas the firſt anſwers, that ſuch ought not to be re-baptized, if he did, confer it upon them in the name of the Trinity. In the 105*th.* he ſpeaks of thoſe that preach'd a Doctrine contrary to that of the Apoſtles. He anſwers that they ought not to be heard: But that it doth not belong to the Bulgarian Lay-men to judge whether the Doctrine be true, or not. In the laſt he exhorts them to take Inſtructions from none but the Church of Rome, which always delivers the Truth to ſuch as deſire it.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

These are the Deciſions or Anſwers of Nicholas the firſt in this Work. This Pope was a great Canoniſt. He wrote readily and with Authority. He often quoted the Canons and Decretals of the Popes. He maintain'd the Grandeur of his See with vigour, and manag'd the moſt difficult Matters he was concern'd in with Honour. M. de Marca obſerves, that he had done ſome Injuries to the Diſcipline and Liberties of the Church, by maintaining that it was not lawful to aſſemble a National Synod without the conſent of the Pope: In attributing to himſelf the Appeals of the Clergies Caſes determined in National Synods; and alſo after a Review brought, in citing the Perſons and Cauſes to Rome to be there determined anew, inſtead of appointing Judges on the Places; and affirming, that the Cauſes of Biſhops wholly belong'd to his Cognizance. But theſe Pretenſions have not been acknowledg'd by the Church, and particularly by that of France, who have always kept to their Liberties without the leaſt diminution of Reſpect and Submiſſion due to the Holy See. [Theſe Epiſtles are all put out in Tome VIII. of the Councils.]

After the death of Nicholas the firſt, which happened the 13*th.* of November in the Year 867. Adrian the ſecond, who was about 76 Years of Age, was choſen in his place. He was a Roman, the Son of Talarus, related to the Popes Stephen the fourth and Sergius the Younger. Gregory the fourth ordained him Prieſt, and gave him the Title of St. Mark. His Liberality gained him a great repute in Rome, and he was propoſed to be choſen Pope after the death of Leo the fourth, and Benedict the third. And after the death of Nicholas he obtain'd it both by the Votes of the People, who lov'd him, and by the joynt conſent of both Parties of Grandees. Lewis the Emperor approved of his Election; and he was ordained the 14*th.* of December. He was at firſt ſuſpected not to favour much the Memory of his Predeceſſor Nicholas the firſt, becauſe he ſeem'd not ſo ſevere towards Lotharius and Waldrada, as he had been. But he freed himſelf from this ſuſpicion, and reunited thoſe to him that before had forſaken his Intereſt upon this account. Adrian II.

The beginning of his Pontificate was diſturb'd by the Invaſion of Rome, which the Duke of Spoleto ſeiz'd on, and harraſs'd with Robberies and Plundering of his Soldiers. But Rome was deliver'd both by the Authority of the Emperor, who depriv'd the Duke of Spoleto of his own Dominions, and the Thunderbolts of Excommunication which the Pope ſent out againſt theſe Robbers. A Peace was no ſooner granted to the Church of Rome, but the Affair of Photius was brought before Pope Adrian. The Emperor Baſilius having reſtored Ignatius, ſent ſome of his Officers to Rome to accompany the Deputies of Ignatius and Photius. Thoſe of Photius's ſide were drown'd for the moſt part, and there appear'd in his behalf but one inconſiderable Monk call'd Methodius, who durſt not maintain his Cauſe, and who ſuffer'd himſelf to be cited thrice, and was at laſt condemn'd for Non-appearance. But the Officer of the great Emperor, and John Metropolitan of Caſaria in Cappadocia, having preſented to Pope Adrian the Tranſactions of the pretended Council which Photius had aſſembled againſt Pope Nicholas the firſt, he cauſed them to be examined and condemned in a Council which pronounced an Anathema againſt Photius, and had the Book burnt which he wrote againſt Pope Nicholas. After this Adrian ſent Legates to Conſtantinople to aſſiſt in his name at the eighth General Council. They had at firſt all the ſatisfaction they could wiſh, but after the Council, they enter'd upon the Affair of Bulgaria, and after it was debated in their hearing, judged that it ought to be ſubject to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, which troubled the Legates extreamly. Wherefore having proteſted againſt, and declared this Judgment null, they immediately left the City diſſatisfied. And being but very meanly accompanied, they fell into the hands of the Archbiſhop not appearing, he excommunicated him. John upon this had immediate Recourſe to the Emperor, who was then at Pavia, and afterwards came to Rome with ſome Officers, which that Prince ſent to accompany him. The Pope told thoſe Officers, That they ought not to join themſelves with one that was excommunicate; and at the ſame Time cited John to the Synod that was to be held in November. But inſtead of obeying, John immediately left Rome. The Senators of Ravenna, and the People of Æmilia pray'd the Pope to come himſelf in Perſon to Ravenna to reform the Diſorders that John had cauſed there. He went and reſtored to the People of Æmilia and Pentapolis the great Riches that John and his Brother had got into their Poſſeſſion. John fled to Pavia to beg the Aſſiſtance of the Emperor Lewis, but this Prince counſelled him to ſubmit to the Pope, and to reconcile himſelf to him. Which he did; and the Pope gave him Abſolution from the Hereſie of which he cleared himſelf, and received him again into his Communion. And upon the Complaints of the Biſhop and People of Æmilia, he order'd him to come every Year to the Synod at Rome: To ordain no Biſhops but ſuch as were choſen by the Duke, Clergy, and People, and whoſe Election was firſt confirm'd by the Holy See. To permit the Biſhops of Æmilia to come to Rome when they pleaſed. To exact nothing of them, and not to ſeize upon any Revenues, under Pretence that they belong'd to him, till it was plainly determined by the Holy See, or Commiſſioners from it, that they did really belong to him. This Decree of the Pope was approv'd of by the Synod.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

This Affair was follow'd by many others of greater Conſequence, which Nicholas maintain'd with a great Deal of Courage and Vigor. The Principal are the Intruſion of Photius, and the unjuſt Depoſing of Ignatius; the Divorce of Thietberga; the Depoſing of Rothadus, and the Converſion of the Bulgarians: Which are not neceſſary to be any farther ſpoken of here, becauſe I have treated of them in other Places of this Volume. And this is alſo the Reaſon that I have but little to ſay of his Letters, which are near an hundred; becauſe the Courſe of our Hiſtory about theſe Affairs, hath obliged us to make an Extract of them upon other Occaſions. The firſt ſixteen are a Collection, which he made himſelf of thoſe, which related to the Caſe of Ignatius and Photius. The reſt concern the Affairs of France, the Peace between the Kings, the Divorce of Thietberga, of Lotharius, the Excommunication of Waldrada, the Pardoning of Count Baldwin, the Affair of Ingeltruda and Boſon, the Judgment pronounc'd againſt Rothadus Biſhop of Soiſſons, the Affair of Ebbo, the Privileges of ſome Abbys, the Promotion of Hildacius to the Biſhoprick of Cambray, the Diſpute between the Biſhop of Mans and the Monks of St. Kallais, the Pall granted to Egilo Archbiſhop of Sens, the Biſhopricks of Brittany, which the Dukes of that Country had a mind to take away from the Metropolis of Tours, and the Objections of the Greeks againſt the Church of Rome, about which he conſults the Biſhops of France.

But there is one of theſe Letters, in which he anſwers Rodolphus Archbiſhop of Bourges, about ſeveral Points of Diſcipline, which we cannot paſs over in Silence. It contains ſeven Articles. The firſt relates to the Ordaining of Prieſts and Deacons by Suffragans. Some Biſhops of France depoſed thoſe they had ordained; and others re-ordained them. Becauſe, ſays he, Suffragans were created in Imitation of the Seventy Diſciples, who might perform Epiſcopal Functions. But becauſe the Canons forbid Suffragans to execute theſe Functions, he orders the Canons for the Future to be obſerv'd.

The ſecond is upon the Complaint the Archbiſhop of Narbonne made, That the Archbiſhop of Bourges forc'd his Clergy to commence their Differences in his Courts, and be tried by him; and that he diſpoſed of ſeveral Matters that belong'd to his Dioceſs, without conſulting him about it. Nicholas admoniſhed the Archbiſhop of Bourges of this, and told him, That his Quality of Primate and Patriarch did not allow him that Privilege. And that he ought to content himſelf to be Judge of Appeals of Cauſes which had been tried before by the Archbiſhop of Narbonne. He repeats anew, upon this Occaſion, the Canons that conſtitute the Rights of Patriarchs and Primates.

In the third he declares, That in the Church of Rome they never anoint the Hands of thoſe Prieſts and Deacons that are ordain'd with the Chryſm: Adding, that he never read that it was practiſed.

The fourth permits the Archbiſhop of Bourges to moderate the Penance, and relax ſomething of the Rigour of Canons made againſt ſuch, as having undertaken a State of Penance, return again to the World.

The fifth is about thoſe that are obliged to bring to Confirmation ſuch Children as their Wives have had by a former Husband. He ſays, That if they have been guilty of the Neglect of it thro' Ignorance, they ought not to be parted from their Wives, but only made to do Penance.

The ſixth orders, That ſuch as have kill'd their Wives, unleſs they have taken them in Adultery, ſhall be made to undergo the Penance of Homicides.

The ſeventh intimates, That the Biſhops ought to repeat the Gloria in Excelſis, on Holy-Thurſday at Maſs. But it is not permitted to any to wear the Pall on this Day, unleſs they have Leave from the Holy See.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

Father Dacherius in the twelfth Tome of his Spicilegium, has publiſh'd another Canonical Letter of Nicholas the firſt, ſent to Herdmicus Archbiſhop of Beſançon, in which the Pope preſcribes the following Rules.

Firſt, he proves by the Canons, That ſuch as have married two Siſters, may not marry any more for the Future.

Secondly, That thoſe that have married their Relations, and are upon that Account divorc'd, cannot marry as long as either of them lives; but that it is not forbidden when one of them dies.

Thirdly, he alſo believes, That Marriage ought not to be abſolutely forbidden to ſuch as have committed the Crime of Sodomy, provided they repent of their Sin, and have left off that curſed Habit.

Fourthly, he ſhews, That the Election of a Biſhop by the Clergy and chief Men of the Dioceſs, ought to ſtand good.

In the fifth Article he ſays, That it is forbidden Suffragans, not only to ordain Prieſts and Deacons, but alſo to conſecrate Churches and confirm Children, which only belongs to the Biſhops, as we may obſerve, not only by the Cuſtoms of the Church, but alſo by the Acts of the Apoſtles.

The laſt ſhews, That a Prieſt that is once fall'n into, and convict of a foul Crime, can no more be reſtored to his Function.

There is another Work of Nicholas the firſt, concerning Church Diſcipline, yet more conſiderable than the former. 'Tis his Anſwer to the Queſtions of the Bulgarians, which contains * above 100. Articles. viz. 106.

In the firſt he ſays, That the Religion of Jeſus Chriſt conſiſts in Faith and Good Works.

The ſecond is concerning the Spiritual Affinity between God-fathers and their God-children, which hinders their ever marrying together.

The third is about the Ceremonies of Marriage. He ſays, That after the betrothing, the Prieſt ought to cauſe the Perſons to come into the Church with their Offerings, and there give them his Benediction and the Veil, which is not to be given in ſecond Marriages. That being gone out of the Church, they ſhould wear Crowns upon their Heads. Theſe are the ordinary and ſolemn Ceremonies, which, as the Greeks ſay of theirs, need not nevertheleſs always be obſerved. That conſent, according to the Laws, might ſuffice; and that if that be wanting, the reſt ſignifies nothing.

The fourth ſets down the Faſts which are obſerved in the Church of Rome; 1. Lent; 2. The Faſt after Whitſunday; 3. That before the Aſſumption of the Bleſſed Virgin; 4. That before Chriſtmas; 5. The ſixth Day of every Week; and 6. All the Vigils or Eves of great Feaſts.

In the fifth he ſays, That the Faſt on Wedneſday is not commanded, but that of Friday is.

In the ſixth, That it is not forbid to bathe on thoſe Days.

In the ſeventh and eighth he approves of the Cuſtom of carrying and kiſſing the Croſs, and of the Relicks, in Lent.

In the ninth he extols the Cuſtom of communicating every Day in Lent, provided the Communicant be engaged in no Sin, nor has any mortal Crime lying upon his Conſcience.

The tenth is about the Celebration of Sunday.

The eleventh ſets down the Feaſts in which we muſt forbear working, to aſſiſt at Divine Service.

In the twelfth he ſays it is to be wiſh'd that Men would on thoſe Days forbear alſo trying civil and criminal Affairs.

In the thirteenth he excuſes himſelf for not ſending them Civil Laws.

In the fourteenth he aggravates the Cruelty which was us'd towards a Greek, who had his Ears and Noſe cut off for pretending to be a Prieſt, and baptizing a great many People.

In the fifteenth he ſays, That ſuch Perſons ought not to be re-baptized in the Name of the Holy Trinity.

In the ſixteenth he ſays, That thoſe that did thus abuſe this Prieſt ought to be put to Penance.

In the ſeventeenth he blames the King for executing the principal Leaders of a Rebellion raiſed againſt him by the Bulgarians, whom he had cauſed to be baptized. And he ſays that he has committed a great Sin, and particularly in the murthering their Infants who were innocent. But ſince he did it thro' a violent Zeal for Religion, and a blind Ignorance, he hopes he may obtain Mercy, if he repent.

In the eighteenth he ſays, That thoſe that have been baptized, and after forſake Chriſtianity, ought to be firſt admoniſhed by them, that held them to the Font; that if they do not reform, they ought to be accuſed to the Church; and that if they refuſe to obey the Church, they ſhould be puniſh'd by the Prince's Authority.

In the nineteenth he ſays, They may make uſe of the Rigor of their Laws againſt thoſe, as would take away the Lives of their Princes. Nevertheleſs, he exhorts the King to pardon ſuch Offenders. This, and the following Articles relate more to Civil Policy than Church Diſcipline.

In

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 41*st.* he forbids forcing Infidels to the Faith, and advises them to avoid communicating with them.

In the 44*th.* and those that follow, he forbids Hunting, Examining Causes, Playing, Marrying, or Feasting in Lent; and in the 50*th.* leaves it to the Prudence of the Bishop or Priest, who have the Care of Consciences, to determine after what Manner a Man should live with his Wife during that Time.

In the 51*st.* he expresly forbids Men to have two Wives at a Time. In the 53*d.* he says, That it is permitted to all Believers, to make the Sign of the Cross upon the Table, and to give a Benediction thereupon in the Absence of the Priest. In the 54*th.* he does not disapprove of the Custom of the Greeks, who thro' humility used always to wash their Hands before they went into the Church; but nevertheless, he does not command it. In the 55*th.* he says, he does not think it needful to force People newly converted to pay their Debts, that they may be received into Communion. In the 56*th.* he approves of the Custom of ordering Prayers and Fasts for Temporal Necessities, as in a Time of Drought, &c. In the 57*th.* he rejects the Superstition of the Greeks, who would not eat any Beasts kill'd by Eunuchs. In the 58*th.* he orders, according to the Precept of the Apostle, that Women should have their Heads covered in the Church. The 59*th.* and 60*th.* relate to their Habits and the Hours of Eating. In the 61*st.* he recommends continual Prayer to them. In the 62*d.* he forbids them to make use of a certain Stone that they believ'd would heal or cure a Disease. The 63*d.* and 64*th.* shew the Time when it is most proper to abstain from the Use of Marriage. The 65*th.* commands to receive the Eucharist fasting, and allows those to come to the Communion, who have bled much at the Nose or Mouth; for which he makes Use of the Example of the Woman in the Gospel, who being sick of a Bloody-flux, touched Christ's Garment; which makes it credible, that he doth not debar Women from it that are under the like Inconvenience. In the 66*th.* he forbids them to enter their Church with their Turbans on their Heads. In the 67*th.* he forbids the Bulgarians to swear by their Sword, or by the Name of any Creature. The 68*th.* allows Women newly brought to Bed, to enter into the Church. In the 69*th.* he says, That the solemn Times of administring Baptism are the Feasts of Easter and Whitsuntide; but that it is not necessary to observe this in regard of the People newly converted, no more than in respect of such as are in Danger of Death. The 70*th.* directs that they ought not to depose a Priest who hath a Wife; and that it is not lawful for Laymen to judge of Priests. The 71*st.* shews that Priests, how wicked soever they are, cannot defile the Sacraments; and that they may be received from them with Security. The 72*d.* is about the Question propounded to him concerning a Patriarch: He says, he cannot answer whether he shall grant them one, till he knows their Number of Christians: That a Bishop may serve their Turn in the mean Time; and that if their Number of Believers encrease, and that there be divers Churches and divers Bishops, he will make Choice of one of them for their Patriarch, or rather Archbishop. In the 73*d.* he says, that the Patriarch, Bishop, or Archbishop must not be ordained but by the supreme Bishop; and then he that is ordained by him, having receiv'd the Privilege of Metropolitan from the Holy See, may ordain other Bishops. That after this there would be no more Need of coming to Rome for the Ordination of their Archbishop, who then might be ordained by the other Bishops, upon Condition that he doth not execute any Part of his Office till he has received the Pall. The 74*th.* asserts that Men may pray any where. The 75*th.* and 76*th.* That the Bishops that he will send them, shall bring the Rules of Penance which they desired, together with a Missal. In the 77*th.* he forbids them to have any thing to do with Lots, by putting a Pin into a Book to find out any Thing they are in Suspicion of. The 78*th.* declares, that Penance ought to be refus'd to none. In the 79*th.* he forbids superstitious Ligatures made use of to cure Men. The following Articles relate to Peace, Agreements or Bargains, Judgments and Civil Punishments. In the 87*th.* he forbids forcing Widows to become Nuns. The 88*th.* says, that it is not lawful to pray for such as dy'd in their Infidelity. The 89*th.* recommends to them the Custom of offering the First-fruits of the Earth. The 90*th.* says, that it is lawful to eat Birds which have not been bled in killing them. The 91*st.* forbids Christians to eat Beasts kill'd or hunted by Infidels. In the 92*d.* he declares that they are the proper Patriarchs who govern the Churches founded by the Apostles, which are only Rome, Alexandria, and Antioch. That the Bishops of Constantinople and Jerusalem are also called Patriarchs; but they have not so great Authority as these three. In the 93*d.* he declares that of Alexandria to be the second Patriarch. In the 94*th.* he declares the Cheat of the Greeks, who said that Chrysm came first from their Country. The 95*th.* says, that they ought not to be taken from the Church who have fled thither for Sanctuary. In the 96*th.* he forbids Husbands to be divorced from their Wives, if it be not for Adultery. In the 97*th.* he exhorts Masters to pardon their Slaves that have offended them. In the 98*th.* he is willing that such as kill themselves should be buried, for fear their putrid Bodies should occasion Infection; but he would have no Obsequies bestowed upon them, nor any Sacrifice or Prayer offer'd for them. In the 99*th.* he permits such to be buried in the Church as have liv'd well. The 100*th.* approves of the Custom of carrying dead Bodies into their own Countries. In the 101*st.* he commends Alms. In the 102*d.* he forbids doing violence to Pagans to convert them. In the 103*d.* he commands them to burn the Books of the Saracens. The 104*th.* is concerning the validity of Baptism administred by a Jew, who had no Religion. Nicholas the first answers, that such ought not to be re-baptized, if he did, confer it upon them in the name of the Trinity. In the 105*th.* he speaks of those that preach'd a Doctrine contrary to that of the Apostles. He answers that they ought not to be heard: But that it doth not belong to the Bulgarian Lay-men to judge whether the Doctrine be true, or not. In the last he exhorts them to take Instructions from none but the Church of Rome, which always delivers the Truth to such as desire it.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

These are the Decisions or Answers of Nicholas the first in this Work. This Pope was a great Canonist. He wrote readily and with Authority. He often quoted the Canons and Decretals of the Popes. He maintain'd the Grandeur of his See with vigour, and manag'd the most difficult Matters he was concern'd in with Honour. M. de Marca observes, that he had done some Injuries to the Discipline and Liberties of the Church, by maintaining that it was not lawful to assemble a National Synod without the consent of the Pope: In attributing to himself the Appeals of the Clergies Cases determined in National Synods; and also after a Review brought, in citing the Persons and Causes to Rome to be there determined anew, instead of appointing Judges on the Places; and affirming, that the Causes of Bishops wholly belong'd to his Cognizance. But these Pretensions have not been acknowledg'd by the Church, and particularly by that of France, who have always kept to their Liberties without the least diminution of Respect and Submission due to the Holy See. [These Epistles are all put out in Tome VIII. of the Councils.]

After the death of Nicholas the first, which happened the 13*th.* of November in the Year 867. Adrian the second, who was about 76 Years of Age, was chosen in his place. He was a Roman, the Son of Talarius, related to the Popes Stephen the fourth and Sergius the Younger. Gregory the fourth ordained him Priest, and gave him the Title of St. Mark. His Liberality gained him a great repute in Rome, and he was proposed to be chosen Pope after the death of Leo the fourth, and Benedict the third. And after the death of Nicholas he obtain'd it both by the Votes of the People, who lov'd him, and by the joynt consent of both Parties of Grandees. Lewis the Emperor approved of his Election; and he was ordained the 14*th.* of December. He was at first suspected not to favour much the Memory of his Predecessor Nicholas the first, because he seem'd not so severe towards Lotharius and Waldrada, as he had been. But he freed himself from this suspicion, and reunited those to him that before had forsaken his Interest upon this account. Adrian II.

The beginning of his Pontificate was disturb'd by the Invasion of Rome, which the Duke of Spoleto seiz'd on, and harrass'd with Robberies and Plundering of his Soldiers. But Rome was deliver'd both by the Authority of the Emperor, who depriv'd the Duke of Spoleto of his own Dominions, and the Thunderbolts of Excommunication which the Pope sent out against these Robbers. A Peace was no sooner granted to the Church of Rome, but the Affair of Photius was brought before Pope Adrian. The Emperor Basilius having restored Ignatius, sent some of his Officers to Rome to accompany the Deputies of Ignatius and Photius. Those of Photius's side were drown'd for the most part, and there appear'd in his behalf but one inconsiderable Monk call'd Methodius, who durst not maintain his Cause, and who suffer'd himself to be cited thrice, and was at last condemn'd for Non-appearance. But the Officer of the great Emperor, and John Metropolitan of Cæsaria in Cappadocia, having presented to Pope Adrian the Transactions of the pretended Council which Photius had assembled against Pope Nicholas the first, he caused them to be examined and condemned in a Council which pronounced an Anathema against Photius, and had the Book burnt which he wrote against Pope Nicholas. After this Adrian sent Legates to Constantinople to assist in his name at the eighth General Council. They had at first all the satisfaction they could wish, but after the Council, they enter'd upon the Affair of Bulgaria, and after it was debated in their hearing, judged that it ought to be subject to the Patriarch of Constantinople, which troubled the Legates extreamly. Wherefore having protested against, and declared this Judgment null, they immediately left the City dissatisfied. And being but very meanly accompanied, they fell into the hands of the Scla-

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

Sclavonians, who robbed them, and took them Priſoners. They ſoon after made an eſcape, and came to Rome at the end of the Year 870.

There are five Letters of this Pope concerning the Affair of Ignatius and Photius in the Verſion of the Acts of the eighth Council done by Anaſtaſius. The three which follow, relate to the Affairs of France, and the Churches of Brittany, to Lotharius and Weldrada, Actardus, Wulfadus, and the other Clergymen ordained by Ebbo. To the Kingdom of Lotharius, on which Charles the Bald ſeiz'd after his death, and which Adrian would have had been left to Lewis the Emperor. To the pretended Privileges of Caroloman, and to the Quarrel of Hincmarus Biſhop of Laon, with his Uncle. It is not neceſſary to give any Extracts of theſe Letters in particular, having ſpoken of them particularly elſewhere. Adrian dyed the firſt of November in the Year 872. He was naturally good and well temper'd, zealous for Peace, and for the welfare of the Catholick Church. His Letters are written in a Style mixt with Gravity and Modeſty, Zeal and Humility; he maintaining in every part of them his Authority, without Affectation or Contempt of any Body. He behaves himſelf towards thoſe he had Buſineſs with, according to the Rules of Honeſty and Charity; not flattering them by a baſe Complaiſance, or offending them by high Words, nor enraging them by his extraordinary Claims.

John the VIII. was Archdeacon of Rome, when he was rais'd to the Holy See; it was in December 872. that he came to this Dignity, at a time when all Italy began to be very much moleſted by the inroads of Barbarians, and diviſions between the Dukes and Lords. He was obliged to make a Treaty with the Saracens, to hinder their Invaſions. After the death of the Emperor Lewis the II. he ſet the Imperial Crown upon the Head of Charles the Bald, in the Year 875. and ſupported himſelf by his Protection, as long as this Prince lived: But having a mind after his Death to let the Empire fall into the Hands of his Son, he was oppoſed in his deſign by the Lords of Rome, and by Lambert Duke of Spoleto, who ſeized both upon that City and the Pope in it. But he eſcaping ſome time after, fled into France, where he held the Council of Troies: After this, returning into Italy with ſome ſuccours, he drove out the Barbarians, and to procure himſelf a quiet Life, crowned Charles the Groſs Emperor, in the Year 880. and dyed at the beginning of the Year 882. He has writ many Letters concerning the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs of his time.

The firſt is directed to Count Boſon; he thanks him for the good Service he had done his Legates with Charles the Emperor, and acquaints him, that he expected thoſe Succours from that Prince with a great deal of Impatience, which he promiſed him againſt the Saracens.

The ſecond to King Lewis, is about differences between that Prince and the Emperor Charles the Bald: He tells him, that he cannot hope to make them Friends, till he has heard them both, and exhorts him in the mean time to think of a Peace.

In the 3*d*. he adviſes Jeoffry Prince of Salern, that he has received Power from the Emperor to conclude and ſwear the Treaty made with him, and that he will ſhortly give him a Viſit upon that Occaſion.

In the 4*th*. ſent to the Clergy and faithful of the Church of Valva, he condemns a certain Perſon, who would have ſeized upon that Church, during the life of Arnoldus, who was the Biſhop of it. He commends them for not being willing to receive him; he forbids them to do it, and threatens them with Excommunication if they ſhould, as alſo him that undertook to ſettle him, if he perſiſted in it.

In the 5*th*. he commands him that he write to--- which it may be was the Biſhop of Naples, to ſeparate himſelf from the Duke of Naples, who would not ſubmit to the Holy See, and threatens him with Excommunication, if he does not do it.

In the 6*th*. he orders his two Legates, which he had at the Emperor's Court at Pavia, to return immediately.

In the 7*th*. he complains of Boſon's retaining his Legates, and begs aſſiſtance of him againſt the Saracens, to prevent the Beſieging of Rome, which they threatned.

The 8*th*. is written to Charles the Bald; in it he allows of the Tranſlation of Frotarius, from the Archbiſhoprick of Bourdeaux to that of Bourges, upon the Teſtimony and Remonſtrances of the Biſhops of that Province, having delayed to grant it till he was acquainted with their Sentiments, as he obſerves in that Letter.

The 9*th*. is directed to Landulphus Biſhop of Capua, to whom he ſends word, that the Legates whom he had diſpatched to the Emperor, had obtained of him, a Confirmation of all the Privileges anciently belonging to the Church of Rome, and particularly a Power to conclude ſuch a Treaty, as he himſelf ſhould think beſt, concerning the Territory of Capua. He informs this Biſhop, that he deſign'd to be in that City ſhortly, that ſo he might make preparations to receive him.

In the 10*th*. he writes to Adelard Biſhop of Verona, to come to Rome in December, to aſſiſt at the Council which was to be held there; and threatens him with Excommunication in caſe of a failure.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 11*th*. he deſires the Emperor to pardon Emmenius, and take him into favour, altho' he owns him to have been juſtly condemned.

In the 12*th*. he begs of him to Pardon a Man that had killed another, and who was come to Rome ad limina Apoſtolorum, to expiate his Crime.

The 13*th*. is directed to the People of Bourges, whom he exhorts to receive Frotarius for their Archbiſhop, by reaſon of the deſolation of the Province of Bourdeaux, becauſe the Pagans having cruelly ravaged it, he was now become unſerviceable in his firſt Dioceſs. In the following Letter, he commands the Biſhops of that Province to acknowledge him.

In the 15*th*. he orders the Biſhop of Chartres, to reſtore to his Goods and Offices, the Murtherer of whom mention is made in the twelfth Letter, who had been at Rome ad limina, to make Atonement for his fault.

The 16*th*. and the four following, are about an Affair wherein Peter Archbiſhop of Grado was concern'd. It ſeems two of his Suffragan Biſhops had revolted from him, and one Dominicus Abbot of the Monaſtery of Altino, had got himſelf to be elected Biſhop of Toricelli in ſpite of him. The Archbiſhop of Grado having brought this Affair to Rome, the Pope cites both theſe Biſhops, and the Biſhops Elect, to make their Appearance at the Council which he held there; but they failing to obey the firſt Citation, he was forced to threaten them with Excommunication if they did not come in Perſon, to a Council which was to meet in February. Then he wrote to two of the neighbouring Biſhops, to ſee this Sentence put in Execution, in caſe they did not obey; to the Duke of Venice, to ſend them to him; to two Biſhops called Felix and Peter, that he interdicted them, till ſuch time as they came to his Synod; and that if they fail'd of coming thither, he would certainly Excommunicate them. He blames Dominicus for his Carriage, and Summons him likewiſe to his Synod under pain of Excommunication; and he returns his thanks to the Duke of Venice for his good inclinations to the Holy See; requeſting him to cauſe thoſe Biſhops to repair to the Synod which was to be celebrated in February. He directed theſe Letters to a certain Biſhop, whom he deſires to diſtribute the reſt, to thoſe Perſons to whom they belong'd, as it appears by the twenty fifth Letter, which is addreſt to that Biſhop.

In the 21*ſt*. he deſires help of the Emperor Charles, againſt the Inſults of the Saracens; repreſenting to him, the terrible Devaſtations they made among the Chriſtians.

The 22*d*. is directed to Count Lambert, whom he ſeverely reproves for not hindering the violent Oppreſſions of ſome of his Subjects, and threatens to Excommunicate him if he did not take care to regulate theſe diſorders for the future.

In the 23*d*. he thanks the Emperor Charles the Bald, for the kind Reception he gave the Legates of the Holy See; as alſo, becauſe he ſent Anſegiſus and Adalgarius to Rome, with Commiſſioners to repreſs the Inſolence of thoſe Perſons that were troubleſome to the Holy See. He informs him, that they could not be puniſhed according to their deſerts, becauſe they were fled to a certain Marqueſs, and ſome great Lords, who took them into Protection: he prays the Emperor to find them out, and to Condemn them to Baniſhment; and humbly entreats him, not to ſuffer them in his Kingdom. In the following Letter he complains of the Conduct of Anſegiſus, whom he accuſes of maintaining a ſecret Correſpondence with Count Lambert. He commends the Fidelity of Adalgarius, upon whom he had beſtowed a Pall, by way of Recompenſe.

The greateſt part of the following Letters relate to the Wrongs which the Holy See ſuffered by the Saracens and other Enemies of the Church; againſt all which he begs the Aſſiſtance of Charles the Emperor: And exhorts the Biſhops and Princes of Italy, to break the Treaties made with them; and animates them to declare War againſt them.

The 34*th*. Letter is an anſwer to the Biſhop Ansbert, who had conſulted him about the Promotions of Biſhops and Abbots. He ſends him word, that he muſt follow as much as he can the Directions of the Canons; nevertheleſs, he thinks it convenient, he ſhould wait for the coming of the Emperor, that he may act according to his Will and Pleaſure. He ſays in particular, as to thoſe Perſons he had been conſulted about, that an Exile may be favoured, without doing any thing contrary to the Canons. That with Permiſſion of the Prince, the Abbot that was put out of a Royal Monaſtery, might be re-eſtabliſhed, if he hath never been convicted of any Crime: And that a Murtherer, or any Accomplice in ſuch a Crime, ought to be deprived of all Spiritual Authority.

The 37*th*. is a Letter about the Tranſlation of Frotarius Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, to the Archbiſhoprick of Bourges.

In the 42*d*. he exhorts King Charles the Groſs to reſtore the Revenues he had taken from a Nunnery at Breſſe, and threatens him with Excommunication if he does not do it within ſixty days.

In

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 47*th.* he acquaints the Emperor Charles the Bald, that he had excommunicated Adelard Bishop of Verona, because he had seized upon the Monastery of Nonantula. He sends the same thing to the Archbishops of Ravenna, Milan, and Aquileia, in the following Letter: and in the forty ninth to the Clergy of Verona.

By the 53*d.* he commands the Archbishop of Milan, and the Bishop of Bresse, to meet at the General Synod of the Bishops of Italy, which was to be held at Ravenna in June.

In the 55*th.* he cites Vitus Duke of Venice, and the Bishops of his Country to it. By the following Letter he commands the same thing to be done by the Bishops Peter and Leo.

In the 57*th.* he requires the Archbishop of Ravenna and his Suffragans, to be present at the General Synod of the Bishops of Italy, which was to be held at Ravenna.

The 58*th.* is written to the Patriarch of Aquileia, to end his Affair in this Synod.

By the 59*th.* he acquaints the Archbishop of Ravenna, that this Synod was prorogued to the nineteenth of July; and he signifies to him in the following Letter, that he has summoned thither all the Bishops of Italy, and especially those of Venice. The foregoing Letters are dated on the tenth Indiction, that is to say, that they were written between September 876. and the same Month in 877. The following Letters are of the eleventh Indiction.

In the 62*d.* he sent a Man-slayer to his Bishop, that had been enjoyn'd Penance, and who was come to Rome; but he nevertheless exhorts and intreats this Bishop, to mitigate the rigour of his Penance.

The 63*d.* is addrest to Carloman. He acquaints him with his concern for the Death of Charles the Emperor, exhorts him to Protect the Church of Rome, promises to send him Legates very speedily, grants him the Pall for Theodemarus the Archbishop, and desires him to secure him in the possession and enjoyment of the Revenues, which the Church of Rome has in Bavaria.

The 65*th.* is written to the English Archbishop, where after he hath commended his Zeal for the Holy See, and exhorted him to discharge his Duty with Constancy, he warns him not to suffer Husbands to forsake their Wives and Marry others. He confirms the Privileges granted by St. Gregory to the Bishops of his See.

In the 66*th.* Letter, he thanks Athanasius Bishop of Naples, for excommunicating his Brother Sergius who was an Enemy to the Church. He desires him to continue his Labour and Vigilance for his Church, and recommends to him the Deacon Peter. In the following one, he commends the Neapolitans for driving out Sergius, and giving the Government of their City to the Bishop his Brother.

By the 69*th.* he sends to Landulphus Bishop of Capua, to joyn with the Bishop of Naples in the defence of the Church of Rome, and requires him to observe the Treaty made with the Amalphitans.

In the 70*th.* He reproves the Bishop of Ambrun, for ordaining another Bishop of Venice than him, that had been chosen by the Clergy and People, and whose Election had been confirmed by the consent of Charles the Emperor. He enjoins him to come to Rome, together with him that was elected, and him that had been ordained.

The 68*th.* 72*d.* and 73*d.* are Letters written to Lambert Duke of Spoleto, an Enemy to Rome, to prevent his acting those Hostilities, which he intended against it.

The 75*th.* and the six Letters following, are written about the Affairs of Bulgaria to that King, to the Patriarch of Constantinople, and the Greek Emperor.

The following Letters are written against Lambert Duke of Spoleto, who had invaded the Territories of the Holy See, and being possest of the City of Rome, had placed a Garrison in it, abused the Bishops and Priests, and hindered them from performing Divine Service in St. Peter's Church.

These outrages obliged the Pope to retire into France, to implore aid of Charles, of Carloman, Lewis the Stammerer, of Engelberga, and Berengarius, as it appears by these Letters.

In the 91*st.* he acquaints the Empress Engelberga, that he will compose the Service for the Anniversary of the Emperor Lewis her Husband, as she had desired him: He Conjures her to continue her care of the Affairs of the Holy See, and to act so, that he may return as soon as possible to Rome; he informs her also, that he will hold a Council at Troyes the first day of August.

In the following Letter he tells her, that he is come to Arles, and that he hath met Boson and Hermengarda, whom he wishes preferred to some higher Dignities, that they might be more able to defend the Roman Church.

He Exhorts the Empress to favour him in the design he hath for them, and to write to the Archbishop of Ravenna to pray for him, and to send Legates to Rome to comfort his faithful Friends.

By Letter the 93*d.* he makes the Archbishop of Arles his Vicar in France, yet without prejudice to the Rights of the Metropolitans, for which end he gives him the Pall; and Commands the Bishops that are obliged to go out of their Provinces, not to do it without his Consent; and if there should happen any Disputes concerning the Faith, or about other matters of any difficulty among the Bishops, he requires them, after they have given him an account of it, to decide it with twelve Bishops which he shall assemble, provided that if it cannot be decided by these Judges, they shall content themselves with having fully instructed him, and refer the matter to the Holy See.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

He Complains it is a great disorder, that the Metropolitans of France Consecrate Bishops, before they have received the Pall of the Holy See; he desires this Abuse may not be allowed to become Customary.

The Letter 94*th.* is to the same Person, and on the same Subject; 'tis a forged piece, composed of part of St. Gregorie's Letter, and part of the foregoing.

The 95*th.* is a Copy of one of St. Gregorie's Letters.

By Letter 96*th* he invites Isaac Bishop of Langres to the Synod to be held at Troyes

By the 97*th.* he Excommunicates those that had taken his Horses and Baggage at Châlons, unless they return them in three days, and passes the same Sentence against Adurardus the Priest, whose Servants had taken a Silver Plate out of the Church of Rome.

By the following Letters, he invites and cites the Metropolitans and Bishops of France, to the Synod to be held at Troyes.

The 108*th.* is sent to Luithertus Archbishop of Mayence, whom he orders to return to the Daughters of Boson and Engeltruda their Father and Mothers free Estate. And declares Godfrey and Engeltruda uncapable of disposing of them; and in the following Letter, threatens Count Marfroy who was in possession of them, unless he presently restored them.

In the 110*th.* he complains to the Archbishop of Besançon, that he did not come to him to Condole his Persecution: He Exhorts him to come as soon as he can, and forbids him to Consecrate a Bishop in the Church of Lausanne, tho' the Prince command it, or the People desire it, till he hath considered what will be most Expedient.

The four following Letters are in the Council of Troyes.

In the 115*th.* he cites Count Bernard to the Council of Troyes.

In the 117*th.* and 118*th.* he invites King Charles and Lewis to a Conference: King Lewis came, but not King Charles. The Pope complains of it in 119*th.* Letter, and lets him know, that he had adopted Prince Boson for his Son.

The 120*th.* is a Sentence of Excommunication against Count Bernard, who had deprived Frotarius Archbishop of Bourges, of his Archbishoprick and Revenues.

In the 121*st.* he threatens those with Excommunication, that had seized upon the Revenues of the Church of St. Maurice of Tours, unless they speedily restore them; and admonishes those that owe their Ninths and Tenths to pay them.

By the 122*d.* he leaves the Archbishop of Arles the Decision of the Controversy, between the Bishop of Usez and Avignon, which could not be determined at Troyes, the Bishop of Avignon being absent.

The 123*d.* is an Excommunication of Hugh, the natural Son of King Lewis, and Emmo Brother of Bernard, for Conspiring the Death of their King.

The 124*th.* is addressed to the Bishop of Dol, and the Bishop of Brittany, who had withdrawn themselves from the Jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Tours, he charges them to submit; with menaces of Excommunication, if they fail.

In the 125*th.* to Lewis the Stammerer, he tells, how great Obligations he lay under to Boson, who brought him safe to Pavia, and begs his assistance in reducing the Enemies of the Holy See, and recommends to him Agilmarus Bishop of Clermont.

In the 126*th.* he accuses Anspert Archbishop of Milan of unkindness, in not sympathizing with him in his Sufferings. He commands him and his Suffragans to come next Thursday to meet him at Pavia. He gives the same Orders in the following Letter. He likewise Summons Count Berengarius by the 128*th.* and 131*st.* Letters, and Suppo by the 130*th.* In the 129*th.* he presses King Lewis to restore to the Daughters of Boson and Engeltruda the Free-Estate of their Father and Mother, of which he was in Possession.

In the 135*th.* he orders two Bishops to Excommunicate those that had stole Wipert's Son, and plundered his Country.

In the 136*th.* he advises Count Hugh to punish some Thieves.

In the 137*th.* he exhorts him, and two other Counts, to keep their League made with Boson.

In the 138*th.* he orders a Monk to obey Bishop Wipert, who had obtain'd him from his own Bishop and Abbot by Letters dimissory.

In the 139*th.* he orders the Archbishops of Milan and Ravenna to meet, when the Bishop of Pavia should require it.

In the 140*th.* he Authorises the Bishop of Pavia to Excommunicate those that had taken away a Woman.

In the 141*st.* he acquaints the Bishop of Pavia that he shall shortly be at Turin, and prays him to come thither. He intimates to him that he ought not to adhere to the Archbiſhop of Milan in Prejudice of the Roman Church's Intereſt; and deſires him to forward his Letters to the Suffragans of the Archbiſhop of Ravenna.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

By the 142*d*. he calls four Biſhops to a Council to be held at Pavia.

The 143*d*. is a Decree for the Confiſcation of the Goods of an Abby.

In the 144*th*. he promiſes Salvation to all that are kill'd in Battle againſt Heathens and Infidels, and abſolves them as much as is in his power.

By the 145*th*. he Suſpends the Biſhop of Venice from Celebration of Divine Service; becauſe he had communicated with ſome excommunicated Perſons; till he and they appeared before him.

In the 146*th*. he gives leave to promote to ſacred Orders, ſome Perſons, who in their youth happened to be in Company where one kill'd his Companion.

In the 147*th*. he deſires two Biſhops to ſend home the Wife of Roſtagnus, who deſerting her Husband, was fled into their Dioceſe; and orders them to Excommunicate all that communicated with her.

In the 148*th*. he adviſes the Biſhop of Metz, that he ſhould not force a Man to marry a Woman who was contracted to him, who by her own confeſſion was with Child by another Man.

In the 149*th*. he orders the Biſhop of Pavia to mitigate the Penance impoſed by his Predeceſſor on a Man, for being in Company when another was kill'd.

In the 150*th*. he orders the Biſhop to cauſe Reſtitution to be made to ſome Perſons he recommends, that were robbed.

In the 151*ſt*. he writes to the Biſhop of Beſançon that he had abſolved Fulcardus and his Wife; and that he is again to admit them into his Communion.

The 152*d*. is an exhortation to certain Biſhops aſſembled in Council, to judge with Juſtice.

In the 153*d*. he acquaints the Archbiſhop of Ravenna, that it being order'd by the Canons that Councils ſhould be held twice a Year, he appointed one to be at the end of March; and orders him and his Suffragans to be there.

In the 154*th*. he writes to the ſame Archbiſhop, and tells him, that he wonders he ſhould deſign to Ordain to the Biſhoprick of Sarſenne another Perſon than the Prieſt Lupo, whom he had commanded him to Ordain; and forbids him doing it.

In the 155*th*. he writes to Auſpert Archbiſhop of Milan, and he Commands him and his Suffragans to come to a Council to be held at Rome the firſt of March, to chooſe an Emperor in the place of Carloman, whoſe Infirmities made him no longer able to bear the Burthen of Government. He adds, that as it belongs to the Pope and Biſhops of Italy to Conſecrate the Emperor, ſo it is chiefly their Right to call and chooſe him.

In the 156*th*. he Comforts the Duke of Beneventum for the loſs he had ſuſtained by the Agarenians.

The 157*th*. is only a Letter of Complement and Thanks to a Biſhop that was very zealous for the Roman Church, and had enquired of his Health; and Condolance for the Death of his Brother. Here end the Letters of the eleventh Indiction, and thoſe of the twelfth begin.

The ſix firſt Letters contain nothing very remarkable, being chiefly about Civil Matters.

In the 163*d*. he forbids certain Biſhops to Excommunicate the Perſon that brought the Emperor's Letters Patents, till his Cauſe was examined.

In the 165*th*. he Excommunicates a Count and his Wife for taking a Nun out of his Monaſtery, till they reſtored her.

In the 174*th*. 189*th*. 192*d*. Letters he exhorts Michael King of Bulgaria, to ſubmit himſelf to the Church of Rome.

In the 181*ſt*. and 182*d*. he ſharply reproves Auſpert Archbiſhop of Milan, for not coming to the Synod at Rome, after he had been thrice ſummoned, and threatneth to proceed againſt him, if he come not this fourth time. He forbids his holding any Aſſembly with any of the Kings of France that ſhall come into Italy.

In the 188*th*. to the Biſhop of Limoges, he decides, that a Man ought not to be parted from his Wife; becauſe he had baptized his Child himſelf in a Caſe of Neceſſity.

In the 190*th*. written to the Biſhops of Dalmatia, he exhorts them to acknowledge the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of Rome, and to ſend thither their new choſen Biſhop to be conſecrated, and Receive the Pall from him.

The 191*ſt*. is to the Archbiſhops of Arles, Narbonne, and Aix. He orders them to confer with the Biſhop of Nimes, to oblige him not to moleſt the Monks of a certain Monaſtery, and gives them power, if he does not do as he deſires, to ſuſpend him from all his Prieſtly Functions, till he comply, or appear at Rome to give an account of his Conduct.

In the 194*th*. he Exhorts a Sclavonian Lord to continue in the Faith of the Roman Church, and live in its Obedience. He ſaith he hath written to Archbiſhop Methodius, who was ordained by Pope Adrian his Predeceſſor, becauſe he had heard he taught other Doctrines than what he had profeſſed in Preſence of the Holy See.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

The following Letter is to this Methodius Titular Archbiſhop of Pannonia: he commands him to come to Rome and juſtifie his Doctrine. Forbids him to Celebrate Maſs in the Sclavonian Tongue, but only in Latin or Greek; as, ſaith he, the Church of Jeſus Chriſt diſperſed over the whole Earth, practiſeth in all places.

The 196*th*. is to Auſpert Archbiſhop of Milan, about his refuſing to come to the Synod at Rome. The Pope had ſuſpended him from celebrating Divine Service, till he came to Rome to juſtifie himſelf: but not regarding of that Suſpenſion, he continued to do all Epiſcopal Functions. The Pope peremptorily commands him to come to Rome, or ſend his Legates.

In the 197*th*. he thanks King Lewis for his good will, and invites him to come ſpeedily to Rome, promiſing to do his utmoſt to make him to be declared Emperor.

The 198*th*. Letter is to Herard Archbiſhop of Auch, and to the Biſhops of Comminges, Conſerans, and Bigores, concerning the Diſorders in their Dioceſes, which they could neither reſtrain by Exhortations nor Excommunications. They had written to the Pope to joyn his Authority to theirs, to put a ſtop to them. The Pope writes to them to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to rectifie the Diſorders of the People committed to their charge. And becauſe the greateſt were in the Marriages of Kindred, he ſaith, 'tis not permitted to Chriſtians to marry their Kindred ſo long as they can make out any Relation. He declares all thoſe, that are ſo married, and will keep their Wives, or thoſe that ſhall ſo marry for the future, to be ſubject to the Church's Anathema by Apoſtolick Authority, and forbids all Prieſts to give them the Sacrament, till they have done Penance. He alſo declares it unlawful to have two Wives, to forſake one Wife and marry another for no cauſe whatſoever, or to have a Wife and a Concubine at the ſame time. He forbids the Laity to meddle with the Church Goods. He orders Prieſts and Clerks to ſubmit to their Biſhops, and to do nothing without their conſent; and that the Laity do obey their Biſhop under pain of Excommunication.

The following Letters concern the Affair of Photius, which we have ſpoken of in the Hiſtory of the eighth Council.

In the 204*th*. Letter he writes to the Empreſs Engelberga, who had deſired him to Abſolve Auſpert Archbiſhop of Milan, and humbly repreſents to her, that he could not do it without the conſent of his Brethren the Biſhops, with whoſe concurrence he had excommunicated him. That he muſt either come or ſend Deputies to the Synod to be held the eleventh of October at Rome, to anſwer ſuch things as are laid to his Charge: and after Satisfaction given, he will Abſolve him, and Receive him into his Communion. He ſaith he will Celebrate the Anniverſary of the Emperor her Husband; and that he prays for the Soul of her Brother Suppo, that God would forgive his Sins.

The four following Letters are concerning the Troubles about the Election of Landulphus to the Biſhoprick of Capua.

The 216*th*. Letter is written to King Charles, whom, he ſaith, he hoped to raiſe to the Dignity of Emperor, that therefore he was come to Ravenna: That he hoped he would labour all he could to Re-eſtabliſh the Honour and Dignity of the Roman Church, and ſubdue its Enemies. That at his Return he found its Enemies more violent; having not only ſeized and carried away the Poſſeſſions, but the Perſons, that belonged to the Church of Rome. He deſires him to ſend him three Perſons before he comes, that he may concert with them concerning what belongs to the Honour and Good of the Holy See.

In the next Letter he prays the ſame Prince to protect the Church of Rome againſt its Enemies.

The 218*th*. is addreſt to the Archbiſhop of Ravenna; he wonders he had not recourſe to the Holy See, to redreſs the Injury done him; he intimates, that he had ſent a Prudent Perſon to Ravenna, whom he impowered to inform himſelf of all that had been done to him, he orders him to be at Rome by the beginning of October at the Synod, and promiſes all manner of Aſſiſtance, but finds fault with his quitting his Church to live elſewhere.

In the 219*th*. he orders him to refer it to the Biſhop of Pavia, whom he had commiſſioned to Excommunicate thoſe that deſerve it.

The 221*ſt* Letter is to the Clergy of Milan, whom he orders to proceed to the Election of a new Archbiſhop inſtead of Auſpert, whom he had depoſed in his Synod, and tells them, that he ſends the Biſhop of Pavia and Rimini to joyn with them in this Election. This Letter is the firſt of thoſe that were written in the 11*th* Indiction, beginning in September 893. In the following Letter, he acquaints King Charles with the depoſing of Auſpert and Joſeph, whom the former had ordained Biſhop of Vercelli, and that he had put another Biſhop into Vercelli, whom he deſires him to maintain.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 223*d.* he enjoyns the People of Vercelli to Receive the Bishop he had ordained.

In the 224*th.* he threatens to Excommunicate Nottingus Bishop of Novara, unless he restored to the Empress Engelberga the Goods belonging to her.

In the 225*th.* he declares the Amalphitains Excommunicate, till they separated from the Heathens, with whom they maintained too familiar a Correspondence.

The 226*th.* is written to four Bishops, whom he appoints to judge the Business of a Lady called Theodrona, the Widow of Tresigius. She came to Rome to complain, that after the Death of her Husband, her Brother-in-law had forced her to become a Nun, and that without the Blessing of a Priest; and that she had often declared and protested against the Veil, and had worn it but fifteen days: The Pope orders them to Assemble and Examine this Affair, and if they find these things true, then to declare her discharged of her Vow.

In Letter the 227*th.* he commands the Bishop of Naples and Magistrates of Amalfi, to break their League with the Sarazens; and threatens to Excommunicate them, unless they do it by the first of December.

In the 228*th.* he reproves a Bishop for not coming to his Synod, and Summons him to appear on the eighth of December, to give his Reasons why he had excommunicated a certain Nobleman.

He gives the same Reproof to another Bishop in the following Letter, and cites him to come and answer the Accusations brought against him by all his Clergy.

In the 230*th.* written to King Charles, he wonders that he did not acquaint him with his Arrival at Pavia; and prays him if he be there, to send him Ambassadors with Honourable Letters, that he might come and meet him.

In the 231*st.* he thanks this Prince for leaving the Church of Vercelli, in Possession of the Bishop he had ordained. He excuseth himself, that he could not absolve Anspert as he had desired, because the Sentence given against him was in these Terms, that he should be suspended and excommunicated, till he had appeared and justified himself before the Holy See.

By the 232*d.* he enjoyns the Bishop of Regio to rebuild a Church lately burned, to put in a Priest, and to send thither the Holy Chrism; which the Bishop neglecting, he in the following Letter orders the Bishop of Pavia to do it.

In the 234*th.* he reproves Bishop Egilbert for communicating with excommunicated Persons, and forbids him to communicate with Luitfredus and Odelricus excommunicated Persons; because they detain'd Goods of the Empress Engelberga.

In Letter the 237*th.* he Excommunicates Luitfredus, for receiving a Nun which was gotten out of his Nunnery, and detaining the Empresses Goods.

In the following Letter he threatens to excommunicate Count Lambert, for detaining the Goods of the Empress, and of the Church of Rome.

By the 239*th.* he commits to the care of Abbot Gisulphus, the Empresses Monastery.

In the 240*th.* he Congratulates the Grecian Emperors Officers, concerning their Victory over the Sarazens, and exhorts them to come to Rome to assist him against the Agarenians.

In the 241*st.* he commends the Bishop of Naples's Zeal for the Church of Rome; he exhorts him to break his League with the Sarazens; and declares, that he will excommunicate the Amalphitains if they do it not, of which he gives them Notice in the next Letter.

Letter the 243*d.* is to intreat King Charles the Gross, to leave the Bishop of Lausanne in the free Possession of his Bishoprick, and to oblige Count Hubo, to restore what he hath taken from the Church of Besançon: In the following Letter, he recommends the affair of the Church of Langres to the Bishop of Vercelli, and in the 244*th.* to Thierricus Archbishop of Besançon.

In the 246*th.* he commends the Zeal of King Charles toward the Church of Rome, and desires him to send some Body with Authority, to see that all be restored to the Roman Church, which has been taken from it.

The 247*th.* is to Sfentopulcher, an Earl of Sclavonia; he congratulates his Faith and Piety, and his Submission to the Holy See, of which he had been informed by Methodius Bishop of Moravia, whom he had sent to Rome: He saith, he had questioned him concerning his Creed, and found it the same with the Roman; and whether his Sentiments were Orthodox, and found him to be found in all points of Catholick Doctrine; upon which Account, he sends him to Govern his Church, with the Quality of Archbishop, which he confirms for ever. He adds, that he had consecrated Wichinus Bishop of Nitria, and desires him to send some other Priest, that he may Ordain him Bishop of some other Town, and that these three Bishops may regulate Affairs as need shall require: He orders all Priests and Clergymen to submit to the Archbishop; then he repeats what he had before said, about the Celebration of Divine Service in the Sclavonian Tongue; and first, he approves of Prayer in that Tongue; secondly, he saith, 'tis not contrary to Faith nor sound Doctrine, to say or sing Mass, the Gospel, or the Lessons of the Old or New Testament, or the Hours of other Service in the Sclavonian Language, provided that they be well translated; for God is not only Author of the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, but also of all other Languages which he hath made to Praise him with. Thirdly, he thinks it fit to read the Evangelists in Latin, for the greater Reverence, and afterwards in the Sclavonian Tongue, in respect of the People who understand it not, as 'tis practised in some Churches. Fourthly, he writes, that if it pleases the Prince and his Judges to hear Mass in Latin rather than in the Sclavonian Language, it may for them be celebrated in that Tongue.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 248*th.* he reproves a Bishop, for having violated a Treaty made with the Bishop of Capua in his Ordination; he orders him to go on with it, and in Case of default, threatens him with Excommunication: He permits him to come to him, if he have any complaint or excuse to make.

The 249*th.* is to King Charles the Gross, he thanks him for the good Offices he does to the Church of Rome; and particularly that he commanded all the Counts and Bishops his Neighbours, to defend the Territories of St. Peter, against the Assaults of all Enemies, not only bad Christians but Sarazens, who are always Pillaging the Roman Church. He saith, he would have conferred with Wibodus, Son of Count Lambert, but he failed of Meeting at the place appointed: He promises that Count Boson shall find no Refuge or Asylum at his Court; and rejoyceth, that King Charles will quickly come and beg of him, to send Commissioners that may do him Justice.

The two following Letters are about Photius's Affair, which hath been spoken of elsewhere.

The 252*d.* is also to King Charles, he acquaints him, that he waits his Arrival with Impatience, and complains that he had not sent him Commissioners according to his desire, and that an excommunicated Person called Georges, being come from him, had seized upon certain Revenues in the Possession of the Church, pretending they belonged to him, and also, that he very much molested his Neighbours. He desires him to remedy this disorder, and to remove the Enemies of the Holy See; this, and the following Letters, are written in the XIV*th.* Indiction, which begins at the Month of September 880.

By the 253*d.* he Summons the Archbishop of Ravenna to the Synod, which had been prorogued to November, to determine with other Bishops some Ecclesiastical Affairs. He acquaints him, that in this Assembly, they will go upon the Affair of Count Deus Dedit, whom the Archbishop of Ravenna had excommunicated, for contracting Marriage with one of his Relations; adding, that tho' indeed it was in his Power to absolve him, yet since the Council was so nigh, he thought it convenient to defer the Conclusion of it to the Synod, where he would be present. He tells him, that the Earl's Wife had presented a Petition to him, wherein she says, that he was made Privy to her Marriage, and soon after she was married, he had admitted and invited them to his Communion; he also gives him an account of another Affair.

The 254*th.* is a Circular Letter to the Bishops of Italy, to call them to the Synod which was to be held the seventh of November.

The 255*th.* is addrest to King Charles, he acquaints him, that the Sarazens were defeated by the Greeks, but that those Barbarians were yet very troublesome, and desires his Succours against them.

It appears by Letter the 256*th.* directed to Anspert Archbishop of Milan, that John the VIII*th.* did once pardon him, and received him into his Communion; but that the Archbishop having again offended him, by apprehending two Monks of the Roman Church, and putting them in Prison: The Pope commands him to release them. In the next Letter, he threatens the Proctor of Pavia that had arrested them.

By the 258*th.* he absolves the Marquess Adelbert, because he found him faithful to the Church of Rome, and his Subjects, provided they make satisfaction to the said Church within fifteen days. In the next he writes, that he hath sent Legates with Instructions to treat with him; and Exhorts him to Compliance with his desires, and not to come to Rome.

In the 260*th.* to Anspert Archbishop of Milan, he approves of the Ordination of Joseph to the Bishoprick of Asti, tho' he had been before ordained Bishop of Vercelli: But his Ordination being found faulty, he was deprived and put in the same State and Condition he was before.

In the 261*st.* he threatens the Archdeacon of Milan with Excommunication, unless he submits to his Archbishop, and return to his Church.

The 262*d.* is to a Private Churchman of Milan, whom Anspert had excommunicated, for raising troubles in the Church, and detaining some of his Goods: he Exhorts him to his Duty, and to give full Satisfaction to his Archbishop, or else he confirms the Excommunication against him.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 263*d*. he entreats Lewis and Carloman to joyn their conſent with Charles, that Engelberga may retire to Rome, where he promiſes to have ſuch an Eye over her Actions, that ſhe ſhall undertake nothing againſt them, nor the Emperor for the future.

The 264*th*. is a Bull, by which he puts under the Protection of the Holy See, the Monaſteries and other Benefices belonging to one Harderick.

In the 265*th*. he complains of the Biſhop of Naples, for not breaking the Treaty with the Sarazens.

The two following Letters are about a Difference between the Biſhop of Trent and Verona, about ſome Eccleſiaſtical Revenues, he writes about it to the Biſhop of Trent, in Letter 266*th*. and appoints them Judges in Letter 267*th*.

The 268*th*. is directed to Methodius Archbiſhop of Sclavonia, he comforts him under ſome Perſecutions, which he ſuffered from a certain Biſhop; aſſuring him, that he had neither contributed to it, nor privately written againſt him: He exhorts him to be zealous for Religion, and promiſeth him Juſtice againſt his Enemy.

By the 269*th*. he begs a ſpeedy Relief of Charles the Emperor againſt the Sarazens.

In the 270*th*. he pronounces Athanaſius Biſhop of Naples excommunicate, for not breaking the Treaty made with the Sarazens.

The 271*ſt*. is to the Archbiſhop of Ravenna, who had brought Aldericus into his City from the Emperor. He blames his Carriage, and pretends 'tis contrary to his Oath. He promiſes him, that returning from Naples, he will come to Ravenna, and do Juſtice to that Church. He injoyns him to ordain Dominicus Archdeacon, Biſhop of Fayance, whom he had nominated to that End.

In the 272*d*. written likewiſe to the Archbiſhop of Ravenna, he reproves him for having obliged a married Woman to leave her Husband, and marry her Raviſher; and accuſes him of Diſobedience to the Church of Rome: Therefore forbids him ordaining any, till he had appeared at the Synod to be held at Rome in October.

In the 273*d*. he commands the ſame Archbiſhop to diſmiſs the Clerks belonging to the Biſhop of Playſance, that had retired to Ravenna, whom the Archbiſhop had received without Letters of Leave from their own Biſhop; and commands him to abſolve the Clerks of Playſance, whom he had excommunicated. We ſee by theſe Letters, that this Archbiſhop had frequent Conteſts with Rome. This more plainly appears by the following Letter, which ſheweth that this Prelate had ordained another Perſon Biſhop of Fayance than him whom the Pope had nominated. The Pope by this Letter excommunicates him, and forbids him taking poſſeſſion of this Biſhoprick, or exerciſing any Function, till he had preſented himſelf to the Synod at Rome.

He cites a ſecond Time the Archbiſhop of Ravenna by Letter, 274. intimating to him, That he ſtands accuſed of ſeveral Crimes, and chiefly of Perjury.

In the 276*th*. he determines the Affair of one Deus Dedit, an Inhabitant of Ravenna. His Archbiſhop had excommunicated him as convicted of Inceſt: He appeals to the Holy See, and came to Rome to clear himſelf; but no Body appearing from the Archbiſhop, the Pope would not abſolve Deus Dedit, till he had written to the Archbiſhop to ſend Accuſers and Witneſſes to Rome. He ſent a Prieſt and a Deacon with an Accuſation in Writing: Deus Dedit anſwer'd, and proved his Marriage to be according to Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Laws. The Pope and the Synod declar'd him abſolved, and confirmed his Marriage.

In the 277*th*. he writes to Charles the Emperor to ſend him two Legates, that he might regulate the Wrong and Injuſtices the Church ſuffers under his Reign.

The Archbiſhop of Ravenna not appearing at the Synod, was excommunicated. The Pope adviſes thoſe of Ravenna by Letter, 278. and forbids them to communicate with him.

By the 279*th*. Letter he congratulates the Emperor Charles's intended Journey into Italy. He exhorts him to ſuccour the Church of Rome, and to expel Guy out of the Poſſeſſion of the Lands of the Church.

In the 280*th*. he thanks the Biſhop Luitwardus for having procured the Emperor's Journey into Italy.

By the 281*ſt*. he commands the People of Geneva to obey Optandus, whom he had ordained their Biſhop.

In the 282*d*. he prays the Biſhops and Counts of Italy to intercede with the Emperor, that Engelberga might come to Rome.

The 283*d*. is directed to the Archbiſhop of Cologne, touching a Prieſt long ſince excommunicated by Pope Nicholas, for having communicated with Ingeltrude, and had undergone eleven Years Penance; the Pope abſolves and reſtores him at the Requeſt of the Archbiſhop of Cologne. He likewiſe writes to this Archbiſhop to judge concerning the Divorce of Gideon, whoſe Wife had committed Adultery with her Brother, according to what St. Auſtine writes on that Matter in his Book of Adulterous Marriages; and what is ordered by Pope Innocent.

In the two following Letters he praiſes ſeveral Lords for their Zeal to the Holy See.

In the 286*th*. he expreſſeth his Joy for the Emperor's coming to Ravenna, and begs him to haſten his Journey.

The 287*th*. is to the King of Bulgaria: He expreſſes his Admiration, that he hath not ſent Ambaſſadors to Rome, and exhorts him to do it, and acknowledge the Holy See.

In the 288*th*. he reproves the Archbiſhop of Vienna for favouring the Allies of Boſon, and cites him to Rome.

The 292*d*. is written to the ſame Archbiſhop, and blames him for cauſing Optandus Biſhop of Geneva to be apprehended, and ordaining another in his Place. He cites him a ſecond Time to Rome.

In the 293*d* he complains to the Emperor, that the Marqueſs Guy had ſeiz'd on the Goods of the Church of Rome, and refuſed to do him Juſtice; deſiring him to come in Perſon and do him Right.

By the 294*th*. he abſolves the Biſhop of Naples, provided he break the Alliance made with the Sarazens, and ſtrangle the moſt guilty of thoſe that are in his Hands, and ſend him the reſt.

The 295*th*. is an Anſwer to Oteran Archbiſhop of Vienna, who to clear himſelf, writ to the Pope, That he had ordained a Biſhop for Geneva before the Arrival of Optandus. The Pope anſwered, That 'twas well known to the World how long that Church had been without a Biſhop; and that 'twas for that Reaſon, and the Neceſſity of that Church, that he had ordained Optandus Biſhop of that Place. That he ought not to object this againſt him, that he was not of that Church; ſince he himſelf was neither a Clerk, nor inſtructed nor baptiſed in the Church of Vienna, of which he was now Biſhop. He cites him to the Synod at Rome with Adalbart Biſhop of Maurienne, who was accuſed of having injured the Biſhop of Grenoble; 'tis to him that the following Letter is directed.

The 297*th*. is to Michael King of Bulgaria, whom he often exhorts to ſend Ambaſſadors, and ſubmit to the Holy See.

In Letter the 298*th*. written to the Empreſs and Luitwardus Biſhop of Vercelli, he entreats her to preſs the Emperor to aſſiſt him againſt the Infidels, and to ſend Engelberga to Rome.

By Letter the 299*th*. directed to Anſpert Archbiſhop of Milan, he confirms the Privileges of the Church of Milan; and exhorts him to labour and pray for the Church of Rome. Here end the Letters of the XIVth. Indiction, and begin thoſe of the XVth. beginning in Sept. 881.

In the 300*th*. Letter, he enjoyns the Archbiſhop of Ravenna to reſtore to Dean John all he had taken away from him.

In the 301*ſt*. he orders the Clergy of Ravenna to apprehend Maimbert, whom he had excommunicated, and ſend him to him.

By the following, he adviſeth his firm Friend to do it with Expedition: He enjoyns the ſame Thing to Duke John, in Letter 303.

The 304*th*. is a condoling Letter, written to the People of Ravenna for the Death of their Biſhop: He confirms the Election they had made of another, and charges them to reſpect him. He recommends to them the Dukes Deus Dedit and John, together with their Eſtates.

In the Letter 305*th*. to the Abbot Hugh, he deſires him to exhort King Lewis to come to Rome, and warns him to ſhun the Communion of Formoſus, of John Archbiſhop of Rouen, Adelard Archbiſhop of Tours, and Frotarius Archbiſhop of Bourges.

Letter 306. is directed to King Charles, whom he entreats to confirm King Carloman in his good Intentions toward the Roman Church.

In the 307*th*. he ſends to Suppo to meet him at Mount Cenis, and to bring thither to him the Princeſs Engelberga, Anſpert Archbiſhop of Milan, Wibodas Biſhop of Parma, and ſome other Perſons of Truſt.

In the 308*th*. he commends to a Biſhop the Care of a vacant Church, till it be provided of a Paſtor.

The following Letters are not ſet down according to the Order of their Dates.

In Letter the 309*th*. written to Aldephonſus King of Gallicia, and all the Chriſtians of that Country: He makes the Church of Oviedo a Metropolitan Church, with Authority over the Kingdom of Gallicia. In the next he adviſes that Prince to have the Church of St. James's conſecrated by the Spaniſh Biſhops, and deſires ſome Moor-Cavaliers to ſerve againſt the Enemies of the Church of Rome.

In the 311*th*. he grants the Communion to ſome Prieſts of Salerno, who tho' excommunicated by Pope Nicholas his Predeceſſor, yet were ſuffered to exerciſe their Functions, on Condition they ſhould faſt every Monday and Friday for three Years.

The 312*th*. is a Fragment of a Letter written to the King of the Bulgarians, accuſing him of Schiſm, becauſe he received the Sacrament of ſuch People as the Church of Rome counted excommunicated.

The

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

In the 313*th.* he creates Ansegisus his Vicar in France and Germany with Power to assemble Synods, if need required, and to regulate the Affairs of that Country: He orders him also, to publish the Decrees of the Holy See, and to refer to him all Affairs of Difficulty or Consequence.

In the 314*th.* he gives Leave to Hincmarus Archbishop of Rheims, to ordain in the Church of Laon, him that was chosen in the Place of his deposed Nephew; this Letter is dated on the fifth of January, Indiction IX. that is to say the Year 876.

Letter the 315*th.* directed to the Bishops and Archbishops of the Kingdom of Lewis of Bavaria; he smartly reproves them, for not hindering their King from entering into the Kingdom of Charles the Emperor; and he acquaints them, that he hath sent two Legates to compose the Differences between those Princes, and to excommunicate him that shall not agree to their Decisions.

He writes the same Thing to the Counts of the Kingdom of Bavaria in the following Letter: On the contrary, he praises the Prelates and Counts of the Empire, because they continued faithful to him; and reproves in Letter the 318*th.* those that had abandon'd him.

Letter 319*th.* is directed to all the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Priests, Judges and People of France and Germany. He gives them to understand, That Gregory Nomenclator and George his Son-in-law, having been impeached before the Roman Church, and accused in two Writings, he had cited them by two Bishops, and by his Secretary, who had delivered them Copies of the Accusations against them; that they had put off their Appearance from Day to Day, and in the mean Time had conspired to introduce the Sarazens into Rome. That not being able to effect their Designs, and the Day of their Trial approaching, they had by Night opened a Gate of the City, and fled with Bishop Formosus, and some others, that had conspired against the Emperor Charles. That he had sent two Bishops to cite them, but not finding them; and having put off their Trials to another Day, and sent again without Success to seek them, he had assembled a Council, and pronounced against them the following Sentence: That Formosus Bishop of Porto, heretofore sent Ambassador by Pope Nicholas to the King of Bulgaria, had engaged that Prince to receive no other Bishop sent by the Holy See but himself: Also being convicted of having done his Endeavours to pass from his Bishoprick to that of Rome; of having quitted his Church; fled out of Rome, and conspired against Charles the Emperor; should be excommunicated and deprived of his Priestly Office, if he did not appear to justifie himself within fifteen Days, that is to say, by the 2*d.* of May, and that without Hopes of Restoration, if he past twenty Days without appearing. That Gregory, Stephen, George, Sergius and Constantine, Authors and Accomplices of the said Conspiracy, and guilty of divers other Crimes, should be also excommunicated unless they appeared within ten Days, and be for ever anathematized, if they do not do it in fifteen. He adviseth by this circular Letter all Prelates and Believers not to communicate with them; and declares those that do so, excommunicated as well as they.

Letter 320*th.* is directed to Photius, and written concerning the Addition of the Filioque added to the Creed: Pope John the Eighth disapproves of it.

These Letters are followed by some Fragments of others, written by John the Eighth, gathered out of Gratian.

In the first, taken out of a Letter written to the Bishop of Vannes, he determines, that a Bishop having committed Manslaughter, can never perform Priestly Functions afterwards.

In the second, out of a Letter written to Rostagnus Archbishop of Arles, That the Sacrament cannot be given to a Person ravished, till she hath quitted her Ravisher.

In the third, cited out of a Letter to the Archbishop of Narbonne, he submits to the Judgment of this Metropolitan, an excommunicated Priest who had been put to Penance by some Bishops of his Province, and advises him to take six Bishops with him to judge of it.

In the fourth he writes to the Archbishop of Cologne, That he cannot grant him the Pall, because in the Letter by which he desired it, he neither spoke according to the Custom of Universal Councils, nor the Decrees of the Popes, and that he had not signed the Letter, nor sent any one to testifie the Truth of it by Oath.

Of the Popes during the 9th Century.

Lastly, There is a Fragment of a Constitution concerning the Cardinals, attributed to Pope John VIII. which orders, That they shall be present at least twice a Month in the Churches, to which they are intitled, that they may inform themselves of the Demeanour of the Clergy, prevent Disorders, and judge of all Differences between the Clergy and Laity in Ecclesiastical Affairs; he also commits to their Charge, the Care of Monasteries; he likewise commands them to be twice a Week at the Palace, according to the Command of Leo IV. to regulate Affairs there. In fine, he grants them half the Revenues and Contribution of the Parishes of Rome, upon Condition that they perform Divine Service there. These Constitutions do not appear to be so ancient as John VIII.

Father Labbe hath made an Addition of some Letters, which he supposes to belong to Pope John VIII. but either they are forged as the three first, or they are Grants of Privileges, which are not of John the VIIIth's only, as the fourth and sixth; or they are found elsewhere, as the fifth, which differs not from Letter 113*th.* and the seventh, which is a Paper of Instructions, given to the Legates sent to Constantinople, about the Affair of Photius. [These Letters of Pope John's are extant in Tome 9. of the Councils, with the Fragments.]

After John VIII. the See was held by Maurinus, and afterwards by Adrian III. they lived but a short Time, and did nothing considerable. Stephen V. who succeeded, writ two Letters into the East; one to the Emperor Basilicus, and the other to the Oriental Bishops, about the Affair of Photius. There is also a little Letter that bears his Name, to Robert Bishop of Metz, in which 'tis decided, that a Clerk having lost one Finger, might be promoted to Holy Orders.

A Fragment of another Letter to Fulke Archbishop of Rheims, in Favour of Teutboldus chosen Bishop of Langres; which commands him to put him in Possession of that Bishoprick. I do not mention another in Favour of the Church of Narbonne, against the Rights of the Church of Tarragon, which is a supposititious Monument full of Falsities. [His Epistles are in Tom. 9. of the Councils.]

At the End of this Age, the Church of Rome was troubled by the Election of Formosus Bishop of Ostia, translated to the Bishoprick of Rome: This Man had been deposed by Pope John VIII. But being returned under the Papacy of Marinus, he used all Arts and Interest to obtain the Holy See; but finding himself hated and rudely used by the Romans, he procured the Emperor Arnoldus to come to Rome, who beheaded several of the Chief of that City, who came to meet him. After his Death, which happened in the Year 896. about the fifth or sixth of his Popedom, the Holy See was disputed between Boniface and Stephen.

This last being an Enemy to Formosus's Memory, dug up his Corps, dress'd him, and stript him of his Pontifical Habit, and after having cut off his Fingers, threw him into the Tyber; and declared, that all whom he had ordained should be ordained anew; and made this cruel and unreasonable Proceeding be approved of by a Council held at Rome: But Pope Romanus that succeeded him in the Year 900. revok'd what his Predecessor had done: And his Papacy, and that of his Successor Theodorus lasting but few Months, John IX. in a Council, disannulled all that had been done against Formosus, declared all his Ordinations good, condemned to the Fire the Acts of the Council, held under Stephen IV. excommunicated those that had dug up Formosus's Body, and forbid for the Future all such like Proceedings.

These last Popes have written very little: There are two Letters of Formosus's; one to Stilianus about the Affairs of the East, another to the Bishops of England; but the latter which is likewise attributed to Pope Leo V. belongs to neither of them, being writ at a Council, supposed to be held the Year 995. which neither agrees with the Time of Formosus's being Pope, nor with the Reign of King Edward, in whose Time this Council is placed. They attribute to Stephen IV. two Letters to the Archbishop of Narbonne, but both seem to be supposititious. As to the Letters of John IX. we shall speak of them in the History of the following Age.

CHAP. XVII.

Containing the Ecclesiastical History of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

Of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

THIS Age had but few Writers, who attempted to give an Account of the Ecclesiastical Affairs of it in general, but had an Abundance of Authors, who compos'd the single Lives of several Saints.

Among the Ecclesiastical and Profane Historians of the first Sort, which flourish'd in this Age, we may reckon Sergius, of whom Photius [Cod. 67.] speaks; and assures us, That this Author wrote an History of all Things memorable, both in Church and State, from the Time of Copronymus to the 8*th.* Year of Michael Balbus, which was the 828*th.* Year of Jesus Christ. It is evident that he was a Layman and a military Officer. Since he relates also the Actions of the Army, as well as his Thoughts concerning the Disputes, then on Foot, about Religion: We have not this Work. Photius observes, That his Style was clear, elegant and unaffected: He used very proper Words and Expressions; that his Composure was very curious, and his Method pleasant, easie and natural; which he judges the best Properties of an Ecclesiastical Historian.

Sergius.

Eginhardus, Secretary to Charles the Great, and Founder of the Monastery of Selgenstat upon the Maine, in the Diocess of Mentz, wrote the Life of Charles the Great, and the Annals [of the most observable Things done in the Reigns of King Pepin, Charles the Great, and Lewis the Godly] beginning at the Year 741. and ending at 829. [Both these Works are printed together at Cologn, 1521. Quarto, at Francfort, 1584. in Fol. and 1594. in Octavo.] We have also some Letters of his [viz. 62. put forth by Du Chesne, in his Appendix, Tom. 2.] a Treatise upon the Cross, and an Account of the Translation of the Relicks of St. Marcellinus and St. Peter, which Ratlavius and Dieudo cunningly conveyed out of the Church of St. Tiburtius, near Rome. [This last Treatise is extant in Surius, June 2*d.* and the other is quite perished.]

Eginhardus.

Theganus, a Suffragan of the Bishoprick of Trevet, hath written an History of Lewis the Kind [or Godly.] Pithœus hath put it out, with the French Writers of this Age, at Francfort, 1594. p. 291. And Du Chesne in his Collection of the same Writers, Tom. 2.] He flourished from the Year 810. to 840. or thereabouts.

Theganus.

Petrus Siculus, being sent, in 870. by the Emperor Basil to Tibrica, in Armenia, to procure the Exchange of some Prisoners; and there having had some Conferences with the Manichees of that Country, call'd Paulitians, made a Treatise, containing the History of [the Rise, Progress and Down-fal of] the Manichees, and the Doctrines which they maintained. This Treatise hath been translated by Raderus [a Jesuit] and printed in Greek and Latin at Ingolstadt, in 1604. and in Biblioth. Patr. [Tom. 16.] It is dedicated to an Archbishop of Bulgaria. In it he reduces the Errors of the Manichees to six principal Heads, which are these, 1. That there are two Principles, a good one and an evil; the one the Creator and Governor of this World, the other of the World to come. 2. That Jesus Christ was not born of the Virgin. 3. That the Elements in the Sacrament, are not converted into the very Body and Blood of Christ. 4. That they contemn and disgrace the Cross. 5. That they reject the Books of the Old Testament and St. Peter's Epistles. 6. That they account the Ecclesiastical Ministery of Priests and Elders unnecessary. He then relates the Story of Manes and his Sect. All that he says is taken out of the Catechises of St. Cyril of Jerusalem and Epiphanius. He promised a Confutation of these Errors, but hath not done it in that Treatise. Father Simmondus saw a Confutation of two of these Articles, by several Texts of Scripture, in a MS. in the Vatican Library.

Petrus Siculus.

But, of all the Ecclesiastical Authors of this Age, there is none more famous than Anastasius, an Abbot and Library-Keeper of the Church of Rome, who flourished under the Popedoms of Nicolas I. Adrian II. and John VIII. He was sent by Lewis II. Emperor of Italy, to Basil Emperor of the East [to obtain a Marriage between his Master's Daughter and Basil's Son] and was present at [the last Session of] * the 8*th.* Council; where he was of great Use to the Pope's Legates, because he understood both the Greek and Latin Tongues well. He hath translated the Acts of this Council, and of the 7*th.* [at Nice] with several other Records of the Greek Church, [which are extant in Tom. 7. and 8. of the Councils;] as also a threefold Chronology; containing [a Collection of such Ecclesiastical Matters as are related in] the Chronica of Nicephorus, Patriarch of Constantinople, Georgius Syncellus and Theophanes, from the Beginning of the World to the Reign of Leo Armenus [put out by Fabrotus, at Paris, 1649. with his own Notes.] A Collection of several Pieces concerning the History of the Monothelites, published by Father Sirmondus [at Paris] in 1620. [and in the Biblioth. Patrum Tom. 12. p 831.] The Life of St. John the Alms-giver, Patriarch of Alexandria, mentioned by Sigebert and Trithemius [is not extant] and the Martyrdom of St. Demetrius, published by Father Mabillon, in his Analects, Tom. 1. [p. 65.] His Translations have all Prefaces to them, made by him, and very well written: But his most excellent one, is that which he hath perfixed to the Version of St. Dionysius the Areopagite, made by Erigenes, where he speaks of the Scholia which he had translated. He is commonly thought to be the Author of the Popes Lives, which bear the Name of Pope Damasus, but falsly, and they are printed under Anastasius's Name at Mentz, in 1612. [1602] But 'tis doubtful whether they are all his, and many believe that they are a Composure, taken out of several Authors. Father Labbe assures us, That he saw a MS. written in Charles the Great's Time, which contain'd the Lives of the first Popes; which, if it be true, this Work can't be all Anastasius's. I am of Opinion, that the Lives of the first Popes, as far as Damasus, were written by a more ancient Author, who put them out under Damasus's Name: But the latter are Anastasius's, who reviewed them, and put them in that Form they now are in, and concluded them with the Life of Nicholas I. for I take the Lives of the five following Popes to be written by William, who succeeded Anastasius in the Office of Library-keeper, in the Church of Rome. Nevertheless Anastasius might write the Life of Adrian II. for he certainly outliv'd him: And perhaps he lived long enough to write the Lives of the four following Popes. He wrote tolerable good Latin, and was a learned Man for his Time. He was a good Politician, and studied the Interest of the Church of Rome.

Anastasius Bibliothecarius.

Of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

* This Council, which passes for the 8*th.* General Council in Coriolanus's Collection, is rejected both by the Greeks and Romanists, for an unlawful one, being called without the Consent of the Western Emperors, and managed by the Iconolatræ, or Image-Worshippers, with Force and Cruelty, against Iconomachi, especially the great Photius, who was deposed from his See of Constantinople, and Ignatius put into it.

There remains only the Author of the Treatise, called Liber Synodicus, whose Name is unknown. His Work is an Abridgment of the first Councils, commonly called, The little Synodical Book: It ends with the Council held by Photius, in 877. which is accounted the 8*th.* General Council, which makes it probable that he lived about the End of the 9*th.* Age. This Work hath been printed at Strasburg, in 1601. [in Quarto,] and since is put by Father Labbe into the last Collection of the Councils. It is a very short and plain Abridgment, and contains nothing considerable or extraordinary about the History of the Councils.

The Anonymous Author of the Liber Synodicus.

The Number of the Historians of this Age, which have written the Lives and Panegyricks of the Saints, is very great; The chief of them are these that follow: Michael Syncellus of the Patriarch Nicephorus; and, after his Death, designed for his Place, by the Empress Theodora: But he refused to accept that Dignity. He wrote the Life of St. Dionysius [the Areopagite] and made a Panegyrick in Honour of the Holy [Archangels and] Angels: In which, after he hath invoked them, and distinguished their several Orders, he speaks of their good Offices, which they perform to Men, and relates several Examples to prove it out of Holy Scripture. Lastly, he makes several Exclamations, by Way of Encomium. There is an Hymn at the End of this Discourse, published by Father Combefis [in his Auctuar. Nov. Tom. 1. p. 1525.] and is found in the Biblioth. Patrum. The Style of it is lofty, full of great Words and affected Epithets.

Michael Syncellus.

Methodius, preferr'd to the Patriarchate of the Church of Constantinople, in 842. is also the Author of St. Dionys's Life, which is extant at the End of the Works of that Father [printed at Antwerp in 1634. Tom. 2. 'Tis also printed alone at Florence, 1516. Paris, 1562.] Some Fragments also of two Sermons, printed by Gretzer [in his Tom. 2. de Cruce] are attributed to him: The one is concerning the Benefit of the Death of Christ, and the Reasons why he would dye upon the Cross. The other is against those that are ashamed of the Cross of Christ. To these we may add, The Encomium of St. Agatha, translated into Latin by Father Combefis, in his Biblioth. Concionat. Patr. and is said to be in MS. in the Library of St. Mark at Venice. Some also attribute to him a Sermon upon St. Simeon; and another upon the Sunday, called Dominica in Ramis, [or Palm-Sunday, which is the Sunday before Easter-day] which Father Combefis hath printed among the Works of the elder Methodius, [who flourished in 290. at Paris, in 1644.] although it be very doubtful whether they be so ancient, as we have observed in speaking of the elder Methodius. He died in 847. [in Balsamon's Collection of the Greek Canons, we meet with some penitential Canons, attributed to Methodius, but the Learned judge them not to be his.]

Methodius

To

Of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

To Methodius we may joyn Hilduinus, the Patron of the Fable of St. Dionysius the Areopagite's coming into France. He was Abbot of St. Medard at Soissons, of St. German and St. Dionys [near Paris] and chief Chaplain to the Emperor Lewis the Godly. He made a Reformation in the last of these Monasteries, in 829. and settled Monks there instead of the Canons, formerly there. He took Lotharius's Part against his Father, and was banished into Saxony. But he was again restor'd, and after his Restoration he wrote his Book of the Areopagite, by the Command of Lewis the Godly. In it he undertakes to prove, That Dionysius, the Apostle of France, was the Areopagite: But this Work is full of abominable Falsehoods and gross Forgeries. He proves his Opinion by Records of so small Authority, that his Writing discovers the Weakness of the Cause he maintains, and his own Inability to do it. This Work was printed at Cologn in 1563. and is put by Surius among the Lives of the Saints [Octob. 9.] with a Letter from Lewis the Godly to him, and his Answer. Hilduin dyed, according to the Opinion of some, in 838. and of others, in 842.

Hilduinus Abbot of St. Medard at Soissons, St. German and St. David.

David Nicetas Paphlago.

David Nicetas, sirnamed Paphlago, because he was a Bishop in Paphlagonia, altho' he was also Patriarch of Constantinople, was a great admirer of the Patriarch Ignatius, and wrote a long History of his Life [which is extant, with the Acts of the VIII. Council at Ingolstadt, 1604. quarto. and Tom. 8. of the Councils. p. 1179.] He hath also composed several Panegyricks, in Honour of the Apostles and other Saints [viz. St. Mark, St. Mary, St. Gregory the Divine, St. Hyacinthus, Eustathius Agapius and Theopistus] printed by Father Combefis in his last Continuation of the Biblioth. Patrum [at Paris in 1672.] His Style is elegant and pleasant; his Relations are simple and plain, without being tedious. He often turns his Speech to the Saints; he commends and makes Acclamations in their Honour, according to the Custom of his Time.

Leo the Wise, Emperor of the East.

Leo the Wise, Emperor of the East, may be reckoned among the Panegyriks of the Saints. He succeeded his Father Basilius, in 886. and reigned till 911. He took great Pleasure in composing Sermons. Baronius hath published a List of 33. [ad Annum 911. numb. 3.] which are found in a MS. in the Vatican Library, Gretzer hath published 9. printed at Ingolstadt in 1600. and since, Father Combefis hath inserted 10. in the first Tom. of his Auctuar. Biblioth. Patr. Besides these, we have a Discourse upon the Life of St. John Chrysostom, among the Works of that Father [Tom. 8.] of Savil's Edition, and a Sermon upon St. Nicholas [Bishop of Myra] printed at Toulouse, in 1644. and some Predictions [viz. 17.] concerning the State of Constantinople, printed by Codinus [at the End of his Antiquities, at Paris, in 1655.] Baronius mentions other Works of Leo, which are in MSS. in the Vatican Library, viz. several Discourses, Moral Precepts, Riddles or Mystical Sayings, Constitutions, and [*his Tacticks, or] a Treatise of the Manner of Ranging an Army in Battalia. The Sermons printed by Father Combefis are upon the Nativity, Purification and Annuntiation of the Virgin, Palm-Sunday, the Incarnation, the Burial, Resurrection and Ascension of Jesus Christ; upon the Feast of Pentecost and Death of the Virgin, which he calls her Repose, maintaining, That she, as well as others, paid the last Debt to Nature, leaving us in Doubt, whether her Body was afterwards re-united to her Soul, or whether she was put into some Place to be reserved there to the General Resurrection.

* They are printed at Basil, in 1554. and Leyden, in 1612. and 1613.

Theophanes, Bishop of Tauromenium.

Theophanes, sirnamed Cerameus [or the Potter] Bishop of Tauromenium in Sicily, liv'd about the End of the 9*th* Age. He hath composed several Homilies upon the Gospels and yearly Festivals, which are printed in Greek and Latin at Paris, in 1644. Gretzer hath put out two upon the Cross. Another Bishop of the same Place, nam'd Gregory†, hath composed several Homilies upon the same Subjects, but they are not yet printed.

† Dr. Cave places him in 1040.

Georgius Chartophylax.

Georgius Monachus, the Keeper of the Records of the Church of Constantinople, and afterwards Archbishop of Nicomedia, was one of Photius's great Friends. He composed several Homilies upon the Feasts of the Virgin, published by Father Combefis, in Vol. 1. of his Auctuar. Biblioth. Pat. They are in a copious Style, and full of common Places, of little Benefit and tedious.

Nor doth the West furnish us with fewer Historians, who wrote the Lives of the Saints of their Time, than we have seen the Eastern Empire to have done, viz.

Ludgerus, Bishop of Munster.

Ludgerus, the Scholar of St. Gregory of Utrecht, having spent much Time and Labour in converting the Infidels in England and Swedeland, was made Bishop of Munster in Westphalia, in 802. He wrote the Life of his Master St. Gregory, Bishop of Utrecht, which is published by Brower [at Mentz, 1615.] who hath joyned with it a Relation of the Beginning of St. Benedict's Mission. This Life is in Tom. 2. Sæc. Benedict. III. published by Father Mabillon. Surius and Bollandus have published a Letter under Ludgerus's Name, dedicated to Rixfridus Bishop of Utrecht; which contains a Relation of the Life and Miracles of St. Swithert [but it is proved by Conte, in his Ann. Eccl. Fran. ad ann. 779. n. 31. & 754. n. 78. by many Arguments, not to belong to this Author.] He died in 809. and his Life is written by Alfridus, the third Bishop of Munster.

Of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

[Ægil or] Eigil, fourth Abbot of Fulda, governed that Monastery from 818. to 822. He hath written a Relation of the most eminent Actions of his Master St. Sturmio [his Predecessor in the Abbacy of that Monastery:] It is put out by Brower [at Ingolstadt in 1616.] and is also in Tom. 2. Sæc. Benedict. III. The Life of St. Ægil is written by a Monk of the same Abby, named Candidus, and published by the same Authors.

Ægil, Abbot of Fulda. Candidus.

Vusinus Boetius, Bishop of Poictiers, flourished from the Time of Lewis the Godly to the Year 830. He wrote the Life of St. Junianus Abbot of Maire, which is extant in Tom. 1. Sæc. Benedict. put out by Father Mabillon.

Vusinus Boetius, Bishop of Poictiers.

Hermenricus, a Monk of Elwangen, a Monastery in Germany, was chosen Abbot of it in 846. He wrote the Lives of St. Magnus and St. Sola, with a Dialogue about the Foundation of his Monastery. The Life of St. Sola was written about the Time that Rabanus was chosen Bishop of Mentz, about 847. It is dedicated to Rodolphus, a Monk of Fulda, under whom Ermenricus had studied. These two Lives are published by Father Mabillon.

Hermenricus, Abbot of Elwangen.

Eulogius, whom some believe to have been chosen Archbishop of Toledo, suffer'd Martyrdom at Corduba in 859. in the Persecution [of the Christians in Spain] by the Sarazens. He wrote the Martyrdom of the Christians which suffered for the Faith of Jesus Christ, before him, in that City. This Treatise is intituled, Memoriale Sanctorum [or, an Account of the Sufferings of the Martyrs of Corduba] and is divided into three Books. Afterward he composed an Apology [or Defence] of the same Martyrs, against those who denyed them that Title and Honour, for three Reasons. 1*st*. Because they never did any Miracles, as the ancient Martyrs did. 2*d*. Because they did not suffer variety of Torments, but were put to Death presently. 3*d*. Because those that put them to Death, were not Idolaters, but Mahometans, who worship the true God. He answers these Objections, and continues the History of those Martyrs. These four Books are followed by an Exhortation, or Instruction, which he made in Prison, and dedicated to two Virgins, Mary and Flora, who also were Prisoners. [In which he gives all the Christians then in Bonds for Christs sake, Arguments and Encouragements to suffer constantly, and adds] a Prayer for them to use in their present Condition. He hath also composed a Writing, dedicated to [Wilisindus] Bishop of Pampelona, when he sent him some Relicks of the ancient Martyrs of Corduba, which he had desired of him, when he was at Pampelona. In it he speaks of the Persecution of the Christians of Corduba, and sets down the Names of the Martyrs, and the days of their death. He sent his Instruction to Flora, and his Memoir of the Martyrs to his Brother Alvarus, who was then in Banishment in Germany, and wrote two Letters to him about the same matter, which Alvarus answered. Afterwards he sent him an Account of the Martyrdom of those two Virgins, as he did also to Baldegosena, Flora's Sister. We have these Letters, with the Works of Eulogius, in the Biblioth. Patr. [Tom. 15. p. 242.] and in the 4. Tome of the Spanish Writers [p. 213.] Ambrosius Moralis also hath printed all together with his own Notes at Complutum in 1554. [which was the first Edition of Eulogius's Works, but Malnenda finds fault with it, because he hath left out several things concerning Mahomet and his Doctrines, in the first and second Books of his Memoir of the Martyrs, which Eulogius had written. Wherefore Poncius Leo put out a more correct Edition at the same place in 1574. but continued Moralis's Notes.] Surius also hath printed his Lives of the Martyrs of Corduba.

Eulogius the Martyr.

Alvarus, Brother of Eulogius hath written, besides the Answers to his Brother Eulogius's Letters before-mentioned [which are among Eulogius's Letter's] the History of his Brother's Martyrdom [which is prefixed before Eulogius's Works in the Complutensian last Edition, and in the Biblioth. Patr. and Surius March 11. Vossius attributes to this Author two other Treatises, viz. Scintillæ Patrum, which is a Collection of Moral Sentences out of the Fathers and Iudiculus Luminosus, but they are not yet commonly received for his by learned Men.]

Alvarus. Voss. de Hist. Lat.

Herricus or Erricus, born at a Village of the same Name, viz. Hery, two Leagues from Auxerre, was a Benedictine Monk of the Abby of St. Germans in that City. He had for his Masters Haymo [of Halberstadt] and Lupus of Ferrara, as he himself tells us in the Preface to his Collection of Maxims and Things remarkable, taken out of the Holy Fathers and other ancient Writers, dedicated to Hildebald Bishop of Auxerre, of which we have only the Preface in Tom. 7. of Mabillon's Analect. Besides this Work, he composed two Books in Prose concerning the Miracles of St. German Bishop of Auxerre, printed by Father Labbe in the first Tome of Biblioth. MSS. Six Books also in Verse, containing the Life of Cæsarius, undertaken by the order of Lotharius the younger and dedicated to Carolus Calus, printed at Paris [in 1543. Octavo,] with the Poem of Marius Victorinus upon Genesis. He undertook to compose an History of the Bishop of Auxerre, with Rainogalus and Alogius, Canons of that Church. He made also [many] Homilies, of which we have three among the Homilies of Paulus Diaconus.

Herricus a Monk of St. Germans at Auxerre.

Of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

Anscharius, a Monk of Corby.

Anscharius, a Monk of Corby, the Apostle of Denmark and those Northen Countries, and after made Bishop of Hamburg and Breme, hath written the Life of Willibadus first Bishop of Bremè, which was printed at Antwerp in 1642. and in the second part of Father Mabillon's Sæc. Bened. III. Anscharius went into Denmark in 836. and was made Bishop of Hamburg in 842. and the Bishoprick of Breme was added to it in 849. He died in 865. [Anscharius's Psalter is extant in Cranzius Metrop. l. 1. c. 42. but his Epistles, of which he wrote many, are lost.]

Rudolphus, a Monk of Fulda.

Rudulphus or Rudolphus, a Scholar of Rabanus, a Priest and Monk of Fulda, the Preacher, and Confessor to Lewis King of Germany, passed for a very learned Man for his time. In the Annals of Fulda he hath given him the Title of an excellent Historian and Poet, and of a Man very well vers'd in all humane Sciences. He writ the Lives of Rabanus and St. Liobe, Abbessi of Pristoffeten, which are in Father Mabillon's Sæc. Benedict. and in Surius and Bollandus's Acts of the Lives of the Saints. The last of these Lives was composed out of the Records and Collections of a Priest named Magn, who had conversed with four of the Scholars of St. Liobe [viz. Agathe, Thecla, Nana, and Eolibe.] This Author died in 865.

Iso, a Monk of St. Gallus.

Iso, a Monk of St. Gallus, wrote about the Year 860. two Books containing the Lives and Miracles of St. Othmarus, Abbot of St. Gallus, which are also put out in Tom. II. Sæc. Ben. III. He died in 871.

Alfridus Bishop of Munster, and Orthegrinus, a Monk of Werthin.

Alfridus and Orthegrinus, of which the first was Bishop of Munster, and the other Monk of Werthin, have each of them written the Life of St. Ludgerus the first Bishop of Munster. They are both printed in Sæc. Benedict. Alfridus was the third Bishop of Munster after Ludgerus, succeeding to Jeffrey the Nephew of this Saint in 839. and died in 849. Othegrimus or Hildegrimus, wrote before him.

Ermentarius Abbot of Noicmontier.

Ermentarius, Abbot of Noicmontier, wrote an History of the Translation of the Body of St. Philibert, which the Monks of the Abby were forced to carry into several places, to keep it from the burning of the Normans. 'Tis published by Father Chifflietius, and since by Father Mabillon.

Milo, a Monk of St. Amandus.

Milo, called Sigebert, a Monk of St. Amandus, hath composed in Verse, the Life of that Saint, and a Treatise of Sobriety, dedicated to King Charles. We have this Life of Amandus, divided into four parts, with a Supplement to another Life of the same Saint, and the History of the Translation of his Relicks, in the Acts of Bollandus. Surius hath published an Homily under his Name upon the Life of Principius Bishop of Soissons. Father Audin hath published a piece, in Verse, of this Author's, which is a Dialogue between the Spring and Winter. [He died in 872. and is buried in his Monastery. His Epitaph celebrates him for the Author of his Treatise of Sobriety and Life of Amandus.]

Voss. de Hist. Lat.

Aimonius, a Monk of St. German de Prez.

Aimonius, of whom we are speaking in this Paragraph, is a different Person from the Author of the History of France. This last was a Monk of St. German de Prez, the other was the Abbot of Fleury. The one wrote at the end of the 9th. Age, and the other at the beginning of the 11th. This, of whom we are speaking, hath described the finding and Translation [of the Body] of St. Vincent, and made two Books upon the Miracles of St. German Bishop of Paris. A Book upon the Translation of the Martyrs St. George the Monk, St. Aurelius and St. Natalia, and two Books of their Miracles. These Works are printed by Father Mabillon in Sæc. Benedict. [33 and 34.] and in other Collections [viz. Surius, July, 25. &c.]

Abbo, a Monk of St. German de Prez.

We must distinguish the two Abbo's as well as the two Aimonius's. The first was a Monk of St. German de Prez [or de Pratis] as well as the first Aimonius, and lived at the same time with him; the other was co-temporary with the second Aimonius, and a Monk of the same Abby of Fleury. This last is the Author of a Poem divided into two Books, containing the History of the Siege of Paris by the Normans, in 886, and 887. This Work is dedicated to Goscelinus (not the Bishop of Paris, but a Deacon of the same name) and hath been printed several times in the Collections of the French Historians. He hath a third Book, which is not yet printed. This Author hath made some Sermons, which are in MS. at St. German de Prez, of which Father Dacherius hath chosen out five, and printed them in Tom. 9. Spicil. with an Advertisement to the Reader, in which he says, that he made these Sermons at the request of Frotarius Bishop of Poictiers and Fulradus Bishop of Paris, that the Clergy might make use of them to instruct the ignorant Laity. Four of these Sermons are upon Holy Thursday. In them Abbo observes, that this was the day on which Jesus Christ celebrated the Passover with his Disciples, and gave them the sacred Memorials of his Body and Blood; that the Bishops consecrate the Holy Oyl and the Altars, and the Pavements of the Churches are washed, and those Penitents absolved and received to communion, who had been excommunicated at the beginning of Lent. And upon this last Point it is that he chiefly enlarges in those Sermons, exhorting the Penitents to turn unto God with all their Hearts, that they may receive the benefit of Absolution, to renounce their Sins, and lead a Christian Life for the future. The third is addressed to the Penitents before their Asolution. He comforts them under the delays of Absolution, telling them, that the Bishop can't absolve them till they have performed their Penance, and shewed a real sorrow for their Sins. Nullus est certe Episcopus, qui possit absolutionem dare, nisi post pœnitentiam factam, & dignam satisfactionem. He exhorts them earnestly to observe the Lent-Fast. The fourth is directed to the absolved Penitents. He compares the state they were in before Reconciliation to that they are now in, and exhorts them not to make their Repentance of no advantage to them, by relapsing into their Sins. The last Sermon is upon the settlement of the Christian Religion, whose excellency he commends by the price it cost. For the sake of this it was that Jesus Christ died and rose again, that the Apostles laboured and suffered so much, that so many just Men have been martyred, that so many Confessors have given such Examples of Virtue, and dispersed that Light in the World; that so many Men have retreated into Monasteries, founded and establish'd by the piety of the Kings and Princes of the Earth. This gives him an occasion to inveigh against those, that take away the Revenues of Churches and Monasteries. He comforts the Christians that suffered Wrongs, and shews them, that they ought to content themselves with a few worldly Things, and labour for a Celestial Treasure, where these Extortioners, which spoil the Church, the Normans, who plunder and rob to enrich themselves, must expect the Torments of Hell.

Of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

Wolfadus, a Monk of Hatennede.

Wolfardus or Wolfadus, a Priest and Monk of Hatennede, in the Diocese of Eicstat, composed, about the end of the 9th. Age the Life of St. Walpurga, and dedicated it to Erkenwald Bishop of Eicstat [by whose Command he made them] and three Books of Miracles of that Holy Woman. He promised a Dialogue concerning that Saint, which we have not. Other of his Books are printed in the Collections of Canisius, Bollandus, and Father Mabillon.

Hugbaldus a Monk of St. Amandus.

Hugbaldus [Huchaldus or Hubaldus] the Nephew and Scholar of Milo, a Monk of St. Amandus, flourished in the 9th. Age, and was very long-lived. He was accounted a Man of great Learning in his time. He made a Poem of 300 Verses, dedicated to Charles the Bald, in commendation of Baldness, of which almost all the Verses begin with the Letter C. But 'tis not for the sake of this Work [tho' it hath been thought worth the printing at Basil in 1516. and 1546. and at Frankfort in 1624.] that we mention this Author; nor for the sake of his Book of Musick [spoken of by Sigebert] but because he composed the Lives of St. Aldegondes Abbess of Malbod, St. Rictrudres Abbess of Marchieme, and St. Lebwin, a Priest, printed by Surius and Bollandus on May 12. and Mabillon [Sæc. Benedict. II.] Sigebert speaks of this Author, and attributes to him the Lives of several other Saints, [in his Book De Script. Cap. 108.]

Alfredus King of England.

Alfredus, or Elfridus [or Aluredus] King of England, was sent by his Father Ethelwolf, [King of the West Saxons] to Rome, where he was crowned in the Year 872, by Pope Leo IV. He was a great lover of learning and learned Men; He translated several Latin Authors into the Saxon Tongue, and published them in his own Name, viz. Bede's History of England, Paulus Orosius's History, St. Gregory's Pastoral, &c. He composed some Laws. The Saxon Translation of Bede's History was printed at Cambridge in 1644, with his Laws and Prefaces to St. Gregory's Pastoral and P. Orosius. His Laws also are inserted in Spelman's Councils, and in the 9th. Tome of the Councils, p. 582. The 1st. commands the payments of Tythes. The 2d. is against those that rob Churches. The other are about Civil matters. This King died in the Year 900. Father Collet hath published his Will [out of Asserius Menevensis.]

Rembertus, Archbishop of Breme.

Rembertus, Archbishop of Breme, wrote the Life of his Predecessor Anscharius, printed at Cologne, with the Lives of the other Bishops of that Church. 'Tis also in the Collections of Bollandus and Father Mabillon. Rembertus was chosen Bishop after the Death of Anscharius, in 865. and died in 888.

Heremb. bertus, a Monk of Mount Cassin.

Herembert, [or Erchempert,] a Monk of Mount Cassin, lived at the end of the 9th. Age; he made a Chronicon, printed at Naples, in 1626, by the care of Caracciolus a Theatin Priest.

Almannus a Monk of Hautevilliers.

Almannus, a Monk of Hautevilliers in the Diocess of Rheims, compiled at the request of Theudonus his Bishop, the Life of St. Memmus the first Bishop of Chalons. Father Mabillon in Tome 2. Analect, hath put out a Letter of that Bishop to him, and his Answer with an Extract of the Register for Burials in the Abby of Hautevilliers; which shew that this Author made the Lamentations of France ravaged by by the Normans, and the Lives of St. Nivard Archbishop of Rheims, Sindulphus a Recluse and Priest, the Empress St. Helena, and the History of the Translation of her Relicks [from Rome] to the Monastery of Hautevilliers, with several other Works.

Of the Lives and Martyrologies of the Saints.

Adelinus Bishop of Seez.

Adelinus, [or Adelelinus, or Adelmus] succeeded Hildebrand in the Bishoprick of Seez after 877, and govern'd that Church till the Year 910. He wrote the Life of St. Opportuna the Abbess, Sister of Godegrand the first Bishop of Seez. It was published by Surius, Bollandus, in April 22, and by Father Mabillon in Tome 2. Sæc. Benedict. III.

Otfredus a Monk of Weissemburg.

Otfredus, a Benedictine Monk of the Abby of Weissemburg, and Scholar of Rabanus, compos'd an History of the Gospel in the Teutonick Tongue, that the People that did not understand the Greek nor Latin, might read and understand the Gospel. He divided this Work into five Books, which contain'd the principal circumstances of the Life of Jesus Christ, taken out of the four Evangelists, and digested into the order of Time. He dedicated it to Luctbertus Archbishop of Mentz, by a Latin Letter which he used instead of a Preface; it is printed in the Bibliotheca Patrum; but the Work it self is not yet made Publick. Trithemius makes mention of some other Treatises of this Author, dedicated to King Lewis, Bishop Solomon, and the Monks of St. Gallus. Three Volumes upon the Psalms; a Treatise of the last Judgment; another of the Joys of Heaven, several Letters, and many pieces of Poetry.

Aldrevaldus a Monk of Fleury.

Aldrevaldus [Aldelbertus] and Albertus, a Monk of Fleury lived towards the end of the 9th. Age. He wrote an History of the Translation of St. Benedict and St. Scholastica, and a Book of the Miracles of St. Benedict. These works are in the Library of the Monastery of Fleury.

Asserius Bishop of Sherburn.

Asserius, [Menevensis] Bishop of [Sherburn in] England, flourished about 890, and died in 909. He wrote the History of the Acts of Alfredus his King, which was printed in 1602. at Francfort, with other English Historians; [Bale says he wrote the Annals of England, some Homilies, and some other Works, but we have them not. He is accounted an Author of good Credit.]

Florus, a Deacon of Lyons.

We must not forget the Martyrologies which were perfected in this Age. In the beginning of the last Century, venerable Bede took much pains in this matter, and made two Martyrologies, the one in Prose, the other in Verse, but both of them being Imperfect, Florus a Deacon of the Church of Lyons, made several Additions to Bede's Martyrology, in the Age we are speaking of, and put it almost into that form it is at present in, as is observed by Bollandus, who hath published the true Martyrology of Bede, with Florus's Additions, in his 2*d.* Tome of March.

Wandalbert, a Monk of Prom.

Wandalbert, a Deacon and Monk of Prom, a Monastery in the Diocess of Treves, composed about the Year 850, a Martyrology, in [Heroick] Verse, taken out of Bede and Florus. Sigebert and Trithemius make mention of him. It has been printed under the name of Bede at the end of Bede's Ephemerides in the Basil Edition, and afterwards by Molanus at the end of Usuardus's Martyrology. But Father Dacherius hath printed it more exact and correct in Tome 3. Spicileg.

Rabanus of Mentz.

About the same time also Rabanus composed a Martyrology, published by Canisius, in the 6. Tome of his Ecclesiastical Antiquities.

Ado Archbishop of Vienna.

After him Ado, Archbishop of Vienna, composed a Work of the same nature more exact than any of the former: He modeled it by an ancient Martyrology, which he found at Aquileia, brought thither from Rome, which contained the Names, Qualities, and various Torments of the Saints that suffer'd Martyrdom. He hath put at the beginning of his Martyrology, a small Tract of the Festivals of the Apostles, in which he writes the History of their Martyrdom. The same Author hath made a short Chronology from the beginning of the World to the Birth of Charles the Simple, the Son of Lewis the Stammerer, which was in 879. of our Account. He divides the duration of the World into six Ages; The 1*st.* is from the Creation of the World to the Flood. The 2*d.* from the Flood to the Birth of Abraham. The 3*d.* from Abraham to David. The 4*th.* from David to the Captivity in Babylon. The 5*th.* from the Captivity to the Birth of our Saviour. And the 6*th.* from the Nativity of Jesus Christ to the end of the World. This Chronology is printed with the Works of Gregory Bishop of Tours at Paris, in 1512, and 1567, and at Basil 1568, [and by it self at Paris in 1522.] It is also inserted in the Biblioth. Patr. [Tome 16. p. 768.] His Martyrology is published by Lippomannus in the Lives of the Fathers; and after by Bollandus in his Supplement to Surius, and last of all by Rosweidus, who first printed the ancient Martyrology which Ado had put before his Works [at Antwerp in 1613. and at Paris in 1645.] There are also two Lives which bear the name of Ado; the one is of Desiderius Archbishop of Vienna, put out by Canisius in his Antiquities; and the other is of St. Theuderius an Abbot of the same City, published by Father Mabillon in Tome 1. of his Sæc. Benedict. Some think this Author died in 814. which makes some say, that he added some Years to his Chronology; but to me it seems not probable. It is most agreeable to Truth to fix his death a little after 879.

Usuardus, a Monk of St. Germans de Prez.

Lastly, Usuardus a Monk of St. Germans de Prez, (a) hath composed a Martyrology more considerable than any of the former, under the Reign of the Emperor (b) Charles the Bald, to whom he dedicated it in 870. This Work being much larger, and more perfect than any that were written before upon the same Subject, was much approved and well accepted in all Churches which began to make use of it in their Offices. Some think also that the Church of Rome took it into their Services and used it, before they had one of their own. This Martyrology hath been printed at Antwerp in 1538. and at Lovain in 1568. [with Molanus's Notes and Additions] and since in several other places [as Antwerp 1583. with Hissel's Censure; but all that was displeasing to the Papists, is left out of this Edition, as Usher tells us in his Biblioth. Theol. MS.]

Gildas.

To these Authors might have been added Gildas, who made a Kalendar of the Saints, of which Bishop Usher hath printed the Preface, [in Epist. Heb. Syll. p. 55.] and some other Authors of the 9th. Age, which are purposely omitted, as well as some Historical matters of little or no Consequence, which we could not think necessary to put into this Work; for it is not our design to make compleat Annals Year by Year, but only to explain the most important Matters treated of in this Age, which is the principal and most profitable part of Ecclesiastical History; for in that our particular Enquiry ought not to be after a meer Narration of Matters of Fact, which is of little use, but what concerns the Doctrine and Discipline of the Church, and upon Questions and Works of that nature it is that we have chiefly insisted: that our Reader may have a competent knowledge of them, we shall account it a very great happiness, if this Work may be serviceable in any measure to clear the difficult Questions, and confirm the important Doctrines of the Christian Religion. But how severe so ever others Censures may be upon it, it will be always some comfort to us that we have laboured in and aimed at so good a Design; and we hope that though our pains may not have the wish'd for Effect among Men, yet it shall be of some real advantage to us with him who knows and rewards the good Intentions as well as the good Actions of Men, according to the words of St. Bernard Ep. 360. Laboravimus, quantum potuimus, & si quo minus impetravimus, quod optavimus, manet tamen fructus Laboris nostri, apud Deum, apud quem nullum bonum irremuneratum est in fine.

(a) A Monk of St. Germans.] Some make him the Abbot of Fulda, and others the Abbot of St. Saviours, but it is evident that he was a Monk of St. Germans, by an ancient Manuscript of that Abby. Some call him Isuard (b) Charles the Bald] His Book was dedicated to Charles, some have thought it was to Charles the Great; but Aimonius a Monk of St. Germans, in his Translation of the Martyrs, Gregory, Aurelius, &c. observes, that Usuard lived in 858, and we find in that Martyrology, the names of Eulogius and other Martyrs that suffer'd in Spain, in 857. In an ancient Manuscript of this Martyrology which may be thought the Original, we find the Death of Queen Hermentruda set down in the first place, and Charles in the second, which shews that 'twas Written after the Year 869. in which the Queen died, and before 875, in which the death of Charles the Bald happened.

CHAP. I.

An Account of the moſt Conſiderable Tranſactions in the Eaſtern Church, during the Tenth Century.

Of the Tranſactions in the Eaſtern Church, during the Tenth Century.

AT the beginning of this Century, Leo the Philoſopher, one of the moſt learned Emperors the Greeks ever had, govern'd the Empire of the Eaſt. This Prince having had three Wives ſucceſſively, and no Iſſue Male by either of them, being deſirous of a Son to ſucceed him, marries a fourth Wife, by name Zoe, by whom he already had a Son before the Nuptials. But a third Marriage being prohibited in the Eaſt, and Leo himſelf having enacted a Law againſt ſuch as ſhould contract ſuch a Marriage, Nicholas the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, refuſes to marry this Prince to this fourth Wife, depoſes Presbyter Thomas who ventur'd to do it, and excommunicates the Emperor himſelf. Leo had recourſe to the Pope for his Approbation of the Marriage; and becauſe ſuch ſucceſſive Marriages (how often ſoever contracted) were tolerated in the Weſt, he eaſily obtain'd from Pope Sergius the point he deſired. This Pope ſent his Legats into the Eaſt to confirm the Marriage of Leo; but the Patriarch of Conſtantinople would not give the leaſt ground, nor acknowledge the Emperor's Marriage as valid, or his Son Conſtantine Porphyrogenneta as lawful Heir to the Crown. The Emperor did all he could to change his Mind, but finding him fix'd in his Reſolution, he baniſh'd him in the beginning of the Year 901. and plac'd in his Room Euthymius, who held the Patriarchal See of Conſtantinople 'till about the end of Leo's Reign: For Nicholas himſelf aſſures us, that this Prince, touch'd with the remorſe of what he had done, recall'd him from his Exile, and re-eſtabliſh'd him a little before his Death: In which matter he is rather to be credited, than thoſe Authors who tell us that he was recall'd by Alexander the Brother of Leo, which happen'd after the Death of this Prince, in the Year 911. the time when he was declar'd Governor to Conſtantine Porphyrogenneta. Let it be how it will, Euthymius fell into diſgrace, and was baniſh'd, and dy'd ſhortly after: And Nicholas's Intereſt ſo far prevail'd, that after the Death of Alexander, who did not out-live his Brother above thirteen Months, he was choſen Tutor of the Young Emperor. It was at this time, that he wrote a long Letter to the Pope, acquainting him of the whole Conteſt with the Emperor Leo about his laſt Marriage, and ſtiffly maintain'd, contrary to the Practice and Opinion of the Church of Rome, that to marry a third or fourth time was abſolutely unlawful. But the Patriarch having received no anſwer from Rome, wrote another to Pope John, wherein he offers to obſerve a fair Correſpondence and Union with the Holy See, provided he would own that a fourth Marriage was not to be permitted to the Emperor, unleſs by way of Indulgence or Conſideration of his Royal Perſon, and that in it ſelf it was unlawful. The ſame Patriarch wrote ſeveral other Letters, viz. to Simeon Prince of Bulgaria, recommending the Legats which the Pope ſent him: One to the Prince of Armenia, upon the Converſion of ſeveral Armenians, who had abandoned their Errors: another to the Prince of the Sarazens, to diſſwade him from perſecuting the Chriſtians: One wrote from the Place of his Exile to the Biſhops, who had own'd Euthymius for their Patriarch, and two other Letters of Compliment, one to the Prince of Lombardy, and the other to the Prince of the Amalphitans.

Leo the Philoſopher Emperor of the Eaſt.

The Diſturbances which happen'd in the Eaſtern Churches upon the account of Leo's 4th. Marriage.

Nicholas the Patriarch of Conſtantinople is baniſh'd.

Nicholas is re-eſtabliſh'd.

The Letters of Nicholas Patriarch of Conſtantinople to the Pope and others.

The Empreſs Zoe, who had taken the Government into her own hands, and had expell'd the Patriarch Nicholas from Court in the Year 914. was her ſelf diveſted of her Authority in the Year 919. and thruſt into the Monaſtery of Saint Euphemia, by Patricius Romanus, whom Conſtantine had made his Partner in the Throne. Hitherto the Clergy of Conſtantinople were divided into two Parties, one declaring for Nicholas, the other for Euthymius; but were re-united in the Year 920. and made a Treaty of Union in an Eccleſiaſtical Convocation, by which (without diſanulling any thing that was paſt) they abſolutely prohibited for the future a fourth Marriage, under the pain of Excommunication to be inflicted on thoſe who ſhould contract ſuch a Marriage, and to be in force during the continuance of ſuch Marriage. They likewiſe inflicted a Penance of five Years on ſuch as ſhould marry a third time being above forty years old: And a Penance of three Years on ſuch as ſhould re-marry after thirty Years of Age, if they had any Children by their former Marriages.

The re-union of the Clergy of Conſtantinople.

By this Regulation was the Church of Conſtantinople reſtor'd to its former Quiet, the Peaceable poſſeſſion of which Nicholas enjoy'd to his Death, which happen'd in the Year 930. Stephen the Archbiſhop of Amaſea was his Succeſſor, who preſided over this Church almoſt three Years. After his Death the Patriarchal See of Conſtantinople was deſign'd for Theophilact the Emperor's Son; but he being under age, this Dignity was repos'd by way of Truſt in the hands of one Tripho a Monk. He being once in poſſeſſion refus'd to reſign his Place to Theophilact; but the Emperor made uſe of one, who cunningly procur'd a Blank Paper ſign'd by the Patriarch's own hand, which he fill'd up with a Reſignation of the Patriarchſhip, as acknowledging himſelf unworthy of it. Whereupon he was depos'd in a Synod held at Conſtantinople in the Year 944. and Theophilact was conſtituted in his place. But this Man led a Life far different from what a Patriarch ought to lead, and was more taken up with his Horſes and his Hounds, and other ſuch like Diverſions, than with diſcharging the Duty of his Place. He died in the Year 956. of a Dropſie, occaſioned by a fall off his Horſe, which flung him againſt a Wall. The Emperor conſtituted in his Room Polyeucta, a poor Monk, but one of extraordinary good Morals, who was Ordain'd by Baſil Biſhop of Cæſarea, and not by Nicephorus of Heraclea, to whom that Ordination did of Right belong. The liberty which this Patriarch took of reproving the Great Men at Court, immediately drew upon him a great many Enemies, who inclin'd the Emperor to think of depoſing him. He was confirm'd in this Reſolution by Theodorus of Cizica, but notwithſtanding he was ſo bent upon it, he died without doing any thing therein. His Son Romanus, who was ſuppos'd to give his Father a Lift into the other world, ſucceeded him in the Year 960. and caus'd his Son Baſil to be Crown'd by Polyeucta. But this young Prince and his Brother Conſtantine, not being of age to enter upon the Government when their Father died in the Year 963. Nicephorus Phocas was proclaim'd Emperor by the Army, and Crown'd by Polyeucta. A while after this Patriarch had a warm debate with the Emperor: For this Emperor having marry'd Theophanes, the Widow of Romanus, Polyeucta threaten'd to excommunicate him unleſs he would Renounce her: (1.) Becauſe this was the ſecond Marriage Nicephorus had contracted, without ſubmitting to the Penance due to thoſe who were Guilty of Bigamy. (2.) Becauſe it was reported that Nicephorus had ſtood God-father to one of Theophanes's Children, the Emperor propos'd this Queſtion to the Biſhops, who were then in Conſtantinople, and to the chief of his Council, who left him at his Liberty to keep Theophanes as his Wife: And Polyeucta himſelf did not inſiſt any more on the Diſſolution of the Marriage, after that the Emperor had aſſur'd him upon his Oath, that he had never ſtood God-father to any of Theophanes's Children, which was confirm'd by Stylien, chief Secretary of State, who made a Recantation of what he had formerly ſaid about it. This Emperor began his Reign with Succeſs, and re-took a great many Provinces of Aſia from the Sarazens; but he loaded his People with Taxes, and ſeiz'd upon the Revenues of the Church to give to his Soldiers. After the Death of any Biſhops he would ſend a Commiſſary to ſeize upon their Temporalities, and prohibited the chuſing any others in their ſtead, without his conſent and orders, which was confirmed in a Synod. At the ſame time he would fain have had a Ratification of this Propoſal, "That all Soldiers who died in the Field, ſhould "be declared Saints as the Martyrs were; but the Biſhops oppos'd it. However, they could not perſuade two of their Brethren who had born Arms, and fought againſt the Enemy, to relinquiſh their Miniſterial Functions; ſeveral amongſt them of a more Martial Genius approving of this their Conduct. The exactions of Nicephorus, and the bad ſucceſs of his Arms in Italy, having render'd him Odious to the People of Conſtantinople, he was kill'd in an Inſurrection of them, and John, Sirnam'd Zemiſces, Reign'd in his ſtead in the Year 969. Polyeucta refus'd to Crown him, till he had baniſh'd the Murtheress of Nicephorus, ſent Theophanes from Court, and promis'd to give to the Poor, as an Expiation of his Fault, the Eſtate which he had when a private Man. This was the laſt Action of Polyeucta, who dy'd five and thirty days after he had Crown'd this Prince, in the beginning of the Year 970. having held the Patriarchal See of Conſtantinople fourteen Years. Baſil the Monk ſucceeded him, who had the Government of that Church 'till the Death of John Zemiſces, which happen'd about the Year 975. or 976. after which the two Sons of Romanus being upon the Throne, and having re-call'd their Mother Theophanes, Baſil the Patriarch was depos'd in Council, and Anthony Studita ſucceeded him. But he did not enjoy the Patriarchſhip long; for the Year after Bardus, Sirnamed the Hard, having revolted and taken upon him the Quality and Enſigns of Emperor, Anthony of his own accord quitted his place and withdrew. The See of Conſtantinople became Vacant during four Years, the time he ſurviv'd.

Of the Tranſactions in the Eaſtern Church, during the Tenth Century.

Theophylact an unworthy Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Polyeucta Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Nicephorus Phocas Emperor.

John Zemiſces Emperor.

The death of Polyeucta.

Baſil put in his place.

Anthony Studita Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

After

The Patriarchs of Conſtantinople who ſucceeded Nicolas.

Of the Eastern Church, &c.

After his Death Nicholas, surnamed Chrysoberge, succeeded, who had Sisinnius for his Successor in the year 993. Basil and Constantine, who had subdued Bardus, reign'd still as Emperors. Basil lived in the year 1025. and his Brother Constantine liv'd three years after him.

During this whole Century, the Greek Church, which was upon its Declension, proved very barren, both of famous Men and good Authors. We find among them but very few who made it their Business to compose, and their Works are very inconsiderable, both in Respect to the Matter, and to the Manner wherein they were writ.

Of the Eastern Church, &c.

Simeon Metaphrastes.

Simeon Metaphrastes.

ONE of those who wrote most was Simeon, surnam'd Metaphrastes, so call'd from his turning the ancient Lives of the Saints into another sort of a Style than that wherein they were formerly written. He was an Officer in the Palace, Lord High Chancellor, and flourish'd in the Tenth Century, chiefly under the Reign of Constantine Porphyrogenneta. For tho' he had been imploy'd under the Reign of Leo, yet he writ nothing till Constantine's Time, as appears by the Life of St. Theoctista, which is his first Piece, as is observ'd in his Panegyrick written by Psellus, another Psellus than that who liv'd in the Time of Constantine the Iconaclast, of whom we spoke in another Place. He apply'd himself to study, and enquire into the Lives of the Saints, and having made a large Collection of them, those which he did not like he undertook to make over again, not only by casting them into a different Style, but also by adding to, or substracting from them, what he thought convenient, and running them down into the Form of a Panegyrick rather than History. We have a great many of them of his composing, and most under his Name, as well in printed Collections as in MSS. but they are mix'd with several others, compos'd by various Authors. There are some among the Anonymous which may be ascribed to him. It would be very difficult to make the Distinction, had not the ingenious Allatius given himself the Trouble of doing it, with a great deal of Accuracy, in his Dissertation concerning the Writings of the Simeons, wherein he gives us a Catalogue of the Lives of the Saints, which, in Manuscript or Print, belong properly to Metaphrastes, and which of them belong to other Authors. He reckons above an hundred which are genuin, and almost as many more that are spurious, whose Authors are unknown; and near four hundred and fifty whose Authors he discovers. They who have the Curiosity to search further into this Matter, may consult Allatius himself: As for our Part, we don't think it worth our while to croud such a tedious and useless Catalogue into our Work. Besides these Lives of the Saints, Metaphrastes has compos'd several Sermons on the solemn Festivals of the Year, which are to be met with in Manuscripts; and a great many Hymns and Prayers which are inserted in the Ecclesiastical Writings of the Greeks. He likewise digested four and twenty moral Discourses taken from the Works of St. Basil, and printed together with them, [and likewise publish'd by themselves in Greek at Paris, 1556.] And in the Libraries there are a great many Collections of moral Sentences taken out of St. Macarius, and an hundred one and thirty Sentences or Rules more, all compos'd by Metaphrastes. Lastly, Leo Allatius has publish'd nine Letters and several Pieces of Poetry of the same Author, together with a Discourse of the Lamentation of the Virgin Mary on the Passion of our Saviour.

Simeon Metaphrastes.

John Cameniates.

John Cameniates.

ABout the same Time liv'd John Cameniates, Lecturer of the Church of Thessalonica, who wrote the History of the taking and sacking that City by the Sarazens in the Year 904. It was set forth by Leo Allatius in his Collection of the Greek Writers.

John Cameniates.

Constantine Porphyrogenneta.

Constantine Porphyrogenneta.

Constantine Porphyrogenneta is reckon'd one of the Authors of this Century. He was ingenious himself, a Lover of learned Men, and very well vers'd in the Sciences. We have of his Writing an History of the Image of our Saviour sent to Agbarus King of Edessa, and brought from Edessa to Constantinople in the Year 944. This Piece was publish'd by Father Combefis, in his Collection of the Authors who wrote the History of Constantinople, and printed at Paris, 1664. He likewise wrote the Life of his Grand-Father the Emperor Basil the Macedonian; which is to be met with in the Collection of Allatius. In the Year 1617. Meursius set forth several Political Treatises of this Emperor's composing, viz. A Treatise concerning the Government of the Empire, directed to his Son Romanus; a Book of Institutions, two Books of the Dignities of the Eastern Empire, and seventeen Novels. He likewise compos'd several Historical and Political Pandects, extracted out of all the Historians, and rang'd under three and fifty Heads, of which we have only two remaining, viz. the 27*th*. which contains the Extracts of Embassies, published in Greek by Hoeschelius, printed at Ausbourg in the Year 1633, and in Latin at Paris, in the Year 1609. And the 50*th*. on the Virtues and Vices, set forth by Monsieur Henry de Valois, and printed at Paris, in the Year 1634.

Constantine Porphyrogenneta.

Hippolitus the Theban.

Hippolitus the Theban.

HIppolitus the Theban lived in the same Century. He composed a Chronicon, several Fragments whereof are to be met with in the third Tome of the Antiquities of Canisius, and in Monsieur Cotelier's Notes. 'Tis to this Hippolitus that we ought to attribute the small Treatise of the twelve Apostles set forth by Father Combefis, in the second Tome of his Additions to the Bibl. Patrum, [printed at Paris in the Year 1648.]

Hippolitus the Theban.

Eutichius Patriarch of Alexandria.

Eutichius Patriarch of Alexandria.

EUtichius the Egyptian, of the Country call'd Said in Egypt, born in the Year 876. by Profession a Physician, and Patriarch of Alexandria from the Year 933. to the Year 940. composed several Treatises in Arabick. Those which have been transmitted to our Times, are a Treatise of Physick, a Dispute between an Heretick and a Christian, an History of Sicily from the Time of the taking of that Island by the Sarazens, and Annals from the Beginning of the World down to the Year 937. containing several remarkable Transactions both of Ecclesiastical and Prophane History, and which he has intituled, A Methodical Disposition, or Composition of precious Things, or the Substance, or Marrow of History. Selden in the Year 1642. printed at London, a Fragment of his Treatise concerning the Election and Ordination of the first Patriarchs of Alexandria, which Eutichius asserts had been done till Alexander's Time, by twelve Presbyters of that Church, who chose one among themselves for Patriarch, and laid their Hands upon him. He likewise there maintains, that there was not a Bishop in all Egypt till the Time of Demetrius. This very Treatise has since that been published entire by Selden, and printed in the Year 1658. at London, in two Vol. in 4*to*. both in Arabick and in Latin. 'Tis full of Fables and very vulgar Stories.

Eutichius Patriarch of Alexandria.

Nico of Armenia.

Nico of Armenia.

NIco of Armenia was very young, when without his Parents Consent he shut himself up in the Monastery of the Golden Rock, scituate between Pontus and Paphlagonia. After he had there led for a long Time a very austere Life, in the Year 961. he was sent out on a Mission by his Superior. He preached in Armenia, and in other Provinces of the East, and from thence went to the Isle of Crete, which had lately shaken off the Yoke of the Sarazens. He purg'd this Island from those Pagan Superstitions which were still in Use among them, and brought over a great many Persons to the Faith. He retir'd afterwards to Lacedemonia, from whence he was sent for to Corinth, by his Prayers to put a Stop to the Incurſions of the Bulgarians. He dy'd in the Year 998. He is ſaid to be the Author of a little Treatiſe of the Religion of the Armenians, containing an Abridgment of their Errors, which is to be ſeen in Latin in the Biblioth. Patr. together with a Fragment againſt irregular and raſh Excommunications, where he ſays that they recoyl back on thoſe Perſons who dart them out too raſhly.

Nico of Armenia.

Nico of Armenia.

Nico of Armenia.

Nicephorus the Philoſopher.

Nicephorus the Philoſopher

WE may likewiſe reckon among the Authors of this Century, Nicephorus the Philoſopher, who made Funeral Orations on the Death of Anthony Patriarch of Alexandria.

Nicephorus the Philoſopher

Moſes Bar-Cephas.

Moſes Bar-Cephas.

LAſtly, to theſe we may joyn Moſes Bar-Cephas, Biſhop of Syria, who compos'd in Syriack a Treatiſe concerning Paradiſe, divided into three Books, ſet forth in Latin by Maſius, printed firſt at Antwerp, in the Year, 1569. and afterwards in the Biblioth. Patrum. 'Tis a very large Commentary on what was ſaid concerning Paradiſe in the Book of Geneſis. In the firſt Book he treats of the Earthly Paradiſe: In the ſecond, of the myſtical Paradiſe, that is to ſay, of the myſtical Significations of that which is call'd the Earthly Paradiſe; and in the laſt he treats of the Errors of Hereticks concerning Paradiſe, and the Objections that may be brought to the contrary. In this laſt Book he maintains, That Adam was created mortal, and that God would have render'd him immortal by his Grace, if he had not ſinn'd: however, he refutes Theodore and Neſtorius, who had maintain'd that the Sin of Adam was not the Cauſe of the Death of Mankind.

Moſes Bar-Cephas.

CHAP. II.

An Account of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

THough Hiſtorians have differ'd in their Judgment, concerning the Tenth Century in general; yet they all agree in their Accounts of the wretched State and Condition of the Church of Rome, and thoſe who have been moſt favourable in their Cenſures, could not but own that it was in a ſtrange Diſorder. 'At that 'Time (cries Cardinal Baronius) How deform'd, how 'frightful was the Face of the Church of Rome! The Holy 'See was ſain under the Tyranny of two looſe and diſ'orderly Women, who plac'd and diſplac'd Biſhops as 'their Humour led them; and, (what I tremble to think 'and ſpeak of) they plac'd their Gallants upon St. Peter's 'Chair, who did not ſo much as deſerve the very Name 'of Popes. For who dare ſay, that theſe infamous Perſons, 'who intruded without any Form of Juſtice, were lawful 'Popes? We do not find that they were choſen by the 'Clergy; or that they conſented in the leaſt to their Elec'tion. All the Canons of Councils were infring'd, the De'crees of Popes trampled under Foot, the ancient Tradi'tions deſpis'd, the Cuſtoms and Ceremonies uſually ob'ſerv'd in the Election of Popes neglected, and the Holy 'See became a Prey to Avarice and Ambition.' In ſuch Terms as theſe does this Cardinal, who cannot be ſuppos'd to be an Enemy to the Church of Rome, lament the ſad Eſtate wherein it was in this Tenth Century: And a long Time before him, Arnold Biſhop of Orleans, who probably might have been an Eye-witneſs of ſome of theſe Diſorders, breaks out into this Complaint: 'O miſerable Rome! Thou 'that formerly didſt hold out ſo many great and glorious 'Luminaries to our Anceſtors, into what prodigious Dark'neſs art thou now ſain, which will render thee infamous 'to all ſucceeding Ages?

The Ordination of Pope Formoſus.

We may trace the Beginning of this Diſorder from the Promotion of Formoſus to the Popedom, which ſow'd the Seed of the Diviſions which afterwards enſued. This Formoſus being Biſhop of Oſtia, had been depos'd by John VIII. in a Synod held at Rome, and conſtrain'd to ſwear he would continue a Layman all the reſt of his Life. He was depos'd for theſe three Reaſons. 1. Becauſe having been ſent by Pope Nicholas I. into Bulgaria, he made the King of the Bulgarians ſwear that he would not admit of any other Biſhop beſides himſelf, that ſhould be ſent thither by the Holy See. 2. Becauſe he had already endeavoured to be tranſlated from the Church of Oſtia to that of Rome, and made Parties for the attaining of his End, contrary to the Laws preſcrib'd in the Canons. 3. Becauſe he had abandon'd his Church without the Pope's Leave, and that having left Rome, he was ſuſpected to have conſpir'd againſt the Empire and the Church. This Sentence of John VIII. was repeal'd by his Succeſſor Marinus, who re-call'd Formoſus, re-eſtabliſh'd him in his Biſhoprick, and declar'd the Oath he had been forc'd to take to be null and void. However he ſtill kept up the Deſign he had laid of advancing himſelf to the Popedom; and he ſo well form'd his Intrigue, that after the Death of Stephen V. he had ſo powerful a Party as to carry it, againſt Sergius a Deacon of the Church of Rome, who had been elected by a great Part of the Clergy. Formoſus hinder'd his Ordination, drove him out of the Church, and forc'd him to fly to Tuſcany to the Marquis Adalbert, who declar'd himſelf his Protector. Formoſus was ordain'd on the 27*th*. of May, in the Year 891. The Year after he crown'd Guy Duke of Spoleto Emperor, and a while after conferr'd the ſame Title on Lambert the Son of that Prince. But no ſooner was Arnulphus King of Germany faln down into Italy, but Formoſus invited him to Rome, deſigning to make him an Inſtrument of wreaking his Revenge on thoſe Romans who had affronted him. Arnulphus enter'd the City by Force, caus'd the chief of the Enemies of Formoſus to be beheaded, and was for this Piece of Service crown'd Emperor by this Pope in the Year 896. No ſooner was Arnulphus gone off, but the Romans renew'd their Conſpiracies againſt Formoſus, who dy'd about the latter End of this Year.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

The Condemnation of Formoſus by Stephen VI.

Boniface, whom the People put up in his Stead, was a very unworthy Man, who had been degraded from his Subdeaconſhip, and the Order of Prieſthood. A few Days after he was outed by Adalbert, and Stephen VI. advanc'd to the Chair. This Man immediately declares himſelf an Enemy to the Memory of Formoſus; calls a Council, wherein he nulls all the Ordinations made by Formoſus; dug up his Corps, and having dreſs'd him up in his Pontifical Robes, he condemn'd him as if he had been alive: And after he had cenſured him for his Ambition in quitting the Biſhoprick of Oſtia, and uſurping St. Peter's Chair, contrary to the Canons of the Church, he cauſed him to be ſtripp'd of his Robes, cut off his three Fingers, wherewith he gave the Bleſſing, and threw him into the Tiber. A baſe and barbarous Proceeding this! and ſuch as has ſtruck Horror into all thoſe who have wrote about it. For tho' the Promotion of Formoſus was not agreeable to the Canons, and might prove a very ill Precedent; yet ſuch a diſingenuous Cruelty exerciſed to no Purpoſe upon a dead Carcaſs, was a certain Demonſtration of the Spite and Malice, or rather of the Madneſs wherewith his Enemies were poſſeſs'd. And in truth all this Tragedy was begun by Sergius, and ſupported by the Authority of Adalbert, who bore at that Time the greateſt Sway in Rome. But his Intereſt afterwards growing weaker, Stephen was ſeverely uſed by the Romans, and caſt into Priſon, where he was ſtrangled about the latter End of the Year 900. if his Epitaph is to be credited in the Caſe.

Romanus and Theodore.

The Romans advanc'd one Romanus in his Place, who ſat but a few months on the Chair: however he had ſo much Time as to condemn and diſannul all that his Predeceſſor had done againſt Formoſus. The Man who ſucceeded him, nam'd Theodorus, was of his Mind, but he died within twenty Days.

John IX. The War between Berenger and Lambert.

After his Death the Romans choſe a Monk, Deacon of the Town of Tivoli, Son of Rampealdus, who went under the Name of John IX. This Man ſeeing Italy divided by the Factions of thoſe who made their Pretenſions to the Empire, behaved himſelf very cautiouſly in the Beginning of his Popedom. The Emperor Arnulphus dy'd about the End of the Year 899. and Guy of Spoleto died within a ſhort Time after, ſo that Italy was diſputed between Berenger, Lewis the Son of Boſon, and Lambert the Son of Guy. The Princes of Italy, weary of the Government of Berenger, eſpecially Adalbert, Marquiſs of Turea, the Father of another Berenger, who was afterwards King of Italy, had called in Lewis;

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Lewis; but Berenger assisted by Adalbert, Marquiss of Tuscany, having hemm'd him in, obliged him to return, and made him renounce his Pretensions to the Kingdom. A while after Adalbert, who had supported the Interests of Berenger, recalled Lewis, who retook Part of Italy; but those who had invited him in, soon betray'd him, and delivered him into Berenger's Hands, who caus'd his Eyes to be put out. Berenger swoln with his Success comes to Rome, and forces Pope John IX. to crown him Emperor: But no sooner was he gone from Rome, but the Pope sent for Lambert, who resided privately in a corner of Italy, and declar'd him Emperor.

The Council of Rome and Ravenna, in Favour of Formosus.

Since by this Action he found himself oblig'd to acknowledge Formosus for lawful Pope, because it was he who had crown'd Lambert, he held a Council, wherein he cancell'd all the Proceedings against that Pope. After so bold an undertaking, he durst not stay at Rome, where the Interest of Berenger was most powerful, but retir'd to Ravenna, where in another Council of 74 Bishops, he confirm'd what had been done at Rome. The Italians, who love to have a great many Masters, and to change the Government, acknowledg'd Lambert, and his Forces became so considerable, that Berenger durst not attack him, but retir'd to Verona. All this happen'd in the Year 904.

Benedict IV.

The Year after John IX. dy'd, and Benedict IV. succeeded him, who was not upon the Chair above a Year or thereabouts, and did nothing of any note. He who was set up in his Room, call'd Leo V. was outed forty Days after by one of his Domesticks, nam'd Christophilus. He did not enjoy this Dignity long; for that Sergius, whom we formerly mentioned, and who had been the Competitor of Formosus, being come to Rome, seiz'd on Christophilus, put him in Prison, and stepp'd himself into St. Peter's Chair.

Christophilus.

Sergius condemns Formosus.

The first Thing he did was to condemn Formosus, to declare his Ordinations null, and to cancel all that John IX. had done in his Favour. Afterwards he degraded those whom Formosus had ordain'd, and either ordain'd them over again, or ordained others in their Stead. This Man is esteem'd a Monster, not only for his Ambition and the violent Proceedings he was guilty of, but also upon the Account of his loose Morals. He had a Bastard by Marosia the Daughter of Theodora, who being a long Time before highly in the Favour of Adalbert, bore a great Sway in Rome. This Bastard Son of his was afterwards promoted to the Popedom by the Intrigues of this Marosia, and took upon him the Name of John XI. as we shall shew in the Sequel. Sergius enjoy'd the See which he had usurp'd, only three Years; he died in the Year 910. After him Anastasius came, of whom History is silent. About this Time Lambert was traiterously murder'd, as he was hunting, by a Count of Milan. After his Death Adalbert, whom he had taken Prisoner some Time before, was set at Liberty, and Berenger was the only Man who pretended to the Title of King of Italy and Emperor. The Popedom of Anastasius did not last above two Years and some few Months; after whose Death Landon was promoted to the Chair, no doubt by the Interest of Theodora. For that wicked Woman made use of him to prefer one of her Favorites, nam'd John, to the Archbishoprick of Ravenna. Let us see in what Terms Luitprand relates this Matter: 'About this Time, says he, Peter Archbishop of 'Ravenna, which was esteemed the chiefest Archbishoprick 'next to that of Rome, sent frequently to Rome a Deacon 'of his Church, call'd John, to pay his due Respects to the 'Pope. Theodora, that impudent Whore, having seen him, 'fell desperately in love with him, prevail'd upon him to 'maintain a shameful Familiarity with her. While they 'liv'd thus lustfully together, the Bishop of Bologna dying, 'this John was chose in his Place. But before he was con'secrated, the Archbishop of Ravenna dies also; and Theo'dora prevails upon John to quit the Bishoprick of Bolog'na, and to accept of this Archbishoprick. He thereupon 'returns back to Rome, and was ordain'd Archbishop of 'Ravenna. Within a while after, the Pope (namely Landon) 'who had ordain'd him dies, God calling him to give an 'Account of his unjust Proceedings in ordaining John. Theo'dora upon this, that she might not be far from her Lover, 'made him again to relinquish the Archbishoprick of Ra'venna, and to seize upon St. Peter's Chair.

Anastasius.

The Death of Lambert.

Landon an unworthy Pope.

John X.

Tho' John was so shamefully promoted to the Popedom, yet he enjoy'd it a long Time very peaceably; and was acknowledged as lawful Pope by all the Churches. But as God never suffers the Crimes of Men to go unpunish'd, unless for a Season, thereby to make his Justice the more conspicuous, so the Conclusion of his Popedom was tragical, and he fell by the same Steps, by which he had been advanc'd. This Theodora we speak of, had two Daughters, more wicked and more debauch'd than her self, called Marosia and Theodora. The first of these after she had prostituted her self to Pope Sergius, was marry'd to Guy, the Son of Adalbert Marquiss of Tuscany, who, aspiring to be as absolute in Rome, as his Father had been before him, took it ill that Pope John should prefer his Brother Peter, and thought he gave him too great an Authority. He thereupon resolv'd to divest him of it, and taking the Opportunity when the Pope was with his Brother in the Lateran Palace, with a very few Attendants, he order'd an Assault to be made by the Soldiers he had rais'd, who put the Pope into Prison, having first kill'd his Brother before his Face. He there dy'd some Time after, either for Grief, or rather by an untimely Death. This happen'd in the Year 928.

Leo VI. who succeeded him, had a Design, if Historians may be credited, of restoring Italy and the City of Rome to its former Quiet; but he had not Time for it, being upon the Chair no longer than six Months and fifteen Days. 'Tis said he likewise dy'd in Prison, as his Predecessor did before him. Stephen VII. who succeeded him, enjoy'd the Place but two Years, one Month, and a few Days.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Leo VI.

Stephen VII.

John XI.

Marosia, upon this Vacancy of the Holy See, thought there could be no better Way of making her self absolute in Rome, and raising her Family, than by placing the Son she had by Pope Sergius, upon the Chair. Tho' by Reason of his Birth, his Age, and his Conduct, he was very unworthy of that Promotion. He took upon him the Name of John XI. and was ordain'd in the Year 931. Some Time after Guy dy'd, and his Brother Lambert was declared his Successor. But Marosia invited Hugh, Son of Count Thibold, Duke of Provence, and King of Arles, and promis'd to make him Master of Rome, in case he would marry her. He not willing to let such an Opportunity slip, came forthwith to wait upon her at the Castle of Angelo, and marry'd her, tho' she was his Brother's Widow. For this Hugh was the Son of Bertha, who had been marry'd first to Thibold, and then to Adalbert, the Father of Guy. The Romans receiv'd him very kindly: But afterwards finding that he slighted them, they sought nothing so much as an Opportunity of ridding themselves of his Government. Soon after an Opportunity presented it self: For Alberic, who was likewise the Son of Marosia, being disgusted with his Father-in-law, for affronting him whilst by his Mother's Order he fill'd him out a Glass of Wine, excited the Romans to throw off the Yoke of King Hugh, representing to them how deep a Disgrace it was for Romans to be subject to the Burgundians. They thereupon quickly abandon'd his Interest; and having chosen Alberic their Leader, they set upon the Castle of St. Angelo, with so much Expedition, that Hugh having not Time to throw any of his Troops into the Place, was forc'd to provide for his own Safety; Marosia was seiz'd upon by Alberic's Order, who likewise secur'd his Brother Pope John, and kept him close Prisoner during the Remainder of his Popedom, which expir'd in the Year 935. The City was govern'd a long Time by Alberic, who changed the Form of the Government, made himself Consul, and commanded in chief with a Prefect and Tribunes.

Alberic becomes Master of Rome.

Whilst these things were in Action, Italy was disputed between several Princes, who all pretended to the Sovereignty thereof. The Italians being weary of the Government of Berenger, in the Year 924. conferr'd the Sovereignty on Radulphus King of Burgundy, Grandson to Conrad and Adelaid, the Daughter of Lewis the Godly. Berenger, seeing himself turn'd out of Possession, brought the Hunns into Italy, who harass'd all Lombardy; but having passed the Mountains, they were defeated by Radulphus in Languedoc. At the same Time Berenger using his Endeavours to re-enstate himself in the Kingdom of Italy, was slain by his own Men at Verona. After his Death, the Title of Emperor of the West was not conferr'd on any one, at least not by the Pope and Italians, till Otho I. in the Year 962. By Berenger's Death Radulphus became sole Soveraign of Italy, but the Inconstancy of the Italians, which always put them upon driving out one Soveraign by another, caused them to submit to Hugh Count Arles, Son to Count Thibold and Bertha, the Daughter of Lotharius II. Radulphus, after he had received Intelligence that they had traiterously kill'd his Father-in-law, Burchard Duke of Suabia, retired to his own Kingdom of Burgundy, and left Hugh in quiet Possession of Italy. We have already shown after what Manner he became Master of Rome, by the Means of Marosia, and also how he was outed by Alberic. He reveng'd himself on Lambert the Brother of Guy, the Affront he receiv'd from his Sister-in-law, and having apprehended him, he caused his Eyes to be put out, and bestowed the Dukedom of Tuscany on his Brother, who proved no more faithful to him than Lambert. The Italians presently re-call'd King Radulphus, who put himself into a Posture of re-entring Italy, and of engaging in a fresh War with King Hugh; but these two Kings thought it most proper to come to an Accommodation, on Condition that Radulphus should renounce his Pretensions to the Kingdom of Italy, and Hugh should yield to him all the Country he had then in Possession beyond the Alps. Notwithstanding this Accommodation, the Italians continuing still resolv'd to abandon Hugh, invited Arnulphus Duke of Bavaria, the bastard Son of Arnulphus the Emperor, to come and take Possession of the Crown. This Prince enters into Italy with an Army, and advances as far as Verona, where he was received by Count Milo and Ratherius Bishop of the Place. Hugh came immediately with an Army and sat down before the Place, and having defeated a considerable Party of the Troops of Arnulphus, he oblig'd him him to think of making his Retreat, and of taking Count Milo along with him. The Count no sooner understood his Design, but he went over to King Hugh, and Arnulphus perceiving he was abandon'd by him, withdrew in great haste to Bavaria. The City of Verona immediately surrender'd to King Hugh, who sent Ratharius Bishop of that City, a Prisoner to Pavia. Hugh, puffed up with this Success, after he had caus'd his Son Lotharius to be proclaim'd King, endeavour'd to surprize the City of Rome, and besieg'd it; but perceiving he could not have his Aim, he treated with Alberic, and gave him in Marriage his Daughter Elda, in hopes, that afterwards he might make himself Master of Rome; but Alberic, as subtle a Politician as himself, would not relinquish the Place, nor put it into the Hands of his Father-in-law.

The Wars of Italy.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Much about this Time Manasses, Archbishop of Arles, King Hugh's Kinsman, thinking he might make his Fortune greater under the Government of his Kinsman, quitted his Church at Arles, and comes into Italy, and obtain'd, contrary to all Form of Law, the Bishopricks of Verona, Trent, and Mantua, to which he annex'd the Marquisate of Trent. Manasses.

Whilst Alberic govern'd Rome, the Holy See was fill'd by Popes of a blameless Life; but they found themselves in a Capacity of wishing, rather than of doing Good. Leo VII. who succeeded John XI. in the Year 936. was call'd by Flodoard, the Servant of God. His good Intention was apparent by his sending for Odo the Abbot of Cluny, to manage the Treaty between Hugh and Alberic. He likewise wrote two Letters, of which we will speak hereafter, which shew him to be a lover of Ecclesiastical Discipline. The Pontificate of this Pope lasted no longer than three Years and a few Months. The Romans chose in his Place, in the Year 939. a German, who went under the Name of Stephen VIII. This Election was very highly resented by Alberic, who thought that a Roman would have been more for his Interest: Therefore suspecting that he favour'd Hugh, and held a private Correspondence with Otho, he caused him to be ill treated. They mangled his Face so barbarously, and render'd it so deform'd, that he durst not appear any more in Publick. This Pope sent a Legate into France called Damasus, to the Princes of France and Burgundy, exhorting them to acknowledge Lewis, the Son of Charles the Simple, for their lawful King, and threatning to excommunicate them, if they did not do it. He likewise sent for Odo again into Italy, to mediate the Peace between Hugh and Alberic, but all to no Purpose, for both Odo and the Pope dy'd before it was concluded. Leo VII. Stephen VIII.

Marinus II. succeeded Pope Stephen in the year 943. who was reputed to be a Man of singular Piety; and we have an Account in the Life of St. Ulric, Bishop of Ausbourg, that he foretold to this Saint the Death of his Predecessor Adalberon, and withal assur'd him that he should succeed him; which happen'd thirty years before he was Pope. All the Time of his Popedom he was very serviceable to the Church of Rome, in reforming the Clergy and the Monks, in repairing Churches, and in taking a particular Care of the Poor. He did likewise what he could to promote Peace among the Christian Princes. He concluded that between Alberic and Hugh, and wrote several Letters in order to make up the Breach between Otho King of Germany, who endeavour'd to enter Italy, and Lotharius, the Son of Hugh, who oppos'd his Design. He call'd to Rome the Prior of Mount Cassin, and bestow'd on him the Government of the Monastery of St. Paul in Rome. 'Tis likewise said that he wrote a Letter to Sico Bishop of Capua, wherein he charges him with his Ignorance of the Canons; with his want of Learning; with his holding too great an Intimacy with secular Persons; and with his having endeavour'd, contrary to all Form, to confer a Benefice on one of his Deacons, which belong'd to a Monastery. He granted several Privileges to the Benedictin Monks, whom he favour'd in a great many Instances. Marinus II.

Agapetus II. who succeeded Marinus, was likewise a holy Man, who govern'd the Church of Rome with a great deal of Prudence. He sent into France a Bishop, whose Name was Marinus, to assist in the quality of a Legate in that Council held at Ingelheim, in the year 948. about the Contests between King Lewis and Prince Hugh; and Hugh of Vermandois and Artaldus, Pretenders to the Archbishoprick of Rheims. The Cause was there determin'd in Favour of Artaldus, who was confirm'd in that Bishoprick. Hugh of Vermandois was declar'd an Intruder and excommunicated; and a Letter was written to Prince Hugh the White, in the Name of the whole Council, and to his Adherents, to admonish them to return to their Allegiance, under the Pain of Excommunication. The Sentence of this Council was confirm'd the year following in a Council held by Agapetus, wherein Prince Hugh was excommunicated, till such Time as he should give Satisfaction to King Lewis. Agapetus II.

The Wars between Hugh and Berenger.

Under this Pope's Pontificate Italy felt another Revolution. Adalbert, Marquis of Ivrea, had two Sons, Berenger by Gilla, the Daughter of Berenger King of Italy; and Anschaire by Ermengarde, Daughter of the Marquis of Tuscany. These two Princes inherited the Power of their Father and Grand-fathers by the Mother's Side, and govern'd a Part of Italy. The first was prudent, ingenious and politick; the second was valiant and bold. King Hugh had marry'd his Niece Villa, the Daughter of Boson to Berenger, but he began to be jealous of the growing Greatness of those two Brothers, and resolv'd to put a Stop to it. He began with Anschaire, whom he caus'd to be set upon by Sarlio, who having made the Spoletians and Camerines to revolt, defeated the Troops he had rais'd for his own Defence, and kill'd him in the Skirmish. Berenger, desirous to revenge the Death of his Brother, conspir'd against King Hugh. This Prince having Intelligence thereof, took up a Resolution in his Council to send for him, under Pretence of making up a Reconciliation, and then to put him to Death; but his young Son Lotharius, who had been present in Council, could not forbear advertising Berenger thereof, who, upon the Receipt of this Intelligence, fled forthwith to Herman Duke of Suabia, who presented him to King Otho. Hugh sent to demand him, but Otho was so far from delivering him up, that he took him under his Protection. A while after Berenger returns to Italy, at the Head of some Troops; and having laid Siege to a Fort which was held out by Adelard, the Clerk of Manasses, he became Master of it, by promising the Archbishoprick of Milan to that Bishop, and to the Clerk the Bishoprick of Cumæ, in Case he should become Master of Italy. Big with these Hopes, Manasses, importunes the Princes of Italy in his Behalf. Milo Count of Verona, was the first who declar'd for Berenger, and receiv'd him into his City. The Bishop of Modena soon follow'd his Example, as did likewise the City of Milan, where the Princes of Italy came to wait on Berenger, having deserted King Hugh, who was retir'd to Pavia. From this Place he sent his Son Lotharius to Milan, conjuring Berenger and the Princes of Italy, to acknowledge him for their King; and that for his own Part he had taken a Resolution to retire into Provence. The People mov'd with Compassion towards Lotharius, who was not then above fourteen or fifteen years old, acknowledged him their King, with the Consent of Berenger; and they wrote to Hugh, acquainting him, that he might (if he pleas'd) reside still in Italy. This Berenger order'd, with a Design of seizing upon his Treasures, which he was carrying off to Provence: For Hugh and Lotharius were only titular Kings, while the whole Power of governing was lodg'd in the Hands of Berenger. Hugh could not bear this, but cunningly retir'd into Provence, where he dy'd a short Time after; leaving his Estate to his Niece Bertha, the Widow of Boson, Count of Arles. This Revolution happen'd about the Year 945. Lotharius still retained the Name of King of Italy, but did not long enjoy it; for about four years after, whether out of Grief to see himself slighted, or whether by the Means of some Poison, he fell mad, and dy'd childless, about the latter End of the year 949. Berenger presently caus'd himself to be proclaim'd King, and to be crown'd with his eldest Son Adalbert; and that he might render his new Authority the stronger, he sought in Marriage for his Son, Adelaid, the Widow of Lotharius, Daughter to Rudulphus II. and Sister to Conrad, Kings of Burgundy. This Princess having refus'd the Offer, he besieg'd her in Pavia, took her, and sent her Prisoner to a Castle call'd le Garde: however, she escap'd thence by the Help of a Priest, and fled to Atho her Kinsman, who undertook to defend her in the Fort of Canossa, where she secur'd her self. Berenger immediately sat down before the Place with all his Forces. But in the second year of the Siege, this Queen seeing her self reduc'd to the last Extremity, sent to beg King Otho's Assistance, and with her self offered him the Kingdom of Italy. The love of Glory rather than Interest inclin'd this Prince to cross the Mountains. He delivers Adelaid, marries her, and takes her along with him into Germany, leaving his Army with Conrad, Duke of Lorrain, to make an End of the War. Conrad press'd so hotly on Berenger and his Son, that they were forc'd to lay down their Arms, and submit to Otho, whom they went to wait upon in Germany. He having given them an Oath of Allegiance and Fealty, restor'd their Kingdom to them, only excepting the Veronese and Friul, which he gave to his Brother the Duke of Bavaria.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

During all these Revolutions in Italy, Rome was very quiet under the Government of Alberic, who would not suffer Otho to enter the Place, though the Pope Agapetus had invited him thither. The Death of Alberic, which happened in the year 954. made no Alteration in Rome, for his Son Octavian, not above 16 years old, having taken his Place, continued the same Form of Government: And not satisfied with the Temporal Power, he was minded to annex to it the Spiritual Authority, by getting himself advanced to St. Peter's Chair, after the Death of Agapetus, which happen'd in the year 955. He was not at that Time above 18 years of Age at most, and was the first Pope that changed his Name, by assuming that of John. He was truly the Twelfth of that Name, tho' several count him the Thirteenth, Pope John XII.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Thirteenth, being led into that mistake by the fabulous story of Pope Joan. This Man was so far from having any of those qualities requisite for so great a Dignity, that he was a Monster in Debauchery and Irregularity. He began with making War against Pendula Prince of Capua, in order to turn him out of his Estates: But his design did not succeed, and he was forc'd to retire, and to sue for Peace. The Power of Berenger and Adalbert became so great, that they began to be a Terror both to the Pope and the Romans. Ever since Otho had re-establish'd them in the Kingdom of Italy, they had continued to conspire against him and cruelly to oppress their Subjects. Otho, willing to bring them to Subjection, had sent his Son Luitolf into Italy to give them Correction. This young Prince had almost chas'd them out of their Dominions, when he dy'd in the Year 958, not without suspicion of being poison'd, and so left his Conquest imperfect. After his Death, Berenger and Adalbert were re-established in their Kingdom, and continued to exercise their Tyranny not only to the other Italians, but also to the Romans. This was the reason why John XII. sent two Legates to Otho, praying him ardently for the Love of God, and the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, (they are Luitprand's words) to come and deliver the Church of Rome from the incroachments of these Tyrants, and to restore it to its primitive health and liberty. Walbert Archbishop of Milan, turn'd out of his Church by that Manasses, we formerly mention'd, and Waldon, Bishop of Cumæ, turn'd likewise out of his Bishoprick, and several other Lords divested of their Demeasns, went at the same time to prefer their complaints to Otho; who being affected with the miseries of Italy, march'd thither, after he had crown'd his Son Otho at Aix la Chapelle, though a lad of but about seven Years of Age. Upon his Arrival, Berenger, his Wife, and his Son, being abandon'd by his Subjects, withdrew from the Towns and the open Country, and betook themselves each of them to a Cittadel. Otho was every where receiv'd with great Acclamations, recovers Pavia, was crown'd King of Lombardy at Milan by the Archbishop, and from thence he march'd to Rome, where he receiv'd the Imperial Crown in the beginning of the Year 962. at the hands of John XII. with the Universal Acclamations of both Clergy and Laity. He spent some time there with the Pope, and having restor'd to the Church of Rome that which of right belong'd to it, according to his promise, he made Pope John and the principal men of the City, to swear by the Body of St. Peter, that they would bear true Allegiance to him, and never furnish Berenger or Adalbert with any Supplies. After this he return'd to Pavia, with a full design of putting an end to the War, by taking those Castles which still held out for Berenger. He began with taking the Isle of St. Jula, whither Berenger's Wife was retir'd, and restor'd it to the Church of Novar. In the mean time, Adalbert, seeking for assistance in every place, retir'd at last to the Sarazens, and under-hand solicited Pope John to come over to his Party. This Pope, whose inclinations and intentions did not suit with those of the Emperor Otho, being as much a Slave to Vice and Debauchery, as that Prince was a Lover of Goodness and Virtue: This Pope, I say, that he might have the liberty of indulging his Lusts, made privately a League with Adalbert, and invited him to Rome, promising upon Oath to aid him against Otho. The Emperor being informed of it, sent several of his Attendants to Rome, to know what were the reasons which induc'd the Pope to enter into an Alliance with Adalbert. And when the Romans could give no other account, than that it arose only from the contrariety of Pope John's Morals and Conduct, to those of the Emperor; that Prince return'd this prudent Reply: "The "Pope is as yet but a Child, he may be better'd by the "Examples of good men; I hope to reclaim him from his "extravagancies by a good honest reproof, and by whol-"som Advice, and then we will say with the Prophet, "Behold the Change made by the Hand of the most High." So without troubling his head much with the secret practices of the Pope, he laid Siege to the Castle of Leo in Umbria, whither Berenger and his Wife was retir'd. Thither the Pope sent Leo, chief Secretary of the Church of Rome, and Demetrius, one of the principal Roman Lords, to excuse his falling into the follies incident to youth, promising, that for the future he would be another kind of man: He gave them likewise orders to complain of the Emperor's entertaining Bishop Leo, and Cardinal John a Deacon, who had failed in their Duty towards him; and of his not keeping the promise he had made him, because he caus'd those whom he took, to take the Oath to himself, but not to the Pope. The Emperor return'd this Answer, "That he was glad "of the promise which the Pope had made of reforming, "and becoming a better man for the future; That for his "part he had religiously observ'd his promise; that he had "indeed promis'd to restore to the Church of Rome, all "the Territories which of right did belong to it; but be-"fore he could do that, he must first take them, and ren-"der himself Master of them: That he had neither seen "the Bishop nor the Cardinal, whom they charg'd him "with entertaining; but that he had heard that being sent "from the Pope to the Emperor of Constantinople, on a "Negotiation against him, they had been taken at Capua, "together with others whom the Pope sent to the Huns, "to engage them to fall upon him: That these proceed-"ings were prov'd by Letters sign'd by the Pope, and seal'd "with the Papal Seal. Otho dismiss'd the Pope's Deputies with this Answer, and with them sent two Bishops to Rome, to make an ample justification for him; with orders, in case the Pope would not believe what they told him, to offer to prove it by the Combat of two Champions. John XII. received these Envoys very coldly, and to amuse the Emperor, he sent to him eight days after John the Bishop of Narni, and Cardinal Benedict a Deacon, to Negotiate with him. Before they return'd, Adalbert came to Civita Vecchia, and from thence to Rome, where he was receiv'd very kindly by the Pope. No sooner had the Emperor intelligence thereof, but he comes to Rome with his Forces in August 963, being invited by the Romans themselves, part of whom had seiz'd the Castle of St. Paul, and held it out against Adalbert. Upon his arrival, John XII. and Adalbert went off; the Romans received Otho, and took a new Oath of Allegiance to him, promising that they would neither chuse nor ordain any Pope without his consent and approbation. Three days after, upon the request of several Bishops of Italy, and the People of Rome, he held a grand Council in St. Peter's Church, where there met the Emperor, for the Archbishop of Aquileia, who was fallen sick in Town; Radulphus the Deacon, Walbert Archbishop of Milan, Peter of Ravenna, an Archbishop and Bishop of Saxony, Orger Bishop of Spires, and Bublus Bishop of Parma, with about 33 Italian Bishops more, fourteen or fifteen Cardinals, and a great many Officers of the Church of Rome, with several Lords and a Representative for the People. The Emperor demanded of the Assistants, why the Pope was not present in this Council; they reply'd, that they wonder'd he should ask them a thing which was so well known to the whole World: That John was not one of those, who being cover'd with Sheeps cloathing, are inwardly Ravenous Wolves; but that he committed publickly and in the Eye of the world diabolical Actions, without putting himself to the trouble of concealing them. The Emperor told them it was but reasonable to express in particular, the heads of his Accusation, and afterwards to debate what ought to be done. Then Cardinal Peter a Priest, said he had seen him celebrate the Mass without communicating: John Bishop of Narni, and a Cardinal Deacon of the same name, declared that they had seen him ordain a Deacon in a Stable extra tempore: Benedict, and the other Priests and Deacons of Rome declared, that they knew him to have conferr'd Orders for Money, and to have ordain'd a Child of ten years old Bishop of Todi. That it was not necessary to bring Witnesses to attest these Sacrileges, since they were so visible, that all that could be said about them, would not express the one half of what they would appear to be. As for the Adultery whereof he was accus'd, they said, that indeed, they were not Eye-witnesses of the Fact, but that they knew for certain, that he had abus'd the Widow of Ranier, Stephania, his Father's Concubine, the Widow Ann and her Niece, and that he had made his Court the very sink of Debauchery: That he went publickly a hunting: That he had put out the Eyes of Benedict, his spiritual Father, whereof he dy'd: That he had cut off the Privy-Members of Cardinal John the Subdeacon, whereof he likewise dy'd: That he had been the cause of a great many Fires; and that he was seen with a Sword in his hand, an Helmet on his head, and a Coat of Mail on his body. The Clergy and Laity there present cry'd out that they had seen him drink a health to the Devil, and swear by the Heathen Gods in his play at Hazards: That he never took care to say his Office, or to make the Sign of the Cross. Upon these accusations, the Emperor ordered Luitprand Bishop of Cremona to tell the Synod in Latin (for they could not understand the Saxon Language, in which he spoke) that he conjur'd them in the name of God, the Blessed Virgin, and the Apostles to advance nothing against the Pope, but what was certain and would bear good proof. They all replyed that they were willing to be anathematiz'd, if Pope John were not guilty of the Crimes laid to his Charge, nay and of far more shameful and horrid than had been mentioned. That if he would not believe them in this, yet that could not be call'd in question of which the Emperor's whole Army were Spectators, viz. That he appeared in Armour from Top to Toe at the Head of his Forces; and that if the Tiber had not been between him and the Emperor's Army, he would have been taken Prisoner in that Equipage. The Emperor acknowledg'd that this was true, and all his Souldiers were Witnesses to it. The Synod were of Opinion that it was necessary to write to the Pope, that he might come and clear himself of the Crimes laid to his Charge. The Letter was written in the name of the Emperor, of the Bishops of Liguria, Tuscany, Saxony, and France, who resided then at Rome. They acquainted John, to whom they gave the Title of

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

The Wars of Berenger and Otho.

Otho crown'd Emperor by Pope John XII.

The disloyalty of Pope John XII.

Otho returns to Rome and causes John XII. to be depos'd.

The Council at Rome against John XII.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Pontifex Summus, and that of Universal Bishop, that having demanded of the Clergy and Laity of Rome the reason of his absence, they had related such abominable things of him, as would make the most impudent to blush: That he was accused of Homicide, of Perjury, of Sacriledge, and of Incest with two of his Relations: That it was likewise reported of him, that he had drunk a Health to the Devil, and sworn by Jupiter, Venus, and the other Heathen Deities in his play at Hazards: That they earnestly intreat him to come and clear himself of these Accusations, assuring him upon Oath that nothing should be done against him but what was agreeable to the Canons. This Letter bears date November 6. 963. Pope John XII. having received it, return'd this answer. "We hear you design to "make another Pope; but if you do, I excommunicate "you by the Almighty God, so that you shall not be capable of ordaining any man, or of celebrating the Mass. This Letter being remitted to the Synod, to which the Archbishop of Treves, and three Bishops of Emilia and Liguria were likewise come; they made the Pope this Reply: That the Letter he had sent was a sign of his folly and want of Prudence: That he should have alledg'd some reasonable excuse of his absence, and sent his Deputies to give the Synod an account thereof: That they would submit to him, provided he delay'd not coming to clear himself of the Crimes laid to his charge; but that if he would not do that, they would not Value his Excommunication, which they might with Justice retort upon him. The second Letter of the Council to the Pope bears date November 20. and was sent by Cardinal Adrian a Priest, and Cardinal Benedict a Deacon: They went as far as Tiber to give it him, but they could not meet with him there, for he rode into the Country before they came. Wherefore not meeting with any Person that could inform them where he was gone, they brought the Letter back to the Council, which was sitting a third time. The Emperor presented to them the Complaint which he in particular had to prefer against John, viz. That forasmuch as that Pope had sent for him to assist him against Adalbert, and had afterwards taken an Oath of Allegiance to him, yet he had since invited this same Adalbert to Rome, and put himself at the head of the Revolters. Then the Bishops, the Clergy, and the Laity of Rome said, that it was necessary to cure this extraordinary Wound, by as extraordinary a Remedy: That if the debauch'd Morals of Pope John XII. had injur'd the Emperor only, he might have met with some toleration; but since he was the ruine of so many, by the scandal and bad example he had given, they requir'd the Emperor that this Monster (whom it was impossible to reclaim from his Vices) should be turn'd out of the Church of Rome, and that another Pope of an exemplary Life should be set up in his room. The Emperor approv'd of this Resolution, and declar'd it was his desire, that they would choose one who was worthy of sitting in St. Peter's Chair. He had no sooner done speaking, but those who were present cry'd out unanimously, that they chose the Venerable Leo, chief Secretary of the Church of Rome, to be their Pastor, and Soveraign, and Universal Pope of the Roman Church, rejecting John the Apostate because of his irregular Life. Having repeated this their Vote three times, they, according to custom, conducted Leo to the Lateran Palace, consecrated him afterwards in St. Peter's Church, and took an Oath of Fidelity to him. After this the Emperor Otho, supposing he had nothing more to fear in Rome, dismiss'd part of his Troops, that they might not be a grievance to the People: But the Romans, won over by the promises of John, soon after rose up in Arms, and made Barricades to inclose and cut off Otho. But he was rescu'd by the bravery of his Troops, defeated the Seditious, kill'd part of them, and oblig'd the People to give him Hostages. Pope Leo the eighth of that name, willing to ingratiate himself with the People, prevail'd so far with the Emperor by his intreaties, that he persuaded him to restore the Hostages before his departure. But no sooner was this Prince withdrawn to pursue Adalbert, who lurk'd about Camerin and Spoleto, but the Women whom Pope John had debauch'd, stirr'd up the People to revolt afresh. The Seditious had a design of putting Leo to death, and receiving John; but the former found means of flying to the Emperor: As for the latter, he no sooner enter'd Rome, but he us'd the Friends of Leo very barbarously, among others Cardinal John a Deacon, whose right hand he caus'd to be cut off; Azo chief Secretary, whose Tongue he cut out, and cut off two of his Fingers and his Nose; and Otger Bishop of Spires, whom he caus'd to be whipp'd cruelly, and would not let him go, but in hopes by his means to obtain the Emperor's pardon. John to authorize his Proceedings by an Act that should have some shew of Justice, held a Synod February 26. in the Year 964. where assisted sixteen Bishops of Italy, and some Cardinals. These Prelates, devoted to the will and pleasure of this Pope, condemn'd the Synod which had depos'd him, and elected Leo in his stead: They pronounc'd a Sentence of Deposition against Leo: Anathematiz'd all those who favour'd him: Declar'd his Ordinations null: Conveen'd those whom he had ordain'd to the Council; And after they had oblig'd them to declare in writing, that he who had ordain'd them, having no power to do it, had not conferr'd any Order upon them, they stripp'd them of their habits: They constrain'd Benedict Bishop of Porto, and Gregory Bishop of Albania, to confess they had done amiss in ordaining Leo, and they suspended them for a time: And because Sico Bishop of Ostia, who was one of those that had ordained him, did not appear before the Synod, they declar'd him depriv'd of his Priesthood, without any hopes of being restor'd: They declar'd all those who had contributed to the Ordination of Leo, or favour'd him, or acknowledg'd him afterwards, to be depos'd or excommunicated.

Nos Audivimus dicere, quod vos vultis alium Papam facere. Si hoc facitis; excommunico vos de Deo Omnipotente ut non habeatis licentiam ullum ordinare, et Missam celebrare.

The Council at Rome against John XII.

The Ordination of Pope Leo VIII.

The Re-establishments of Pope John XII.

The Emperor Otho being inform'd of what pass'd at Rome, prepar'd for his return thither, to punish John according to his deserts; but God prevented his Vengeance, for that infamous wretch receiv'd a mortal Wound as he was sporting himself one night with a Lady out of Town, of which he dy'd within eight days after, on the fourteenth of May, without receiving the Sacraments. The Romans persisting in their revolt, were before hand with the Emperor by chooling Cardinal Benedict a Deacon, and placing him upon the Papal Chair, upon his promise of never quitting it. A while after the Emperor came with his Army, sat down before Rome; and without being terrified at the Excommunication thunder'd against him by Benedict, he constrain'd the Romans, pinch'd with Famine and want of necessaries, to open the City Gates unto him on the 23*d.* of June. As soon as he enter'd Rome, that he might do nothing irregular, he held a Synod, where he caus'd Benedict to be brought in his Pontifical Habit. He demanded of him by Cardinal Benedict the Archdeacon, by what Authority, and according to what Laws he had usurp'd that Dignity in the Life time of Pope Leo, whom he himself had elected, and why he had violated the Oath he had taken with the rest of the Romans, not to chuse any Pope without the Consent of the Emperor. Benedict acknowledg'd his fault, and begg'd the Emperor's Pardon, he divested himself of his Pontifical habits, and put them together with the Pastoral Rod, into Leo's hands. Leo divested him likewise of his Cope, and declar'd him depriv'd of all Sacerdotal and Priestly Dignity, leaving him only the Order of Deacon, in consideration of the Emperor Otho; but he prohibited him from staying at Rome, and banish'd him. This Council by a solemn Decree, related by Gratian, granted to the Emperor the right of chooling a Pope, and of investing Bishops and Archbishops, and forbad the chooling a Pope without his Consent, or ordaining a Bishop elect, till he should receive investiture from the Emperor. There is another Decree of Pope Leo, whereby he grants to the Emperor Otho all that Pepin and Charlemagne had given to the Church of Rome; but this is such a dubious Piece, as deserves no credit.

The tragical Death of Pope John XII.

Benedict the Antipope.

Benedict is depos'd and Leo VIII. re-establish'd.

Otho having thus quieted the City of Rome, departed thence after the Festival of St. Peter, in order to return to Lombardy, taking along with him the Antipope Benedict as Prisoner, and carrying off with him a great many Bodies of the Saints. He lost in his March a great many of his Men by Sickness, kept his Christmas at Pavia, and the next year return'd into Saxony, after he had given his Instructions for the Affairs of Italy. Benedict dy'd at Hamburgh in July, 965. after he had edified the Germans by his Piety, and made it appear that he deserv'd to have been Bishop of Rome, if he had been rais'd to that Dignity according to the Canon. Leo dy'd likewise the same year. After his Death the Romans sent Deputies to the Emperor Otho, to know his pleasure concerning the Election of a Pope. Some Authors have writ, that Benedict not being dead when Leo dy'd, the Emperor Otho had a design of re-establishing him, if he had not dy'd in the very interim. Let the case be how it will, John Bishop of Narni, who was his Creature, was the man whom he design'd to advance, to that Dignity; and 'tis very probable that he told his Intention to the Roman Deputies. He was thereupon elected, and plac'd in the Holy See, and is the Thirteenth of that Name. But whereas he was supported by the Emperor, and wedded to his Interests, he treated very haughtily the principal Lords of Rome, who affected to retain the Liberty they enjoy'd under Alberic. This was the reason why they declar'd against this Pope, and resolv'd to turn him out of his Popedom. They caus'd him to be arrested by Roger the Prefect of Rome, being assisted by Jeofry Count of Campagnia, whither John was sent Prisoner. This Jeofry being kill'd some time after, and Roger being dead, the Romans being afraid of the Emperor Otho, who was preparing to come into Italy, set the Pope at liberty, and permitted him to return to Rome. However this did not hinder the Emperor from coming by great marches to Rome: upon his arrival, he arrested the Consuls, the Prefect, and the Decemviri (a Body of ten men who were instead of a Senate, and the Grand Council of the City.) He punish'd them after an exemplary manner, for he sent the Consuls and the Prefect Prisoners to Germany; and after after he had caus'd the last to be shamefully dragg'd and whipp'd through the Streets of Rome, he hang'd upon the Decemviri. 'Tis reported that he likewise ordered the Bodies of Jeofry and Roger to be dug up, and after they were dragg'd through the City, to be cast into the Common-shore. Having by these severe Proceedings struck an Awe into the minds of the Romans, after he had kept his Christmass in the Year 966 at Rome, he went to Ravenna with Pope John, where he held a Synod about Easter, in the Year 967. wherein several Regulations were made in the Ecclesiastical Discipline; and the Emperor restor'd to the Church of Rome the Towns and Territories, which had been granted it formerly by Pepin and Charlemagne. They likewise excommunicated Harold Archbishop of Saltzburgh, because he would officiate and wear the Pall, tho' he had lost his sight; and because, being charged with several crimes besides, the Popes had prohibited him from exercising any Episcopal function, and Frederick was put in his place, who was now confirm'd. They likewise rais'd the Bishoprick on which the Town of Magdeburgh depended, to an Archbishoprick, by the Consent and Approbation of Hatto Archbishop of Mayence, and Hildevard Bishop of Halberstat. From Ravenna the Emperor went into Tuscany, and sent for his Son Otho, in order to have him crown'd Emperor by the Pope, which Ceremony was perform'd at Rome in the Christmas Holy-days, in the Year 967. After this Expedition of Otho, Pope John enjoy'd the Popedom very quietly whilst he liv'd. He rais'd the Bishoprick of Capua to an Archbishoprick, in recompence of the kind usage he met with there during his Imprisonment. He sent a Legate into Polonia, to instruct the Polonians, who desir'd to be converted. He likewise sent a Legate to the Vandals, and wrote several Letters, wherein he recommended to the Bishops the observation of the Church Discipline. 'Tis observ'd that he with a certain Ceremony bless'd a new Bell belonging to the Church of Saint John of the Lateran, and that this is the first instance we have of such Benedictions, on which the Title of Christning was afterwards improperly impos'd. This Pope dy'd September 6. 972. Donus alias Domnus succeeded him, who dy'd at the end of three Months, without having done any thing of note. After him Benedict VI. had the Popedom: Some there are who pretend, that he was in possession of it before Donus dyed. Let the case be how it will, he surviv'd him, but came to a tragical end. For Otho dying May 7. 973. a Roman Lord of great Authority, nam'd Cincius, caus'd the Pope to be seiz'd on, and committed him Prisoner to the Castle of St. Angelo, where he was strangled some few days after.

John XIII.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

The Council of Ravenna in the year 967.

Donus and Benedict VI.

Boniface the Usurper outed by Benedict.

This bloody design was put in Execution by the insinuation of Franco, sirnam'd Boniface, a Cardinal Deacon, whom Gerbert terms the most impious monster of Mankind, who rather deserved the name of Maleface, than that of Boniface. This man, tho' all o're besmear'd with the blood of Benedict, yet seizes upon the Papal Chair in the Year 974. But the Romans could not endure him long; and having found out a Bishop named Benedict, of the Family of the Alberics, they set him up in oppositon to Boniface, who was forced in the Year 975. to fly to Constantinople, whither he carried the things which he Sacrilegiously rifled from the Vatican Church before he went off. This Benedict was put up in his stead, and enjoy'd the Popedom very peaceably till the tenth of July, in the Year. 984. on which day he dy'd. During these Revolutions, the Emperor Otho II. was wholly taken up in Germany, against the Bohemians, and Lotharius King of France; and he was no sooner out of that Fatigue, but he was engag'd to begin a new War in Italy against the Greeks, who, with the assistance of the Sarazens, designed to re-take Apulia and Calabria. At first he had some advantage over the Enemy, but afterwards he was entirely defeated and taken Prisoner: However, he found a way to make his escape, and having rally'd some Troops, he assaulted and took the City of Benevent, because the People of that Country had betray'd him. From thence he return'd to Rome, where he dy'd of grief on December 6. 983. After his death there arose a debate about the choice of an Emperor; some would have Henry Duke of Bavaria, Nephew to Otho the Great, to be crown'd: The Italians were for an Italian Emperor, nam'd Crescentius, but the Germans whose interest was strongest at Rome, caused Otho III. the Son of the last Otho to be crown'd Emperor, with the Consent of Pope Benedict, who did not survive Otho II. above six Months.

The Wars and Death of Otho II.

Otho III. crowned Emperor.

Peter Bishop of Pavia was put in his place, and took upon him the name of John XIV. He was Lord High-Chancellor to the Emperor Otho, and it was doubtless by the recommendation of this Prince, that he was advanc'd to this Dignity, but he did not enjoy it long; for Boniface return'd from Constantinople in the Year 985. and having rous'd some of his own faction, and won the People by distributing among them the Money he had rais'd, by the sale of those rich Ornaments he had carry'd from Rome, he render'd himself very powerful in Rome, seiz'd on Pope John, loaded him with Irons, shut him up in the Castle of Saint Angelo, where he starv'd him to death at the end of four Months; but he himself did not survive above four Months, and dy'd hated by all the World, even by those of his own faction, who, after his Death, us'd his body very contumeliously. Upon the Death of this Tyrant, the Clergy and Laity of Rome were left at liberty to elect a Pope. The choice fell on a Priest nam'd John, the fifteenth Pope of that name. The beginning of his Popedom was disturb'd by the fear he had that Crescentius, who having taken upon him the Title of Consul, seiz'd on the Castle of St. Angelo, would not use him so kindly as he did his Predecessor. Under this apprehension he withdrew into Tuscany, from whence he sent several Deputies to Otho, praying him to come to his assistance. It was this that inclin'd the Romans, who knew by experience what they were to fear from such kind of Visits as the Emperors made, to send an honourable Embassage to the Pope, earnestly to entreat him to return, by giving him all the assurance he could desire. He hearkened to them, and was receiv'd with all the signs imaginable of submission and respect. From that time forward he enjoy'd the Holy See very peaceably till about the latter end of his Popedom, at which time he was again so disturb'd by Crescentius, that he was forced to pray the Emperor Otho to come to his assistance. This Prince immediately march'd with an Army into Italy, and stopp'd some time at Ravenna. During his stay there, John XV. dyed in May 996. The Romans were oblig'd by an order from the Emperor to elect in his place Bruno his Cousin-german, who took upon him the name of Gregory V. but Crescentius soon after outed him, and set up in his stead John Bishop of Placentia. This Action was not long unpunish'd, for Otho came immediately with his Army, and being soon Master of Rome, re-establish'd Gregory. John secur'd himself with Crescentius, in the Castle of Saint Angelo. The Emperor besieg'd it, Crescentius held it out very vigorously, and it would have been very difficult to have taken it, had not he been kill'd treacherously. The Antipope John was taken, his Eyes were scratch'd out, his Nose and his Ears were cut off, and in that posture was he led through the Streets of Rome, mounted on an Ass with his Head towards the Tail, and forc'd to say as he went along, Whoever shall dare to dispossess a Pope, let him be serv'd like me.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

John XVI. Boniface returns to Rome.

John XV.

Gregory V. John the Antipope.

'Tis said that Gregory, to prevent the trouble which might afterwards arise in the Election of an Emperor, order'd that for the future it should be made by a certain number of German Princes, which he appointed; which was done at the instant, and by the authority of the Emperor Otho, and to favour those of his own Nation, and doubtless with the approbation of the Romans. This Pope did not survive his Election above two years and eight or nine Months. Otho caus'd Gerbert to be elected in his place, who took upon him the name of Silvester II. He had been formerly Archbishop of Rheims, and was then Archbishop of Ravenna, having been oblig'd, as we shall hereafter declare, to quit his first Archbishoprick. He was a man of great Learning, and much in favour with Otho, which inclin'd him to prefer him, before all others, to that Dignity, supposing he could not find a person more worthy to fill the Chair, or in whom he could more rely. We shall have occasion to speak of the Actions of this Prelate, before he was Pope, in the History of the Churches of France during this Century; and of what he did or wrote while he was Pope, in the History of the following Century, to which it belongs, for he was not promoted to St. Peter's Chair till about March, in the Year 999.

Gerbert nam'd Pope Silvester II.

An Account of the Roman Writers in the Tenth Century.

Of the Roman Writers in the Tenth Century.

After what has been related of the State of the Church of Rome during the tenth Century, and of the Qualifications of those who govern'd it, 'tis no wonder that we have so few Monuments of this Church, either of Councils held at Rome, or of Letters written by the Popes.

Of the Roman Writers in the Tenth Century.

John IX.

The Letters of John IX.

John the Ninth has left us four Letters, and the Acts of two Councils. The first of these Letters is directed to Harvey, Archbishop of Rheims, who sent to know of him how he should deal with the Normans, who, after they had been baptiz'd, had led lives wholly Pagan, and were transported to that degree of Extravagance, as to kill the Christians and Priests, to sacrifice to Idols, and to eat of such things as had been offered in sacrifice to them. John IX. after he had congratulated the Archbishop's happiness, in the Conversion of Normandy, returns him this Answer, that the persons he mention'd being but newly converted, and not fully instructed in the Christian Religion, ought not to be dealt with according to the rigor of the Canons, but with some sort of gentleness and moderation. That however, if there were any among them, who would submit to all the severities of Penance, he ought to proceed against such according to the Canon. Agreeable to this Letter, Harvey sent to Guy, Archbishop of Roan, a Memorial containing the institutions of Councils and Popes, the Authorities of the Fathers, and the Example of Saints, concerning the Mercy and Moderation which ought to be exercis'd towards the greatest Sinners upon their sincere conversion and repentance.

Harvey Archbishop of Rheims.

John's second Letter is directed to Stilian Bishop of Neocesarea: He congratulates his stedfastness to the Church of Rome, from whose communion nothing was able to separate him, and declares to him, that he hopes that by his Prayers he would prevail upon God to put an end to the Schism, which was of 40 Years continuance. He likewise declares, 'tis his intention that the Decrees of his Predecessors against Photius and his Adherents, should continue in their full force, and exhorts him not to act contrary to them.

The third Letter of John is directed to the Clergy and Laity of Langres in France, who had petitioned his Authority for re-establishing of Argrin, their Bishop, who had been turn'd out of his Bishoprick by the Sentence of Stephen the Predecessor of Pope John. He being well informed that this Bishop had been elected canonically, that he was turn'd out upon false grounds, and that there had been never another put in his place, re-establishes him by this Letter, notwithstanding the decree of Stephen, wherein he tells them, "That he did not revoke what was done, but that "he altered it for the better, for the benefit of the "Church, and out of pure necessity, as his Predecessors "had done upon several occasions. He wrote the very same Words at that time to Charles the Simple, and prays him to re-invest Argrin in his Bishoprick, which is his fourth Letter. We have two Letters likewise of Pope Benedict on the same subject, wherein writing to the Bishops of France, to the Clergy and Bishop of Langres, he confirm'd the sentence of his Predecessor in favour of Argrin, and very earnestly presses for his Restitution.

The Letters of Benedict IV.

We have likewise two Letters of the Bishops of Germany directed to this Pope. The first is writ in the name of Hatto, Archbishop of Mayence, and his Suffragans. After protestation made, that there were no Churches more submissive to the Holy See than Theirs, nor any Bishops paid greater deference to it than they did, they acquaint him that the Emperor Arnulphus being dead, his Son Lewis had been elected in his place, by the Advice of the Princes, and with the consent of the People, according to the Ancient custom of continuing the Kings of France always in the same Line. They told the Pope, that the reason why they did it without his permission, was, because all the Passes that open'd from Germany to Italy, were in the possession of the Barbarians, so that they could not send Deputies to Rome, nor could the Pope send his Legates to them: That having at last found an opportunity of conveying this Letter to his hands, they pray'd him to confirm by his Benediction the choice which they had made. After this they inform'd him of the Complaints which the Bishops of Bavaria made, upon the account that the Sclavonians, who had possess'd themselves of Moravia, and were declar'd Rebels against the French, pretended that they were out of their Jurisdiction, and would have a distinct Metropolitan of their own; and they accus'd the Bavarians of entering into Alliance with the Pagans, and partaking of the disorders which they committed. They assur'd the Pope, that this accusation was a malicious calumny, and gave him to understand, that if he should grant the Moravians a Metropolitan, and permit them to withdraw themselves from the Jurisdiction of the Bishops of Bavaria, he would be the cause of great disorders; for this would give them an occasion of rising against the powers to which they ought to be subject, and of making a new War with them. They added, that they gave him this caution with so much the more freedom, because they thought themselves oblig'd to inform him, when ever any thing happen'd to the Church of Rome which deserv'd correction, that so some speedy and necessary Remedy might be apply'd thereto.

The Letter of Hatto Archbishop of Mayence to John IX.

The Letters of John IX.

The Letter of Theotmarus, Metropolitan of Bavaria, and of the other Bishops of that Province upon the same subject is as strong. 'Tis written not only in the name of the Bishop, but also in the name of the Clergy and people of Bavaria. They remonstrated to the Pope, that having learn'd from his Predecessors, and the Holy Fathers of the Church, that the Bishop of Rome, had always taken care to maintain the Peace, Union, and Discipline of each Church, they could not tell how to believe what they had notice of every day, that there was issued out of the Apostolical See (the Origine of the Christian Religion, and the source of their sacerdotal Dignity) a Decree unjust, and contrary to the Doctrine and Authority of the Church: But that an Archbishop called John, and two Bishops who gave out that they were sent by the Pope to the Moravians, had given occasion for this Report. That these People were formerly Dependants on their Prince, and on their Bishops, who had converted them: That the Bishop of Passaw had always liberty of entring among them, and of holding Synods there, till such time as they rose up in Arms, and renounc'd Christianity. That of late indeed they boasted that they for a Sum of Money had prevail'd upon the Pope to send three Bishops, who, in the Bishoprick of Passaw had undertaken such a thing, as they could not believe proceeded from the Holy Apostolical See, being so directly contrary to the Intention of the Canons; namely, to canton that Bishoprick into five parts, and to place an Archbishop and three Bishops into that Dioces, without the consent of the Archbishop and Bishop. They cited two Canons of Africa, and several passages out of the Letters of Pope Leo and Celestine, wherein this very thing was prohibited. They add, that his Predecessor had consecrated Wichinous Bishop, at the instance of the Duke of Zutphen, but withal, had sent him not in to the Dutchy of Passaw, but into a Conquer'd Country. They likewise complain'd, that his Legates giving credit to the Stories of the Sclavonians, accus'd them of several falsities. They likewise took notice that their Prince was descended from the House of the King of France, who were Christians, whereas the Moravians and Sclavonians were originally Pagans and Enemies to the Christian Religion. They prais'd their King Lewis, and observ'd how zealous he was for Religion and the Holy See. They refuted the Reports which the Sclavonians had rais'd of their entering into a prophane Alliance with the Hunns, and of their supplying them with Money to go into Italy. They said that the Sclavonians were the Persons who were in confederacy with the Hunns, when they pillag'd, burnt, and ravag'd all before them. That for their parts, they design'd to have oppos'd their entering Italy, and to have march'd to the Assistance of Lombardy; and that they might be in a condition to do it, they desired a Cessation of Arms from the Sclavonians, but could not obtain it. They concluded by conjuring the Pope not to give credit to the calumnies which the Sclavonians cast upon them, nor suffer such a division in their Church.

The Letter of Bavaria to John IX.

One of the two Councils held under John IX. conven'd at Rome, and the other at Ravenna. The Institutions of the former are divided into twelve Articles.

The first condemns the Proceedings of the Synods held under Stephen VI. against the Body of Formosus, which they had dug out of his Grave, cited and judg'd in a full Synod, which was an Action without all Precedent. In this Article is forbidden all such Usage for the Future, because a dead Body cannot be cited into a Court of Judicature, since 'tis impossible he should answer the Accusations laid to his Charge.

The second grants a full Pardon to the Bishops, Priests, and other Clergymen, who out of Fear of being ill treated themselves, assisted at that: And orders that for the Future no such Constraints shall be used, but that the Bishops when they convene shall be left to a perfect Liberty and Freedom.

The third imports, that since Formosus had been translated from the Bishoprick of Oporto to that of Rome, purely out of Necessity, no Person could make it a Precedent for the Future, and it shall not be allow'd to promote any Person to any higher Degree of Dignity, who has been declar'd to have forfeited an inferior Order, unless he has been re-established canonically; as the People had done in advancing Boniface I. who had been depos'd from the Subdeaconship and afterwards from Priest's Orders.

The fourth restores those Clerks to their Orders, who were ordain'd by Pope Formosus, and had been depos'd in a Passion.

The fifth renews the Canon of the African Council against Re-ordinations, Re-baptizations, and Translations; and and prohibites the ordinary Bishops in those Churches, which were provided with Bishops, unless those who were in Possession had been depos'd according to the Canon.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

The sixth confirms the Consecration of Lambert for Emperor, and condemns that of Berenger.

The seventh condemns the Acts of the Council of Rome against Formosus, to be burnt.

The eighth declares Sergius, Benedict, and Marinus Priests; and Leo, Pascal, and John Deacons, to be lawfully condemn'd and separated from the Church, and anathematizes those who should acknowledge them as Clergymen, or should endeavour to re-establish them.

The ninth excommunicates the Persons, who had dug up the Body of Formosus, and cast it into the Tiber.

The tenth, for the Prevention of those Violences, and that Scandal which sometimes happen'd in the Election of Popes, ordains that for the future, none should be made, but what were elected by an Assembly of the Bishops and Clergy. in Pursuance to the Desires of the Senate and People, and in the Presence of the Emperor. This Canon likewise forbids the exacting of unreasonable Oaths and Promises.

The eleventh is levell'd against an Abuse very prevalent at that Time, of robbing the Pope after his Decease, not only of his Patriarchal Seat, but of all others which belong'd to him in Rome, or thereabouts.

The twelfth was against another Abuse which prevail'd at Rome. The secular Judges apprehended such Women as were suspected to be bad Livers, and by the Severity which they us'd to them, oblig'd their Masters or their Relations to redeem them at a dear Price: and afterwards those who had redeem'd them, whether Clerks, or Laicks, thought they might freely enjoy them without the Fear of a Reprimand, since the publick Censure was pass'd upon them; which was the Cause of a very great Disorder. The Council to put a Stop thereto, granted the taking Cognisance of and passing Judgment on these Offences to the Bishops, with a Power of citing the Refractory before the Civil Magistrates.

Some Time after, the Pope being come to the Emperor Lambert at Ravenna, they there conven'd a Council of 74 Bishops, who confirm'd what had been done in the Council of Rome, and approv'd of the ten following Institutions.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

By the first it is ordain'd, that the Canons of the Holy Fathers, and what is contain'd in the Registers of Charlemagn and his Successors, concerning Tenths, should be observ'd.

Afterwards the Emperor propos'd two Articles. By the first, all Persons whatsoever are forbidden to arrest, or offer any Injury to those who should make their Appeals to his Imperial Majesty.

By the second, the Emperor confirms the ancient Priviledges granted or confirm'd by his Predecessors to the Church of Rome.

The pope afterwards propos'd the following Articles.

First, A Confirmation of what was enacted in the Council of Rome, in Favour of Formosus.

Secondly. The punishing of the Outrages committed on the Territories of the Church of Rome, which had oblig'd him to have recourse to the Emperor.

Thirdly, A Renewing of the Treaty made between the Holy See and the Emperor Guy, Lambert's Father.

Fourthly, That the Edicts which were not conformable to the Conditions of this Treaty should be repeal'd.

Fifthly, That the Estates granted by the Letters Patents of the Prince, to the Prejudice of that same Treaty, should be restored to the Church.

Sixthly, That the Emperor shall break off the Leagues which the Romans, the Lombards, and the French had made together, contrary to the Interests of the Holy See and the Empire.

Lastly, That the Emperor shall protect the Church of Rome, prevent its being disturb'd, and use his utmost Care to restore to it its ordinary Revenues, which were now wasted.

These Articles being approv'd by the Bishops, the Pope recommended to them the Appointing a Fast and solemn Litanies upon their Return to their Respective Dioceses.

[The four Letters of Pope John IX. and his Acts of the two Councils are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 483.]

John X.

John X.

WE have three Letters of John X. which relate to the Affairs of France. The two first are about the Affair of Hilduin, whom Charles the Simple had turn'd out of the Bishoprick of Liege. This Hilduin being supported by Giselbert, who held Part of Lorrain against Charles the Simple, and by Henry the Fowler, King of Germany, was ordain'd Bishop of Tongres, or Liege, by Herman Archbishop of Cologne, plac'd into the Possession thereof, and rifled the Effects of it. Charles the Simple nominated Richerus to this Bishoprick, and caus'd him to be elected by a Party of the Clergy and Laity of Liege, who were come to him to complain of the Extravagances of Hilduin. This Prince thereupon wrote a Letter to all the Bishops of his Kingdom, wherein he made it appear by the Registers and Canons, that Hilduin was not fit to be a Bishop, 1. Because he was a Rebel and Traitor against his Prince. 2. Because he procur'd himself to be ordain'd by Faction and Violence. 3. Because he rifled the Treasures of the Church of Liege, to bestow on those who were the Instruments of his Ordination. 4. Because he had pretended that the King had confer'd on him the Bishoprick of Liege. 5. Because being cited thrice by Herman, to make his Appearance before the Synod, he had not complied therewith. After this Remonstrance, Charles exhorts the Bishops of his Kingdom to joyn with him, in turning this Usurper out of the Bishoprick of Liege.

'Tis very probable that he wrote likewise to Pope John X. upon this very Subject, and that this gave Occasion to that Pope to write to Herman, citing him, and Hilduin, and Richerus to come to Rome, that he might decide this Difference; of which he inform'd Charles the Simple in another Letter. The two Competitors obey'd, and came both to Rome, where the Cause was decided in Favour of Richerus, who was ordain'd Bishop of Liege by the Pope, and Hilduin was excommunicated. This contest began in the Year 920, and ended in the Year 922.

John X.

The third Letter of Pope John X. is directed to the Bishops of the upper Narbonnois. The Church of Narbonne which was the Metropolis of that Country, being vacant, Agius had been elected into it according to the Canon; but a powerful Man named Gerard, possess'd himself of that Archbishoprick, having counterfeited Letters from the Pope. John X. disowns them in this Letter, and declares that he would not give him a Grant thereof when he came to Rome, tho' he was ignorant of his Treachery and Knavery; but that being since fully inform'd of the Matter, he orders them not to acknowledge him any longer for Bishop, since he had been neither elected by the Clergy and Laity of that Town, nor ordain'd by the Bishops of the Province. By the same Letter he sends the Pall to Agius. [These three Letters of John X. are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 574.]

Leo VII.

Leo VII.

WE have likewise three Letters remaining of Leo VII.

The first is directed to Hugh, Duke of France, and Abbot of St. Martin of Tours. He therein enjoyns him, under the Pain of Excommunication, not to suffer any Women to stay, or so much as enter within the Inclosure of that Monastery.

The second is directed to Gerard, Archbishop of Lorch in Germany. He grants him the Pall, and permits him to make use of it, not only on the Days of consecrating the Holy Chrism, and of the Resurrection of our Lord, but also on the Festivals of Christmas, of the Blessed Virgin, of the Apostles, of St. John the Baptist, of St. Laurence, of St. Stephen, and of all those Saints whose Bodies lay interr'd in his Church, and on the Day of his own Consecration, and of the Dedication of the Church; during the Consecration of the Bishops and Priests, and the Sermons to the new Converts. He exhorts him to behave himself so, as that the Sanctity of his Morals may be suitable to the Dignity of that Ornament, and afterwards makes a very edifying moral Discourse upon that Subject.

Leo VII.

This Gerard came afterwards to Rome, and consulted with the Pope about several Questions, to which he gave an Answer directed to the Bishops of France and Germany. The first of these Questions is concerning Necromancers, Magicians, and Wizards, whether they ought to be admitted to Penitence: The Pope reply'd, That the Bishops ought to bring them over to Repentance by their Exhortations, that so they might live like Penitents, rather than dye like Criminals. He adds, that if they slighted the Censures of the Bishops, they ought to be punished according to the Rigor of the Civil Laws. The second Question is, Whether the Bishops ought to say Pax Vobis, or Dominus Vobiscum. The Pope reply'd, That they ought to act conformably to the Custom of the Church of Rome, wherein Pax vobis was said on Sundays, the principal Festivals, and on the Festivals of the Saints, on which Days they likewise said Gloria in excelsis; and that Dominus vobiscum was us'd in the Time of Lent, the Ember-Weeks, the Vigil of Saints, and on Fast-days. The third Question is, to know whether the Lord's Prayer ought to be said at the Benediction of the Table. The Pope reply'd, No, because the Apostles recited it at the Consecration of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ. The fourth is, Whether a Man might marry with his God-mother, or God-daughter: The Pope reply'd, That such Marriages were forbidden. The fifth has respect to those Priests who marry publickly: The Pope orders, that they shall be depriv'd of their Dignity, but that their Children should not be endamaged thereby. The sixth is, Whether Suffragan Bishops can consecrate Churches, ordain Priests, or confirm: The Pope prohibits it, according to the tenth Canon of the Council of Antioch. The seventh is, concerning those who marry their Relations without knowing it, and who afterwards upon the Knowledge thereof, confess it to the Priest: The Pope orders, that they shall be parted and enjoyn'd Penance. The last is, concerning those who rob Churches: The Pope declares, that the Bishops ought to proceed against them with all the Authority God has put into their Hands. At the End of this Letter he adds, that he constituted Gerard his Vicar in Germany; and exhorts the Bishops to joyn with him in reforming those Abuses, which the Incursions of the Pagans, and the Persecution rais'd by false Christians had introduc'd.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

These Letters of Leo are written in a pretty good Style, and full of good Maxims, and confirm the Judgment which Flodoard had passed upon him, that he was a great Servant of God. [His Letters are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 594.]

Agapetus II.

Agapetus II.

WE have likewise a Letter of Pope Agapetus II. wherein he adjusts the Difference which was then on foot between the Church of Lorch and that of Saltzburgh, concerning the Right of Metropolitanship, by giving the Priority to the Archbishop of Lorch, whose See was the most ancient Metropolitan, together with a Jurisdiction over the Eastern Pannonia, and over the Country of Avarois, of the Moravians and Sclavonians, and by granting to the Archbishop of Saltzburgh, whose See was rais'd to an Archbishoprick by Leo III, the Right over the Western Pannonia.

Agapetus II.

There is another Letter of this Pope, which is a Privilege in Favour of the Abby of Cluny. [Both these Letters are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 618.]

John XII.

John XII.

WE have two Letters of John XII. One, by which he grants the Pall to Dunstan, Archbishop of Canterbury: and the other, whereby he excommunicates Issuard and his Adherents, who had seiz'd upon the Lands and Estates belonging to the Abby of St. Simphorien in Provence. [These Letters are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 641.]

John XII.

John XIII.

John XIII

THere are four Letters of John XIII. The first is directed to the Bishops of Bretagne, whom he exhorts to acknowledge the Archbishop of Tours for their Metropolitan. The second is directed to Edgar King of England, wherein he promises him to turn out of the Church of Winchester, such Prebendaries as lead a scandalous Life, and to put some Monks into their Places. The third and fourth are two Privileges which he grants, one to the Monastery built by Berenger Bishop of Verdun, the other to the Monastery of St. Remy of Rheims. [These four Letters are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 663.]

John XIII

Benedict VII.

Benedict VII.

POpe Benedict VII. by his Letter to the Bishops of France and Germany, confirms the Arbitration made in Favour of the Church of Lorch by his Predecessor Agapetus, and sends the Pall to Pilgrin, who was Archbishop of the Place. [This Letter is extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 718. It was first publish'd by Lambeck, Com. Lib. 2. c. 8. p. 645. who likewise gives us a Diploma of this Benedict, concerning the Privileges of the Monastery of Gemblours, Anno Dom. 983. which is to be met with in Lambeck's Book p. 901.]

Benedict VII.

John XV.

John XV.

THey give the Title of the Letters of John XV. to a Treaty of Peace between Ethelbred King of the West Saxons, and Richard Duke of Normandy; to a Monitory which this Pope sent to Arnold and Baldwin, Counts of Flanders, admonishing them to make Restitution of the Revenues belonging to the Abby of St. Riquier; and to another such like Monitory sent to the Bishops of Picardy, exhorting them to procure the said Restitution to be made. [These three Letters are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 731.

John XV.

Gregory V.

Gregory V.

GRegory V. restor'd to John Archbishop of Ravenna, the Church of Placentia, which had been rais'd by his Predecessor to an Archbishoprick, and put that of Monferrat under its Jurisdiction: This is the Subject of the first Letter of this Pope.

By the second he grants the Pall to Gerbert, Archbishop of Ravenna, and confirms and grants several Privileges to that Church.

The third Letter of this Pope is, a Privilege which he grants to the Abby of St. Ambrose of Milan.

The fourth is directed to Queen Constantia, the Wife of Robert King of France, whom he exhorts to punish those who had pillag'd and burnt the Demeans of a Bishop of France called Julian. [These four Letters are extant Concil. Tom. 9. p. 752. Baluzius publish'd another Letter of his, concerning the Privileges of the Abbots of Mons major.]

Gregory V.

This is all we have remaining of the Writings of the Popes, which were in Possession of the Holy See during the Tenth Century.

Ratherius Bishop of Verona.

Ratherius Bishop of Verona.

AMong the famous Men who flourish'd in Italy during this Century, none was of greater Repute than Ratherius, Bishop of Verona. His Life has something in it extraordinary, upon the Account of the many cross Accidents which he met with. He was a Monk in the Abby of Lobbes, where he grew into great Esteem for his Learning. Happy had he been, had he stay'd quietly in that peaceable Harbour, and not expos'd himself, as he did, to the Waves of a tempestuous World. But whether he was called to another Post because of his Abilities, or whether he had some other Motive to incline him to it, he follow'd the Fortune of that Hildwin, who had usurp'd the Bishoprick of Liege, and was afterwards turn'd out of it. Hildwin retir'd into Italy, and after the Death of Notger, Bishop of Verona, he was put into the Possession of that Bishoprick by King Hugh, who promis'd to advance him to a more considerable See when Occasion should offer, and then to bestow that of Verona on Ratherius. A while after that Prince having determin'd to translate Hildwin to Milan, sent Ratherius to Rome, to procure Pope John XI. to approve of this Translation. Whilst Ratherius was upon this Negotiation at Rome, King Hugh alter'd his Mind, and design'd to bestow the Archbishoprick of Milan upon some other Person. However, Ratherius brought a Letter from Rome,

Ratherius Bishop of Verona.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Rome, whereby the Pope approv'd of the Inſtalment of Hilduin, in the Archbiſhoprick of Milan, and granted him the Pall; and another Letter, whereby he requir'd in his own Name, and in the Name of the Church of Rome, that Ratherius ſhould be made Biſhop of Verona. This diſpleas'd King Hugh, who had other Deſigns in his Head; however, he could not tell how to deny the Requeſts of the Holy See, and of the Lords that were about him. He was the more inclin'd to grant it, becauſe Ratherius being then ſick, he believ'd he would quickly march off to the other World. But he recover'd of his Diſtemper, and was ordain'd Biſhop in the year 931. Hugh being very much enrag'd againſt him, ſwore that he ſhould be never the better for his Ordination, and would oblige him to be contented with only a Part of the Revenue of his Church, and to ſwear that he would not require any more of it during his Reign and his Son's Reign. Ratherius was not willing to ſubmit to ſuch an unreaſonable Propoſition, whereupon this Prince caus'd him to be perſecuted, and ſought for Pretences of turning him out. The War of Arnulphus furniſh'd him with a favourable Opportunity of doing it; for Arnulphus becoming Maſter of Verona, Ratherius was accus'd of being one of his Party; and when Hugh had retaken the Town, he ſent him Priſoner to Pavia, where he was under Confinement two years and an half. Being releas'd thence, he was oblig'd to go into Exile, where he ſpent five years, after which he returns into Italy, in hopes of being reſtor'd to his Biſhoprick. In his Return he fell into the Hands of Berenger, who kept him in Priſon three Months and an half by the Advice of Manaſſes: Afterwards he was brought to Verona, and receiv'd by Milo, Count of that City. He ſtay'd there two years, under the Government of that Count, who would not allow him any Liberty. In the mean Time Manaſſes, Archbiſhop of Arles, being tranſlated to Milan, bethought himſelf of ordaining a Perſon for the Church of Verona, and ſome Time after Ratherius receiv'd an Order from the Emperor Lotharius to withdraw. He did very willingly, he ſays, in Obedience to that Order, that which he would have done of himſelf, if he had not been forbidden by the Goſpel to relinquiſh his Flock. He takes no Notice whither he retir'd at this Time, but the Abbot Fulcuin tells us, that he ſtay'd ſome Time at Provence with a Nobleman's Son call'd Röeſtinc, that afterwards he return'd to Lobes, where he was very kindly receiv'd by Riquier who was ſtill living, and that at laſt he was ſent for by the Emperor Otho, who plac'd him near the Perſon of his Brother Bruno. This Bruno having been made Archbiſhop of Cologne, in the year 953. beſtow'd on Ratherius the Biſhoprick of Liege, vacant by the Death of Farabert, who had ſucceeded Hugh, the Succeſſor of Riquier. But bad Fortune always attended him, for he was oppos'd by a prevailing Party, who turn'd him out two years after, and put up in his Place one Baudry, a Perſon of Quality in that Country. Spite of theſe Croſſes, he had a Mind to be re-inſtated in his Biſhoprick of Verona, and attempted it when Otho came into Italy a ſecond Time. At firſt he met with ſome Difficulty, becauſe the Place was filled by Milo's Grandſon, whoſe Ordination had been ratified by the Holy See. However, he inſiſted upon it, wrote very powerfully to Pope John XII. and to the Biſhops of France and Germany, cited them to a Council, and prevailed ſo far as to be re-eſtabliſh'd in a Synod held at Pavia. But he was no ſooner re-enſtated in his See, but he had new Controverſies between himſelf and his Clergy, ſo that he took up a Reſolution to retire. About the year 966. he came into France, where he purchas'd Lands, and bought the Abbys of St. Amand of Aumont, and of Aine, in the laſt of which he dy'd in the year 972.

This Biſhop has compos'd ſeveral Treatiſes, a great Part whereof hath been recovered and publiſh'd by Father Dachery, in the ſecond Tome of his Spicelegium.

The firſt has a very fantaſtical Title: 'Tis intitul'd, A Treatiſe of the Perpendiculars of Ratherius Biſhop of Verona, or the Viſion of a Thief, hang'd among ſeveral others. It is dedicated to Hubert Biſhop of Parma, and he therein reprehends that Slight which the Clergy put upon the Canons. The Work is divided into two Parts. In the firſt he complains, that he had formerly been turn'd out by the Clergy of his own Church, who could not endure that he ſhould concern himſelf with the Diſtribution of the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues of his own Dioceſs, tho' it was Part of the Paſtor's Duty; and who were not willing he ſhould exerciſe himſelf in any other Function, than that of conſecrating the Chriſm, and of Confirmation. Being haraſs'd by their continual Rebellion, he undertook in this Writing to ſhew that their Attempt was a manifeſt Contempt of the Canons: And for the Proof thereof, he began by collecting thoſe Canons which related to the Authority of Biſhops, and which granted to them the Adminiſtration of the Goods belonging to their own Churches. Afterwards he made it appear by an Argumentation, that Biſhops not being only oblig'd to feed their Flocks ſpiritually, but alſo corporally, they had a Right to take Cognizance of the State and Diſtribution of the Church Revenues, ſo as to divide them among the Clergy according to Juſtice and Equity. He ſhews, that this Equity had been perverted in the Diſtribution which was made in the Church of Verona; becauſe the moſt powerful ran away with the greateſt Share thereof, and enrich'd themſelves at other Mens Coſts, and that the Prieſts and Deacons kept all to themſelves, without parting with any to the reſt of the Clergy. He adds, that theſe latter, in whoſe Behalf he ſpoke, did not much concern themſelves about it, upon two Accounts: Firſt, Becauſe they were very glad they had this Pretence to excuſe themſelves from doing the Church any Service: Secondly, becauſe they hop'd hereafter to have the ſame Advantage. Whereas they objected, that the Cuſtom of the Church of Verona was quite contrary, he maintains that they ought not to prefer an evil Cuſtom to the Intention of the Canons, and to the Laws of the Church. It was again objected to him, that it was a Reflection upon a Biſhop to degrade himſelf ſo far, as to diſtribute amongſt the Clergy, and to appoint each their Allowance of Corn, of Wine, and of Money. He reply'd to this, That it was not at all requiſite that the Biſhop ſhould do this himſelf, but that he might do it by his Prieſts and Deacons, if he could find any among them whom he could Truſt: Which Way was authoris'd by the Example of the Apoſtles, who made uſe of Deacons to diſtribute the Alms which were collected by their Order; and by the Practice of St. Sixtus, who committed the Diſtribution of the Treaſures of the Church to St. Lawrence: Upon which he makes this Remark, That St. Lawrence ſpeaking to St. Sixtus, told him, That he had diſpos'd of his Treaſures, calling the Treaſures of the Church, the Treaſures of the Biſhops; becauſe the Biſhop is, as it were, the Husband of the Church. He proves the ſame Things out of the Civil Laws, which gave the Biſhops a Power of treating about the Privileges of the Church. He afterwards inveighs againſt that general Contempt, which all Sorts of Chriſtians, from the meaneſt Laick to the Pope himſelf, caſt upon the Canons and Laws of the Church: And he with a great deal of Heat declaims againſt the irregular Lives of the Eccleſiaſticks of his Time, who made no Scruple of violating the Canons openly in Matters of Moment, as well as in ſmall Things. He reproves very ſmartly, and charges them with ſeveral Diſorders, which he deſcribes in a plain and naked dreſs. He ſpeaks againſt thoſe Perſons of Quality, who were mark'd out for Church Preferments, and advanc'd thereto by all Manner of Contrivances, how unfit ſoever they were for ſuch an Employ: He calls them Thieves, falſe Shepherds, whoſe Bleſſing turn'd to a Curſe; Perſons excommunicated by the Canons a thouſand Times over, who render the Authority of Biſhops contemptible, and were the Cauſe why Men ſet ſo ſlight by their Excommunications and Abſolutions.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

In the ſecond Part of his Treatiſe, Ratherius more particularly falls upon the Immodeſty of the Clergy, which was at ſuch a Height in his Time, that one could ſcarce (ſays he) find a Man fit to be ordained a Biſhop, or any Biſhop fit to ordain others. He takes Notice, that of all the Nations in Chriſtendom, the Italians were the Perſons who had the leaſt Regard for the Canons, and the leaſt Eſteem for the Clergy: * The Reaſon he gives for it is, that the Eccleſiaſticks of their Country were the moſt irregular in their Conduct, the moſt immodeſt in their outward Behaviour, and the moſt remiſs in the Diſcharge of their Duty. He reckons up ſeveral horrible Stories, and charges them chiefly with an infamous Converſe with Women. In the Concluſion he gives them to underſtand, that they had ſtill Place left for Repentance, and earneſtly exhorts them thereto. This Work was compos'd by Ratherius ſome Time after he was laſt re-eſtabliſh'd in his Biſhoprick of Verona by the Emperor Otho, about the Year 962.

[* This is likewiſe one great Reaſon of that general Contempt which our modern Clergy labour under; and which will in all ſucceeding Ages caſt a Scorn and a Reproach on all ſuch irregular Clerks of what Church or Nation ſoever they be.]

The ſecond Treatiſe is intitled: A deliberative Determination made at Liege. He there alledges forty Reaſons, why he thought himſelf obliged neither formally nor tacitly to renounce the Government of his Flock, nor to abandon it to thoſe who had robb'd him of it. Theſe Reaſons are ſtrong and ſhort, and are of the Nature of Aphoriſms: In the Concluſion he ſays, that he formerly made uſe of them for the Biſhoprick of Liege; but that the ſixteen firſt were likewiſe applicable to that of Verona. He ends with an Imprecation againſt thoſe who perſiſt to haraſs and diſturb him. This Work was written at that Time when he ſollicited his Re-eſtabliſhment in the Biſhoprick of Verona.

The third Treatiſe is intitled: Qualitatis conjectura cujuſdam. He therein expoſes under an unknown Name, all that his Enemies laid to his Charge, and how they conſtrued all his Actions in a wrong Senſe. 'Tis a continu'd Piece of Raillery one their Spite and Malice; and wrote about the End of his Life, when he had taken up his Reſolution to retire: For he therein obſerves, that it was forty Years ago ſince he began to aſpire to Greatneſs and Authority, without being ever able to attain it. Laſtly, he complains that the Emperor himſelf had forſaken him.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

The following Treatise is compos'd upon the Variance which happen'd between him and the Clergy of Verona after his Re-establishment. He says that it was no new thing, and that it began at the time of his Ordination. That it proceeded, 1. Because his Morals and those of his Clerks were a Contradiction to each other. 2. Because he preferr'd the Observation of the Canons to those Customs which were introduc'd by the Devil. 3. Because he had restrain'd them from keeping Company with Women, according to the Injunction of the Council of Nice. 4. Because he would not permit the unequal Distribution of the Church Goods among the Clergy. That 'tis upon this last Account the Quarrel between him and them is founded, as he had already demonstrated in a Letter written to Hubert, which is his first Treatise. He declaims very strongly against the general Irregularity of all the Clergy, which he describes with very little Caution. He tells us the Reason why he undertook to discourse of the Distribution of the Goods of his Church, was, because the Clerks, who had receiv'd an Order from the Emperor to leave off that Familiarity which they held with Women, excused themselves from so doing under a Pretence of their Poverty. That it was upon this Account he entred upon this Particular, that they might all have wherewithal to live.

The Apologetick Treatise of Ratherius, is not an Apology of his whole Life, but he therein only gives an Account how he had employ'd a Sum of Money, which the Emperor put into his Hands for the re-building the Church of St. Zeno. One of his Enemies, nam'd Marcian, found fault with what he did, and would have had him distribute it amongst the Poor. Ratherius makes it appear that he ought not to do it. 1. Because it was design'd for the re-building of the Church. 2. Because there were not very many Poor in his Diocess, and that several Persons contributed to their Subsistance: Whereas on the contrary, there were very many Churches demolished, or at least very much out of Repair, for the rebuilding of which nothing was bestowed; that thereupon he supposed he might even employ a Part of that Portion of the Church Goods intended for the Poor on such a good Work. He tells us, that his Antagonist had ventur'd to go to Rome without his Licence, and that he had by Bribes procur'd Letters from the Pope, which excommunicated him and the Bishops his Successors, in case they should concern themselves with the Distribution of the Church Goods. He says, that it was impossible but that this Excommunication would be the Cause of a great deal of Trouble: For if he should slight the Anathema of the Holy See, he should give a very bad Precedent; but on the other hand, if he should submit to it, he should be no longer a Bishop, since he who is made a Bishop, at the same time is made an Overseer, not only in spiritual Things, but also in the Temporalities of his Church, as it is ordain'd by a vast Number of Canons. This Treatise was compos'd by Ratherius after his last re-establishment.

The following was wrote much about the same Time. 'Tis a Discourse directed to his Clergy, wherein he upbraids them of their Rebellion. He there tells them that he had resolv'd to excommunicate them, as they had deserved; but he had delay'd doing it, in hopes they would have reform'd of themselves: That he tarry'd for a Commission from the Emperor, who should report to his Imperial Majesty the Reasons of both Sides, upon which the Emperor should determine what he pleased, and he would obey his Orders.

This Treatise is followed by a Charter, whereby Ratherius institutes several Clerks into a Monastery, in the Place of the Abbot and Monks, whom he was oblig'd to turn out, because of their Irregularities. He therein appoints that they should sing the Office, and that every one of them should have his Share of Corn, Wine, Pulse and Money, without dividing the Lands and Vineyards.

The following Treatise is an Injunction of Ratherius against the Marriage of a Clergyman's Son of Verona, which was perform'd on a Sunday in Lent. He declares that it is irregular, and that no Marriage ought to be celebrated during Lent, nor on Fast-days, nor on Sundays, nor on Holy-days; and orders that all those who should commit such a Fault, should fast for forty Days; that is to say, that when others of the Faithful eat at nine of the Clock, they should stay till Noon ere they eat: When others fast till Noon, they should fast till three a-clock: And when others fast till three a clock, they shall abstain from eating till Night. He exhorts them likewise to be charitable to the Poor during this Time. He declares that he would undergo the same Penance himself for being backward in opposing such an Irregularity. He excommunicates such Offenders as would not submit to this Penance, and declares that God would consign them over to eternal Damnation.

After this Treatise there are five Letters of his Writing. The first is directed to Martin Bishop of Ferrara, wherein he acquaints him that his Clergy laid several Crimes to his Charge, particularly that of ordaining several Infants for Money. He exhorts him to repent, and to behave himself better for the Future.

The second Letter is writ in the Name of all the Clergy of Verona, and directed to him, who was then in the Holy Apostolical See, to the Senate, and to all the Faithful of the Church of Rome. It was compos'd by Ratherius some time after his Re-establishment, that is about the Year 963, during the Contest between John XII. and the Emperor. Upon which Account, in the Direction of his Letter, he names only in general, 'The Bishop who is in the Holy 'Apostolical See, whoever he be. Domino Sanctæ Sedis Ro- 'manæ, quicunque est, Apostolico.' In this Letter he desires to know what he ought to do with those Clergymen of Verona, who enter'd into Orders whilst that Church was govern'd by Intruders. He drew up a Collection of those Canons, which declare such Ordinations to be invalid: however, he declares in the Name of his Clergy, that their Bishop having referr'd the Decision of the Case wholly to the Judgment of the Holy See, they earnestly entreated that See to assist them, and deal favourably with them in that Particular.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

The Letter which follows precedes in Date that which we have been just now speaking of; Ratherius wrote it to Pope John XII. in his own Name, to desire his Re-establishment. He stiles the Pope, the Bishop of the Chief See, i. e. of Rome, Archbishop of Archbishops, and Universal Pope, if it were lawful to give that Title to any Mortal. He therein describes his own Misfortunes, and the History of his own Life, and entreats the Pope to judge whether he ought to be a Bishop of Verona, or no.

The fourth Letter is writ upon the same Subject, and directed to the Bishops of Italy, France, and Germany; he therein implores their Assistance, and cites his Adversary to a Council, that his Cause might be determin'd there.

The fifth Letter is imperfect: 'Tis a dedicatory Epistle of some Work, directed to a Bishop.

These particular Letters are follow'd by a Synodical Letter, which Ratherius publish'd in a Synod which he held after his last Re-establishment, in order to instruct his Clergy, who were very ignorant. He recommends to them at first the getting by Heart the Apostles Creed, that which was sung at Mass, and the Creed of St. Athanasius. He explains to them the Mysteries of the principal Festivals of the Year, exhorts them to say Mass, and to communicate on the Festivals and Sundays; and advertises those who would enter into Priests Orders of what they ought to know and practise, in order to their Ordination; which he reduces to these Heads: They must bring Certificates out of the Church Registers, whether they be free-born, and of the same Diocess. If they are born Slaves, they must produce their Letter of Freedom: And if they be of another Diocess, Letters of Recommendation from their Bishop, call'd now Letters Dimissory. They must learn by Heart, and be able to explain the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, and to read distinctly, and to explain the Epistle and Gospel. They must know how to administer the Sacraments of Baptism, of Penance, and of Extream Unction, and how to perform the Ceremonies for the Burial of the Dead, and for the Blessing of Holy Water. They must be well vers'd in Singing, and in the Calender, and they must have a Martyrology and a Penitential. He adds, that he would not admit any into Priests Orders, unless they had spent some Time in his City, either in a Monastery, or under the Discipline of some learn'd Man, and were Men of some Learning themselves. He informs his Clergy, that the Ecclesiastical Revenues being divided into four parts, whereof only one belong'd to them, they ought not to encroach on those which belong'd to the Bishop, to the Poor, and to Building. He orders that a Regular observation should be made of Lent every day alike, except Sundays; that during Advent they should abstain from eating of Flesh, and from the celebration of Marriage. He requires that abstinence in the last case should likewise be observ'd in the Octaves of Easter and Whitsuntide, in the time of publick Prayers, in the Vigils of all the Festivals, on all Fridays and Sundays; that they should fast till * None all the Passion-Week; that on Easter Eve no Priest should say Mass before ten a Clock, nor solemnly Christen any before that Hour. He declares that the Priests can enjoyn Penance, and give Absolution for secret Sins, but for publick Offences they ought to apply themselves to the Bishop. Lastly, he would have them omit the Festivals, which fell out in Lent, except those of the Virgin Mary, the Apostles, and the Saints, whose bodies lay interr'd in their Church. There is inserted in this Synodical Letter, a discourse containing likewise several Advices and Instructions for Ecclesiasticks, the which is attributed to Pope Leo IV. and St. Ulric. 'Tis very plain, that 'tis foreign to this Subject, but 'tis difficult to determine whose piece it is.

* One of the Popish Canonical Hours.

The Treatise of Ratherius, entituled a Journal of his Travel to Rome, is a piece wherein he threatens his Clergy to go to Rome, and impeach them there, that so he might reduce them to their Duty. He tells them, that tho' they might be very sensible that he design'd to go to Rome, yet they were ignorant of his design in going: That he did not go thither to put up his Prayers there; having read in the Gospel that the time is come, when Men shall no longer Worship God on this Mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, and that God being a Spirit, he ought to be worshipped in Spirit and in Truth, which every one might do at home in his own Closet. That he did not go thither by the Emperor's Order, having receiv'd no such orders from him, but only to send his Soldiers thither: That he did not go thither to learn any thing, since the Scripture gave him sufficient instructions what to do: But that he went thither to the Synod of Bishops which were to meet at Rome by the Emperor's Order, to know of them how he should behave himself in the Discipline of his Church, and particularly whether he might tolerate his Clergy's having Women amongst them. He observes that he could apply himself to no place so properly as to Rome, for instruction how he ought to demean himself in that case. 'For, (says he) where can 'one be better inform'd of the discipline of the Church 'than at Rome? There are the most eminent Doctors in 'the World: 'Tis there the Heads of the Universal Church 'do flourish: 'Tis there they examine the constitutions of 'Episcopacy, and the institutions of other Ecclesiasticks: 'There they approve of those that ought to be received, 'and reject those that ought to be rejected. Nothing that 'is disannull'd there, can be of force elsewhere; and no'thing which is ordered there can be abolished. Whither 'then can I better apply my self for the Cure of my Ig'norance, than to the source and fountain-head of all 'Wisdom? To this Consideration he adds the Equity and Justice of the Emperor, and the personal Deserts of Pope John (viz. the Twelfth of that Name, who scarce deserved such an Encomium) and the hopes that they would call a general Council, which he wishes might prove beneficial to the Church.

go

He explains the question he would propose to them; namely, whether those who infring'd and openly contemn'd the Canons, ought to be endur'd in the Church: He adds, that he would not so much as mention the Injuries he had formerly suffer'd from them, nor those which they still continued to heap upon him; but that he knew not how to refrain speaking of that which passed in the last Synod which he held, wherein he had not the Liberty of Reforming his Clergy, and in which there was not the least notice taken of his Synodical Letter. He enlarges himself very much on the necessity there was of observing the Canons; and was extremely concern'd, upon the account that these Canons prohibited the Clergy, who had been guilty of such Crimes, from Celebrating or discharging their Ministerial Functions. For (says he) if they do not confess their Faults, they are in danger of being damn'd; and if they do confess them, these Canons prohibit them from discharging their Functions. Since the Case stands thus, the Church would be unprovided of Ministers, since the Number of the wicked was so great. He exhorts them to Repentance, and to recite a Prayer, which, he says, he met with in the Psalteries, wherein God is to be implored for their Salvation and Conversion, through the Intercession of the Virgin, and all the Saints. However, forasmuch as the Difficulty still remain'd; he concludes, that he goes to Rome for the removal of it.

To those Treatises of Ratherius are annex'd several Sermons. The first and most considerable is a large Instruction upon Lent. He therein blames those who did not observe it according to the Canon, either fasting only one part of that Holy time, or else breaking out into Excess; or lastly, breaking the Fast on Holy Thursday and Saturday. He takes notice, that in his time they fasted in Lent only till Noon: That on Holy Saturday Mass was not celebrated among the Latins till about Night, and that they fasted that day till Mass was over: But that in the Greek Church they began the Solemnity of Easter at nine of the Clock in the Morning; that their Lent was longer. After this he recommends Prayer, Alms-giving, and Repentance; and shews with what mind, and after what manner they ought to put these into Practice. Lastly, to these Instructions he adds a Dissertation against the Error of the Anthropomorphites, into which he perceiv'd several of his Priests were fallen out of Ignorance, not being capable of imagining a God unless he had a Body. By several Arguments he Demonstrates that God is a pure Spirit. He likewise refutes a foolish and superstitious Opinion, that St. Michael Sang Mass in Heaven every Monday. He concludes with exhorting his Clergy to live regularly.

The Persons, whose Errors he had declar'd against in this Sermon, accus'd him (either out of Malice or Ignorance) of having deny'd that Jesus Christ had a Body, and of having condemn'd the Devotion of those who went every Monday to hear Mass in the Church of St. Michael; so that he was oblig'd to explain himself, by declaring that he never said that Jesus Christ, that is, the incarnate Wisdom, had not Eyes, Hands, or a Body; but only that the Divine Substance had none; and that he never said, that it was ill done in going to the Church of St. Michael to hear Mass; but that he had said, and would maintain, that it was a great piece of Folly to assert, that St. Michael Sang Mass, and Superstition to believe, that it was better to go to St. Michael's Church on Mondays, and Pray to him on that Day, than on any other day of the Week.

The second Discourse upon Lent, is a Moral Exhortation to refrain from Vice.

There are besides four Sermons on Easter-day, and three on the Ascension, which likewise contain very useful Instructions of Morality, taken for the most part out of the Holy Scriptures and the Fathers.

These are all the Works of Ratherius, which are extant in the second Tome of the Spicilegium. There is still in the twelfth Tome, a Letter of the same Author upon the Eucharist: He wrote it to a Bishop, who having met him in a Convocation of Bishops held by Conrad, had ask'd him, whether he had Sung Mass that Week or no? He complains, that this Question was propos'd to him, rather to try him, than out of Charity; and answers him, that perhaps it were to be wish'd, that neither of them had celebrated it on Christmas-day; declaring withal, that he had no good Opinion of him. He leaves the World to judge, which of the two who receiv'd the Eucharist unworthily, is most in danger of his Salvation; whether he who receiv'd it seldom, or he who receiv'd it often. He adds, that were they to read the Homilies of St. Chrysostom on the Epistle to the Hebrews, perhaps the One would abstain altogether from Celebrating, and the Other from doing it every day. From this point of Morality Ratherius passes to another of Doctrine, and ask's him, to whom he writ; whether he understands figuratively these words, which are spoken in giving the Sacrament; The Body of Jesus Christ preserve thee to Everlasting Life. He tells him, that if he understood them in that Sense, he was miserably blind; and assures him, that he ought to believe, that as in the Marriage of Cana in Galilee, the Change of the Water into Wine was Real, and not Figurative; so the Wine is by the Priest's Benediction made the real Blood of Jesus Christ, and the Bread the real Flesh, and not only in a Figure. That if the Taste and the Colour seem to suggest the contrary, yet we are not to stick here; and that as the Mud whereof Man was form'd chang'd its Figure, tho' the Substance still remained, so we ought to believe, that tho' the Colour and Taste of the Bread and Wine remain, yet we receive the real Flesh and the real Blood of Jesus Christ: That if one should ask, what is become of the Substance of the Bread and Wine? it might be answered, that the Bread perhaps vanishes after an invisible manner; or that 'tis changed into Flesh. But that the Gospel teaches us, that this Flesh and this Blood, are the Flesh and Blood of the Body of Jesus Christ: That we ought not to be over-inquisitive about the rest, since 'tis a Mystery of our Faith: because being a Mystery it cannot be comprehended; and being a Mystery of Faith, we should believe it, without going about to explain it.

[But by this Bishop's and Monsieur Du Pin's leave, this parallel will not hold good; nor is it a sound Argument to prove Transubstantiation. The Fallacy of it is apparent. For the change of Water into Wine, at the Marriage of Cana in Galilee, was reckon'd a Miracle, and such as only a God could do: But the change of Bread and Wine into the real Body and Blood of Christ, by a words speaking of the Priest is more Miraculous, and shews the Priest to be endowed with a greater Power than our Saviour himself had, which I presume no Romanist, if he be in his Senses, will be so bold or so blasphemous as to assert. And as for his other Argument to elude the Evidence of our Senses, 'tis altogether as vain; unless it can be proved, that we ought to believe things which contradict our Sense and Reason, as well as those which are above them. The One we grant, the Other we deny. The Mystery of the Incarnation, of the Blessed Trinity in Unity, and the like, are above our Sense and Reason, but contradict neither. But the Mystery of the Transubstantiation, is not only above, but contradicts the joynt Testimony of our Senses and Reason at once. So that I leave the World to judge which of the two Opinions is most Orthodox; whether Ours which says, that Christians do by Faith receive very Christ, in the receiving the Elements of Bread and Wine, which remain still the same; or Theirs, which says, that the Bread and Wine are chang'd into the real Body and Blood of Christ, by a Mystical Transubstantiation.]

Foulcuin Abbot of Lobes, speaks of almost all these Works of Ratherius, which we still have, and likewise makes mention of some others which are lost; viz. a Treatise entituled The Combat, or the Mental Meditations of one Ratherius, Bishop of Verona, and Monk of Lobes, which he writ during his first Exile, and address'd to the most learned Prelates of his Time: A Treatise entituled, The Frenzy, because he therein talks like a Mad-man against Bundry: Several Sermons for Holy Thursday, for the Feast of Pentecost, and for several Festivals of the Blessed Virgin, and several other pieces. The same Author adds, that Ratherius in his Exile at Cumæ, meeting with a Copy of the Life of St. Urſmar, corrected the Soleciſms thereof, and ſent it to Lobes; and that afterwards being in Provence, he compos'd a Treatiſe of Grammar, which he dedicated to Rotſting's Son, under the Title of Spera-dorſum, or, A Shelter for the back-ſide.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

The Stile of Ratherius is obſcure and intricate, but pure enough in the Terms: his Expreſſions are lively and ſmart, and his Reaſonings juſt enough. He was well acquainted with the Canons, had throwly read the Latin Fathers, and very pertinently made uſe of their Authority and Principles. He reproves with ſharpneſs the Vices and irregularities of his Time, without ſparing any Man, and particularly levels againſt the corrupted Morals of Eccleſiaſticks, which he did not ſtick to detect and deſcribe in very lively Colours, and perhaps with a little too much Picquancy.

Of the Church of Rome, and other Italian Churches, during the Tenth Century.

Atto Biſhop of Verceil.

Atto Biſhop of Verceil.

ATTO or Hatto Biſhop of Verceil, (not the ſame with the Biſhop of Baſil, of the ſame Name, whom we mentioned in the foregoing Century) is more moderate and leſs obſcure than Ratherius. He was the Son of Aldegaire, and preſided over the Church of Verceil, from the Year 545. till about the Year 960. His Works were a long time conceal'd in the Vatican Library, and were at laſt made publick by Father Dachery, in the eighth Tome of his Spicilegium.

The firſt is a Capitulary for the Clergy of his Dioceſs, containing an hundred Heads or Articles, almoſt all extracted and copied from the Councils of Laodicea, Carthage, Toledo, and others, from the Decretals of Popes both true and falſe, and from the Capitulary of Theodulphus, only excepting a very few, of which perhaps he is the Author. Theſe are the fourth, wherein he enjoyns his Prieſts, Deacons, and Sub-deacons, to learn the Catholick Faith (that is, the Creed of Athanaſius) by Heart: The fifth, which is a general Admonition to the Eccleſiaſticks, to diſcharge their Duty, and lead exemplary Lives: The tenth, whereby he ordains, that when they Conſecrate the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, it ſhould be an intire Oblation, i. e. a whole Loaf unbroken; and that the Prieſts ſhould celebrate the Maſs Faſting. The eighteenth concerning the Inſtitution of Catechumens, the Baptiſm of Mutes, and the Obligation of Godfathers, to inſtruct thoſe for whom they ſtand Sureties. The twentieth, whereby 'tis order'd, that in all Churches where Baptiſm is Adminiſtred, there ſhould be a Deacon with the Prieſt, and enjoyns Prieſts who have no Deacons, to make ſpeedy choice of ſome fit Perſon, and get him to be ordain'd Deacon. The twenty ninth which enjoyns the Conferences of the Prieſts, on the firſt day of the Month, a Cuſtom eſtabliſhed in the ninth Century, as appears from the Capitularies of Hincmarus and Riculphus. The thirty ninth, which imports that for the future all Biſhops ſhould be enjoyn'd not to ordain Deacons till they had oblig'd themſelves to continue in Celibacy. The ſeventy fifth, whereby he impoſes a Penance on ſuch, who by their ſlovenlineſs ſhould Belch after they had receiv'd the Euchariſt. The ſeventy ſeventh, which imports that thoſe who ſhall be baptiz'd or confirm'd, ſhall abſtain, during the time preſcrib'd by the Biſhop, from eating Meat, and for eight days from the uſe of Marriage, and that no Clerk ſhould be ordain'd till he had received both theſe Sacraments. And the ninetieth, which concerns the Penances which Prieſts ought to impoſe on Publick Offenders, and after what manner they ought to preſent to the Biſhop ſuch Perſons as will not ſubmit to Penance.

The next Treatiſe is about the Perſecutions and Troubles which the Eccleſiaſticks ſuffer'd. It is divided into three Parts. The firſt treats of the Troubles they ſuffer'd in being cenſur'd in their Perſons. The ſecond, of thoſe they met with in their Ordinations: And the third, of thoſe they endur'd in their Revenues. In the beginning he takes notice that the Church will always have its Perſecutors, but that they will never get the Maſtery; and that the Church being founded on the Solid Rock of the Apoſtolical Faith, will always ſtand by Faith, by the Love of Jeſus Chriſt, by the Uſe of Sacraments, and by the Obſervation of the Commandments of God. Happy Houſe! (ſays he) it is not overthrown by Storms, nor ſhatter'd by Floods, nor ſhaken by Winds; againſt which the Gates of Hell will never prevail, tho' aſſaulted, by them continually; which yields neither to ſecret Temptations, nor to open Perſecutions, nor to the Attacks of Malicious Spirits, nor to the Corruption of Vices and Impieties. After he had thus expreſt himſelf in general concerning the Perſecutions of the Church, he ſays that one of the moſt uſual in his time, is that when the wicked are corrected by their Superiors, they perſecute thoſe who teach them, and openly aſſault them, that by this means they may evade the ſubmitting to Eccleſiaſtical Puniſhments: That to prevent this abuſe, it was ordain'd in the Canons, that Biſhops ſhould not be accus'd but by Men of unſpotted Reputation, nor judg'd by any other Judges than thoſe of their own chooſing, nor condemn'd by any other Authority than that of the Holy See, altho' it was allow'd for Metropolitans and Biſhops of the Province to hear and examine their Cauſes. After having eſtabliſh'd this Point of Civil Law on the falſe Decretals of the Popes, he ſays that in his time, they did not only obſerve theſe Preſcriptions in the Accuſation of Biſhops; but that they would not ſo much as give them leave to make their own defence, and would oblige them either to bring their Brethren to ſwear that they are innocent, or to provide a Champion to fight for them. He ſhews that theſe two Methods of judging the Crime or Innocence of any Man, which were then in uſe, are both of them unjuſt and unlawful, eſpecially among Eccleſiaſticks. The firſt, becauſe it does not follow that all thoſe who cannot produce Witneſſes to ſwear to their Innocence, are guilty; and that it had been always the Cuſtom of the Church to acquit thoſe who were not convicted of the Crimes laid to their Charge, without obliging them to bring others to ſwear for their Innocence. The ſecond Method, (1.) Becauſe it was only in uſe among Laicks, who did not approve of it themſelves. (2.) Becauſe it often happens that the Innocent are vanquiſh'd, and the Guilty crown'd as Victors. (3.) Becauſe this was to tempt God. (4) Becauſe it being unlawful for Eccleſiaſticks to fight themſelves, 'tis altogether unjuſt to oblige them to find Champions in their ſtead in order to be acquitted: 'Tis to put them into an incapacity of clearing themſelves of one Crime, unleſs by committing another. He then makes this Objection to himſelf; But muſt we ſuffer all the Faults which Eccleſiaſticks may commit to go unpuniſh'd? He anſwers, that there are ſome Perſons who ought to ſuffer it; and that there are other Perſons whoſe duty it is to reprove and puniſh them according to the Power inveſted in them for that purpoſe, and with the neceſſary Precautions: but that a raſh Judgment ſhould not be paſs'd on thoſe who have receiv'd a Power to judge the very Angels; That the Clergy ought not to be judg'd by Laicks, but by Biſhops; and that Laicks ought not to concern themſelves with puniſhing their Crimes, unleſs they are appeal'd to by the Biſhop of the Dioceſs. And yet (ſays he) the quite contrary is now obſerveable; For the Civil Authority incroaches on the Eccleſiaſtical; and the latter is now cruſh'd by the former, which ought to ſupport it. So that as in the Election of Prelates, the Will of the Prince is follow'd more than the Decrees of the Holy Fathers; even ſo in their Condemnation, more regard is had to gratifie their Humours, than to proceed according to Canon Law. And from hence it happens, that by the Injuſtice of unrighteous Judges, the Offences of the Guilty are no Bar to the holding their Dignity; and Dignity does not exempt any Perſon from an unjuſt Accuſation.

Atto Biſhop of Verceil.

The ſecond Part is about the Authority which Princes had uſurp'd in the Eccleſiaſtical Ordinations of Biſhops: He ſays that they ought to be made by thoſe who have a Right thereto according to the Canons and Cuſtoms of the Church; but that Princes abſolutely require that their Edict ſhould be of univerſal force in the caſe: That he, whom they choſe, muſt be receiv'd, tho' never ſo wicked; and that the Man, whom others ſhall elect, ſhould be rejected, tho' never ſo deſerving: That the Faults of thoſe whom they chuſe, how great ſoever, were look'd upon as nothing: That they had no regard to the Virtues, but to the Riches, the Parentage, and the Services of the Perſons: That many were ordain'd for Money, others by Recommendation, or becauſe they are Relations, or in recompence of ſome Service they had done: That there are ſome Princes ſo blind, as to prefer Infants to Biſhopricks, who had not ſo much as one of the neceſſary Qualifications; and who are oblig'd to be under the Care of Tutors and Maſters, even while they are the Maſters and Judges of a whole Dioceſs.

In the laſt Part he reprehends the Abuſe which prevail'd in his time, of rifling the Revenues of the Church, when the Epiſcopal See was vacant by the Death, or by the Expulſion of a Biſhop. He cites in the three Parts ſeveral Canons, and a great many fine Paſſages out of the Fathers, to back his own Arguments.

To theſe Treatiſes are annex'd eleven Letters of Atto.

The firſt is directed to a Biſhop nam'd Waldon, who was at variance with his Prince. He exhorts him to ſubmit to his Prince, and produces ſeveral Paſſages out of the Fathers concerning the Obedience which is due to Kings. This Waldon is doubtleſs the ſame with him whom Berenger had made Biſhop of Cuma, and who afterwards prov'd treacherous to him, and withdrew to the Emperor Otho, as Luitprand relates it.

The three following Letters are directed to the Faithful of his own Dioceſs: The two firſt are againſt thoſe, who pretended to Divine and Propheſie of things to come: and the laſt is againſt thoſe who would faſt on Fridays.

The

Atto Bishop of Vercell.

The fifth is directed to a Bishop named Aso. He therein shews by the Ecclesiastical and Civil Laws, that Marriage is prohibited between those who had contracted a Spiritual Affinity by Baptism, contrary to the Advice of that Bishop, who found Fault that one Thierry, who had marry'd his God-father's Daughter, was divorc'd from her, and excommunicated till such time as he made his Appearance in a Court of Judicature before the Archbishop and Bishops.

The sixth is a Letter of Gunzon Deacon of the Church of Navarre, wherein he sends Atto the Copy of a Letter, pretended to be Pope Zachary's, to Theodorus Bishop of Pavia, about the Prohibition of Marriage between those who have contracted a Spiritual Affinity.

The seventh is a Letter of Ambrose, a Priest of Milan, directed to Atto, whereby he gives him to understand that these sorts of Marriages were likewise prohibited in his Church; and desires he would let him know the meaning of the Titles Priestesses and Deaconesses, mention'd in Zachary's Letter.

Atto replies in the eighth Letter, that the Priestesses and Deaconesses were Widows chosen to assist the Women in the Administration of the Sacrament of Baptism. He does not approve at all their Opinion, who pretend that the Deaconesses were Abbesses: and he observes that these Titles of Priests and Deacons might likewise be given to Women.

The ninth and tenth are directed to the Ecclesiasticks of his own Diocess, against those who kept Company with lew'd Women, with whom they maintain'd a scandalous Familiarity, and whom they kept and maintain'd out of the Revenues of the Church.

In the last, he advises the Bishops, his Brethren, upon what was necessary to be done in case the King of Italy, (viz. Berenger and Adalbert mention'd formerly) fearing their Enemies, should require him and the rest of the Bishops to continue Loyal to them, not only by the Oath of Allegiance, but by exacting Hostages from them. He gives them to understand that 'tis not his Opinion that they ought to give them any. (1.) Because he is not sensible, that the Holy Scriptures and the Fathers have commanded any thing else than to be Loyal and Subject to one's Prince, and to do one's best to preserve the publick Peace of the State, and to provide for the Safety of one's King. (2.) Because 'tis a sort of Punishment inflicted on the Innocent for another's Fault, which is contrary to Justice. (3.) Because 'tis the exposing of a Man's Life for some Temporal Interest, and the leaving it to the changeable Will of others (4.) Because 'tis such a new and strange thing, as would make the World believe either that the Bishops of whom these Hostages were requir'd, are more disloyal than their Predecessors, or else that the Princes are more odious. Whereupon he exhorts his Brethren to pray to God for the Safety of their Princes, and to beg him to infuse into them a good Opinion of the Loyalty of the Prelates of their Kingdom, and that he would preserve them steddy and constant in their Fidelity.

Atto Bishop of Vercell.

There is still in the Manuscript at Rome another piece of Atto, intituled The Poliptick, or The Perpendicular, which serves as a Reproof of Vice, and a Recommender of Vertue; and seventeen Sermons which 'tis impossible to Transcribe, because the Manuscript is so torn in this place, that one cannot read it. There are likewise several things wanting in the Works which are copied out; all which might be supply'd by the Manuscript which they say is in the Archives of the Church of Verceil; but the Canons of that Church would never communicate them, nor suffer them to be copied, notwithstanding the importunity of Father Dachery made by Cardinal Bona, and the Ambassador of the Duke of Savoy: whether 'tis because they knew not where this Treasure lay, or because they were minded it should lye dormant there.

The Works of this Author are nothing else almost but a Collection of Citations out of Scripture, the Canons, and the Fathers, which were very applicable to his Purpose. What is his own, is writ with some Spirit, and after a lively and natural Manner.

LUITPRAND.

Luitprand

Luitprand, or Liutprand, is one of the greatest Ornaments of Italy. Trithemius assures us that he was an Italian, and descended from a Family of Pavia: Others suppose that his Family was Spanish. However it be, his Father was sent by Hugh King of Italy to the Emperor at Constantinople; and being return'd from that Embassy, he embrac'd the Monastick Life, leaving Luitprand very young. He was brought to Pavia, and made Deacon of that Church. His Relations presented him to Berenger II. to be his Secretary. He serv'd him a long time, and was sent Ambassador by that Prince about the Year 948. to Constantine Porphyrogeneta Emperor of the East. Some say that soon after his return he was Bishop of Cremona; but 'tis more likely that he was not advanc'd to that Dignity till Otho I. had render'd himself Master of Italy: For he soon fell into disgrace with Berenger, who persecuted him and all his Family; so that he was forc'd to fly into Germany, where he compos'd his History, on the top of which he only assumes the Title of Deacon. He came into Italy with Otho, and assisted at the Council held at Rome in the Year 963. against John XII. in the quality of Bishop of Cremona, where he was the Emperor's Interpreter. In the Year 968. he was sent Ambassador by that Prince to Phocas Emperor of the East, and has writ himself the Relation of that Embassy, which contains very excellent Remarks on the Manners of the Grecian Emperors of that Time. His History is dedicated to Raimond Bishop of Elvira in Spain. It is divided into six Books, and begins with the Reigns of Leo Emperor of the East, and of Arnulphus Emperor of the West, and ends at Luitprand's Embassy from Berenger to Constantine. But the last Book is imperfect; and instead of continuing the History, a Fragment is added, containing the History of the Expulsion of Berenger, of the Condemnation of Pope John XII. and of all that happen'd at Rome till Pope Benedict was outed of his Popedom. The Fragment seems to me to be Luitprand's, if we may judge by the Style, and certainly it belongs to an Author of that time. The third Book is intituled, The Counterpoison, that is, The Revenge; because therein he undertakes to revenge himself of the base usage he had receiv'd from Berenger. This History, and the Relation of his Embassy to the Emperor Phocas, are the only genuine Pieces of Luitprand. For the Book of the Lives of the Popes from St. Peter down to Formosus, is not writ in Luitprand's Style, nor is it mention'd in Sigebert or Trithemius. Some believe that it belongs to a more ancient Author, but they are mistaken; for it ends with a Passage copied out of the History of Luitprand which is a farther Evidence that this Work is none of his: But what Time soever it was of, 'tis nothing else but a vile Copier of Anastasius the Librarian. As for the Chronicon which goes under the name of Luitprand, 'tis apparently a spurious Piece, which ought to be reckon'd among the Romances made in the form of ancient Chronicons by the Spaniards.

Luitprand

Luitprand's Style is harsh and rough, but strong and vehement. He wrote his History in a pathetical Manner, but such as is not pleasant, without observing the Regular Order and Series of Times. He therein speaks particularly of the Affairs of Italy, and of that which concern'd the Empire of the West, and therein likewise inserts something of the Empire of the East, and of the History of the Popes.

His History was printed at Basil in the Year 1532. The Relation of his Embassy at Ingolstadt in the Year 1600. the Book of Lives of the Popes, which is foisted on him at Mayence in the Year 1602. and all his Works together, with the spurious Chronicon, were publish'd by Jerome of Higuera the Jesuit, and printed in Folio at Antwerp in the Year 1640.

CHAP. III.

An Account of the Churches of France.

Of the Churches of France

IN the tenth Century the Church of Rheims was look'd upon as the chief Church of France, and its Archbishops had the principal Share in the Ecclesiastical and Civil Affairs of that Kingdom. The Privileges which the Popes granted to them, the great Revenues which they possess'd, and which were considerably augmented at that Time, the Prerogative which they had of Consecrating Kings, the Post they held in the Assemblies both of Church and State; their Quality, their Reputation, and their Personal Merit, rais'd them to a higher Pitch of Power and Dignity than any Prelate could hope for. But forasmuch as all great Dignities are envied and eagerly thirsted after, and the higher the Post is, the more 'tis expos'd to Storms and Dangers; 'tis not all to be wonder'd at that there were so many

Of the Churches of France.

Of the Churches of France

Artifices us'd to come into this Archbiſhoprick, ſo many heats to keep in it, and if thoſe that had the poſſeſſion of it, have been ſubject to ſo many Scandals, as the enſuing Hiſtory will make appear. But becauſe the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of the Churches of France, and particularly of that of Rheims, bear ſo near a Relation to thoſe of the State; and becauſe the Changes of Kings, and the Revolutions of the Government have likewiſe produc'd very many Alterations in the Affairs of the Church: 'Tis neceſſary to begin with giving you a Scheme of the State of the French Monarchy, and of the Succeſſion of the Kings who govern'd France during the tenth Century.

The ſtate of France after the Death of Charles the Groſs.

After the Death of Charles the Groſs, which happen'd in the Year 888. * his Son Charles, ſirnam'd the Simple, being ſtill in his Minority, the Neuſtrians met at Compeigne, elected Odo or Eudes, Count of Paris, and Duke of France, to govern the Kingdom, gave him the Quality of King, and caus'd him to be crown'd by Gautier Archbiſhop of Sens. On the other ſide, Radulphus the Son of Conrad, made himſelf Maſter of the Country between Mont-jou and the Appenine Mountains; that is, Savoy and Switzerland, and caus'd himſelf to be crown'd King of Lower Burgundy. Lewis the Son of Bozon, ſeiz'd on the Country which lies from Lyons to the Sea, between the Rhone and the Alpes, and went under the name of King of Arles or Provence, and caus'd that Kingdom to be confirm'd upon him by a Council held at Valence on purpoſe in the Year 890. Thus France was divided into three Kingdoms: The Kingdom of France, which comprehended Normandy, Aquitain, and the Dutchy of Burgundy; the Kingdom of Arles; and the Kingdom of Lower Burgundy. Eudes was not long in quiet poſſeſſion of a Kingdom to which he could pretend no Right. Charles the Simple had his Partiſans, who ſent for him from England, whither his Mother had carry'd him, and caus'd him to be crown'd at Rheims in the Year 893. He immediately enter'd into poſſeſſion of a part of the Kingdom, and rais'd a Civil War between the two Parties; which within a while was appeas'd, and wholly ended by the Death of Eudes, which happen'd on the thirtieth of January 898. By his Death Charles the Simple took poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of France, not of that of Arles, nor of Lower Burgundy. In the Year 918. he added Lorrain to his Dominions, having conquer'd it from Henry the Fowler, after the Death of Conrad. But the Malecontents among the French Nobles, took an occaſion from this War, to cut him out new Work, and elected Robert the Brother of Eudes King, who was crown'd at Rheims on the twentieth of June in the Year 922. ſo that Charles was forc'd to quit Lorrain to come and fight Robert. This laſt was kill'd in Battle, but his Party elected in his room his Brother-in-Law Radulphus II. Duke of Burgundy. Charles the Simple ſtruck up an Alliance with Henry the Fowler, to whom he remitted Lorrain, upon condition that he ſhould aid him; but he was treacherouſly taken in the Year 923. by Hebert Count of Vermandois, who kept him Priſoner in Thierry Caſtle. The Queen his Wife withdrew into England with her Son Lewis. From that time Charles the Simple was always in the Power of Hebert, or Hugh le Blanc Count of Paris, Robert's Son, who kept him Priſoner till his Death, which happen'd in the Year 929. Upon his Death Radulphus was left in quiet poſſeſſion of the Kingdom to the Year 936. at which time he dy'd without Iſſue, leaving the Dukedom of Burgundy to his Brother Hugh the Black, and the chief Authority of France to Hugh the White, Count of Paris and Orleans, and Duke of France, his Brother-in-Law. However, this Man had not the Heart to take the Crown upon him, being afraid of Hebert Count of Vermandois, and Giſalbert Duke of Lorrain; and he thought it more adviſable to ſend for the Son of Charles the Simple out of England, who upon that account was call'd Lewis d'Outremer. He was receiv'd without any Oppoſition, and crown'd at Laon in the Year 936. Lewis during his Reign had great Conteſts with the Counts Hebert and Hugh, and was ſometimes at War, ſometimes at Peace with Otho King of Germany. But at laſt, having accommodated Matters with Hugh, he dy'd peaceably in the Year 954. leaving the Title of King to his Son Lotharius, an Infant of fourteen or fifteen Years of Age, and the Adminiſtration of the Government to Hugh, to whom the young King granted the Dutchy of Burgundy and Aquitain. Hugh dyed in the Year 956. and left four Children, of whom the Eldeſt, nam'd Hugh-Capet, was declar'd Duke of France in the Year 959. by Lotharius, who gave him likewiſe Poitou. Lotharius reign'd peaceably three and thirty Years, having after the Death of Hugh the White, reaſum'd the Royal Authority. But this was loſt in the hands of his Son Lewis, ſirnam'd the Fainthearted; who ſurviv'd his Father only ſixteen Months under the Tutelage of Hugh-Capet, and was the laſt King of the Caroliguian Line. For after his Death Hugh-Capet was elected King by the Nobles of Noyon, about the end of May in the Year 987. and afterwards crown'd at Rheims, without any regard had to Charles Duke of Lorrain, Brother to Lotharius, whom they hated, becauſe he had taken an Oath of Allegiance to the King of Germany for his Dutchy of Lorrain. The next Year Hugh-Capet caus'd his Son Robert alſo to be crown'd. However Duke Charles was not altogether out of hopes of re-inveſting himſelf in the States of his Anceſtors, and having ſeiz'd on Laon and Rheims, he made War for ſometime with Hugh; but was taken in the Year 991. in the City of Laon, and carried Priſoner to Senlis, and from thence to Orleans, where he was ſhut up in a Tower, wherein he dy'd three Years after. And thus the Kingdom of France was transferr'd from the Caroligwian Line to that of Hugh-Capet, who liv'd till the Year 996. and left his Son Robert in quiet poſſeſſion of the Kingdom, which this good King govern'd till the three and thirtieth Year of the enſuing Century. And thus much may ſuffice for what concerns the Political Eſtate of the Kingdom of France: Let us now proceed to the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, wherein the Archbiſhops of Rheims had a principal ſhare.

Of the Churches of France.

Radulphus.

Lewis d'Outremer.

Lotharius.

Lewis the Fainthearted.

Hugh-Capet and Robert.

The Reign of Charles the Simple.

* Other Hiſtorians ſay he was Son to Lewis the Bald.]

Fulcus Arch-Biſhop of Rheims.

Fulcus Archbiſhop of Rheims.

FUlcus ſucceeded Hincmarus in the Archbiſhoprick of Rheims, in the Year 882. He was a Perſon of Quality, who had been a long time at Court. Immediately he ſent to the Pope Marinus his Confeſſion of the Faith, according to Cuſtom, and receiv'd the Pall from him. In a ſecond Letter he demanded a Confirmation of the Privileges granted by the Popes to his Predeceſſors, and made Complaints to him of the Eſtate bequeath'd by his Brother Rampo, for the building of a Monaſtery, of which Ermenfroy, who had married his Widow, had taken Poſſeſſion. Marinus wrote on this laſt point to Gerard Archbiſhop of Sens, in whoſe Dioceſs this Monaſtery was; and to John Archbiſhop of Roan, to whoſe Dioceſs Ermenfroy did belong, giving him orders to enjoyn him to relinquiſh the Eſtate which he had ſo unjuſtly poſſeſs'd himſelf of; and if he would not do it, to make uſe of Canonical Puniſhments againſt him. Fulcus wrote likewiſe to Pope Adrian the Succeſſor of Marinus, to Congratulate his Advancement to the Popedom; and at the ſame time ſent him ſome Copies of the Privileges granted by the Popes, Leo, Benedict, and Nicholas to the Church of Rheims, to which he deſires him to grant a Confirmation. In the ſame Letter he intreats him to ſend a Commiſſion to the Archbiſhops of Sens and Roan, to adjuſt the buſineſs of the Monaſtery, which Ermenfroy had taken poſſeſſion of, and writes in favour of Frotarius Archbiſhop of Bruges, who was accus'd by a Monk of his Dioceſs; aſſuring the Pope, that he had been elected by the Biſhops of his Province, by the Clergy and Laity of his own Dioceſs, and confirm'd by Pope Marinus. He ſent another very ſubmiſſive Letter to Pope Stephen, wherein he thanks him for the Honour he did him in writing to him, and in treating with him as a Friend and Brother; Titles which he could not pretend to, thinking it an Honour to be his Servant and Subject. He aſſures him, that if he were not ſurrounded, and as it were Beſieged by the Barbarians, who were not above five Leagues off his City, and who Beleaguer'd Paris; he would have undertaken a Journey to Rome. He informs him of the part he bore in the Snares which were laid againſt him, and makes his acknowledgments for the favour ſhew'd by the Pope to his Son Guy, who was the Archbiſhop's Kinſman. He promiſes Obedience to the Pope, and exalts the Dignity of the Church of Rheims, which he pretends had been founded by St. Sixtus, who was ſent by St. Peter, and was the chief of the whole Kingdom. He adds, that Pope Hormiſdas had eſtabliſhed the Archbiſhop of Rheims, his Vicar in Gaul; and deſires him to confirm the Privileges granted by his Predeceſſors. He preſſes him to order Ermenfroy to be excommunicated by the Archbiſhops of Sens and Roan; and intreats him to write to King Charles, to oblige him to reſtore in full to the Church of Rheims the Revenues which belong'd to it.

Fulcus Archbiſhop of Rheims.

A Letter of Stephen V. to Fulcus.

The Pope anſwer'd Fulcus, that he was glad to ſee he had ſuch good thoughts of the Holy See; he aſſur'd him, that he look'd upon Guy as his own Child; that he was deeply affected with the Deſolation of France, caus'd by the Barbarians; that he pray'd God to deliver that Kingdom out of all its Trouble: And Laſtly, he acquainted him, that he had ſent Letters according to his deſire, to the Archbiſhops of Sens and Roan.

Fulcus wrote a ſecond Letter to this Pope, wherein he renews his complaints againſt Ermenfroy, who would not obey the Injunctions of the two Archbiſhops, and intreats the Pope to cauſe him to be excommunicated. At the ſame time time he asks his Advice, whether it be lawful to ordain Bishops every Festival Day.

Of the Churches of France.

The Pope sent him afterwards several Letters.

The first is a Letter of Consolation, for the Miseries he underwent.

Other Letters of Stephen V to Fulcus.

The second is a Recommendatory Letter, in Behalf of a Man who was oppress'd by his Children and Relations.

The third is directed to the Bishops of France against Frotarius, who had seiz'd upon the See of Burges, after he had been turn'd out of the Bishopricks of Bordeaux and Poitiers. He enjoyns him under the Penalty of Excommunication, to relinquish Burges, and return to Bordeaux.

The fourth is in Favour of Teutboldus, whom he had ordain'd Bishop of Langres. He therein tells him, that after the Death of Isaac Bishop of that Church, Aurelian Archbishop of Lyons had ordain'd in his Room a Monk call'd Egilon, without being elected by either Clergy or Laity, who had elected Teutboldus, and desir'd the Pope that he might be consecrated; that being willing to maintain the Privileges of all Churches, he had sent to Aurelian to ordain Teutboldus, provided it appear'd to him, that he had been unanimously elected by Clergy and Laity: That he had sent a Bishop to be upon the Spot, to see that this Order were duly put in Execution; but that Aurelian had put a Trick upon him, by sending him before to Langres, with a Promise that he would be there soon after him; and that instead of being so good as his Word, he suffer'd the Bishop to wait for him to no Purpose: That the Clergy and Laity had sent an Act of the Election to Rome, and pray'd that Teutboldus might be consecrated; that he had writ again to Aurelian, requiring him to ordain him; but that instead of obeying his Order, he made it his Business to bring the other into Possession; Lastly, That upon the fresh Instances of the Clergy and Laity of Langres, he had ordain'd Teutboldus; he enjoyns Fulcus to put him into Possession. Fulcus reply'd to him, that he was very willing to put his Orders touching Teutboldus into Execution, but that he had been oblig'd to defer it upon the Instance of King Eudes, who would send his Ambassadors to him, to know his Resolution. He adds, that the Bishops were very glad at his declaring, that he was willing to maintain the Rights and Privileges of Bishops in their full Force. He desires to know of him, whether it be lawful for any of his Suffragans to execute the Orders of the King, or of any other without his Leave, or to undertake any Thing contrary to his Prohibitions.

Other Writings of Stephen in Favour of the Church of Rheims.

The same Pope confirms the Privileges of the Church of Rheims, and prohibits all Persons whatsoever from seizing or detaining any of the Revenues which belong to it. He likewise wrote to Fulcus about the Difference which happen'd between Herman Archbishop of Cologne, and Aldegairus Bishop of Hamburg and Breme. They had both written to the Holy See upon that Subject, and had been cited thither. Aldegairus came to Rome accordingly, but Herman did not appear. However, the Pope being unwilling to determine a Matter of that Consequence, without hearing both Parties, he orders Fulcus to call a Synod in his Name at Worms, with the Bishops his Suffragans and Neighbours; and to cite thither Herman and Aldegairus, with the Archbishop of Mayence and his Suffragans, to examine strictly the Pretensions of both Parties. He invites him to come to Rome upon that Affair and others, or at least to send thither some able Person, with the Parties concern'd, that so he might be fully inform'd of all Things.

The Letters of Fulcus to Formosus.

The Pope being dead before this Affair was adjusted, Fulcus wrote about it to his Successor Formosus, praying that he would continue him in the same Commission. He thank'd him at the same Time for the Complements he had sent him by the Abbess Bertha; and asks his Advice, what ought to be done against one who had a mind to seize on the Estate which his Brother-in-Law Count Everard, had bequeath'd to a Monastery, which he had built in Honour of St. Calixtus, whose Body he had brought from Rome. He withal declares to him, that he was very sorry to hear that there were some Persons, who gave Disturbance to the Church of Rome, and he was ready to stand in its Defence. In the Conclusion he gives them to understand, that several Bishops of France requir'd the Pall, which they ought by no Means to have, since it would cause them to despise their Metropolitans; and that he ought to take special Care about it, because this Abuse might be the Cause of a great deal of Trouble in the Church of France.

The Letter of Formosus to Fulcus.

Pope Formosus return'd him this Answer, that he was oblig'd to him for the Concern he shew'd at the unhappy State of the Church of Rome: That the Eastern Churches were likewise disturb'd by ancient Heresies and new Schisms: That the Bishops of Africa had sent their Deputies to Rome, for the adjusting and making up a Schism, which was then on Foot between the Bishops of that Country; and that there were several other Deputies at Rome, from divers Parts, who requir'd Answers upon several distinct Subjects: That he had resolv'd to hold a Synod the first of March, to which he invited him. He had already invited him to another Synod by a former Letter, whereby he confirm'd the Privileges granted to the Church of Rheims, and prohibited any Seizure to be made of the Revenues which belong'd to it. By the same Letter he likewise acquainted him of the Coronation of Guy perform'd by him that same Year.

Of the Churches of France.

By another Letter the Year ensuing, he confirm'd the Donations granted to the Church of Rheims, and gave Fulcus to understand, that he had crown'd Lambert the Son of Guy Emperor. He likewise reprimands several Laicks who would not be subject to their Archbishop.

Formosus wrote likewise several Letters in Favour of Charles the Simple, against Eudes. He sent for Fulcus to Rome upon that Subject, desiring all Acts of Hostility might cease, till his Return. Fulcus excus'd himself from his Journey, and tells the Pope that he ought to write to Arnulphus King of Germany, requiring him to assist Charles, and to threaten Eudes with Excommunication if he continued to ravage France. The Pope wrote to each of them; but it could not hinder Eudes from carrying on his Design: And Arnulphus was so far from favouring Charles, that he entred the Kingdom, laid Siege to the City of Rheims; ravag'd the Country, and particularly rifled the Revenues which belong'd to the Church. Fulcus made his Complaint of this to the Pope. A while after he likewise wrote another Letter to him, wherein he takes Notice, that it was expedient, that Lambert should enter into an Alliance with King Charles, and that the Pope should write to Eudes to inform him, that it was highly reasonable, that Charles should enjoy part of his Father's Dominions. At the same Time he advises him, about three Persons who lay under perpetual Excommunication, because of the ill Usage they shew'd to Teutboldus Bishop of Langres, and to Gautier Archbishop of Sens; viz. whether he might admit them to Penance: And about Heriland Bishop of Teroüane, turn'd out of his Diocess by the Normans; whether he might give him another Bishoprick, and place in his Stead a Person more agreeable to the People of the Place, and who would speak the Language of the Country. The Pope return'd him this Answer, That he was oblig'd to him for what he wrote with Relation to Lambert; that the three Persons he spoke of, had been condemn'd to a perpetual Excommunication, for having put out the Eyes of Teutboldus, and for having cast Gautier into Prison, and that they ought still to lye under that Sentence.

The Letter of Formosus to Fulcus.

The last Letter which Pope Formosus wrote to Fulcus, related to Berchairus, whom the Laity and Clergy of Chalons had elected their Bishop by the Consent of King Eudes. He complains of the unwillingness of Fulcus to consecrate him; and that after the Decease of the late Bishop, he had by way of Prevention, caus'd this Bishoprick to be govern'd by Heriland Bishop of Teroüane, who had been turn'd out of his own Diocess; that afterwards he had ordain'd Mancion, a Man of a profligate Life; and that Berchairus intending to go to Rome, had been arrested by Conrad the Creature of Fulcus, and sent into Banishment. For this he cites the Archbishop to Rome, with Mancion, Conrad, and several other Bishops.

The Letter of Fulcus to Stephen VI.

Fulcus return'd no Reply to Formosus, but wrote a Letter of Compliment to Stephen VI. his Successor. However this did not prevent that Pope from citing him to a Synod, to be holden the latter End of September. He excus'd his going thither, and sent several of his Clergy in his Room. He gave the Pope to understand, that he wonder'd at the hard Expressions of his Letter; and the more, because he had been always very submissive to the Holy See, and had received nothing from it but Kindnesses and Civilities. He imputes this Harshness of the Pope to the false Reports he had receiv'd of him. To justifie himself, he shews how he had been educated from his Childhood, in all that an Ecclesiastick ought to know: How afterwards he was call'd to Court by King Charles the Son of Lewis, and continued in it till the Reign of Charlemagne; that he had been elected Archbishop of Rheims by the Bishops of the Province, and by the Clergy and Laity of that City; and how industrious he had been in promoting the Interest of that Church. Lastly he adds, that if King Eudes would give him Leave, he would go to Rome when the Way was open, for he was then enclosed by Zuentibold the Son of Arnulphus, who had basely us'd and rifled his Church. In fine, he pray'd the Pope to free him from that Tyranny, and not to oblige him to relinquish his Church, at a Time wherein his Presence was so necessary. These are all the Letters of Fulcus to the Popes, and of the Popes to that Archbishop, of which Flodoard gives us an Extract, in the four first Chapters of the fourth Book of his History.

In his fifth Chapter the same Author mentions the Letters of this Archbishop, directed to the Kings and Princes.

The Letters of Fulcus to the Kings and Princes.

The first is to Charles the Gross, the Son of Lewis of Germany, after the Death of Charles the Bald, wherein he pray'd him to protect France against the Normans, who had ravaged the Country, and laid Siege to the principal Towns thereof.

In a second Letter to the same Emperor, he intreats that he would procure the Pall for him from the Pope, and the Confirmation of the Privileges granted to the Church of Rheims.

Of the Churches of France.

The third is directed to Arnulphus King of Germany, wherein he gives him the Reaſon why he had anointed Charles the Simple King. He gives him to underſtand, that upon the Death of Charles the Bald, the French immediately made their Application to him, to be accepted under his Protection: But that having received no Protection nor Countenance from him, they were obliged to chooſe Charles for their King, who was the only Man next him of the Royal Blood, and whoſe Brothers and Predeceſſors had been Kings: That the Reaſon why they did not chooſe him ſooner was, becauſe being too young he was not capable of governing the Kingdom, eſpecially at a Time when the Normans were ready to riſle and pillage the whole Kingdom; and that they had done it at laſt without conſulting Arnulphus in the Caſe, according to the Cuſtom of France, which always was, when one King was dead, to put up in his Place one of the Royal Family, without conſulting any Foreign Power. He likewiſe anſwer'd that which they accus'd him of, viz. That he had never crown'd Charles the Simple, but that he might with the more Eaſe beſtow the Kingdom on Guy; and makes it appear, that it was only a Calumny invented by his Enemies. And whereas ſome were pleaſed to raiſe a Report, that Charles was not the Son of Lewis the Liſper; he ſays, that the very ſight of him would be a ſufficient Evidence to convince them of the contrary; becauſe any one might eaſily diſcern in him, the very Air and Features of his Father. Laſtly, he intreats Arnulphus to do Juſtice to this innocent King, and his own Kinſman: To conſider that the Kingdom of France had always been an Hereditary Kingdom; and to believe that the French had no other Deſign, than that Charles ſhould be led by his Counſels, and bound to him in a firm Bond of Amity and Alliance.

In the fourth Letter which is likewiſe directed to Arnulphus, he aſſures him of the Fidelity wherewith King Charles and himſelf had obſerved the Treaties made with that Prince. He informs him, that this King being minded to attack Eudes, had writ to Guy and the Pope, to engage them on his ſide.

The fifth was written to King Eudes. He intreats him to grant the Church of Laon Liberty to chooſe a Biſhop, in the Room of Didon lately deceas'd.

The ſixth was directed to Charles, whom he very ſharply reproves for his Intention of making a League with the Normans, and of making uſe of them to reinſtate him in his Kingdom. He remonſtrates to him, that it was a Piece of Idolatry, thus to enter into the Alliance and Intereſt of Pagans: That the Kings his Predeceſſors were Servants of the true God; and that he had renounced him, by joyning with Infidels; that this was not the way to re-aſcend the Throne of his Anceſtors, but rather to looſe it, by pulling on his Head the Wrath of an angry God: That thoſe who gave him this Advice were his Enemies, and that if he followed it, he knew not how to continue loyal to him, nor how to prevent himſelf from drawing off as many as he could from obeying him, but that he muſt be forced to excommunicate him, and condemn him with a perpetual Anathema. He adds, that he wrote theſe Things with extreme Grief and Concern, becauſe it was his Deſire, that he might be had in Honour both with GOD and Man, and that he might regain his Throne by the Help of the Lord, and not by the Aſſiſtance of the Devil; becauſe the Kingdoms which God beſtows are firm and laſting; whereas thoſe which are acquir'd by Injuſtice and Rapine are uncertain, and of a ſhort ſtanding.

The ſeventh was directed to the Emperor Lambert, whom he congratulated upon the Pope's Declaration, that he would look upon him as his own Son. He exhorts him always to bear a due Reſpect and Honour to the Holy See, becauſe that was the only Way of ſecuring himſelf an Intereſt in Heaven, and of obtaining a Superiority over all his Enemies. He wiſh'd him to remember that his Uncle Lambert, who had been an Enemy to the Holy See, periſh'd miſerably; and he intreated him to intercede with the Pope for their Kinſman Rampon, who had been excommunicated.

The eighth was dedicated to Albrade, or Alfrede, the King of Great Britain, whom he congratulates for the Choice he made of a worthy Perſon to fill the See of Canterbury; becauſe he heard that his Country they advanced ſuch a Sort of Men, as permitted the Biſhops and Prieſts to have Women among them, and the Laicks to marry their Kindred, as well as thoſe Virgins who were dedicated to God's Service; and to have a Wife and a Concubine at the ſame Time.

The ninth was directed to Richilda, a Queen or Empreſs, whom he inform'd of the ill Reports which went about of her Conduct, and exhorts her to lead a Life more conformable to Chriſtianity, and to her State of Widowhood, which ſhe had devoted to God.

The Letters of Fulcus to the Biſhops.

In the ſixth Chapter Flodoard makes mention of the Letters which Fulcus ſent to ſeveral Biſhops.

In the firſt directed to Frotharius, Archbiſhop of Bordeaux, he deſires that Archbiſhop to preſerve the Revenues of the Church of Rheims, which were in his Dioceſs, and to excommunicate ſuch as ſhould ſeize on them.

The ſecond is directed to Roſtaing, Archbiſhop of Arles, on the ſame Subject.

Of the Churches of France.

In the third directed to Herman, Archbiſhop of Cologn, he declares that he had a great Deſire to hold a Conference with him, and the Biſhops of his Province, but that he was prevented by the Incurſions of the Normans: And he prays him to do him Juſtice with Relation to ſome of the Revenues belonging to his Church, of which ſeveral Perſons had made a Schiſm; the Cognizance of this Affair having been referr'd to Wilbert his Predeceſſor, and now laid before him.

The fourth written to the ſame Perſon, relates likewiſe to the Intereſt of the Church of Rheims, for ſome Revenues which were embezelled from it.

The fifth is directed to Gontier, Archbiſhop of Sens, about the Buſineſs of the Abbeſs Hildegarda. He intreats this Archbiſhop not to be ſo falſe as he has been, to the Aſſignments made upon this Account, and to do Right to that Abbeſs.

In the ſixth he congratulates Pleonicus a Biſhop of England, for his endeavouring to root out thoſe Diſorders of which he had made mention in his Letter to Alfrede, and he exhorts him to continue in his Deſign.

The ſeventh was directed to John a Roman Prelate, whom he put in mind of ſome ancient Tokens of Friendſhip, which he had ſhewn to him; and intreats him to aſſure Pope Stephen of his Submiſſion to him, and begs he would ſtand his Friend in that Affair.

The eighth, ninth and tenth were directed to Dodilon, Biſhop of Cambray. By the two firſt he calls him to the Synod, which was to meet about determining the Buſineſs between Hildegarde and Hermingard: And by the laſt, wrote in his own Name, and in the Name of the Biſhops his Suffragans, he enjoyns him to compel Count Baldwin to make due Reſtitutions of the Church Revenues which he had ſeiz'd on, to ſend him the Letter which they wrote to him upon the ſame Subject; and to go and meet with Biſhop Hetilon at Arras.

The eleventh was writ to this Hetilon, upon the Account of Dodilon's having caus'd the Body of St. Calixtus to be taken away; which had been bequeathed by Radulphus to the Church of Rheims whither it was brought.

The twelfth was directed to Didon Biſhop of Laon, whom he reproves for having refuſed the Sacraments of Penance and the Euchariſt, at the Point of Death, to one Walcher, who was executed for High Treaſon; and for denying him Burial, and forbidding any Prayers to be made for him.

In the thirteenth he deſires Peter a Roman Prelate to obtain the Favour of Pope Formoſus, that he might put Heriland, turn'd out of his own Dioceſs of Teroüane, into Poſſeſſion of the Biſhoprick of Chalons, putting him in mind of what had been done in the Caſe of Actardus Biſhop of Nants, who had been tranſlated to Tours.

The fourteenth was directed to Honoratus Biſhop of Beauvais: He complains, that this Biſhop was his open and profeſs'd Enemy; exhorts him to a Reconciliation, and gives him to underſtand, that he was accus'd of Rapines: He takes Notice to him of the Excommunication of one nam'd Aldramus, which the Biſhop of Beauvais had thunder'd out, and which he ſaid that the Archbiſhop of Rheims was bound to put in Execution: As to this Point he tells him, that he was always ready to follow the Advice and Opinion of other Biſhops, but that he knew of no Power which the Church of Beauvais had to command the Church of Rheims; and that this Excommunication was not grounded on a Lawful and Canonical Reaſon, but only becauſe this Man had left the Intereſt of Eudes, and imbraced that of King Charles. He likewiſe ſummoned him to appear at the Ordination of the Biſhops of Senlis and Chalons, and gave him to underſtand that Pope Stephen had order'd him to ſend him to Ravenna.

The fifteenth is a Letter of Compliment to Tentboldus, Biſhop of Langres.

The ſixteenth was directed to Radulphus Succeſſor to Didon Biſhop of Laon, whoſe Promotion to that Dignity he congratulates, and advertis'd him that he had too raſhly excommunicated one of his Dioceſans, hinting withal that he gave him his Advice as a Friend to a Friend, not being willing to make uſe of that Authority and Privilege which the Church of Rheims had from all Antiquity, of ſuccouring all thoſe who made their Application to it, and thought themſelves injur'd by their Biſhops.

We might likewiſe to theſe Letters joyn that of Mancion Biſhop of Chalons, directed to Fulcus, and publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the third Tome of his Collections, wherein he asks the Archbiſhop's Advice, how he ought to behave himſelf with relation to a Prieſt, who was ſolemnly betrothed to a Woman, and would marry her publickly.

The Letters of Fulcus to the Abbots.

In the ſeventh Chapter Flodoard ſpeaks of ſeveral Letters of Fulcus, directed to Abbots, and to Perſons of Note.

The firſt was directed to an Abbot called Stephen, whom he comforts upon his having been depriv'd of a Biſhoprick to which he had been elected.

In

Of the Churches of France.

In the second he reprov'd Baldwin Count of Flanders, for the many Injuries he offer'd to the Churches of his Country: And among others for having caus'd a Priest to be whip'd; for having turn'd out several Parochial Priests out of their Churches, in order to make room for others of his own chooſing; for having unjustly seiz'd upon an Estate which the King had bestow'd on the Church of Noyon; for having seiz'd upon a Monastery, &c. he threaten'd to excommunicate him, in case he did not forthwith make Restitution, and leave off his Cruelties to the Church.

The third is directed to the Clergy and Laiety of Senlis, upon the Election of a Bishop.

The fourth to the Clergy of Laon upon the same Subject.

The fifth to the Monks of Corby, whom he severely reproves for their having cruelly turn'd out their Abbot.

Of the Churches of France.

These are all the Letters of Fulcus, which are mention'd in Flodoard; the very Extracts of which shew us, that this Archbishop wrote with a great deal of Strength and Authority: That he was zealous for the Welfare of the Church, for the Dignity of Bishops, and particularly for the Rights and Prerogatives of the Church of Rheims. He was assassinated by Wincmare and others of Count Baldwin's Creatures, in the Year 900. which Count was incens'd against him for having taken away from him the Abby of St. Wast, and the Castle of Arras.

Harveus Archbishop of Rheims.

Herveus Archbishop of Rheims.

HIS Successor was one Harveus, a young Lord belonging to Court, and Nephew to Count Hughbold. He was ordain'd by the unanimous Consent of all the Bishops of the Province. Immediately after his Ordination he soon render'd himself capable of governing his Dioceſs, and gain'd the Esteem and Love of all the World by his Charity to the Poor, by his sweet Temper, by his good Nature, and by the Zeal he expressed for the Welfare of the Church, and for Ecclesiastical Discipline. He held several Provincial Councils, wherein he discours'd very usefully of Religion, and of the Peace both of Church and State, and of the Conversion of the Normans, who about that Time embrac'd the Christian Faith. It was for their sakes that he sent to Guy Archbishop of Roan, a Letter containing three and twenty Articles, extracted out of the Canons and Letters of the Popes, about the Manner of treating those, who after they had been baptiz'd, had apostatiz'd, and afterwards return'd to the Church. In the Year 909. he held a Council at Trosly (a Village near Soissons) at which assisted the Archbishop of Roan, with the Bishops of Laon, Beauvais, Noyon, Chalons, Soissons, Cambray, Meaux, Senlis, Terouane, and Amiens; in which, after he had discours'd at large of the Miseries under which France groan'd, which he imputed to the Sins both of the Laity and the Clergy, he gave them very fine and large Instructions, grounded on several Passages of the Fathers and Canons of Councils. 1. Concerning the Honour and Respect due to Churches, and to Ecclesiasticks. 2. Concerning the Duty and Allegiance which Bishops and Ecclesiasticks ow'd to their King, and concerning the Duties and Qualifications of a Prince. 3. Concerning the Reformation of those Abuses which were crept into the Monastick Life, and particularly concerning the Abbies which were possess'd by Laicks. It was ordain'd that Abbots should be Religious Persons, well skill'd in the Regular Discipline; and that the Monks and Religious should live according to their Profession and Rule, praying for the Welfare of Kings, for the Peace of the Kingdom, and for the Tranquility of the Church, without concerning themselves with Secular Affairs, without hunting after the Pomps of this World, and without incroaching on the Rights and Privileges of Ecclesiasticks: And that they might have no Excuse for Strangling, the Abbots were enjoyn'd, or at least those who had the Government of Monasteries in their Care, to provide them Necessaries. 4. Against those who either by Violence, or by any other Method, seiz'd on Church Lands, which he look'd upon as Sacrilege. 5. Against those who either abus'd or persecuted the Clergy. 6. Against those who would not pay Tenths, and the other Revenues belonging to the Church. The Duty of Tithes reached not only to the Fruits of the Earth, and to the Breed of Cattle, but likewise to those Things which were the Profits of a Man's Industry and Labour. 7. Concerning the Rapines and Robberies so rife at that Time. He demonstrates the Enormity thereof, and shews the Obligation they lay under of making Restitution, before they could expect Absolution. 8. Against stealing young Women, and against clandestine or unlawful Marriages. 9. Concerning the Prohibitions renew'd so often by the Canons against Priests having Women amongst them. 10 Concerning the Chastity which all Christians were oblig'd to preserve in their Words and Actions. 11. Concerning the Obligation of keeping strictly to the Oaths they took, without being perjur'd. 12. Against quarrelsome Persons who took delight in Law-Suits and vexatious Prosecutions. 13. Against Homicides and Lyars. 14. Against the Abuse which then prevail'd of rifling the Goods of Bishops after their Decease. Upon this he advises that two or three of the neighbouring Bishops, upon the News of the Death of their Brother, should go and perform the last Offices over him. In the Conclusion, he exhorted the Bishops to refute the Errors of Photius. Lastly, He sums up in a few Words what Christians ought to believe and practice, and exhorts them faithfully to discharge their Duties.

The Council of Trosly in 909.

Letters accusto Abbots.

The Council of Trosly in Year 921.

In the Year 921. Herveus held another Council at the same Place, wherein he took off the Excommunication issued out against Count Ertebold, who had seiz'd upon some of the Church Revenues.

This Archbishop assisted Charles the Simple in his Expedition against the Hunns, who ravag'd Lorrain, and was the only Man who continued loyal to that Prince, when he was abandon'd by the French Lords. In the Year 920. he brought him back to Rheims, and adjusted Matters betwixt him and his Lords, and re-establish'd him in his Kingdom. But within a short Time after the Lords revolted again, and being met at Rheims, they elected King Robert, and Herveus was constrain'd to crown him. He did not survive this Coronation but four Days, and dy'd in the Year 922. having presided over the Church of Rheims two and twenty Years lacking four Days.

Herveus Archbishop of Rheims.

Robert caus'd Seulfus to be elected in his room, who was the Archdeacon of that Church. He had been the Disciple of Remy of Auxerre, who had instructed him in the Sciences, both Divine and Profane. He was ordain'd by Abbo Bishop of Soissons, and by the other Bishops of the Province of Rheims. Endes the Brother of Herveus, and a Nephew of that Name, were cited before him, being accus'd of Disloyalty to Robert; and they not justifying themselves, were strip'd of all the Revenues of the Church of Rheims in their Possession, and cast into Prison; the former in the Custody of Hebert Count of Vermandois; and the latter at Paris. In a Provincial Council held in the Year 923. he impos'd a Penance on those who had born Arms in the War between Robert and Charles; and in another Council held in the Year 924. at Trosly, he put an End to the Difference which was between Count Isaac and Stephen Bishop of Cambray; the former paying an hundred Pounds to the latter, for the Wrong he had done to his Church. 'Tis said that Seulfus agreed with Hebert to resign the Archbishoprick to the Son of that Count. However the Case was, Seulfus did not enjoy this Dignity long, being poisn'd in the Year 295. by the Order of Hebert as it is supposed.

Seulfus Archbishop of Rheims.

Presently after his Death that Count came to Rheims, and having called thither Abbo Bishop of Soissons, and Bauvo Bishop of Chalons, he caus'd his Son Hugh, who was not then above five Years old, to be elected by the Clergy and People of Rheims. Afterwards he procured the Confirmation of this Election by King Radulphus, who committed the Temporalities of this Dioceſs to Hebert, till his Son came of Age to take upon himself the Government thereof. The Spiritualities were conferr'd by Pope John X. on Abbo Bishop of Soissons, so that Hebert became absolute Master of that Church, and drove out of it all the Clergy whom he suppos'd to be against his Interests, and among others Flodoard, as he himself informs us.

Hugh Archbish. of Rheims.

The Wars between Hebert and Radulphus.

In the Year 927. King Radulphus and Count Hebert fell out upon the Account of the Earldom of Laon, which Hebert would have had given to his Son Odo, and which the King desir'd to keep for himself. Hebert willing to rely on a Power which might support his Pretensions, had an Interview with Henry King of Germany, and struck up an Alliance with him. He caus'd a Council to be conven'd the same Year at Trosly, notwithstanding the Prohibition of King Radulphus, which consisted of six Bishops of the Province of Rheims: Afterwards he deliver'd Charles the Simple out of Prison, brought him to St. Quintin, and procur'd an Interview between him and Radulphus Duke of Normandy: From whence he brought him to Rheims, and writ to Pope John X. for the restablishing of that Prince. This Attempt oblig'd Radulphus to quit the City of Laon to Hebert, and to adjust Matters with him. Radulphus Duke of the Normans would not restore to Hebert his Son Odo, till he had set Charles at Liberty, and promis'd to obey him. At the same Time Hebert invited to Rheims Odalric Archbishop of Aix, who had been turn'd out of his Church by the Saracens, that he might there discharge his Episcopal Functions; and to reward him, he gave him the Abby of St Timotheus, with the Revenue of a Prebend.

The State of France.

France was then as it were parted between the great Lords, and the Regal Authority was extremly cramp'd. Hugh the White, Count of Paris, and Hebert, were two of the most powerful: Radulphus had the Title of King, and that little of the Regal Authority which remain'd. For Charles was the Sport and Pastime of all three. Assoon as Hebert was reconcil'd to Radulphus, he threw Charles again into Prison; and Radulphus afterwards returning to Rheims, gave him a seeming Sort of Liberty, which he did not long enjoy, dying on the seventh of October, in the Year 929. After his Death Hugh and Hebert fell out, the Umbrage of which Quarrel was, that the latter had given Entertainment to several Vassals belonging to the former, and among others to Herluin Count of Monstreuil. Radulphus sided with his Brother-in-Law Hugh, and there was a warm War between them: But Radulphus having taken the City of Rheims, in the Year 931. caus'd Artaldus, a Monk of St. Remy, to be ordain'd Archbishop of the Place, who the Year after receiv'd the Pall from Pope John XI. This Archbishop held a Council in the Year 934. at Chatteau-Thierry, where he ordain'd Hildegairus Bishop of Beauvais; and in the same Year he ordain'd Fulbert Bishop of Cambray. The Year after he held another Council at Fismes, wherein he excommunicated those who had made an unlawful Seisure on the Revenue of the Church. King Radulphus being dead, Hugh the white recall'd out of England Lewis, Charles the Simple's Son, call'd upon that Account Lewis d'Outremer, and caus'd him to be crown'd at Laon by Artaldus Archbishop of Rheims, who continued in the peaceable Possession of his Archbishoprick for some Time, and ordain'd Bishops in all the Churches of his Province, except Chalons and Amiens. But Hebert would not endure that any other but himself should be in the Possession of so considerable a Post, and thereupon sent several of his Troops to take and rifle the Castles and Villages which belong'd to the Archbishoprick of Rheims. Artaldus for this excommunicated him. King Lewis to make him amends for the Losses he sustain'd, granted him the Earldom of Rheims, and the Privilege of the Mint, and assisted him in taking several Castles which were held out by the Troops of Hebert. Fortune did not long favour Artaldus; for Hugh entring into a new League with Hebert against Lewis d'Outremer, they came with William Duke of Normandy, besieg'd the City of Rheims, became Masters of it at the End of six Days, and caus'd Artaldus to appear in the Church of St. Remy, in the Presence of several Lords and Bishops; and oblig'd him to make a Resignation of his Archbishoprick, and to content himself with the Abbies of St. Bazol and Avenay, into the former of which he retir'd, after he had govern'd the Church of Rheims for the Space of eight Years and seven Months. Hugh the Son of Hebert, was replac'd in Possession thereof, and was ordain'd Priest by Guy Bishop of Soissons, three Months after his Return, and fifteen Years after his first Election. He had spent this Interval of Time at Auxerre, where he had follow'd his Studies under Guy Bishop of that City, who had ordain'd him Deacon; for he had receiv'd his other Orders at Rheims from the Hand of Abbo Bishop of Soissons.

Of the Churches of France.

The Council of Rheims for the deposing Artaldus and ordaining Hugh.

The next Year, namely 941. the two Counts Hebert and Hugh conven'd the Bishops of the Province of Rheims at Soissons, and enter'd into a Consultation of ordaining Hugh, the Son of Hebert Archbishop of Rheims. The Deputies of the Clergy and Laity of Rheims met there, and demanded that he might be ordain'd, asserting that Artaldus had not been elected according to the Canon, but intruded by Force; and that he had given up all the Title he could claim to that Archbishoprick. Upon this Remonstrance, the Bishops resolv'd upon ordaining Hugh, and immediately set out for Rheims for that Purpose. Artaldus was already withdrawn to Lewis d'Outremer: but that Prince having been defeated in the Year 941. near Laon, Artaldus was very lucky in reconciling himself with Hugh the White and Hebert, in recovering into the Possession of his Abbies, and in making a League with Hugh Archbishop of Rheims, who soon after receiv'd the Pall that was sent him by Pope Stephen VIII. Notwithstanding this League, Artaldus return'd to Lewis d'Outremer. In the mean time Hebert dying in 943. Lewis was persuaded by Hugh the White to entertain the Sons of this Count, and also to leave Hugh in Possession of the Archbishoprick of Rheims, upon Condition that they restor'd to Artaldus his Abbies, give him another Bishoprick, and grant that his Kinsmen should retain the Honours they had obtain'd. This Treaty was not long kept; for Hugh the White and Lewis d'Outremer waging against each other, the latter laid Siege twice to the City of Rheims, and the second Time having chas'd away Hugh Archbishop of Rheims, he enter'd the City, and re-establishes Artaldus, who was replac'd in his Seat in the Year 946. by the Archbishops of Treves and Mayence. The Church of Amiens becoming vacant the Year after, Hugh ordain'd Tetbold Archdeacon of Soissons Bishop thereof, which occasion'd a Trial which was brought before an Assembly of Bishops and Lords, held near the River Oise. The Affair was not brought to any Issue at this Place, but put off to November. In the mean time Artaldus was left in Possession of the Archbishoprick of Rheims, and Hugh permitted to stay at Mouzon.

The Council of Verdun.

A Council was call'd and held at Verdun; wherein were Robert Archbishop of Treves, Artaldus Archbishop of Rheims, Odalric Archbishop of Aix, Adalberon Bishop of Metz, Gozelin Bishop of Tulle, Hildebald Bishop of the Upper Rhine, in the Presence of Bruno an Abbot, Brother to King Otho, and of the Abbots Agenold and Odilo. Hugh was cited thither by two Bishops, but would not appear. The Synod adjudg'd the Archbishops of Rheims to belong to Artaldus.

Of the Churches of France.

Another Council was call'd in January following upon the same Subject, and held in the Church of St. Peter, near to Mouzon. They met at the Time appointed, and Hugh made his Appearance. But after he had discours'd with Robert Archbishop of Treves, he withdrew, and only caus'd a Letter to be presented by one of his Clergy, which was brought from Rome, and writ in the Name of Pope Agapetus, wherein it was order'd, that Hugh should be re-establish'd in the Archbishoprick of Rheims. The Bishops having read the Letter, alledg'd that it would not be reasonable to supersede the Execution of the Orders which they had receiv'd from the Holy See, upon the Account of a Letter presented by the Enemy of Artaldus, and after they had read the nineteenth Chapter of the Council of Carthage, concerning the Accuser and the Accused, they adjudg'd Artaldus to have continued in the Communion of the Church, and in Possession of the Archbishoprick of Rheims; and that Hugh, who had been already summon'd before two Synods, without appearing to either, ought to be depriv'd of the Communion and Government of that Church, till such Time as he should clear himself in a General Council. This Sentence they notified to Hugh, who for his Part declar'd, that he would not submit to it. In the mean Time Artaldus having appeal'd to the Authority of the Holy See, Pope Agapetus sent Bishop Marinus his Vicar to King Otho, that he might call a General Synod, to pass a definitive Sentence on this Affair.

The Council of Mouzon.

The Council of Ingelheim in Favour of Artaldus.

It was held at Ingelheim the seventh of June, in the Year 948. Marinus the Pope's Legate was the President thereof, and the Archbishop of Cologne, Mayence, Treves, and Hambourgh his Assistants, with six and twenty Bishops of Germany, without reckoning Artaldus Archbishop of Rheims, upon whose Account the Assembly met. The Kings Otho and Lewis d'Outremer were likewise present. The latter made his Complaints against the Rebellion of Hugh; and afterwards Artaldus presented his Petition to the Popes Legate and the Synod, wherein he gave a Remonstrance of all his Concerns, which was as follows. That after the Death of Herveus, Seulfus who had been put up in his Place, declar'd himself against the Kindred of his Predecessor: And that he might gain his Point, he enter'd into a Confederacy with Count Hebert, who cast them into Prison, where they were confin'd till the Death of King Robert. That Seulfus dying in the third Year of his Pontificate, being poyson'd (as several attested) by Hebert's Creatures, that Count seiz'd on the Church of Rheims, and was in Possession thereof for the Space of six Years by the Permission of King Radulphus. But that afterwards that King being mov'd by the Remonstrances of the Bishops, who complain'd that that Church was left so long without a Pastor, after he had made himself Master of Rheims, had caus'd him to be ordain'd by eighteen Bishops. That he had discharg'd the Episcopal Functions for nine Years together, ordain'd eight Bishops, and a great many Clerks, and crown'd King Lewis and Queen Gerberga. But that Count Hugh being incens'd against him, because he would not join in his Revolt against the King, had sore'd him, after he had taken the City of Rheims, to resign his Archbishoprick, had sent him into the Monastery of St. Bazol, and had put into his Place Hugh, Count Hebert's Son, who had been ordain'd Deacon at Auxerre. That afterwards he call'd a Synod at Soissons, wherein a Proposal was made to him to permit the Ordination of Hugh. That he immediately oppos'd it, and had declar'd them excommunicated who should ordain any other Archbishop of Rheims whilst he was living, and him who should accept of such Ordination. That afterwards, to get out of their Hands, he had desir'd them, that they would let him go to ask Advice of the Queen, and his Friends, what he ought to do, and that they would send some body along with him to know his Answer. They sent with him Bishop Deroldus, to whom, in the Presence of the Queen, he gave this Answer, That he excommunicated the Bishops who should dare to ordain another in his Place; repeating the Protestation he had formerly made of appealing to the Holy See. That without being concern'd at this Denunciation, some of these Bishops went to Rheims to ordain Hugh. That from that Time King Lewis proving unsuccessful, he had been oblig'd to wander from Place to Place like a Vagabond; and that afterwards several of his Friends had brought him by force to the Counts Hugh the White and Hebert, who having him in their Power, constrain'd him to resign the Revenues of his Church, and sent him into the Monastery of St. Bazol. That being inform'd that they design'd to make away with him, he fled to Laon. That since that, King Otho came in to the assistance of King Lewis, had turn'd Hugh out of the Archbishoprick of Rheims, and re-establish'd him therein. That Hugh retir'd to the Castle of Mouzon: that in the Conference held upon the River Chér, where he was present with Hugh, his Affair was there debated before the Bishops then present. That Hugh had there produc'd a Letter writ to the Pope in his Name, wherein he desir'd to be disburg'd from his Archbishoprick, which he had wrongfully and counterfeit. That the Revenues of Hugh having already been that an Affair of that Importance could not be determin'd in that Assembly, because it was not a Synod convocated according to form: they had put it off to November, wherein a Synod was to be held; and that in the mean time it was order'd, that he should have the Government of the Church of Rheims, and Hugh was allow'd to stay at Mouzon. That Hugh came in the Season of Vintage with Count Thibold, to carry off all the Wine round about the City of Rheims. That the Synod had been held at Verdun as appointed, to which Hugh was cited, and he would not make his Appearance, nor to another held afterwards near Mouzon, which had pass'd a Sentence absolutely in his favour. But that Hugh having declar'd that he would not submit to this Sentence, and remaining still at Mouzon, he had sent to Rome by the Ambassadors of King Otho a Petition containing his Complaints; that he expected the Issue of all from the Orders of the Holy See, and the Determination of the Council. This Petition of Artaldus having been read in Latin and in the old Teutonick Language, Segebaldus a Clerk belonging to Hugh enter'd, presented to the Council the Letter which had been brought from Rome, and which had been already produc'd before the Council of Mouzon, and avouch'd that it had been given him by the Legate Marinus then present. It was written in the name of Guy Bishop of Soissons, Hildegaire Bishop of Beauvais, and of all the other Bishops of the Province of Rheims, who desir'd the re-establishment of Hugh, and the Expulsion of Artaldus. When this Letter had been read, the Bishops therein mention'd did declare that it was Counterfeit, and that they had never heard the least mention of any such Thing, nor gave their Consent that such a Request should be made in their Names. Upon this their Declaration this Deacon was depos'd as an Impostor and Calumniator; and in the same Session Artaldus was confirm'd in the Archbishoprick of Rheims. In the second Session Robert Archbishop of Treves alledg'd, that since they had re-establish'd Artaldus as lawful Archbishop of Rheims, it was requisite to condemn the Intruder. Marinus told them the Council ought to pronounce a Sentence agreeable to the Canon; and after the Decrees of the Pope's touching this Subject were read, the Bishops declar'd Hugh to be excommunicated and thrown out of the Church, till such time as he should do Penance for his Fault. In the other Sessions they debated on several Points relating to Church Discipline; and all the Acts of this Council are reduc'd into ten Canons.

Of the Churches of France.

The first contains the Excommunication of Hugh.

The second, the Resettlement of Artaldus, and the Excommunication of those, who were ordain'd by Hugh, unless they should appear before the Synod to be held at Treves, September 13. to make Satisfaction, and to receive Penance for what they had done.

The third inflicts the same Punishment on Count Hugh the White, for having turn'd out Radulphus, Bishop of Laon.

The fourth prohibits the Laity from bestowing Churches on Priests, or from turning them out of them without the Approbation of the Bishop.

The fifth is against those who abuse the Priests, or do them any wrong.

In the sixth, it is order'd that the whole Easter-Week, and the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday after Whitsunday should be kept as Festivals, as well as the Lord's Day.

In the seventh, it is order'd, that in the Grand Litany (which is on St. Mark's day) a Fast shall be kept as in the Rogation-Week before the Ascension.

The eighth imports that the Laicks should have no share of the Offerings which the Faithful offer'd on the Altar.

The ninth, that the Cognizance of all Differences about Tithes should be brought before the Bishops.

The tenth and last Canon is imperfect, and one cannot well comprehend the meaning thereof; There is mention made of Widows dedicated to the Service of God.

The Council of Mouzon.

After this Council Lewis d'Outremer assisted by Conrad Duke of Lorrain, retook Mouzon, Montagne and Laon, and the Bishops being met at Mouzon, excommunicated Count Thibold, and cited Count Hugh the White to appear before the Synod to be held at Treves. In this Assembly, Guy Bishop of Soissons, who had ordain'd Hugh, came to wait upon King Lewis, and to give him Satisfaction.

The Council of Treves.

Artaldus when he departed from Laon went to Treves with Guy Bishop of Soissons, Radulphus Bishop of Laon, and Wichfroy of Terrouane, where they met with Marinus the Pope's Legate, and Robert Archbishop of Treves, who waited for their coming, without whom there would not have been any other Bishops of Germany and Lorrain. Marinus asked Artaldus and the rest of the Bishops, how Hugh the White had behav'd himself since the last Synod, and whether the Letters which cited him before the Synod had been deliver'd to him. They reply'd, that he still persisted in his Rebellion and Robberies; that one of their Letters had been deliver'd to him, and that the other had been intercepted by his Party. Upon his Reply, it was asked whether any one was come on his behalf; and none appearing, the Assembly was adjourn'd till the morrow. On that day there appear'd no Deputy in behalf of Count Hugh; and tho' the Clergy and Nobles cry'd out, that he ought to be excommunicated; yet that was put off to the third day. In the mean time they consulted about the Affair of the Bishops who had been cited before the Synod, or who had any hand in the Ordination of Hugh. The Bishop of Soissons begg'd Pardon and obtain'd it; the Bishop of Terouane was found to have no hand in the Ordination; and the Bishop of Noyon was excus'd by Reason of his Sickness. On the third day Hugh the White was excommunicated till such time as he should come and ask the Legate and the Bishops Pardon for what he had done: And in case he should defer that, he enjoyn'd him to go to Rome for Absolution. There were likewise two Bishops excommunicated who were ordain'd by Hugh, the one of Amiens, the other of Senlis; and a Clerk who had instituted and inducted the Latter. Hildegairus Bishop of Beauvais was cited before Marinus, or to Rome, for assisting at their Ordination: And lastly, the young Count Hebert, Brother to Hugh, was likewise summon'd to make Satisfaction for the wrong he had done the Bishops. All these Things were transacted in the Year 948. and from that Time forward Artaldus remain'd in Possession of the Archbishop of Rheims, which was made sure to him by the Peace concluded between Lewis d'Outremer and Hugh the White in the Year 953. In the same Year this Archbishop held a Council of five Bishops at St. Thierry, wherein he excommunicated Count Reginald, who had seiz'd upon the Revenues of the Church.

The Death of Artaldus.

Artaldus dying the last day of August in the Year 967. after he had been Archbishop of Rheims thirty years, several Bishops propos'd the Re-establishing Hugh. The Affair was debated in a Council held in a Village of the Diocese of Meaux upon the River Marne, consisting of thirteen Bishops of the Provinces of Rheims and Sens. The Bishops of Laon and Chalons very strongly oppos'd his Restitution, and the Case was refer'd to the Arbitration of his Holiness. He gave them to understand by Bruno Archbishop of Cologne, that Hugh had been rejected and excommunicated by the Councils of Rome and Pavia, and that there was no thinking of him again. Whereupon they elected a Clerk of the Church of Rheims call'd Odalric, the Son of a Count nam'd Hugh, who was supported by King Lotharius, by the Queen-Mother, and by Bruno. He enjoy'd the Archbishoprick very peaceably for the space of seven years, and dy'd in the year 968. His Successor was Adalberon or Alberon, Brother of Count Henry, who govern'd the Church of Rheims for nineteen years, with a great deal of Prudence and Candor. Under his Episcopacy a Council was held at Rheims in the year 975. whereof Stephen Deacon of Pope Benedict VII. was President. In this Council Thibold was excommunicated for having unlawfully seiz'd upon the Church of Amiens. In the Year 972. he held another Council at St. Mary's Mount, wherein he procur'd a Ratification of an Order he had made, of putting Monks into the Monastery of St. Mouzon instead of Canons who were there: After the death of this Archbishop, Hugh Capet laid hold on this opportunity of taking into his Interests Arnulphus, the Bastard Brother of Charles Duke of Lorrain, the last of the Carolignian Race. Clerk of the Church of Laon, by procuring him to be elected Archbishop of Rheims in the year 989. who immediately took of him an Oath of Fidelity. But within six Months after his being in possession of the Archbishoprick of Rheims, his Brother Charles was introduc'd into that City, and became Master of it by means of a Priest nam'd Adalger. Which was brought about, as 'tis suppos'd, by the Intelligence he had from the Archbishop, who however was carry'd by his Brother to Laon, and cast into Prison for forms sake. Arnulphus notwithstanding issued out a Sentence of Excommunication against those who had made an unlawful Seizure of the Revenues of the Church of Rheims; and the Bishops of the Province met at Senlis, and passed a Decree against Adalger, whereby they excommunicated him and all others who had any hand in the Usurpation made upon the Churches of Rheims and Laon. This Excommunication was sent to all the Bishops, and Complaints were made to the Holy See, who took part with Arnulphus. But Hugh Capet, who had always suspected his Treachery, having discover'd that his Suspicion was not groundless, and that he was in the Interests of his Brother, wrote against him to Pope John XV. and caused the Bishops of the Province of Rheims to write to him likewise, who accus'd Arnulphus, and desir'd he might be condemn'd. After this Hugh becoming Master of the City of Laon, and having Charles in Custody, he took Arnulphus, and brought him to Rheims, where he call'd a Council to proceed against him. It consisted of six Suffragans of the Archbishoprick of Rheims, viz. Guy Bishop of Soissons, Adalberon of Laon, Herveus of Beauvais, Gotesman of Amiens, Ratbode of Noyon, and Rudes of Senlis; besides them were Hebert Archbishop of Bourges, Siguin Archbishop of Sens, Gautier Bishop of Autun, Bruno of Langres, Odalric, Bishop of Rheims.

Adalberon Archbishop of Rheims.

Arnulphus Archbishop of Rheims.

Of the Churches of France.

The Council of Rheims againſt Arnulphus.

Langres, Milo of Maſcon, Arnulphus Biſhop of Orleans, and Hebert of Auxerre, with ſeveral Abbots of ſeveral Dioceſſes. Sigwin was Preſident thereof, and Arnulphus of Orleans Prolocutor. In the firſt Seſſion held the ſixteenth of June in the Church of Bazol, Arnulphus Archbiſhop of Rheims was accus'd for having betray'd his Truſt to King Hugh, and being the chief Cauſe of the taking that City. Sigwin Archbiſhop of Sens, alledg'd that he would not permit a Proceſs to be made on this Charge, till he was ſure that Arnulphus ſhould not be put to Death in caſe he were convicted of High Treaſon; and moreover cited the thirty firſt Chapter of the Council of Toledo, which imports that Biſhops ſhall not proceed to the Determination of ſuch Matters, till they had engag'd the Princes upon Oath to remit the Puniſhment of the Offenders. Herveus ſhew'd that it would be of worſe conſequence if the Prince ſhould take cognizance of the Caſe, and deprive the Biſhops of the right of doing it. Bruno declar'd that he was moſt concern'd in this Affair; that upon the account of his being a Retainer to the King Lotharius's Uncle, he had engag'd himſelf for the Fidelity of Arnulphus, that he might be made Archbiſhop of Rheims, in hopes that he would not let him ſuffer any prejudice for this Act of Kindneſs: That Arnulphus was ſo far from making his due acknowledgments, that he had begun to perſecute his Friends, and had put him in danger of his Life: That he had to no purpoſe warranted that he would not break the Oath of Fidelity which he had taken to King Hugh; that there was ſufficient Evidence of his Treachery, becauſe the Authors of that Rebellion were his moſt intimate Friends, and ſuch as he eſteem'd very highly. As to that which was alledg'd, that care ought to be taken that the Offender ſhould not looſe his Life; he anſwer'd, that there was no need to fear any ſuch thing under Princes ſo merciful as theirs were; but that it was more to be fear'd, whilſt they endeavour'd after the Safety of one Man, that the whole Eccleſiaſtical Order would be expos'd to danger. At laſt it was concluded, that the Prieſt who had deliver'd up the Gates of the City to Duke Charles, ſhould be brought in. Whilſt they ſtaid for his coming, they read over the Oath of Fidelity which Arnulphus had taken to King Hugh and King Robert. Afterwards the Prieſt nam'd Adalger appearing, declar'd that it was Arnulphus who gave him the Keys of the City Gates, with orders to deliver them up to Duke Charles. After this Evidence was given, they read the Decree which Arnulphus had made againſt thoſe who made an unlawful Seizure of the Revenue of the Church of Rheims, which prov'd that himſelf was excommunicated becauſe he was the Author of that Depredation, and went ſhares with thoſe who committed it. To this was joyn'd the Sentence of the Biſhops of the Province of Rheims, paſs'd at Senlis much about the time wherein they began to ſuſpect Arnulphus of Treaſon. After the reading of theſe Papers and the Canons of the Council of Carthage againſt Perſons excommunicated who partake of the Sacrament, and againſt Biſhops who do any thing contrary to the Oath which they have taken in their Ordination, leave was given to all who were minded to vindicate Arnulphus, to ſay freely what they could in his behalf. The Clergy of his own Church would neither accuſe nor defend him: But John Scholaſticus of Auxerre, Ranulphus Abbot of Sens, and Abbo Superior of the Monaſtery of Fleury, undertook to defend him, and produc'd a great many Paſſages extracted out of the falſe Decretals of the Ancient Popes, to prove that Arnulphus ought to be reeſtabliſh'd before they proceeded to judge him; and that they might not judge him till he had been cited ſeveral times, and the Holy See made acquainted with the Buſineſs. It was anſwer'd them that he had ſufficient Notice given him; That they ought not to re-eſtabliſh him till he had receiv'd ſuch a Sentence as declar'd him abſolv'd, ſince he had been already condemn'd; That Hildemare Biſhop of Beauvais, and Abbo Archbiſhop of Rheims charg'd with the ſame Crime as Arnulphus was, had been judg'd by the Synods of the Province; That the Holy See had been already inform'd of this Affair by the Letters of King Hugh, and of the Biſhops of the Province of Rheims, which had been carry'd to Rome by Deputies, which the Pope at firſt had pretty well entertain'd: But that ſince Count Hebert had preſented his Holineſs with a fine white Steed and ſeveral other things, he deny'd to give them any further Audience. The Deputies which Biſhop Bruno had ſent to Rome for his Releaſment, added, that having requeſted the Pope to Anathematize thoſe who were guilty of his Confinement, the Clerks of the Pope had demanded Money of them for it; and that they not being willing to give them any on that account, the Pope had told them as his final Anſwer, that the Perſon for whom he had been apprehended might releaſe him, if he thought fit: From whence they concluded, that the Holy See did not hinder them from proceeding upon the Spot to the Judgment and Determination of that Affair. But they carried the Point higher yet, and Arnulphus Biſhop of Orleans remonſtrated, that they might go on in the Trial, without waiting for what Rome ſhould ſay in the Caſe. And after he had made Proteſtation that all due Reſpect ought to be paid to the Holy See and its Deciſions, without offering prejudice to the Canons of the Councils; he gave them to underſtand that there are two things of which great care ought to be taken, which were not to permit that the Silence, or the new Laws or Inſtitutions of the Popes, be any prejudice to the Ancient Laws of the Church: Becauſe this would be to overthrow all order, and to make every thing depend on the Will and Pleaſure of one ſingle Man. That this did not derogate any thing of the Privileges of the Pontifex Maximus; becauſe if the Biſhop of Rome were a Man of Worth for his Learning and his Piety, there was no fear of his Silence, or of his Altering the Conſtitutions of the Church. That if on the contrary, either out of Ignorance, or Fear, or Paſſion, he ſhould ſwerve from Juſtice, his Silence and his new Decrees were the leſs to be fear'd; becauſe he who acts contrary to the Laws, cannot prejudice the Laws. From thence he took an occaſion to lament the ſad Eſtate of the Church of Rome, and gave a brief account of the Popes from Octavian to Boniface, and ſhew'd his abhorrence of their Irregularities. He asked whether Biſhops, noted for their Sanctity and Piety, were oblig'd to ſubmit themſelves blindly to ſuch Infamous Monſters, who had no Learning, neither Divine nor Prophane. He complain'd that they ſhould advance to the higheſt Poſt of the Church the meer Scum and Refuſe of the Clergy; Paſtors who more deſerv'd the name of Walking Statues, than of Reaſonable Men. Upon default of excellent Popes, he was for conſulting Metropolitans; and took notice that there were a great many ſuch in Gallia, Belgica, and in Germany, very well skill'd in Matters of Religion; and that it was more proper to ask their Opinion, if the War which happens between Princes did not hinder it, than to go to ſeek it in that City, which at preſent declares in favour of him who gives moſt, and weighs its Judgments by the Number of Crowns which are preſented. He adds, that if any one ſhould alledge with Pope Gelaſius, that the Church of Rome is the Judge of all Churches, and can be judg'd by none, this is a Propoſition which the African Biſhops would not conſent to, and which could not be true at this time, wherein there was ſcarce one at Rome who had ſo much as ſtudied Humane Learning, if common Fame were to be credited therein. That Ignorance was more excuſable in other Biſhops than in the Biſhop of Rome, who ought to be Judge of the Faith, of the Life, of the Manners, and of the Diſcipline of the whole Church. That according to St. Gregory's Opinion, the Biſhops, when in fault, are Subject to the Correction of the Holy See; but when they are unblameable, Humility in one Senſe renders them all Equal. Laſtly, that when the Biſhops of Rome of this time were like to Damaſus, nothing could be done more than had been done, ſince the Biſhops and the King had writ concerning this very Buſineſs to the Holy See, and they had not undertaken to decide it in the Province, till ſuch time as they had no hopes of having it try'd at Rome, which was conformable to the Canons of the Council of Sardica. He quoted ſeveral Paſſages out of St. Gregory, to ſhew that Biſhops are oblig'd to puniſh Offences, and that they may depoſe Biſhops who are convicted thereof. He added, that tho' one might paſs by other Crimes in ſilence, one could not do ſo in the Caſe of High-Treaſon: Yet that there have been Inſtances of Archbiſhops of Rheims, condemn'd by the Biſhops of the Province for this very Crime; namely Gilles Archbiſhop of Rheims, who prov'd diſloyal to Childebert and Ebbo, and was depos'd at Thionville: That the Decree of Damaſus, which imports that the Cauſes of Biſhops ſhall be try'd at Rome, ought to be extended to none but difficult Cauſes, and not to ſuch wherein the Crime is ſelf-evident: That the African Biſhops have conteſted the very Right of Appellation, and that the Councils of Nice and Antioch appointed the Synod of the Province to determine theſe Matters: That he would very readily grant the Church of Rome more than ever the African Biſhops pretended to allow it: That they conſulted it when the Affairs of the State permitted it, and they ſubmitted to its Determinations, unleſs they were contrary to Equity: But if it remain'd ſilent, the Eccleſiaſtical Laws ought to be conſulted, and the rather becauſe the Church of Rome at preſent was deſtitute of all manner of Supports and Supplies; for ſince the Fall of the Empire it has loſt the Churches of Alexandria and Antioch, as well as thoſe of Africa and Aſia, and all Europe began to fly off from it: That the Churches of Conſtantinople was withdrawn from its Obedience: That the Churches of Spain, which were moſt remote, did not acknowledge its Determinations; and that Rome had abandon'd it ſelf, ſince it no longer gave any wholeſome Advice to it ſelf, or others. He concludes, that according to the Examples and Canons of former times, they ought to proceed to the Trial of the Archbiſhop of Rheims.

Of the Churches of France.

[From all this Learned and Judicious Speech of the Biſhop of Orleans, it cannot but be obſerv'd, that even in theſe dark times, wherein Rome might with eaſe have impoſed on the blind and ignorant World, there were ſome ſo wiſe, and ſo honeſt as not to think its Biſhop (eſpecially if a wicked and ignorant one) to be the Infal-

Upon

Of the Churches of France.

lible Judges of all Controversies. Now whether this honest proceeding of the Council of Rheims in judging Arnulphus, were in a time when they professed to pay all due deference to the Holy See; and whether the Practice of the Modern Gallican Churches in this Age, be not a sufficient Evidence to prove how little they (even of the Romish Communion) believe the Doctrine of the Pope's Infallibility (unless as far as they gain by it) I leave the fair and impartial Reader of both Parties to judge.]

Upon this the Synod came to a Resolution; the Defendant was called in, who took his place among the Bishops. The Bishop of Orleans upbraided him with the Favours he had received from the King, which he had return'd with Treachery. The Defendant alledg'd, that he had done nothing against the King; that he was always Loyal to him; that he had been taken by force in his City by the Enemy, the King not coming to his Assistance. The Bishop of Orleans oppos'd to him the Testimony of Adalger the Priest, who said he had deliver'd up the Gates of the City by his order. The Defendant reply'd, that the thing was false: The Priest maintain'd to his Face that his Evidence was true. Arnulphus of Rheims complain'd of the ill usage he had met with; the Bishop of Soissons ask'd him why he did not appear when he was cited by the King and Bishops; and upon the Answer he made, that he could not, being then retain'd in Custody; that Bishop reply'd, that he had offer'd to conduct him, and alledg'd several Circumstances to prove that he had behav'd himself very deceitfully. Afterwards another Witness was produc'd, who told him that he had said to him that he preferr'd Prince Charles to all the World; and if he had any kindness for him, he ought to endeavour to serve him. Whereas several Abbots declared that Arnulphus ought to be permitted to withdraw, and to ask advice what Answer to make, it was granted him; and he withdrew into a corner of the Chamber with the Archbishop of Sens, and the Bishop of Orleans, Laugres, and Amiens. Whilst they consulted together, they read in the Synod the Canons of the Councils of Toledo against those who prov'd disloyal to their Prince. In the mean time Arnulphus acknowledg'd and confess'd his Crime before the Bishops who were retir'd aside with him, who called others to be present at his Declaration. He made it before them, and thirty Abbots or Clerks, which were call'd to be Witnesses. This Acknowledgment took off the Objection which might arise upon the Account of the Holy See; because Arnulphus having not appeal'd to it, chose his Judges, and acknowledg'd his Faults, there was no difficulty remaining; so that they might condemn him without incroaching upon the Rights of the Holy See. But to be inform'd what Ceremony they should use in his Deposition, several Canons were consulted, and a great many Instances were produc'd, which took up the remaining part of this Session.

The next day the Bishops meeting in the same place, after they had debated several Affairs both Ecclesiastical and Civil, resum'd that of the Archbishop of Rheims: and as they were debating after what manner he ought to be treated, King Hugh, and King Robert entred with the Lords, and then thank'd the Bishops for the Zeal they had express'd for them, and ask'd them how the Case stood. The Bishop of Orleans return'd them this Answer, that there was no need of returning them Thanks for doing what was only their Duty: That they had not acted therein out of any Motive of Love to them, or of hatred to Arnulphus: They could heartily wish that he were able to clear himself; but that at last, after many Evasions, he had acknowledg'd his Crime, and consented to be degraded from his Priesthood, in the presence of several Abbots, and several Clerks who were Witnesses of that Declaration: That he thought it proper to have him there before him, that the King himself might be both Witness and Judge, and that by this means his Accusers, the Witnesses which had given in Evidence against him, and the Judges might be discharg'd. He was forthwith introduc'd, and the Bishop of Orleans having ask'd him, whether he were still of the same Mind, he reply'd, that he was. The Bishop ask'd him, whether he were willing to be deprived of the Sacerdotal Dignity, which he had hitherto abus'd: He reply'd, as you please for that. Count Brochard catching at that word, said, that he did not explain himself enough, and that he ought to acknowledge his Fault Publickly, that so he might not afterwards say, that the Bishops had impos'd upon him therein, and that he had not made any Acknowledgment of that Nature. He reply'd, That he had openly confess'd his Faults, and acknowledg'd that he had swerv'd from that Allegiance which he ow'd to his Prince: That he desired that they would credit what the Bishop of Orleans should say of him, and that he intreated him to make as fair a Report of his Case as he could. Thereupon this Bishop said, that Arnulphus of Rheims being naturally modest in speaking, and asham'd to acknowledge in publick, what he had confess'd to them in private, it was enough that he should acknowledge in general that he had not kept the Oath of Allegiance which he ow'd to his Prince. Count Brochard insisted that he ought to declare it publickly; but the Bishop of Orleans silenc'd him by saying, that the Bishops were the only Persons who could extort a Confession of that Nature; and that it was sufficient that the Archbishop of Rheims had made his Confession to them in private, and declar'd himself unworthy of the Priesthood because of his Sins, as he had done by a Writing which was read, wherein he declar'd, that he had confess'd himself to Sigwin Archbishop of Sens, and to other Bishops, and had appointed them the Judges of his Offences, that he might receive from them such Penance as he deserv'd, and be remov'd from the Sacerdotal Dignity; and consented that another Archbishop should be put in his place, without pretending ever to return, contrary to this Declaration. Afterwards Adalger the Priest confess'd his Fault. He was ask'd, whether he had rather be degraded, or lye under a perpetual Excommunication. He preferr'd Degradation, which was perform'd with the usual Ceremony; for he was strip'd of all his Clerical Habits from his Priesthood to his Sub-deaconship; and each time he was order'd to forbear performing the Offices of the Order, and of the Habit he was strip'd of: After this he was enjoyn'd Penance, and receiv'd Absolution with leave to Communicate as a Laick. Lastly, They issued forth an Anathema against the other Rebels, who did not appear to make Satisfaction; and Arnulphus was sent Prisoner to Orleans.

Of the Churches of France.

Arnulphus being thus depos'd and depriv'd of the Archbishoprick of Rheims, the Bishops elected in his place one Gerbert or Gelbert. He came of a considerable Family of Auvergne; and applying himself to Study, he became a great Proficient in the Sciences and Philosophy. He was brought up in the Monastery of Aurillac, where he liv'd a Monastick Life; and from thence he went into Spain, where he learn'd the Mathematicks. He was afterwards Schoolmaster of the Church of Rheims, where Prince Robert, Son of Hugh Capet, Leoteric Archbishop of Sens, and Fulbert Bishop of Chartres were his Scholars; and he had afterwards the Honour of being Tutor to Otho III. Immediately after his Election he made a Profession of his Faith, and thereupon was Ordain'd, and Instituted and Inducted into the Archbishoprick of Rheims. In the Year 998. he held a Council, wherein he excommunicated Count Hebert and other Usurpers, who had unlawfully seiz'd upon the Revenues of the Church of Rheims. He wrote at the same time to Fulcus Bishop of Amiens, who had appropriated to his own use several Revenues of his Church.

Gerbert Archbishop of Rheims.

King Hugh and the Bishops sent the Decrees of this Council to Pope John XV. by the Archdeacon of Rheims, and pray'd him to approve of their Election of Gerbert. But this Pope being perswaded that Arnulphus could not have been Depos'd without his Authority, very highly resented what the Bishops of France had done. King Hugh wrote him word that they had done nothing in this Affair that might be of any Prejudice to the Holy See; and that if he pleas'd to come to Grenoble, or into France, he would receive him with all the Tokens imaginable of Submission and Respect; and that if he pleas'd, they should try this Matter over again in his Presence. The Pope sent into France Abbot Leo, with orders to call a Council, and in the mean time forbad the Bishops who had assisted at the Council of Rheims to be there. Gerbert foreseeing the Storm that was coming on him, wrote to an Abbot, and Archbishop Sigwin, and endeavour'd to fortifie the latter, against the fearful apprehensions he had of the Thunderbolts of Rome, by telling him, that the Judgment of the Pope was not Superior to God's Decree: That if he (meaning the Pope) should fall into Error, he might be reprov'd: That he could not exclude Bishops from the Communion of Jesus Christ, for being unwilling to consent to a thing which they thought contrary to the Gospel: That they had no Power to debar him of the Communion, neither as a Guilty Person, since he was Innocent, nor as a Rebel, since he had not refus'd to go to any Council: That this Sentence, being unjust, ought not to be look'd upon as proceeding from the Holy See, according to St. Leo's Maxim. That the Rules whereby the Catholick Church ought to be regulated are the Gospel, the Apostles, the Prophets, the Canons made by the Spirit of God, and consecrated by that respect which all the World paid them, and the Decrees of the Holy Apostolical See which were conformable thereto. That those who out of Contempt swerv'd from these Rules, ought to be judg'd and condemn'd by these Rules: But that whoever observes and follows them, ought to enjoy perpetual Peace, without ever being separated from the Communion of the Church. In conclusion he declar'd to Sigwin, that he ought not to suspend the performing of his Functions because of the Prohibition of Rome, and that he ought to despise this irregular Judgment, for fear that whilst he endeavour'd to appear Innocent, he should declare himself Guilty.

The Council of Mouzon.

In the mean time the Pope by his Legate very warmly prais'd for the re-establishment of Arnulphus, and after he had appointed Councils to be held for this purpose at Aix-la-Chapelle, and at Rome, to which the Bishops of France would would not go, he order'd one to be held at Monzon the second of June, in the Year 995. in which assisted Lwitolfe Archbishop of Treves, Aimon Bishop of Verdun, and Notger of Liege, with Sigefroy Bishop of Munster. Leo Legate of Pope John XV. presented to them a Letter of that Pope, and after it had been read, Gerbert made an eloquent Speech in his own Defence, wherein after he had shewn the Reasonableness of his Conduct, he declar'd that he had not taken the Church of Rheims from its lawful Possessor; but that Arnulphus, who was unworthy thereof, having condemn'd himself, he had been elected and ordain'd Canonically in his place. He gave this Speech in writing to the Legate, who handed to him the Pope's Letter. After this the Council broke up, having first appointed to meet at Rheims the first of July, and deputed John a Monk of the Abbot Leo the Pope's Legate, to go to King Hugh. But as Gerbert was going away, Leo order'd two Bishops to remonstrate to him, that he ought to abstain from celebrating Divine Service, till the Convention of the Synod. After he had declar'd that their Denunciation signified nothing, he went himself to wait upon Leo, and told him that it was not in the Power of any Bishop, nor of any Patriarch, nor of the Pope himself to exclude any of the Faithful from the Communion of the Church, till such time as he had been either convicted of any Crime, or had acknowledg'd himself to be Criminal, or had refus'd to appear before a Synod, being cited thereto according to the Canon: That neither of these being his Case, he could not tell how to condemn himself. However Lwitolfe Archbishop of Treves, having calmly, and like a Brother, admonish'd him not to give any occasion of Scandal, he prevail'd upon him so far, that for peace and quietness sake, he would only abstain from celebrating Mass till the first of July next, which was the time appointed for the Synod at Rheims. The Queen Adelaid wrote to Gerbert, ordering him to appear at that Synod; threatning him that if he did not, such Measures should be taken as should be thought most proper. Gerbert understanding that they would Absolve Arnulphus, and re-establish him, and all to gratifie Leo, who had promis'd that the Pope should confirm the late Marriage of King Robert; and being inform'd that his Clergy and Laity had declar'd against him, return'd this Answer to that Princess, That he would not be there; and declar'd that he would patiently attend the Determination of the Synod: That having receiv'd the Government of the Church of Rheims at the hands of the Bishops, he was not willing to quit it till the Bishops had so order'd it: But that he was not in any manner capable of opposing the Sentence which should be pass'd upon him, or of retaining his Diocess by force: That in attending the Judgment of the Synod, he suffer'd with grief an Exile, which many believe to be very happy for him.

Of the Churches of France.

Of the Churches of France.

The Synod of Rheims against Gerbert. The re-establishment of Arnulphus in the Archbishoprick of Rheims.

The Synod appointed at Rheims was held there accordingly; of which we have not any Acts or Decrees. All that we can learn of it is, that they therein resolv'd to re-establish Arnulphus, and to turn out Gerbert. The latter, according to the Resolution he had taken, obey'd, and retir'd to Otho III. who soon after gave him the Archbishoprick of Ravenna, from whence he ascended the Papal Chair in the Year 999. As to Arnulphus (whatever some Authors may say) he was not set at liberty, and re-establish'd till three Years after, at the instance of Pope Gregory V. John the fifteenth's Successor. His re-establishment was likewise afterwards confirm'd by Gerbert himself when he was advanc'd to the Popedom. For that Pope very generously forgetting all that was past, sent him word, that as it was the Duty of the Holy Apostolical See to raise up those who were faln, and to restore to them the Dignity of which they had been depriv'd; so he thought it convenient to succour him, even him who had been turn'd out of the Archbishoprick of Rheims for some default: Because since his Deposition had not been ratified by the Pope, it was believ'd that he might be re-establish'd by the Clemency of the Holy See, St. Peter having such a Soveraign Authority as no other could stand in competition with. That therefore by restoring to him the Pastoral Rod and Ring, he grants him a power of performing all his Archi-Episcopal Functions; to retain the Dignity thereof; to enjoy all the Revenues belonging to the Church of Rheims; and to wear the Pall. That he prohibits all manner of Persons from upbraiding him with his Deposition; being willing that the Apostolical Authority should protect him, tho' his Conscience condemn him: That lastly, he confirms and grants to him de novo, the Archbishoprick of Rheims with all that belong'd to it. This is the Language of Gerbert when advanc'd to the Papal Chair; which seems to be in a different strain from what he formerly us'd.

The Writings of Gerbert.

The Writings of Gerbert.

Gerbert was without Question the most learned Man of his Time, especially in Prophane Learning: For he had to his Study of the Languages and Philosophy joyn'd that of the Mathematicks, wherein he was a great Proficient. He informs us himself that he had compos'd several Tracts of Rhetorick, Arithmetick, and Geometry. He speaks of a Sphere which he had made, and hecompos'd a small Treatise of the manner of its Construction. He invented Clocks, and made one at Magdeburgh, which he regulated according to the Motion of the Polar Star, the which he view'd through a Telescope. They likewise attribute to him a Treatise concerning the Astrolabe, written Dialogue-wise, between him and Leo the Pope's Legate. This Art made him pass for a Magician, and gave rise to the Fable of his being promoted to the Papal Chair by a Contract which he made with the Devil. He had a great Hand in all the Affairs of the State, and especially in those which related to the Church of Rheims; and was in great repute with the Emperors, and the Kings of France. He behav'd himself so well in those difficult times, that he fell into disgrace with none. The Archbishop Adalberon, as well as the Princes and Princesses of his time, and several others made use of his Pen to write their Letters. He wrote likewise several Letters in his own name to several Persons about the Affairs of Church and State, or about particular Affairs, or else about some Points of Learning. There is a Collection made of an hundred and sixty of them, which are publish'd from the Manuscript in the Library of Pappyrus Masson, and printed by the Care of his Brother in the Year 1611. at Paris, with the Letters of John of Salisbury, and Stephen of Tournay. They are penn'd in a very pure Style, and such as is truly Epistolar, with a great deal of Beauty and Spirit, but they do not contain much of Ecclesiastical Affairs. He is likewise the Author of the History of the Acts made by the Council of Rheims against Arnulphus, writ with a great deal of Elegance and Energy; which shews that he was no less skill'd in Ecclesiastical, than he was in Profane Learning. His Speech to the Council of Monzon is a farther proof of both; as well as the Speech which he made, when Pope, for the instructing of Bishops, publish'd by Father Mabillon in the second Tome of his Analects. In this last Piece he Remonstrates to the Bishops that the higher their Station and Dignity is, the greater Obligations they lye under of answering the height of their Post by their Sanctity and their Merits; and that their Fall is by so much the more deplorable, by how much the more the height is from which they fall: That God requires more of them than of the rest of the Clergy; and that their Faults shall meet with a severer Punishment than those of others. He explains to them the Qualifications which St. Paul requires of Bishops in his first Epistle to Timothy. Afterwards he declares against Simony, which was so common in his time, that Bishops gave Money to Archbishops for their Ordination; Priests, Deacons, and other Clergy-men to to Bishops. He exclaims very highly against this abuse, and exhorts the Bishops to whom he directs his Discourse, not to drive such a dishonourable Trade, but to lead an unblameable Life.

The Writings of Gerbert.

Flodoard Prebendary of Rheims.

Flodoard Prebendary of Rheims.

Flodoard or Frodoard is not one of the least Ornaments of the Church of Rheims. He was born at Espernay in the Year 894. He was Prebendary of the Church of Rheims, and the Scholar of Remy of Auxerre, whom Fulco had invited to Rheims, to be President of the School of his Canons. In the Year 930. he took a Journey to Rome, and in the Year 940. he took up a Resolution of going to St. Martin of Tours, because he could not approve of the Promotion of Hugh to the Archbishoprick of Rheims. But Count Hubert caus'd that to be apprehended, and took from him the Revenues belonging to the Church of Rheims, which he was in possession of, and the Church of Cormicy which he govern'd. He was for five Months confin'd to that City, till he was brought to Soissons, where he submitted to the Judgment of the Bishops, who confirm'd the Promotion of Hugh. Then he was restor'd to favour; the Revenues which he possess'd were restor'd to him, and the Church of Corvey given him, instead of Cormicy. He assisted at the Council of Verdun, wherein Artaldus was elected Archbishop of Rheims; and liv'd in the World to Odalric's time, into whose Hands he resign'd his Benefice, and withdrew into the Solitude of a Monastery, where he dyed in the Year 966.

Flodoard Prebendary of Rheims.

This Author has written an History of the Church of Rheims, divided into four Books. He therein gives an Account of the Succession and Lives of the Archbishops, of what what they had done or written, and what happened worth the taking Notice of under each of them in that Church. The first Book begins with the Apostles, and ends at the Death of St. Remy. The Account of the first Bishops is fabulous, and what he says of the following is very uncertain. The Life of St. Remy, the Conversion and Baptism of Clovis take up the greatest and best Part of that Book. The second Book contains the Succession and History of the Archbishops of Rheims from St. Remy down to Hincmarus. The third is wholly taken up with the Life of Hincmarus, and with the Abstract of his Writings. The fourth contains the History of Fulcus, and of those who succeeded him down to Odalric. This History was publish'd by Father Sirmond, and printed at Paris in the Year 1611. and afterwards by Colvenerius who got it to be printed at Doway in the Year 1617.

Of the Churches of France.

Besides this Piece, Flodoard did likewise compose a Chronicon (for Monsieur Pithon had no Grounds to question whether it were his or no.) It began at the Year 877. but the first Years are lost, and we have only by us the Year 919. and those which follow to the 966. where it ends. Bonderius observes, that at Treves there is a Manuscript, which contains several Pieces of Poetry of Flodoard; namely, five Books of the Triumphs of the Italian Martyrs and Confessors; three Books of the Triumphs of Jesus Christ, and of the Saints of Palestine; and two Books of the Triumphs of Jesus Christ at Antioch. But these Pieces have not as yet been publish'd, and no Body (as we hear of) has ever seen them since. The Chronicon was publish'd by Monsieur Pithon, and Monsieur Duchesne, in their Collections of the Writers of the History of France.

Of the Churches of France.

An ADVERTISEMENT to the following Addition.

Assoon as this Volume was printed off, I understood by Father Thierry Ruinard, a Learned, Religious Benedictine, of the Congregation of St. Maur, that the Treatise of Flodoard concerning the Triumph of the Martyrs, which Bonderius made Mention of, was in an ancient Manuscript in the Convent of the unshod Carmelites of that City; and this Father has been pleas'd to communicate the Abstract of that Manuscript to me, which I thought fit to publish.

The ADDITION.

I Have examin'd that Manuscript, the Beginning of which is torn; the Work begins at the End of the first Chapter of the third Book. He therein treats of the Martyrs who suffer'd under Valerian's Persecution.

The fourth Book begins with Pope St. Felix, and treats of the Persecutions of Aurelian, Claudius, Numerian, and Diocletian. He therein speaks of the Popes according to the Times wherein they liv'd.

The fifth and sixth Books are not there, tho' there seems to be nothing left out.

The seventh treats only of the Persecution under Diocletian.

The eighth has this Title De Persecutione Maximiani, i. e. Concerning the Persecution under Maximian. It begins with the History of St. Marcel, and of all the Martyrs which are in his false Decretals: Afterwards he speaks of the martyr'd Saints which are worship'd in Italy. The fifteenth Chapter is concerning St. Afra of Augsburgh. The sixteenth is concerning St. Eusebius the Pope.

The ninth Book makes mention of St. Valentine a Martyr at Rome, afterwards of the Martyrs thereabouts; and of the Decretals of St. Sylvester, Gallicanus, St. John, and St. Paul, and of several other Martyrs, who were at Rome in the Time of Julian the Apostate.

The tenth Book begins at St. Julius the Pope, and ends with Vitalian and A-Deodate. He therein mentions several other Saints; as for instance, in the second Chapter he speaks of Eusebius, whom he calls Praesul, Prelate, who is said to have suffer'd at Rome under Constance, with Orosius and others; he speaks of St Eusebius of Vercell, of Victorine the Rhetorician, and of St. Dennis of Milan; he makes mention of the Translation of the latter, made by St. Basil, who sent his Body to St. Ambrose. (I have the Letter of St. Basil by me, directed to St. Ambrose, taken out of an ancient Manuscript, which makes mention of this Translation.) In the third Chapter, where he treats of St. Damasus the Pope, he likewise speaks of St. Jerome. In the eighth Chapter he treats of the Schism of Laurence, of Pascasius the Deacon—— In the nineteenth of Horsmisdas the Pope, of the Peace in the East, of St. Germain of Capua, of the Restitution of Africa, of St. Remy, of the Conversion of Clovis, of the Crown which he sent to Rome, of the Consular Habits which he receiv'd from the Emperor. In the tenth Chapter he speaks of St. John the Pope, of Symmachus, and of Boetius, whom Theodoric caus'd to be put to death. In the twelfth Chapter of Cassiodorus, of what Belisarius did against the Goths in Italy and Africa. Lastly he treats at large of St. Gregory, and of what happened in his Monastery.

The eleventh Book comprehends the History of the Popes from Agatho down to Christophilus. In the fifth Chapter he speaks at large of Boniface of Germany, whom he styles Doctor and Martyr. In the sixth Chapter of Charlemagne Prince of France, who turn'd a Religious. In the seventh Chapter of Pope Stephen II. of his Progress into France, of the miraculous Cure he wrought in the Abby of St. Denis, &c.

The twelfth Book contains the History from Leo IV. to Leo VII. In the first Chapter he speaks of the Palls of Hincmarus, of the Settling the Octave of the Feast of the Assumption of our Lady. In the second Chapter, of John Bishop of Ravenna. In the third Chapter of Hincmarus, and of Charles the Bald. In the fourth Chapter of Fulcus Archbishop of Rheims, and of the several Commissions which the Popes granted him. In the fifth Chapter of the Translation of St. Calixtus the Pope to Rheims, which he calls Urbem Nostram, Our City. He treats at large of the Actions of Formosus, whom, he says, Charles King of France desir'd to send him Panem Benedictum, i. e. some Consecrated Bread.

The thirteenth Book is about the Saints which St. Gregory treats of in his Dialogues, and of other Saints of Italy.

The fourteenth Book is about the Guardian Saints, Martyrs, and others of the Cities of Italy. He ends all by St. Columban and his Disciples.

At the End is an Epitaph of Flodoard himself.

This Manuscript is almost as ancient as Flodoard.

Flodoard's Style is very plain, without any Ornament, and without the least Affectation. He makes a great many Extracts, and relates a vast Number of Miracles.

Aurelian Clerk of the Church of Rheims.

Aurelian Clerk of the Church of Rheims.

TRithemius makes mention of another Clerk of the Church of Rheims, call'd Aurelian, who, he says, was very well skill'd in the Knowledge of the Scriptures, and in good Literature; but above all a good Musician. He makes him the Author of a Tract concerning the Rules of Singing, and of Notes, which he says was a very remarkable Volume, intitled, The Compleat Musick Master. He adds, that he likewise compos'd several other Pieces, and that he flourish'd in the Reign of Arnulphus, about the Year 900. We have nothing of this Author left us.

Aurelian Clerk of the Church of Rheims.

Bernerus Monk of St. Remy of Rheims.

Bernerus Monk of St. Remy of Rheims.

WE ought likewise to reckon among those who were an Ornament to the Church of Rheims, Bernerus Monk of St. Remy of Rheims, who was sent in the Year 948. with several Monks to establish a Monastical Discipline in the Monastery of Humbliers in Vermandois. He wrote the Life of St. Hunegonda Abbess of Humblieres, published by Father Mabillon, in the second Benedictine Century; and the Account of the Translation of her Body, which is to be met with in the fifth Century. He sent several Monks to St. Quentin to be put in the room of those Clerks of the Church of that Place who did not lead regular Lives. He relates in the Account of the Translation of the Relicks of St. Hunegonda, several Miracles which were wrought till the Year 965. which shews that he wrote and liv'd beyond that Year. But thus much may suffice to speak concerning the Church of Rheims. We proceed to the other Churches of France.

Bernerus Monk of St. Remy of Rheims.

Gautier Archbiſhop of Sens.

Gautier Archbiſhop of Sens.

THE Beginning of this Century Gautier was Archbiſhop of Sens, who was ordain'd in the Year 887. and liv'd to the Year 923. He made Conſtitutions, which remain ſtill among us. They are comprehended in fourteen Articles.

The firſt prohibits ſuch Abbots and Conventual Priors, who would not appear at the Synod, and were not excus'd; from being admitted into the Church for eight Days.

The ſecond prohibits the Religious from receiving any Depoſitum into their Convents without the Permiſſion of the Biſhop.

The third orders that they ſhould all eat together in the ſame Refectory, and all lye together in the ſame Dormitory.

The fourth imports, that all the ſeparate Apartments of Nunneries ſhall be pull'd down, except ſuch as were requiſite to entertain the Biſhop; or proper for the ſick; or for any other Cauſe which the Biſhop ſhall adjudge to be juſt and neceſſary.

The fifth, that none of the Religious ſhall be permitted to go abroad, or to lye out of the Monaſtery, unleſs it be but ſeldom, and upon ſome lawful Occaſions.

The ſixth, that all the ſuſpicious and unneceſſary Doors of theſe Monaſteries ſhall be ſhut up.

The ſeventh prohibits the Eccleſiaſtical Judges from iſſuing forth general Excommunications, and from excommunicating all thoſe who ſhall communicate with an excommunicate Perſon, unleſs it be upon ſome great important Occaſion, and in ſuch Caſes as are enormous.

The eighth injoyns the Canons or Prebendaries to regulate their Offices, and to behave themſelves in them with Care and Exactneſs.

The ninth injoyns them to obſerve the Rules preſcrib'd by the General Council.

The tenth and eleventh order, that the Communities of the Monks or Regular Canons be re-eſtabliſh'd in thoſe Priories where they were us'd to be, if they have but wherewithal to ſubſiſt.

The twelfth, that the Abbots and Conventual Priors ſhall have in their reſpective Abbies and Priories, a ſufficient Number of Religious, from whom they ſhall not exact any Penſion.

The thirteenth, that the Clerks who lead looſe Lives ſhall be ſhaven by the Order of the Biſhops, Archdeacons, or other Officers, ſo that no Mark or Token of their Clerical Tonſure ſhall be left them.

The fourteenth imports, that when any Country ſhall be interdicted for the Offence of the Lord or his Bailiffs, that Interdiction ſhall not be taken off, till ſuch Time as Satisfaction be made for the Damages which the Parochial Churches ſhall ſuffer by Reaſon thereof.

'Tis queſtion'd whether theſe Conſtitutions belong'd to this Gautier, or to ſome other of a more modern Date. And indeed they relate more to the Diſcipline of the ſucceeding Centuries, than to the Diſcipline of the Tenth.

Gautier Archbiſhop of Sens.

Of the other Biſhops of France.

Of the other Biſhops of France.

THE other Biſhops of France ſhew'd themſelves no leſs zealous for the keeping up of Diſcipline and maintaining their Rights, than thoſe we have already mention'd. We have one famous Inſtance of it related by Glaber Monk of Cluny, who liv'd in the following Century. Fulcus Count of Anjou, upon his Return from a Journey he made to Jeruſalem, being willing to diſcharge himſelf of a Vow he had made, caus'd a Monaſtery to be built in the Territory of Tours, over againſt the Caſtle of Loches, which he dedicated according to the Advice of his Wife to the Memory of the Cherubims and Seraphims, and not to the Memory of any Martyr. Hugh Archbiſhop of Tours was intreated to perform the Dedication of that Monaſtery; but he refus'd it till ſuch Time as Fulcus ſhould reſtore to his Church the Revenues which he had contrary to all Juſtice taken from it. Fulcus ſtomach'd this Refuſal, went to Rome, and after he had made ſeveral Preſents to Pope John, he return'd with Cardinal Peter, who afterwards dedicated the Monaſtery, having a Commiſſion granted by the Pope for that Purpoſe. Aſſoon as the Biſhops of France underſtood this, 'They knew (ſays Glaber) that it was the 'Effect of blind Avarice, which having inclin'd Fulcus to 'rob the Church, had likewiſe prevail'd upon the Pope to 'accept of theſe Preſents which Fulcus had made him of the 'Revenues which he had unlawfully ſeiz'd upon; and that 'by this Means he had given Riſe to a freſh Schiſm in the 'Church of Rome. They all abominated this Proceeding, 'looking upon it as an unworthy Action, that he who go-'vern'd the Holy Apoſtolical See ſhould violate the firſt 'Order eſtabliſh'd by the Apoſtles and by the Canons, the 'Cuſtom of the Church, founded on a great many Autho-'rities of Antiquity, which forbids Biſhops to exerciſe any 'Juriſdiction in another's Dioceſs, unleſs the Biſhop of that 'Dioceſs intreat him, or permit him to do it. For tho' 'the Pope of Rome be moſt rever'd upon the Account of 'the Dignity of the Holy Apoſtolical See, yet he is not per-'mitted in any Caſe whatſoever to violate the Rules pre-'ſcrib'd by the Canons. And as each Biſhop of the Catho-'lick Church is the Husband of his own Church, and the 'Repreſentative of our Lord: So it is not allowable to any 'Man to undertake any Thing in another's Dioceſs.' Glaber adds, that Fulcus notwithſtanding theſe Remonſtrances, having caus'd this Church to be dedicated, had no Biſhops preſent but thoſe of his own Dominions, who aſſiſted at it much againſt their Wills; and that it was no ſooner finiſh'd, but the Fabrick was blown down by a Storm; which is attributed to the Raſhneſs of this Proceeding.

The Reſolutions of the Biſhops of France concerning the Dedication of a Church.

The Council of Charroux, in the year 989.

In the Year 989. a Council was held in the Abby of St. Saviour of Charroux, in the Dioceſs of Poitiers, at which aſſiſted the Archbiſhop of Bordeaux, and the Biſhops of Poitiers, Limoges, Perigueux, Saintes, and Angoulême. There was nothing elſe done there but iſſuing out Anathemas againſt thoſe who ſhould rob the Churches of their Revenues, defraud the Poor of their Dues, or ſhould by Force apprehend or abuſe a Clerk, not bearing Arms, before he were try'd by his Biſhop.

Ten Years after there was another Council held in the City of Poitiers, which was called by William Count of Poitiers, and conſiſted of the Archbiſhop of Bordeaux, and the Biſhops of Poitiers, Limoges, Angoulême, and Saintes.

Of the other Biſhops of France.

The Council of Poitiers in the year 999.

They therein confirm'd the Order made in the Council of Charroux againſt the Uſurpators of the Revenue of Churches and of private Perſons. And for the putting it in Execution, it was order'd that all the Grandees and Judges ſhould cauſe full Reſtitution to be made to every one, who had any Thing taken from them; and that thoſe who would not ſubmit to their Determinations, ſhould be conſtrain'd to do it by Force. They therein likewiſe forbad Biſhops the exacting any Thing for the Adminiſtration of Penance and and Confirmation; and renew'd the Prohibition made ſo often againſt Eccleſiaſticks keeping Company with Women.

We ſhall reckon among the Councils of France the Synod held at Ravenna under Gerbert; becauſe we look upon that Archbiſhop as a Frenchman; and becauſe it was he alone who made the following Inſtitutions in an Aſſembly of his Clergy, held the firſt of May, in the Year 997.

The Council of Ravenna, in the year 997.

The firſt is a Prohibition of a great Abuſe which prevail'd in the Church of Ravenna, according to which they ſold to Biſhops, at the Time of their Conſecration, the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, and the Holy Chriſm to the Archprieſts of the Dioceſs. The Euchariſt which he ſpeaks of in this Place, was a Conſecrated Loaf, which was given whole to the Biſhop on the Day of his Conſecration, and which he kept by him to Communicate thereof for forty Days together, as 'tis obſerv'd in the Roman Decretal.

The ſecond imports, that all the Archprieſts ſhall pay to the Subdeacons of Ravenna, as an Acknowledgment of that Church, an yearly Penſion of Two Pence.

The third renews the ancient Canons concerning the neceſſary Qualifications of thoſe who are to be admitted into Holy Orders, and prohibits Biſhops from conſecrating Churches out of their own Dioceſs, without Leave from the Biſhop of the Place; and from entertaining or keeping thoſe who belong to another's Dioceſs, till they have Letters Demiſſory from their Biſhop. He likewiſe forbids the receiving any Thing for the Burial of the Dead, unleſs their Friends or Relations ſhould give any Thing voluntarily.

Laſtly we ſhall refer to this Place that which happen'd in France and at Rome about the Marriage and Divorce of King Robert and Queen Bertha.

The Marriage of King Robert with Bertha.

About the End of this Century, that Prince being a Widower by the Death of Queen Lutgarde his firſt Wife, had marry'd Bertha, Siſter to Rodulphus the Simple, King of Burgundy, who was the Widow of Eudes the firſt, Count of Chartres. But forasmuch as ſhe was his Kinſwoman, and he had formerly ſtood Godfather to one of her Children, tho' he had taken the Advice of ſeveral Biſhops of his Kingdom about it, yet the Pope oppos'd this Marriage as being null, and contracted between Perſons, who according to Law could not marry together, Robert did what he could to

Of the Churches of France.

to confirm this Marriage, and ſpoke about it to Leo Pope Gregory the Fifth's Legate in France, who made him believe that he ſhould obtain of the Pope what he deſir'd, provided he would cauſe Arnulphus to be re-eſtabliſh'd in the Archbiſhoprick of Rheims. In the mean Time, notwithſtanding the Judgment which was paſs'd in Favour of that Archbiſhop, Pope Gregory V. held a Council at Rome in the Year 998. in the Preſence of the Emperor Otho III. at which aſſiſted Gerbert, at that Time Archbiſhop of Ravenna, and ſeven and twenty Biſhops of Italy. In this Council he declar'd that King Robert ought to part from his Kinſwoman Bertha, whom he had marry'd contrary to the Laws, and do Penance for ſeven Years together, according to the Degrees ſet down by the Canons; and if he would not, he ſhould be anathematiz'd: That Bertha ſhould ſubmit to the ſame Penalty; and he excommunicated Archembold Archbiſhop of Tours, who had celebrated that Marriage, and the Biſhops of France, who had either aſſiſted or conſented thereto, till ſuch Time as they ſhould come and give the Holy See Satisfaction. This Sentence of the Pope made ſuch an Impreſſion on the Minds of Men (if we will believe Pater Damien in the Caſe,) that all the King's Domeſticks, except two or three, abandon'd him, and would no longer have any Converſation with him; and even caus'd the Veſſels out of which he had either eat or drunk to be burnt. Let the Caſe be how it will, King Robert at laſt giving ear to the Admonitions of Abbo the Abbot, parted with Bertha within two or three Years after; and Leo IX. (according as Ivet of Chartres relates it) ſays that they came to Rome with the Biſhops, to obtain their Abſolution, and to get their Penance mitigated. The Author of the Life of Abbo does not ſay that Robert went to Rome; but that he confeſſed his Fault both publickly and privately; that he asked Pardon, and did Penance for it. That which is moſt evident is, that the Marriage was of no longer Force.

The Council of Rome in the year 998. under Gregory V.

In the ſame Council, the Pope paſſed ſeveral other Sentences. The firſt in Favour of the Church of Mersburgh, which had been rais'd to a Biſhoprick by the Holy See, and by the Councils held under Otho, and afterwards deſtroy'd out of Council by Otho II. He reſtores to it its Dignity of being an Epiſcopal See.

The ſecond relates to the Perſon of the Biſhop of Mersburgh, call'd Giſlair, who had quitted that Church to be Archbiſhop of Magdeburgh. It was order'd, that if he had been requir'd by the Clergy and Laity of Magdeburgh to take upon him that Archbiſhoprick, he ſhould ſtill hold it: That if that had not been done, and he could prove that neither Ambition nor Avarice moved him to take upon him that Archbiſhoprick, he ſhould return to his firſt Church without being depos'd. But if he could not deny but that he was induced to it by ſome one or other of theſe Motives, he ſhould be depriv'd of both Churches. This Giſlair did not ſubmit to the Sentence of Gregory, but held both theſe Churches. Whereupon he was accus'd in a Council at Rome, held under Sylveſter II. Succeſſor to Gregory V. who ſuſpended him for ſome Time, and ordered his Nuncios in Germany to cite him. But that Biſhop prevail'd upon them by Bribery to put it off, and afterwards pleaded for his Excuſe, his being ſick of the Palſy. At laſt he appear'd before a Council held at Aix-la-Chapelle, where he demanded an Appeal to a General Council. Laſtly, The Emperor Henry having ſent for him to Dranburgh, and remonſtrated to him that he ought to return to his Church of Mersburgh, he deſired a few Days to conſider on it, and dy'd in the Interim.

The third relates to the Church of Puy in Velay. Guy Biſhop of that City, had elected for his Succeſſor his Nephew Stephen, without the Conſent of Clergy and Laity: However, after the Death of Guy, the Archbiſhop of Bourges and the Biſhop of Nevers had ordain'd Stephen. The Council declares this Ordination to be null and void; depoſes Stephen; excommunicates the Prelates who had ordain'd him, till ſuch Time as they ſhould come and give the Holy See Satisfaction; grants Leave to the Clergy and Laity of Velay to elect a Biſhop; deſires the Pope might conſecrate him whom they ſhould elect; and exhorts King Robert not to ſupport Stephen, but to ſtand by him who ſhould be elected by the Clergy and Laity. This Sentence was put in Execution; Theodarde was elected by the Clergy and Laity, and ordain'd by Silveſter II. Succeſſor to Gregory V. as we learn by the Fragment of a Letter of that Pope, related by Father Dachery in the Advertiſement to the Reader before the ninth Tome of Spicilegium, wherein he has given us the Acts of that Council more compleat than they are in the Edition of the Councils by Father Labbe. He takes Notice in the ſame Place that Gregory V. held a Council at Rome, wherein Guiſalde, who had ſeiz'd upon the Epiſcopal See of the Church of Oſona or Vich, in the Province of Catalonia, had been depos'd, as appears by a Letter of Gregory V. which Father Dachery tells us is in the Hands of Monſieur Baluzius. 'Tis very probable that this was done in the ſame Council, where Otho III publiſh'd an Edict, directed to the Archbiſhops, Abbots, Marquiſſes, Counts, and to all the Judges of Italy; whereby he declares that all the Deeds of Alienation of the Church Revenues, even tho' leas'd out for 99 years, ſhall not be of Force any longer than the Life-time of him who ſhall make them; and that there ſhall be no ſuch Deeds made, but for the Advantage of thoſe Churches who are to be maintain'd out of them. This Edict is dated October 17. in the year 998. and 'tis obſerv'd that it was publiſh'd by Gerbert in the Synod which turn'd Arnulphus out of the Archbiſhoprick of Milan.

Of the Churches of France.

In this Century there was no leſs Care taken of ſettling the Monaſtical Diſcipline of France, than of the Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline; and as the Biſhops were diligent in reforming the Clergy and Laity; ſo there were ſome holy Abbots, who ſet themſelves, and that with a great deal more Succeſs, upon reforming the Monaſtical Order, which was, the Beginning of that Century, in a very lamentable Condition. Moſt of the Monaſteries having been ruin'd by the Normans, were abandon'd, their Revenues were in Poſſeſſion of Laicks, and the Abbots were Seculars. If there were any Monks ſtill left in the Monaſteries, they were ſuch as obſerv'd no Order; and were ſo far from living according to their Rule, that they did not ſo much as know it.

The founding of the Abby of Cluny.

In this Condition was the Monaſtical Order, when God rais'd up Berno, Monk of Autun, to be the Reſtorer of it. He began his Reformation in the Monaſteries of Joigny and Baume, and in ſeveral others of which he was Abbot. For a Cuſtom was then in Uſe, that one and the ſame Abbot held ſeveral Abbies, or at leaſt ſeveral Monaſteries which depended upon him. He had for his Companions and Diſciples Odo and Adegrin. In the year 910. William Count of Auvergne and Duke of Aquitain; having founded the Abby of Cluny, committed it to the Government of Berno, who put twelve Monks into it, and took likewiſe Care of the Monaſteries of Hoit, Maſſay, and Souvigny, who were all under under his Conduct, and imbrac'd the ſame Way of Living. Berno dying in the year 927. had for his Succeſſor Odo, the Son of Abbo, born at Tour in the year 879. He had been educated by Fulcus Count of Anjou, and made Canon of St. Martin of Tours at nineteen years of Age. Some time after, being come to Paris, he became a Diſciple of Remy of Auxerre; and afterwards reſolved to dedicate himſelf to God, he imbrac'd the Monaſtical Life in the year 909. in the Monaſtery of Baume, under the Conduct of Berno. Odo extended the Reformation of Cluny to a great many other Monaſteries, and carried it as far as Rome it ſelf, to which he made three Journies. The firſt in the year 937. the ſecond in the year 938. and the laſt in the year 942. being call'd thither by the Popes to be the Mediator of Peace between the Princes of Italy. He dy'd at Tours in the year 942. at his Return from his laſt Journey to Rome.

He had for his Succeſſor Ademar, or Aymar; next him was St. Maiol, who was imploy'd by Hugh Capet in the Reformation of almoſt all the Monaſteries of France. He dy'd in the year 994. leaving for his Succeſſor Odilo, who had been elected three years before his Death. This laſt was Abbot of Cluny for the ſpace of fifty ſix years.

Odo Abbot of Cluny.

Odo Abbot of Cluny.

Berno apply'd himſelf more to the ſettling of his Order, than to Study: But Odo apply'd himſelf to both, and compos'd ſeveral Pieces at different Times, and in all the Conditions of his Life. When he was Canon, he made an Abridgment of the Morals of St. Gregory, and of the Hymns and Anthems in Honour of St. Martin. When he was only Monk, he made three Books concerning Prieſthood, upon the Prophecy of Jeremy, dedicated to Turpio Biſhop of Limoges; they are intitled Collationes ſive Colloquia; and others call them by the Title of Occupationes. When he was Abbot, he wrote the Life of St. Gerard or Gerard, Count of Aurillac, in four Books, dedicated to Amon Abbot of Talle; and the Life of St. Martial of Limoges; an Account of the Tranſlation of the Body of St. Martin; a Piece wherein St. Martin is equaliz'd to the Apoſtles; ſeveral Sermons, and a Panegyrick of St. Benedict.

These Tracts are printed in the Library of Cluny, with Hymns upon the Holy Sacrament and St Magdalene. An ancient Author of his Life takes Notice, that being at Rome, he corrected the Life of St Martin; and ſpeaks of a Book about the Coming of St. Benedict into a Village near Orleans. They likewiſe attribute to Odo the Life of St. Gregory of Tours, related by Surius. Father Mabillon takes Notice, that in the Library of the Reform'd Carmelites of Paris, there is a Manuſcript which formerly belong'd to the Monaſtery of St. Julian of Tours, wherein there is a large Treatiſe in Verſe, intitled, Occupationes Odonis Abbatis. He adds, that this Piece is divided into four Books; the firſt concerning the Creation of the World; the ſecond concerning the Formation of Mankind; the third concerning his Fall; and the fourth concerning the Corruption of Nature. 'Tis by a Miſtake that they attribute to this Odo the Life of St.

Odo Abbot of Cluny.

Of the Churches of France.

Maurus, which belongs to Odo Abbot of St. Maurus of Fossez. They likewise falsly attribute to him several Chronicons which Thomas of Lucca compos'd under the Name of Odo, as it has been observ'd by the Author of the History of the Counts of Angres, related in the tenth Tome of the Spicilegium. Sigebert gives Odo the Title of Musician, and says that he was a very proper Person to compose and pronounce Sermons, and to make Hymns upon the Saints.

Of the Churches of France.

John Monk of Cluny.

John Monk of Cluny.

THE Life of Odo was written by one of his Disciples, called John, whom he had met in Italy, in his Journey, in the year 938. and brought along with him to Pavia, where he caus'd him to take upon him the Monastick Life. It is divided into three Books, and printed in the Library of Cluny, and in the fifth Benedictine Century by Father Mabillon, who has likewise given us another Life of Odo, written by Nalgodus, who liv'd about two hundred years after the Death of that Abbot.

John Monk of Cluny.

Odilo Abbot of Cluny.

Odilo Abbot of Cluny.

Odilo has left us but a few Pieces; which are, the Life of St. Maiol his Predecessor; four Hymns in his Praise; several Letters to St. Fulbert Bishop of Chartres; the Life of St. Adelaide the Empress, Otho the First's Wife; fourteen Sermons upon the Festivals of Jesus Christ and the Blessed Virgin; a Decree concerning the Prayers for the Dead; and three Letters related by Father Luke Dachery in the second Tome of the Spicilegium, with a Letter of Pope John XIX. who reprov'd him for refusing the Archbishoprick of Lyons. He is look'd upon as the first Founder of the Feasts of All-Saints, and of the Commemoration of the Dead. He liv'd to the year 1048.

Odilo Abbot of Cluny.

Abbo Abbot of Fleury.

Abbo Abbot of Fleury.

ABBO or Albo, Monk of Fleury or St. Benedict upon the Loire, was born at Orleans, and instructed and educated in the Schools belonging to the Monastery of Fleury, where he studied under Wolfaldus the Abbot; and for several years together had the Government of the Schools of that Monastery. He went afterwards to Paris and Rheims, to study Philosophy and Astronomy; but making no great Progress in them, he return'd to Orleans, where he learn'd Musick. From thence he was invited over to England, where he taught publickly for the Space of two years, after which he return'd to the Monastery of Fleury, of which he was made Abbot. This did not hinder him from prosecuting his Studies. He had some Differences to adjust with Arnulphus Bishop of Orleans, which occasion'd him to write an Apology directed to the Kings Hugh and Robert, wherein he exhorts them to turn out Hereticks; among whom he reckons such as believ'd that the Revenues of the Church belong'd to them, and who had made an unlawful Seisure upon them. He would have the same Thing done to those Bishops who assert that the Churches and Altars belong to them. He observes that Jesus Christ does not say that the Church is the Church of St. Peter, but that his Church is built upon St. Peter. From whence he concludes, that his Successors cannot say that the Churches which they govern, are theirs, much less can they make a Gain of them, as he says they then did every Day. He likewise in his Apology gives an Account of what passed in the Council of St. Dennis about the year 995. where he himself was present, wherein having maintain'd against the Bishops, the Right which the Monks and Laicks had of possessing several Tithes, the People rose up in Arms against the Bishops, who were forc'd to fly for it; and forasmuch as Sigwin Archbishop of Sens, who was at the Head of them, had been wounded in the Flight, Abbo was accused of being the Author of this Sedition. He made his Defence in this Epistle. He wrote a Letter to Bernard Abbot of Beaulieu in the Diocess of Limoges, to dissuade him from giving a Sum of Money which the Count of Thoulouse and the Archbishop of Bourges would exact from him, for the making him Bishop of Cahors. That Abbot having resolv'd upon taking a Journey to Jerusalem, was dissuaded from it by Abbo, who advis'd him rather to go to Rome, whither he retir'd upon Mount Gargan; and being afterwards intreated to return into the World, to relieve his Relations, he again consulted Abbo about what he ought to do in the Case, who in a very elegant Letter return'd him this Answer, That he ought not to think of quitting his Solitude to involve himself in the Affairs of this World. As to the Question which Bernard propos'd, Whether he ought to keep or leave his Abby? he return'd him this Answer, That Circumstances would direct him what to do; and recommends to him the using his utmost Discretion to examine in his own Conscience, which of the two was the most honourable for him, and most beneficial to others: Because on one side 'tis a great Duty to discharge the Functions of an Abbot, when one can conduct Souls to God: But that on the other side, when there is no Hopes of being able to do any Good, by Reason of the Wickedness of those one has to govern, 'tis more convenient to retire, to provide for ones own Salvation. Sometime after Abbo went to Rome, to obtain a Confirmation of the Privileges of his Church. He there met with Pope John XV. upon the Holy See, who was not (says Aimoin the Author of his Life) such an one as he wish'd him, or as he ought to be. Having this Pope in Detestation, he return'd after he had offer'd up his Prayers in the Holy Places of God's Worship. Upon his Return from this Journey, he wrote a Letter to the Abbot of Fulda, publish'd by Monsieur Baluzius in the first Tome of his Collection of Miscellanies. He was afterwards sent a second Time by King Robert to Pope Gregory V. Successor to John, who threatned to lay the Kingdom under an Interdiction upon the Account of Arnulphus Archbishop of Rheims. He met this Pope at Spoleto, was very kindly receiv'd by him, and obtain'd of him a Privilege for his Abby, by which the Bishop of Orleans was prohibited entring into that Monastery, unless he were invited thither; and the Monks were permitted to celebrate Divine Service in their Monastery always, even tho' the whole Kingdom were laid under an Interdiction by the Pope. He adjusted the Business of Arnulphus; and having engag'd his Word to the Pope, That that Archbishop should be releas'd out of Prison and re-establish'd, he was intrusted to carry the Pall to him. Upon his Return to France, what he had promis'd was accordingly done, and he gave the Pope Notice of it. About the End of his Life, he re-establish'd the Monastery of Squires in Gascony, which was call'd the Monastery of the Rule, and in the Country Language le Reule, where he was kill'd in the year 1004. in an Insurrection which the Monks or Women of that Country rais'd against him. Monsieur Baluzius has publish'd a Circular Letter written by the Monks of Fleury, upon his Death.

[How much this Abbot is mistaken in the latter Part of his Remark (which says, That our Saviour says his Church was built upon St. Peter.) will appear to any who consults our Lord's Words in the Original, Mat. 16. 18. Κἀγὼ δέ σοι λέγω, ὅτι σὺ εἶ Πέτρος, καὶ ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ Πέτρᾳ οἰκοδομήσω μου τὴν Ἐκκλησίαν: Which Words in our Version run thus, And I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church. Where we may observe, that he does not say, καὶ ἐπὶ σοί, or ἐπὶ τῷ Πέτρῳ but ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ Πέτρᾳ &c. from whence it must be concluded, that he does not mean the Person, but the Faith of St. Peter, the Rock upon which he would build his Church. This Remark seems pertinent, since the Romanists from this Text, and that of St. John, Chap. 21. V. 15, 16, &c. pretend to prove the Infallibility and Universality of the Pope.]

Abbo Abbot of Fleury.

Besides the Apology and the Letters of Abbo which we have already mention'd, the Author of his Life makes likewise mention of the following Tracts. Of a Letter in Hexameter Verse, in Praise of the Emperor Otho: The Verses begin and end with the same Letter, and may be read six Manner of Ways, which make so many different Senses. Of a Treatise directed to Odilo Abbot of Cluny, about the Harmony of the Gospel: And of another Tract concerning the Cycles of all the Years, from the Birth of Jesus Christ down to his Time, which Sigebert says is a Commentary on the Treatise of Victorius. They likewise attribute to him the Abstract of the Lives of the Popes, taken out of the History of Anastasius the Librarian, printed at Mayence in the year 1603. The Life of St. Edmond King of England and Martyr. Father Mabillon has given us an excellent Collection of Canons compos'd by Abbo, and dedicated to the Kings Hugh and Robert, in the second Tome of his Analects.

Abbo's Style is very pure and elegant, and his Conceptions are accurate: He was very well vers'd in the Rules of Discipline and Morality. His Zeal for the Monastical Order, and the Interest of the Monks, created him a great many Enemies: Because, as he says himself, he had always in his Thoughts the Protection of the Monks; and had consulted their Interest upon all Occasions, and oppos'd all who annoy'd them.

Aimoin

Aimoin Monk of Fleury.

Aimoin Monk of Fleury.

THE Life of Abbo was written by Aimoin Monk of the ſame Monaſtery. He was of Aquitaine, the Son of Anentrude, the Kinſwoman of Gerald, Lord of Anbeterre. He embrac'd the Monaſtick Life in the Year 970. under Oilbolde Abbot of St. Benedict upon the Loire; and flouriſh'd under his Succeſſor Abbo, whoſe intimate Friend he was. He attended him in his Journey to Gaſcoigne, and after his death return'd to his Monaſtery. The principal Piece of this Aimoin is his Hiſtory of France dedicated to Abbo. It was printed at Paris by Badius Aſcenſius in the Year 1514. under the Name of Aimonius. Fifty years after Monſieur Pithou or Pithœus, caus'd it to be re-printed from a Manuſcript, under the true Name of Aimoin. It was publiſh'd in the Year 1567. at the Printing Houſe of Vitel. In the year 1603. James of Breuil, Monk of St. Germain des Prez, caus'd it to be printed, and pretended that it was writ by Aimoin, a Monk of St. Germain. Ten years after Freherus inſerted it in the Body of the Hiſtory of France, which he caus'd to be prinprinted at Hanover. Laſtly, The Meſſieurs Ducheſne inſerted it in the third Tome of their Collections, printed in the Year 1641. This Hiſtory is divided into five Books; But of Aimoin's there are only the three firſt Books, and one and forty Chapters of the fourth, which ends at the founding of the Monaſtery of Fleury. The reſt is compil'd by a Monk of very late ſtanding.

Aimoin Monk of Fleury.

Aimoin is likewiſe the Author of two Books of the Miracles of St. Benedict, which are the ſecond and third Books of theſe four, which are in the Library of Fleury; of the Life of St. Abbo, mention'd before; of a Sermon upon the Feſtival of St. Benedict; and of ſeveral Verſes upon the firſt founding of the Monaſtery of Fleury, printed in the third Tome of the Collection of Ducheſne; together with another Treatiſe in Verſe concerning the Tranſlation of the Relicks of St. Benedict. He is not altogether ſo elegant as his Maſter Abbo; But he wrote with great accuracy, and his Narration is plain and pleaſant, without having any thing of that flatneſs of Style which ſeveral other Authors of that time had.

The Abby of Lobes, in the Dioceſs of Cambray and Principality of Liege, founded in the ſeventh Century by St. Urſmar, preſerv'd the Monaſtical Diſcipline till the tenth Century, at which time its reputation was farther increas'd by ſeveral Abbots, who for their Piety were deſervedly advanc'd to the Biſhoprick of Liege, and recommended themſelves to the World by their Writings.

Stephen Abbot of Lobes.

Stephen Abbot of Lobes.

THE firſt is Stephen, whom Fulcuin calls a learned Man, and of whom he ſays, that he obſerv'd the Rule of the Canons: Which made People believe that he was a Secular Abbot. The ſame Author adds, that he has caſt into a more poliſh'd Stile the ancient Life of St. Lambert, which was written in a courſe dreſs, and he made a very famous piece of Proſe out of it: That he likewiſe made another ſmall Treatiſe, compos'd of ſeveral fine Thoughts extracted out of Holy Writ; in which he has inſerted the Chapters and Collects of each Feſtival in the Year: And that in the Preface he obſerves that he had been advanc'd to Metz, by dedicating his Treatiſe to Robert Biſhop of that City. Sigebert ſays likewiſe, that he made a piece of Proſe upon the Trinity, and upon the Invention of St. Stephen the Ptoto-Martyr. Others ſay, that they are certain Offices appointed for theſe Feſtivals. The Life of St. Lambert was publiſh'd in the Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Liege, by Chapeaville. This Stephen was ordain'd Biſhop of Liege in the Year 903.

Stephen Abbot of Lobes.

After his death the Biſhoprick of Liege was conteſted, as was formerly hinted, between Hilduin and Riquier; but the latter being Abbot of Lobes, carried it from the other. In his time the Study of the Liberal Arts and Sciences (ſays Fulcuin) began to flouriſh in the Abby of Lobes, and the moſt famous Profeſſors of them were Scamin, Theoduin, and Ratherius. We have already given a particular Account of the Tranſactions and Writings of the laſt of theſe Perſons. Trithemius likewiſe attributes to Hilduin, who was Competitor with Riquier for the Biſhoprick of Liege, the Title of Abbot of Lobes, and aſſures us that he wrote the Hiſtory of the Abbots of that Monaſtery, and ſeveral Sermons; but 'tis probable that he was miſtaken, and that he took Hilduin for Fulcuin.

Fulcuin Abbot of Lobes.

Fulcuin Abbot of Lobes.

IN the end of this Century Fulcuin or Folcuin was choſen Abbot of Lobes. He left a well penn'd Hiſtory of that Abby, from its firſt founding by Landelin and St. Urſmar to his time, which was publiſh'd by Father D. Luke Dachery in the ſixth Tome of his Spicilegium. He has likewiſe compos'd a Treatiſe of the Miracles of St. Urſmar, referr'd by Henſchenius to April 18. and the Life of St. Fulcuin Biſhop, and is contain'd in the firſt Part of the fourth Benedictine Century by Father Mabillon. Fulcuin was choſen Abbot in the Year 975. and dy'd in 990.

Fulcuin Abbot of Lobes.

Heriger Abbot of Lobes.

Heriger Abbot of Lobes.

HE had for his Succeſſor Heriger, the Friend of Notger Biſhop of Liege, whoſe Works are compil'd in the following Catalogue, collected by the Author of the Continuation of Fulcuin's Hiſtory, viz. The Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Liege: The Life of St. Urſmar in Verſe: A Letter to Hugh about ſeveral Queſtions, and two other Tracts, which were never publiſh'd: A Treatiſe by way of Dialogue between him and Aldebold Clerk of the Church of Liege, and afterward Biſhop of Utrecht, concerning the Diſſenſions of the Church, and the Coming of our Saviour: And another Treatiſe containing a Collection of ſeveral Paſſages of the Fathers touching the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt againſt Paſchaſius Ratbertus. The Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Liege was publiſh'd by Chapeaville, and his Treatiſe of our Saviour's Body and Blood is that Anonymous Piece ſet forth by Father Cellet. The Life of St. Urſmar is in Henſchenius referr'd to April 18. and the other Works are only in Manuſcript. Some other Pieces are alſo attributed to him, viz. the Life of St. Berlenda referr'd by Bollandus to Febr. 3. and by Father Mabillon to the third Benedictine Century, and that of St. Landoalde, which is inſerted under the Name of Notger by Surius to March 19. This Abbot died in the Year 1007.

Heriger Abbot of Lobes.

Aldebold Biſhop of Utrecht.

Aldebold Biſhop of Utrecht.

ALdebold Clerk of the Church of Liege, and afterwards choſen Biſhop of Utrecht about the Year 1009. wrote the Hiſtory of the Emperor Henry II. which is contain'd in the Lives of the Saints writ by Surius in July 14. and in the fifth Tome of Canifius's Antiquities. Trithemius likewiſe makes mention of a Hymn in Commendation of the Croſs; of another in praiſe of the Virgin Mary; and of ſome other Works of the ſame Author, as well in Proſe as Verſe. He died A. D. 1027.

Aldebold Biſhop of Utrecht.

[* After having left his Employments in the Court of the Emperor Henry II. whom he ſerv'd in quality of a Privy Counſellor and General of his Armies, he became a Monk of Lobes.]

Albert Abbot of Gemblours.

Albert Abbot of Gemblours.

ALbert or Olbert Abbot of Gemblours, is likewiſe one of the Writers who proceeded from the Abby of Lobes. Sigebert informs us, that he was a Perſon illuſtrious for his profound Skill in Humane Literature and Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, as alſo by reaſon of his great Zeal for Religion, and that he render'd his Name immortal by writing the Lives of the Fathers and compoſing Hymns in Honour of the Saints; but more eſpecially in regard that he was Tutor to Burchard Biſhop of Worms, and incited him to the ſtudy of Divinity, and caus'd caus'd him to publiſh his Volume of Canons ſo uſeful to the whole World, which was written and dictated by him, and compil'd by the diligence of that Albert. Sigebert does not ſay that he compos'd thoſe Lives of the Fathers, but only that he wrote them with his Hand; nevertheleſs Trithemius makes him the Author of them.

Albert Abbot of Gemblours.

Of the Churches of France.

Odilo Monk of St. Medard at Soiſſons.

Odilo Monk of St. Medard at Soiſſons.

ODilo Monk of St. Medard at Soiſſons flouriſh'd about the Year 920. and wrote a Book concerning the Tranſlation of the Relicks of St. Sebaſtian Martyr, and St. Gregory Pope, to the Monaſtery of St. Medard, dedicated to Ingran Dean of that Abby, who was ordain'd Biſhop of Laon, A. D. 932. Therefore Odilo's Piece precedes that Year. It is referr'd by Bollandus to January 20. and to the fourth Benedictine Century by Father Mabillon, who has likewiſe given us in the ſame Volume, the Hiſtory of the Tranſlation of the Relicks of St. Tiburtius, of St. Marcellinus, and of St. Peter and his Companions, made in the ſame Monaſtery A. D. 828. and written by the ſame Author.

Odilo Monk of St. Medard at Soiſſons.

Gerard Abbot of St. Medard at Soiſſons.

Gerard Abbot of St. Medard at Soiſſons.

GErard Abbot, or rather Dean of St. Medard at Soiſſons, flouriſh'd in the middle of the tenth Century, having found an ancient Manuſcript of the Life of St. Romanus, he caſt it into a more polite Style, and made another of it in Verſe; which he preſented to Hugh Archbiſhop of Roan, as it appears by the Epiſtle Dedicatory, publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Analects. Of theſe Works there is only extant the Ancient Life of Romanus, that he corrected, and which was ſet forth by Monſieur Rigaud, or Rigultius.

Gerard Abbot of St. Medard at Soiſſons.

John Abbot of Arnulphus at Metz.

John Abbot of Arnulphus at Metz.

JOhn Monk of Gorze, and afterwards Abbot of St. Arnoul or Arnulphus at Metz, flouriſh'd there in the time of Adalberon, who was Biſhop of that City. He wrote the Life of St. Glodeſinda Abbeſs of Metz, and the Hiſtory of her Tranſlation, with the Life of St. John Abbot of Gorze his Patron, dedicated to Thierry Biſhop of Metz. Father Mabillon has inſerted theſe Works in different Tomes of his Benedictine Centuries.

John Abbot of Arnulphus at Metz.

Helperic or Chilperic Monk of St. Gal.

Helperic or Chilperic Monk of St. Gal.

HElperic or Chilperic Monk of St. Gal, compos'd in the Year 980. a Treatiſe of the Calendar, the Preface to which was publiſh'd by Father Mabillon, in the firſt Tome of his Analects, and which is entirely preſerv'd in Manuſcript in the Library of St. Germain des Prez.

Helperic or Chilperic Monk of St. Gal.

Berthier Prieſt of Verdun.

Berthier Prieſt of Verdun.

BErthier Prieſt of Verdun wrote a Compendious Hiſtory of the Biſhops of that Church, and dedicated it to Dado, who was then Governor of that Country. It was publiſh'd by Father Dachery in the twelfth Tome of the Spicilegium. He flouriſh'd about the Year 987.

This Work of Berthier was continu'd by an Anonymous Monk of St. Viton at Verdun down to Thierry the fourteenth Biſhop of that City. Afterward Laurence Monk of Liege, and at laſt of the ſame Monaſtery of St. Viton at Verdun, made a Supplement and Continuation of that Hiſtory to the time of Alberon, that is to ſay, to the middle of the twelfth Century. Theſe Works are follow'd by another Continuation in the ſame Tome of Father Dachery's Spicilegium.

Berthier Prieſt of Verdun.

Adſo Abbot of Luxeüil.

Adſo Abbot of Luxeüil.

Adſo Abbot of Deuvres.

THere were two Monks in the tenth Century who bore the Name of Adſo: The firſt of theſe, the Abbot of Luxeüil, wrote about the Year 960. a Treatiſe of the Miracles of St. Wandalbert, the third Abbot of Luxeüil, which is contain'd in the firſt Tome of the Benedictine Centuries. The ſecond Abbot of Deuvres in the Dioceſs of Bourges, is the Author of the Life of St. Berceire; of that of St. Baſole Confeſſor; of the Hiſtory of the Tranſlation and Miracles of the latter; of the Life of St. Frodbert Abbot of Celles; of the Hiſtory of the Tranſlation of his Relicks; and laſtly, of the Life of St. Mauſuet the firſt Biſhop of Toul. All theſe Works, except the laſt, are in the ſecond and fourth Benedictine Centuries of Father Mabillon; the laſt was publiſh'd by Monſieur Boſquet. This Author flouriſh'd about the Year 980, and died in 992.

Adſo Abbot of Luxeüil.

Letaldus Monk of St. Memin.

Letaldus Monk of St. Memin.

LEtaldus Monk of the Abby of Micy or St. Memin in the Dioceſs of Orleans, flouriſh'd about the end of the tenth Century. He wrote the Hiſtory of the Miracles of St. Maximin or Memin, the firſt Founder of that Monaſtery, publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Benedictine Centuries; and it is probable that he is the ſame with the Author of the Life of St. Julian Biſhop of Mans.

Letaldus Monk of St. Memin.

CHAP. IV.

The Hiſtory of the Churches of Germany.

The Hiſtory of the Churches of Germany.

THE Emperor Arnulphus the laſt of the Branch of the Carlian Stock, who obtain'd Germany for his Inheritance, dying in the Year 899. left but one lawful Son nam'd Lewis, who being only eight years Old, was committed to the Care of Otho Duke of Saxony, who married his Siſter; and of Hatto Archbiſhop of Mayence: Soon after he became Heir of Lorrain, of which Zuentibold his Baſtard Brother was in poſſeſſion. But he was not able to ſubdue Italy, nor to cauſe himſelf to be crown'd Emperor; neither did he live long, but dyed between eighteen and twenty years Old, A. C. 911. leaving only two Daughters, named Placidia and Mathilda. The firſt was married to Conrade Duke of Franconia, and the other to Henry the Fowler, Duke of Saxony, and Son of Duke Otho. The Eſtates of the Realm deſigning to confer the Crown upon that Otho, he deſired to be excus'd by Reaſon of his old Age, and adviſ'd him to chuſe Conrade Duke of Franconia, but his Son Henry Duke of Saxony, whoſe Moderation was not ſo great, claim'd a Right to part of the Kingdom, as having married one of the Heireſſes, revolted againſt Conrade, wag'd War with him, and gain'd the Battle: However this Advantage prov'd ineffectual, and Conrade always remain'd in poſſeſſion of the Throne, till his death; which happen'd in the Year 918. When he left Henry Duke of Saxony his Heir, and order'd the Lords to wait upon him with the Crown and the Royal Ornaments. They perform'd his laſt Will, and acknowledg'd Henry Duke of Saxony, ſirnam'd the Fowler, as King of Germany. This valiant and prudent Prince kept in awe Arnulphus Duke of Bavaria; defeated the Hungarians who ravag'd ravag'd Germany; overcame the Vandals; ſubdu'd Bohemia; and after having reign'd ſeventeen years, dyed A. C. 936. The Lords ſubſtituted in his place his eldeſt Son Otho, afterwards ſirnam'd the Great; againſt whom his Brother Henry made War, but was defeated, and mortally wounded in a Fight. The Dukes Gilbert and Everard, who were Authors of this Revolt, periſh'd in another Engagement near Andernac, and left Otho in the quiet poſſeſſion of his Dominions, which he enlarg'd conſiderably; and joyn'd to them the Kingdom of Italy, with the Imperial Dignity, which paſſed to his Son Otho, and to his Grandſon of the ſame Name, as it has been already related.

The Hiſtory of the Churches of Germany.

Of the Churches of France.

Of the Churches of France.

Under theſe Emperors, who were no leſs Religious than Valiant, the Churches of Germany were in a flouriſhing Condition, by the means of a great number of Reverend Biſhops, the Writings of ſeveral Authors, and the propagation of the Goſpel among the Northern People. This is what we ſhall proceed to ſhew in giving an Account of ſuch Perſons illuſtrious for their Learning and Sanctity, as Germany has produc'd in this Century.

St. Ulrick Biſhop of Augsburgh.

St. Ulrick Biſhop of Augsburgh.

WE ſhall begin with St. Ulric Biſhop of Augsburgh. He was deſcended from an ancient Family in Germany, the Son of Hugpaut and Thetpirga; He began to Study in the Monaſtery of St. Gal, and was taken from thence to be put under the Tuition of Adalbero Biſhop of Augsburgh, in the Year 909. He made a Journey to Rome, and during his reſidence there Adalbero died, and left Hiltin his Succeſſor, after whoſe death Ulric was nominated Biſhop of Augsburgh by King Henry, A. C. 924. He was highly eſteem'd by that Prince, and the Emperor Otho had a particular reſpect for him. This Prelate, in like manner, made two other Journeys to Rome; one about the Year 956. and the other near the end of his Life. He dyed A. C. 973. in the 83d. Year of his Age, after having governed the Church of Augsburgh during fifty Years.

His Life, which was written by an Author of thoſe times named Gerard, who was Contemporary with him, contains many remarkable Paſſages. It is there related, that beſides the Divine Office, which he ſung every day with his Canons in the Choir of his Church; He was wont to recite in particular the Offices of the Bleſſed Virgin, of the Holy Croſs, and of All the Saints, with the entire Pſalter; and that he was accuſtom'd to ſay one, two, or three Maſſes accordingly, as the time would permit: That in Lent, after having ſaid Mattins at Night, he continu'd his Prayers till the Hour that the Bell rung to the Vigils for the dead, which he ſung with the Choir, and afterwards the * Prime; That he continued in the Church at Prayer till the Canons return'd with the Croſs to celebrate Maſs, at which he aſſiſted, and kiſſed the Hand of the Prieſt that officiated: That after Maſs he ſung † Tierce with the Canons, and that he remain'd in the Church till the Sexte; when he viſited the Altars, and kneel'd before them, ſinging a Miſerere and a De Profundis: That then he return'd to his Chamber, to waſh his Face, and to prepare for ſaying Maſs: That when it was ſaid, and Veſpers after it, he was wont to viſit the Poor of the Hoſpital, to waſh the Feet of twelve amongſt them; and to give every one a Penny: That at his departure from thence, he ſat down at Table; that after having eat, he ſaid his Compline, and retir'd: That he ſpent all the days of Lent after this manner, till that of the Indulgence, commonly call'd Palm-Sunday: That on that day, he went early in the Morning to the Church of St. Afer, where he ſung a Trinity-Maſs, and made a Benediction of the Palm-Tree Branches, which he carried about in Proceſſion, accompanied with the Clergy and People, with the Goſpel, the Croſs, the Banners, and an Image repreſenting our Saviour ſitting on an Aſs, as far as Mount Perleich, where he was met by the Choir of Canons, and part of the People, who cover'd the way with Palm-Tree Branches or Garments: That he made an Exhortation to them upon our Saviour's Paſſion, and that they return'd together to ſing Maſs in the Cathedral Church: That during the three following days, he held a Synodical Aſſembly: That on Holy-Thurſday he celebrated Divine Service, Conſecrated the Holy Chriſm and other Oyls, and diſtributed them among his Clergy: That afterwards he went, according to his uſual Cuſtom, to viſit the Hoſpital, from whence he return'd to the Church; Clothed twelve poor Men in the Veſtry, and waſh'd their feet: That on Good-Friday he aſſiſted at the whole Office; That after having Adminiſtred the Holy Sacrament to the People as on the preceding day, he laid up the reſt of the Euchariſt, in order to bury it, according to the Cuſtom of thoſe times; and at Night he eat Bread and drank Beer, without ſitting down at Table; That on Holy Saturday, after the Nocturnal Office, the Repetition of the Pſalter, the Singing of the three Litanies, the Bleſſing of the Tapers, and the Reading of the Leſſons, he went in Proceſſion to St. John's Church, where he baptiz'd three Infants, and then return'd to Celebrate Maſs, to Adminiſter the Holy Sacrament to the People, and to ſay Veſpers: That afterwards he diſtributed Victuals to a great many Perſons: That on Eaſter-Day, after the Prime Office, he uſually went to St. Ambroſe's Church, where he celebrated the Trinity Maſs, and return'd from thence in Proceſſion, carrying the Image of our Saviour with the Goſpel; the lighted Tapers and the Incenſe to St. John Baptiſt's Church, where he Sung Tierce, and from thence to the Cathedral, where he ſung Maſs and adminiſtred the Sacrament to all the Aſſiſtants: Afterwards he gave Proviſions to the Canons of his Cathedral, and to the Clergy of St. Afra's Church diſtributing to them Lambs Flesh and pieces of Bacon, which had been bleſſed at Maſs, and gave them a very ſplendid Entertainment. It is alſo obſervable, that he was wont to viſit his Dioceſs every four Years; to inſtruct the People; to adminiſter the Sacrament of Confirmation, and to reform his Clergy.

St. Ulrick Biſhop of Augsburgh.

I ſhall take no notice of a great number of Miracles that are related in this Life of St. Ulric, nor of thoſe that were written by Gebeard his fourth Succeſſor, and by Berno Abbot of St. Afer: But I cannot omit the Hiſtory of Adalbero Nephew to this Reverend Biſhop. He had caus'd him to be carefully educated, gave him any Abby, deſign'd him for his Succeſſor, and made uſe of his Service in the Management of all his Affairs, as well at Court, as in his own Dioceſs. To gain him greater Authority, he intreated the Emperor, in the laſt Journey he made to Rome, to vouchſafe to entruſt him with the ſole Adminiſtration of the Affairs of his Dioceſs, and to nominate him for his Succeſſor. Adalbero upon his return from Augsburgh, not only caus'd an Oath of Fidelity to be taken to him, by the Clergy and People of the City, but alſo preſum'd to uſe the Croſier Staff. This Attempt gave offence to the Biſhops of Germany, inſomuch, that in a Council held at Ingelheim in the Year 972. in the preſence of the Emperor Otho, and of his Son, to which St. Ulric and Adalbero were ſummon'd; a Proceſs was drawn up againſt the latter, for preſuming to beat the Marks of the Epiſcopal Dignity, and upon that account they proceeded ſo far, as to declare him uncapable of ſucceeding his Uncle in the Biſhoprick of Augsburgh. Whereupon the good old Man, not being able ſufficiently to explain the Caſe, by reaſon of his great Age, ſent word by one of his Clerks, that he deſign'd to retire, and embrace the Monaſtick Life, according to the Rule of St. Benedict, whoſe habit he had aſſum'd. The Biſhops of the Council having made a Remonſtrance, that he ought not thus to leave his Biſhoprick, and that this Example would be of very dangerous Conſequence, oblig'd him to return to the Government of his Church; promiſing him at the ſame time, that after his death no other Biſhop ſhould ſucceed in the Dioceſs of Augsburgh, but Adalbero; of whom they exacted an Oath, that he knew not that it was unlawful, or that it was an Heretical Practice, to aſſume the Enſigns of the Epiſcopal Dignity, and to Exerciſe the Authority of a Biſhop without due Ordination.

This Promiſe ſignified nothing with reſpect to Adalbero, becauſe he died ſuddenly in a ſhort time after, even before his Uncle; who had for his Succeſſor Henry the Son of Count Burchard, who caus'd himſelf to be choſen by force. The latter dy'd as he had liv'd, that is to ſay, rather like a Soldier than a Biſhop; for in his time he raiſed a Rebellion againſt his Sovereign Prince, and was kill'd in a Battel fought againſt the Sarazens in the Year 983. After his death, the Emperor Otho the ſecond, was deſirous to confer that Biſhoprick upon Werenharius, whom St. Ulric had deſign'd for his Succeſſor; but upon his refuſal of it, Eutychus Count of Altorf was elected. Luitolphus, who ſucceeded in the Year 988. made a Journey to Rome to procure of Pope John the XV. the Canonization of St. Ulric, which he obtain'd in a Council at Rome, upon the reading of the Life and Miracles of that Saint, who edified the Church rather by his Life and Converſation, than by his Writings; for few are attributed to him, and thoſe too are very dubious. We have already obſerved that ſome make him the Author of a Diſcourſe, concerning the Eccleſiaſtical Functions aſcrib'd to Pope Leo the Fourth, and inſerted in the Synodical Letter of Ratherius, which ſeems to be really ſo; becauſe he returns an Anſwer to certain Queſtions which the Writer of his Life ſays he propos'd to his Clergy, during the time of his Viſitation.

The ſame Author cites a Sermon of St. Ulric upon the eight Mortal Sins, and the eight Beatitudes. But it is probable that he compos'd it out of the ordinary Diſcourſes that he had heard from the Mouth of that Saint: In the preceding Century was likewiſe publiſh'd in Germany, a Letter bearing the Name of St. Ulric, and directed to Pope Nicolas; in which he adviſeth that Pope, for putting an end, to the Irregularities of the Clergy, to permit them to marry: Mention is made of this Letter, in an Addition of Bartholl Prieſt of Conſtance, to the Chronicon of Hermannus Contractus; and its affirm'd to be mention'd by Æneas Sylvius in his Treatiſe of the Manners of the Germans; where he ſays, that St. Ulric reprov'd the Pope for keeping Concubines. But this Letter is apparently Suppoſititious, by reaſon that in St. Ulric's time there was no Pope nam'd Nicholas, neither did St. Ulric Biſhop of Augsburgh live in the time of thoſe Popes who bore that Name. The Authority of the Chronicon is of little moment, and Æneas Sylvius does not diſtinctly make mention of that Letter; but only ſays, that St. Ulric reprov'd the Pope, upon account of his Concubines; which may agree with John the XII. Beſides that, this Paſſage is not found in ſome Manuſcripts of Sylvius's Hiſtory, nor in the Roman Edition. But altho' it were true, that this Author alludes to that counterfeit Letter, it would only prove that it was already forged in his time; and that it is more ancient than the Councils of Baſil and Conſtance, which, as I preſume, cannot be call'd in Queſtion.

* The firſt of the Roman Canonical Hours

† Two other of the Canonical Hours.

Of the Churches of France.

Of the Churches of France.

Adalbero Biſhop of Augsburgh.

Adalbero Biſhop of Augsburgh.

ADalbero the Predeceſſor of St. Ulric is Author of the Life of St. Hariolphus the firſt Abbot of Elwangen.

Adalbero Biſhop of Augsburgh.

The two Adalberts, who were Saints.

Two Adalberts Saints.

THE two Saints nam'd Adalbert not only illuminated Germany with the Light of their Doctrine, but alſo propagated that of the Goſpel amongſt the Barbarous Nations: The former, after having preach'd it to the People, who inhabit a long the Coaſts of the Baltick Sea, and having taken much pains in Converting the Sclavonians, was ordain'd the firſt Archbiſhop of Magdeburgh in the Year 968. and dyed in 981. The ſecond, who was Biſhop of Prague, in like manner preach'd the Goſpel to the Bohemians, Polanders, and Hungarians. The latter left his Biſhoprick, by reaſon of the exceſſive Enormities of the People of Bohemia, and departing to Rome, there embrac'd the Monaſtick Life in the Convent of St. Boniface. After having ſpent five years there, he return'd to Bohemia, and paſs'd from thence into Hungary; from whence he return'd the ſecond time to Rome, and preſided five years more in the ſame Monaſtery. He was alſo remov'd again by the Solicitation of the Archbiſhop of Mentz, who oblig'd Pope Gregory the fifth to ſend him back. Boleſlaus King of Bohemia having forbidden him to enter his Dominions, he went into Pruſſia, and from thence into Lithuania, where having ſuffer'd much in propagating the Chriſtian Faith, he at laſt receiv'd the Crown of Martyrdom.

Two Adalberts Saints.

Bruno Archbiſhop of Cologne.

Bruno Archbiſhop of Cologn.

BRuno Archbiſhop of Cologne, the Son of the Emperor Henry the Fowler, and Brother of Otho the Great, is none of the leaſt Ornaments of the Church of Germany, both with reſpect to his profound Learning and ſingular Piety. We are inform'd by a Writer of that time, that he had acquired a perfect Knowledge of the Greek and Latin Tongues; that he had perus'd all the Ancient Authors; that he had a very fine Library; and that he took a particular Care of his Dioceſs and Clergy; retrenching all their ſuperfluous Habits, and obliging them to a conſtant attendance on the Duties of their Functions, as alſo inſtructing them by frequent Conferences, reiterated Exhortations, and his own Example. Sixtus Senenſis ſays, that he compos'd a Commentary on the Pentateuch, the Manuſcript of which is kept in the Library of the Dominicans at Boulogne. It's alſo reported that he wrote the Lives of certain Saints. He was choſen Archbiſhop of Cologne in the Year 953. and dy'd in 965.

Bruno Archbiſhop of Cologn.

Roger Monk of St. Pantaleon.

Roger Monk of St. Pantaleon.

THE Life of this great Archbiſhop was written by Roger a Monk of St. Pantaleon at Cologne, who dedicated it to Folcuin his Succeſſor in the Year 970. It is referr'd by Surius to Octob. 12. and is written very elegantly with reſpect to the Style of thoſe times. We alſo may reckon up a great number of German Prelates illuſtrious for their Learning and Piety, among whom are Henry Archbiſhop of Trier, Wolfang Biſhop of Ratisbon, Sigiſmond of Halberſtadt, and many others whom we ſhall not now mention. We ſhall therefore proceed to give a particular Account of thoſe who have left us any conſiderable Writings.

Roger Monk of St. Pantaleon.

Ratboldus Biſhop of Utrecht.

Ratboldus Biſhop of Utrecht.

RAthboldus or Ratboldus a German by Nation, deſcended from the Princes of Frieſland, apply'd himſelf to Study under Nanno or Manno, in the Court of Charles the Bald, and of his Son Lewis, where thoſe Princes caus'd the Liberal Sciences to be taught publickly. He was choſen Biſhop of Utrecht in the Year 899. Trithemius ſays, that he was well vers'd in the Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, and that he was no Novice in Humane Literature; that he was of a quick Apprehenſion, and much eſteem'd for his Eloquence, leading a very Circumſpect Life and Converſation; that he govern'd the Church of Utrecht during ſeventeen Years, and wrote ſeveral Tracts; among others, a Treatiſe of the Commendation of St. Martin; another of that of St. Boniface; The Life of St. Amalberga; a Book of Homilies and Sermons; certain florid Diſcourſes on St. Willebrord; an Office of the Tranſlation of St. Martin; with divers Hymns in Honour of the Saints; and laſtly that he dy'd in the Year 917. or rather in 918. Another Writer nam'd William of Hedin, attributes to him certain Poetical Pieces, and a Compendious Chronicon. Surius likewiſe aſcribes to him an Eclogue concerning St. Lebuin. Father Mabillon has publiſh'd a Diſcourſe of the ſame Author on the Life of St. Amalberga, and another on that of St. Willebrord.

Ratboldus Biſhop of Utrecht.

Hildebert Archbiſhop of Mentz.

Hildebert Archbiſhop of Metz.

HIldebert Brother to the Emperor Conrade, the thirteenth Archbiſhop of Metz, Crown'd Otho the Great in the year 938. But afterward's having combin'd with Richard Biſhop of Strasburgh, to foment the Diviſion between Otho and his Brother Henry, he was baniſh'd to Hamburgh. Some make him the Author of the Lives of certain Saints.

Hildebert Archbiſhop of Metz.

William Archbiſhop of Mentz.

William Archbiſhop of Metz.

WIlliam the fifteenth Archbiſhop of Mentz, Prince of Saxony and the Son of Otho the Great, was choſen Archbiſhop in the year 954. and dy'd in 968. He compos'd a Chronicon of the Archbiſhops his Predeceſſors.

William Archbiſhop of Metz.

Bonno Abbot of Corbey in Saxony.

Bonno Abbot of Corbey in Saxony.

BOnno or Bavo Abbot of Corbey in Saxony, flouriſh'd under Arnulphus and Lewis the fourth, Kings of Germany. He wrote a Treatiſe of the memorable Actions of his time, mention'd in the Hiſtory of Adam of Breme, who cites a Paſſage of it concerning a Miracle of St. Rembert. We have at preſent no other knowledge of that Work.

Bonno Abbot of Corbey in Saxony.

Waltram-

Waltramnus Bishop of Strasburg.

Waltramnus Bishop of Strasburg.

WAltramnus or Waldramnus Bishop of Strasburg, who assisted at the Council of Triburia in the year 895. and did not dye till 905. is the Author of certain Poetical Pieces which are inserted in the second Tome of Canisius's Antiquities.

Waltramnus Bishop of Strasburg.

Solomon Bishop of Constance.

Solomon Bishop of Constance

SOlomon Bishop of Constance liv'd almost at the same Time, for he entred upon the Episcopal Function in the year 891. and dy'd in 919. He likewise compos'd certain Poems dedicated to Bishop Dado, which are in the first Tome of the same Antiquities by Canisius. He had been Monk of St. Gal, and Chaplain to King Lewis.

Solomon Bishop of Constance

Utho Bishop of Strasburg.

Utho Bishop of Strasburg.

RUtharius Bishop of Strasburg had for his Successor in the year 950. Utho Nephew to Henry the second Duke of Schwabia. This Utho wrote the Lives of St. Arbogastus, and St. Amanda, and dy'd in 975. leaving Erhembaldus his Successor.

Utho Bishop of Strasburg.

Notger the Stammerer.

Notger the Stammerer.

THere were several Notgers in the Tenth Century, but the first and most famous was of the Carlian Race, and sirnam'd Stammerer, by reason of the Impediment in his Speech. He enter'd very young into the Monastery of St. Gal, where he studied under Marcellus and Iso, with Ratpertus and Tutilo. These three Monks studying together, promoting Learning in that Abby, where they had frequent Conferences with one another, applying themselves more especially to the Study of the Liberal Arts and Sciences, and to that of Musick in particular: But their chief Imployment was the making of Proses. Notger compos'd many, and translated the Psalter into High-Dutch for the Use of King Arnulphus; He wrote the Life of St. Gal in Verse, as also a Treatise of the Letters of the Alphabet, that are us'd in Musick and some other Works of the like Nature; but the principal of them is his Martyrologia, publish'd by Canisius in the sixth Tome of his Antiquities. The same Canisius has set forth some of the Proses and Hymns of this Author, with a Fragment of the Life of St. Gall, in the fifth Tome of the same Work, in which is also found the Treatise of Musick before-mention'd. Besides these Works, Goldastus attributes to Notger the Stammerer the two Books of the History of Charlemagn, that are dedicated to Charles the Bald, and written by a nameless Monk of St. Gal: And indeed he seems to discover himself in the 26*th*. Chapter of the second Book, where he declares that he is subject to Stammering, and wants Teeth. The same Author observes, that he has seen a Manuscript of the Life of St. Gal, written by Way of Dialogue, which bears the Name of Notger. To him likewise is attributed the Life of St. Landoald referr'd by Surius to March 19. That of St. Remaclus Bishop of Utrecht, referr'd by the same Historian, to Sept. 3. and two Books of the Miracles of that Saint: But 'tis not certain that these Works are his; neither do they appear to be of the same Style. Notger spent the greatest Part of his Life in the Ninth Century, and dy'd in the Month of April, A. C. 912. His Martyrology was compos'd in the End of the Ninth Century, or in the Beginning of the Tenth.

The second Notger liv'd in the Tenth Century, and was not made Abbot of St. Gal till the year 973. he dy'd in 981. but there are not any of his Pieces now extant.

The third Notger was chosen Bishop of Leige in the year 972. Neither has he left any Works, unless we attribute to him the above-mention'd Lives of the Saints.

Notger the Stammerer.

Witichindus Monk of St. Corbey in Westphalia.

Witichindus Monk of St. Corbey in Westphalia.

WItichindus, Winduchindus or Windichinus a Monk of Corbey a Monastery in Westphalia, of the Order of St. Benedict, flourish'd under Otho I. and II. He wrote three Books of the History of the Saxons, in which are comprehended the Actions of Henry and Otho the First, and which ends at the Death of the latter, that is to say, in the year 973. They are dedicated to Queen Mathilda, Daughter of the Emperor Otho, and were printed at Basil, A. D. 1532. at Francfort in 1577. Among the German Historians printed in 1580. and at the End of a particular Edition by Meibonius at Francfort in 1621. Sigebert says also, that he wrote in Verse a Relation of St. Thecla's Passion, and the Life of St. Paul the first Hermit. These Works are lost; altho' in the last Edition by Meibonius, there are certain Verses which are attributed to this Monk.

Witichindus Monk of St. Corbey in Westphalia.

Roswida a Nun.

Roswida a Nun.

ROswida, a Nun of the Monastery of Gandersheim, famous for her Quality, Learning and Piety, flourish'd under the Emperor Otho II. by whose Order she compos'd in Heroick Verse a Panegyrick upon the Actions of Otho the First. She likewise wrote in Verse the Passion of St. Dennis Bishop and Martyr, and that of St. Pelegius who suffer'd Martyrdom in Spain; and some other Poems in Commendation of the Virgin Mary and St. Anne; as also on St. Gandolphus and some other Saints. To her likewise is attributed the Life of St. Wilbad Bishop of Eichstadt, and that of St. Unnebald the first Abbot of Heildesheim, related by Surius, Canisius, and Father Mabillon. This Nun wrote in a finer Style than most Part of the Authors of her Time, and was well vers'd in the Knowledge of the Greek and Latin Tongues: Her Poem of the Life of Otho, was printed with Witichind's Works at Francfort in 1621. and in the Collection of the German Writers by Reberus; and her Poetical Pieces were printed together at Nuremberg in 1501. by Conradus Celta.

Roswida a Nun.

Reginaldus Bishop of Eichstadt.

Reginaldus Bishop of Eichstadt.

REginaldus, who in the year 975. succeeded Starhand kill'd by the Hungarians at Augsburgh, in the Bishoprick of Eichstadt, pass'd in his Time for a very learned Man, as having attained to a considerable Knowledge in the Greek, Latin, and Hebrew Tongues, and more especially in the Art of Musick. He wrote the Lives of St. Wilbald and Unnebald, with those of St. Nicholas, and St. Blasius. He was Bishop for the Space of twenty four years.

Another German Bishop of the same Time, has given us the Life of St. Hunegonda referr'd by Surius to Aug. 25. and a nameless Writer made a Narrative of the Translation of St. Epiphanius Bishop of Pavia into Saxony.

Reginaldus Bishop of Eichstadt.

Thierry Archbishop of Triers.

Thierry Archbishop of Triers.

THierry Provost of the Church of Mentz, and afterwards Archbishop of Trier, wrote sometime before the preceding Authors (for he dy'd in the year 970.) the Life of St. Lagunda, referr'd by Surius to Sept. 22.

Thierry Archbishop of Triers.

Othlo Biſhop of Metz.

Othlo Biſhop of Metz.

Othlo Monk of Fulda wrote the Life of St. Pyrmin, who is ſuppos'd to have been Biſhop of Meaux, or rather Metz. This Life is dedicated to Lindolphus Archbiſhop of Trier, and was publiſh'd by Bronverus, who caus'd it to be printed A. D. 1616. at Mentz, with other Lives of the illuſtrious Perſonages of Germany. Lindolphus was made Archbiſhop of Trier in 999. and dy'd in 1008. Therefore Othlo compos'd his Work in the Ninth Century, or in the Beginning of the Tenth. Caniſius and Serrarius likewiſe attribute to him the Life of St. Boniface. But Bronverus obſerves, that it is of a different Style.

Othlo Biſhop of Metz.

Uffing or Uffo Monk of Werthin.

Uffing or Uffo Monk of Werthin

AT the ſame Time Uffing, or rather Uffo of Frieſland, Monk of Werthin, wrote the Life of St. Ludger Biſhop of Munſter, which was printed at Cologn the laſt Century, with a Poem of the ſame Author; ſome attribute to him the Life of St. Ida reſerr'd by Surius to Sept. 4. Suffridus ſays, that he likewiſe left the Life of St. Lucius King of England, which he affirms to be extant in Manuſcript.

We have the Acts only of very few Councils of Germany in the Tenth Century, altho' we have juſt Grounds to ſuppoſe that many more were held. The firſt, of which any Monument remaining, is a Council held at Coblentz, in the Year 922. by the Order of Charles King of France, and Henry King of Germany. It was compos'd of eight Prelates, viz. Herman Archbiſhop of Mentz, Heriger Archbiſhop of Cologn, and ſix other German Biſhops, and made eight Canons, of which only the firſt, fifth, Sixth, Seventh and Eighth remain in our Poſſeſſion. The firſt forbids Marriage between Relations to the ſixth Generation. The fifth prohibits Laymen, who have Chappels, from receiving the Tythes of them with their own Hands on purpoſe to put them to profane Uſes, and ordains that the Prieſts ſhall receive and uſe them to the Advantage of the Churches, and for the Maintenance of Hoſpitals and poor People. The ſixth brings the Monks under Subjection to the Juriſdiction and Government of the Biſhop. The ſeventh condemns a Perſon who ſells a Chriſtian for a Slave, as guilty of Murder. The eighth forbids thoſe who give any Goods or Revenues to a particular Church, to take away the Tithes due upon Account of ſuch Revenues, to the Church to which they belong'd before.

The Canons of a Council held at Erfurdt in the year 932. in like Manner are ſtill extant, with a Preface which ſhews, that it was conven'd by the Order of King Henry the firſt, in the fourteenth year of his Reign, and that it was compos'd of the Archbiſhop of Trier and twelve Biſhops. The firſt of theſe Canons imports, that the Feſtivals of the Twelve Apoſtles ſhall be ſolemniz'd, and that the Faſt of the Vigils ſhall be obſerv'd according to the ancient Conſtitutions. The ſecond, that no Pleas ſhall be held in the Courts of Judicature on Sundays, Holy-days, or Faſting-days: It is alſo added, that King Henry prohibited the Judges to cite any Perſon before them in the Week preceding the Feſtival of Chriſtmas, that of St. John Baptiſt, and during the whole Time of Lent, till the eighth Day after Eaſter. In the third it is forbidden to deliver a Summons or Warrant to thoſe Perſons who are going to Church, or are there already, that they may not be diſturb'd in their Devotions. The fourth imports, that if a Prieſt be ſuſpected of any Crime, and accuſed before his Biſhop, he ſhall be thrice admoniſh'd to acknowledge his Fault, and ſhall undergo condign Puniſhment, if he be found guilty, unleſs he prove his Innocence by clearing himſelf by his own Oath, or by that of his Colleagues. The fifth forbids private Perſons to impoſe Faſts without the Conſent of the Biſhop or his Vicar, becauſe many do it to carry on ſuperſtitious Divinations, or for other ſiniſter Ends, rather than out of a Principle of Devotion.

Uffing or Uffo Monk of Werthin

We have already made mention of the Council of Ingelheim held in the year 948. in treating of the Conteſts of Artaldus for obtaining the Archbiſhoprick of Rheims, in regard it was chiefly aſſembled upon that Account.

In the year 952. the Emperor Otho I. held at Augsburgh an Aſſembly of the Biſhops of Germany, France, and Italy; where the Archbiſhop of Mentz preſided, and publiſh'd eleven Canons, which were approv'd by the other Prelates.

The firſt ordains that the Prieſts, Deacons and Subdeacons that marry, ſhall be depos'd according to Chap. 25. of the Council of Carthage. The ſecond is againſt Clergymen, who keep Dogs and Birds for Hunting, and are addicted to that Exerciſe; they are to be ſuſpended from their Functions as long as they perſiſt in ſuch Practices. The third ordains, that Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons, who ſpend their Time in playing at Games of Chance, ſhall incur the Penalty of being depos'd, unleſs they renounce ſuch Sort of Games. The fourth is againſt thoſe Clergymen who keep ſuſpicious Women in their Houſes. The fifth prohibits Monks from going out of their Cloiſters, without the Permiſſion of their Abbot. The Sixth enjoyns Biſhops to take Care of the Monaſteries of their reſpective Dioceſſes, and ſpeedily to reform the Diſorders that are committed in them. The ſeventh and eighth forbid them to hinder Clergymen and Canoneſſes from imbracing the Monaſtical Life. The ninth prohibits Laymen from turning out of Churches thoſe Perſons, to whom the Biſhops have committed the Care of them. The tenth attributes to the Biſhop the Right of taking Cognizance of the Diſtribution of Tythes. And the eleventh imports, that not only the Biſhops, Prieſts, Deacons and Subdeacons ſhall lead a ſingle Life, but alſo that the other Clergy ſhall be oblig'd to live continently when they come to years of Maturity.

CHAP. V.

An Account of the Churches of England.

Of the Churches of England

IN the Beginning of the Ninth Century, King Alfred re-eſtabliſh'd the Univerſities, and caus'd the Liberal Arts and Sciences to flouriſh in England, inviting over the Abbot Grimbaldus, and ſeveral other learned Men of France; but the Kings his Succeſſors were chiefly imploy'd in reforming the Corruptions of Manners and Diſcipline. In the beginning of this Century King Edward, upon the Remonſtrances and Threats of the Pope, who complain'd that for ſeven Years the whole Country of the Weſt-Saxons was deſtitute of Biſhops, caus'd a Council to be aſſembled at Canterbury, in which Archbiſhop Phlegmon preſided, and where ſeveral Perſons were choſen to be Biſhops in that Province, and elſewhere, who were ordain'd by Phlegmon after his Return from Rome, whither he went on Purpoſe to give an Account to the Pope of the Proceedings of the Council, and to pacifie him. The Pope approv'd their Regulations, order'd that for the Future the Churches ſhould no longer be left vacant, and confirm'd the Primacy of the Church of Canterbury. All theſe Actions are attributed by ſeveral Authors to Pope Formoſus, but in regard that this Pope dy'd a long while before the Time of King Edward, they are rather to be aſcrib'd to John the Ninth, who poſſeſs'd the See of Rome in the Beginning of Edward's Reign, A. C. 904. to which this Council may be referr'd.

The ſame King publiſh'd in the year 906. divers Laws againſt the Diſturbers of the Tranquillity of the Church; againſt Apoſtates whom he condemns to Death; againſt Clergymen who commit Robberies or Fornication; againſt inceſtuous Perſons; againſt thoſe who refuſe to pay Tythes, or to keep Sundays and Faſting-days; and againſt Sorcerers and lewd Women, who are condemned to different Puniſhments. 'Tis alſo ordain'd in that Edict, that Perſons condemn'd to dye for Capital Crimes, ſhould be permitted to make a Confeſſion of their Sins in Private to a Prieſt, and that thoſe, who have been deprived of any Member for an Offence, and ſurvive three Days, ſhould cauſe their Wounds to be dreſs'd, and receive Conſolation, after having obtain'd a Licence from the Biſhop.

Of the Churches of England

King Ethelſtan, who ſucceeded Edward in the year 923. in like Manner caus'd certain Laws to be enacted relating to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, with the Advice of the Prelates, Lords, and learned Men of his Kingdom, by which he ordain'd, That all the Lands, and even thoſe of his own Demeans, ſhould be liable to pay Tythes. He enjoyn'd all thoſe, who held any Eſtates of him, to allow ſomewhat for the Maintenance of the Poor, and other charitable Uſes: He prohibited Outrages that were done to the Churches, and again

Of the Churches of England

King Ethelstan's Laws.

again condemn'd the Sorcerers and Witches to Imprisonment, and to pay great Fines: He regulated the Manner of proving the Innocence of accused Persons, by Fire or Water-Ordeal; Forbad the keeping of Markets, or buying and selling on Sundays: And ordain'd that perjur'd Persons and false Witnesses should be depriv'd of Christian Burial. To these Laws he added divers Instructions for the Bishops, and recommended the Reading in the Monasteries every Friday fifty Psalms upon his Account.

Forasmuch as the most remarkable Circumstances of those Laws, is that which relates to the Clearing or Convicting of an accused Person, by the Trial of Fire or Water, then commonly call'd Ordeal; and in Regard that the Manner of performing it is there explain'd at large, it may not be improper here to insert an Account of that Passage. 'If any 'one be desirous to clear himself by Ordeal, that is to say, 'by the Triat of Fire or Water, let him come to the Priest 'three Days before he do it, who shall give him a Bene'diction after the usual Manner; and during those three 'Days let him eat nothing but Bread and Salt, or Pulse; 'let him hear Mass every Day; let him make an Oblation; 'let him receive the Sacrament on the Day he is to un'dergo the Trial. If it be that of cold Water, let him be 'plung'd one Fathom below the Surface of the Water. If 'it be that of a hot Iron, let it be put into his Hand, and 'left there three Days, without looking on it. If it be that 'of hot Water, let it be made boyling hot, and let the Hand 'or Arm of the accused Person be put into it. In all these 'Trials, both the accused Person and the Accuser are to 'fast, and to cause twelve Witnesses to be present, who 'may take an Oath with them, and let Holy Water be 'sprinkled upon them.' There are two Editions of these Laws, one of which is printed at large, and the other is an Abridgment of them.

An Ecclesiastical Assembly under King Edmund.

King Edmund had no less Zeal for the maintaining of the Discipline of the Church, than his Predecessor Ethelstan. He held in the year 944. which was the third of his Reign, even on Eastersday, an Assembly of the Prelates and Lords, in which he made certain Laws relating to Chastity, and the Payment of Tythes, and of the Alms-penny; as also against those who offer'd Violence to Nuns; against perjur'd Persons, and those who assisted at profane Sacrifices. In these Laws are specified the Ecclesiastical Penalties to be inflicted on the Infringers of them; viz. The Privation of Christian Burial and Excommunication. The Bishops are there enjoyn'd to repair their Churches at their own Charge, and to prefer a Petition to the Prince, for the Reparation of others, and for their Ornaments. He likewise made Laws for the Punishment of Murderers, and for the regulating of Marriage-Solemnities. This Assembly was held under Wulfstan Archbishop of York, and Odo Archbishop of Canterbury.

Odo Archbishop of Canterbury.

The latter made about that Time, certain Ecclesiastical Constitutions, by way of Admonition or Instruction, in which he recommends, 1. That the Church should be left in the peaceable Enjoyment of its Privileges and Immunities, and that no Taxes should be laid on the Revenues belonging to it. 2. He admonishes the King and the Princes to obey the Archbishops and Bishops; to be humble; to oppress no Man; to administer Justice to all; to punish Criminals; and to relieve the Poor with their Alms. 3. He orders the Bishops to lead an exemplary Life; to visit their Dioceses once every Year; to preach the Truth boldly to Kings and Princes; to excommunicate none without just Grounds, and to shew to All the Way to Salvation. 4. He enjoyns the Priests in like Manner to live circumspectly, and to wear Habits conformable to their Order. 5. He gives the same Admonition to all the Clergy. 6. He exhorts the Monks to perform their Vows, and forbids them to turn Vagabonds, contenting themselves only with wearing the Habit of Monks, without leading a Life consonant to their Profession: He recommends to them working with their own Hands, Reading and Prayer. 7. He prohibits Incestuous Marriages with Nuns, or near Relations. 8. He recommends Peace and Union. 9. He enjoyns the Observation of the solemn Fasts of Lent; of the Ember-Weeks; of Wednesday and Friday; and the Celebration of Divine Service on Sundays and Festivals. Lastly, He recommends the Payment of Tythes. There is also a Pastoral Letter written by this Archbishop, and directed to his Suffragans, which is related by William of Malmsbury.

An Assembly of Bishops at London, A. C. 948.

Edmund being kill'd in the year 946. his Brother Elred took Possession of the Throne. We have no Laws enacted by this Prince, only the Charter of a considerable Donation made by him to the Monastery of Crowland, in Favour of Turketulus, who had been formerly Chancellor of the Kingdom, and to whom he gave that Abby. This was done in an assembly of Bishops and Lords held at London, in the year 948.

After the Death of Elred, which happen'd in 955. Edwin the Son of Edmund was proclaim'd King, but sometime after, part of England revolting, Edgar the Brother of Edwin got a Share of his Dominions, and upon his Brother's Death, obtain'd the sole Possession of the whole Kingdom. This Prince being more religious than his Predecessors, entirely re-establish'd the Purity of Discipline in the Church of England, and brought the Monastical Course of Life into Repute, by the Advice of St. Dunstan, who may be call'd the Restorer of the Ecclesiastical Discipline in England.

Of the Churches of England

This Saint was born in the Country of the West-Saxons, in the first year of King Ethelstan's Reign, A. C. 923. He enter'd into Holy Orders very young, and after having compleated his Studies, made Application to Athelm Archbishop of Canterbury, who introduc'd him into the Presence of King Ethelstan: Afterward having fall'n into some Disgrace at Court, he retir'd to Elfeg Bishop of Winchester, who advis'd him to imbrace the Monastical Life, which he accordingly did, and continued in his Retirement till the Reign of King Edmund, when he was invited to Court by that Prince: He did not remain long there, without being obnoxious to the Envy and Hatred of several Persons, who misrepresented him to the King; insomuch that he was oblig'd to retire to his Solitude of Glassenbury, where he took up his Abode; altho' he was restor'd to the Favour of King Edmund, who had always a great Respect for him; granted considerable Revenues to his Monastery, and continu'd to follow his Counsels, not only in the Management of Civil Affairs, but also of Ecclesiastical. He was no less esteem'd by King Elred, who determin'd to nominate him to the Bishoprick of Winchester; but Edwin having receiv'd a severe Reprimand for his irregularities from this Abbot, banish'd him, and pillaged his Monastery. However, King Edgar recall'd him immediately after his Accession to the Crown, and made him not only Bishop of Winchester, but also conferr'd on him the Government of the Church of London. At last the Archbishoprick of Canterbury being vacant, in the Year 961. by the Death of Odo; Elfsin Bishop of Winchester, who was appointed to supply his Place, dying in a Journey he made over the Alps to Rome, to fetch the Pall; and Berthelim, who was substituted in his Room, having refus'd to accept that Dignity, Dunstan was invested with it a few Days after, and went to Rome to receive the Pall. At his return, he apply'd himself altogether to the Reformation of the Clergy of England, and took upon him to expel all those who refus'd to lead a regular Course of Life, and to restore the Monks to their former Station.

St. Dunstan Archbishop of Canterbury.

This Saint had for his Fellow-labourers and Imitators of his Zeal, Ethelwold Bishop of Winchester, and Oswald Bishop of Worcester, who founded a great Number of Monasteries, and took much Pains in reforming the Clergy, and extirpating the Vices that were predominant in England. The former dyed in the year 984. before St. Dunstan, who foretold his approaching Death, as well as that of the Bishop of Rochester, in a Visit which those two Prelates made him: But the latter did not dye till after this Archbishop, viz. in the year 992. As for St. Dunstan, he surviv'd King Edgar, who dy'd in 975. and maintain'd the Right of the young Prince Edward, against the Pretensions of Alfride, who endeavour'd to transfer the Crown to her Son Ethelfred; but Edward being assassinated three Years after by the Treachery of that Queen, Dunstan was constrained to crown Ethelfred, and foretold the Calamities that should befal England, and the Family of this young Prince, as a Punishment for his Crime, and that of his Mother. At last St. Dunstan dy'd, laden with Years and Honour, A. C. 988.

In his Time, and apparently by his Direction, King Edgar in 967. not only publish'd Laws like to those of his Predecessors, for the Preservation of the Revenues of the Church; for the Payment of Tythes, and St. Peter's Pence; and for the solemn Observations of Sundays and Festivals; but also divers Ecclesiastical Constitutions, relating to the Manners and Functions of Clergymen; to the Celebration of the Mass; to the Confession and Penances that ought to be impos'd on those who commit Sin, &c. Indeed these Canons may serve as a Kind of Ritual for the Use of Curates. It is affirm'd that they were made in the year 967. by King Edgar; but this does not appear to be altogether certain, and perhaps they are of a later Date. The Discourse which this King made to Dunstan Archbishop of Canterbury, and to Oswald and Ethelwold Bishops of Worcester and Winchester, is much more certain. He there inveighs against the Irregularities and Disorders of the Clergy, and pathetically exhorts those Bishops to joyn their Authority with his, to repress their Insolence; and to oblige them to apply the Ecclesiastical Revenues to the Relief of the Poor, for which Use they were design'd. To the End that this Order might be put in Execution, he granted a Commission to those three Prelates to take the Matter in hand, and gave them Power to turn out of the Churches such Clergymen as liv'd dissolutely, and to substitute others in their Room.

A General Council of England, in the Year 973.

By Virtue of this Injunction, St. Dunstan held a General Council A. C. 973. in which he ordain'd that all Priests, Deacons and Subdeacons, who would not lead a sober Life, should be expell'd their Churches, and caus'd a Decree to be made, to oblige them to imbrace a regular and Monastick Course of Life, or to retire. And accordingly, these three Bishops turn'd the old Clergymen out of most Part of the Churches, and put Monks in their Place, or else forc'd them to assume the Monastical Habit.

Of the Churches of England

St. Dunstan did not only shew his Constancy and Zeal, with respect to the Clergy, but was also as zealous in treating Kings and Princes: For he sharply reprov'd King Edgar for abusing a young Maid whom he had sent for out of a Monastery, and impos'd on him a Penance of seven years. A certain very potent Earl having married one of his near Kinswomen, he excommunicated him, and refus'd to take off the Excommunication, altho' the King had commanded him, and the Earl had obtain'd a Brief of the Pope for his Restoration. St. Dunstan being inform'd of it, reply'd, That he was ready to obey the Pope's Commands, provided the Person had really repented of his Offence; but that he would not suffer him to persist in his Sin, nor without submitting to the Discipline of the Church to insult over the Prelates, and, as it were, to triumph in his Crime. At last, the Earl being mov'd with his Constancy, and the Fear of those Punishments which the Divine Vengeance usually inflicts upon excommunicated Persons, left his Kinswoman, did publick Penance, and threw himself down prostrate before St. Dunstan in a Council, barefoot, cloath'd with a Woollen Garment, holding a Bundle of Rods in his Hand, and lamenting his Sin, from which St. Dunstan gave him, Absolution, at the Request of the Bishops of the Council.

A Council under St. Dunstan and King Edgar.

The Reformation of the Clergy cannot be carried on without great Opposition, nor without creating many Malecontents, insomuch that in King Edgar's Life-time, the Clergymen depriv'd of their Benefices, used their utmost Efforts to recover them; and having made a Complaint in an Assembly held at Winchester, in the Beginning of the Year 975. they prevail'd upon the King by their Entreaties, and the Promises they made to lead a more regular Course of Life for the Future: But as they were about making a Decree for their Restoration, on Condition they should live more regularly, a Voice was heard coming as it were from the Crucifix, which pronounc'd these Words, It will turn to no Account, you have pass'd a just Sentence, and you will do ill to alter your Decisions. However, after the Death of King Edgar these Clergymen renewed their Instances, and even offer'd Force to drive the Monks not only from their Places, but also out of the Monasteries which were lately founded: But St. Dunstan always maintain'd his Reformation, which prevail'd in the most Part of the Churches and Monasteries of England, under the Reigns of Edward and Ethelred.

A Council at Winchester A. C. 975.

St. Dunstan and St. Ethelwald did not only take Pains to reform the Ecclesiastical Discipline in England, but also in reviving the Study of the Liberal Sciences, and even they themselves compos'd some Works. A modern English Writer, call'd Pits, says that St. Dunstan compil'd certain Forms of Archiepiscopal Benedictions; a small Tract on the Rule of St. Benedict; a Book call'd, Rules for the Monastical Life; several Writings against vicious Priests; a Treatise of the Eucharist; another of Tythes; a Book of occult Philosophy; a Tract for the Instruction of the Clergy, and some Letters. And indeed, we cannot be certainly assur'd upon the Credit of this Writer, whether St. Dunstan were really the Author of these Works, which are no longer extant; but we find a Concordance or Rule for the Monastick Life, and under the Name of Edgar set forth by Rainerus, which is apparently a Piece of St. Dunstan, as well as the other Constitutions of that Prince, and there is extant a Letter written by him to Wulfin Bishop of Worcester, which Father Mabillon publish'd from a Manuscript of Monsieur Faure, Doctor of the Faculty of Paris. The Life of St. Dunstan was writen by Osborn, Chanter of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, who was contemporary with this Saint, and is found in the fifth Benedictine Century of Father Mabillon.

If we may give farther Credit to Pits, St. Ethelwald in like Manner compos'd several Tracts, of which he gives us this following Catalogue: A Book dedicated to Pope John XIV. concerning the Authority of the Bishops over their Priests; a Treatise against those Priests who commit Fornication, and against their Concubines; another of the Abbots of Lindisfarn; another of the Kings, Kingdoms, and Bishopricks of England; a History of the Kings of Great Britain; a Narrative of his Visitations; a Treatise of the Planets and Climates of the World. The Treatise of the Abbots of Lindisfarn, which this Author attributes to St. Ethelwald, is apparently a Piece compos'd in Verse by Ethelwulf a Monk of that Abby. The other Works are no longer extant, and perhaps never were, but only in Pits's Imagination.

Of the Churches of England

St. Ethelwald Bishop of Winchester.

The Writers of Ecclesiastical History are not agreed about the immediate Successor of St. Dunstan in the Archbishoprick of Canterbury: Some gave him the Name of Siricius, and others of Alfric or Ælfric: However, it is certain that the latter was Archbishop of Canterbury in the Beginning of the following Century, in regard that he sign'd in that Quality a Privilege granted by King Ethelred: He was a Pupil of St. Ethelwald, succeeded him in the Monastery of Abington; was afterward made Abbot of Malmsbury by King Edgar, then Bishop of some Church in England, about which Authors are not agreed; and at last, being advanc'd to the Metropolitan See of Canterbury, he govern'd that Church till about the year 1006. This Archbishop in his Time was in great Reputation for his profound Skill in the Sciences of Grammar and Divinity, insomuch that he was sirnam'd The Grammarian. His Sermons were translated into the Saxon Tongue, in order to be read publickly in the Churches, and his Letters were inserted in the Synodical Books of the Church of England. The English Writers assure us, that their Libraries were full of a great Number of Works of this Archbishop, written in the Saxon Tongue, and they have lately publish'd some of them translated into Latin, viz. A Paschal Homily of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, in which he discourses much after the same Manner as Ratramnus or Bertram, and two Letters, one to Wulfin Bishop of Salisbury, and the other to Wulstan Archbishop of York on the same Subject, which were printed at London in 1566, 1623, and 1638. In the Body of the Councils is contain'd a Canonical Letter of Alfric, directed to Wulfin, which is a kind of Ritual for the Use of the Priests. The principal Manuscript Treatises of this Author, compos'd in the Saxon Tongue, are an History of the Old and New Testament till the Taking of Jerusalem; a Penitential; eighty Sermons; a Letter concerning the Monastical Life; another against the Marriage of Clergymen; a Saxon Chronicle of the Church of Canterbury; certain Lives of the Saints, and Versions of some Latin Works; among others the Dialogue of St. Gregory.

Alfric or Ælfric Archbishop of Canterbury.

Sometime before Fridegod, a Monk of St. Saviour at Canterbury, wrote in Verse, at the Request of Odo, the Lives of St. Wilfrid and of St. Owen Archbishop of York; the former was publish'd by Father Mabillon in the first Part of the third and fourth Benedictine Centuries. William of Malmesbury observes, that these Verses are not altogether contemptible, but that Fridegod intermixes so many Greek Words and Phrases which render them unintelligible.

Fridegod Monk of St. Saviour at Canterbury.

At the same Time Lanfrid, a Monk of Winchester, wrote the Life of St Swithin, and a Relation of the Miracles that happen'd at his Translation; and after him Wulstan, Monk of the same Monastery, compos'd in Verse the History of that Translation, and the Life of St. Ethelwald.

Lanfrid and Wulstan Monks of Winchester.

Thus we have given an Account of almost all the most remarkable Circumstances that occur in the Ecclesiastical History of England in the Tenth Century.

CHAP. VI.

Observations on the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the Tenth Century.

Observations on the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the tenth Century.

THere were no Controversies in the tenth Age of the Church, relating to Articles of Faith, or Doctrinal Points of Divinity, by reason that there were no Hereticks, nor other Inquisitive Persons, who reason'd upon Matters of Religion, or undertook to dive into the bottom of its Mysteries. The Sober Party contented themselves only in yielding an implicite Faith to whatever the Church-men thought fit to deliver from the Pulpit; and the profligate Wretches, abandon'd themselves to gross Sensualities, which gave Satisfaction to their brutish Appetites, rather than to the Vices of the Mind, to which only ingenious Persons are liable. Therefore in this Age of Darkness and Ignorance, the Church not being disturb'd upon account of its Doctrines, had nothing to do but to put a stop to the Enormities of Discipline and Manners.

Controversies about Doctrinal Points.

There were nevertheless in England some Clergy-men, who positively affirm'd that the Bread and Wine on the Altar retain'd the very same Substance after Consecration, and that they were only the Representation of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, and not his Real Body and Blood. Odo Archbishop of Canterbury being desirous to oppose this Opinion, pray'd to God one day, as he was Celebrating Mass solemnly, in the presence of a multitude of People, to shew the very Substance of these Mysteries; which happen'd in the breaking of the consecrated Bread, out of which (as its reported) issued forth several Drops of Blood; which Miracle being seen by his Clergy, and by those who doubted of the Real Presence of the Body of Jesus Christ in the Eucharist, they abjured their Error.

Observations on the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the tenth Century.

Thus Osborn, a Writer of those times, relates the Matter in the Life of that Saint. The same Author in the

Of the Eucharist.

Observations on the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the tenth Century.

Life of St. Dunstan says, that that Saint returning to the Altar, chang'd the Bread and Wine into our Saviour's Body and Blood, by the Prayer of Consecration; but when he had given the Benediction to the People, he left the Altar a second time to preach, and that being altogether transported with the Divine Spirit, he discours'd after such a pathetical manner concerning the Real Presence of the Body of Jesus Christ, of the future Resurrection, and of Life Eternal, that one would have thought that a glorified Saint was then speaking.

Ratherius Bishop of Verona stifly maintains the same Opinion in one of his Letters; and Fulcuin Abbot of Lobes, in discoursing of the Eucharistical Table, says, That it is the Table on which the Sacred Body of our Lord is consum'd. These Authors express themselves after the same manner as Paschasius Ratbertus; nevertheless this did not hinder some others, who liv'd in the end of the same Century, to take part with Retramnus, to make use of his Expressions, and to oppose those of Paschasius. This is apparently done by Alfric Archbishop of Canterbury, and Heriger Abbot of Lobes, altho' they do not impugn the Real Presence, as we have made it appear in the preceding Century. These are all the remarkable Circumstances in the tenth Century, relating to Points of Doctrine; for the Error of the Anthropomorphites confuted by Ratherius in one of his Sermons, was peculiar to certain Clergy-men of Italy, and those of the Greeks, mention'd by Pope Formosus in one of his Letters to Fulcus, are ancient, and not modern Heresies. We read in a Chronicle of the Abby of Castros, that Durandus Abbot of that Monastery, in the Year 953. confuted one Walfred, who gave it out, that both the Soul and Body perish'd after death; but it is not known whether this Error continu'd long, neither is there any part of Durandus's Piece now extant. The Contests that arose about the validity or invalidity of Ordination made by Intruders, were soon silenc'd. Some Persons were of Opinion, that one might Feast on Fridays, but their Infatuation was not of long continuance. Upon the whole, there was no Council held in this Century that either debated, or made any Decisions with respect to any Point of Doctrine; which shews, that there was no Error in Matters of Faith that prevail'd long, or made any Disturbance in the Church.

Of the Popes Authority.

Howsoever enormous the Irregularities of the Popes might be at that time, nevertheless a great deal of Respect was shewn to their Authority, and the Christians distinguishing, according to Anxilius's Remark, the Holy See, from the Person of those who possess'd it, had as much veneration for the Dignity of the One, as aversion to the Extravagancies of the others; and upon this account they yielded Obedience to the Equitable Laws, and Just and Lawful Ordinances, proceeding from the Authority of the Holy See, and oppos'd the Enterprizes of the Popes, which intrench'd upon the Liberty of the Churches and the Intention of the Canons. This may be observ'd in the conduct of the Bishops of Germany, and in the Letters they wrote concerning the Erections of Bishopricks, which the Pope attempted to make in Moravia, to the prejudice of their Rights; in that of the Bishops of France assembled in a Council at Rheims against Arnulphus; in the Discourse made by the Bishop of Orleans in that Council; and in the Judgment they pass'd with respect to the Legates Attempt, who presum'd to Consecrate a Church without the consent of the Ordinary. Neither were the Bishops of Italy of a different Opinion, as appears from their deposing of Pope John XII. St Dunstan shew'd the same Resolution in Refusing to Absolve a Person, altho' the Pope had expressly enjoyn'd him to do it; and the like constancy is observable in Ratherius, who did not think himself oblig'd to obey the Order of a Pope, who was about to deprive him of the Disposal of the Ecclesiastical Revenues of his Dioceses. However, Magnificent Titles were given to the Popes, and their Primacy and Jurisdiction was acknowledg'd; They had not as yet assum'd the Right of Ordaining Bishops or Metropolitans; nay John X. and Stephen VIII. plainly own'd, that it did not belong to them; but they granted the Pall, not only to Archbishops, but also to several Bishops, which Practice Fulcus Archbishop of Rheims censures as an Abuse, which sullied the Splendor of the Hierarchical Order. They were desirous, that the Archbishops should come in Person to Rome to receive the Pall, which was usually done by the Archbishops of England and Germany, but not by those of France.

The Popes likewise us'd to erect new Archbishopricks and Bishopricks, and there were several Examples in that Century of these sorts of Erections; as Magdeburg, Merseburgh, Passaw, Placentia &c. They also assum'd to themselves a Power to Judge Bishops primarily, according to the Direction of the Decretals, and claim'd a Right to Summon them to Rome: But it does not appear that the Bishops of France ever acknowledg'd that Right; on the contrary, they follow'd the ancient Custom which makes the Bishops subject to the Judgment of the Provincial Councils, and to prevent the bringing any Appeals to Rome, they oblig'd the accused Persons to make choice of their own Judges, as it happen'd in the Affair of Arnulphus.

John IX. own'd that the Popes might be mistaken, and that their Judgments might be revers'd: That they ought to be chosen by the Bishops of Italy, and the Clergy and People of Rome, with the Emperor's consent, and in the presence of his Deputies; as it was ordain'd in the Council of Rome held under the same John IX. Otho and his Successors had the plenary Enjoyment of that Right, and the Election of the Popes depended on those Emperors. Octavian was the first of the Popes who chang'd his Name after his Election, in which he was imitated in the same Century by Gregory V. and Sylvester II. Neither were the Popes as yet absolute Sovereigns in the City of Rome: In the beginning of this Century the Romans enjoy'd an appearance of Liberty under the Government of Alberic. Afterwards Otho and his Successors were Sovereign Princes of Rome, in quality of Emperors; caus'd the Romans to take an Oath of Allegiance to them; and treated as Rebels those who revolted against them: But the Popes had the Demesnes of a great number of Towns in Italy, which were granted by King Pepin, and afterwards confirm'd by the Otho's. The Writers of those Times, particularly Ratherius, Abbo, Gerbert, and some others complain'd very much, that under some Popes a shameful Traffick was made at Rome of the most sacred Things, and that every thing there was to be purchas'd for Money. We also read, that the Popes were us'd to grant Indulgences to those Persons who made a Journey to Rome: and it is related in the Life of St. Ulric, that the Pope sent him back laden with Indulgences.

Observations on the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the tenth Century.

Of the Pope's Authority.

Several Points of Discipline.

There were few Councils held in this Century, and in the most part of them the Decrees were concerning Tythes; against the Usurpers of the Church Revenues; against Church-men who keep Concubines; and against Marriages among near Relations. To which purpose the Degrees of Consanguinity were extended to the Seventh, in which it was forbidden to contract Marriage, and Spiritual Affinity took place as well in the Eastern as the Western Churches: Such Persons as married with these Impediments were divorc'd without redress, neither were any Dispensations granted to Kings and Princes, as it appears from the Case of King Robert, and that of the Emperor Nicephorus Phocas.

Fourth Marriages were absolutely prohibited in the Eastern, but not in the Western parts. The Bishops were chosen by the Clergy and People, but the Princes would not suffer the Election to be made without their consent. The Investitures of the Archbishops, and Bishopricks, were granted to Otho I. by Pope Leo VII. and were given with the Ring and Staff. The Translation of Bishops became very frequent, and Coadjutors began to be joyn'd with them, with Assurance of Succeeding them. Thus Otho Bishop of Strasburgh had Archembaldus for his Coadjutor; but this practice was condemn'd by the Bishops of Germany, with respect to Adalbero, whom St. Ulric his Uncle, had chosen for his Coadjutor, and by Gregory V. with respect to the Bishop of Puy in Vellay, who in like manner ordain'd his Nephew.

This Century is the first, in which it is observ'd that Ambition transported the Bishops so far, as to get the possession of several Bishopricks, and in which Bishops were ordain'd at the Age of eighteen years, as Pope John XI. John XII. and the Bishop of Tody; and elected very young, as Hugh of Vermandois, and Theophylact Patriarch of Constantinople. Many Bishops of Italy and Germany oblig'd their Canons to be Regular, and to live in common: Others placed Monks in their Cathedrals, and even advanc'd them to Dignities; and others on the contrary, turn'd out irregular Monks, to substitute secular Clerks in their Room; as did Ratherius in one of the Churches of his Dioceses. The Ecclesiastical Revenues were usually divided into four parts, and the Bishops assum'd the sole Administration of them, but in some Churches other Clergy-men had particular Revenues, which they enjoy'd independently of the Bishop. After the Death of the Bishops the Revenues of the Church, and those they left, were often expos'd to pillage, as it is related by Ratherius, Atto, and several other Writers. To prevent this Rapine, the Prince or neighbouring Bishop engag'd to take care of them. The Lords were wont to settle Priests at their pleasure, in the Country Churches; Benefices were often conferr'd on unworthy Persons; and sometimes Persons were advanc'd to the Episcopal Dignity, without any merit, and only on account of their quality; an abuse much lamented by Ratherius and Atto. Lastly, Ignorance was so perdominant in those times, that it was absolutely necessary to admit Priests of mean parts to the Sacerdotal Function. However, the Bishops endeavour'd to render them more capable, by Synodal Instructions, by frequent Conferences with them, (the Original of which may probably be referr'd to the ninth Century) by Schools, which were kept in the Cathedral Churches and Monasteries, and by furnishing them with divers Forms of Sermons and Exhortations ready prepared. The Bishops and other Clergy-men were often oblig'd to bear Arms, as Ratherius observes, altho' it be prohibited by the Canons, an abuse which was committed both in the Eastern and Observations on the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the tenth Century.

Western Parts. In the beginning of this Century, the Monks were very irregular, and the Monasteries were ruin'd, and possess'd by Laicks, who assum'd the quality of Abbots; but after Matters were regulated, the Monastical Discipline was re establish'd, and Regular Abbots were constituted; nevertheless the Bishops for a long time retain'd some Abbies as it were in Comendam; the same Abbot, or the same Regular Clerk held several Abbies, which he caus'd to be govern'd by Co-Abbots or Pro-Abbots, or Superiours. To which we may refer the Original of Congregations. Divers Monks were advanc'd to the Episcopacy, possess'd Dignities in the Cathedral Churches, and were ordain'd Priests under the Title of their Monastery. Publick Penance was still in Use, but very rarely practis'd, and the Canonical Discipline was enervated by the Redemption of Penances which was then introduc'd: The Rigour and Austerity of Fasting, was likewise much abated, and the Obligation to Receive the Sacrament was reduc'd to four times a Year.

Ratherius forbad in his Dioceſs the Celebration of Marriages on Sundays, and in the time of Lent, altho' the contrary Custom had prevail'd. We find in this Century the first Example of the Benediction of a Bell; for there is no mention made of them in the Authors of the preceding Ages, who have treated at large of Ceremonies. Father Menard cites in his Notes, on St. Gregory's Sacramentary, two ancient Manuscripts which prescribe the Ceremonies of this Benediction, but it is not certain that they are more ancient than the tenth Century. At that time also they began to recite as a part of Divine Service, the Office of the Virgin Mary: It is related in the Life of St. Ulric, that that Saint was wont to say it every day, and in the continuation of the History of the Bishops of Verdun, mention is made of a certain Clerk whom Berenger, Bishop of that City, the Kinsman of Otho the Great, met in the Church, lying prostrate on the Ground, and saying the Office of the Blest'd Virgin. Peter d'Amien in the following Century, in like manner makes mention of two Clerks who were wont to recite it every day; and Pope Urban II. ordain'd in the Council of Clermont, that the Office of the Virgin Mary should be said on Saturday. We may also observe, that the Councils and Bishops of those Times pronounc'd Eternal Anathema's, that is to say, perpetual Excommunications without hopes of Absolution against the Usurpers of Church Revenues, and against those that offer'd any Injury to Ecclesiastical Persons. The manner of clearing those that were accused of any Crime by Fire or Water Ordeal, or by a Duel between two Champions, was then in Use, and even Clergy-men were oblig'd to provide a Champion; but there were certain Times when all Acts of Hostility ceas'd, which were call'd The Truce of God.

The Canonization of Saints.

In this Century we find the first Example of the Solemn Canonization of a Saint by the Pope. This Pope is John XV. who plac'd St. Ulric in the Rank of the Saints in the Year 995. at the request of Liutolphus Bishop of Augsburg. We shall here subjoyn the Act it self, which was drawn upon that occasion: John Bishop, Servant of the Servants of God, to all Archbishops, Bishops and Abbots of France and Germany, Greeting, and the Apostolical Benediction. Having held an Assembly in the Palace of the Lateran, on the last day of January, John the most Holy Pope sitting, with the Bishops, Priests, Deacons and Clergy standing, the most Reverend Liutolphus, Bishop of Augsburgh rising up, said, Most Holy Bishop, if it may please you and the rest of the Reverend Bishops and Priests here present, to give leave to read in your presence, the Book which I hold in my hand, concerning the Life and Miracles of St. Ulric, who was sometimes Bishop of Augsburgh, to the end that you may afterwards ordain what you shall think fit. Then the Life of that Saint being read, they proceeded to the Miracles which were perform'd by him, either in his Life-time, or after his Death, as the restoring of Sight to the Blind; the Exorcising of Devils out of possessed Persons; the Curing of others afflicted with the Palsie, and several other Miracles which were not committed to writing. These things being thus related, we have resolv'd and ordain'd, with the common consent, that the Memory of St. Ulric ought to be honour'd with a pious Affection and a sincere Devotion, by reason that we are oblig'd to honour and shew respect to the Relicks of the Martyrs and Confessors, in order to Adore him whose Martyrs and Confessors they are, We honour the Servants, to the end that this honour may redound to the Lord——. It is our pleasure therefore that the Memory of Ulric be consecrated to the Honour of the Lord, and that it may serve to celebrate his Praises for ever. Then follows the Anathema against those who shall act any thing contrary to this Decree, with the Seals of the Pope, of five Bishops, of nine Cardinal Priests, and of some Deacons.

This is the first Solemn Bull of Canonization; for the more ancient Examples, which are produc'd of the Canonization of St. Suitbert by Pope Leo III. and that of St. Abbo Martyr by Adrian I. at the request of Offa King of the Mercians in the end of the eighth Century, are only grounded on Suppositious Pieces; nay, the very name of Canonization in that Sense, is yet more Modern then the tenth Century, and is found only in the Bull of Pope Alexander III. For the Canonization of St. Edward the Confessor, King of England, in the Year 1161. in that of the Canonization of St. Thomas of Canterbury eight years after, and in the Letter of Ulric Bishop of Constance to Calixtus II. in which he sues for the Canonization of Bishop Conrad.

Observations on the Ecclesiastical Affairs of the tenth Century.

In the Primitive Church the Name of Saint was given to all Christians, in their Life-time, and even after their Death, when they dyed in the Communion of the Church, having preserv'd the Innocence of their Baptism, but a more particular respect was shewn to those, who dyed upon the account of Religion, and were call'd Martyrs of Jesus Christ; so that the Evidence of the Matter of Fact, and the Testimony of the Faithful caus'd that Veneration to be paid to their Memory, which their generous Constancy had merited; nevertheless, it belong'd to the Bishops and Clergy to make a Catalogue of those who deserv'd that honour, and to distinguish the false Martyrs from the true. Therefore St. Cyprian in his ninty seventh Letter admonishes his Clergy to take care exactly to mark all the days of the Death of those who suffer'd Martyrdom, to the end that their Memory might be celebrated with the other Martyrs. Optatus Milevitanus reproves Lucillus for kissing every day, even before the Communion, the Relick of a certain Person, who was said to be a Martyr, but was not yet acknowledg'd as such. It is reported that Pope Clement I. appointed seven Deacons, and Fabian as many Sub-Deacons to comm't the Acts of the Martyrs to writing; but this Matter of Fact being grounded only on the Authority of the Author of the Pontifical Book, is of no great Consequence, and so much the rather, in regard that we are inform'd by the Popes Gelasius and Gregory, that these Acts were not much valu'd by the Church of Rome, which was content only to have a Catalogue of the Saints and Martyrs who were to be honour'd. The Councils of Laodicea, Carthage, and Elvira, ordain'd, that great care be taken to make a due distinction between the true and false Martyrs, and the Example of St. Martin of Tours, and several other Reverend Bishops, who diſsuaded the People from the Superstitious Worship of false Martyrs, apparently shews that it belongs to all the Bishops to declare what Martyrs ought to be acknowledg'd and publickly honour'd. After the Martyrs in process of time was likewise honour'd, the Memory of Virgins, Anchorites, Bishops renoun'd for their Sanctity: And lastly, of those Persons whose singular Vertues were remarkable in their Life-time. Their Names were inserted in the Dypticks, that were recited at the Altar, and they were Styled by the Name of the Saints and Blessed, τῶν ἁγίων λεγομένων.

Every particular Church was us'd to place in that rank, those who had first propagated the Christian Religion, the Bishops, and those who had liv'd in great Reputation for their Sanctity. Afterwards were made Kalendars and Martyrologies, of the Saints of several particular Churches, which were by little and little dispers'd throughout the Eastern and Western Parts. The Church of Rome, as others had done, made use of one of these Martyrologies, from which Ado compos'd His, and afterwards took in that of Usuardus; but it does not appear that before the tenth Century, any Solemn Decrees were made at Rome, or elsewhere, for the Canonization of Saints. Indeed, this Custom was entirely establish'd in the eleventh Century, when Adelardus, Paschasius Ratbertus, St. Wiborad, Gerard Bishop of Toul, and Wolfang Bishop of Ratisbon were Canoniz'd by several Popes. In the twelfth Peter d'Agnania was Canoniz'd by Pope Paschal II. Conrad Bishop of Constance, by Calixtus II. at the request of Ulric Bishop of the same place; Hugh Bishop of Grenoble, St. Sturmius Abbot of Fulda, and the Emperor Henry I. by Eugenius III. But it is observable, that these two last Papers declare that the Solemnity of Canonization ought to be perform'd regularly in a General Council, and yet they do it by the Authority of the Church of Rome, with the Advice of the Archbishops and Bishops, who were present in that City.

During these two Centuries, the Metropolitans and Bishops were not depriv'd of the Right to declare as Saints, such Persons as died in the Reputation of Sanctity, and to cause their Bodies to be expos'd to the Veneration of the Faithful. But Pope Alexander III. first reserv'd to himself the Canonization of Saints, as a Matter of great Consequence, and after him Innocent III. assum'd the same Right; insomuch that we do not read that the Bishops solemnly Canoniz'd any Saints since that time, altho' there were some who were generally reputed such among the People.

The Institution of the seven Electors of the Empire.

The Institution of the seven Electors is also refer'd to this Century, according to the general Opinion of the German Historians, who wrote after the Reign of Frederick II. and who affirm that Pope Gregory V. and the Emperor Otho III. declar'd, with the consent of the Princes of Germany, that the Election of the Emperor should belong, for the future, only to those seven, without allowing allowing any Vote to the others: But the Original of this Epocha is very much disputed, and is not grounded on any Authentick Record, or the Testimony of any Contemporary Writer. Indeed some, particularly Jordanes, have given it out, that the Right of choosing the Emperor has been peculiar to the seven Electors even since Charlemagn's time; and this Opinion seems to be confirm'd by the Authority of Pope Innocent III who acknowledges the power of Electing the King and Emperor to be inherent in the Princes of the Empire, to whom the Right justly belongs, more especially in regard that this Right and Power is deriv'd to them from the Apostolical See, in the person of Charlemagne, who transferr'd the Empire from the Grecians to the Romans. Theodoric Anibem refers this Institution to the time that follow'd the Death of the Emperor Henry II. and makes the Princes of Germany the Authors of it. Onuphrius maintains, that this number of Electors was not fix'd till after the Death of Frederick II. that before that time all the Princes of Germany were wont to give their Suffrages for the Election of the Emperors; that their number was not restrain'd to seven; that the name of Electors was then unknown; that altho' the precise time of the Institution cannot be determin'd, yet it ought to be fix'd between the Years 1250. and 1280. and according to all appearance, under the Pontificate of Gregory X. which perhaps gave occasion to the generality of Authors to refer it to that of Gregory V. Jordanes's Opinion concerning the Antiquity of the seven Electors, is at present generally disclaim'd; it being evident that Charlemagn's Posterity obtain'd the Empire by the Right of Succession, and by the Election of the German, French and Italian Princes and Noble-men. After the Death of Lewis IV. the Son of Arnulphus, the last of Charlemagn's Race, Italy became (as we have already declar'd) a Prey to the Berengers, to Guy, Lambert, Lewis, Boso, Hugh, Lothair, Raoul, &c. of whom some affected the Title of Emperor, and even caus'd themselves to be crown'd. In Germany, Conrad, Henry the Fowler, and Otho were chosen Kings by the Saxons and French, as it is related by Luitprand and Witichindus, Writers, who flourish'd at that time. The last was also acknowledg'd and crown'd Emperor when he had subdu'd Italy: His Son and Grandson obtain'd the Imperial Diadem by the Right of Succession, and by the Election of the Princes, as well Saxons as French and Italians. Therefore till that time, it cannot be said, that the Election of the Emperor was reserv'd to the seven Electors. Now to know whether this was effected by Pope Gregory V. under Otho III. we need only enquire after what manner Historians relate the Election of his Successors to have been carried on, that is to say, whether it were perform'd by the seven Electors, or indifferently by all the German Princes. Otho Frisingen assures us, that after the Decease of Otho III. Henry Duke of Bavaria was chosen Emperor by all the Nobility or Lords of the Kingdom: Ab omnibus regni primoribus; and this Author speaks after the same manner concerning the Election of Conrad, who succeeded Henry: But nothing more plainly shews to whom the Right of choosing the Emperor belong'd, then that which happen'd in the time of the Emperor Henry the Fourth, when Pope Gregory the seventh design'd to Depose him, and caus'd Rodolphus to be substituted in his room; for he made application to all the Dukes, Earls and Bishops of the German Empire, and Rodolphus was chosen by a Party of the Princes different from the Electors, among whom are nam'd the Bishops of Wurtsburgh and Metz, and the Duke of Carinthia.

Afterward when Henry the fifth dispossessed his Father of the Imperial Throne, and caus'd himself to be plac'd on it in his stead, this was done by all the Princes of Germany indifferently, as it is related by Otho Frisingensis, and by the Abbot of Ursperge. Lotharius the Second was in like manner elected Emperor by the Princes of the Empire, at the sollicitation of the Archbishop of Metz. When Conrad the third was at first only chosen by a small number of Princes, and Henry of Bavaria with some Saxon Princes revers'd his Election, because they were not present, it was requisite to call a general Assembly of all the Princes, in which the Saxons assisted, and gave consent to his Election. After the death of Conrad, Frederick Barbarossa was proclaim'd Emperor in an Assembly of all the Princes of Germany, in which the Barons of Italy were also present. Lastly, In the time of Pope Innocent the third, the German Princes being divided, after the Death of Henry the sixth, some of them elected his Brother Otho, and others Philip of Sebwaben; on which occasion, Letters were written on both sides to the Pope: The Electors of Otho were, the Archbishop of Cologne, the Bishop of Paderborn, two other Bishops, and two Abbots, the Duke of Lorrain and Brabant, the Marquess of the sacred Empire, and the Count of Cuik, who declare in the Body of the Letter, that they elected Otho, and confirm'd their Proceedings by their respective Seals. Those of the contrary Party were the Archbishops of Madgeburg, Trier, and Rosaveum; the Bishops of Ratisbon, Frisingen, Augsburg, Constance, Eistadt, Worms, Spire, Hilderscheim, and Brixen; the Chancellor of the Imperial Court, four Abbots, the King of Bohemia, the Dukes of Saxony, Bavaria, Austria and Moravia; the Marquess of Raversperg, and other Potent Noble-men of Germany, who all declare that they had chosen Philip Emperor, and that many other German Princes had consented to his Election by Letters.

This evidently proves that the Election of the Emperors was not reserv'd to the seven Electors, but that it belong'd to all the Princes of the Empire. Innocent the third replying to those Letters, That his Legate was not capable of assisting at the Election of an Emperor, either in quality of an Elector, or in that of a Judge; not as an Elector, because it does not belong to him; but to the Princes, on whom the Power of choosing the Emperor is devolv'd according to ancient Custom; more especially in regard that they receiv'd it from the Holy See, which transferr'd the Roman Empire, in the Person of Charlemagne, from the Grecians to the Romans. These are the words of that Pope, which are manifestly misapplyed, when alledg'd in behalf of the seven Electors: It being apparent, that in this place, he makes mention of all the Princes of the Empire, who had an inherent Right to elect the Emperors ever since the time of Charlemagne; affirming that neither had his Legate acted as a Judge, in regard that he had not proceeded against Philip in a Judiciary Form, nor pass'd any Judgment upon the Validity or Nullity of the Election: That therefore he had only perform'd the Function of a Denouncer, by declaring to them, that the Duke was incapacitated from being elected, whereas Otho was not. That many of those Persons, who had a right to choose the Emperor, had approv'd Otho's Election: And that they who had chosen Philip, had forfeited their Right, by carrying on the Election, in the absence, and to the contempt of the others. That besides, Philip was not crown'd Emperor, either in the place where it ought to have been done, or by a Person, whose office it was to perform the Ceremony: Whereas Otho was crown'd at Aix-la-Chapelle, which was the proper place for his Coronation, and by the Archbishop of Cologne, whose Right it was to officiate at the Solemnity: That therefore he nominated and declar'd Otho Emperor, being incited thereto by a principle of Justice, as also upon account that he had a Right to favour whom he thought fit, when the Suffrages of the Electors were divided: That besides, there were several lawful Impediments against Philip Duke of Sebwaben, as his being excommunicated, attainted of Perjury, and descended of the Race of the Persecutors of the Church.

Thus this Answer supposes that these Persons, who had a right to choose the Emperor, and who are mention'd by this Pope, are not only the seven Electors, but also all the Princes and Noble-men of the Empire, of whom a party had elected Otho, and the greater number Philip of Schwaben: But after the death of the latter, all the Suffrages were re united in favour of Otho A. D. 1209. and in the following Year, Otho being excommunicated, the Princes of Germany, viz. the King of Bohemia, the Dukes of Austria and Bavaria, the Landgrave of Thuringen, and many others being assembled, elected Frederick King of Sicily Emperor. Hitherto we find no mention of the seven Electors; and indeed the first Writer that makes any, is the Cardinal of Ostia, who liv'd in the time of Pope Innocent the Fourth, and speaks of them in his Commentary on the Decretal of Innocent the Third, where he affirms that the Electors mention'd in that place, are the Archbishops of Mentz, Cologne, and Trier, the Count Palatine of the Rhine, the Duke of Saxony, the Marquess of Brandenburgh, and the Duke of Bohemia. Matthew Paris writing the History of the Council of Lyons, at the same time reports, that after the Deposing of Frederick, Pope Innocent the fourth ordain'd that the seven Electors, whom he names, are the Archbishops of Cologne, Mentz, and Salzburgh, and the Dukes of Austria, Bavaria, Saxony, and Brabant. However, Martinus Polonus a contemporary Writer, names the seven Electors after this manner, that is to say, the three high Chancellors of the Empire, viz. the Archbishop of Mentz, the Chancellor of Germany, the Archbishop of Trier Chancellor of Gaul, the Archbishop of Cologne Chancellor of Italy, the Marquess of Brandenburgh High Chamberlain, the Palatine of the Rhine High Steward, the Duke of Saxony Gentleman of the Horse, and the King of Bohemia High Cupbearer. This Author says thus much in speaking of Otho the third, which has induc'd some to believe, that they were instituted under that Emperor, altho' he observes that it did not happen till afterward. Thus this Relation makes it appear that the Institution of the seven Electors attributed to Pope Gregory V. without any just grounds, is nothing near so ancient, and that 'tis very probable that the Electors of the Emperor were not reduced to the number of seven, till the Pontificate of Innocent the fourth, and that before, all the Princes and Noble-men of the Empire indifferently, might have a share in his Election, notwithstanding the Assertions of the Canonists and the Modern Historiographers of Germany to the contrary.

CHAP. I.

Of the Writings of St. Fulbert, Biſhop of Chartres.

Of the Writings of St. Fulbert, Biſhop of Chartres.

WE will begin this eleventh Century with St. Fulbert Biſhop of Chartres, who was one of the principal Reſtorers of Learning, of the Sciences, and of Divinity. He came from Rome to France, and held his publick Lectures in the Schools of the Church of Chartres, about the end of the tenth, and the beginning of the eleventh Century. His Reputation gain'd him Scholars from all Parts, who went out of his School full of Learning and Piety, and diffuſed his Light in France and Germany; inſomuch that all the Ingenious Perſons of that time, gloried in having been his Scholars. He was in great Repute with King Robert; and, as ſome Hiſtorians tell us, he was his Chancellor. In the Year 1007. he ſucceeded Rodulphus in the Biſhoprick of Chartres; and govern'd that Church with a great deal of Vigilance and Prudence, for the ſpace of one and twenty Years and ſome Months. He dy'd April 10, 1028.

He compos'd ſeveral Letters, Sermons, and Pieces of Poetry. His Letters amount to 134.

In the firſt he explains three Eſſential Points of our Faith; namely, the Myſtery of the Trinity, the Sacrament of Baptiſm, and the Sacraments of Life, to wit, of the Body and Blood of our Lord. We ſhall not here ſtand to repeat what he has ſaid about the Myſteries of the Trinity and the Incarnation; 'tis enough to take notice that he has given a very exact Explanation of them, and that he has very particularly refuted the Errors of the Arians, Neſtorians and Eutychians. Upon the Sacraments, he ſays, that we ought not to reſt upon the External and Viſible Signs, but to attend to the Inviſible Power and Efficacy of theſe Myſteries. 'We know, ſays he, and 'tis an unqueſtionable Truth, 'that we were polluted by our firſt Birth, and purified by 'the ſecond; therefore we are buried and we die with 'Jeſus Chriſt, that we may be born again and quicken'd 'with him. The Water and the Holy Ghoſt are united 'in that Sacrament; the Water denotes the Burial, the 'Holy Ghoſt the Life Eternal; as Jeſus Chriſt lay buried 'in the Ground for three Days, ſo is Man dipp'd, and as 'it were buried three times in the Water, that he may riſe 'again by the Holy Spirit. He afterwards proves, that 'tis 'God which Baptizeth; and that tho' a wicked Man ſhould 'adminiſter this Sacrament, yet it does not hinder the Re'miſſion of Sins, becauſe 'tis not he who is the Author, 'but only the Miniſter of the Sacrament; as he himſelf 'acknowledges, when he ſays, he who has regenerated 'you by Water and the Holy Spirit, grant you the Unc'tion of Salvation. Now 'tis God alone who is the Au'thor of Grace, the Diſpenſer of Spiritual Gifts, and who 'remits Sins. In diſcourſing on the thid Point, namely, concerning the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Chriſt, after he had taken notice of its Sublimity, and its Incomprehenſibility; he ſays, that God commiſerating our Frailty, has provided a Remedy for us by this propitiatory Sacrifice offer'd for our daily Faults; and foraſmuch as he has taken out of our ſight, and carry'd to Heaven that Body which he offer'd for our Redemption, that we might not be depriv'd of the preſent Protection of his Body, he has left us a Salutary Pledge of his Body and Blood, which is not a Symbol of a vain, empty Myſtery, but the real Body of Jeſus Chriſt, which his ſecret Efficacy produceth every Day after an inviſible manner, in the Solemnity of thoſe Myſteries, under the viſible form of the Creature. 'Tis this Body which he ſpake of to his Diſciples a little before his Paſſion, This is my Body, and this is my Blood: And elſewhere, He that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Body, dwelleth in me, and I in him, John 6. 56. Being therefore thus inſtructed by the Will and Pleaſure of this true Maſter, in partaking of his Body and Blood, we may boldly maintain, that we are chang'd into his Body, and that he dwelleth in us, not only by an Union of the Will, but by the Reality of the Nature which is united to us. He adds, that we ſhould not imagine it to be any Diſhonour to a God, who condeſcended to enter into the Womb of a Virgin, to be in Pure and Virgin Creatures: That what appears externally to be the Subſtance of Bread and Wine, became internally the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt: And to make this Change the more credible, he compares it to the Creation; and ſays, that if God could make Creatures out of Nothing, he could more eaſily convert them into the Subſtance of his Body.

The ſecond Letter of Fulbert of Chartres is concerning a Cuſtom in uſe in his time, of giving to the Prieſts, after their Ordination, a conſecrated Hoſt, which they kept and communicated of for forty Days together. He had been ask'd the Reaſon of this Cuſtom. But before he reply'd to that, he obſerv'd, that different Churches had their different Cuſtoms; which was no hindrance of their being united in the ſame common Faith. Afterwards, he ſays, that this Cuſtom was obſerv'd by all the Biſhops of his Country: That he remember'd that formerly a Prieſt, having receiv'd a conſecrated Hoſt from his Biſhop, and communicating thereof every Day, it one Day happen'd, that after he had celebrated theſe Myſteries, he loſt this Hoſt, by wrapping his Habit in the Communion Table-cloth. That on the Morrow, in the time of Celebration, when he came to communicate, he was very much ſurpriz'd at his miſſing the Hoſt. That the Biſhop, being inform'd of what had happen'd through his Careleſsneſs, had impos'd on him a very ſevere Penance. St. Fulbert adds, that this Accident gave him an occaſion of aſking this Biſhop, Whether it were not better that the Prieſts ſhould eat this Hoſt, the firſt or ſecond Day after it was conſecrated, without dividing it into ſo many Pieces? But that this Biſhop had return'd him this Anſwer, that they were oblig'd to keep this Hoſt for the ſpace of forty Days; becauſe, as Jeſus Chriſt had been forty Days upon Earth after his Reſurrection, and appear'd to his Apoſtles ſeveral times; ſo the Biſhops, in ordaining his Prieſts, gave them the Euchariſt to take for forty Days together, to put them in mind of thoſe forty Days during which our Lord appear'd to his Apoſtles after his Reſurrection. Fulbert having ask'd, Whether this Myſtery might not be as well perform'd by the Bread which the Prieſts conſecrated every Day, was anſwer'd by the Biſhop, that as many particular Churches ſpread over the Face of the whole Earth, made but one Catholick Church, becauſe they have all one Common Faith; juſt ſo, many Particular Hoſts offer'd by many Faithful, are only one Bread, becauſe of the Unity of the Body of Chriſt: That the Bread conſecrated by the Biſhop, and the Bread conſecrated by the Prieſt, are chang'd into one and the ſame Body of Jeſus Chriſt, by the Omnipotency of of the ſame Virtue which operateth in both; but as it may be ſaid in ſome meaſure, that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt born of the Virgin, and nailed to the Croſs, is different from the Body of Jeſus Chriſt when raiſed from the Dead: Even ſo it ſeems, that the Bread conſecrated on the Ordination-day, and kept by the Prieſts, may have a particular Signification diſtinct from the Bread which was conſecrated every Day; the former may denote the Body of Jeſus Chriſt raiſed from the Dead, to die no more; the latter, Jeſus Chriſt who dies and riſes again every Day for us.

Of the Writings of St. Fulbert, Biſhop of Chartres.

The third and fourth Letters are directed to King Robert; wherein he prays him to order Eudes Count of Chartres, to cauſe the Caſtles to be demoliſh'd which were built by Vicount Geofrey, and very much incommoded the Church of Chartres.

The two following contain nothing in them remarkable.

The ſeventh is directed to Leoterick Archbiſhop of Sens, whom he exhorts to make uſe of his Authority in ſuccouring Aviſgaudus Biſhop of Mans, whom the Count of that City oppreſs'd; and to threaten the ſaid Count with Excommunication, in Caſe he did not reſtore to him his Revenue, and let him be quiet.

The eighth is a Copy of a Letter which he had written to this Aviſgaudus, who complain'd that Fulbert and Leoterick had publiſh'd his Confeſſion. Fulbert gives him to underſtand, That he wrong'd them, in having ſuch a Thought of them; That they had never publiſh'd any Thing but what was for his Advantage, and which might ſerve to juſtifie him againſt thoſe who had accus'd him of having quitted his Biſhoprick out of Avarice, Baſeneſs, or for ſome other diſhonourable Cauſe. That if he had truſted to their Secrecy ſuch Things as he ought to repent of, they had taken great Care to conceal them; but that they had no Power to conceal thoſe, which were publick both before and after his Confeſſion. As to that Part of this Biſhop's Complaint, that they had ſaid of him, That he was in Love with a Monaſtick Life, Fulbert returns him this Anſwer, That he ought not to take this amiſs, ſince it could be no Prejudice to him; for the Love of a religious Life render'd him rather worthy, than unworthy of the Biſhoprick into which he deſir'd to enter again, were there nothing elſe to hinder him from it. But that they could not perceive how he could be put into Poſſeſſion again, becauſe he could not complain that he had been turn'd out of it, or that any one had been put into Poſſeſſion of that See againſt his Will; ſince he had voluntarily quitted it under Pretence of his Indiſpoſition, and defired the King, That either Franco, Dean of the Church of Paris, or ſome other Perſon might be put into his Place: That after this Reſignation, Franco had been put into his Place according to the Election of the Clergy, the Votes of the Laity, the Donation of the King, and the Approbation of the Holy See; and that he had been ordain'd by the Archbiſhop of Sens his Metropolitan.

In

Of the Writings of St. Fulbert Bishop of Chartres.

In the ninth Letter he returns an Answer to the Bishop of Paris, upon three Points. The first is upon that Bishop's desiring him to excommunicate one who had seiz'd upon some Revenues belonging to the Church of Paris. He says he had not done it, 1. Because he had not met with any Man who would venture to give him Notice of this Excommunication. 2. Because 'twas to no Purpose that this Man should be declared excommunicated in the Church of Chartres, without knowing any Thing of it. 3. Because he thought it might more conveniently be done in a Synod of the Bishops of the Province. The second is about the Archdeacon of Paris, of whom his Bishop complain'd. Fulbert sent him Word, That it signified nothing to consult him about it, since it was his Business to judge him; and that for his Part he could not condemn him, till he had first heard him. The third is upon a Dispute which happen'd between Adeoldus and the Monks of St. Dennis. He says, That Adeoldus offer'd to refer himself to their Arbitration; and that if he pleased to appoint a Day wherein he would meet him, with some one in Behalf of the Monks of St. Dennis, at St. Arnulphus, he would be there likewise to adjust these Differences.

The following Letters, to the One and twentieth, contain very little of Ecclesiastical Matters; but in this there is mention made of a very remarkable Matter of Fact. The Abbot of St. Peters of Chartres being very sick, a Monk, named Megenard, stole by Night out of the Monastery, and went to beg the Abbacy of Count Thibold, Son of Count Eudes of Chartres, who was then at Blois. The Count sent him back on the Morrow with Orders, That he should be received as Abbot. Answer was made him, That this ought not to be allowed; because they could not acknowledge him for Abbot, who had begg'd the Abbacy of another before the present Abbot was dead, and who intended to carry it by Authority, and not receive it by Election. He went and carry'd this Answer back to the Count; and within five Days after, the Abbot dy'd. The Monks, with some Canons who had enter'd the Monastery, held a Chapter: Fulbert was there present, and ask'd them, Whether there were any among them who approv'd of what Megenard had done? They all answer'd, No. Thereupon it was order'd, That one should be sent to the Count, to carry him the News of the Abbot's Death; and to intreat him to grant the Monks Leave to chuse another. At the breaking up of the Chapter, two Monks, who had been Provosts of the Out-parts, went to Blois to tell the Count, That Megenard was elected, and required to be Abbot, by the Monks of St. Peter. These Monks, having Intelligence thereof, made a Protestation against it. The Count brought Megenard, and introduced him by Force: The Monks withdrew, and were receiv'd by Bishop Rodulphus. Notwithstanding all this, Megenard receiv'd Benediction from a Bishop of Bretagne, maugre the Protestations of the Deputy of the Archbishop, and of several Monks. He seiz'd upon the Monastery, and sollicited the Bishops, and the Pope himself, to be establish'd therein. Fulbert laments this Misfortune, and intreats him to whom he writ, to do his best for these poor Monks.

The two and twentieth Letter is directed to Pope John XVII. He informs him, That Count Rodulphus, whom he had excommunicated for seizing the Revenues of his Church, and for having abus'd a Clerk, was gone to Rome to seek for the Absolution of a Sin, for which he would make no Satisfaction. He conjures the Pope not to admit him to Communion.

The following Letters to the thirty fourth, are directed to Leoterick Archbishop of Sens. What is most remarkable in them about Matters Ecclesiastical, we shall here briefly insert. In the three and twentieth he advises him, to send back a Priest, who was guilty of Simony, into his Diocese who had ordain'd him; and, if he carry'd in his Diocese, to suspend him from all Ecclesiastical Functions. In the five and twentieth, he desires him to degrade a Priest who had been ordain'd for a Reward, that he might afterwards enjoin him Penance for two Years, and then re-establish him. He adds, That it was not requisite to re-ordain him, but to re-establish him in his Orders, by the proper Instruments and Habits, by saying, I restore to thee the Order of Doorkeeper, &c. in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. And afterwards to give him the Blessing in these Terms; The Blessing of God Almighty, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, rest upon thee, that thou mayst be confirm'd in the Sacerdotal Order; and that thou mayst offer Propitiatory Sacrifices to God Almighty, for the Sins and Offences of the People. In the twenty eight he complains, That Leoterick had ordain'd several Bishops in his Province, without calling him thereto; and that he had call'd the Bishop of Troyes, who was incapable of any such Thing. In the twenty ninth, he refuses to give Absolution to some Homicides of Senlis, at the Price they offer'd him. In the thirtieth he declares, That he had not elected Odolrick for Bishop; but that after he had been elected by the Clergy or Laity, he had ordain'd him Priest; and upon Leoterick's Account, he had order'd him to go to Rome, there to be ordain'd Bishop. In the thirty third he determines, That a Man who had been God-father to his own Son at Confirmation, ought to be divorc'd from his Wife; which he grounds upon a Canon of the Council of Lessines, held under Charlemagne.

Of the Writings of St. Fulbert Bishop of Chartres.

The thirty fourth is written in the Name of Leoterick and Fulbert of Chartres, to the Clergy of the Church of Paris; to whom they wish, in the Preface, Temperantiam in Prosperis, Fortitudinem in Adversis, Charitatem ubique; i. e. Temperance in Prosperity, Courage in Adversity, and Charity at all Times. They declare to them, That they sympathize in the Troubles which their Bishop undergoes; but they are sorry, that he would not apply himself to them for Consolation; and they wonder that these Canons should admit to their Communion such Persons who are refractory to the Laws of God, and disobedient to their Bishop: They assure them, they ought not to defer separating them from their Communion, till their Bishop had excommunicated them. In particular, they accuse Lysiard Archdeacon of Paris, who instead of being what he ought to be, The Eye of his Bishop, the Reliever of the Poor, and the Instructer of the Ignorant, had run counter thereto; and was become to his Bishop a Blinder of the Eyes, to the Poor a Robber, and to the Ignorant an erronius Guide, by taking away the Tythes and Oblations of the Altars from the Poor, and giving them to Seculars. Besides, they accus'd him of Perjury and Disloyalty to his Bishop; and orders them to shew him this Letter, that so he may reform himself.

In the thirty sixth, Fulbert demonstrates the Enormity of a Deacon's Offence, who pretending to be a Priest, had celebrated Mass.

In the thirty eighth he says, That Ebaud, elected Archbishop of Rheims, ought not to be rejected, tho' he were a Laick, provided he had been brought up in Piety, and kept himself always untainted in his Morals; because there are several Examples of very great Men, such as St. Ambrose of Milan, St. Germain Bishop of Auxerre, and several others, who, having led a good Life whilst Laicks, have prov'd holy Bishops.

In the thirty ninth he writes to the Archbishop of Bourges, That the Abbot Salomon and his Monks, cited before that Archbishop upon the Business of Tedfride, could not possibly make their Appearance, because it was then their Harvest-time; but that at the Council of Orleans, to be held the fifteenth of October, they would appoint him the Time and the Place, wherein they would have an Hearing. Afterwards he complains, That this Archbishop had written a Letter to Arnulphus Abbot of St. Peter, whereby he declar'd, that he had excommunicated his Monks. He gave him to understand, That he had never any where read that he had such a Power allow'd him. This Archbishop had written another Letter to him, wherein he had reprov'd him for having submitted the Abbot Tedfride, without an Hearing, to Monk Salomon, who was only Provost. Fulbert reply'd, That it was not done before Tedfride had been heard, and that he was not Abbot when Salomon was put in his Place: That Abbot Tedfride being accus'd by his Monks, had declar'd, That he would no longer endure them; That he abdicated their Government, and that he would be no longer Monk of Bonneval. That after this Declaration he went, by his Permission, to the Dioceses of Bourges; and that the Monks of Bonneval had elected one of their Brethren, and had presented him to Count Odo, that he might confer the Abbacy on him, according to Custom; and that this having been granted to him, he had made him Abbot.

In the forty fifth, directed to Adarus Bishop of Laon, he relates a tragical Action, which hapen'd in his Dioceses. The Subdeacon of his Church being dead, the Bishop of Senlis desir'd of him this Benefice for himself, or his Brother. Fulbert reply'd, That it was not suitable for him, who was a Bishop; and that he could not give it to his Brother, who had neither Age nor Manners requisite for such a Place: That he had chosen a pious Man out of his own Clergy, on whom he had conferr'd that Benefice. That the Bishops of Senlis being incens'd at this Denial, and coveting this Benefice, had sent high Threatnings to the Incumbent: That these Threatnings afterwards were put in Execution; And that within a few Days after the People of Senlis had set upon him as he was going to Church, and had kill'd him in the Porch of the Cathedral. That the Authors of this Offence had been discover'd by one of their Valets, who being taken as he was drying his Cloths, had discover'd all. St. Fulbert exhorts the Bishop of Laon to excommunicate these Homicides.

The forty eighth and ninth, are directed to the Bishop of Senlis, upon the same Subject.

In the forty seventh, he advises the Archbishop of Tours, That if the Pope has refus'd to give him the Pall without a lawful Cause, he ought not to be discourag'd at it; and that he ought to repeat his Requests, because in the Court of Rome there were certain Rules, not practis'd any where else.

In the fiftieth he determines, That a Woman, who was engag'd upon Oath to marry a Man, could not marry another till after his Death, or by his Consent.

Of the Writings of St. Fulbert Biſhop of Chartres.

The fifty firſt contains the Reſolution of another Caſe of the ſame Nature. A Woman not being willing to live with her Husband, and ſaying ſhe had rather live a Nun, the Husband deſires he may have Leave to marry another. St. Fulbert declares, That 'tis his Opinion he could not have Leave, till ſhe were either dead, or turn'd recluſe.

In the two and fiftieth he declares, That it was better not to celebrate Maſs, unleſs there were two or three Communicants. Which he proves thus; Becauſe the Word Church, without which there can be no true Sacrifice, cannot be ſaid but of many; for when 'tis ſaid Dominus Vobiſcum, The Lord be with you; it implies, That there are more than one. And laſtly, becauſe the Prayers are made for thoſe who offer the Sacrifice.

The fifty ſeventh is directed to the Biſhop of Liſieux, who had interdicted the Prieſts of the Canons of Chartres, who had Churches in his Dioceſs, becauſe they did not pay him a certain Duty, call'd the Synodical Duty. He ſays, That this Duty had been remitted to them who were in the Dioceſs of Chartres, by the Liberality of his Predeceſſors; but that this does not prejudice the Right of the Biſhop of Liſieux, over thoſe who are of his own Dioceſs; that therefore if he would not be pleas'd to remit it, they ſhould pay him, provided he would re-eſtabliſh them.

In the fifty eighth, directed to the Biſhop of Paris, he declaims againſt the Requeſt which this Biſhop had made to him, of giving Benefices to Laicks.

The ſixtieth Letter, directed to Leoterick Archbiſhop of Sens, is written about the Excommunication of Guido, an Accomplice in the Murder of the Subdeacon of Chartres. Leoterick had writ to Fulbert, That this Man deſir'd to be examined in a Synod of Biſhops. Fulbert returns him this Anſwer, That there was no further need of examining his Cauſe, ſince he was proved Guilty.

In the ſixty firſt, he tells Theoderick the Reaſons why he did not ordain him, 1. Becauſe on the Day whereon he was to be ordain'd, he had neither Letters, nor Deputies from the Biſhops of the Province, to intimate their Approbation of his Ordination. 2. Becauſe he had ſeen a Suſpenſion of the Pope iſſued out againſt him, becauſe of an Homicide he had been guilty of. 3. Becauſe by his own Confeſſion he was unworthy thereof. 4. Becauſe the Clergy and Laity had not elected him freely, but through Fear, and at the Recommendation of the Prince, who had not given them Liberty of chooſing any other. He adds, That though he had ſo many Reaſons for not ordaining him, yet he had like to have been kill'd in the Church by thoſe who ſupported his Intereſt. He reproves him for thus endeavouring to be ordain'd by Force, and for having celebrated Maſs in a violated Church, before it had been reconcil'd.

The ſixty ſecond Letter is directed to the Biſhop of Orleans, to whom at the Top he wiſhes, Obſequium Dilectionis ſine fuco Diſſimulationis, i. e. The Obedience of Love, without the leaſt Varniſh of Diſſimulation. He therein gives him the Reaſons why his Clergy could not go in a ſolemn Proceſſion to the Church of Orleans, according to Cuſtom.

In the ſixty fourth he approves of the Diſſolution of Marriage, for the Cauſe of Impotence.

In the ſeventy ſecond, he adviſes the Abbot and Monks of St. Medard, to live in Subjection to their Biſhops, according to the Laws of the Church.

In the ſeventy third, he gives the ſame Advice to the Monks of Orleans, whom the Biſhop of that City had excommunicated, becauſe they would not ſubmit to his Juriſdiction.

In the ſeventy fourth, he reproves a Clerk of his Church, who had been undutiful to him.

In the eighty third, directed to the Almoner of the Church of Orleans, he handles this Queſtion, What Puniſhment a Prieſt was liable to, who had celebrated Maſs without Communicating? He ſays, That if he did it through Infidelity, or becauſe he was apprehenſive of his being guilty of Drunkenneſs or Uncleanneſs, he ought to be enjoyn'd Penance, till he were throughly converted. That if he did it through any Diſguſt, becauſe of the frequent Celebration of the Holy Sacrifice, he ought to be excluded from communicating for a whole Year. That if he did it through any Scruple of Conſcience, and for a ſmall Offence, 'tis ſufficient to reprove him with Gentleneſs. And laſtly, That if he did it through any Weakneſs in his Head or Stomach, he ought to abſtain from celebrating, till he was reſtored to his Health.

Of the Writings of St. Fulbert Biſhop of Chartres.

The ninety fifth is a Letter of King Robert directed to Guarlin Archbiſhop of Bourges, wherein he acquaints him, that in ſeveral Parts of his Kingdom there fell a Shower of Blood, of that Nature, that it ſtuck ſo cloſe on the Fleſh, on the Cloths, and on the Stones, that no waſhing could fetch it out: Whereas when it fell on Wood, it was eaſily waſh'd off. He deſires to know, whether any ſuch Thing had ever happened. The Archbiſhop of Bourges Anſwers him in the following Letter, That this Prodigy prognoſticated ſome Civil War, for the Confirmation of which he produces ſeveral Examples of the ſame Nature taken out of Hiſtory, to which he adds ſeveral myſtical Reaſons. Fulbert of Chartres in the following Letter relates another Inſtance of it, taken out of the Writings of Gregory of Tours.

In the ninety ninth Letter, Fulbert exhorts a Count to do Penance, and to reſtore to the Church, what of Right belong'd to it.

In the hundredth he declar'd to Count Fulcus, who had in his Retinue, ſeveral who were Rebels to the King; that he would excommunicate him, if he did not turn them off.

The hundred and eighth, is a Letter of Compliment from Odilo to Fulbert of Chartres, wherein he gives him many high Commendations.

The ſix and twenty following Letters are written in the Name of the Canons of Chartres, but contain nothing remarkable concerning Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

There is nothing extraordinary in the Sermons of St. Fulbert. The firſt is upon the Trinity. In the ſecond he exhorts his People to Repentance. The third is about the Purification of the Virgin Mary. The three next upon the Incarnation. Theſe are follow'd by three other Diſcourſes againſt the Jews, wherein he proves that the Meſſias is already come: And by a ſmall Collection of Paſſages of the Scripture concerning the Trinity and the Incarnation. After this follows a Penitential very much abridg'd, and ſeveral Paſſages of the Fathers about the Euchariſt. Next to this come ſeveral Hymns, ſeveral Pieces in Proſe, and laſtly ſeveral Pieces of Poetry very ill done.

The Letters of St. Fulbert are written in a pretty correct Style, and are full of Delicacy and Spirit; he has not been ſo happy in the reſt of his Performances. He argues very pertinently both upon the Doctrines and the Diſcipline of the Church, and gives very juſt Determinations of any Caſe that is propoſed to him. Upon Occaſion he ſhews a great deal of Steadineſs, without failing in his Reſpect to higher Powers. His Works have been publiſh'd with a great deal of Remiſneſs by Charles de Villiers Doctor of Paris, from a Manuſcript of the College of Navarre, and from ſeveral others, and printed at Paris in the Year 1608.

Father Luke Dachery has ſince given us in the Addition to the ſecond Tome of his Spicilegium, a Letter of Fulbert of Chartres concerning Eccleſiaſtical Revenues; wherein this Author in the firſt Place lays down by ſeveral Paſſages of the Fathers, and eſpecially of St. Jerome, that theſe Revenues are deſign'd for the Maintenance of the Poor. Secondly, That the holy Veſſels ought not to be ſold no more than the Crucifixes, unleſs upon urgent Occaſions, and when the Poor are in ſuch extream Want, that they cannot be reliev'd otherwiſe. Thirdly, That they ſhou'd take care not to ſell them to ſuch Perſons, as might convert them to profane Uſes. They aſcribe likewiſe to St. Fulbert the Life of St. Aubert Biſhop of Cambray, referr'd by Surius to the thirteenth of December.

CHAP. II.

An Account of the Controverſie about the Euchariſt, ſet on Foot by Berenger; and of his ſeveral Condemnations.

Controverſie about the Euchariſt.

Berenger was born at Tours about the End of the Tenth, or the Beginning of the Eleventh Century. He Studied at Chartres under Fulbert, and ſtaid in that City till the Death of that Biſhop. 'Tis ſaid that from that very Time it appear'd that he had ſeveral particular Opinions, and that Fulbert upon his Death took Notice of him as a dangerous Man, and as one who corrupted a great many People. It was perhaps the Offence he took at being thus ſtigmatiz'd, which induc'd him to leave Chartres, and return to Tours. And being in great Repute for his Learning, he was made choice of to be Lecturer in the publick Schools of St. Martin: He gave ſuch Content in that Imploy, that they made him Chamberlain, and afterwards Treaſurer of the Church of St. Martin. No Body knows the Reaſon why he left Tours, and went to Angers; but 'tis certain that thither he retir'd, and was very well receiv'd by the Biſhop, who made him Archdeacon of his Church, and ſhew'd him a great deal of Reſpect. He who was then Controverſie about the Euchariſt.

Biſhop

Controverſie about the Euchariſt.

Bruno or Euſebius Biſhop of Angers.

Biſhop of that City, goes under two Names; for he is call'd Bruno by Theodwin Biſhop of Liege, by Durandus Abbot of Troarn, and Marbodus contemporary Authors, and in the Decretal of the Dedication of the Church of St. John of Angely: And he is call'd Euſebius in the Title of the Letter which he wrote to Berenger; in that which was ſent to him by Gregory VII. In the ancient Inſcriptions of St. Aubin of Angers, in two ancient Catalogues of the Biſhops of Angers, which are in the Library of Monſieur Colbert, and in almoſt all the ancient Records. Theſe two Names are given him in the Decree whereby Geoffry Count of Anjou and Agnes his Wife, granted the Church of Allhallows in the Suburbs of Angers to the Abby of the holy Trinity of Vendoſme, which bears Date in the Year 1048. and ſign'd by Euſebius Bruno Biſhop, and Berenger Archdeacon of Angers: And in the Chronicon of St. Aubin of Angers, printed by Father Labbe in the firſt Tome of his Bibleotheca Manuſcriptorum, he is call'd twice Euſebius Cognomento Bruno, He was made Biſhop of Angers in the Year 1047. Sometime after Berenger coming to that City, began there to broach his Doctrin upon the Euchariſt. Bruno maintain'd his Opinions, and within a ſhort Time he had a great many Followers: But theſe Opinions were rejected and oppoſed by the greateſt Scholars of that Age, as a new Hereſy. Lanfrank began the Controverſy, and Berenger being inform'd of it by Ingelram of Chartres, wrote to him a Letter, by which he gave him to underſtand, that he was very much to blame in accuſing John Scotus of Hereſy, for his Opinion about the Sacrament of the Altar, oppoſed to the Sentiment of Paſchaſius; and that he could wiſh to meet him in the Preſence of ſeveral Perſons, that he might convince him that it was through Prepoſſeſſion that he had ſuch Thoughts: Beſides, that if he judg'd John Scotus to be an Heretick, upon the Account of what he had delivered about the Euchariſt, he muſt likewiſe charge St. Ambroſe, St. Jerome, St. Auſtine, and ſeveral other Fathers with Hereſy. Lanfrank was gone to Rome, when this Letter was carry'd to Normandy; but for all this it was publiſh'd, and ſcandaliz'd a great many People. It was likewiſe carry'd to Rome by a Clerk of the Church of Rheims, who ſhew'd it to a great many, and read it publickly in the Council held at Rome, under Pope Leo IX. in the Year 1050. Berenger was thereupon excommunicated, and Lanfrank then preſent was engag'd to clear himſelf of the Suſpicion he lay under of holding Correſpondence with Berenger, and to give an Account of his Faith: He did it without any Heſitation, made a Profeſſion of the Faith of the Church, and prov'd it by the Teſtimony of the Fathers. It was order'd in this Council, that another ſhould be held at Verceil in September, to which Berenger ſhould be cited, and Lanfrank was deſired to be preſent. Berenger being inform'd of his Condemnation, retired into Normandy to Ariſfrede Abbot of Preaux, and endeavour'd to win over to his Party, William Duke of Normandy. But that Prince detain'd him at Brionne, where he call'd an Aſſembly of the Biſhops of his Dutchy, who condemn'd Berenger, and a Clerk who had accompanied him. In the Letter of Durandus, Abbot of Troarn, this Council is referr'd to the Year 1053. But certainly there muſt be an Error in the Text, or Durandus was miſtaken: For 'tis evident by the Teſtimony of Durandus himſelf, that the Convention of Brionne was before the Council of Verceil, which was held in September 1050. according to the Teſtimony of Herman Contract.

The Council of Rome, in the Year 1050.

The Council of Brionne.

Berenger being drove out of Normandy retir'd to Chartres, where he dar'd not to declare himſelf, but when he was ask'd his Opinion, only anſwer'd, That he would tell it when Time and Place ſhould offer themſelves. However, this new Doctrine beginning to ſpread it ſelf, Henry King of France to ſtop the Progreſs of it, reſolv'd to call a Council at Paris, and order'd Berenger to appear there, to give an Account of his Doctrine. Theodwin or Dietwin Biſhop of Liege, underſtanding the King's Deſign, wrote a Letter to him; wherein he condemns the Doctrine of Berenger, which he ſaid was likewiſe the Doctrine of Bruno Biſhop of Angers; but he diſapproved the Deſign he had of cauſing them to be condemn'd in a Council; becauſe Bruno being a Biſhop, could not by try'd without the Authority of the Holy Apoſtolick See. Therefore he adviſes him to paſs by the impious and ſacrilegious Opinions of theſe Perſons, till ſuch time as he had receiv'd Authority to condemn them, after they had been heard at Rome, tho' he thought it needleſs to hear them, and to call a Council to condemn them, and that all that was to be done was to conſider what Puniſhment to inflict upon them. Theodwin in this Letter accuſes Berenger and Bruno, not only of believing that the Euchariſt was nothing elſe but the Shadow and Type of Jeſus Chriſt, but alſo of holding erroneous Opinions about Marriage, and of diſapproving of Infant-Baptiſm. This Letter has been publiſh'd under the Name of Durandus Biſhop of Liege; but ſince it was written after the 1050. it cannot be his, for he dy'd in the Year 1025. therefore it muſt be Theodwin's, who was ordain'd Biſhop of Liege in 1048.

The Letter of Theodwin against Berenger.

The Council of Verceil in 1050.

The Time appointed for the Synod of Verceil being come, Leo IX. came thither with a great many Prelates of ſeveral Nations, and opened the Council the firſt of September, in the Year 1050. Berenger durſt not appear there in Perſon, but ſent two Clerks to maintain his Cauſe. They read in the Council the Book of John Scotus, which gave Riſe to the Error of Berenger, and it was condemn'd by all the Fathers of the Council. The Opinion of Berenger was likewiſe examin'd and condemn'd, and the Doctrine of the Church maintain'd and defended by Lanfrank, was approv'd of and confirm'd by an unanimous Conſent. The two Clerks who were ſent by Berenger would have undertaken his Defence, but they no ſooner began to ſpeak, but they were forc'd to hold their Tongues.

Controverſie about the Euchariſt.

The Council of Paris in 1050.

Notwithſtanding the Remonſtrance of Theodwin, King Henry held the Council which he had call'd at Paris on the ſixteenth of November in the ſame Year; but neither Berenger nor Bruno durſt appear there. In their Abſence the Biſhop of Orleans caus'd a Writing of Berenger's to be read, which was condemn'd as Heretical by all the Aſſembly. They condemn'd the Authors and Abettors of that Doctrine, together with the Book of John Scotus. It was there order'd that the Author of that Hereſie and his Adherents ſhould be proſecuted and conſtrained to recant under the Pain of being put to Death. Theſe Matters of Fact are recorded by Theodwin, and Durandus Abbot of Troarn. None beſides theſe two Authors have made mention of this Council of Paris, and accus'd Bruno of abetting Berenger in his Error: But foraſmuch as they liv'd at that Time, 'tis hard to diſcredit them.

Adelman Clerk of the Church of Liege.

Whilſt the higher Powers did uſe their Authority againſt the growing Hereſie of Berenger; the learned World oppos'd it by their Writings. Among the reſt, Adelman a Clerk of the Church of Liege, who had been Berenger's School-fellow under Fulbert Biſhop of Chartres, and who afterwards was Biſhop of Breſſe; when he underſtood that Berenger taught this Error, wrote a Letter to him, wherein after he had put them in mind of their old Acquaintance, and of Fulbert of Chartres their common Maſter, he conjur'd him to relinquiſh his Error, demonſtrating to him, That it was not impoſſible for that God, who had created all Things out of nothing, to change the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Chriſt. He had ſent another Letter ſome Time before upon the ſame Subject to Paulinus Biſhop of Mets, that he might admoniſh Berenger to renounce his Error. We have loſt this laſt Letter, and ſeveral others mention'd by Tritbemius: But the former is among the Authors who wrote upon the Euchariſt, printed at Louvain in 1551. and 1561. and in the Bibleotheca Patrum.

The Letter of Berenger to Aſcelin.

Aſcelin a Monk of St. Evron in Normandy, ſent likewiſe about the ſame Time a Letter to Berenger againſt his Error. Berenger upon his return from Normandy, had a Conference with Aſcelin and his Scholar William. They publickly declar'd, That he had acknowledg'd the Book of John Scotus to be blameable, and that he durſt not maintain his Error. Berenger being inform'd of it, wrote a Letter to Aſcelin, wherein he gave him to underſtand, That he was not minded to Diſpute againſt him in the Conference which they had together, becauſe at that Time he had reſolv'd not to diſcourſe with any one about the Euchariſt, till he had ſatisfied the Biſhops, to whom he ought to give an account of his Doctrine. That it was upon this Account that he would not ſo much as refute that damnable and impious Maxim maintain'd by William, That every Man ought to approach the Holy Table at Eaſter: But that Aſcelin was conſcious to himſelf that he never ſaid John Scotus was an Heretick: That all he had ſaid about it, was, That he had not ſeen all the Writings of that Author, but that what he had read of his about the Euchariſt contain'd nothing in it Heretical; and if he had ſpoken any Thing which was not ſo exact, he was ready to diſown it. That laſtly, They could not condemn him for having alledg'd that the Subſtance of Bread remains in the Sacrament, ſince 'tis the Doctrine of the Fathers which he defended, deſigning nothing elſe than to follow in every Thing St. Ambroſe, St. Auſtine, and St. Jerome; and that therefore there was no Ground for what Arnulphus had ſaid to him in Aſcelin's own hearing, Prithee let us alone in the Opinion we have been brought up in; ſince he did not pretend to eſtabliſh a Novelty, but to maintain the Doctrine of the Fathers.

Aſcelin's Letter to Berenger.

Aſcelin return'd him this Anſwer, That he had receiv'd his Letter with Joy, hoping therein to have heard the News of his Converſion; but that in reading it, his Joy was turn'd into Sorrow, perceiving that he ſtill adher'd to his old Error. That he did no longer ſee in him that Depth of Thought, and that Learning, which he had formerly; ſince he had forgot the Paſſages of their laſt Conference, particularly that about the Propoſition made by William, That every Man ought to approach the Holy Table at Eaſter; to which he added this Reſtriction, Unleſs he were excluded from this Heavenly Banquet by ſome Crime, which ought not to be done but by the Order of his Confeſſor; otherwiſe the Keys of the Church would become uſeleſs. That for his Part he did not repent of what he had ſaid in that Conference, ſince he had maintain'd a notorious and unqueſtionable Truth, from which he would would never ſwerve, viz. That the Bread and Wine were by the Efficacy of the Holy Spirit, and the Miniſtry of the Prieſts, turn'd into the real Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt; which is plainly proved out of the Holy Scriptures, unleſs corrupted by a vicious and falſe Interpretation. That for what relates to John Scotus, he was perſuaded that in looking upon him as an Heretick, he did nothing unbecoming either his Prieſthood or Religion, ſince he perceiv'd that the whole Aim and Deſign of that Author is to prove, That what is conſecrated on the Altar, is not the true Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt; which Error he endeavours to eſtabliſh, by ſeveral Paſſages of the Fathers falſly explain'd, and among others by a Prayer of St. Gregory, upon which he ſays, that this Change of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, was figurative and not real. That he look'd upon Berenger himſelf to be a Man of more Learning, than to maintain the Orthodoxy of this Expreſſion: That he had not ventur'd to defend it in their Conference; that he only ſaid he had not read the Book of John Scotus quite out: That he was ſurpriz'd to ſee ſuch a prudent Man give ſo large Encomiums of a Book which he had not read through: That laſtly, for his Part, he was of the Opinion of Paſcaſius and of the other Catholicks, and that he firmly believed that the Faithful receiv'd upon the Altar the real Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, under the Appearance of Bread and Wine; and that this Opinion was not contrary to the Laws of Nature, which depend on the Will of God, nor to the Teſtimony of the Goſpel. To conclude, that the Advice which Arnulphus (whom he calls the ſinging Man) had given him was very wholſome, and that he ought to follow it, to be aſham'd of defending a Book condemn'd in the Council of Verceil, and to keep cloſe to the Catholick and Apoſtolick Tradition, from which he had ſwerv'd. This and the former Letters were publiſh'd by Father Luke Dachery in his Notes upon the Life of Lanfrank.

Controverſie about the Euchariſt.

[And here it is worth our while to obſerve how modeſt the firſt Advancers and Promoters of the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation were in their Aſſertions: Who did not aſſert any Thing about it more than what we Proteſtants readily own, viz. That the Faithful do verily and indeed receive the Body and Blood of Chriſt in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, ſignified to us by the Bread broken, and the Wine pour'd out.

Berenger's Letter to Richard.

About the ſame Time Berenger wrote another Letter to Richard, who was then at the French Court, wherein he prays him to ſpeak to the King in his Behalf, that ſo he might remedy the Injuſtice which had been done him; and to give him to underſtand that they had not done well in condemning John Scotus in the Council of Verceil, and in juſtifying Paſchaſius. That the Clerks of Chartres had given him a falſe Explication of the Opinion of St. Fulbert, or rather of the Paſſage of St. Auguſtine related by that Biſhop. That to induce the King to hearken unto him, he might inform him that John Scotus wrote his Book by the Order, and at the Inſtance of his Predeceſſor Charles the Great (that is, Charles the Bald) who had charg'd him to refute by writing the Folly of Paſchaſius; that upon this Account he was oblig'd to grant his Protection to that dead Perſon againſt the Calumnies of the Living, if he were minded to ſhew himſelf the worthy Succeſſor of that great Prince.

The Council of Tours in the Year 1055. againſt Berenger.

While theſe Diſputes were on Foot between Berenger and his Adverſaries, Leo IX. dies in the Year 1054. His Succeſſor Victor II. confirm'd what he had done againſt Berenger, and 'tis likewiſe ſaid that he held a Council at Florence, wherein he condemn'd him. Hildebrand his Legate in France having held a Council at Tours in the Year 1055. made Berenger appear there, and gave him Liberty to defend his Opinions: Berenger reſolv'd to forſake them, and to engage himſelf by an Oath to hold the common receiv'd Doctrine of the Church, concerning the Reality of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt.

The Council of Rome in 1059.

But he either did this pretendedly, or elſe ſoon chang'd his Mind; for after this Council he continu'd to broach his Doctrines as before; and not being capable of teaching his Error publickly, he explain'd it in particular, and wrote ſeveral Treatiſes in its Defence. So that his Hereſie continuing to ſpread it ſelf, Nicholas II. who in the Year 1058. ſucceeded Stephen X. Pope Victor's Succeſſor, cited Berenger to a Council held at Rome in the Year 1059. which was compos'd of 113 Biſhops of ſeveral Nations. Berenger at the firſt maintain'd his Opinion, which was refuted by Alberic a Monk of Mount Caſſinus, and by Lanfrank; but afterwards he yielded, and declar'd that he was ready to believe and ſubſcribe to what the Pope and Council would be pleas'd to preſcribe to him. Upon this, Humbert Cardinal Biſhop of Blancheſelve, prepar'd a Form of Faith, which was ſworn to, and ſubſcrib'd by Berenger in theſe Words; 'I Berenger an unworthy Deacon of the Church of St. Maurice of Angiers, having a Knowledge of the true Catholick and Apoſtolick Faith, do abjure all Hereſie; eſpecially that of which I have been ſuſpected, which holds, that the Bread and Wine upon the Altar after the Conſecration are only the Sacrament, and not the real Body and Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and that it could not be handled by the Prieſts, nor broke and eat by the Faithful, unleſs it were only in the Sacrament, and after an inſenſible Manner. I approve of the Doctrine of the Holy and Apoſtolick See of Rome, and I confeſs from my Heart and with my Lips, that I hold the ſame Faith which the Holy and Reverend Pope Nicholas, and his holy Synod have declar'd, and aſſur'd me that I ought to hold, according to the Evangelical and Apoſtolick Authority, viz. That the Bread and the Wine which lie upon the Altar, after the Conſecration, are not only the Sacrament, but alſo the real Body and Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and that 'tis handled by the Prieſts, broke and eaten by the Faithful, not only in the Sacrament, but alſo in a ſenſible Way. The which I ſwear, by the Holy and Conſubſtantial Trinity, and by the Holy Evangeliſts, declaring that thoſe who ſhall advance any Thing contrary to this Faith, deſerve themſelves, their Doctrines, and their Followers to be Anathematiz'd. And if I my ſelf ſhould be ſo bold, as to think or teach any Thing contrary to this Profeſſion of Faith, I ſubmit my ſelf to the utmoſt Rigor of the Canons. In Teſtimony whereof, I have ſet my Hand to theſe Preſents, which I have heard read over and over.' Afterwards he burnt his own Writings, and the Book of John Scotus.

The firſt Profeſſion of Faith made by Berenger.

Controverſie about the Euchariſt.

Berenger relapſes into his Error.

This profeſſion of Faith ſeem'd to be ſincere: But Berenger was no ſooner return'd to France, but finding King Henry dead, and his Son Philip in his Minority, he thought that now he might maintain his Error afreſh without Reſtraint. He repented that he had burnt his Writings, and made a new one in oppoſition to that Profeſſion of Faith, which he ſaid was Humbert's, and not his. This is that Piece which Lanfrank and Guitmond refute. In a Word, he perſiſted in the Defence of his Error, and fled out into a Paſſion againſt Pope Leo, and the Holy See. Pope Alexander II. who ſucceeded Nicholas, being inform'd thereof, wrote him a Letter, wherein he exhorts him abſolutely to renounce his Error, and to be no longer a Scandal to the Church. But inſtead of obeying the Pope, he had the Confidence to ſend him Word, That he would do nothing in it, and remain'd obſtinate in his Opinion.

The Council of Rom againſt Berenger in 1063.

Maurilio Archbiſhop of Roan, willing to put a ſtop to the Progreſs of this Hereſy, which viſibly ſpread it ſelf in Normandy, upon the Account of that Influence which Berenger had over it, calls a Provincial Council of Biſhops at Roan, in the Year 1063. Wherein he prepar'd a Profeſſion of Faith, declaring, That the Bread and Wine after Conſecration, were chang'd into the very Subſtance of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt; anathematizing all thoſe who are of the contrary Opinion, or oppoſe this true Faith: And it was order'd, That for the future this Profeſſion of Faith ſhould be ſubſcribed by the Biſhops, before their Ordination.

The Council of Poitiers againſt Berenger.

In the Year 1075. Geraldus Biſhop of Angouleſme, and Legate of the Holy See for the Provinces of Tours, Bourdeaux and Auche, call'd a Council at Poitiers, wherein Berenger was accus'd, and like to be kill'd. But this Accident did not alter his Mind, for aſſoon as the Heat was over, he went from the Council as unconvinc'd of the Truth, as he came.

The Letter of Euſebius or Bruno, Biſhop of Angers.

It was at this Time that Euſebius Biſhop of Angers, who is the ſame with Bruno, wrote to Berenger; That he had receiv'd a Letter from him, which intimated, That Geofrey was a publick Abetter of Lanfrank's Fooleries; and that in that Letter he deſir'd, that Geofrey might be ſummon'd before him, to give an Account of the Explication of a Paſſage of St. Ambroſe, taken out of the Treatiſe concerning the Sacraments. That in anſwer to his Letter he declares to him, That he knew not whether that Queſtion had been ſtarted out of Vain-glory; but this he knew very well, that after it had been ſpread over a great Part of the World, it had caſt a great Blemiſh on the Reputation of the Church of Angers, which was expos'd to the Calumnies and Upbraidings of all Men, both far and near. That for his Part he had reſolv'd to decline theſe Diſputes, to keep to the Text of the Holy Scriptures, and to believe that the Bread and Wine are the real Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt after Conſecration, without concerning himſelf how this could be: And that if any one ſhould ask him, What were the Thoughts of the Fathers and Doctors about it? he would refer ſuch an Inquirer to their Writings; and adviſe him to put ſuch a Conſtruction upon what he found in them, as was moſt conformable to the Doctrine of the Goſpel. That this was not out of any Diſreſpect to the Writings of the Fathers, but becauſe he thought that the principal Regard ought to be had to the Text of the Goſpel, for Fear it ſhould cauſe a Scandal in the Church of God, if the Opinions of the Fathers ſhould not be well underſtood, or the Paſſages taken out of them ſhould be corrupted. That it was after this Manner that the Diſturbance which happen'd at Tours in the Preſence of Gerald, and in the ſame City in the Preſence sence of Hildebrand, was appeas'd; and that this Plague, which began to spread it self afresh, had been stop'd by the Command of the Prince, and by the Authority of the Archbishop of Besanzon. That thereupon he had taken up a Resolution to hold no more Conferences, nor to enter into any Dispute upon that Subject, and that he would never give his Consent for the holding of any Assembly upon that Affair: That if any such should be holden, he would not be at it. That he would not give Audience to the Disputants, and would exclude such as continu'd obstinate from the Communion, because this Business had been determin'd thrice in the Province, and four times by the Sentence of the Holy See.

Controversie about the Eucharist.

The Council of Rome in 1078. under Gregory vii. against Berenger.

At last Gregory VII. willing to put an end to what he had begun whilst Legate, cited Berenger to a Council, held at Rome in December, 1078. and gave him time to consider what he had to do till the next Council, which was held the next Year in February. Berenger did still adhere to his Opinion, and maintain'd it very vigorously: Bruno, afterwards Bishop of Signi and Abbot Wolphelmus, oppos'd him. The Question was debated between them for three Days; and, at last, Berenger was forc'd to make his Recantation, drawn up in these Terms: 'I Berenger, believe in my 'Heart, and confess with my Mouth, that the Bread and 'Wine which are upon the Altar, are substantially chang'd 'by the Mystery of the Priest, and by the Words of our 'Saviour, into the true, proper, and quickening Body and 'Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which came out of his 'Side: And not only figuratively and by virtue of the Sacrament, but truly, properly and substantially, according 'to the Intention of these Presents, and as I have read, 'and you understand it. This is my Faith, contrary to 'which I will not, for the future, broach any Doctrine: 'So help me God, and the Holy Evangelists. After this, the Pope conjur'd Berenger, by the Almighty God, and by the Holy Apostles St. Peter and St Paul, never to dispute again with any Person, about the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, unless to undeceive those on whom he had impos'd. Upon this Declaration he granted Berenger a Letter, directed to the Archbishop of Tours and to the Bishop of Angers; wherein he declar'd to them, that he had taken Berenger into his Protection, and enjoyn'd them to defend him against Fulcus Richinus, the Count of Angers, who bore him an ill Will, and against all his Enemies. He likewise granted him a Bull, which excommunicates those who should attempt any thing against his Person or Estate, or should call him Heretick: These Favours, granted by Gregory VII. to Berenger, gave an Occasion to the Bishops, who exhibited a Decree against this Pope, in a Council held at Bresse, in the Year, 1080. to accuse him of being a Disciple, or at least a Favourer of that Heretick. But this Charge against this Pope was groundless and unjust, since he had not entertain'd Berenger till after he had abjur'd his Heresy: Tho' perhaps he was too easy in giving Credit to the Words of so unconstant a Man. In Truth, it appears that Berenger did persist in teaching his Heresy, since he was forc'd to appear at a Council held at Bordeaux in the Year, 1080. by Hugh the Pope's Legate, at first Bishop of Die, and afterwards Archbishop of Lyons, and there to give an Account of his Faith, as 'tis recorded in the Chronicon of St. Maixant. This is the last Scene wherein Berenger appear'd. He spent the rest of his Life in the Isle of St. Cosmus, near the City of Tours; to which Place he retir'd after the Council of Rome, and dy'd there Jan. 6. 1088.

The second Profession of Faith made by Berenger.

The Council of Bordeaux in 1080. against Berenger.

Of Berenger's Repentance.

An ancient Author to be met with in the Library of Fleury, William of Malmsbury, Matthew of Paris, Vincent of Beauvais, and several other more modern Authors, tell us, that Berenger was a real Convert, and that he died a sincere Penitent, being heartily sorry for having infected so many with his Error. Clarius a Monk of Fleury, and the Authors of the Chronicon of St. Peter the Lively of Sens, and of the Chronicon of St. Martin of Tours, speak very much in his Praise. We have likewise two noble Epitaphs made in his Praise; the one by Baudry Abbot of Bourgueil, and afterwards Bishop of Dol; and the other by Hildebert Archdeacon of Mans, who was afterwards Bishop of that City, and at last Archbishop of Tours. In a Word, his Memory is still had in veneration at Tours, where they say that the Prebendaries of St. Martins have a Custom of paying him their Respects every Year. 'Tis probable that these Authors who believe the real Presence, would never have bestow'd so many Encomiums on Berenger, if they had not been fully convinc'd of his Conversion. And yet we find that Lanfrank, in his fiftieth Letter, written since the Year, 1080. to Reginald Abbot of St. Cyprian of Poitiers, and the anonymous Author of a Treatise written in the Years, 1088. and publish'd by Father Chifflet, speak of him still as an Heretick, without mentioning his Conversion in the least. We find that after his return from Rome, he was oblig'd to give an Account of his Faith to the Council of Bordeaux. But that which raises the greatest cause of suspecting his Conversion, is, that after his second Return from Rome to France, he compos'd a Treatise in opposition to his last Profession of Faith, as Father Mabillon, who had seen the Manuscript, assures us: The which being joyned to the Testimony of Berthol Priest of Constance, who says positively, that Berenger had not chang'd his Opinion, seems to destroy all that has been said about his Repentance, or at least shews that it was very late, and that he did not change his Opinion till a little before his Death.

Controversie about the Eucharist.

The Followers of Berenger.

Notwithstanding his Retractations and Repentance, several of his Followers persisted in their Error; but by degrees this Heresie was extirpated. One Anastasius, a Monk of St. Sergius of Angers, was forc'd to abjure it, and to deliver a Profession of his Faith to Gerald Abbot of St. Aubin of that City, related by Father Luke Dachery, in his Notes upon the Life of Lanfrank. The Fathers of the Council of Placentia in the Year, 1095. condemn'd the Heresie of Berenger afresh: And lastly, Bruno Archbishop of Treves, drove out of his Province the Followers of this Heretick.

Other Errors of Berenger.

Berenger was likewise suspected of several other Errors. Guitmond, after Theodwin, accuses him of believing, that Infant-Baptism was null; and of destroying lawful Marriages, by permitting Men to abuse all Women without distinction. Lanfrank and William of Malmsbury, accuse him of harbouring a strange Contempt for the Writings of the Fathers. Lastly, Guitmond and St. Anselm relate, as an Error which he had advanc'd, that our Saviour after his Resurrection, did not enter through the Chamber-door, where his Disciples were, before it was opened. As to this Error, 'tis a Consequence of his Opinion about the Eucharist. As for the two former, forasmuch as they are not in the Writings of Berenger, and were never (as we can learn) charg'd upon him by other Authors: And since he has not been condemn'd for maintaining them, nor ever oblig'd to retract them in any Council, 'tis hard to suppose that he taught them publickly; and the rather, because they are ancient Errors condemn'd long before that in the Church.

The Writings and Adversaries of Berenger.

We have by us a Letter of Berenger to Ascelin, another to Richard the Abbot; three Professions of Faith; a part of his Treatise in opposition to his second Profession of Faith: And Father Mabillon has seen a Treatise in Manuscript against the third. The Treatise which he compos'd against Adelman, alias Alman, Bishop of Bresse, of which Sigebert of Gembloux makes mention, and his other Pieces, are lost. He wrote in a dry and scholastick Style. Sigebert has reason for what he says, when he tells us, that he abus'd the Sophisms of Logick in opposition to the Apostolical Simplicity; and that this could be no Excuse to him, nor Edification to others, because he rather rendred clear Things obscure, than obscure Things clear. He does not seem to have had very much Skill in the Antiquities of the Church. His Error was oppos'd by Lanfrank, Archbishop of Canterbury; by Adelman, Clerk of the Church of Liege, and afterwards Bishop of Bresse; by Ascelin, Monk of St. Evroul in Normandy; by Guy Aretine, Abbot of La-Croix-Saint-Leufroy; by Durandus, Abbot of Troarn; by Hugh, Bishop of Langres; by Alberic, Monk of Mount-Cassin; by Guitmond, Archbishop of Averse; and by Alger Deacon of Liege, and afterwards Monk of Cluny.

CHAP. III.

Of the Writings of Lanfrank, Archbishop of Canterbury; of Guitmond; of Alger; and of the other Authors who have refuted the Error of Berenger.

Lanfrank Archbishop of Canterbury.

LANFRANK, descended from a very honourably Family of Pavia; for his Father was Warden or Keeper of the publick Archives, where were reposited the Minutes of the Laws and Customs of the City. After he had went through the course of his Studies in his own Country, he went into France, under the Reign of King Henry, and came to Auranches, where he taught publickly for some time. In his Journey to Roan, he was taken by Highway-Men, who robb'd him; and having bound him, left him in a Forest near the Abby of Bec. On the Morrow, some Passengers finding him in that Condition, unbound him; and, upon his asking them, Whether there were not a Monaſtery near that Place; they directed him to the Abby of Bec, which was newly founded. He retir'd thither, and took upon him the Habit at the Hands of Herluin chief Abbot of that Monaſtery. This happen'd in the Year, 1041. The Genius, the Learning, and the Virtue of Lanfrank, being ſoon diſcern'd, he was elected Prior of his own Monaſtery, and choſen by William I. Duke of Normandy, to be one of his Counſellors of State. He went to Rome under the Popedom of Leo IX. and clear'd himſelf, before that Pope, from the Error of Berenger, which was laid to his Charge. He return'd thither a ſecond time under the Popedom of Nicholas II. to requeſt a Diſpenſation for the Marriage of Duke William with the Daughter of the Count of Flanders, his Kinſwoman; which was granted, upon Condition that the Duke and his Lady would build a Monaſtery. The Duke gave Orders for the building the Monaſtery of St. Stephen of Caen, of which Lanfrank was made Abbot in the Year, 1063. He was ſo highly in the Duke's eſteem, that this Prince, after he had conquer'd England, could find none more proper than him to ſend to Rome, to Pope Alexander II. to treat with him about the Reforming the Churches of that Kingdom. After the Death of Maurillus Archbiſhop of Roan, Lanfrank was pitch'd upon to be his Succeſſor. But he refus'd it.. And upon his Refuſal, the Biſhop of Auranches having obtain'd that Archbiſhoprick, Lanfrank went a fourth time to Rome, to get this Tranſlation to be approv'd of, and to deſire the Pall for that Archbiſhop. He obtain'd his Requeſt from the Pope; who ſent two Legates to crown William King of England, and to reform the Churches.

Lanfrank Archbishop of Canterbury.

Lanfrank Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The Council of Windſor.

Theſe Legates held a Council at Windſor, wherein they depos'd ſeveral Biſhops who were convicted of Crimes, or of groſs Ignorance; and among the reſt, Stigand Archbiſhop of Canterbury, who had poſſeſs'd himſelf of that See by Intrigues and Violence. Lanfrank was oblig'd, againſt his Will, by the expreſs Command of Abbot Herluin, to take upon him this Archbiſhoprick in the Year, 1070. He govern'd that Church, for nineteen Years together, with a great deal of Wiſdom and Authority. He ſtill kept up his Credit with King William, in whoſe Abſence he was Regent of the Kingdom. He dy'd a little after that Prince, in May, 1089.

Lanfrank's Commentary on St. Paul's Epiſtles.

The largeſt Treatiſe of Lanfrank, is his Commentary upon the Epiſtles of St. Paul. He gives us the Text, with ſome Illuſtrations, in a Parentheſis; and adds to this, ſome Notes of Explanation taken out of St. Auguſtin, or out of the Commentary attributed to St. Ambroſe, or ſuch as himſelf compos'd. Thoſe out of St. Auguſtin, are to be met with in that Father; but a great part of thoſe which are cited under the Name of St. Ambroſe, are not to be met with in the Commentary which goes at preſent under the Name of that Saint: And there are likewiſe ſome others which are St. Auguſtin's, and are aſcribed to St. Ambroſe. Theſe Notes are ſhort and ſententious; and the Author keeps cloſe to the Literal Meaning and the Morality of the Epiſtles. Peter Lombard cites ſeveral Paſſages out of this Commentary upon St. Paul, which are not exactly in the ſame manner expreſſed by Lanfrank.

Lanfrank's Treatiſe of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt.

Lanfrank's Treatiſe of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, is a Refutation of a Piece which Berenger had made againſt the real preſence of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt. He tells him that he could wiſh that he might have a Conference with him, being perſuaded that it would be very advantageous either to reclaim him from his Error, or at leaſt to rectify his followers. But that ſince he took upon him to maintain it in his private Converſe with ignorant Men, and at the ſame time to own the Orthodox Truth before the Councils, rather out of fear of Death, than for the ſake of Truth, he avoided Perſons of clearer Heads, who could paſs a ſound Judgment upon his Diſcourſes. That if he could once Diſcourſe with him in the preſence of ſenſible Men, he would convince him what an ill uſe he made of ſeveral Paſſages of the Fathers, which were either falſe, or corrupted, or ill explain'd. That not being content to teach his Errors with his Mouth, he likewiſe ſpread them through the World by the Writings which his Diſciples publiſh'd. That his firſt Writings had been examin'd and condemn'd by Pope Nicholas of bleſſed Memory, in a Council at Rome of one hundred and thirteen Biſhops; in which Council Berenger himſelf had thrown them into the Fire, and promis'd upon Oath, that he would never ſwerve from the Faith of the Fathers, nor teach any more the Doctrine which he had advanc'd about the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. That he had ſince that broke his Oath by Writing againſt that Synod, againſt the Catholick Faith, and the Doctrine of all the Churches. That this is the Treatiſe which he undertakes to refute, by repeating his own Words, and giving them an Anſwer afterwards.

Berenger gave out that the Confeſſion which they had made him ſign at Rome, under Pope Nicholas, was prepared contrary to the Catholick Faith by Humbert, whom by way of Contempt he calls the Burgundian. Lanfrank aſſerts, that this Confeſſion was not Humbert's, but His, the Pope's and the Council's, who all had approv'd of it. He likewiſe recites Berenger's other Confeſſion under Pope Gregory VII. and defends Humbert. Berenger ſaid, that this Man was of the Opinion, or rather of the Fooleries of the Mob, of Paſchaſius, and of Lanfrank, who believe that after Conſecration, the ſubſtance of the Bread and Wine were no longer upon the Altar. Lanfrank ſhews him that this was not any particular Opinion; but the Doctrine of the Church, of the Councils, and of the Popes who had condemn'd him. Berenger adds, that tho' Humbert was of this Opinion, yet he had deſtroy'd his own Argument before he was aware, becauſe in ſaying that the Bread and Wine which are on the Altar, are either only the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, or are only the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, he ſuppoſed that there was both Bread and Wine upon the Altar. After Lanfrank had taken notice that if there were any Ambiguity or Contradiction in the Words of that Confeſſion, the Blame lay at Berenger's Door, ſince he had approv'd of, and Sworn to it, and was not allow'd to Swear that he would hold two Contraries; he obſerves that the two Propoſitions which he ſtarts are neither the Councils, nor Cardinal Humbert's. That the firſt belongs to Berenger and his Followers; and that the ſecond is maintain'd by none, for tho' the Church believe; that the Bread and Wine are chang'd into the Body and Blood of our Saviour, yet it acknowledges that this Myſtery is the Sacrament of the Paſſion of our Lord, of his Mercy, of the Concord and Union, and of the Incarnation. That beſides, when the name of Bread is given to the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, 'tis a figurative and myſtical way of Speaking; and that 'tis ſo call'd, becauſe 'tis made of Bread, and retains the Qualities of Bread; and becauſe it nouriſhes the Soul after an incomprehenſible manner, as the Bread nouriſhes the Body. 'Tis upon this Principle that he anſwers the logical Evaſions which Berenger makes about theſe terms of Bread and Wine. He replies likewiſe to the Paſſages of the Fathers, which he alledges to prove that Bread and Wine ſtill remain in this Sacrament, by ſhewing that 'tis the external Appearance of Bread and Wine, which is the Sacrament and the Sign of the inviſible Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. Berenger asks how it can be ſaid, that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt which is incorruptible, is broken and eat in this Bread. Lanfrank replies, that the Juſt who live by Faith, need not concern themſelves how the Bread and Wine become the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, by an eſſential change of its Nature: That the Belief of the Church is, that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt is ſo Broken and Eat in the Euchariſt, that it does not hinder it from being incorruptible and impaſſible in the Heavens: That we eat it Corporeally when we receive it from the Hand of the Prieſt, and that we likewiſe eat it Spiritually by Faith. He moreover produces the Paſſage out of the Council of Epheſus, which ſays, that this Fleſh which we eat in the Euchariſt, is the proper quickening Fleſh of the Divine Logos. After he had thus anſwer'd Berenger, he explains his own Sentiments in theſe Terms. 'We believe that the terreſtrial Subſtances which are ſanctified at 'the Holy Table, by the divine Efficacy and Miniſtry of 'the Prieſts, are converted after an Ineffable, Incompre-'henſible, and Miraculous manner, by the Operation of 'the ſupreme Power into the eſſential Body of our Savi-'our, their Appearances remaining with their Qualities, for 'fear Men ſhould be ſtruck with Horror, if they were to 'eat raw and bloody Fleſh; and that they believing what 'they did not ſee, their Faith merited the greater Reward. 'That notwithſtanding this, the Body of Jeſus Chriſt re-'mains ſtill in Heaven at the Right Hand of his Father, 'Immortal, Entire, without Defect, and Impaſſible: So 'that we may truly ſay, that we do, and do not receive 'the ſame Body which is Born of the Virgin; becauſe 'tis 'the ſame with reſpect to the Eſſence, Propriety, and Ef-'ficacy of its Nature; and 'tis not the ſame, if we conſi-'der the Appearances of Bread and Wine and the other 'Qualities: This, ſays he, is the Doctrine which the whole 'Catholick Church has always held, and does ſtill hold. He recites a great many Paſſages out of St. Ambroſe and St. Auſtin to ſtrengthen this. He explains in what Senſe it may be ſaid, that the Euchariſt is an Appearance, a Figure, or a Sacrament: That 'tis the Appearance of the Bread and the Wine which were there before the Conſecration, and which are chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt: That we beg of God in a Prayer, that we may comprehend according to the Truth and Reality of Things, that which we perform under Types and Figures, thereby taking the Word Truth for a clear manifeſtation of thoſe very Things without a Type and without a Figure. That the Euchariſt is likewiſe a Sign and Sacrament of the Paſſion of our Lord and Saviour. That laſtly, 'tis call'd Bread and Wine, becauſe 'tis cuſtomary to call Things by the

Lanfrank Archbishop of Canterbury.

the name of those Things out of which they are made, and to which they are like. The Berengerians objected, that if the Bread were chang'd into the Body of Jesus Christ, it was necessary for this Change, that either the Bread should be carry'd up into Heaven, or else, that the Flesh of Christ should be brought down hither; neither of which appear'd to be done. Lanfrank answers them, that this is a Mystery which we ought to believe, without inquiring into the manner of it. After Lanfrank had answer'd these two Objections, he then raises two new Arguments against Berenger. The first is, that if the Eucharist were call'd the Flesh of Jesus Christ, only because it is the Figure of it, it would from thence follow that the Sacraments of the old Law were more excellent than those of the New; because 'tis more excellent to be the Type of Things future, than to be the Figure of Things past: And moreover, that the Manna which fell down from Heaven, was a more noble Figure than a little Bit of Bread could be. The second Argument is the universal Opinion of the Church, and the Consent of all Nations. 'If, says he to 'Berenger, that which you believe and maintain be True, 'it follows that what the whole Church believes and teaches 'in all the World must needs be False: For all the Chri'stians who are in the World, are persuaded that they re'ceive in the Sacrament the real Body and the real Blood 'of Jesus Christ, ask the Latins, the Greeks, the Armeni'ans, and all the other Nations of the Christian World, 'and they will all unanimously tell you, that this is their 'Faith. If the Faith of the universal Church be false, you 'must say that there never has been a Church, or else that 'it is lost: But there is not any Catholick who dares to affirm either. After he had prov'd this Truth by several Passages of Scripture, he adds, (speaking still to Berenger) 'You and those whom you have deceiv'd, object against 'these plain Testimonies of our Lord, and of the Holy 'Ghost, concerning the Perpetuity of the Church, that in'deed the Gospel has been Preach'd to all Nations, that 'the World has believ'd that the Church is Establish'd, 'that it has increas'd and improv'd; but that it afterwards 'fell into Error by the Ignorance of those who have put 'a false Gloss upon Tradition, and that 'tis to be found 'among you alone. This is the usual Answer of Innovators, which Lanfrank refutes in a few words.

Rules of the Order of St. Benedict.

The Statutes or Rules of the Order of St. Benedict made for the Monks of England, go under Lanfrank's Name; but Father Luke Dachery observes that they are not in his Style; that he is cited as a third Person in the second Section of the second Chapter, and that there are some Rules which appear too Remiss; this makes him believe that 'tis a Collection of Rules, of which Lanfrank is not the Author, or which has been augmented by some other of a more modern Date. Let the case be how it will, it contains nothing but what relates to the Customs and Practices of Monks, therefore we shall not insist any longer upon it.

Lanfrank's Letters.

Lanfrank's Letters are short and few, but contain in them things very Remarkable.

The three first are directed to Pope Alexander II. In the first he earnestly intreats him to give him leave to lay down his Archbishoprick, which he had not taken upon him but by his Order, that he might retire into a Monastery. He likewise excuses himself for not being able to wait upon him at Rome. In the second he gives him to understand, that Herman a Bishop who had formerly quitted his Bishoprick under the Popedom of Leo IX. and embrac'd a Monastick Life, had a design to do it again, and would have done it, had not he hinder'd him. He assures the Pope that that Bishop was no longer in a Condition, by reason of his Age, to discharge his Functions, and that he is not forced to retire, but does it voluntarily to give himself wholly up to the Service of God. The English Historians tell us that this Herman was Flamand, and that he had been Bishop of Winchester under the Reign of King Edward; that he afterwards left both that Bishoprick and England, and became a Monk of St. Berthin: That he return'd some time after into England to be Bishop of Sarum, and that he liv'd to the time of William the Conqueror, which part of his Life he spent at the Bishoprick of Sarum. 'Tis about the end of his Life that he desir'd to retire the second time. Lanfrank likewise consults the Pope about the Bishop of Litchfield. This Bishop being accus'd of Incontinence, and other Crimes before the Pope's Legates in England, would not appear before the Synod which they held; they had excommunicated him, and given the King liberty to put another in his place. He afterwards came to Court, and gave his Resignation to the King. Lanfrank was not willing to ordain another in his place, till he had receiv'd Permission from Rome, he therefore desires it in this Letter. The third is about the difference then on foot between the Sees of Canterbury and York about the Primacy, and about several other Churches. The Pope had referr'd the Examination of the Matter to an Assembly of Bishops, of Abbots, and of other Prelates of the Kingdom. This Assembly was held at Winchester by the Order of the King of England, and in his presence. It was there prov'd by the Ecclesiastical History of Bede, that from the time of St. Augustine the Apostle of England, the Church of Canterbury had always enjoy'd the Right of Primacy over all England and Ireland; and that the Bishops of the Places now in Question, had been ordain'd, cited to Synods, and deposed by the Archbishop of Canterbury for above 140 Years together. This was likewise prov'd by the Acts of Councils, and confirm'd by the Decretals of Pope Gregory I. Boniface IV. Honorius, Vitalian, Sergius I. Gregory IV. and Leo IX. The Archbishop of York having nothing but weak Arguments to oppose these Authentick Testimonies, yielded the Point, and had desired the King to adjust Matters between Him and Lanfrank. Afterwards by a general Consent an Act was prepar'd touching the Privileges of the Church of Canterbury, which he sends to the Pope, and desires him to confirm. He thanks him for those Testimonies of Love which he had given him, and for granting him two Palls. He tells him at last that he sends him the Letter, which he had writ formerly to Berenger, whom he calls Schismatick.

Lanfrank Archbishop of Canterbury.

The fourth is a Letter of Pope Alexander, directed to Lanfrank, wherein he confirms the Decrees of his Predecessors made in favour of the Monks who were in the Cathedral Churches of England, in opposition to those who would dispossess them, for to put secular Clerks into their Places.

The fifth is directed to Hildebrand Archdeacon of Rome. After he had return'd him Thanks for the good Will he bore to him, he informs him that the Controversie about the Primacy of the Church of Canterbury was ended, and that he had sent the Act of it to Rome.

The sixth is Hildebrand's, who gives him to understand, that he had not obtain'd the Pall which his Legates requir'd, because they were not given at Rome, but to Persons there present.

The seventh is a Letter of William King of England and Duke of Normandy, to Pope Gregory VII. who acquainted him that his Legate was come to wait upon him, to demand of him the Oath of Fidelity, and the Mony which his Predecessors had always been us'd to remit to Rome. He answers him, that as for the Oath he would take none, because he was not allow'd to do it, and his Predecessors had never done it. As for the Mony, he says, that for these three last Years which he had spent in France, it had been Collected very carelessly, that he would send him what was already gather'd, and the remainder he would send by Lanfrank's Deputies. He desir'd to be recommended to his Prayers, and assures him that he had a sincere Affection for him, and would be always submissive to him. Lanfrank at the same time sent the Pope word, that he could not as yet prevail upon the King to take the Oath which he required, and assures him that he had still the same Affection for him as formerly. This is the eighth Letter.

The ninth is a Certificate granted to a Man of the Diocess of Seez, who stood Convicted of having kill'd three Persons who went to Mount St. Michael. The Bishop of Seez had injoyn'd him Penance, and granted him Letters directed to the Bishops, that they might absolve him, or release him from part of his Penance, when they should think it proper. This is what Lanfrank certifies to the Archbishop of York.

In the tenth, writ to the same Archbishop, he very clearly determines that it is not Lawful for a Man or a Woman who are divorc'd for Adultery, to Marry again.

The eleventh is a Letter of Thomas Archbishop of York, who wrote to Lanfrank, desiring he would send to him the Bishops of Winchester and Dorchester to assist him in Consecrating a Bishop of the Isles of the Orcades, protesting that hereby he did not pretend that these two Bishops were his Suffragans.

By the following Letter Lanfrank enjoyns them to do it.

In the thirteenth, directed to John Archbishop of Roan, he tells him his Opinion upon several Rites and Ceremonies which he wrote to him about. He maintains that in the Consecration of Churches the Bishop ought not to wear his * Chasuble but a * Chappe; and that the * Maniple ought not to be given at the Ordination of Subdeacons, because 'tis not a Habit peculiar to Ecclesiasticks, no more than the Albe and Amict, since in Monasteries the Laicks wear them.

[Several Copes and Vestments worn by the Masspriests and other Clerks of the Church of Rome.

The four next are likewise directed to the same Archbishop; in the two first he writes to him about a difference which had happen'd in the Church of St. Owen, which is related at large in a Passage of an History of the Church of Roan, mention'd by Father Luke Dachery in his Notes. The third is a Letter of Complement. In the last he excuses himself upon some complaints that had been made of him.

The four next are written in Favour of Baldwin Abbot of St. Edmond, and the Religious of that House. The last is Pope Gregory the seventh's to Lanfrank; by which he orders him to prevent Bishop Herfast from putting that Lanfrank Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Abbot to any Trouble. And this is the Subject-Matter of the former Letter which Lanfrank had wrote to that Biſhop.

The one and twentieth is a Letter to the ſame Biſhop, about a Man whom he had ordain'd Deacon, without having receiv'd any Order for it; who beſides, was a married Man, and would not turn off his Wife. He enjoins him to depoſe him from his Deaconſhip; to give him for the future only the four leſſer Orders, and not to place him among the Deacons, unleſs he would live ſingle. If he did that, then he ſhould not confer the Order of Deacon upon him again, but only grant him a Power of diſcharging his Functions, by giving him the Goſpels in a Synod or an Aſſembly of the Clergy.

The two and twentieth is likewiſe an Anſwer directed to that Biſhop, about a Man who had enter'd into Prieſt's Orders, without being fit for it. He orders, that he ſhould be enjoy'd Penance, and ſuſpended from all Eccleſiaſtical Functions, till ſuch time as he thought fit to reſtore him.

The three and twentieth is directed to Herbert Biſhop of Norwich, his Suffragan; whom he reproves for ſlighting a Letter which he ſent him in favour of Berard, a Clerk belonging to the Abbot Baldwin. He tells him of the Reſpect which is due to Metropolitans; and admoniſhes him to turn out Monk Herman, who went under a bad Name.

The four and twentieth is directed to Maurice Biſhop of London elect. He returns him this Anſwer, that he ought to injoin them Penance who had apprehended a Man, who dy'd under their Hands. That he could not ſpeak any farther of his Affair to the King. That Clerk Geofrey, charg'd with Apoſtacy, ought to be turn'd out of his Church; or bring Letters demiſſory from his Biſhop: And adviſes him to meet him the Saturday before Lætare Sunday, at Chicheſter; and that he would there give him Prieſts Orders.

The following Letters, which are very ſhort, are upon various and particular Subjects. However, there are ſeveral Things in them concerning the Diſcipline of the Church, viz. In the ſix and twentieth, that a Prieſt, who has taken upon him the Habit of a Monk, and liv'd ſometime in a Monaſtery without having receiv'd Benediction, cannot return to the World again. In the ſeven and twentieth, that Archdeacons have a Right of diſtributing the Holy Chriſm. In the two and thirtieth, that young Women who have made a religious Profeſſion, or who have been preſented at the Altar, ſhall be oblig'd to continue Religious; but that ſuch as have not made any ſuch Profeſſion, nor have been preſented, ſhall have Liberty to go out, as well as thoſe who fled for Sanctuary to Monaſteries for fear of the French. In the three and thirtieth he proves to the Biſhops of Ireland, that tho' it might be proper to give the Sacrament of the Lords Supper to Infants, yet it was not abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation. The ſix, ſeven and eight and thirtieth inform us, that the Clergy and Laity of Dublin elected their Biſhop, and ſent him to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury for Ordination: That there were ſome Irregularities in the Churches of Ireland; and that it was requiſite to call a Council there to reform them. In the nine and fortieth he ſhews, that the Apoſtate-Monks, who offer'd to return to their Monaſteries again, ought to be pardoned, and to be treated with the ſame Kindneſs as formerly. In the ſixtieth and the Laſt, he proves, that a Monk who has engag'd himſelf to conſtant Reſidence in any Monaſtery, may now and then go to another Monaſtery, when urgent Occaſion requires it. In the fiftieth he refutes Berenger, who charg'd St. Hilary Biſhop of Poitiers with being in an Error about the Sufferings of Jeſus Chriſt, in teaching, that he had not been ſenſible of any Pain. Lanfrank explains the Paſſage of that Father, and tells us he ſpoke of the Divinity of our Saviour. In the nine and fiftieth, he reproves a Lord for having ſpoke very ill Things of Pope Gregory VII. and for beſtowing large Encomiums on Guibert, whom the Emperor had caus'd to be ordain'd Pope, in oppoſition to Gregory. He ſays that we ought to believe, that the Emperor did not undertake ſuch a Thing but upon good Grounds; but that we ſhould not commend any Perſon before his Death, nor ſpeak ill of one's Neighbour; and that one cannot tell what Men are at preſent, nor how they will one Day appear to be in the Eye of God.

Lanfrank Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Theſe Letters are follow'd by a ſmall Tract, concerning the Secrecy of Confeſſion. Lanfrank doth demonſtrate, that 'tis a great Sin to reveal it, or to give any Hints whereby the Sins that have been confeſs'd may be diſcover'd. He would not have them in Confeſſion inform themſelves of the Sins of other Men, but only of thoſe who are confeſſed, nor to require them to diſcover their Accomplices. He afterwards ſays, that the Confeſſion of publick Sins ought to be made to the Prieſts, by whoſe Miniſtry the Church binds and looſes that which it takes publick Cognizance of: But that one may confeſs private Sins to all the Eccleſiaſticks, and even to Laicks; ſince we read that there have been Holy Fathers, who were the Guides of Souls, tho' they were not in Holy Orders. Theſe are Lanfrank's own Words; who perhaps by publick Sins, underſtood mortal Sins; and by private, only venial Sins: Or rather, by the Confeſſion of publick Sins, he meant a particular Confeſſion of Sins; and by that of private Sins, a general Confeſſion, without ſpecifying any particular Offence, ſuch as Laicks uſually make to one another. Altho' in Lanfrank's time it was a common Cuſtom among the Faithful, to confeſs their Sins to one another out of Humility, and eſpecially when they could not meet with any Prieſts; and 'tis to this Cuſtom Lanfrank alludes: For he adds, that if one cannot find a Perſon to whom one may confeſs one's ſelf, we ought not to deſpair upon that Account, becauſe the Fathers agree that in ſuch a Caſe 'tis ſufficient to make our Confeſſion to God. Laſtly, he ſays, that thoſe to whom Confeſſion is made, ought not to puniſh or correct publickly thoſe who confeſs themſelves, no not under the pretence of any other Fault. This Diſcourſe is obſcure and intricate, full of forc'd Allegories, and unjuſt Reaſonings; which made Father Luke Dachery at firſt to Queſtion whether it were Lanfrank's or no. However, we are not ſure that 'tis not his; and 'tis plain that its Author liv'd much about that time.

Lanfrank's Treatiſe of Confeſſion.

Other Writings of Lanfrank.

There is likewiſe a Treatiſe of Lanfrank in the fourth Tome of Father Dachery's Spicelegium; which contains, in a few Words, the principal Duties of the Religious who wait upon the Churches. It was found in an ancient Manuſcript of the Oxford Library. We have loſt his Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, which perhaps was the ſame with the Life of William the Conqueror; and a Commentary upon the Pſalms, of which mention is made in the Author of his Life.

Lanfrank's Style was neither florid nor figurative, but plain and ſimple, and ſuch as ought to appear in Dogmatical Treatiſes. His Reaſonings are pretty juſt, and his Arguments cogent. He had thoroughly ſtudied the ancient Latin Fathers, and the Canons of the Church, upon which he grounds the Doctrine which he advances, and the Judgments he makes upon the Diſcipline of the Church. There are but few who wrote at that time ſo diſtinctly and ſo exactly, or who paſſed ſuch a juſt Judgment upon Things.

Father Luke Dachery was the firſt who publiſh'd Lanfrank's Works. They were printed at Paris by Billain, in the Year, 1648. The Edition is very correct, and in a fine Character. There are likewiſe very exact and curious Notes made by Father Dachery. At the end of Lanfrank's Works he has added ſeveral other Tracts, viz. The Chronicon of the Abby of Bec; The Life of St. Herluin, firſt Abbot of Bec, wrote by Gilbert Criſpinus Abbot of Weſtminſter; and the Lives of William, Boſo, Thibold and Lotard, Abbots of that Abby; the which, as well as that of Lanfrank, which is at the beginning of his Works, were wrote by Milo Criſpinus a Monk of Bec, who liv'd in the twelfth Century: The Life of St. Auguſtin the Engliſh Apoſtle, and two Tracts upon the Euchariſt againſt Berenger; the one wrote by Hugh Biſhop of Langres, and the other by Durandus Abbot of Troarn, who lived in the ſame Century.

Hugh Biſhops of Langres.

Hugh Biſhop of Langres.

THE firſt of theſe two laſt Authors was the Son of Gildoin Count of Bretevil, near Beauvais; and and Brother to Waleran Abbot of St. Wiron of Verdun. He had been Clerk of the Church of of Chartres, and Monk of Cluny. He was made Biſhop of Langres in the Year, 1031. and was depoſ'd by Leo IX. in a Council held at Rheims in the Year, 1049. But following that Pope to Rome, and being enjoyn'd Penance, he was re-eſtabliſh'd, and dy'd in his return homeward about the Year, 1052. His Piece is only a Letter directed to Berenger, whoſe Opinion he declares in the following Terms. 'You maintain (ſays he) that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt is in the Sacrament in ſuch a manner, that the 'Eſſence and Nature of the Bread and Wine are not 'chang'd; and you make that Body you ſpeak of, which 'was Crucified, to be an Intellectual Body; which makes 'us think that you believe it to be Spiritual: And in this 'you ſcandalize the Catholick Church, and offend our 'Lord, who made it appear, that this Body which you 'ſay was Spiritual, was ſuch as might be felt. Beſides, 'if the Nature and Eſſence of the Bread and Wine do really remain after Conſecration, it cannot be ſaid that there 'is any real Change: And if the Body of Jeſus Chriſt be 'therein only figuratively and virtually, one might, upon 'the ſame Grounds ſay, that he is likewiſe in Baptiſm, and 'in the other Sacraments. He afterwards proves, by ſeveral Inſtances, that the change of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt is real and true; and that tho' one cannot conceive how it is, yet one ought to believe it. To strengthen this, he produces several Passages out of St. Ambrose and St. Augustine. He adds, That the Body of Jesus Christ is given to us under the Form of Bread and Wine, because if it appear'd to be Flesh and Blood, Men would be startled at it, and would not eat it. This Tract is obscure and full of Niceties and School-Terms.

Hugh Biſhop of Langres.

and

Hugh Bishop of Langres.

Hugh Bishop of Langres.

Durandus Abbot of Troarn.

Durandus Abbot of Troarn.

THE other Author is Durandus Abbot of Troarn in Normandy, who is not the same with the Bishop of Liege of the same Name. His Treatise is a great deal larger, and better penn'd than the former. He therein cites a great many Passages of the Fathers, against the Error of Berenger; and in the Conclusion thereof gives a particular Account of the Condemnations of Berenger at Brionne, at Paris, and at Verceil. This Author liv'd till the Year 1088. but no Body knows at what Time he wrote this Treatise.

Durandus Abbot of Troarn.

Guitmond Archbishop of Averse.

Guitmond Archbishop of Averse.

SOme Time after Berenger's Recantation in the Council of Rome, Guitmond Archbishop of Averse, formerly a Monk of the Monastery of St. Leufroy in Normandy, compos'd three Books against Berenger, in the Nature of a Dialogue; wherein Roger, to whom these Books were dedicated, is made to propose the Objections of Berenger and his Followers. After he had given a Character of the Temper and the Errors of Berenger, and mention'd his Condemnation in the Council of Verceil in his first Book, he then proceeds to tell us, That all the Berengarians hold, that the Bread and Wine are not substantially chang'd in the Sacrament of the Eucharist; but that they do not all agree in their Sentiments. For some believe, That the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ are not at all in this Sacrament, which they pretend to be only a Sign and a Figure. Others assert, That the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ are really there, but that they are conceal'd, and that we might receive them there is made a Kind of Impanation; the most subtle Opinion which they say Berenger ever found out. Others, who were not thorough-pac'd Berengarians, but only shock'd by the Arguments of that Heretick, imagin'd the Bread and Wine are chang'd in Part, and in Part remain the same. Lastly, There were others who believe, that the Bread and Wine are entirely chang'd; but that when unworthy Persons approach this Sacrament, it return'd to its first Substance of Bread and Wine. Guitmond undertakes to refute all these Opinions; and in the first Place oppugns the two former, which were properly the Berengarians's Opinions, by shewing that there was a real Change made of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ. He proves first, That it was not impossible for God to effect this Change. Secondly, That the Body of Jesus Christ might very well be touch'd, broken, bruis'd and eaten, and yet not be passible, corruptible or mortal; and that when the Host is divided into several Parts, yet the Body of Jesus Christ is not divided, but remains whole and entire, and the same under each Wafer; and such as is in a thousand distinct Places in the Hands of a thousand Priests, who say Mass in different Places, and yet this very Body is still in Heaven. That we ought not to wonder that this Change is not indeed perceptible by our Senses; but that we are not always to credit their Evidence, and that Faith is enough to persuade us of this Miracle. That 'tis indeed difficult to conceive, but easy to believe it, since nothing impossible to God, who has produced Things more wonderful. And that we see Changes altogether as surprizing, such as the Change of Nothing into this visible World, the Change of Accidents into other Accidents, the Change of Substances into other Substances, together with the Change of their Accidents: If these Changes are possible, why should the Change of one Substance into another, without the Change of the Accidents, be counted impossible?

In the second Book, Guitmond answers an Objection made by Berenger, which Roger proposes to him in these Words: 'Berenger says, The Flesh of Jesus Christ is incorruptible, 'but the Sacraments of the Altar are corruptible if they be 'kept too long.' To this Guitmond replies, That tho' the Consecrated Bread seems to be corrupted to the Apprehension of corrupted Men, yet in reality it is not chang'd at all; and that it does not appear alter'd, unless as a Punishment of the Infidelity and Negligence of Men: That it cannot be gnawn by Mice, and other Vermine; and if at any Time it appears to be so, 'tis only to punish the Negligence, or to try the Faith of Men. Nor will he admit that the Fire can consume these Mysteries; and he says, That with Veneration they commit it to this most pure Element, to be carry'd up into Heaven. Lastly he affirms, That though the Eucharist may serve for Nourishment, yet it does not turn to Excrement; and as to that Objection which might be made, That supposing a Man should eat nothing for some considerable Time but consecrated Bread, he would nevertheless have Occasion to go to Stool. He answers, That 'tis a Matter of Fact, that has never been experienc'd; and that it could never enter into the Heart of any Catholick to try such an Experiment: That if any of Berenger's Party thought fit to do it, one should not trouble one's Head much about what became of the Mass of those Infidels, which committed so great a Crime; because, says he, we do not believe, That the Bread and Wine are necessarily chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, unless among those who have the Faith to believe this Mystery, and that the Words of Jesus Christ are efficacious. That lastly, If any of them should order a Catholick Priest to consecrate one or more great Loaves to try the Experiment, it is to be believ'd that this Loaf would not be turn'd into Excrement; or rather that God would permit these Hereticks to be deceiv'd, by ordering some Angel or Spirit to convey away this consecrated Loaf, and to put an unconsecrated one in its stead. After he had thus solv'd the Objections drawn from Reason, he answers the Passages cited out of St. Augustine, and makes it appear in what Sense, and of what the Eucharist is a Sign.

Guitmond Archbishop of Averse.

In the last book he produces a great many Passages of the Fathers, upon which he grounds the Doctrine of the real Change of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, and confirms it by the Testimony of the Romish Church, and by the Condemnations brought against Berenger. To conclude, he demonstrates that 'tis much greater, and more excellent to believe that we receive the real Body of Jesus Christ, than to imagine, that we only receive the Shadow and Sign of it.

Afterwards he refutes in short their Opinion, who pretended that one Part of the Bread and Wine was chang'd, and that the other remain'd still the same: And the Opinion of those who believ'd that the Bread and Wine re-assum'd their former Nature, when unworthy Persons approach'd thereto. Both of these Opinions were grounded upon this, That they could not conceive how the Wicked could be Partakers of the Body of Jesus Christ. To solve this Difficulty, Guitmond distinguishes between two Sorts of Receiving, the one Corporeal, the other Spiritual: That the Just receive the Body of Jesus Christ both these Ways; that the Wicked receive it only in the first Sense, though they do really receive it. He adds, That if only Part of the Consecrated Bread were chang'd into the Body of Jesus Christ, upon the Account of those who were unworthy to receive it, then no Man could assuredly say, This is the Body of Jesus Christ, because no Man ought to affirm confidently that he is worthy to receive it. Wherefore it would be Rashness in the Priest to say, This is the Body of Jesus Christ, as well as in the People to answer, It is so. That besides, if a vicious Priest should consecrate an Host which he ought to receive all himself, then there would be neither Change nor Consecration; and by this Means it would be true to affirm, That the Wickedness of the Priest would disannul the Efficacy of the Words of Jesus Christ, and that the Belief of the Church which is persuaded, that the Words of our Saviour are alike efficacious in good and bad Priests, would be absolutely false. Lastly, To refute the last Opinion, he observes that 'tis contrary to sound Sense and Reason to say, That the incorruptible Body of Jesus Christ is chang'd in corruptible Creatures; and he concludes all by saying, that, since the Sacrifice of the Eucharist, is not a bare Representation of the Body of Jesus Christ, it does not contain it by an Impanation: That the Bread and Wine are not chang'd in Part only; and that being once chang'd, they cannot return again to their former Substance; and that it must be affirm'd, that all the Bread and Wine are substantially and perpetually chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ.

There is likewise another small Tract of Guitmond, which is only a plain Exposition of Faith concerning the Mysteries of the Trinity, the Incarnation, and the Eucharist: It enlarges chiefly on the former, and explains in what Sense the Son is the Wisdom, and the Holy Ghost the Love of the Father. Nor ought we to forget a Discourse belonging to the same Author, which he directs to William the First, King of England, by which he refuses a Bishoprick which that Prince had offer'd to him. These Tracts are to be met with in the Bibliotheca Patrum. Guitmond liv'd to about the Year 1080. The seventy eighth Letter of Ives of Chartres is directed to him, wherein that Author gives him the Character of a religious and learned Man. His Style is not very elegant, but pretty cogent; he argues very methodically without wandering from his Subject.

Alger Deacon of Liege and Monk of Cluny.

Alger Deacon of Liege and Monk of Cluny.

Alger did not write till long after Lanfrank, for he flouriſh'd in the twelfth Century. He was of Liege, where he ſtudied with great Succeſs, and there ſpent Part of his Life, firſt of all in the Quality of a Deacon of the Church of St. Bartholomew. From thence he was tranſlated to the Church of St. Mary and St. Lambert, where he liv'd twenty Years, till the Death of Frederick, Biſhop of Liege, after which he retir'd, and took upon him the Habit of a Monk in the Abby of Cluny. We make mention of this Author here, tho he belongs to the next Century, becauſe the principal Treatiſe which he wrote, was that whereby he refutes the Errors which Lanfrank and Guitmond have oppos'd. This Treatiſe is intitled, A Diſcourſe concerning the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, and divided into three Books. In the Preface he takes Notice of the four Errors about the Euchariſt, mention'd by Guitmond, and ſubjoyns two more to them. The one is, That the Bread and Wine are chang'd into Fleſh and Blood, but not into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt: The other, That the Euchariſt is turn'd into Excrements. He afterwards propoſes to refute theſe Errors, not by the Force of Humane Reaſon, but by the Teſtimonies of Jeſus Chriſt and the Saints. But before he does this, he advertiſes the Faithful, that tho' this Myſtery be incomprehenſible, yet it does not from thence follow that 'tis incredible, becauſe God has a Power ſufficient to do Things which we are not capable of comprehending. After this he divides his Work into two Parts: In the former he ſays, He will treat of the Reality of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt; and in the latter, concerning ſeveral Queſtions relating to that Sacrament.

In the former he proves, That the Son of God after he had taken upon him a Nature like to ours by the Incarnation, was likewiſe pleas'd viſibly to communicate thereof to us, by giving us his Body and his Blood, not only in a Figure, but likewiſe in Reality under the Sacrament of Bread and Wine. That there are two Things to be diſtinguiſh'd in the Euchariſt; the Sacrament, and the Matter of the Sacrament. That the Sacrament is the Form, the Figure, and the other Qualities of the Bread and Wine; and that the Matter of the Sacrament is the inviſible Subſtance of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, which is contain'd in that Sacrament, and into which the Subſtance of the Bread and Wine has been chang'd. That it cannot be ſaid, That Jeſus Chriſt is united to the Bread, as the Son of God is perſonally united to Man, becauſe the Subſtance of the Bread and Wine is no longer there, but chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. That tho' the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt, is ſpiritual and inviſible, yet 'tis really there; and that God has ſometimes permitted that it ſhould plainly and manifeſtly appear to be as really in the Euchariſt, as it is in Heaven, at the Right-hand of the Father. That 'tis the ſame whole and entire Body, which is diſtributed to all the Faithful under ſeveral conſecrated Wafers. That it is not ſacrific'd nor offer'd up after the ſame Manner, as it was upon the Croſs, but that this myſtical Sacrifice or Immolation is the Figure and Repreſentation of that which was offer'd upon the Croſs, tho' it be the ſame Chriſt, both upon the Croſs and the Altar. That the inviſible Body may in one Senſe be ſaid to be the Figure of the viſible Body, but that for all this, 'tis no leſs the real Body. That the Corporeal Communion is the Figure of the Spiritual Communion; but that by this Corporeal Communion, the Wicked as well as the Good, receive the Body of Jeſus Chriſt Corporeally, tho' not ſpiritually. Theſe are the principal Points which Alger eſtabliſhes upon the Teſtimonies of the Fathers in this firſt Book.

In the ſecond Part he treats of other Queſtions relating to the Sacrament, and particularly, Whether the Euchariſt be capable of any Alteration, or ſubject to the ſame Condition with other Eliments, Part of which turns to Excrements? Upon this Head he ſets upon the Grecians, who maintain'd, That by receiving the Communion, Men broke their Faſts. He owns that Men might live of Conſecrated Bread and Wine, and that there are Inſtances of it: But he denies that any Part of the Euchariſt is corrupted, or turn'd into Excrements; or if any are voided, they are produc'd by the Fleſh of the Man himſelf, or ſupply'd ſome other Way. He further maintains, That tho' the Bread and Wine ſeem to be ſubject to Alteration, as for Inſtance, to be devour'd by Animals, or conſum'd by Fire; yet this is not in Reality, but only in Appearance, to puniſh the Incredulity of the Wicked, or the Careleſneſs of Miniſters. After he had thus reſolv'd that Queſtion, he paſſes on to others that are leſs conſiderable: Namely, 1. Why God, who is inviſible, would have us to offer him a viſible Sacrifice? To this he anſwers, That 'tis to put Men in mind of what they owe him; and becauſe Man being a Compound Creature, made up of a Soul and Body, 'tis reaſonable he ſhould offer to God both Corporeal and Spiritual Sacrifices. 2. The ſecond Queſtion is, Why the Sacrifice of the Church is made up of a Sacrament and the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, and why 'tis not either a ſimple Sacrament, or the viſible Body of Jeſus Chriſt? This he reſolves by ſaying, That if the Euchariſt were a ſimple Sacrament, it would not be different from the Sacraments of the old Law; and that if the Body of Jeſus Chriſt ſhould appear therein openly, it would be ſubject to great Inconveniences. For, ſays he, it would appear either alive or dead; but it cannot appear as dead, ſince he is living; and if it appear'd alive, it would either be in the ſame State wherein it was before his Paſſion, or in the ſame State wherein it was after his Reſurrection: In the firſt Caſe, it would be impoſſible to ſwallow it; and in the ſecond, Men would not be able to endure the brightneſs of its Glory. That beſides, 'it was neceſſary that the Body of Jeſus Chriſt ſhould be conceal'd under Shadows and Repreſentations, to exerciſe the Faith of the one, and to prevent others from uttering Blaſphemies, and from Charging the Chriſtians with eating and drinking humane Fleſh and Blood. The third Queſtion is, 3. Why God requires ſo much Faith in this Sacrament? He anſwers, That Man being in a laps'd State, becauſe Adam by giving too much Credit to the Words of the Devil, had eaten of the forbidden Fruit; 'tis neceſſary we ſhould be ſav'd by believing the Word of God, who injoyns us to eat his Body, and drink his Blood in this Sacrament. 4. The fourth Queſtion is, Why we make uſe of Bread and Wine, rather than any other Creature? For this he aſſigns ſeveral Reaſons, Becauſe Bread and Wine are the ordinary Nouriſhment of Man, which ſupports the corporeal Life, as the Euchariſt is the Nouriſhment of the Soul, which ſupports the ſpiritual Life: Becauſe as the Bread and Wine are changed into Fleſh and Blood, ſo they are here changed into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt: Becauſe the Bread being made up of ſeveral Grains of Corn, and the Wine out of ſeveral Bunches of Grapes, is a Figure of the Unity of the Church which is made up of ſeveral Perſons. 5. The fifth Queſtion is, Why we do not immediately enjoy Life eternal, after having received the Body of Jeſus Chriſt? He replies, That 'tis becauſe we may have Time to exerciſe our ſelves in Virtue. 6. The ſixth Queſtion is, Why God beſtows an eternal Recompence on temporal Merits? 'Tis, ſays he, Becauſe he regards not the temporal Action, but rewards or puniſhes the eternal Propenſity and Inclination of doing Good or Evil. 7. The ſeventh Queſtion is, Why the Bread is conſecrated into the Body, and Wine into the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt? He replies, That 'tis not becauſe the Body of Jeſus Chriſt is without the Blood, or the Blood without the Body, ſince Jeſus Chriſt is whole and entire under each Kind; but that we offer and communicate under theſe two Kinds, becauſe of the different Myſteries which they figure out to us. 8. The eighth Queſtion is, Why we make uſe of White Bread rather than Brown, though at the ſame Time we conſecrate Wine of all Sorts of Colours? He anſwers, That in Caſe of Neceſſity, one may make uſe of any Sort of Bread; but that 'tis proper to uſe the Whiteſt, becauſe 'tis to be chang'd into the glorious Body of the ſpotleſs Lamb. 9. The ninth and laſt Queſtion is, Why we make uſe of Unleaven'd, rather than Leaven'd Bread, although we indifferently make uſe of Wine that has Lees as well as of that which has none? He ſays, That this is a grand Diſpute between the Latins and the Greeks, who treat one another as Hereticks, and call each other Azymites and Fermentarians, though one may ſafely uſe the One as well as the other; that notwithſtanding this, Jeſus Chriſt made uſe of Unleaven'd Bread as a Figure of Purity. He likewiſe relates the Reaſons of the Greeks; and after he had anſwer'd them, he concludes, That it was better to make uſe of Unleaven'd Bread, which he believ'd to have been the Cuſtom of the Latin Church from its Beginning.

Alger Deacon of Liege and Monk of Cluny.

In the laſt Book he diſcourſes of ſeveral other Points which relate to the Miniſters of the Euchariſt: And in the firſt Place he demands, Whether Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, which are without the Pale of the Church, do conſecrate the Body of Jeſus Chriſt; and at firſt he produces the Teſtimonies of the Fathers, which ſeem to prove, That they do not conſecrate according to due Form. But afterwards having laid it down as a Principle, That the Validity of the Sacraments doth not depend on the Faith or Piety of the Miniſter; he concludes, That as Hereticks and Schiſmaticks may baptize, ſo likewiſe can they conſecrate; and that the Ordination of Prieſthood is as much among them as Baptiſm. This he proves from ſeveral Principles and Paſſages of St Auguſtine, and replies to thoſe Paſſages which he at firſt ſtarted againſt the Sacraments of Hereticks and Schiſmaticks, which, he ſays, ought not to be underſtood of the Sacraments themſelves, but of the Abuſe which they make of them, ſince they are ſo far from being beneficial to them, that they render them the more criminal. He afterwards asks, Whether the Sacraments are valid, if any Addition dition or Alteration be made of the Words of the Office, either by the Wickedneſs or Careleſneſs of him who officiates? He explains this Queſtion as it relates to Baptiſm; and, after he had cited ſeveral Paſſages out of St. Auguſtine and the Popes, and among others out of Pope Zachary, he concludes, That provided the Eſſential Words be recited, tho' by careleſneſs it happens that needleſs Words be added thereto, or ſome Ceremony be left out, yet this does not hinder the Efficacy of the Sacrament. He does not apply this Principle to the Euchariſt, but only ſays in general, That in the Celebration of theſe Holy Myſteries we ought not to introduce any Hereſies or Novelties; but faithfully to obſerve the Inſtitution of Jeſus Chriſt, that ſo as thoſe Myſteries are truly effected by his Power, and founded upon his Authority, they may be likewiſe profitable to us by his Grace.

Alger Deacon of Liege and Monk of Cluny.

The ſame Author has compos'd a Treatiſe of Mercy and Juſtice, without affixing his Name thereto: It is divided into three Parts. In the firſt he ſhews in what Inſtances we ought to extend Mercy to Criminals, and to bear with them. In the ſecond Part he ſhews, at what Times, with what Diſcretion, and in what Manner we ought to exerciſe Juſtice upon them. In the third, he diſcourſes of the different Errors of the Heretics about the Sacraments, and ſhews wherein they differ from the Catholicks, and in what Points they diſagree among themſelves. This is what we gather from the Preface of that Treatiſe; which Preface Father Mabillon has publiſh'd in the firſt Tome of his Analects, with the Panegyrick of a Canon of Liege, who was Contemporary with Alger. This Preface is taken out of his two Manuſcripts, where the Work is compleat, but has never yet been publiſh'd. We have wholly loſt ſeveral Letters, and the Hiſtory of the Church of Liege, which he wrote whilſt he reſided in that City, of which the Author of his Elogy makes mention. Peter, ſirnam'd the Venerable, prefers Alger's Piece upon the Euchariſt, to thoſe of Lanfrank and Guitmond. It muſt be confeſs'd, That 'tis a great deal larger, and that he cites more Paſſages out of the Fathers; but his way of Reaſoning is not ſo exact nor is his Writing ſo compleat as Lanfrank's. He has obſerv'd Guitmond's Method, and done little elſe beſides amplifying and confirming his Principles and Arguments. This Treatiſe was printed at Cologne, in the Year 1535. At Louvain, together with Lanfrank's Treatiſe, in the Year 1561. and is to be met with in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Alger Deacon of Liege and Monk of Cluny.

St. Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

St. Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

THE ſame Principles which are eſtabliſh'd in the Tracts of Guitmond and Alger, are likewiſe to be met with in the two laſt Letters of St. Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury; wherein he eſtabliſhes the real Preſence, and refutes thoſe who believ'd that the Euchariſt was only a Type and Figure. He aſſerts, That the Bread and Wine are chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt; but withal owns, That it may be call'd Bread, a Sacrament, and a Figure: Bread, becauſe Jeſus Chriſt is called ſo himſelf; A Sacrament, becauſe under the viſible Appearance of Bread and Wine, the Divine Power does therein internally preſent to us the Fleſh of Jeſus Chrſt: And a Figure, becauſe we conceive and believe it to be quite another Thing than what it ſeems to be to our Sight and Taſte. That God made Choice of Bread and Wine in this Sacrament, becauſe of the Analogy which there is between our Spiritual and Corporeal Nouriſhment. That we ought not to believe that when we receive the Body, we do not receive the Blood; and that when we receive the Blood, we do not receive the Body; but that they are exhibited to us under theſe two different Kinds, thereby to denote that we ought to be conformable to the Body and Soul of Jeſus Chriſt. That Water is mix'd therewith, thereby to repreſent that Water which iſſu'd out of our Lord's Side, and which is the Figure of Baptiſm. That the Wicked do indeed receive the Subſtance, tho' not the Effects and Benefits of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt. That the outward Elements of Bread and Wine, may be broken, eaten by Mice, and go into the Stomach; but that theſe are Accidents which only happen to the Elements which are left, but not to that which is really the Euchariſt. That we ought not to ask, what becomes of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, nor how the Bread is chang'd into the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe God has wrought greater Miracles than theſe. Laſtly, That a wicked Prieſt may as well conſecrate as a good Prieſt, becauſe 'tis Jeſus Chriſt who conſecrates, and 'tis he who baptizes.

St. Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

CHAP. IV.

An Account of the Popes, and of the Church of Rome, from the Time of Silveſter II. to Gregory VII.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

GErbert, who goes under the Name of Silveſter II. had the Poſſeſſion of the Papal Chair only five Years, from the Year 999. to the Year 1003. During this Time he did not do much worth the mentioning, nor did he write ſo much as he had acted before. We have only three Letters of his, written whilſt he was Pope. The firſt is directed to Azolin Biſhop of Laon, who was accus'd by King Robert of being diſloyal to him. He had been cited before a Council held at Compiegne, where he had acknowledg'd his Fault, begg'd Pardon for it, given Hoſtages for a Security of his Allegiance, and promis'd to reſtore the Forts of Laon to the King. But afterwards he went back from his Word, would have taken the Archbiſhop of Rheims Priſoner, under a Pretence of reſtoring to him the Citadel of Laon; and kept thoſe Men Priſoners who were ſent to take Poſſeſſion thereof. The Pope upbraids him with this Perfidiouſneſs, and cites him to a Council to be held at Rome in the Eaſter-week; giving him to underſtand, That if he did not make his Appearance, he would pronounce Sentence againſt him, without admitting his Excuſe of the Dangers of Travelling, ſince there was no more Danger in the Kingdom of Lorrain than in Italy: And whereas he might perhaps alledge Sickneſs as an Excuſe, the Pope adds, That if he made uſe of that Shift, he muſt ſend ſome to teſtifie the Truth of it, and to anſwer to the Accuſations which were preferr'd againſt him.

We have already mention'd his ſecond Letter, directed to Arnulphus Archbiſhop of Rheims, by which he confirms him in that Archbiſhoprick.

The third is a Bull or Grant, which confirms and ratifies the Privileges of the Abby of Vezelai.

We may likewiſe add to theſe Letters, his Tract againſt the Simoniſts, which he made in the Beginning of his Popedom. Ademar makes mention of one Action of Silveſter, which if true, is an Inſtance of unheard-of Severity. He ſays, That Guy, the Count of Limoges, having impriſon'd Grimoald Biſhop of that City, for taking Poſſeſſion of the Monaſtery of Brageac, which that Biſhop demanded of him; and having afterwards releas'd him upon certain Conditions, this Biſhop went to Rome, and having complain'd of this Uſage to Silveſter, that Pope had cited Guy to Rome, where, his Cauſe being heard in an Aſſembly held on Eaſter-day, he had been condemn'd by the Pope and Senate to be ty'd by the Feet to wild Horſes Tails, and to be drawn and torn to Pieces: But that being committed to the Biſhop's Cuſtody, he adjuſted Matters with him, and that they both fled from Rome, and return'd good Friends to their own Country again. 'Tis very probable that all this was done by Conſent; for otherwiſe how can one excuſe the Cruelty of this Sentence ſo diſagreeable to the Spirit and Character of the Church, which breaths out nothing but Gentleneſs and Peace, and which deſires not the Death, but the Amendment of a Sinner?

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

[Here we may ſee how much Du pin, though a true Romaniſt, abhors thoſe bloody Principles upon which the Inquiſition, and other unheard of Severities of the Church of Rome are founded.]

The two Popes, who immediately ſucceeded Silveſter II. were both Johns. The firſt of theſe, who according to our Account is John XVI. and according to others John XVIII. ſirnam'd the Meager, was only four Months and ſome Days upon the Chair: The other held it almoſt ſix Years. He ſent a Legate into Germany to confirm the Privileges and Prerogatives of the Church of Magdebourgh, and to raiſe the Church of Bamberg into a Biſhoprick. This was done with the Conſent of the Archbiſhop of Mayence, and other Prelates of Germany in a Council held at Francfort, which approv'd of the Pope's Bull, which advanc'd the Church of Bamberg to be a Biſhoprick. He gave the Pall to St. Elphege Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and ſent Bruno his Miſſionary into Poland. He renew'd Communion with the Greek Church. St. Fulbert Biſhop of Chartres wrote him a Letter, wherein he beſtows great Commendations upon upon him, and prays him to be well adviſ'd before he granted Abſolution to Count Radulphus.

John XVI. and John XVII.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

Sergius IV.

Sergius IV. ſucceded John XVII. and was call'd before Os Porci. If Ditmar may be credited in the Caſe, he chang'd his Name into that of Sergius, and was the firſt who made a Law to authoriſe the changing of Names; however, there are Inſtances of this Nature more ancient, as we have already obſerv'd. Authors ſay in general a great deal in Commendation of this Pope; but they have not mention'd any one of his Actions in particular, and we have none of his Letters by us. He was not upon the Chair above two Years, eight Months, and thirteen Days, for he dy'd May 13. in the Year 1012.

Benedict VIII.

After his Death there was a Schiſm in the Church of Rome, between Benedict VIII. Son to Gregory the Count of Freſcati, who was firſt elected by his Father's Intereſt; and one Gregory, who was elected by ſome Romans, who outed Benedict. He fled to Henry King of Germany, who immediately rais'd Forces, and march'd into Italy to reeſtabliſh him. Aſſoon as the King arriv'd, Gregory fled for it, and Benedict was receiv'd without any Oppoſition. He confer'd the Imperial Crown on that Prince, and on Queen Chunegonda his Wife. Under his Pontificate the Norman Lords who had drove the Sarazens out of Sicily, drove likewiſe the Greeks out of a great many of thoſe Places which they held in Italy, being aſſiſted by the Emperor Henry, who came thither a ſecond Time at the Inſtance of the Pope. Benedict dy'd in the Year 1024. and ſome Authors ſay that after his Death, he appear'd mounted on a black Horſe, and that he ſhew'd the Place, where he had depoſited a Treaſure, that ſo it might be diſtributed to the Poor, and that by theſe Alms, and the Prayers of St. Odilo, he was deliver'd from the Torments of the other Life. We have only one Bull of his in Favour of the Abby of Cluny.

The Council of Pavia under Benedict VIII.

This Pope held a Council at Pavia, in which after he had diſcours'd at large againſt the Incontinence of the Clergy, he publiſh'd eight Decrees. The firſt and ſecond, prohibite the Clergy from having any Concubines, and from living with Women. The third and fourth import, that the Children of ſuch Clergymen as are Slaves of the Church, ſhall be Slaves to the Church for ever, tho' born of a Mother that is free. And the three laſt import, that ſuch Clergy as are Slaves to the Church, can neither purchaſe nor poſſeſs any Thing of their own, even tho' they ſhould be born of a Mother that is free. Theſe Decrees were ſign'd by the Pope, by the Archbiſhop of Milan, and by five Biſhops, and afterwards ratified by the Emperor's Authority, who at the Pope's Requeſt, publiſh'd an Edict conſiſting of the ſame Articles, to give them the Force of a Law.

John XVIII.

The Count of Freſcati, that the Popedom might be ſtill in his Family, caus'd his other Son to be elected in the Room of Benedict VIII. tho' he was not then in Orders. He was ordain'd and call'd John, which according to us is the Eighteenth of that Name, but according to others the Twentieth. 'Tis ſaid, that ſometime after this Pope being ſenſible that his Election was Vicious and Simoniacal, he withdrew into a Monaſtery there to ſuffer Penance, and that he forbore performing any Part of his Function, till ſuch Time as he was choſen again by the Clergy. The Emperor Henry dy'd at the Beginning of this Popedom, and Conrad was elected King of Germany in his Place, in the Year 1024. and crown'd Emperor three Years after by this Pope. The Greeks having diſpatch'd an Embaſſy to Rome, to get the Pope's Grant that the Church of Conſtantinople ſhould be call'd the Univerſal Church, were oppos'd by the French Prelates; and William Abbot of St. Benign of Dijon, wrote a Letter to John XVIII. to divert him from that Deſign; which Letter is mentioned by Glaber. This Pope wrote a Letter to the Biſhop of Limoges, by which he declares, that St. Martial ſhall have the Character of Apoſtle; and another Letter to Odilo Abbot of Cluny, wherein he blames him for having refus'd to accept of the Archbiſhoprick of Lyons. He ſent Letters of Abſolution to the Biſhop of Auxerre, who had ſent him his Confeſſion in Writing. Canutus King of England came to Rome in the Year 1031. where he was very kindly received by Pope John and the Emperor. He complain'd that they exacted too great Sums of his Archbiſhops for the Grant of their Palls, and it was order'd that for the future they ſhould not be ſo ſerv'd. He likewiſe obtain'd, That his Subjects might have free Acceſs to Rome, and that they ſhould be exempt from Cuſtoms. This is what the King acquaints the Peers of his Kingdom in his Letter, mention'd by William of Malmſbury.

Benedict IX.

John XVIII. dying November 7. in the Year 1033. Alberic Count of Freſcati caus'd his Son to be ſeated on St. Peter's Chair. He was Nephew to the two laſt Popes the Count's Brothers, and was not above eighteen Years of Age at the moſt. He chang'd his Name of Theophylact into that of Benedict IX. Peter Damien ſpeaks of him as a Man that liv'd very diſorderly, and was very unworthy of that Dignity to which he had been advanc'd by the Tyranny of his Father. However, he enjoy'd the Popedom very quietly for ten Years together; but at laſt the Romans, weary of his abominable Irregularities, outed him, and put up in his Place the Biſhop of St. Sabina, who took upon him the Name of Silveſter III. He enjoy'd his Dignity but three Months; for tho' Benedict voluntarily reſign'd the Popedom, yet he return'd to Rome, and with the Aſſiſtance of Freſcati's Party, drove out his Competitor, and re-aſſum'd the Papal Chair. But being altogether uncapable of governing it, and having nothing more in his thoughts than the gratifying of his brutal Appetite, he made a Bargain about the Popedom with John Gracian Archprieſt of the Church of Rome, and made it over to him for a Sum of Money, reſerving to himſelf the Revenues due from England to the Holy See. This Gracian took upon him the Name of Gregory VI. In the mean Time King Henry, who had ſucceeded his Father Conrad in the Year 1039. being incens'd againſt Benedict, who had ſent the Imperial Crown to the King of Hungary, after he had defeated that Prince, reſolv'd to march into Italy, to put an End to that Schiſm. After he came thither, he caus'd theſe three Popes to be depos'd in ſeveral Synods, as Uſurpers, Simoniſts and Criminals. Benedict fled for it; Gregory VI. was apprehended and afterwards baniſh'd; and Silveſter III. was ſent back to his Biſhoprick of St. Sabina. He caus'd Suidger Biſhop of Bamberg to be elected in their Stead, who took upon him the Name of Clement II. and was acknowledg'd as lawful Pope by all the World. He crown'd Henry Emperor; and as he was waiting upon him home to Germany, he dy'd beyond the Alps, Octob. 7. in the Year 1047. nine Months after his Election. Immediately upon this Benedict IX. returns to Rome, and a third Time remounts the Papal Chair; which he held for eight Months, notwithſtanding the Emperor had ſent from Germany, Poppo Biſhop of Breſſe, who was conſecrated Pope under the Title of Damaſus II. but he did not long enjoy that Dignity, for he dy'd of Poyſon, as 'tis ſuppos'd, at Paleſtrina, three and twenty Days after his Conſecration.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

Silveſter III.

Gregory VI.

Clement II.

Damaſus II.

It is no wonder that theſe Popes have not left us the leaſt Monument of their Paſtoral Vigilance, either in Councils or by Letters, ſince all their Care and Aim was how to gratify their Ambition and the reſt of their Paſſions, without watching over the Flock of Jeſus Chriſt. Clement II. muſt be excepted out of that Number; for though he had been Pope but a very ſhort Time, yet the firſt Thing he did after his Advancement, was to hold a Council at Rome againſt the Simoniacal, in which he endeavoured to put a Stop to the further Progreſs of Simony, which was then ſo common at Rome, that almoſt all the Eccleſiaſticks were guilty of it. He wrote likewiſe a Letter to John, Archbiſhop of Salerno Elect, by which he approves of his Tranſlation, after he had examin'd whether it had been done by Intrigue or Simony; and being ſatisfied that it was only for the Benefit and Good of the Church, and that the Clergy and Laity of Salerno had elected him freely, he granted him the Pall, confirm'd him in the Archbiſhoprick, and gave him a Power to ordain and conſecrate the Biſhops of ſeven Dioceſſes mention'd in that Letter.

Leo IX.

In the mean Time, Benedict being ſtill in Poſſeſſion of the Church of Rome, was guilty of ſtrange Exorbitances there, which oblig'd the Romans to ſend freſh Deputies to the Emperor Henry, deſiring he would grant them a Man fit to be advanc'd to St. Peter's Chair. He made choice of one Bruno Biſhop of Toul, whom he ſent to Rome with the Pontifical Purple Habit upon him. 'Tis reported, That in going through France, at Cluny he met with Hildebrand Clerk of the Church of Rome, who having been carried away with Gregory VI. ſtay'd in France after his Death, and withdrew to Cluny, where he was Prior. This Hildebrand attended Bruno to Rome, and perſuaded him to lay aſide his Purple Robes, and to leave the Romans to a free Liberty of Election; aſſuring him, That this would promote and further his Deſign. He attain'd his End, according as he had promis'd him. Bruno was very kindly receiv'd by the Romans, elected Pope unanimouſly, and ordain'd, Feb. 13. in the Year 1049. under the Name of Leo IX. Benedict was likewiſe oblig'd to ſubmit, and by Hildebrand's Perſuaſion he acknowledg'd Leo as Pope, and ingratiated himſelf to him. Leo having ſettled the Affairs of Rome and Italy, croſs'd the Mountains twice and went into Germany. The ſecond Time he went to beg the Emperor's Aſſiſtance againſt the Normans of Pozzuolo, with whom he was then at War. Having obtain'd his Deſire he return'd into Italy, and march'd againſt them. They ſurpriz'd his Forces, defeated them, and took him Priſoner. However, they us'd him very kindly; and having treated him with a great deal of Reſpect, conducted him to Benevento. He liv'd there a Year, from whence they diſmiſſed him, without exacting any Thing for his Ranſom, attended with a great Train of Coaches, which conducted him to Rome, where he dy'd within a ſhort Time after. Peter Damien very vehemently upbraids this Pope for having wag'd this War, born Arms, and appear'd in Perſon at the Head of his Forces. Benno aſſures us, That he undertook this War by the Advice and Inſtigation of Benedict and Hildebrand, and that they were the Perſons who betray'd him to the Normans. However it was, Leo IX in the reſt of his Actions, ſhew'd a great deal of Prudence and Piety; and his Letters are an eternal

Monu-

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

Leo IX.

Monument of his Learning, and of the Love he bore to Religion and Church-Diſcipline.

The firſt is directed to Leo Archbiſhop of Acride, and to the Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who had condemn'd the Cuſtom of the Latin Church about Unleavened Bread, which it made uſe of in the Holy Myſteries. He therein raiſes the Dignity of the Church of Rome, founded by St. Peter. He ſays, that 'tis this Church which has refuted, convinc'd and condemn'd all Hereſies, and which has confirm'd other Churches in the Faith of St. Peter, which has and will always remain in the Church of Rome. He reckons up Fourſcoure and ten Hereſies ſprung up in the Greek Church, among which he places the Preſumption of John the Faſter, who took upon him the Quality and Title of Univerſal Patriarch: He not only defends the Spiritual Authority of the Popes, but likewiſe their Temporal Sovereignſty, which he founds upon a ſuppoſititious Donation of the Emperor Conſtantine. He upbraids the Greeks with the Conſtantinopolitan Council under Conſtantine Copronymus, and with the Affair of Photius. He adds, that in Contempt of the Canons of the Nicene Council, they had advanc'd Eunuchs to the Patriarchal See of Conſtantinople. Afterwards, comparing the Church of Rome with that of Conſtantinople, he ſays, That the former is as ancient as Chriſtianity it ſelf, and that it has undergone all manner of Perſecutions; whereas the latter is wholly New, and ſprung up in Pleaſures: That the one is the Mother, the other the Daughter: That upon this Account the Latter ought to pay a due Reſpect to the Former, and not to be ſo ungrateful, as it is to that Church, from which it deriv'd its firſt Birth. He reproves, in particular, Leo of Acride, and the Patriarch, for having ſhut up all the Latin Churches, and taken away the Monaſteries from the Mouks and Abbots, till ſuch time as they ſhould conform themſelves to the Greek Cuſtoms. 'The Church of Rome (ſays 'he) acts with a great deal more Moderation and Pru'dence. For tho' there are ſeveral Greek Monaſteries and 'Churches both within and out of Rome, yet they have no 'Diſturbance, but are permitted to live according to the 'Cuſtom of their Anceſtors, and are not conſtrain'd to re'linquiſh their Cuſtoms: On the contrary, they are ad'moniſh'd and adviſ'd to obſerve them. To conclude, he enlarges very much on the Preſumption of the Patriarchs of Conſtantinople, and on the Dignity of the Church of Rome.

Leo's ſecond Letter is directed to the Biſhops of the Provinces of Venice and Iſtria, whom he gives to underſtand, that Dominick Patriarch of Grado or Aquileia Nova, came to a Council held at Rome in the Year, 1053. wherein he had been ordain'd: That the Town of Grado ſhould always be eſteem'd the Metropolis of Venice and Iſtria, and that the Biſhop of Foro-Julio or old Aquileia, ſhould have no Power or Juriſdiction out of Lombardy, according to the Grant of Gregory II. and the Reſtriction of Gregory III. He thereupon orders theſe Biſhops to ſubmit to the Patriarch of Grado, as to their Metropolitan.

The third is an Anſwer directed to Thomas a Biſhop in Africa, who had ask'd the Pope's Advice about the Dignity of the Church of Carthage. He at firſt lets him know how deeply he is concern'd to underſtand, by his Letter, that the Church of Africa, where there were formerly ſo many Biſhops, that in the Canons we read of two hundred and five who were preſent at a Council held at Carthage, was now reduc'd to the Goverment of only five Biſhops, and that even they could not live friendly together. Afterwards he congratulates him for having apply'd himſelf to the Church of Rome for the Reſolution of his Doubts. Laſtly, he declares to him, that the Biſhop of Carthage is Primate and Metropolitan of all Africa; and that the Biſhop about whom he wrote (whoever he were) ought not to conſecrate Biſhops, nor to depoſe them, nor to call a Provincial Council, nor to do any Thing, unleſs what concerns his own Dioceſs, without the Conſent and Permiſſion of the Archbiſhop of Carthage. He adds, by way of Advice, that they could not call a General Council, nor determine any thing about Biſhops, without the Authority of the Holy See.

The fourth Letter is directed to two other Biſhops of Africa, call'd Peter and John. After a Preamble, very much like that of the former Letter, he gave them the ſame Anſwer concerning the Archbiſhop of Carthage, and the determining of Matters relating to Biſhops; and thereto adds ſeveral Extracts out of the falſe Decretals, concerning the Inſtitution of Metropolitans.

In the fifth, he congratulates Peter Biſhop of Antioch, his Advancement to that Dignity, ſpeaks of the Prerogatives of the Church of Rome, exhorts him to maintain the third Rank among the Patriarchs, approves of the Form of Faith which he had ſent him, and makes another like it, declaring, that he wiſh'd that the Latin and Greek Churches were happily united, and it was no Fault of his that they were not.

The ſixth is directed to Michael Patriarch of Conſtantinople. He declares to him the Inclination he had for Peace, and was glad to find the Patriarch of the ſame Mind too. However, he reproves him, (1.) Becauſe he being a Novice, had all of a ſudden been made Patriarch. (2.) Becauſe he was minded to make the Patriarchs of Alexandria and Antioch ſubmit to his Juriſdiction. (3.) Becauſe he took upon him the Title of Univerſal Patriarch, which the Popes of Rome had never allow'd of, and ſays, that St. Peter was never ſtyl'd Univerſal Apoſtle, tho' he had been made the Prince of the Apoſtles; and that the Council of Calcedon had granted that Title to St. Leo and his Succeſſors. (4.) Becauſe he calumniated the Latin Church, and anathematiz'd and perſecuted all thoſe who made uſe of Unleaven'd Bread in the Euchariſt. In the cloſe of this Letter, he exhorts him to put an end to this Schiſm. This Letter bears date January, Indictio ſeptima, which is the Year 1054.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

The ſeventh is writ to the Emperor Conſtantine Monomachus, on whom he beſtows great Commendations for his being ſo deſirous of Peace and Union between the two Churches. He exhorts him to imitate the Piety of Conſtantine the Great, and the reſpect he bore to the Holy See, and to grant him his Protection. He complains to him, that Patriarch Michael had done many unjuſt things, even whilſt he pretended to be deſirous of a Peace.

The eighth is directed to all the Biſhops of Italy, and contains an Injunction which he made to put a ſtop to the Avarice of Abbots and Monks, who converted all the Pious Donations to the uſe of their own Monaſteries, without allowing any ſhare thereof to the Churches. He injoyns that all thoſe who ſhould hereafter grant ſuch Donations, ſhall leave the one Moyety of what they give to the Church where they live, and the other to the Monaſtery.

The ninth, directed to the Biſhops of France, has relation to the Council of Rheims, to which it is referr'd.

The tenth is againſt thoſe who rifle Biſhops Houſes after their Deceaſe.

In the eleventh he confirms the Right of Metropolitan to the Archbiſhop of Salerno.

In the twelfth directed to the Princes of Bretagne, he Excommunicates the Biſhops of that Province, becauſe they would not ſubmit themſelves to the Archbiſhop of Tours, and becauſe they were Guilty of Simony. However, he gave them leave to come and clear themſelves if they could at the Council of Verceil. He pronounces the ſame Sentence againſt thoſe who had ordain'd them.

One may likewiſe reckon among the Letters of Pope Leo, the Bulls which he has granted upon ſeveral Occaſions, viz. The Bull by which he grants to the Vatican Church the tenths of the Offerings: That by which he declares that the Body of St. Dennis is at Ratisbonne, and not at St. Dennis in France, where there are only the Bodies of St. Ruſticus and St. Eleutherus; (but 'tis a Queſtion whether this Bull be genuine or no): That which relates to the Biſhop of Porto: The Bulls confirming the Privileges of the Abbies of Cluny, of St. Sophia at Benevento, and of the Monaſtery of Peter Damien, to whom he wrote likewiſe a Letter, wherein he approves of one of his Works.

The Council held under Leo IX.

There is no queſtion to be made, but that this Pope made ſeveral Laws in ſeveral Councils, tho' we have not an entire one left us. Authors make mention only of a Council of Rome held in the Year 1049, wherein he confirm'd the Decree of his Predeceſſor Clement II. concerning thoſe who were Guilty of Simony. Of another Council held the ſame Year at Pavia: Of a Council held at Rheims, wherein Hugh of Langres was depos'd, the Acts of which we have by us: Of a Council held the next Year at Mayence, againſt a Biſhop charg'd with Adultery: Of another Council held the ſame Year at Rome againſt Berenger: Of another held at Siponta againſt two Simoniacal Archbiſhops: Of a third Council held at Rome after Eaſter in the Year 1051. wherein Gregory Biſhop of Verceil was depos'd for Adultery, and wherein ſeveral Laws were made againſt Simoniacal and Incontinent Clerks: Of another Council begun the Year following at Mantua, which was diſturb'd by a Sedition of the People; without making any mention of that which was held at Rome in the Year 1054. about the Conteſt which happen'd between the Archbiſhops of Grado and Aquileia. This Pope dy'd April 15. in the Year 1054. after he had preſided over the Church of Rome for five Years and ſome Months.

Victor II.

After his Death Benedict endeavoured again to ſeize upon the Papal Chair; but the Romans ſent Hildebrand to the Emperor, to deſire a Pope of him. He nominated to them Gebehard Biſhop of Eichſtat, who was Elected and Conſecrated in the Year 1055. under the Name of Victor II. 'Tis ſaid that he went with ſome diſturbance in the beginning of his Pontificate, and that a Subdeacon would have Poyſon'd him, by mixing Poyſon with the Wine in the Chalice; which was diſcover'd by a Miracle: For after it was Conſecrated, he could not lift up the Chalice, and the Subdeacon who had done this wicked Thing, was immediately poſſeſs'd by an evil Spirit. He call'd a Council at Florence, in which he depos'd ſeveral Biſhops convicted of Simony; and order'd Laws to be made to prohibit the Alienating of the Revenues of the Church. He sent Hildebrand his Legate into France, who held there several Councils; among the rest one at Lyons, in which a Bishop convicted by a Miracle, of Simony, was depos'd: And that at Tours against Berenger. In the Year 1056. Victor went to Germany, being call'd thither by the Emperor Henry III. whom he found at the Point of Death. This Prince before his Death, caus'd his Son Henry to be Elected King, who was scarce five Years old, and recommended him at his Death to the Pope and the Church of Rome. Victor did not long survive the Emperor, for being return'd into Italy, after he had held a Council at Rome, he dy'd at Florence, July 28. in the Year 1057. We have only one Letter of this Popes, by which in favour of Cardinal Humbert, he confirms and augments the Privileges granted to the Church of Blanchefelve, Stephen IX.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

After Victor's Death, Frederick Abbot of Mount Cassin was advanc'd to the Holy See. He descended from a noble Family of Lorrain, and had been Chancellor and Archdeacon of the Church of Rome. Pope Leo had sent him on an Embassy to Constantinople. At his Return he became one of the Religious of Mount Cassin under his Brother Richerus, who was Abbot of the Place; and after his Death Cardinal Humbert got him to be elected Abbot of that Monastery in the Year 1057. having constrain'd the Person, whom the Monks had elected without the Knowledge and Consent of the Holy See, to lay down that Preferment. Some time after, Victor created him Cardinal the Name of St. Chrysogone; and that Pope dying, he was elected in his place, and consecrated on St. Stephen's-day, in the Year 1057. from whence he took upon him the Name of Stephen IX. He immediately set upon reforming the Clergy of the Church of Rome, and made several Statutes against the Clerks who kept Concubines. He brought the Church of Milan to submit to that of Rome, after it had for several years withdrawn from its Jurisdiction; and sent an Embassy into the East, to re-unite the two Churches. He went to Florence in the beginning of the Year 1058. where he dy'd on the 29*th*. of March. We have one Letter of his left us, directed to the Archbishop of Rheims, by which after he had complimented him for the Submission he expres'd towards the Holy See, he inform'd him of the Council which was to be held at Rheims, that he wonder'd he had not sent him word whether the King had consented to it or no. He wrote to him about the Archbishop of Bourges, that nothing could be determin'd upon his business in the absence of Hildebrand; that he would come with him, and that they would settle this and other Affairs together. He exhorts him vigorously to defend the Interests of the Holy See and the Church; and order'd him to be at a Council which was to be held at Rome, a Fortnight after Easter. There is likewise another Letter writ by this Pope to Pandulphus Bishop of Marsi, by which he re-unites that Bishoprick, which had been divided into two.

Nicholas II.

The News of the Pope's Death being brought to Rome, the Count of Frescati and the Roman Lords plac'd by force on the Papal Chair Mincius Bishop of Velitra, to whom they gave the Name of Benedict X. Peter Damien and the other Cardinals who had no hand in this Election, withdrew from Rome after they had protested against it: And being met at Sienne, they elected for their Pope Gerard Archbishop of Florence, a Burgundian by Nation. They immediately sent Embassadors to the Empress Agnes, to prevail upon King Henry to confirm this Election. They had their request granted, and the Empress order'd Godfry Marquis of Tuscany to place Gerard in Possession of the Holy See, and to turn out Benedict. In the mean time Gerard held a Council at Sutri to depose Benedict; but he perceiving his Interest to decline, thought fit to retire to his own House, and relinquish the Chair. Gerard being inform'd of this, came to Rome with the Bishops and Cardinals, was there acknowledg'd as lawful Pope, and ordain'd in the beginning of January 1059. by the Name of Nicholas II. Within a few days after, Mincius waited upon him to ask him Pardon, and having solemnly declar'd that he had been basely us'd, and own'd himself Guilty of Perjury, for being put in Possession of the Holy See before the return of Hildebrand, contrary to the Oath which he had taken to him, he was for ever suspended from all his Ecclesiastical Functions: And to prevent such disturbances for the future, which might happen upon the Election of Popes; it was enacted in a Synod of an hundred and thirteen Bishops, held at Rome in the Year 1059. That the Cardinals should have the greatest share in the Election of a Pope, and that if any one should intrude into the Papal Chair without being Unanimously and Canonically elected by the Cardinals, and with the consent of the other Orders, both of Clergy and Laity, he should not be look'd upon as an Apostolick Pope, but as an Apostate. This is the first Act of that Council. The second imports, That at the Death of a Pope, or any other Bishop, no Body should make a seizure on their Estates, but they should be reserv'd to their Successors. The third is, That no Person shall be present at the Mass of a Priest, whom he knows keeps a Concubine. The fourth imports, That the Canons or Prebendaries shall hold all things in Common. The fifth, That the Tenths and other Offerings shall be at the disposal of the Bishop. The sixth, That no Person shall be entituled to any Church at the Presentation of Laicks. The seventh, That no Person shall take upon him the Habit of a Monk, upon the promise or hopes of being made Abbot. The eighth, That no Priest shall hold two Churches at once. The ninth, That Laicks shall not be the Judges of the Clergy. The tenth, That no Person shall be ordain'd by Simony. The eleventh, That no Person shall Marry his Relation, to the seventh Generation, or so long as the Kindred may be known. The twelfth, That a Laick who has a Wife, and keeps a Concubine shall be excommunicated. The thirteenth, That Laicks shall not be advanc'd all of the sudden to Ecclesiastical Degrees, but shall be try'd for some considerable time, after they have lay'd aside their secular Habit. These Acts are follow'd by a Decree against those who are guilty of Simony, by which it is order'd, that those who have been formerly ordain'd by Persons guilty of Simony, without having given Money for their Ordination, may continue in those Ecclesiastical Degrees to which they have been advanc'd, but that for the future, those who shall be ordain'd by Persons whom they know to be guilty of Simony, shall be depos'd. With reference to Popes 'tis added, that those who shall take Possession of the Papal Chair, either by Bribery, or by Intrigue, or by Force, without being Unanimously and Canonically Elected by the Cardinal-bishops, and the rest of the Clergy, shall be look'd upon not as Apostolick Popes, but as Apostates: And that it shall be lawful for the Cardinal-bishops, and any other Persons of known Piety, whether Clerks or Laicks, to turn out such an one, who shall thus seize upon the Holy See, by excommunicating him, and by calling into their Assistance the secular Power. And that if they cannot do this in Rome, they shall meet together out of that City, in what place they please, to Choose one whom they shall judge more worthy to fill the Chair: And that the Person whom they shall Choose, shall be look'd upon as Lawful Pope; Salvo omnino Imperatoris Privilegio, as 'tis worded in that very Decree concerning the Election of a Pope. It was in this Council that Berenger retracted his Error, as we have said before.

The Council held under Nicholas II. in the Year 1059

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

The other Councils under Nicholas II.

This same Pope being reconcil'd to the Normans of Pozzuolo, held a Council at Amalfi, where he depos'd the Bishop of Trani; and another Council at Benevento, wherein he adjusted a difference concerning an Hospital depending upon the Monastery of St. Vincent of Volaterra, upon which one Albert a Monk had seiz'd.

The Letters of Nicholas II.

The Letters of this Pope do almost all of them relate to the Affairs of France,

The four first are directed to Gervais Archbishop of Rheims. In the first he gives that Bishop to understand, that there was a flying Report of his being a favourer of his Adversary: That however, he was willing to believe the contrary upon the Testimony which he had receiv'd of him by a very creditable Person. He exhorts him to maintain the Rights of the Church, and to admonish the King of France not to hearken to the evil Counsels which were given him, nor to oppose the Holy See, particulary with relation to the Person whom he would have to be ordain'd Bishop of Macon. He assures him that he has a particular Respect and Kindness for that Prince; and let him do as he pleas'd, yet he would always Pray for Him and his Army. In the second, He enjoyns that Archbishop to interdict the Bishops of Beauvais and Senlis, in case it appear'd that they had been ordain'd by Simony, as he was assur'd. In the third, He orders that Archbishop to give Satisfaction to the Church of Verdun for the Injuries he had done it, and to release the Prebendaries whom he had caus'd to be apprehended. In the fourth, He lets him know how well satisfied he was with those signs of Submission which he had expres'd to him; that he granted him what he desir'd for the Bishop of Senlis, because it was nothing but what was reasonable; and that he could not tell whether he should come to France or no.

The Letters of Gervais A.B. of Rheims to Pope Nicholas II.

We have likewise a Letter of Gervais, directed to this Pope, in which he thanks him for the kind Entertainment he gave to his Deputies, and for the Charity he shew'd to one of them who dy'd at Rome. He acquaints him of the Death of King Henry, tells him how earnestly he wish'd to see him in France; and assures him in very expres Terms of the Submission and Respect which he bore to the Holy See. This doubtless is the Letter which Nicholas answer'd by the foregoing.

The fifth Letter of this Pope is a Privilege, granted to the Monastery of the Religious of St. Felicity near Florence.

The sixth, directed to Edward King of England, is a confirmation of the Privileges granted to the Church of Westminster.

The

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

The seventh, directed to Ann Queen of France, is a Tract of Peter Damien's, which was among his Letters.

The eighth is directed to the Bishops of France, Aquitain, and Gascogne. He informs them of the Decrees made in the Council of Rome, against the Clerks and Monks who kept Concubines, or were Apostates; against those who abuse Ecclesiasticks, or seize upon the Revenues of the Church; and concerning the Compass of the Courts and Church-Yards.

In the ninth, directed to the Count of Rouergue, he exhorts him to take the Churches and Poor under his Protection; and in particular, to restore to the Monastery of St. Peter of Verdun, the Lands and Revenues which he had in his Country, threatning to Excommunicate him, if he detain'd them any longer. This Pope dy'd at Florence, July 3. in the Year 1061.

Alexander II.

After his Death there were great Contests about the Popedom, occasion'd by the two powerful Factions which were then in Rome: Namely, the Faction of Hildebrand, and that of the Counts of Frescati and Galera, and of other Lords of Rome. Both Factions sent Deputies to King Henry's Court, to obtain his Vote in favour of some one of their own Party. Gerard Count of Galera deputed by the Lord's Faction, having presented King Henry with a Crown of Gold, and offer'd him the Title of a Roman Peer, insinuated so far into his favour, that Stephen a Cardinal-Priest deputed by Hildebrand and the other Cardinals, could not so much as get Audience, but return'd without doing any thing. After his return the Cardinals in October, Elected for their Pope one Anselm a Native of Milan, and Bishop of Lucca, who took upon him the Name of Alexander II. They believ'd he would prove agreeable enough to the Court. But King Henry looking upon this Election as a breach of his Prerogative, caus'd Cadalous Bishop of Parma to be Elected Pope, who was acknowledg'd as such by the Bishops and Princes on the other side the Alps. He intending to take Possession of the Papal Chair by Force, sat down with an Army before Rome; but was beaten off by Forces of Godfrey Marquis of Tuscany, and of Matilda his Wife, who had enter'd into the Interest of Alexander. This first attempt proving very unsuccessful, he return'd a second time with greater strength, and became Master of the Town Leonina, and of the Church of St. Peter; but he was outed thence also, and his Forces put into such a Consternation, that he himself had like to have been taken, and was forced to throw himself into a Castle, from whence he very narrowly made his Escape, by giving Mony to those who Besieg'd him. Sometime after Anno Archbishop of Cologne, who had the greatest hand in the Administration of the Affairs of Germany, ever since the Empress Agnes was remov'd, being come into Italy, and alledging that the Election of Pope Alexander was invalid, because it was carry'd on without the Emperor's Approbation, and because he lay under a Suspicion of having given Mony for to be Elected: It was agreed upon to call a Council at Mantua, to adjust this difference. Alexander and Cadalous met there, with Peter Damien, Hildebrand, and several other Bishops of Italy, Lombardy and Spain. Alexander did there very stiffly defend his Election; Cadalous had not the face to maintain his pretended Right, and so withdrew. The former likewise clear'd himself by Oath of the Accusation of Simony, which was lay'd to his Charge; so that Anno and the Bishops of Lombardy acknowledg'd him alone to be Lawful Pope. But the Emperor's Prerogative was preserv'd for the future, and Alexander was oblig'd to Pardon Cadalous, and to make Guitbert Grand Signior of Parma, Chancellor to King Henry, and formerly the Popes greatest Enemy, Archbishop of Ravenna. This Council was held in the Year 1064. and put an end to a Schism which would have been the Cause of very great disturbances in the Church of Rome, if it had continued as it had begun.

The Council under Alexander II.

The Year before, Alexander had held a Council at Rome, consisting of above one hundred Bishops, wherein he had reviv'd the Decrees of his Predecessors, Leo IX. and Nicholas II. against those who were guilty of Simony, against those who kept Concubines, against such of the Laity who seiz'd on the Revenues of the Church, against those who Marry'd their Kindred till after the seventh Degree, and against the Apostate Clergy and Monks. This is only a renewal of the Council held under Nicholas II.

In two other Councils held at Rome the Year following, Alexander Condemn'd those who maintain'd, that the Degrees of Consanguinity ought to reach no farther than to Cousin-Germans, which he calls the Heresy of Nicolaitans. He likewise Condemn'd those who had maintain'd, that one may without being guilty of Simony, give Mony to Princes to be instituted into the Revenues of the Church. He makes use of Peter Damien to confute these Errors; and sent him to Milan to reform the Clergy of that City; into France, to relieve the Monks of Cluny; and to Florence, to put an end to the Schism of the Church, belonging to that City.

Whilst Peter Damien was employ'd in Reforming the Church, Hildebrand Archdeacon of Rome, who had the sole Administration of Affairs relating to the Holy See, made use of his utmost Endeavours to advance the temporal Power thereof. With the Assistance of Godfry Marquis of Tuscany, and the Princess Matilda, he repuls'd the Normans of Pozzuolo and oblig'd them to surrender several Places. He engag'd several Lords of Burgundy and France to bind themselves by Oath to defend the Church of Rome. He exhorted William Duke of Normandy to take upon him the Kingdom of England, vacant by the Death of King Edward. Lastly, From the Pontificate of Alexander he began the Contest with King Henry about the Right of Investitures, and caus'd him to be cited to Rome upon that Subject. We attribute all this to Hildebrand, because 'tis evident that it was he who Govern'd under the Name of Alexander II. who led a reserv'd and a retir'd Life, and spent more of his time at Lucca and Mount Cassin than at Rome. However he dy'd in that City, April 22. in the Year 1073.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

Since this Pope was eleven Years and some Months on the Chair, we may very well expect a great many Letters written in his Name. We have five and forty of them compleat, and the Fragments of several Acts related by Ives of Chartres and by Gratian.

The Letters of Alexander II.

His first Letter is directed to the Clergy and Laity of Milan, whom he exhorts to lead a Christian Life.

The second is directed to Harold King of Norway, whom he exhorts to own the Archbishop of Breme as Vicar of the Holy See, and to submit to him as such. He reproves him for that the Bishops of his Kingdom, were either not Consecrated, or else had given Mony to be Consecrated.

By the third, directed to the King of Denmark, he demands of that Prince the payment of what was due from that Kingdom to the Holy See.

By the fourth, directed to the Archbishop of Dalmatia and Sclavonia, he sends him the Pall, and gives him some Instructions concerning his Office.

The fifth is the Decree of the Council of Rome, of which we have already spoken.

In the sixth, directed to Gervais Archbishop of Rheims, he writes to him against Cadalous, congratulates him of the endeavours he us'd for the extirpation of Simony; and intrusts him and the Archbishop of Sens with the Tryal of the Bishop of Orleans, who was Charg'd with Simony, and orders him to turn out the Abbot of St. Medard of Soissons, excommunicated long before, and to Elect another in his Place.

This Letter is follow'd by a Decree made at Milan by two Cardinal Legates of the Holy See, against the Clergy who were either guilty of Simony, or kept Concubines.

The seventh Letter is directed to the Bishops of Denmark, whom he injoyns to be present at the Synod held by the Bishop of Hamburgh.

In the eighth, he exhorts William King of England to pay him the Peter-pence which were due to him.

In the ninth, he grants to Anno Archbishop of Cologne, a Privilege which he had beg'd of him in the behalf of a Monastery.

The tenth is directed to William King of England: He exhorts him to take into his Protection the Ecclesiasticks of his Kingdom; and advises him to follow Lanfrank's Directions, to whom he committed the Determination of the Bishop of Chester's Cause, and of the Dispute on foot between the Archbishop of York, and the Bishop of Dorchester.

In the eleventh, directed to Landulphus, he determines that the Man who had vow'd to take upon him the Monastick Life and had forc'd his Wife to consent to it, ought not to be made a Monk, till she should give her voluntary Consent thereto.

The twelfth is directed to Gervais Archbishop of Rheims: He assures him that he was deeply concern'd for what had befaln him, and invites him to come to a Synod held at Rome.

In the thirteenth, directed to the same Archbishop, he admonishes him to put an End to the Difference on foot between Him and two Clerks of his own Church, and that in the presence of the Legates of the Holy See, and of the Bishop of Laon, whom he had Commission'd for that purpose: And he lets him know that he has written to the Lords who molested him, either to do him Justice in the presence of his Legates, or else to appear before his Synod.

In the fourteenth, he admonishes him again to put an end to the Affair of those two Clerks, about whom he had already written.

In the fifteenth, he enjoyns him to Excommunicate those who had unlawfully seiz'd upon the Revenues belonging to a Monastery.

In the sixteenth, he gives the same Archbishop to understand how deeply he was concern'd for the Afflictions which the Church of Rheims labour'd under, and promises to send him a Legate to his Assistance.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

In the ſeventeenth, he exhorts him to aſſiſt the Biſhop of Laon, in doing Juſtice to an Abbeſs, who was turn'd out of her Monaſtery of St. John of Laon.

In the eighteenth, he forbids him to Ordain Joſſelin Biſhop of Soiſſons, who was manifeſtly guilty of Simony; and orders him to puniſh the Biſhop of Beauvais for the outrages he had committed, and to oblige the Biſhop of Amiens, to let the Abbot of Corby live in quiet.

In the nineteenth, he informs him, that he had confirm'd the Privilege of the Abby of Corby, and adjuſted the difference which was between the Abbot, and the Biſhop of Amiens, who had given him Satisfaction in the Synod. He refers to him the other Conteſts which might be between them, and orders him to give the Holy Chriſm and other Rites to the Monaſtery of Corby, if that Biſhop refus'd to give it them.

In the twentieth, he lets him know, that he has confirm'd the Privileges of the Abby of St. Dennis of France, and put an End to the Difference between the Abbot and the Biſhop of Paris, after he had heard both Parties at Rome.

The one and twentieth directed to the Archbiſhops of France, is the Letter of Legation which he grants to Peter Damien, when he ſent him into France.

In the two and twentieth directed to Gervais Archbiſhop of Rheims, he confirms the Excommunication made by that Archbiſhop and by Peter Damien againſt the Abbot of St. Medard, and orders him to turn him out.

In the three and twentieth, he thanks that Archbiſhop and the King of France, for having turn'd out the Archbiſhop of Chartres, who was convicted of Simony; and he deſires that they would do the ſame with reſpect to the Biſhop of Orleans.

In the four and twentieth, he refers the Tryal of the Divorce between Count Radulphus and his Wife, to the Archbiſhop of Rheims and of Sens, and to their Suffragans.

In the five and twentieth, he orders the Archbiſhop of Rheims to cauſe the Biſhop of Chalons to reſtore to the Church of St. Memie the Body of that Saint, which he had by force taken away.

In the ſix and twentieth, directed to the Archbiſhop of Treves, and the Biſhop of Verdun, he orders, that a Prieſt who in his Sickneſs had vow'd to turn Monk, and was of another mind after his Recovery, ſhould be reſtor'd to the Benefices which he held before.

In the ſeven and twentieth written to the Clergy of Naples, he determines that the Degrees of Kindred ought to be reckon'd according to the Number of the Generations.

In the eight and twentieth, that he who Marries a Relation of his Concubine, who is promis'd in Marriage to another, ought to reſtore her to him.

In the nine and twentieth, he injoyns a Prieſt, who had kill'd another Prieſt, four years Penance, and ſuſpends him for ever.

In the thirtieth, he impoſes ten years Penance on a Laick who had kill'd a Prieſt, tho' the Prieſt had been the firſt Aggreſſor.

In the one and thirtieth, he moderates the Penance impos'd by the Biſhop of Conſtance upon an Abbot, who had given his Servant a blow with a Stick, of which he dy'd within ſix Months after.

Of the Popes and Church of Rome.

In the two and thirtieth, he determines, that a Man who was ordain'd Deacon and Prieſt, without having been made Subdeacon, ſhall forbear performing his Miniſterial Functions, till ſuch time as he had been ordain'd Subdeacon.

In the three and thirtieth, he moderates the Penance impos'd on a Man who had been the occaſion of Homicide, tho' he had not been an Inſtrument thereof.

In the four and thirtieth, directed to the Biſhops of Spain, he declares that they ought not to put the Jews to death for their Religion.

In the five and thirtieth, he orders the Clergy and Laity of Lucca, not to ſell the Offices belonging to the Church.

In the ſix and thirtieth, he adjudges that a Prieſt, who is ſubject to the Falling Sickneſs, ought to abſtain from Celebrating Maſs.

By the ſeven and thirtieth, he declares that he had impos'd ſeven years Penance on a Man who had kill'd his own Son involuntarily.

In the eight and thirtieth, he explains the manner of reckoning the Degrees of Conſanguinity.

In the nine and thirtieth, which is among Lanfranc's Letters, he confirms the Privilege of the Engliſh Monks, to officiate in Cathedral Churches.

The fortieth is the Privilege granted to the Abby of Vendom.

The one and fortieth is the Privilege granted to the Monaſtery of Peter Damien.

In the two and fortieth, he enjoyns the Biſhop of Amiens to forbear diſturbing the Monks of Corby; otherwiſe he would Suſpend and Excommunicate him, till ſuch time as he ſhould give them ſatisfaction in the preſence of the Archbiſhop of Rheims.

The three and fortieth, directed to the Monks of Cluny, is a Privilege which he grants to them, that they ſhould not be excommunicated or interdicted, but by the Sentence of the Holy See.

By the four and fortieth, he permits Gebehard Archbiſhop of Salzbourgh, to erect a Biſhoprick in his Dioceſs.

By the five and fortieth, he confirms the Eſtabliſhment made by the Biſhop of Paſſaw, that the Regular Canons ſhould hold all things in Common.

The greateſt part of the Fragments of his other Letters, are his Judgments preſent'd againſt the Clerks who were guilty of Simony and Fornication; or elſe his Determinations upon ſeveral Points of Diſcipline, particularly concerning the Degrees of Conſanguinity. We likewiſe gather from them, that an excommunicated Perſon cannot excommunicate another: That a Prieſt ought to Celebrate but one Maſs a day; tho' ſome ſay one for the day, and another for a deceaſed Perſon, when 'tis neceſſary: That thoſe who offer any Violence to Biſhops, ſhall be excommunicated; and that thoſe who offer any to Prieſts, or to any other Clergymen, ſhall be injoyn'd Penance.

CHAP. V.

An Account of the Church of Rome under Gregory VII. of the Differences between this Pope, and the Emperor Henry, and other Princes of Europe; With an Abſtract of his Letters.

Of the Church of Rome under Gregory VII.

THere happen'd no diſturbance among the People upon the Death of Pope Alexander: For Hildebrand who had the whole Power in his own Hands, gave ſuch good Orders, that all was ſtill and quiet. He order'd a Faſt to be kept, and Prayers to be made for three Days together, before they conſulted about the Election of another Pope. But at the very time of Interring the Corps of the deceaſed in the Church of St. Saviour, April 22. in the Year, 1073. being the very Day of his Death; the People being mov'd thereto, proclaim'd Hildebrand Pope, and put him into the Poſſeſſion of the Holy See. The ſame Day he acquainted the Prince of Salerno of his Election, and pray'd him to come to Rome to defend him. This is what he ſays himſelf about the manner of his Election: But he withal declares that it was much againſt his Will, and that he was very Angry at it. His Adverſaries tell us quite another Story, and ſay, that they were his Soldiers and other of his Creatures, who made this tumultuary Proclamation: That neither the Cardinals, nor the Clergy, nor the moſt conſiderable among the People had any Hand in it. However, there is an Act of Election in the Name of the Cardinals and the Clergy of Rome, made in the preſence of the Biſhops and Laity, which bears date the very Day of his Election. However the Caſe was, it muſt be own'd that this Election was very Precipitate; and that Didier Abbot of Mount Caſſin and Cardinal, had a great deal of reaſon for the Reply he made to Hildebrand, who check'd him for coming too late, when he told him, that it was himſelf who was too haſty, ſince he took poſſeſſion of the Holy See, before the Pope his Predeceſſor was lay'd in his Grave: And Hildebrand himſelf has acknowledg'd the Fault of this Election, which he caſts upon the People, and maintains that he had no Hand in it. He was of Tuſcany, of the Borough of Soana, the Son of a mean Artificer, if moſt Hiſtorians may be credited. He ſpent the firſt Years of his Life in Rome, where he had for his Maſter, Laurence Archbiſhop of Melphi, and was extreamly in the favour of Benedict IX. and Gregory VI. He attended the latter in his Baniſhment to Germany, and after his Death retir'd into the Abby of Cluny, where he abode till ſuch time as Bruno Biſhop of Toul, who was nominated for Pope by the Emperor Henry, going through France took him along with him to Rome, not queſtioning but by the Acquaintance and Intereſt which he had in that City, he might be very ſerviceable to him. He was no ſooner return'd but he renew'd his Familiarity with Theophylact or Benedict IX. and grew within a while ſo Rich and Powerful, that he became Lord and Maſter of all Affairs, and the Popes were in a manner his Dependents. It was he who negotiated the Election of Victor II. between the Emperor and the Romans; and under Victor's Pontificate he was sent Legate into France. He turn'd out Benedict IX. and caus'd Nicholas II. to be elected in his Stead, who made him Archdeacon. In a Word it was by his Means that Cadalous was turned out, and Anselm Bishop of Lucca ordain'd Pope under the Name of Alexander II. It was he who supported that Pope's Interest, and having taken upon him the Character of Chancellor of the Holy See, had the absolute Administration of all Affairs both Ecclesiastical and Civil, as well as the entire disposal of the Revenues of the Church of Rome during his Popedom.

Of the Church of Rome under Gregory VII.

Gregroy VII.

Hildebrand foreseeing that his Election might be molested, because it had been carry'd on so precipitately, and without the Consent of Henry King of Germany; he forthwith wrote to him about it, and requested by his Deputies, that he would be pleas'd to confirm it, assuring him that he had been elected against his Will, and that he put off his Ordination till such Time as he was inform'd of his Will and Pleasure. King Henry took some Time to consider on it, and sent Count Eberhard to Rome, to learn after what Manner that Election had been carry'd on. Hildebrand shew'd so many Civilities to this Count, that he wrote to the King in his Behalf: And Henry perceiving that it signified nothing to oppose his Election, because he was more powerful in Rome than himself, gave his Consent to it. By this Means Hildebrand was ordain'd Priest, and afterwards Bishop of Rome, in June, Anno Dom. 1073. At his Ordination he took upon him the Name of Gregory VII. in Honour to the Memory of John Gratian his old Patron who had assum'd the Name of Gregory VI. when he was seated upon the Papal Chair.

No sooner was this Man made Pope, but he form'd a Design of becoming Lord Spiritual and Temporal over the whole Earth; the supreme Judge and Determiner of all Affairs both Ecclesiastical and Civil; the Distributer of all Manner of Graces of what Kind soever; the Disposer not only of Archbishopricks, Bishopricks, and other Ecclesiastical Benefices; but also of Kingdoms, States, and the Revenues of particular Persons. To bring about this Resolution, he made use of the Ecclesiastical Authority, and the Spiritual Sword which God had put into his Hand, not only to maintain the Faith and Discipline of the Church, to reform Abuses, and to punish those who were guilty of Spiritual Offences; but he likewise made use of it to deprive Kings of their Kingdoms, Princes and Lords of their Estates and Revenues; to render them his Tributaries, to dispose at his Pleasure all that belong'd to them, and to force them to do whatsoever he desir'd; to engage Archbishops and Bishops to pay him a blind Obedience, and to do nothing in their own Dioceses without his Order. He liv'd in Times very lucky for him, and very proper to establish his Pretensions; the Empire of Germany was weak; France govern'd by an Infant King, who did not much mind the Affairs of State; England newly conquer'd by the Normans; Spain in Part under the Government of the Moors; the Kingdoms of the North newly converted; Italy in the Hands of a great many petty Princes; all Europe divided by several Factions, so that it was ealy for him in such a Juncture to establish his Authority. But this Undertaking created a World of Business to him, and engag'd him in Contests with a great many European Princes. The most considerable was that which he had with Henry King of Germany, which lasted all his Popedom, and was of a very pernicious Consequence, both to the Church and the Empire: The Account of which is as follows.

An Account of the Difference between Henry and Gregory VII.

Henry, the Fourth King of the Germans of that Name, since Henry the Falconer, succeeded (as we hinted before) his Father Henry, in the Year 1056. being then about five Years old. His Father at his Death recommended him to Pope Victor II. and threw him under the Protection of the Holy See. He was at first under the Government and Tuition of the Empress Agnes his Mother, who had the Administration of the Empire in her Hands. But the Princes and Grandees of Germany, being weary of the Government of this Woman, took Henry away from her, and committed the Charge of his Royal Person to Anno Archbishop of Cologne, who had likewise the greatest Share in the Government. These Lords, to retain their Authority the longer, left Henry to his Liberty of doing what he pleas'd, and to live in the Debaucheries common to Youth; and in the mean Time govern'd absolutely under his Name, and dispos'd as they saw fit of the Offices, Revennes, and Affairs of the Empire. Henry was in this Kind of Dependency upon them, till he came to be eighteen or twenty Years old: At which Time he began to take Cognisance of the Affairs of his Estate, and to govern them himself: It was then that he began to be sensible that a great many Things had been done contrary to Justice, and that the Grandees abusing the Confidence which he had repos'd in them, were advanc'd by indirect Means, and regarded more their own private Interests, than those of the State: It was then, he revok'd Part of what they had caus'd to have been done, prohibited the Exactions and Outrages which they had been guilty of, re-establish'd the Course of Justice and the Force of the Laws, and punish'd the Offenders. The Measures which he took, made several of his Lords to become Malecontents; for they being us'd to do what they pleas'd themselves, without fearing to be check'd for it, could not be easie under this new Yoke. Thereupon they conceiv'd an Aversion to King Henry, which they continued for ever after, and they took up a Resolution either to Kill him, or to Out him of the Empire. The Saxons were the first who openly rebell'd against him; they set upon him with such an Advantage, and with so great Numbers, that he was forc'd to fly for it. He return'd with an Army, and the Saxons were twice defeated, but still kept to their Resolution. They enter'd into a Confederacy with several Lords of Lombardy, France, Bavaria and Suabia; and finding themselves not strong enough to make open War against him, they charg'd him with several Crimes before Pope Gregory, and intreated that Pope to turn him out of his Throne, and to put up another King in his Place, whose Conduct and Wisdom should be answerable to his Dignity.

Gregory VII.

Gregory VII. had formerly begun under the Popedom of Alexander II. to form a Process against King Henry, and had caus'd him to be cited to Rome upon the Account of Simony, and other Crimes laid to his Charge. But after Alexander's Death, he thought it would redound to his Interest to manage him, that he might be the more inclinable to confirm his Election. Some Authors say, That he secretly threaten'd that Prince to prosecute him, in case he would not approve of his Election; but this Matter of Fact is not prov'd by any authentick Testimony. What is more certain, is, That before his Ordination, Gregory sent Word to Beatrice and Matilda, That he had a Design of sending some pious Persons to King Henry, to give him some wholsome Advice about his Conduct, and to persuade him to return to that Obedience which he ow'd to the Church of Rome. At the same Time he advises these Princesses not to communicate with the Bishops of Lombardy, who were either guilty of Simony, or favour'd those who were so. This Letter of Gregory, which is the eleventh of his first Book, bears Date May 25. 1073.

The Persons guilty of Simony, of whom he speaks in this Letter, are the Bishops of Lombardy, and particularly Godfrey Archbishop of Milan, who was (as Gregory says) advanc'd to that Dignity by Simony; and even whilst Guy Archbishop of that City was living. He and his Adherents had been excommunicated for this by the Pope in a Council of Rome, but this Excommunication had no other Effect upon him than to incense him; and entring into a League with all the Bishops of Lombardy, they conspir'd together against the Holy See. Gregory VII. being advanc'd to the Papal Chair, had nothing more in his Thoughts, than to bring them to submit, and to cause the Excommunication issued out against them to be put in Execution; as appears by the Letter which he sent on that Subject to all the Faithful of Lombardy, bearing Date July 1. 1073. which is the fifteenth of the first Book. King Henry on the other Hand protected the Archbishop of Milan, and the Bishops of Lombardy, and continued in Communion with them; and this gave the first Rise to the Contest betwixt him and Pope Gregory.

The first of September, in the same Year, the Pope advis'd Anselm, Bishop of Lucca Elect, not to receive the Investiture of his Bishoprick from King Henry, till such Time as he had given Satisfaction for his holding Communion with excommunicated Persons, and till he was reconcil'd to the Holy See, which he hop'd would be effected by the Mediation of the Empress Agnes; of Beatrice and Matilda Countesses of Tuscany; and by Rodulphus Duke of Suabia, who had undertaken the Accommodation. The same Day Gregory wrote to that Duke, telling him, That he had no particular Ill-will to King Henry; but on the contrary, wish'd him well, as he was oblig'd to do, because he had acknowledg'd him for King; because he had receiv'd several signal Favours from his Father Henry; and because that Prince upon his Death, had recommended him to Pope Victor II. But forasmuch as this Concord between the Empire and the Church, ought to be pure and sincere, it was requisite in the first Place that he should manage the Affair with him, with the Empress Agnes, with the Countess Beatrice, and with Reginald Bishop of Canne; that for this Purpose he desir'd a Conference with him, and pray'd him to come to Rome. He wrote likewise at the same Time to this Bishop of Canne, telling him, That he wish'd with all his Heart, that the King were Master of all that Religion and Piety which he ought to be Master of; and that he were in Union and Amity with the Holy See; and to bring this about, he pray'd him to be ready to come to Rome with the Empress, Rodulphus, and the Countess Beatrice, that so all Things might be adjusted: That he might hold Conferences with the Bishops of Lombardy, but that he ought not to communicate with them. These three Letters are the nineteenth, twentieth, and the one and twentieth of the first Book. In the four and twentieth written to Bruno Bishop of Verona, bearing Date Sept. the 24th. he declares, that he retains the same Love and Tenderness for King Henry as ever he did. This Prince replies to the Pope's Civilities in a very ſubmiſſive Letter, wherein he declares, That for as much as it was requiſite that the Empire and the Papacy ſhould be mutually aſſiſting to each other, it were to be wiſh'd that they were united together: That he own'd he had not as yet paid all that Reſpect to the Papacy which he ought, nor puniſh'd the Guilty with ſufficient Severity: That he confeſs'd his Fault, in order to obtain Pardon for it: That he acknowledg'd, that the Levity of his Youth, or his being jealous of his Authority, or laſtly, his being led by evil Councellors, was the Cauſe of his ſinning againſt Heaven and the Pope, not only by unlawful ſeizing upon the Revenues of the Church, but alſo by communicating with unworthy Perſons, and ſuch as were guilty of Simony, and by ſelling of Churches, inſtead of protecting them as he ought: That he deſired he would for the future aſſiſt him with his Authority; and that he implor'd his Aid and his Advice for the Reformation of the Churches, and particularly that of Milan; aſſuring him that he would aſſiſt him as far as poſſible, and hop'd he was of the ſame Mind with reſpect to him. The Pope ſeem'd ſatisfied with this Letter, as he declares in the five and twentieth Letter of the firſt Book, directed to Herlembold, whom he had made Archbiſhop of Milan after the Excommunication of Godfrey, wherein he does not ſtick to tell him, That King Henry had ſent him ſuch a ſubmiſſive Letter, as was never in his Memory ſent by that Prince, or any of his Predeceſſors to the Popes of Rome. This Letter bears Date Sept. the 28*th.* ſo that King Henry's Letter, which is not related till after the nine and twentieth of Gregory, is written ſome time before. The ſix and twentieth Letter bearing Date Octob. the 9*th.* is likewiſe directed to Herlembold, whom he adviſes to uſe his utmoſt endeavours to reclaim the Biſhops of Lombardy, and among the reſt, the Biſhop of Verceil, by treating them with Meekneſs; and to grant Abſolution to thoſe who had communicated with excommunicate Perſons, whenever they would repent. In the ſeven and eight and twentieth, he exhorts the Biſhops of Aix and Pavia to aſſiſt Herlembold, and to ſhun excommunicated Perſons; theſe Letters bear Date the 13*th.* of the ſame Month. However, he would not have the Germans to riſe up in Arms againſt Henry, he deſires that both Parties would refer themſelves to his Judgment, as he ſent Word to the Archbiſhop of Magdebourgh by the nine and thirtieth Letter of the ſame Book, which bears Date December the 20*th.* in the ſame Year.

Gregory VII.

The Council of Rome in the Year 1074.

By the two, and three and fortieth Letters, dated Jan. 25. and 26. 1074 he ſummon'd the Archbiſhops of Aquileia and Milan with their Suffragans, to a Synod which was to be held at Rome in the Beginning of Lent. This Synod being met; the Pope order'd that all thoſe who had been promoted to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, or had obtain'd any Benefices by Simony, ſhould be ſuſpended and depriv'd of them: That it ſhould no longer be lawful for Clerks guilty of Fornication to celebrate Maſs, nor to wait at the Altar; and that the People ſhould not aſſiſt at the Maſs, or any other Office of ſuch Prieſts or Clerks who kept Concubines. In this Council he gave Abſolution to Garnier Biſhop of Strasbourgh, who had been excommunicated by Alexander. This Biſhop was the only Perſon of the German Biſhops who were guilty of Simony, who came to Rome to beg Pardon for his Fault; ſo that the Pope thought this Submiſſion deſerv'd an abſolute Pardon: But as for the Biſhops of Placentia, and the other Biſhops of Lombardy, who were likewiſe come to Rome, he only granted them the Power of confirming Infants, in Caſe of Neceſſity. This is what he gives an Account of to the Princeſſes Beatrice and Matilda in the ſeventy ſeventh Letter of the firſt Book, dated April the 15*th.* 1074. A Propoſal was likewiſe made in this Synod to ordain Anſelm Biſhop of Lucca, and Hugh Biſhop of Die; but a Remonſtrance was made in Behalf of King Henry, that the Pope ought not to conſecrate them, till they had receiv'd Inveſtiture. However, the Pope did not ſtick to ordain the Biſhop of Die; but put off for ſome Time the Ordination of the Biſhop of Lucca. Notwithſtanding, a little Time after he ordain'd him; the People of Lucca would not acknowledge him, but turn'd him out in Spite of all the Intreaties the Pope us'd for his Reception. Some Authors ſay, that Gregory in this Council made a Decree, againſt the Inveſtitures of Benefices by Laicks. It appears by the Letter written by this Pope to Beatrice and Matilda, the ſixteenth of November the ſame Year, that Robert Guiſcard Duke of Pozzolo was already excommunicated, and 'tis probable that this was done in this Council.

Some Time after the Pope ſent to King Henry the Biſhops of Oſtia, Paleſtrina and Cuma, as his Legates, with order to call a Council of Biſhops in Germany, to reform the Abuſes; to communicate to that Council the Decrees of the Council of Rome againſt ſuch Clerks as were guilty of Simony, or kept Concubines; and to oblige King Henry to abandon the Intereſts of the Biſhops of Lombardy, and to put himſelf upon the zealous Reformation of the Church. Theſe Legates attended with the Empreſs Agnes, waited upon Henry about Eaſter at Nuremberg. He receiv'd them very obligingly, regulated ſeveral Abuſes, promis'd them to extirpate Simony wholly out of his Dominions, and to ſubmit to the Holy See. But he would not ſeparate himſelf from the Communion of the Archbiſhop of Milan, and return'd this Anſwer upon that Subject, That he hop'd that when the Pope ſhould be fully inform'd of the Matter, he would revoke what he had done againſt that Archbiſhop, and the Biſhop of Lombardy. Nor would he promiſe the Legates to call a Council, under a Pretence that it did not belong to them, but to the Archbiſhop of Mayence, in Germany as Vicar of the Holy See, ſince he had receiv'd that Privilege from the Predeceſſors of Gregory. It was Liemar Archbiſhop of Breme who furniſh'd King Henry with this Reply. The Legates inſiſted, and remonſtrated, that the Power which had been granted to the Archbiſhop of Mayence, ended at the Death of that Pope who had given him the Grant; that beſides they had a Commiſſion or Power which that Archbiſhop had not; but they were not hearken'd to, and were oblig'd to return, after they had ſuſpended the Archbiſhop of Breme, and cited him to a Council to be held at Rome about the Feaſt of St. Andrew.

Gregory VII.

The Legates having brought this Anſwer back to Gregory, he wrote Word to Henry, That tho' he had not ſatisfied him in the Buſineſs relating to the Archbiſhop of Milan, yet he was very well pleas'd with his Submiſſion, and with the Civilities he ſhew'd to his Legates: That he was willing to have another Hearing of that Affair, to ſee whether any Alteration ought to be made in the Judgment that had been pronounc'd againſt that Archbiſhop. By this very Letter, he gives him to underſtand, that he had cited to the Synod to be held at Rome the Beginning of the next Lent, Sigefroy Archbiſhop of Mayence, and the Biſhops of Bamberg, Strazbourg and Spires; to give an Account of their Advancement to the Epiſcopacy, and of their Morals: He deſires that he would oblige them to come, and ſend Deputies along with them, who ſhould give in their Teſtimony of their Lives and Converſations. This Letter is dated December 7*th.* 1074. There is likewiſe another Letter of the ſame Date directed likewiſe to Henry, wherein he expreſſes a great Deal of Affection to him, and prays him not to hearken to their Counſels, who were willing to ſow Diſſenſions between them. He tells him of the Afflictions which the Eaſtern Chriſtians labour'd under, and aſſures him that he had provided ſeveral Italian Lords to go to their Aſſiſtance, and that he had already fifty thouſand Men who were ready to follow him, if he would head them, and march as far as our Saviour's Sepulchre. That he is the more inclin'd to undertake this, becauſe it would be a Means of reuniting the Greek Church to the Latin, and of reducing the Armenians and all the other Orientals into the Boſom of the Church. But foraſmuch as it was a Buſineſs of great Conſequence, he ask'd his Advice and Aſſiſtance, and declares that if he ſhould go, he would leave him protector of the Church of Rome. Theſe two Letters are the thirtieth, and one and thirtieth of the ſecond Book.

Some Days before this, the Pope had ſummon'd to the Synod of Rome, by the twenty eighth, and twenty ninth Letters of the ſecond Book, Liemar Archbiſhop of Breme, Sigefroy Archbiſhop of Mayence, Otho Biſhop of Conſtance, Garnier of Strazbourg, Henry of Spires, Herman of Bamberg, Imbric of Augsburg, and Adalbert of Wirtzbourg.

The pope's Decree againſt thoſe who were guilty of Simony, and againſt the Clerks, who either kept Concubines or were marry'd, remov'd in Germany, Italy and France a great many Eccleſiaſticks out of their Places, who were found guilty of Simony, or of having unlawful Converſe with Women. Theſe Men not only complain'd of this Yoke which the Pope would impoſe upon them, but they likewiſe inveigh'd againſt him, and accuſed him of advancing an inſupportable Error, and ſuch as is contrary to the Words of our Saviour, who ſays that all Men are not able to live continently; and contrary to the Words of the Apoſtle, who injoins thoſe who cannot live continently, to marry. They added, that this Law he would impoſe on them, which oblig'd them to live like Angels by offering Force to the ordinary Courſe of Nature, would be the Cauſe of great Diſorders: That moreover if the Pope perſiſted in his Reſolution, they had rather renounce the Prieſthood than Marriage, and let him ſee if he could get Angels to take Care of their Flocks, ſince he would not make uſe of Men. This was the Language of theſe corrupted Eccleſiaſticks, according to the Account of an Hiſtorian of that Time. But the Pope for his Part preſs'd the Execution of his Decree, and wrote very warm Letters to the Biſhops, to oblige them to take ſtrict Care of it. The Archbiſhop of Mayence doing his utmoſt therein, found how difficult it was to root out an Abuſe ſo inveterate and ſo general as this was; and before he proceeded againſt the Refractory, he gave them ſix Months Time to reclaim. Laſtly, having call'd a Synod at Erford in October, he told them in expreſs Terms, that he was oblig'd to put the Pope's Decree into Execution, and that they were oblig'd either to renounce their their pretended Marriages, or else their Attendance on the Altar. When they found they could not by their Prayers prevail upon him to alter his Resolution, they withdrew from the Council in a great Rage, threatning the Archbishop either to turn him out, or to kill him. The Archbishop to pacify them, order'd them to be call'd back again; and promis'd when an Opportunity should offer, he would send to Rome, and endeavour to work the Pope over to another Mind. The next Day he proposed to them the Question about the Tenths.

Gregory VII.

The Decree of Gregory met with no less Opposition in France, Flanders, England and Lombardy, than it did in Germany, as we are inform'd by several Letters sent by this Pope to the Princes and Bishops of these Countries; and this Opposition rose so high at Cambray, that they caus'd a Man to be burnt who had asserted that those who were guilty of Simony, and the marry'd Priests ought not to celebrate Mass or any Divine Office; and that no Man ought to assist them therein. This we find related in the twentieth Letter of the fourth Book.

This Opposition did not discourage Gregory VII. in the least; on the contrary he wrote several Letters to the Bishops and Princes; whereby he injoyns them to put his Decree in Execution, and not to tolerate Clerks guilty of Simony, nor such as were marry'd or kept Concubines. Upon this Head, we may consult the thirtieth Letter of the first Book directed to the Archbishop of Salzbourg, dated Nov. 15. 1073. the five and fortieth of the second Book directed to Radulphus Duke of Suabia, and to Berthold Duke of Carinthia, dated Jan. 11. 1075. The sixty first directed to Dietwin or Theodwin Bishop of Liege, whom he charges with Simony: The sixty second directed to Sicard Bishop of Aquileia dated March 23. The sixty sixth to Burchard Bishop of Halberstat, of the same Month: The sixty seventh to Anno Archbishop of Cologn: The sixty eighth to the Archbishop of Magdebourgh bearing the same Date: The tenth and eleventh of the fourth Book directed to the Count and Countess of Flanders, dated Nov. 2. 1076. the twentieth of the same Book: Lastly, he order'd an Apology of his Decree to be issued out in the Nature of a Manifesto, wherein he very much exalts the Authority of the Holy See, and the Decretals of his Predecessors.

The Council of Rome in the Year 1075.

The Synod call'd at Rome by the Pope the Year before, was held there about the End of February this Year. He therein excommunicated five Persons belonging to King Henry's Court, who were the Instruments of that Prince in selling of Benefices: He suspended from their Episcopal Functions Liemar Archbishop of Breme, Garnier Bishop of Strazbourg, Henry of Spires, and Herman of Bamberg. He likewise therein suspended William Bishop of Pavia, and Cunibert Bishop of Turin, and depos'd Dennis of Placentia, without any Hopes of being re-establish'd. Some of these Bishops went to Rome for Absolution: The Bishop of Bamberg was likewise in the Way thither, and sent Deputies beforehand by Presents to corrupt the Bishops who were his Judges; but seeing he had no Hopes left, he return'd again, after Promise made of retiring into a Monastery. Upon his Return, instead of performing his Promise, he enter'd again into the Possession of his Church, and committed there new irregularities. This oblig'd the Pope to renew his Sentence of Condemnation issu'd out against him, and withal to excommunicate him. This is what Gregory wrote to the Clergy and Laity of Bamberg, to Sigefroy of Mayence, and to King Henry by three Letters of the third Book, dated July 20. 1075. In the last he commends that Prince for opposing those who were guilty of Simony, and for using his utmost Endeavours to oblige the Clergy to live in Celibacy.

King Henry willing to hold a fair Correspondence with the Pope, whom he thought fit to keep his Friend, as long as the War between him and the Saxons lasted, sent two Embassadors to him before August. By them he sent him Word, that since all the Princes of his Dominions wish'd more to see them at Variance than in Peace, he sent him these two Persons privately, to manage the Peace between them. That he would not have any one know any Thing of it, but his Aunt Beatrice and Matilda. That when he return'd from his Expedition against the Saxons, he would send other Embassadors to him to acquaint him of his Mind, and to testify to him the Respect he bore to the Holy See. The Pope having receiv'd this Letter, return'd him this Answer, That he was heartily glad to find he had trusted this Negotiation to Persons of Piety, and that he was ready to receive him into the Bosom of the Church, without exacting any Thing else from him, but that he would follow the wholesome Counsels which he had to give him. At the Close of his Letter he exhorts him to use the Saxons with Clemency, to turn the Bishop of Bamberg out of his Bishoprick, and to put another in his Place. This Letter which has no Date, is the seventh of the third Book.

When Henry had conquer'd the Saxons, he began to put a Slight on the Pope's Favour; and instead of sending a private Embassy to him according to his Promise, he resolv'd to make it publick. This gave the Pope to understand, that he did not care how the Affair was canvass'd, as he sent Word to Beatrice and Matilda by the fifth Letter of the third Book, which bears Date Sept. 11. 1075.

Gregory VII.

Much about the same Time, he who was in Possession of the Archbishoprick of Milan against the Pope's Will, dy'd, and Henry put up in his Place a Clerk of the Church of Milan nam'd Tedald, without taking any Notice of the Person whom Gregory pretended to be the lawful Archbishop of the Place. Immediately upon this the Pope wrote to Tedald, and to the Suffragans of the Archbishoprick of Milan, to prevent his Ordination; and cited him to the Synod which was to be held at Rome. These Letters are the eighth and ninth of the third Book, dated Sept. 7th. and Octob. 10th. 1075. That very Day he wrote a long Letter to King Henry, by which he exhorts him to separate himself from the Communion of those who were excommunicated by the Holy See, and to receive immediate Absolution from some Bishop who had receiv'd Commission from him to grant it to that Prince. He tells him, that he is surpriz'd to see, that tho' in his Letters he expresses all Manner of Respect and Submission to the Holy See, yet he opposes the Canonical and Apostolick Institutions thereof; and particularly that he had not kept to the Promises which he made to him by the Princess his Mother, and by his Legates concerning the Church of Milan; and that on the contrary he had bestow'd the Bishopricks of Spoleto and Fermo to the Prejudice of what had been injoyn'd by the Holy See: He exhorts him to a sincere Submission to the Sanctions of the Holy See, and to put them in Execution: And he promises him however that if he could shew him by Persons of Prudence and Piety, how an Accommodation might be found out, he would very readily lay hold on it for his Satisfaction.

The Pope arrested by Cincius.

About the End of this Year, the Pope fell out with Cincius, Son of Alberic, the Prefect of Rome; and after he had excommunicated him, he cast him into Prison, if Benno may be credited in the Case. Cincius having made his Escape, conspir'd against the Pope; and having rais'd a Troop of Soldiers, set upon him unawares on Christmas-day, whilst he was celebrating Mass in his Pontifical Robes, seiz'd upon his Person, drew him out by Violence out of Church, and shut him up in a strong House. No sooner was this News spread about Rome, but the People flock'd in great Multitudes to the House of Cincius to storm it, and to oblige him to release the Pope. Cincius finding that he was constrain'd to do it, made the Pope to promise him, before he set him at Liberty, that he would not do any Thing to him, or his Accomplices. But the People being inrag'd, burnt and pillag'd the Revenues belonging to Cincius both within and without the City. Cincius for his Part burnt and demolish'd all that belong'd to the Church of Rome. This Contest held for some Days, being fomented by Guilbert Archbishop of Ravenna, who had excited Cincius to this Undertaking. But at last Cincius was constrain'd to leave off, and to depart from Rome, to go to the Emperor. Guilbert likewise retir'd, pretending to be reconcil'd to the Pope, tho' his Design was to create him new Troubles. This he did by joining himself with Tedald Archbishop of Milan, the Bishop of Lombardy, Cardinal Hugh, and several others of the Clergy of Rome.

King Henry's Letters.

King Henry being very much dissatisfied with the Pope, who had treated his Embassadors unkindly, and had sent him a Nuncio who had discours'd with him in an haughty and threatning Air, was easily perswaded by Cardinal Hugh, and the other Bishops and Lords, the profess'd Enemies of Gregory, to abandon the Interests of a Man who treated him with an intolerable Severity. To bring this about, he wrote a circular Letter to the Bishops and Princes of the Empire, by which he implores their Assistance in the urgent Necessity he lay under, and in that Oppression under which both the Empire and Church labour'd through the Tyranny of Hildebrand, who design'd to take upon himself alone the Regal and Sacerdotal Authority contrary to Divine Institution, which has committed the One to Princes, and the Other to Bishops: To the Prejudice of which Institution he design'd to deprive him of the Kingdom and his Life, after he had depriv'd the Bishops of their Priesthood. That in this publick Grievance both of Church and State, he invites them to meet at Worms about Septuagesima, to take such Measures as might conduce to the Good of the Church, and the Honour of the State. Thierry Bishop of Verdun, wrote likewise a circular Letter in his own Name to all the Prelates and Princes of the Empire, which was full of Invectives against Gregory VII. in which he declares that they ought to proceed to the Election of a new Pope. Engelbert nominated to the Archbishoprick of Treves, wrote likewise another Letter no less abusive than the former. Lastly, all the Bishops of Germany were so dissatisfied with Gregory VII. because he had declar'd publickly that there was not one single Man among them who was a lawful Bishop, and that he would oblige all of them to resign their Bishopricks to him, and to hold them from him, as he had already serv'd several of them; that they all declar'd openly against him. They thereupon met together in great Numbers at Wormes on the Day appointed, where Cardinal Hugh, (whom the Pope had depos'd and excommunicated a few Days before) with Guibert of Ravenna met, and preferr'd ſeveral Things againſt the Life, Conduct, Election, and Conſtitutions of Gregory. Upon this Charge, the Aſſembly declar'd that Hildebrand could no longer be look'd upon as lawful Pope, and all the Biſhops ſubſcrib'd to his Condemnation. Herman of Metz, and Adelbert Biſhop of Wirtzbourgh, were the only Perſons who made any Scruple: But William Biſhop of Utrecht, who very warmly maintain'd the Intereſt of the King, oblig'd them to ſubſcribe, by ſaying, That they muſt either do that, or renounce the Allegiance which they ow'd to their Prince. Afterwards they wrote a Letter to Gregory, in the Name of the Archbiſhops of Mayence and Treves, and of four and forty Biſhops of Germany, by which they declar'd to him, That tho' they knew he had been advanc'd to the Papal Chair contrary to all Manner of Right, yet they had thought fit to tolerate his Intruſion, in Hopes that he would have made Amends for theſe criminal Beginnings, by his Probity, and the good Services he would do the Church: But that the miſerable Eſtate of the Univerſal Church, was a ſufficient Demonſtration that the ſequel of his Actions was anſwerable to theſe unhappy Beginnings. That tho' our Saviour had recommended Peace and Charity as the principal Character of Chriſtians, yet he on the contrary, ſow'd Diviſions in the Church by his Novelties, and tore it in Pieces by his proud Cruelty, or rather by his cruel Pride. That he was the Head of the Schiſm, and that he had created Confuſion and Trouble to the Members of the Church, who before his Time liv'd in Union and Peace, by blowing up the Flames of Diſcord in all the Churches of Italy, Germany, France and Spain. That he was deſirous to ſtrip the Biſhops of that Power which they receiv'd in their Ordination from the Holy Ghoſt; and had deliver'd them up to the Fury of the People, who could not endure any Biſhops or Prieſts, but thoſe who had by an unworthy Complaiſance beg'd their Power and their Prieſthood from his Pride. That he had been the Cauſe of great Confuſions between the Members of Jeſus Chriſt; ſubverted the Subordination which was requiſite to be obſerv'd among them; and deſtroy'd the Rights and Privileges of all other Biſhops, by aſſerting that aſſoon as ever he ſhould have Notice of the Offence of any one of their Dioceſans, the Biſhops ſhould have no farther any Power of binding or looſing them. That ſince they could not find in their Conſciences to leave the Church in the Danger to which it was expos'd by his continued Outrages, they thought it proper to acquaint him with that, which they were hitherto willing to paſs by in Silence, viz. That he had never been capable of being lawfully ſeated upon the Holy and Apoſtolick See, becauſe he had taken an Oath in the Life-time of the Emperor Henry of bleſſed Memory, that he would never be Pope, nor ſuffer any other to be advanc'd to that Dignity, without the Conſent of that Emperor, or his Son after him. That he had formally renounc'd the Popedom, in Order to bring over the other Cardinals to do the like. That in the Time of Pope Nicholas II. he himſelf had been the Author of a Decree made in a Council of one hundred and fifteen Biſhops, importing, That no Pope ſhould be made, but who was elected by the Cardinals, acknowledg'd by the People, and approv'd of by the King. That he had tranſgreſs'd all theſe Promiſes, and all theſe Sanctions: That moreover he gave a great Scandal to the Church, by holding too great a Familiarity with a Woman (meaning Matilda) and that it became a general Complaint, that all the Affairs of the Church were manag'd by the Counſels of Women. That one cannot complain too much of the unworthy Treatment he ſhews to Biſhops. Therefore, foraſmuch as 'tis evident, that by Perjury he entred upon the Papacy; that he has diſturb'd the Church by his dangerous Novelties; and ſcandaliz'd it by the irregularity of his Life, they renounce that Obedience which they never promis'd him, and would no longer eſteem him as an Apoſtolick Pope, ſince hitherto he has not eſteem'd them as Biſhops. Rowland a Clerk of the Church of Parma, was fixt upon to carry this Letter to Rome; to declare to Gregory that he ſhould renounce the Popedom; and to proteſt, that all he ſhould do or injoyn for the Future ſhould be null. This Clerk attended by the Envoys of King Henry, came to Rome the Day before the Pope held his Synod, which was immediately before the firſt Week in Lent. He deliver'd the Letter of the Aſſembly of Worms to Gregory, and made thoſe Declarations and Proteſtations, which he had been order'd.

The Letter of Thierry Bishop of Verdun.

The Letter of Engelbert Archbishop of Treves.

Gregory VII.

The Aſſembly of Worms againſt Gregory VII. in the Year 1076.

The Council of Rome againſt Henry. in the Year 1076.

Gregory without being ſtartled at it, held his Council on the Morrow, and caus'd the Letter which had been brought him, to be read in the Preſence of thoſe who aſſiſted therein. Rowland did there renew the Denunciation he had made, threatning that if he would not obey and relinquiſh the Holy See, the King ſhould be at Rome before Whitſuntide, and turn him out by Force, becauſe he was a Wolf, and not a lawful Shepherd. King Henry's Envoys made the ſame Proteſtations. But for all this, the Courage of Gregory VII. was not abated; on the contrary, fir'd by this Affront, he began by excommunicating Sigefroy Archbiſhop of Mayence, and by ſuſpending the other Biſhops of Germany, who had any hand in this Undertaking; he pronounc'd likewiſe a Sentence of Excommunication againſt the Biſhops of Lombardy, and againſt ſeveral Biſhops beyond the Mountains, who were charg'd with Simony or other Crimes; and laſtly, he declar'd King Henry to have forfeited the Kingdoms of Germany and Italy, and his Subjects abſolv'd from the Oath of Allegiance, and thundred out a Bull of Excommunication againſt that Prince. Gregory VII.

The Pope immediately publiſh'd this Sentence, and directed it to all the Faithful, with a very warm Letter againſt the Proceedings of the Biſhops and King of Germany. This is the ſixth Letter of the third Book, where 'tis miſplac'd among the Letters of the Year 1075. whereas it was not written 'till after the Council held the firſt Week in Lent, in the Year 1076.

This Excommunication made an Impreſſion on a great many Peoples Minds. The Enemies of King Henry made uſe of it to promote their Deſigns, and it ſerv'd as an Umbrage to the League which the Princes and Lords of Germany renew'd againſt him. It likewiſe ſhock'd ſome of thoſe who aſſiſted at the Aſſemby of Worms; and among others, Udo Archbiſhop of Treves, who went expreſs to Rome, to procure his Abſolution, and be reconcil'd to Gregory; and went expreſs to Rome, to procure his Abſolution, and be reconcil'd to Gregory; and being return'd to Germany, he was one of the firſt who maintain'd, That they ought not to communicate with the King, till ſuch Time as he ſhould be reconcil'd to the Pope. The Archbiſhop of Mayence and a great many more became of the ſame Mind, and there were but a very few of the Prelates who would venture to ſtand to what they had done. The Pope for his Part, made ſure of the Forces and Places belonging to Matilda, the Widow of Godfrey Duke of Lorrain, who dy'd this Year in his Dutchy, being parted from his Wife a long Time before. This Princeſs was Daughter to Beatrice the Siſter of the Emperor Henry III. and to Boniface Lord of Lucca. She was poſſeſs'd of a very conſiderable Eſtate in Italy, having the Sovereignties of Lucca, Parma, Reggio, Mantua, and a Part of Tuſcany under her. She was wholly wedded to the Intereſts of Gregory VII. who likewiſe eſpous'd her Intereſts with all the warmth imaginable.

Whilſt Affairs ſtood in this Poſture, Gregory thought that before he broke out into an open War, it was advitable to uſe his freſh Endeavours to bring over King Henry to ſubmit to what he was minded to require of him. To forward this Deſign he directed a Letter to all the Biſhops, Abbots, Prieſts, Dukes, Princes, Knights, and in general, to all the Faithful of the Roman Empire, wherein after he had declar'd what he had done in Favour of Henry, and the baſe Returns he had receiv'd for it; he exhorts them to prevail upon this Prince to do Penance, that ſo he might be reconcil'd to the Church, declaring, that if he would not hearken to their Counſels, they ought to convene together to conſult the Welfare of the Univerſal Church. He puts them in Mind of holding no Correſpondence with thoſe who were not ſeparated from Communion with Henry. To conclude, he calls God to witneſs, that he had no temporal Advantage in his Eye, but the Welfare of the Church was the only Motive of what he did. This Letter which is the firſt of the fourth Book, bears Date July 25. in the Year 1076.

Within a while after, Herman Biſhop of Metz, who kept Neuter in this Affair, wrote to Gregory, to ask him, whether the Biſhops who communicated with Henry were excommunicated; and at the ſame Time he takes Notice to him, that there were ſome Perſons who maintain'd, that a King could not be excommunicated. Gregory anſwer'd him by the ſecond Letter of the ſame Book, written at Tivoli, Auguſt 25. That there was no Queſtion to be made but that all thoſe who communicated with King Henry (if it be lawful to call him King) were excommunicated; And that with Reſpect to thoſe who ſay, that a king ought not to be excommunicated, there was no need to return them an Anſwer, ſince their Opinion was ſo ridiculous. However, he did not ſtick to prove, that Kings might be excommunicated, from the Example of Pope Zachary, by whom he ſays the King of France had been depos'd, and his Subjects abſolv'd from their Oath of Allegiance to him: From ſeveral Privileges which are among the Letters of St. Gregory, wherein he declares the Kings and Princes excommunicated, and depriv'd of their Dignity, who ſhall infringe them. He ſubjoyns the Inſtance of Theodoſius; and laſtly he alledges as a convincing Argument, that when Jeſus Chriſt gave St. Peter the Power of feeding his Sheep, and the Power of binding and looſing, he excepted no Perſon from it. Afterwards he gives Herman to underſtand, That he had granted ſome Biſhops a Power of abſolving the Biſhops and Grandees, who would ſeparate themſelves from Communion with King Henry; but that he had forbidden bidden them to grant Abſolution to that Prince till ſuch time as he was aſſur'd by good creditable Witneſſes of his Repentance, and the ſatisfaction he would make, ſince he knew very well that there were Biſhops enow who would not ſcruple to abſolve him, if he had not forbid it.

Gregory VII.

'Tis much in the ſame Air he wrote eight Days after a ſecond Letter to the Prelates and Grandees of Germany, wherein after proteſtation made that it was neither Pride nor Intereſt which mov'd him to excommunicate King Henry, but only for the welfare of the Church, he prays them to be tender of him, if he did ſincerely Repent: Upon Condition however that he would turn out of his Council thoſe excommunicated Perſons who were guilty of Simony, and for the future follow the Advice of thoſe who value the welfare of the Church above their own Intereſts: That he would look upon the Church as his Miſtreſs, and uſe her no longer as a Servant: That he would no longer defend ſuch Cuſtoms as were contrary to the Liberties of the Church; but follow the Doctrine of the Holy Fathers: That if he gave them an aſſurance of performing theſe and other things which with Reaſon might be required of him, they ſhall give him Notice thereof by their Deputies, that ſo they might conſult together what is beſt to be done on that Occaſion; but that he abſolutely forbids them to abſolve him from his Excommunication, till they had receiv'd an Approbation in writings from the Holy See for it. That if he would not repent, they ought to proceed to the Election of a Prince, who would diſcharge the Duties aforemention'd, and that they ought to inform him of the Converſation and Manners of the Perſon they ſhall elect, that ſo he might confirm their Election: That with regard to the Oath which they had taken to the Empreſs Agnes, in caſe her Son ſhould dye before her, they ought not to be concern'd about it, becauſe they might very well perceive that ſhe had no longer a Right thereto, whether ſhe oppoſed or conſented to his being depoſed: That upon the whole, they ſhould let him know who the Perſon was whom they deſign'd for Emperor, after they ſhould have reſolved to Out Henry. This is the third Letter of the fourth Book. It was no ſooner receiv'd in Germany, but the Princes and Grandees of the Empire reſolv'd to meet at Tribur or Oppenheim, to conſult of the meaſures they ought to take. Radulphus Duke of Suabia, and the Dukes of Bavaria and Carinthia, with the Biſhops of Wirtzburgh and Worms, having held a Conference at Ulma, appointed this Convention to be on the twenty fifth of October, and acquainted therewith all the Princes of the Empire, and the Pope, who ſent thither two Legates, to wit Sigehard Patriarch of Aquileia, and Almus Biſhop of Paſſaw. Theſe Legates declaim'd againſt the Conduct of Henry, and deſir'd that they would elect another King in his ſtead. Henry for his part ſent every Day his Deputies to promiſe the Legates, that he would correct what he had hitherto done amiſs, and that he would make reparation for it by conſulting the Welfare of the Church for the future: That if they miſtruſted his Promiſe, he was ready to confirm it by his Oath, and to give Hoſtages for a ſecurity thereof. They return'd him this Anſwer, that they could not tell how to rely on his Words, ſince he had falſify'd them ſo often already. That nothing but the very utmoſt extremity could have brought the Holy See to uſe ſuch Methods, after it had try'd all other: That it had waited his leiſure as long as poſſible; but that at preſent it could not forbear laying hold of an Opportunity which offer'd it ſelf of placing on the Throne a Perſon worthy to fill it. After ſeveral Conferences of this Nature, both Parties were ready to Engage, for the two Armies were over againſt each other, on either ſide of the Rhine, when the Lords of Suabia and Saxony ſent their Deputies to the King with this Declaration, that tho' he had behav'd himſelf very ill towards them, and tho' the Crimes laid to his Charge were evident, yet they were willing to ſubmit the Determination thereof to the Holy See. That they would prevail upon his Holineſs to come to Augsbourg about the Feaſt of the Purification, to determine this Affair in a general Aſſembly of the Princes of the Empire: That if he could not get his Abſolution in a Year's time, he ſhould be depriv'd of his Right for ever: That in the mean time he ſhould disband his Army, and withdraw to Spires with the Biſhop of Verden, and ſeveral other Miniſters, who were not excommunicated; that he would lay aſide all his enſigns of Royalty; and forbear going to Church; that he ſhould reſtore the Church of Worms to its Biſhop; and that he ſhould order the Garriſon which he had thrown into that City to march out. The King finding his Forces to be in a bad Condition, eſteem'd it a Happineſs to extricate himſelf out of theſe Difficulties, tho' upon ſuch diſhonourable Terms. He thereupon promis'd to gratify them in their demands, took his leave immediately of the Archbiſhop of Cologne, and of the Biſhops of Bamberg, Strazbourg, Baſil, Spires, Naumburg, Oſnabruck, and others who were excommunicated; caus'd the Garriſon of Worms to march out, disbanded his Forces, and withdrew to Spires. The Princes of Suabia and Saxony being ſatisfied with his Submiſſion, ſent the Pope word of all that happen'd in their Convention, and pray'd him to come to Augsburg to put an End to this Affair. The King whoſe Intereſt it was to be beforehand with the Pope, and to get his Abſolution as ſoon as poſſible, ſet forward on his Journey to the Pope about the End of the Year; and underſtanding that his Enemies had ſiez'd upon the Paſſes which open'd into Italy, to apprehend him, he went through Burgundy and Savoy, and with much ado enter'd Italy. He was there receiv'd very honourably by a great many, who promis'd him all manner of Aſſiſtance. In the mean time the Pope upon the Intelligence he had receiv'd from the Princes of Germany ſet forward on his Journey, and came as far as Verceil, where having underſtood that King Henry was come into Italy, and had rais'd ſome Forces, he withdrew to the Caſtle of Canoſſa in the Dioceſs of Reggio, which belonged to the Princeſs Matilda. Whilſt he was there, a great many Biſhops and ſeveral Lords of Germany waited upon him, to receive their Abſolution at his Hands. He enjoyn'd them to Faſt for ſome time in Cells, and afterwards gave them Abſolution according to their requeſt, upon Condition that they ſhould hold no Correſpondence with Henry, till ſuch time as he was reconcil'd to the Holy See. In the mean time the King carry'd on his Reconciliation by the Mediation of Matilda, the Abbot of Cluny and ſeveral other Lords, and very earneſtly requeſted that he would take off the Excommunication iſſu'd out againſt him, promiſing that he would always be ready to anſwer the Accuſations of his Enemies, and to refer all to the Pope's Determination. At laſt Gregory conſented to grant him Abſolution, provided he would come in Perſon, and humbly ſue for it. This Prince reſolv'd to ſubmit to it, rather than be entirely diſpoſſeſs'd of the Empire by the Princes of Germany. He thereupon came to Canoſſa, and entred the Outworks of that place bare-footed, without any enſign of Regal Dignity. He waited three Days together at the Caſtle Gate, without receiving any Anſwer from the Pope. On the fourth Day, after ſeveral Conferences, the Pope granted him Abſolution, upon Condition that he would appear at the time and place which he ſhould appoint, to anſwer to the Accuſations brought againſt him by the Princes of Germany, whereof the Pope ſhall be Judge; and that he ſhall either leave or keep his Kingdom, according to the Sentence he ſhall pronounce: That till that time, he ſhall not aſſume to himſelf any Character of the Royal Dignity; nor perform any Act of Sovereignity, unleſs receiving of ſuch Revenues as were neceſſary for his Subſiſtence: That all his Subjects ſhould be abſolv'd from their Allegiance both before God and Men: That he ſhould remove Robert Biſhop of Bamberg, and Ulrick Biſhop of Coſsheim from his Perſon; and that if he fail'd in the Obſervation of any one of theſe Articles, the Abſolution which he receiv'd ſhould be Null and Void: That from thenceforth he ſhould acknowledge himſelf to be Guilty, and ſhould not require any longer to be heard in his own Defence: Laſtly, He bound himſelf by Oath to ſubmit to the Judgment which the Pope ſhould make, or come to the Agreement which he deſir'd; and if the Pope ſhould croſs the Mountains, he ſhould give him free Liberty of coming and going, without offering him any Moleſtation. Theſe Articles were Sign'd and Sworn to by Henry, January the 28th. in the Year, 1077. and as Guarantees of his Word, he offer'd the Princeſs Matilda, Hugh Abbot of Cluny, the Biſhops of Verceil, Naumburg, and ſeveral Lords. Afterwards the Pope celebrated Maſs, and having taken a conſecrated Hoſt in his Hands, and directing his Diſcourſe to King Henry, he told him, that for a proof of his being Innocent of the Crimes laid to his Charge, he would take the Sacrament upon it; and if his Majeſty were as Innocent of the Crimes laid to his Charge, he conjur'd him to do the Like. This propoſal ſomewhat puzzled the King, who perhaps was not very much diſpos'd to communicate. Some Hiſtorians relate that he ſhifted it off by ſaying, that this proof of his Innocence would not perhaps be ſatisfactory to the German Princes, who were not there preſent: Others ſay, that he did receive the Communion from the Hands of the Pope. Let the Caſe be how it will, 'tis certain that after Maſs, he was treated very nobly, and ſent away with manifeſt tokens of Friendſhip and Reconciliation. Theſe Matters of Fact are apparent from the Relation of contemporary Authors, and from the Letter which Gregory wrote immediately after to the Princes of Germany, which is the twelfth of the fourth Book.

Gregory VII.

The Convention at Oppenham.

King Henry's Journey into Italy.

Henry repented of this Action as ſoon as he had done it; for the Italians of Lombardy perceiving how diſadvantageous the Agreement would be to them, ridicul'd him for what he had done, and caſt reproaches upon him for it, telling him, that for their parts, they did not value the Excommunication of a Man, who had himſelf been very juſtly excommunicated by the Biſhops of Italy; who was poſſeſs'd of the Holy See by Simony; who had ſtain'd it by ſeveral Murders, and polluted it by his Adulteries: That his Majeſty had receiv'd a Treatment unworthy of himſelf,

The Complaints which the Lombards made of Henry's Conduct.

Gregory VII.

and caſt ſuch a Blot upon his Honour, as could never be wip'd off, by ſubmitting to an Heretick, and to an infamous Perſon: That they were very unfortunate in having made choice of one for the Protector of the Juſtice and Laws of the Church, who had by this diſhonorable Submiſſion betray'd the Catholick Faith, the Authority of the Church, and the Dignity of the State. Theſe and ſuch like were the common Diſcourſes of the Princes and Grandees of Italy, and which they ventur'd to ſpeak publickly. This render'd Henry ſo odious, that they propos'd to make his Son their King, and to carry him to Rome with an Army, there to have him Crown'd by a Pope of their own chooſing. Henry to clear himſelf, repreſented to them that he was neceſſitated to do what he did; that he had not done it but only for the good of the Publick, and becauſe he could not otherwiſe ſatisfie the Pope, and the German Lords, who had declar'd againſt him: That at preſent being in a place of ſafety, he would make uſe of all his Strength to revenge the Affront which had been offer'd him. He had much ado after all to pacifie them, and perceiv'd himſelf abandon'd by many, and deſpis'd by others. This put him upon reſolving to break entirely with the Pope, by not obſerving the Articles agreed upon betwixt them. He recall'd the excommunicated Biſhops, and declar'd publickly that Gregory had betray'd him, and that he would be reveng'd of the Affront which had been offer'd him.

The Convention at Foreheim, where Radulphus is elected King.

On the other ſide the Archbiſhop of Mayence, and the Biſhops of Wirtzburgh and Mentz, the Duke Radulphus, and a great many other Princes and Grandees of Germany, appointed a Convention to be held at Forcheim the 13*th*. of March, and invited the Pope thither, who was ſtill at Canoſſa, where he was detain'd three Months by the Princeſs Matilda. Having receiv'd this Intelligence, he ſent Cardinal Gregory to King Henry, to give him notice that the Time was come for the performing of what he had promis'd: That the German Princes were to meet March the 13*th*. at Forcheim, to regulate the Affairs of the Empire: That he ought to be there, to clear himſelf of the Accuſations preſerr'd againſt him. The King return'd him this Anſwer, That ſince this was the firſt time of his coming to Italy, he had too much Buſineſs upon his Hands to think of returning ſo ſuddenly and in ſo ſhort a Time. The Pope having receiv'd this Anſwer, immediately diſpatch'd away his Legates to Forcheim, to declare to the Convention, that he could not ſafely go into Germany, or return back to Rome, becauſe Henry had caus'd all the Paſſes to be block'd up: And that therefore they ſhould in his Abſence conſult the Neceſſities both of Church and State, and do what they thought moſt proper for the Welfare of both.

This Convention was held at the place and time appointed. Radulphus Duke of Suabia caus'd himſelf to be elected King, and was conſecrated by Sigefroy at Mayence. He immediately ſent one to the Pope to acquaint him of his Election, and to aſſure him of his Obedience. Henry for his part, pray'd the Pope to aſſiſt him againſt Radulphus, to declare his Election Null, and to Excommunicate him. Some Authors report that Gregory approv'd of the Election of Radulphus, and acknowledg'd him for King: But he himſelf aſſures us of the contrary in the eight and twentieth Letter of the ninth Book, where he calls God to witneſs that this Election was carry'd on without his Conſent and Knowledge; and that the Anſwer which he had return'd to Henry, was to this effect, that he would do him Juſtice, after he had heard the Arguments on both ſides, to know which had the moſt Right on his ſide. Upon this he reſolv'd to go to Germany, and for this end wrote the laſt of May, in the Year, 1077. two Letters, the one directed to the Legates which he had in that Country, and the other to the Princes of Germany, wherein he acquaints them of his Intention of coming to Germany to decide the Difference. That they ought to take all neceſſary Security of the two contending Parties, for his free paſſage thither; and that if either of the two Parties ſhould oppoſe his coming, they ſhould eſteem him as an excommunicated Perſon, and acknowledge him as lawful King, who ſhould ſubmit to the Holy See, and was willing to refer himſelf to its Determination. Theſe two Letters are the three and four and twentieth of the fourth Book.

Henry foreſeeing that if the Pope went into Germany, he would not fail of paſſing a Sentence contrary to his Intereſts, reſolv'd to ſtop his Journey, and to engage in a War againſt Radulphus, and the other Rebels. The Pope having caus'd ſeveral Biſhops of King Henry's Party to be apprehended, that Prince by way of reprizal, order'd Cardinal Gerard Biſhop of Oſtia, who was Legate in Lombardy, and Bernard Abbot of Marſeilles, one of the Pope's Legates in Germany to be apprehended. Gregory being concern'd that the Affairs of Germany did not go according to his deſires, complain'd of it to Udo Archbiſhop of Treves, and his Suffragans, and exhorts them to do all they could to divert the Storm which was coming upon Germany. The Letter which he wrote to them upon this Subject, bears date the laſt of September, in the Year, 1077. and is the ſeventh of the firſt Book.

The beginning of the next Year, the Pope cited Guilbert Archbiſhop of Ravenna and his Suffragans, with the Biſhops and Abbots of la Marche, Fermo and Camerine of Pentapolis, of Emilia and Lombardy, to the Council which was to be held at Rome according to Cuſtom the firſt Week in Lent, and aſſures them by his Letter, (which is the thirteenth of the fifth Book, dated January 28.) That he would do them no harm, and that he would be as indulgent towards them as in Conſcience he could be. Theſe Biſhops did not think it proper to appear at this Synod, which conſiſted of almoſt one hundred Biſhops. The Pope did therein renew his Anathema iſſu'd out already againſt Tedald Archbiſhop of Milan, and againſt Guilbert Archbiſhop of Ravenna, and ſuſpended them from all Epiſcopal and Sacerdotal Functions. He therein depos'd (without any hopes of being re-eſtabliſh'd) Arnulphus Biſhop of Cremona, who was there preſent, and had own'd himſelf guilty of Simony, and excommunicated him till ſuch time as he ſhould do Penance. He therein likewiſe depos'd Rowland Biſhop of Treviſi, for having acquir'd his Biſhoprick by taking upon him the Deputation of the Aſſembly of Worms, which had been the cauſe of the Schiſm between the Empire and the Papacy, and excommunicated him for ever, if he did not do Penance. He ſerv'd after the ſame Manner Cardinal Hugh of St. Clement, as one condemn'd thrice by the Holy See: Firſt, For having favour'd and ſupported the Schiſm of Cadalous: Secondly, For having joyn'd himſelf, when Legate, with Hereticks and Perſons condemn'd by the Holy See for Simony: And Thirdly, for having ſtir'd up Schiſms and Diſſentions in the Church. He therein renew'd the Excommunication iſſu'd out by his Predeceſſors againſt the Archbiſhop of Narbonne; and after he had thus determin'd Matters with relation to Biſhops, he orders with reference to the Affairs of Germany, that two Legates ſhould be ſent into that Country, to hold there an Aſſembly of Prelates and Grandees of the Empire, wherein they ſhould endeavour to bring things to an Accommodation, or to paſs a definitive Sentence in favour of him who had the beſt Title. And that no Perſon might diſturb the Execution of this deſign, he excommunicates all ſuch as ſhall oppoſe it, and ſhall hinder his Legates from going into Germany. He therein likewiſe excommunicates the Normans of Pozzuolo, and interdicts all the Biſhops who did not appear at his Synod. Laſtly, He prohibits under the penalty of Excommunication, the detaining of thoſe who had been caſt away at Sea, or ſeizing of their Effects. He therein declares the Ordinations made by excommunicated Perſons to be Null, and abſolves from the Oath of Allegiance all ſuch as had taken it to excommunicate Perſons, and prohibits them from paying any Obedience to them. But that the great Number of Excommunications might not be the cauſe of the Damnation of thoſe, who by ignorance, ſimplicity, fear or conſtraint were oblig'd to communicate with excommunicated Perſons, he exempts out of the Excommunication all Women, Children, Servants, and other Subjects, who had no Hand in the Crimes which the others committed, and in general all thoſe who communicated with excommunicated Perſons without knowing them to be ſo. He likewiſe gives Travellers leave, who are in the Country of excommunicated Perſons. to buy what they want of them; and he does not hinder any Man from aſſiſting or ſhewing any Acts of Charity towards the excommunicate. Theſe Decrees are of the third of March, in the Year, 1078.

Gregory VII. The Council of Rome, in the Year 1078.

This Council being broke up, the Pope wrote to the Biſhops, Princes, and other Lords of Germany, ſending them word what had been reſolv'd upon with relation to the Affairs of Germany: And after having excommunicated all thoſe who ſhould hinder the Execution thereof, he gave them to underſtand, that the Bearer of his Letter ſhall agree with Udo Archbiſhop of Treves, who is of King Henry's party, and with ſome other Biſhops of the party of Radulphus, about the Time and Place of their Aſſembly, that ſo his Legates may be there with Safety. He wrote likewiſe in particular to the Archbiſhop, recommending to him the making up of the Peace, and the putting in Execution what had been enjoyn'd in the Council of Rome; and that he might take ſuch Meaſures as were moſt equitable, he adviſes him to conſult with him who ſhould be choſen Mediator of the other party. Theſe two Letters dated March 9. in the Year, 1078. are the fifteenth and ſixteenth of the Book.

The Pope wrote and diſturb'd himſelf in vain about the holding of this Convention; Henry would not agree to it, and prepar'd himſelf for carrying on the War; and even thoſe of the Party of Radulphus ſuſpected the Pope's Sentence. Thereupon he wrote another Letter dated the firſt of June into Germany, wherein after he had declar'd that all the Care or Pains which he had taken to procure Peace were in vain, becauſe the Enemies of God and the publick Good, who only minded the gratifying of their Ambition, by deſtroying the Empire, and ruining Religion, hinder'd the holding of the Convention which was propos'd: He in-

joyns

Gregory VII. joyns all the Germans not to assist these Enemies of the publick Peace, and not to communicate with them, giving them to understand that they were excommunicated. Lastly, he assures them that he would never favour the Party which was unjust, and prays them not to harbour any such thoughts of him, whatever might be said or written to them about it; for he was one who fear'd God, and who suffer'd every Day for his Sake. This Letter is the first of the sixth Book.

In the mean Time King Henry without minding all these Excommunications, being march'd into Germany at the Head of an Army, and became Master of the Countries of Bavaria and Suabia, which Radulphus had left to retire into Saxony. Radulphus did there raise some Forces, and came before Wirtzburg, and besieg'd it. Henry being come to its Relief, gave Battle to him, which did not prove successful to him, for several of the Horse, who pretended to be on his side, falling upon him to kill him, put his Army into confusion. The Cavalry fled, the Infantry were cut in pieces, and the Town was taken; but Henry retook it within a short time after.

The Council of Rome, December 1078. About the end of November, Gregory held a Council at Rome, wherein he excommunicated Nicephorus Botoniatus, who had seiz'd upon the Empire of the East, after he had outed Michael Ducas. The Envoys of Henry and Radulphus, took an Oath in the Name of their Masters, that they would not hinder the Legates of the Holy See from holding an Assembly in Germany, to put an End to their Contests. Lastly, The Pope made in this Council twelve Canons concerning Benefices, and Ecclesiastical Revenues.

In the first, he excommunicates all Laicks who were possess'd of Ecclesiastical Revenues, and in particular those who had seiz'd upon the Revenues belonging to the Monastery of Mount Cassin. This Decree was made upon the account that Jordanes Duke of Capua, had taken away from that Monastery a Sum of Money which had been depositd there by the Bishop of Roscella.

The seconds imports, That having understood that several Laicks granted in several Places the Investitures of Churches, contrary to the Constitutions of the Holy Fathers, and that this was the cause of great Disturbances, he orders that no Ecclesiasticks shall receive Investiture of any Bishoprick, Abby or Church, from the Hands of an Emperor or a King, or any other Laick whatever, and declares that if any shall receive it, his Investiture shall be Null and Void, and he shall be excommunicated, till such Time as he has given Satisfaction for his Offence.

The third imports, That if any one sell any Prebends, Archdeaconries, Provostships, or any other Ecclesiastical Benefices, or disposes of them otherwise than the Holy Canons direct, he shall be suspended from his Functions, because 'tis requisite that he who receives the Dignity of a Bishop gratis, should likewise dispense the Things which belong to it gratis.

The fourth declares those Ordinations to be Null, which are made for Money, or at the Solicitation of any one, or in Consideration of any Service done for that Purpose; and all such as are not made by the joynt Consent both of Clergy and Laity, or such as are not approv'd of by those to whom the Consecration of elected Persons does belong.

The fifth imports, That such Penances as are not proportion'd to the Quality of the Crimes committed are insignificant; and that they who cannot bear Arms, or exercise a Trade without falling into Sin, ought to quit their Profession or Trade: And that those who bear any Malice to, or detain any Goods of their Neighbour, shall be reconcil'd and make full restitution to him, before they shall be admitted to Communion.

The sixth, prohibits Laicks from possessing Tenths, what Title soever they may have thereto.

The seventh, enjoyns Abstinence from Meats every Saturday, unless some solemn Festival fall thereon.

The eighth imports, That no Abbot shall be possess'd of the Tenths, or other Ecclesiastical Revenues which of Right belong to the Bishop, unless by the Authority of the Pope, or by the Licence of the Bishop of the Place.

The ninth, that Bishops shall not impose any new Burden on the Abbots or Clergy.

The tenth, That all those who are possess'd of any Revenues belonging to the Holy See, or know of any who do possess them, shall be bound to discover it, under the Penalty of paying Fourfold.

The eleventh, That the Bishops who shall permit the Priests, Deacons, or Subdeacons of their Diocess to live Marry'd, shall be suspended of their Functions.

The twelfth, That all Christians shall endeavour to offer something at the Celebration of the Mass.

The Council of Rome, in the Year 1079. The next Year Gregory held another Council the beginning of Lent, in which Berenger abjur'd his Error. After this the Envoys of Radulphus complain'd to the Council, that King Henry offer'd great Violences to the Ecclesiasticks of Germany. Several Bishops of the Council propos'd to excommunicate him; but the Pope thought it more advisable to put it off, and contented himself with taking an Oath from his Envoys, who swore that their Master should send Persons with Pass-ports for the Pope's Legates to go safely into Germany, and should submit to their Judgment. The Envoys of Radulphus took likewise an Oath, that their Master should either come, or send Deputies to the Assembly, which the Pope or his Legates should appoint, and that he should submit to the Judgment of the Holy See. The Archbishop of Aquileia likewise promis'd to be faithful for the future to Pope Gregory, and his Successors; to make no attempt on their Persons or Estates; and to be in all things submissive to them. In this Synod were excommunicated and depos'd, without any Hopes of being re-establish'd, Tedald Archbishop of Milan, the Archbishop of Narbonne, Sigefroy Bishop of Boulogne, Rowland Bishop of Trevisi, and the Bishops of Fermo and Camerine. Lastly, The Bishop of Reggio promis'd on the Holy Evangelists to quit forthwith his Bishoprick, if the Pope or his Legate should order him to do it.

Gregory VII.

Gregory upon the Oath taken by the Envoys of the two Competitors, sent away his Legates, as he hints in a Letter written to the Princess Matilda, March 3. in the Year, 1079. But King Henry finding he had the better of his Enemy, whom he defeated in a Battle near Fladesheim, would not permit any Assembly to be held, wherein his Right might be call'd in Question; and the Pope's Legates perceiving the success of his Arms, not only abstain'd from acting any thing against him, but likewise seem'd to favour him. Those who were of Radulphus's Party preferring their Complaints to the Pope about it, and taking notice that it was suspected that he had alter'd his Mind, he return'd them this Answer, that tho' all the Latins who were of King Henry's Party accus'd him of too much severity us'd towards that Prince, he had always objected to them, and declar'd that he would be of no Party, but of that which had Justice on its side; that if his Legates had done any thing contrary to the orders which he had given them, he was very sorry for it, and that he understood that they were constrain'd to do it, either by Fraud or by Force; that he had only given them Orders to appoint the Time and Place, that so he might send his Legates to determine this great Affair; to re-establish the Bishops, and to forbid them communicating with excommunicated Persons. This Letter dated October 1. in the Year, 1079. is the third of the seventh Book.

The Council of Rome, in the Year 1080. Lastly, Gregory in the Council held the beginning of Lent in the Year 1080. after he had renew'd the prohibition of receiving Investitures of Benifices from Laicks; anathematiz'd those who granted them; reiterated the Excommunications issu'd out against Tedald Archbishop of Milan, Guilbert of Ravenna, Peter of Narbonne, Rowland Bishop of Trevisi and others; prohibited the Normans of Pozzuolo from invading the Revenues belonging to the Church of Rome; repeated and enlarg'd the Decrees made in the Council of the foregoing Year, concerning Penances proportion'd to the greatness of the Crimes, and the Elections of Bishops: He thunder'd out a terrible Excommunication against King Henry, wherein he anathematiz'd Him and all his Adherents; declar'd him to have forfeited the Kingdoms of Germany and Italy, and all Regal Dignity; forbad all Christians to obey him; and bestow'd the Kingdom of Germany on Radulphus, Elected by the Princes of Germany: And Lastly, Exhorts all of them to take up Arms against Henry, to divest him of his Dominions.

Wherein Henry is excommunicated and deposed by the Pope.

When the News of Henry's Excommunication was brought to Germany, it incens'd those of his Party against the Pope, who meeting at Mayence about Whitsuntide, resolv'd to endure him no longer on the Papal Chair. But that his Deposition might be the more Solemn, they appointed a Council to be held at Bresse, which was made up of thirty Bishops, and a great many Princes of Germany and Italy. They there unanimously depos'd Hildebrand, because, say they, it is manifest that it was not God who Elected him, but that he caus'd himself to be Elected by Fraud and for Money; because he overthrew the Order of the Church; disturb'd the Empire; threatned Death to a Catholick King, and a lover of Peace; defended a perjur'd King; sow'd discord among those who were at Peace, and scandaliz'd the Church. They likewise cast Reflections upon him, calling him Obstinate, Perverse; a Preacher up of Sacrileges and Combustions; a Protector of perjur'd Persons and Homicides; a Disciple of Berenger, who called in Question the reality of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ in the Eucharist; a Sorcerer; a Necromancer possess'd by an evil Spirit; an Heretick; an Infidel. For these Reasons they thought that he ought to be depos'd and turn'd out of the Chair, and that if he did not recede of his own accord, he ought to lay under a perpetual Condemnation. They Elected in his stead Guilbert Archbishop of Ravenna, one of the principal Actors in this Tragedy, who took upon him the Name of Clement III. All this was done June 25. in the Year, 1080.

The Council of Bresse against Gregory VII.

Clement III. the Anti-Pope.

Gregory VII.

After the Aſſembly, Henry wrote a Letter to Hildebrand (for ſo he calls Gregory) in theſe Terms: 'I Henry by Divine Providence, and not by Uſurpation, King, to Hildebrand who is no longer Pope, but a wicked Monk. You very juſtly deſerve this Title, having been the cauſe of that Confuſion, which the Church at preſent labours under, and which is ſo great that there is ſcarce a Man but has had his ſhare in your Curſes. For without making mention of other Things, you have lay'd under your Feet Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Prieſts, and others of the Lord's Anointed, to get the Applauſe of the People, and to make them believe that you know every thing, but that they know nothing..... We have born with you as long as We thought We might with Safety do it without Prejudice to the Holy See; but you fancy'd that We did that out of Fear, which Humility put Us upon doing. You have advanc'd your ſelf againſt the Regal Power; you have dar'd to threaten to diveſt Us thereof, as if it were you who had beſtow'd it on Us, and as if We had not receiv'd it from God, who has call'd Us to the Empire, but not you to the Papacy; for you were advanc'd thereto by Craft and Fraud, and by your Mony gain'd the Favour you had. This Favour you thus gain'd has put you upon making uſe of the Sword to aſcend the Throne of Peace, and being mounted thereon, you have diſturb'd the Peace, by Arming the Subjects againſt thoſe whom they ought to obey, by bringing a Contempt on thoſe Biſhops whom God hath call'd, even you who had no call..... You your ſelf have aſſaulted Our Royal Perſon, though an Anointed King, and one who could not be call'd to Account but by God alone, nor be depos'd for any other Crime but that of Apoſtatizing from the Faith ..... For as much therefore as you are Anathematiz'd and Condemn'd by Our Sentence, and by the Sentence of Our Biſhops, quit the Holy Apoſtolick See which you have unjuſtly uſurp'd, and let another take your Office, who exerciſes no Violence under the Umbrage of Religion; but who Teaches the pure Doctrine of St. Peter. We Henry by the Grace of God King, with all our Biſhops, enjoyn you to deſcend from the Papal Chair,

The Letter of Henry to Gregory VIII.

Henry at the ſame time wrote likewiſe to the Laity and Clergy of Rome, that Hildebrand being depos'd, he order'd them to turn him out of the Holy See, and to receive him in who had been elected in his Place. He ſent likewiſe Embaſſadors to the Chriſtian Kings and Princes, to prevail upon them to Recognize Clement, and to withdraw their Obedience from Gregory.

From Words they came at laſt on both ſides to Blows. The Pope, to make his party good againſt Henry, reconcil'd himſelf with Robert Guiſcard Duke of Pozzuolo, who promis'd him all Manner of Aſſiſtance and Obedience; and by way of Retaliation receiv'd the Inveſtiture of the Countries which he poſſeſs'd, with a permiſſion of enjoying (durante beneplacito) Salerno, Melpha, and part of the March of Fermo, which he had invaded. This Accommodation gave the Pope a Right of imploring his Aid by the Letter, which is the fifth of the eighth Book, dated July 21. Afterwards, to fall particularly on Guilbert, he nominates another Archbiſhop of Ravenna, declares he would come with the Aſſiſtance of the Normans of Pozzuolo to turn out Guilbert, and exhorts thoſe of Ravenna, Fermo, and Spoleto to abandon him, and to place him whom he had nominated, into Poſſeſſion of that Archbiſhoprick. Theſe are the ſeventh, twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth Letters of the eighth Book. He wrote likewiſe to the German Rebels, by the ninth Letter of the ſame Book, dated September 22. by which he exhorts them to behave themſelves like Men, and vindicate the Honor of the Church of Rome.

The Preparations of War between Henry and Gregory.

Henry for his part, proſecuted his deſign againſt the Saxons, with whom he had hitherto engag'd without Fortune's declaring her ſelf abſolutely on either ſide. But at laſt Octob. 15. in the ſame Year, there was a bloody Engagement between Henry and Radulphus. The Engagement was very ſharp on both ſides, and Radulphus ſeem'd to have the better of it, till ſuch time as being hot in the Engagement, he receiv'd a Wound in his Arm. This oblig'd him to retreat, and leave the Field to his Enemy: He was carry'd to Mersburg, where he dy'd within a ſhort time after, ſhewing a great deal of concern for having ſwerv'd from his Allegiance to his King. Henry entred Saxony, and made there great Havock, and upon his return re-took all Suabia.

Henry defeats Radulphus.

Gregory was the more concern'd for the Death of Radulphus, becauſe it expos'd him to the Mercy of Henry, who prepar'd to fall down into Italy. He had the Princeſs Matilda at his Devotion; but the Forces which ſhe had, were weak in Compariſon of Henry's. A great many adviſ'd him to adjuſt Matters with that Prince: But being reſolv'd to try his utmoſt before he came to that, he wrote to the Biſhop of Paſſaw, and to the Abbot Richenou, who ſtill held out againſt Henry; to learn of them, whether they were in a Capacity of giving him any Aſſiſtance, and exhorted them to chooſe inſtead of Radulphus, a King entirely devoted to the Intereſts of the Holy See, ſending them likewiſe the Form of an Oath, which he would have him take. He wrote likewiſe at the ſame time to the Abbot of Mount Caſſin, to deſire Aſſiſtance from Robert Guiſcard, and he himſelf deſir'd the ſame of that Prince, as appears by the eleventh and ſeventeenth Letters of the ſame Book.

Gregory VII.

In the mean time Henry after he had given neceſſary Orders for the Affairs of Germany, march'd into Italy in the Year, 1081. at the Head of any Army. He march'd directly to Rome without meeting any oppoſition, only when he came near that place he engag'd with the Forces of Matilda, which he quickly defeated. But the City of Rome ſhutting the Gates againſt him, he ravag'd and laid waſte all the adjacent Countries as he retreated to Lombardy. The next Year he return'd and laid Siege to that City, which he vigorouſly aſſaulted during all Lent: But Eaſter coming on, and the Heat being inſupportable, he quarter'd his Forces round about Rome, and return'd to Lombardy, leaving Guilbert at Tivoli to Command the Blockades. The next Campagn he return'd, and took the Town Leonina, where he caus'd Guilbert to be ordain'd, ſome ſay by the Biſhops of Modena and Rimini; others by the Biſhops of Bologne, Vincenza, and Cervia. Afterwards he carry'd on a vigorous Aſſault againſt the City. At this time the Romans being weary of ſo long a Siege, adviſ'd Gregory to call a Council to put an end to theſe diſaſters. Henry conſented to it, and promis'd to grant a free Paſs-port to all the Prelates, who ſhould come to that Synod. But he Arreſted by the way the Deputies of the German Rebels, and Otho Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia who came along with them. Notwithſtanding this, the Pope held that Council in November; and tho' his Affairs were ſo deſperate, yet they had much ado to prevent him from pronouncing a new Sentence of Excommunication againſt Henry, ſo full of Paſſion was he. He would not ſo much as hearken to an Accommodation, ſo that this Synod which laſted three Days, determin'd nothing, and was wholly taken up with Complaints and Invectives againſt Henry. In ſhort, the Romans perceiving themſelves very much incommoded by the Army of that Prince, and won over by the Mony he diſtributed among them, ſurrender'd the City to him the beginning of the Year, 1084. and Gregory fled into the Caſtle of St. Angelo, where he was beſieg'd by Henry. That Prince being Maſter of Rome, caus'd himſelf to be Crown'd Emperor by Guilbert on Eaſter-Day in the ſame Year. Gregory in this Exigency had recourſe to Robert Guiſcard, who return'd with all Expedition from Greece, (whither he had went to Fight the Emperor Alexis) in order to ſet the Pope at Liberty. Henry did not ſtay for his coming, whether it was for Fear that he was not ſtrong enough to oppoſe him, or rather becauſe the preſent State of his Affairs call'd him back again to Germany (for the German Rebels had elected in the Year, 1082. one Herman in the place of Radulphus) he left Rome, took Guilbert along with him, and re-paſs'd the Mountains, to go in all haſte to Germany. The Pope was ſtill beſieg'd by part of his Army, and by the Romans: But Robert Guiſcard rais'd the Siege; and having entred Rome in Triumph with his Army, he laid part of the City in Aſhes, and reſtor'd it to the Pope's Authority. Henry's Party was likewiſe worſted in Lombardy. In Germany that Prince laid Siege to the City of Augſburg, which the Rebels had ſeiz'd upon, and re-took it from them. Afterwards he made it his Buſineſs to puniſh thoſe who had declar'd againſt him, and turn'd thoſe Biſhops who had been his Adverſaries, out of their Churches.

Henry's Expedition into Italy, and the Siege of Rome.

Henry returns into Germany.

Gregory VII. is ſet at Liberty by the Romans.

The Year 1085. was more quiet, the two Parties being contented to have ſeveral Conferences, and to hold Conventions one againſt the other. There was one the beginning of the Year at Goſtat or Berchach, where Otho Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia appear'd. Tho' it chiefly conſiſted of thoſe of Herman's Faction, yet there came ſome of Henry's Deputies to maintain his Right. The Queſtion diſcuſs'd, was; Whether the Pope had a lawful Power to excommunicate King Henry, and deprive him of his Dominions. It was debated by Gebehard Archbiſhop of Salzburgh on the behalf of Herman, and by Wiceline, who had ſucceeded Sigefroy in the Archbiſhoprick of Mayence, on the behalf of Henry. The one ſtrongly maintain'd the Negative, the other the Affirmative: But each continu'd obſtinate in his Opinion, and nothing was determin'd in that Convention.

The Convention at Berchach.

There was another held after Eaſter at Quintilineburgh, in the Preſence, and by the Order of Herman, and the Cardinal of Oſtia, compos'd of Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and other Prelates and Lords of their Party, who began by determining that it was not lawful to Queſtion whether the Pope's Judgment were lawful or no, and that no Body could meddle with it. Gunibert Clerk of Bambergh, being willing to argue upon this Propoſition, was contradicted by the whole Aſſembly, and forc'd to withdraw. In this Convention, they declar'd the Ordination of Wiceline to the Archbiſhoprick of Mayence, that of Sigefroy to

The Convention at Quintilineburgh.

Gregory VII.

to the Bishoprick of Augsburg, that of Norbert to the Bishoprick of Chur or Coire, and in general all the Ordinations and Consecrations made by excommunicated Persons, to be null and void. They there condemn'd Wiceline, as one who maintain'd, that Laicks when dispossess'd of their Estates, could not be subject to the Judgment of the Ecclesiasticks, nor be excommunicated; and that those who were excommunicated for their Temporal Estates, might be receiv'd into Communion, without being reconcil'd. They there prohibited the receiving such into Communion, who had been excommunicated by their Bishops, unless they had receiv'd Absolution. They there renew'd the Law which enjoyn'd Celibacy to Priests, Deacons and Subdeacons. They prohibited Laicks from meddling with the consecrated Vessels or Coverings of the Chalice belonging to the Altar, and from possessing of Tenths. They order'd that the Ember-Week in the Spring should be observ'd the first Week in Lent; and That in Summer the Week after Whitsuntide; that no Person shall eat Eggs or Cheese during Lent. They there ratified and confirm'd all that Gebeberd Bishop of Constance had done as Legate of the Holy See. But there arose some Difficulty about the Legality of the Marriage of King Herman, who they said had married his Kinswoman. He said he would refer the Determination thereof to the Synod; but that Affair could not there be try'd, because there were not any of his Accusers. Lastly, They pronounc'd an Anathema, by lighted Candles, against Guilbert, whom they call'd Arch-Heretick and Intruder into the Holy See; and against Cardinal Hugh, John Bishop of Porto, Peter the Chancellor, Liemar Archbishop of Breme, Utho of Constance, Burchard of Basil, Husman of Spires; and against Wiceline Archbishop of Mayence, Sigefroy Bishop of Augsburg, Norbert of Coire and their Accomplices. This Decree is sign'd by Herman, by Cardinal Otho, by the Archbishops of Salzburgh, and Magdeburgh, by twelve Bishops of Germany, who were most of them ordain'd Bishops in the Room of those of King Henry's Party, who had been depos'd. For at that Time there were several Churches which had two Bishops; the one of King Henry's placing, and the other of the Pope's: And he of the two whose Party was most prevalent in the City, was in Possession.

The Convention at Mayence.

Henry soon reveng'd himself on this Convention, for in May he held another more numerous Convention at Mayence, at which assisted the Bishop of Porto, and two Priests of Rome, who took upon them the Character of the Legates of Clement III. the Archbishops of Mayence, of Treves, of Cologne and of Breme, twenty Bishops of Germany, and a great many other Bishops of France and Italy. Hildebrand, his Legate Otho, and his adherents were there condemned, together with the fourteen Prelates of the Assembly of Quintilineburgh, whom they depos'd, as being guilty of Perjury, Rebellion and Homicide. They excommunicated Herman, Eckbert of Saxony, and the Lord Welpho; prohibited all Christians from holding any Correspondence with them, and plac'd other Bishops in the Room of those who were of Herman's Party.

The Death of Gregory VII.

Whilst these Things pass'd in Germany, Gregory VII. not finding himself secure enough in Rome, because the Romans look'd upon him as the Cause of that Desolation which they endur'd; went to Mount Cassin, and from thence retir'd to Salerno, where he dy'd May 24*th*. of the Year 1085. Authors do not agree about what were the last Thoughts he had concerning his Difference with Henry. Some say, that he testified a great deal of Regret for what he had done; and others on the contrary tell us, That he continued fix'd in the same Mind to his very Last; and that he said, that he dy'd in Exile, because he had lov'd Justice and hated Iniquity. However the Case stood, 'tis plain that his Death did not put an End to that notorious Quarrel which he had rais'd, and which had drawn along with it such dreadful Consequences, as were the Cause of a World of Mischiefs, both to the Church and to the Empire, as we shall shew in the sequel; after we have done with that which relates to Gregory VII.

The Difference between Gregory VII. and Philip I. King of France.

The Emperor was not the only Person with whom Gregory VII. was engag'd; He had likewise Contests with the Kings of France and England, and his Aim was to bring all the crown'd Heads under his Subjection, and to oblige them to hold their Kingdoms as Fiefs from the Holy See, and to govern them at his Discretion.

Philip I. was then King of France: And since the Death of Baldwin, who had been Regent of the Kingdom during his Minority, he took the Government into his own Hands; but he administred it so remisly, that France was full of Disorders and Disturbances. The Churches, which have always greater Sufferings than other Societies, when Justice is not maintain'd in a State, were the first who were oppress'd. Gregory VII. who never slip'd an Opportunity of making himself the Judge and Reformer of Princes, cast several Reproaches upon him for it, and threatned to punish severely his unjust Proceedings against the Churches. The King assur'd him by Alberic, that he would reform his Conduct, and govern the Churches according to such Rules as his Holiness should prescribe him. Gregory who was not satisfied with empty Words, required that he would begin to demonstrate the Reality of his Promises, by permitting that the Archdeacon of Autun, elected Bishop of Mascon, after a long Vacancy, by the Clergy and People, and even by the Consent of the King, should be put into the Possession of that Church, without giving any Thing for it. To this Purpose he wrote to the Bishop of Chalons upon the Seyne, and to the Archbishop of Lyons: And at the same Time acquaints them, that in case the King should refuse to do what he desir'd, and would not permit the Churches of France to be supply'd with Bishops without Simony, he should be oblig'd to excommunicate all the French Nation, if they continu'd in their Allegiance to Philip. He likewise enjoyns the Archbishop of Lyons to ordain that Archdeacon Bishop of Mascon, what opposition soever he might meet with, either from the King, or the other Competitor. These two Letters are dated December 4*th*. 1073. and are the thirty fifth, and the thirty sixth of the first Book. The Bishops of France would not venture to ordain the Bishop of Mascon, whereupon the Pope ordain'd him himself, as he sent Word to the Archbishop of Lyons, by the seventy sixth Letter of the same Book, dated August the 4*th*. 1074. Two Days before, he had written expresly to King Philip, to oblige him to make reparation for the Wrong he had done the Church of Beauvais: And he had absolv'd those of that City, who had abus'd their Bishop. See the seventy fourth; and the seventy fifth Letters of the same Book.

Gregory VII.

That same Year Gregory VII. renew'd his Complaints and his Threatnings against Philip, with a great deal more Noise, by writing a large Letter to all the Bishops of France, wherein after he had given a Description of the Disorders of that Kingdom, he says that the King whom he ventures to call Tyrant, is the Author and Cause of all; because his whole Life being one continu'd Debauch, he took no Care to punish the Crimes, whereof he himself gave so bad an Example. That he not only converted the Revenues of Churches to profane and criminal Uses, but within a little while ago exacted a very considerable Sum of Merchants, who were come from all Parts, to import their Effects into France, under the publick Faith. He likewise accuses the Bishops of contributing to these Disorders, either by their Approbation or Connivance: He upbraids them for their Remisness, and exhorts them to meet, and to tell the King plainly of his Faults, that he may correct them, and regulate the Affairs of his Kingdom; and in his Name to declare, that if he does not do it, he can no longer shelter himself from the Censure of the Holy See: That afterwards they should separate themselves from Communion with that Prince, and forbear performing Divine Service in all France: That if he does still hold out, notwithstanding this Punishment, he would have the whole World take Notice, that he would use his utmost Endeavours to deprive him of the Kingdom of France. This Letter, dated Sept. the 10*th*. 1074. is the fifth of the second Book.

Sometime after he wrote likewise to William Duke of Aquitain, against King Philip, and pray'd that Duke to do all he could to bring the King to change his Conduct; declaring, that if he did not reform, he would excommunicate him and all the Subjects who paid him any Obedience; and that he would lay this Excommunication on St. Peter's Altar, in order to reiterate it every Day. This Letter dated November the 13*th*. of the same Year, is the eighteenth of the second Book.

He continu'd these Menaces in the two and thirtieth Letter of that Book, dated December the 8*th*. directed to Manasses Archbishop of Rheims.

The Judgments pass'd by Hugh Bishop of Dia.

However, it does not appear that Gregory has acted any Thing more against the Person of the King of France; but he took upon him the sole Jurisdiction over the Bishops and the Ecclesiastical Affairs of that Kingdom; and sent thither Hugh Bishop of Dia, with other Legates, who took Cognizance of the Life, Manners and Elections of the Bishops; took upon them the Liberty of citing them to the Synods, which they call'd; of passing Sentence upon them; of injoyning them Penance; and even of deposing them, in case they would not make their Appearance: And lastly, Of disposing absolutely the Affairs of that Kingdom, without minding whether the King concern'd himself with the defending of them, or with vindicating the Liberty of the Churches of France. So that these Bishops were oblig'd to go to Rome to beg the Pope's Favour for their Re-establishment, and upon such Terms as he saw fit; which Gregory did not scruple to grant them. There are a great many Instances of this Nature; and the seventeenth Letter of the fifth Book furnishes us with a great many. For Hugh Bishop of Dia having cited to a Synod, which he held at Autun, the Archbishops of Rheims, Besanson, Sens, Bourges and Tours, and having inflicted several Penalties upon them, because they had not made their Appearance; they were forc'd to wait upon the Pope, who absolutely re-establish'd the Archbishoprick of Rheims and the rest, upon Condition that they would clear themselves before his Legate. This is what he orders by the forementioned Letter, dated March the 9*th*. in the Year 1078. That Legate having excommunicated the Biſhops of Paris and Chartres, they went likewiſe to Rome, and obtain'd a favourable Sentence from the Pope. See the fifteenth and ſixteenth Letters of the ninth Book.

Gregory VII.

But Gregory was not ſatisfied with taking Cognizance of the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of France; he likewiſe endeavour'd to make them his Tributaries, as he had made England and all other Countries. 'Tis upon this Account that he wrote to the Biſhop of Albania, and the Prince of Salerno, his Legates in France, that they acquaint all the French, and enjoyn them in his Name, that each Houſe pay at leaſt a Penny every Year to St. Peter, as an Acknowledgment of his being their Father and Paſtor. He pretends that Charlemagne rais'd every Year upon his Subjects a Tax of twelve hundred Livers for the Uſe of the Church of Rome, and that he had offer'd Saxony to the Holy See. Theſe are two ſuch Matters of Fact as are only grounded on the Imagination of Gregory VII. This is the three and twentieth Letter of the eighth Book.

The Letters of Gregory relating to England.

This is what relates to the Kingdom of France; we now proceed to what concerns England, which met with a little better Treatment from Gregory; becauſe King William took care to ingratiate himſelf with him by a ſeeming Submiſſion and Reſpect. That Prince, to give him ſome Signs thereof, took care to ſend him a complimental Letter on his Advancement to the Popedom, wherein he declares to him, That tho' he was very ſorry for the Death of Alexander II. yet he was as glad to ſee him in his Place. Gregory anſwers him by the ſeventieth Letter of the firſt Book, dated April the 4*th*. 1074. wherein he tells him, That he is oblig'd to him for the Affection which he expreſs'd towards him; and exhorts him to demonſtrate the Submiſſion which he bore to the Holy See by its Effects. At the ſame Time he acquainted him of the Dangers to which the Church of Rome was expos'd. He confirm'd the Privilege of the Monaſtery of St. Stephen, and recommended to that Prince to take care of the Revenues which the Church of Rome poſſeſs'd in England. He wrote likewiſe to Matilda Queen of England the ſeventy firſt Letter, by which he exhorts her to perſevere in Virtue, and to give her Husband good Counſel.

By another Letter written to the Biſhops and Abbots of England, dated Auguſt the 28*th*. in the ſame Year, he exhorts them to come to Rome to his Synod, and to put in Execution the Eccleſiaſtical Laws concerning the Marriages of Kindred. This Letter is the firſt of the ſecond Book.

The King of England would not ſuffer the Biſhops of his Kingdom to go to Rome. This very much diſpleas'd the Pope, who complain'd of it by the firſt Letter of the ſeventh Book, directed to Hubert his Legate, who was ſent into that Kingdom to collect the Peter-Pence. He therein preſſes that Legate to return with all Speed, and orders him to admoniſh the King of England to pay, and cauſe to be paid the Deference which is due to the Holy See; withal threatning him, if he did not do it, he ſhould incur his Diſpleaſure. He orders him to prevail upon the Prelates of England and Normandy to ſend to Rome, to the approaching Synod, at leaſt two Biſhops out of each Archbiſhoprick. This Letters bears Date Sept. the 23*d*. 1079.

The three and twentieth, and the four and twentieth Letters of the ſame Book, dated April the 25*th*. and May the 8*th*. in the Year 1080. are full of Exhortations to the King of England, to bear a due Submiſſion to the Church of Rome, and to govern his Kingdom with Juſtice, and in the Fear of the Lord. The ſix and twentieth is a Letter of Compliment to the Queen of England; and the ſeven and twentieth a Letter to Robert, the Son of the King of England, whereby he exhorts him to be ſubject to his Father, and to follow his Advice.

In the fifth Letter of the ninth Book, he order'd Hugh Biſhop of Die to reſtore the Biſhops of Normandy, which he had depos'd, for not appearing at his Synod. This he did that he might not exaſperate King William, who paid greater Deference to the Holy See, than any other Prince. And he order'd him to behave himſelf more tenderly towards that Prince's Subjects, and to grant Abſolution to the Soldiers which had kept back ſome Tithes.

The Pretenſions of Gregory upon Spain.

Part of Spain being (as we ſaid before) in the Hands of the Moors, Gregory VII. from thence took an Occaſion of becoming Lord of thoſe Countries, which could be taken from theſe Infidels. To this Purpoſe he pretended that the Kingdom of Spain formerly belong'd to the Holy See; and that tho' the Pagans had ſince ſeiz'd upon it, yet the Right of the Holy See was not thereby diſannul'd; becauſe no Preſcription can take Place to the Prejudice of the Church. 'Tis upon the Account of this Pretenſion, that he granted to Ebold Count of Rocey, all the Country which he could recover from the Barbarians, upon Condition that he would hold it in Fee from the Holy See, and pay him a certain Duty. He likewiſe granted the ſame Donation to thoſe who would aſſiſt that Count, or undertake the ſame Thing upon the ſame Conditions. And that this Agreement might be put in Execution, he gave Orders to Cardinal Hugh the White to go into Spain, and wrote to the Princes of Spain to aid the Count of Rocey. This is the Subject Matter of the ſixth and ſeventh Letters of the firſt Book, dated April the 30*th*. 1073. Gregory VII.

Gregory VII. had not only a Deſign of bringing the Provinces of Spain, which were newly conquer'd, under his Subjection, but likewiſe ſought to eſtabliſh an abſolute Dominion over the ancient Churches of that Kingdom. It was upon this Account that he wrote the ſixty third and fourth Letters of the firſt Book to Sancho King of Arragon, and to Alphonſo King of Caſtile, recommending to them the Submiſſion which they ought to bear to the Holy See, and to order the Roman Office to be receiv'd in their Kingdoms. Theſe two Letters are dated March the 19*th*. and 20*th*. 1074. He wrote upon the ſame Subject to Simeon a Biſhop of that Kingdom, by the eighteenth Letter of the third Book.

In the eighth and twentieth of the fourth Book, directed to the Kings and Princes of Spain, he renews the Pretenſions which the Holy See made to that Country, as being a Kingdom which belong'd to it before the Saracens were Maſters thereof; and exhorts them to pay the Tribute which he pretended was due from them to the Church of Rome. This Letter is dated June the 28*th*. 1077.

The ſixth Letter of the ſeventh Book, dated in October 1079. is directed to Alphonſo King of Caſtile, whom he compliments for his good Intentions towards the Holy See, ſending him a ſmall golden Key with St. Peter's Chain affixt to it, by a Legate whom he recommended to him.

Some Time after that Prince, hearkening to the Advice of a Monk nam'd Robert, would no longer be ſo ſubject to the Pope as he had been, and openly took upon him to grant the Inveſtitures of the Benefices in his Kingdom. This provok'd Gregory very much: He excommunicated Robert, and order'd him to be confin'd in the Monaſtery of Cluny. He wrote to Alphonſo, willing him, To hearken no longer to his Counſels; to make Reparation for the Ill he had done; to part from the Relation of his Wife, whom he had marry'd, and to do what Richard his Legate ſhould adviſe him. See the ſecond, third, and fourth Letters of the eighth Book, which are dated in the Year 1080.

That Prince very probably ſubmitted to the Counſels of Gregory: For by the ſecond Letter of the ninth Book, the Pope wrote to him, as to a Prince entirely devoted to the Holy See; who had introduc'd the Service of the Church of Rome into his Dominions; who refer'd the Choice of the Archbiſhops of his Kingdom to the Pope; and who ask'd his Advice upon ſome Caſes of Conſcience, and upon what concern'd the Churches of Spain. Gregory by this Letter admoniſhes him, not to tolerate the Jews to have Chriſtian Slaves, and grants Abſolution to him and his Adherents of all their Sins, and wiſhes them an abſolute Victory over all their Enemies.

The Pretenſions of Gregory to the Kingdom newly converted.

Spain was not the only Kingdom of Europe which Gregory VII. pretended did formerly belong to the Holy See; he maintain'd the ſame Pretenſion with Reſpect to moſt of the other Countries of Europe; and was of Opinion, that thoſe who were in Poſſeſſion of them, ought to hold them as Fiefs from him. He more eſpecially carry'd this Pretenſion to the moſt remote Countries whoſe Kings were newly converted to the Chriſtian Religion. This he grounded upon the Account that theſe Princes, at the Time of their Converſion, had either remitted their Crowns into the Hands of the Pope to receive them again from him, or thrown their Kingdoms under the Protection of the Holy See. Or laſtly, permitted the Raiſing of a certain Contribution for the Church of Rome. He eſtabliſh'd upon theſe Demonſtrations of Submiſſion, and upon theſe Alms or Liberalities, a certain Tribute to be paid to the Holy See. 'Tis upon this Principle that he took it ill that Solomon King of Hungary had receiv'd that Kingdom from the Hands of King Henry: Becauſe (as he pretended) Stephen formerly after his Converſion had offer'd and given it to the Holy See; and the Emperor Henry after he had conquer'd it, had ſent to Rome its Lance and its Crown: From whence he concludes that he ought to receive the Scepter from his Hands, and threatens him, if he did it not, he would make uſe of the Apoſtolick Authority againſt him. This is the Subject of the thirteenth Letter of the ſecond Book, directed to that Prince, dated October the 28*th*. 1074. Gregory wrote likewiſe a conſolatory Letter to Queen Judith his Wife, who was the Daughter of the Emperor Henry; it is the four and fortieth of the ſecond Book, dated June the 10*th*. 1075.

The Pretenſions of Gregory to Hungary.

Solomon had a Kinſman nam'd Geiſa, who was at War with him. This Geiſa ſent Ambaſſadors to Gregory, to gain him on his Side. The Pope by his Letters expreſs'd Kindneſs to him, and exhorts him to be entirely devoted to the Holy See; aſſuring him that his Kinſman [Solomon] had not faln into the Misfortunes he labour'd under, if he had receiv'd the Crown from the Holy See, and not from the Hands of the King of Germany. He adviſes him to make Peace with Solomon; withal giving him ſome Hopes that he would enter into his Intereſts, ſo ſoon as he was aſſur'd what what Overtures he would make to the Holy See. You may conſult the fifty eighth Letter of the firſt Book, and the ſixty third and ſeventieth of the ſecond.

Gregory VII.

In the five and twentieth of the fourth Book, he exhorts the Archbiſhop of Strigonia to bring it about, that he who is elected King of Hungary, ſhould be made ſenſible of the Duty he ow'd to the Holy See. It bears Date June 9th. 1077.

In the nine and twentieth of the ſixth Book, he extols the Piety of King Ladiſlaus, and his Submiſſion to the Holy See. He recommends to him ſeveral Perſons who were unjuſtly baniſh'd, and exhorts him to take the Churches into his Protection; and to ſend him forthwith Embaſſadors, if he had not already done it.

The Letters of Gregory to the Kings of Denmark.

All the Kings of Europe receiv'd either Reprimands or Admonitions from Gregory. The King of Denmark had neglected to write to him in the Beginning of his Pontificate; he checks him for it in the fiftieth Letter of the ſecond Book, and gives him ſome Inſtructions about the Government of his Kingdom. He tells him likewiſe, that he had ſent him Legates upon the Affairs about which he had written to the Holy See, in the Time of Pope Alexander: But that they could not get to him, becauſe of the Wars of Germany. That therefore if he were deeply concern'd for any one of theſe Affairs, he ought to ſend Deputies to him with full Inſtructions, that ſo he might conſult with them what ought to to be done in the Caſe. Laſtly, He prays him to ſend Word what Aſſiſtance the Holy See could expect from him, againſt her Enemies; and acquaints him that there is a Province not far from Rome, held by Hereticks, which one of his Sons, if he would come into Italy with a ſmall Force, might eaſily Conquer. This Letter bears Date January the 27*th.* in the Year 1075. In the ſeventy ſeventh Letter of the ſame Book, he offers to grant that King, all that in Juſtice he could, of the Things which he ſhould deſire of him by his Envoys, or by the Legates which were diſpatch'd to his Kingdom. This Letter is dated April the 17*th.* in the ſame Year. That King being dead, and his Son ſucceeding him, Gregory VII. continues his Exhortations to him, to be ſubmiſſive to the Holy See, by the tenth Letter of the fifth Book, dated November the 6*th.* in the Year 1077. He likewiſe gave the like Exhortation to King Canute, who was in Poſſeſſion of that Kingdom, by the fifth Letter of the ſeventh Book, dated October the 15*th.* 1079. and by the one and twentieth of the ſame Book, dated May the 19*th.* 1080.

The Letters of Gregory ſent to Poland and Ruſſia.

The Sovereigns of Poland and Ruſſia felt likewiſe the Effects of the Deſire which Gregory VII. had to have an Hand in the Affairs of all Kingdoms. He recommended to them, as well as to others, the being devoted to the Holy See, and wedded to its Intereſts; gave them Inſtructions about the Methods of adminiſtring the Government; ſent them Legates to regulate the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of their Countries: Enjoyns Boleſlaus Duke of Poland, to reſtore to Demetrius King of Ruſſia, the Money which he had taken from him; and to the Holy See, the Lands which belong'd to it; and undertook to beſtow the Kingdom of Ruſſia, on the Son of Demetrius. This is what we gather from the ſeventy third and fourth Letters of the ſecond Book, the firſt of which, directed to Boleſlaus, is dated April the 15*th.* in the Year 1075. and the ſecond, directed to Demetrius, bears Date the 17*th.* of the ſame Month.

The Letters of Gregory ſent to Norway and Dalmatia.

Gregory VII. was no leſs careful even of Norway; for he wrote to Olaus the King of that Country, exhorting him to get himſelf fully inſtructed in the Chriſtian Faith, and for that End to ſend ſome of his Nation to Rome, that he might ſend him back neceſſary Inſtructions, how he ought to demean himſelf towards the Holy See. He forbids him ſiding with either of the two Brothers, who pretended to the Crown of Denmark, and orders him to procure a Peace to be made between them. This Letter, which is the thirteenth of the ſixth Book, is dated December the 15*th.* 1079.

He gave a King to Dalmatia; and a Lord of that Country intending to riſe up in Arms againſt him, he enjoyns that Lord to acknowledge and obey him, under Pain of Excommunication, by the fourth Letter of the ſeventh Book, dated October the 4*th.* in the Year 1079.

The Letters of Gregory concerning Bohemia.

Uratiſlaus Duke of Bohemia, was intirely in Pope Gregory the VIIth's Intereſt. He had admitted into his Dominions the Pope's Legates, in Spight of Jeromir Biſhop of Prague, as appears by the ſeventeenth Letter of the firſt Book. In a grateful Acknowledgment of this, the Pope confirm'd to him, by the eighth and thirtieth Letter of the ſame Book, dated Dec. the 16*th.* 1073. all the Privileges which had been granted him by Alexander II. his Predeceſſor, and exhorts him to perſevere in his Obedience; aſſuring him that he himſelf will determine ſuch Cauſes, as his Legates could not paſs a definitive Judgment upon.

The Biſhop of Prague, who had been interdicted and diveſted of the Revenues of his Church by the Sentence of the Pope's Legates, having ſent Word to Rome that he could not come thither, becauſe he had not wherewithal to defray the Charge of his Journey; the Pope gave Orders that he ſhould be put into Poſſeſſion of his Revenues, except thoſe to which John Biſhop of Moravia laid Claim: And he deſires the Duke of Bohemia, by the five and fortieth Letter of the firſt Book, dated Jan. the 30*th.* in the Year 1074. to cauſe them to be reſtor'd to that Biſhop, and to ſend him to Rome, with the Biſhop of Moravia and ſome Embaſſadors, that with them he might regulate all the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of his Dominions. By another Letter of the ſame Date, which is the four and fortieth of the Book, he acquaints the Biſhop of Prague, that he had written to the Duke to put him in ſome Poſſeſſion of the Revenues of his Church.

Gregory VII.

Sigefroy Archbiſhop of Maience, at the Inſtance of Jeromir Biſhop of Prague, who was afraid of the Pope's Judgment, was minded to take Cognizance of the Difference between him and the Biſhop of Moravia. Gregory being advertis'd thereof, wrote forthwith to Sigefroy, that he ſhould not dare to concern himſelf in an Affair, which was referr'd to the Holy See, and at the ſame Time he ſent Word to Uratiſlaus, that he ſhould not be concern'd at the raſh Proceedings of that Archbiſhop. Theſe two Letters dated March the 18*th.* 1074. are the ſixtieth and ſixty firſt of the firſt Book.

At laſt the Biſhop of Prague perceiving that he could no longer ſhift off the Pope's Sentence, went expreſs to Rome, and when he appear'd before Gregory, he acknowledg'd Part of what was laid to his Charge, declaring that he was ready to make Satisfaction; and juſtified himſelf with Reſpect to other Things, particularly as to the ill Uſage which was ſaid that he offer'd to the Biſhop of Moravia, or his People. The Pope who requir'd nothing more than ſuch a Submiſſion, ſent him back to his own Country reconcil'd and reeſtabliſh'd, with a Recommendatory Letter to the Duke of Bohemia, which is the ſeventy eighth of the firſt Book, dated April the 16*th.* 1074. wherein he takes Notice to him, that he could not put an End to the Difference between that Biſhop and the Biſhop of Moravia, becauſe of the Abſence of the latter; but that he would decide it in the firſt Council: That in the mean Time he allow'd Proviſion to be made in Behalf of the Biſhop of Moravia for the Territory that was in Diſpute. He adviſes the Duke to ſilence the Complaints of the Biſhop of Prague, concerning the Right which he pretended to have to a certain Caſtle; if not, he orders him to ſend his Deputies to the firſt Synod, to examine whether he has any Right to it, or no.

The Biſhop of Prague being return'd to his own Country in Triumph for his Re-eſtabliſhment, ſeiz'd upon the Lands which were in Diſpute between him and the Biſhop of Moravia, being confident that the Pope had adjudged them to be his. Gregory being inform'd that he thus abus'd the Levity he had ſhewn him, wrote him a Letter full of Invectives about it, and enjoyns him to reſtore to the Biſhop of Moravia the Caſtle which he had ſeiz'd on; and orders Duke Uratiſlaus to cauſe him to reſtore it to the Biſhop, whom he comforts in a particular Letter. Theſe three Letters are the ſixth, ſeventh, and eighth of the ſecond Book, dated October the 22*d.* in the Year 1074. In the ſecond Letter he thanks the Duke of Bohemia, for having ſent him the Tribute which he paid to the Holy See. This Affair between the Biſhops of Prague and Moravia was again diſcuſs'd in the Year 1075. and ended at Rome by an Agreement between them, by which they agreed to divide into equal Shares the Lands which were in Diſpute, till either of them could produce more authentick Titles; which they continu'd to do for the Space of ten Years. And this Accomodation was approv'd of by a Bull of Gregory, dated March the 2*d.* which is the fifty third Letter of the ſecond Book.

The ſeventy firſt Letter of the ſecond Book, is written to Uratiſlaus, in Favour of his Nephew Frederick, for whom the Pope demands of that Prince the Lands which his Father had left him. At the ſame Time he exhorts him to live peaceably with his Subjects. This Letter is dated April the 14*th.* 1075. By the next Letter written the Day after, he exhorts all the Faithful of Bohemia to lead a Chriſtian and Innocent Life.

The Pretenſions of Gregory to Italy.

Since Gregory VII. had Pretenſions to Kingdoms ſo remote as thoſe we have been ſpeaking of, it is not to be wondred that he ſhould imagine that all Italy, and the Iſlands of Sicily, Sardinia and Corfu belong'd to him; that he might diſpoſe of them as he thought fit; and that all the Lords of theſe Countries were oblig'd to take an Oath of Allegiance to him. It was no difficult Matter for him to bring the petty Princes round about Rome under his Subjection; becauſe being weak, they deſir'd nothing more, than the Support of the Holy See: But he had much ado to bring his Deſigns about upon the Normans, whoſe Power became formidable in Italy, foraſmuch as they were eſtabliſh'd ſo firmly there, as we ſhall now relate.

The Conqueſts of the Normans in Italy.

Several Norman Lords having been invited to the Relief of the Greeks and Italians againſt the Sarazens of Sicily, upon Condition that they ſhould have Share in their Conqueſts; after they had done wonderful Things againſt theſe Infidels, were dealt falſly with by the Greeks, who refus'd to give them what they had promis'd. But theſe Bravoes knew very well how to do themſelves Juſtice, and ſeiz'd on Pozzuolo under the Conduct of William Firebraſs their General, who in a ſhort Time after defeated the Greeks in a great Engagement, and weaken'd them ſo far, that in a ſmall Time they loſt all that they had left in Italy. The Normans afterwards turn'd their Arms againſt the Lords of Italy their Neighbours, and ſeiz'd upon ſome Lands which belong'd to the Holy See. The Popes, who could not without Jealouſie behold ſo formidable an Enemy ſo nigh at Hand, declar'd againſt them, and Leo IX. engag'd in a War with them: But the Forces of that Pope having been defeated, and himſelf taken Priſoner, as we formerly ſaid, that Reſpect which they ſhew'd him, by ſetting him at Liberty, and reconducting him to Rome with all the Demonſtrations of Honour and Submiſſion, inclin'd that Pope to grant them by Way of Recompence, all the Lands which they had conquer'd from the Greeks and Sarazens. Robert Guiſcard, in League with Onfroy, Brother to William Firebraſs, extended theſe Conqueſts, and having made an End of taking Calabria, caus'd himſelf to be call'd Count thereof for the Space of two Years, and afterwards took upon him the Title of Duke. His Brother Roger undertook to conquer Sicily from the Sarazens, and having at firſt taken Panorma and Meſſina, he open'd himſelf a Way to become Maſter of the whole Iſland, of which he took upon him the Quality of Count.

Gregory VII.

The Differences and Agreement of Gregory with the Normans.

It was very difficult for theſe Warriers to forbear conteſting with the Lords their Neighbours; and their Forces who were uſed to Plunder, could not forbear ſeizing upon the Lands, Caſtles, and Territories of private Perſons; upon Churches, upon Abbies; and even upon the Holy See it ſelf. This was the Cauſe of the many Anathemas thunder'd out againſt them by Gregory, who from the very Beginning of his Popedom excommunicated Robert, Roger, and all the Normans who made any Attempts upon the Revenues of Churches, or of the Holy See, or upon thoſe Lords who were under its Protection. But afterwards foreſeeing that he might ſtand in Need of their Aſſiſtance, he grew milder, and by his Letter dated March the 13*th*. 1076. which is the eleventh of the third Book, he grants the Biſhop of Cirenza Power to abſolve Roger and all his Soldiers, upon Condition that he would promiſe to obey the Holy See; do Penance for his Offences, and abſtain for the Future from all capital Crimes. At the ſame Time he adviſ'd that Biſhop, that if Count Roger ſhould ſpeak to him about his Brother Duke Robert, he ſhould declare to him, that the Church of Rome was ready to ſhew Mercy to thoſe who being affected with true Repentance, would give Satisfaction for the Scandal, which they had given: That therefore if Duke Robert would be obedient to the Holy See, he was ready to give him Abſolution, and to receive him into the Communion of the Church: But that if he would not, Roger ought not to communicate with him: Laſtly, he order'd that Biſhop to give the Biſhop of Melpha Abſolution. In the fifteenth Letter of the ſame Book to Wifroy, Lord of the Milanois, he ſends Word that the Affairs of the Normans were in a hopeful Way of Accommodation, and that he hoped ſhortly to render them faithful to the Church of Rome. However this Accommodation was not ſo ſoon concluded; and we ſee by a Letter dated October the 31*ſt*. of the ſame Year, directed to the ſame Wifroy and to two other Lords of the ſame Country, that the Normans were ſtill conteſting with the Pope about the Revenues of the Church, which they had ſeiz'd upon; but that he hop'd to reclaim them as ſoon as Henry. This Letter is the ſeventh of the fourth Book.

At laſt Robert thought fit to ſubmit to the Pope, to take an Oath to him to be always faithful to the Holy See; to aſſiſt it in the Defence of the Pope's Perſon and its Revenues; to pay him an annual Rent for the Church Lands which he held; to permit the Churches of his Dominions to enjoy quietly their Revenues, and to procure a free Election of a Pope, in Caſe Gregory ſhould dy before him. This Rent amounts to twelve Pence, the Coyn of Pavia, payable every Year at Eaſter. In Purſuance of this Treaty, the Pope inveſted Duke Robert with all the Lands which the Popes Nicholas II. and Alexander II. his Predeceſſors had formerly granted him: And as to others which he unjuſtly held; to wit, Salerno, Melpha, and Part of the March of Fermo, he left them to him by Way of Connivance. This Treaty was made June the 29*th*. in the Year 1080.

In the ſame Year Michael Ducas being turn'd out of the Empire of the Eaſt, ſent into Italy to beg Aſſiſtance of the Pope and Duke Robert. The Pope wrote to the Biſhops of Pozzuolo and Calabria, by the ſixth Letter of the eighth Book, deſiring them to exhort the Faithful to engage in this Expedition with Duke Robert; and before they went away, to enjoyn them Penance for their Faults, and to give them Abſolution.

Gregory ſoon after had himſelf need of the Aſſiſtance of Robert, to protect him againſt Henry. Whereupon he wrote to the Abbot of Mount Caſſin, to know of him whether he could bring him any Aſſiſtance about Eaſter, or ſend him ſome. This is the Subject Matter of the fourth Letter of the ninth Book, which doubtleſs belongs to the Year 1083.

Henry at his coming into Italy, wiſely foreſeeing that the greateſt Enemy he had to fear was Duke Robert, propos'd to come to an Accommodation with him, upon Condition that his Son ſhould marry that Duke's Daughter, and give him the March of Ancona. The Pope being inform'd of this Propoſal, by the Princeſs Matilda, was very much ſurpriz'd at it, and forthwith wrote to Didier Abbot of Mount Caſſin, to prevail upon Robert to keep his Word to him. This is the Subject Matter of the eleventh Letter of the ninth Book. Gregory VII.

By the ſeventeenth of the ſame Book, written to that Duke, he exhorts him to come to the Aſſiſtance of the Church of Rome, which was annoy'd by King Henry.

In the mean Time, whilſt Robert was in the Eaſt with all his Forces, the Normans of Italy perceiving that Henry was like to become Maſter of Rome, and being afraid what the Conſequence would prove to them, endeavour'd to bring about the Peace between the Pope and the Emperor, and ſent Didier Abbot of Mount Caſſin, with the Prince of Capua, and ſeveral Deputies to Henry, to treat with him. But neither the Pope nor the Emperor were inclinable to it; and the latter receiv'd ſome Money from the Emperor of Conſtantinople to carry on the War againſt Robert. That Duke underſtanding this, and being ſent for by the Pope, left his Son in the Eaſt, and immediately return'd to Italy to the Pope's aſſiſtance, whom he relieved, as we formerly have declar'd.

The Pretenſions of Gregory to Sardinia and Corſu.

Gregory VII. was likewiſe willing to make the Iſlands of Corſu and Sardinia his Tributaries. For Part of the former having been retaken by the Chriſtians from the Sarazens, he immediately ſent a Legate thither to govern abſolutely, and promis'd them Succours to conquer the reſt; upon Condition that this Iſland ſhould be dependent on the Holy See. This appears by the ſecond and fourth Letters of the fifth Book, dated Sept. the 1*ſt*. and 16*th*. in the Year 1077. He afterwards beſtow'd this Legation on Landulphus Biſhop of Piſa, and his Succeſſors, with one Moiety of the Revenues of that Iſland, reſerving the other Moiety for the Holy See, together with all the Fortreſſes, whoſe Governors however he was willing ſhould ſtill be dependent on that Legate, as appears by the twelfth Letter of the ſixth Book, dated November the 30*th*. in the Year 1079.

With Reſpect to Sardinia, he was ſo ſtrongly perſuaded that it belong'd to the Holy See, that writing to the Sovereign of that Iſland, he ſhew'd that Prince what a Piece of Service he [the Pope] had done, in having refus'd to give it to the Normans and Lombards, who had demanded it of him, tho' they offer'd him the Moiety of their Conqueſts; till ſuch Time as he ſhould ſee after what Manner that Prince would receive the Pope's Legate, and how he was inclin'd to the Holy See. By this Means he ſuppos'd, that if that Prince would not be ſubject to the Holy See, he was ſo far the Diſpoſer of his Eſtates, as to give them to whom he pleas'd. This is the Subject of the tenth Letter of the eighth Book, dated October the 5*th*. 1080.

The Oath of Fidelity exacted by Gregory from the Princes of Italy.

After all this, 'tis no wonder, that he ſhould treat all the Lords near Rome, as his Vaſſals, and exact from them Oaths of Fidelity. We have one made by Landulphus, Duke of Benevento, by which he engages himſelf to forfeit his Dutchy, if he fail'd in his Duty to the Holy See, or to Gregory and his Succeſſors, and if he did any Wrong to the Church of Rome or its Members. This Treaty ſign'd by the Biſhops of Porto, Freſcati, Paleſtrina, by Didier and Peter, Cardinals of the Church of Rome, is in the firſt Book of Gregory's Letters, after the eighteenth, and is dated Auguſt the 11*th*. in the Year 1073.

He alſo exacted the like Oath from Richard Duke of Capua, by which that Prince was engag'd to enter into no League againſt the Pope, upon all Occaſions to defend the Revenues and Rights of the Church of Rome, and of his Holineſs; to make no Pillage on its Territories, and to ſuffer no Body elſe to do it; to pay yearly the Rent which he ow'd for the Lands which he held in St. Peter's Patrimony; to be faithful to King Henry, and his Succeſſors; yet without Prejudice to the Fidelity he ows to the Holy See: And laſtly, that whenever the Pope ſhould die, he ſhould do his utmoſt to get him to be elected and ordain'd Pope, who ſhould have the Suffrages of the major Part of the Cardinals, Clergy, and Laity. This Oath dated Sept. the 24*th*. 1073. is after the one and twentieth Letter of the firſt Book.

There is another Oath of this Nature taken by Bertram Count of Provence, after the twelfth Letter of the ninth Book.

The Project of the CROISADE ſet on Foot by Gregory.

Laſtly, Gregory VII. not willing to omit any one Means of aggrandizing the Church of Rome, had reſolv'd upon a CROISADE, to go into the Eaſt at the Head of an Army, to aſſiſt the Chriſtians, and to fall upon the Infidels. Big with this Deſign he wrote to William Count of Burgundy, by the ſix and fortieth Letter of the firſt Book, dated Feb. the 2*d*. in the Year 1074, ordering him to be ready, and to give Notice to his Allies, to furniſh him with Forces, that ſo he might, after he had reduc'd the Normans of of Pozzuolo to their Duty, march directly with an Army to Constantinople, and relieve the Christians of the East.

Gregory VII.

By the nine and fortieth Letter of the same Book, dated March ensuing, he exhorts all the Christians of the West to unite together for the Relief of the Christians of the East against the Infidels. He did the same Thing by the seven and thirtieth Letter of the second Book, which bears date the 16*th*. of December of the same Year.

This Project of Gregory had not that Success which he desir'd: But he engag'd Duke Robert to lead an Army into the East, under Colour of placing Michael Ducas again upon the Throne of the Eastern Empire. This Duke gave Battle to the Emperor Alexis in Thrace, and became Master of the Field, tho' the Enemy were much superior in Number. The Difficulties which the Pope's Affairs labour'd under, and the War with the Emperor Henry prevented that Duke from pursuing his Conquests in the East, and from extending the Limits of the Roman Church, and the Authority of the Holy See by his Victories: The which Gregory had attempted in vain, by the way of Accommodation, in sending to the Emperor Michael (who had writ to him, and made Proposals on his part for the Re-union of the two Churches) Dominick Patriarch of Venice, to treat with him viva voce concerning this Peace; and in remonstrating to that Emperor, by his Answer, that the Division which had been between the Roman and the Greek Church, had done great Prejudice to the Affairs of the Holy See, and the Empire of the East. This Letter is the eighteenth of the first Book, dated June the 9*th*. 1073.

The Letters of Gregory VII. sent into Africk.

Gregory VII. was no less Sollicitous about the Churches of Africa; and having understood that the Christians of Carthage, tho' persecuted by the Sarazens, quarrell'd among themselves, and that some of them had betray'd Cyriacus their Archbishop into the Hands of those Infidels, who had very much abused him: He wrote a neat Letter to the Clergy and Faithful of that City, whereby he exhorts them to suffer patiently the Persecution of the Sarazens, and to live in Peace and Unity one with another; and after he had in a very lively manner represented to them the Enormity of the Offence committed in betraying Cyriacus, he exhorts them who were guilty of it, to do Penance. This Letter dated September the 15. 1073. is the two and twentieth of the first Book.

In the next Letter of the same date, he comforts that good Bishop, extolls his Constancy, and exhorts him to rejoyce in his Sufferings, and to persevere in the Faith; assuring him that he would continually offer up his Prayers to God, that he would be pleas'd to look down with an Eye of Pity and Compassion upon the Church of Africa, which has so long groan'd under the Pressures of Persecution and Distress.

Some time after the Church of Africa being reduc'd to the Government only of two Bishops, the Africans were oblig'd to send one Servandus to Rome, whom they had elected Bishop of Hippo, to be ordain'd by the Pope. Gregory ordain'd him, and sent him away with Recommendatory Letters directed to the Archbishop of Carthage, to the People of Hippo, and to Anzir King of Mauritania. These are the three last Letters of the third Book, and belong to the Year, 1076.

The Letters of Gregory VII. against the Errors charged upon the Armenians.

In the first Letter of the eighth Book directed to the Archbishop of Synnada Patriarch of the Armenians, dated June the 6*th*. in the Year, 1080. Gregory reproves several Errors, or rather several Practices contrary to the Discipline of the Church, wherewith the Armenians were charged: Namely, That in their Churches they did not mix Water with the Wine in the Celebration of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass; that they made the Holy Chrism with Butter, and not with Balsome; and that they had a regard to the Memory of Dioscorus. The Deputy of the Archbishop of Synnada, who was come to cause an Armenian Heretick, who was fled to Italy, to be driven thence, had assur'd the Pope that all these Things were only groundless Surmises: But for his better Satisfaction Gregory desires that that Archbishop would inform him by Writing what were his Thoughts, and send him a Profession of Faith. At the same Time he advises him to leave out these Words in the TRISAGION, who was crucified for us, because they were not us'd in any other Church of the East, no more than they were in the Church of the West, and because they might be perverted to an ill Sense. He commends the Practice of their Churches in making use of Unleaven'd Bread, and Fortifies them against the Objections of the Greeks.

As to the Churches of the West, we may safely say that Pope Gregory VII. govern'd almost all of them, as if they belong'd to his own Diocess, either by sending to them his Legates a Latere; or by nominating Vicars to them; or by citing the Bishops to Rome, to give an account of their Conduct; or by confirming or approving their Elections; or by receiving the Appeals of their Decisions; or by admitting the Complaints of their Diocesans; or by appointing Judges upon the Place; or by deciding several Points of Discipline: In a Word, by having an hand in the particulars of all that happen'd in the Churches of Europe.

Gregory VII.

Legates sent by Gregory VII. to several Parts.

In the first place as to Legates, 'tis certain that nothing conduc'd more to establishing the absolute Authority of the Popes, than the sending Legates a Latere to reside upon the Spot. At first the Popes were satisfied with nominating the Bishops of the Country for their Vicars, or for their Legates, and granted them a Commission to call Councils, and to act in their Names; But for as much as these Prelates might have particular Interests to carry on, and were not entirely devoted to the Will and Pleasure of the Popes, the Court of Rome thought it more advisable to send upon the Places Legates who were Strangers, with full Commission of calling Councils, of making Rules of Discipline, of judging Priests, and even Bishops themselves; of excommunicating those whom they thought fit, upon Condition that they would return a faithful Account of all their Proceedings to the Pope; and provided that those who thought themselves injur'd by their Decisions, might come Personally to Rome, to complain to the Pope himself. By this Means the Holy See judg'd the same Cause twice over, and kept all the World in Awe. For those who had been Condemn'd by the Legates, hoping to meet with kinder Usage from the Pope, went to Rome in the Nature of Suppliants and Penitents, and seldom fail'd of clearing themselves, or of receiving their Absolution; which on the one side, advanc'd the Authority of the Holy See, and on the other, made them its Creatures. This Custom of sending Legates a Latere into the Provinces, began to prevail in the foregoing Century, and became very common in this, especially in Italy, and France: However, it met at first with some Opposition in Germany, where they maintain'd that no other Legate of the Holy See ought to be acknowledg'd beside the Archbishop of Mayence; but Gregory VII. play'd his Part so well as to introduce it there. In the Church of France, the Archbishop of Rheims pretended, by virtue of his Privileges, to be exempt from the Jurisdiction of the Legates, at least of those who were not Romans, and were immediately come from Rome; and for this Reason would not appear before Hugh Bishop of Die and the Abbot of Cluny, whom Gregory had nominated to be his Legates in France. But the Pope sent him word by the second Letter of the sixth Book, dated August 22*d*. 1078. that the Holy See had always a Liberty of sending Legates immediately from Rome, or of nominating those who liv'd upon the Place, or of taking them whence it pleas'd. England maintain'd its Right much longer, and rejected Foreign Legates; for we read in the History of Eadmerus, that Pope Urban Successor to Gregory VII. having sent in the Year, 1100. Guy Archbishop of Vienna as Legate of the Holy See to England, all the Kingdom was startled at this Legation, which was look'd upon as a dangerous Innovation, because it was too well known, that there could be no other Vicar of the Holy See in England, beside the Archbishop of Canterbury; that thereupon the Archbishop of Vienna return'd just as he came, without having been acknowledg'd by any one as Legate, and without doing any Thing in that Quality.

Gregory VII. who himself had been Legate in France, had no Mind to abrogate this Custom; on the contrary, the first Thing he did after he was elected Pope, was to continue the Legates sent by his Predecessors, and to send new ones into those Parts, where there were none. By the sixth Letter of the first Book, he confirms the Legation of Gerard Cardinal Bishop of Ostia; and of the Subdeacon Rainbold Legates in France, orders them to do their utmost in making up the Breach between Hugh Abbot of Cluny and his Monks, and sends them Hugh the White a Cardinal, to go into Spain, if they thought fit.

In the eighth Letter, he likewise continues the Legation of Hubert and Albert, and exhorts them to execute the Commission which his Predecessor Alexander had given them.

In the fifteenth, he shews how he would have his Legates demean themselves towards him, by writing to Cardinal Gerard of Ostia, that he was very much surpriz'd at his not sending him word by an Express, what had been done in the Synod which he had held in Spain, because it was Customary, and withal necessary that when a Legate of the Holy See held a Council in a remote Country, he should come and give an Account of what he had done, or at least send one to do it for him: That tho' that Cardinal had acquainted him with Part of the Proceedings, yet since there was no Person, who either saw or heard, how Things went in that Synod, to inform him about it, he was very much at a stand what Answer to give those, who complain'd of having been excommunicated, depos'd or interdicted unjustly; for Fear he should either be deceiv'd by the Intricacy of the Causes, or should not fully exercise his Authority: That however, 'tis look'd upon as a Piece of Cruelty and Contempt, to defer giving these kind of Answers, because of the Dangers they are in, who are under Ecclesiastical Censures: That as to the Business of William

Gregory VII.

Archbiſhop of Auche, whoſe re-eſtabliſhment he deſir'd him to grant; he had himſelf rais'd perplexities in his mind, by taking notice to him that he had been depos'd only for having voluntarily communicated with an excommunicate Perſon; and that yet he had not clear'd himſelf Canonically, but only offer'd to do it before Pope Alexander: That after this Affair had been debated, at laſt they came to this Reſolution, that if the Archbiſhop of Auche were Guilty of nothing elſe, but of having communicated with an excommunicate Perſon, he ought not to be depos'd; but that if he were charg'd with any other Crimes of which he was not clear'd, the determination thereof ought to be referr'd to the Holy See: That Pontius Biſhop of Beziers, who (as he ſent word) had been depos'd for the ſame Offence, was come to Rome to make his Complaint; but that he had declin'd giving him any Anſwer out of Reſpect to him: That however, ſince the like Sentence ought to be paſs'd on Caſes that are alike, if he were Guilty of no other Fault, he ought to re-eſtabliſh him. The Archbiſhop of Auche was re-eſtabliſh'd, and the Pope wrote in his behalf to the Biſhop of Beziers, and to the other Suffragans, that they ſhould acknowledge him, and ſhew him the Reſpect which they ow'd him. This is the five and fiftieth Letter of the firſt Book, dated March 16*th*. 1074.

The Pope's Legates did not meet with the ſame Reception in all Places. Theſe whom he ſent into Bohemia, were not much regarded, particularly by the Biſhop of Prague, whom they had reprimanded and condemned as one Guilty of Simony. Gregory thereupon wrote to the Duke of Bohemia, and thank'd him for the Reſpect which he ſhew'd to his Legates; but withal told him, that he had great Reaſon to complain of their being ſlighted in his Country, becauſe formerly Legates were not ſent ſo frequently; which he ſays happen'd through the remiſneſs of his Predeceſſors. In particular, he accuſes the Biſhop of Prague, and threatens to confirm the Interdiction pronounc'd againſt him by his Legates, if he did not obey them, by doing what they requir'd of him. This Letter is the ſeventeenth of the firſt Book, dated July the 8*th*. in the Year, 1073.

In the fortieth of the Second Book, Gregory VII. charges all the Faithful to Reſpect his Legates: And in the one and fortieth, he ſends them to be preſent at the Election of the Biſhop of Eugubio.

He ſent his Legates even to the moſt remote Countries; as for inſtance to Poland, as appears by the ſixty third Letter of the ſecond Book; to Sclavonia, Ruſſia, Denmark, &c. as appears by ſeveral other Letters.

Legates ſent by Gregory VII. to ſeveral Parts.

Of all the Legations, none was more conſiderable than that of the two Hughs in France, nor were there any Legates who exercis'd it with greater Authority, or diſpatch'd more Affairs. The one was Biſhop of Dia, and the other Abbot of Cluny. The former had been elected Biſhop of Dia by the Clergy and Laity of that City, with the Approbation of William their Count. After his Election, he had taken an Oath of Fidelity to that Count: But not being forward to pay him the Sum of Mony which was uſually exacted for the Right of Inveſtiture, he diſoblig'd him ſo much, that he was no ſooner gone to Rome to be conſecrated, but the Count ſeiz'd of the Revenues of his Church. The Pope having read over the Act of Hugh's Election, conſecrated him, but upon condition that he would not tolerate any Simony in his Dioceſs, nor Conſecrate any Church that had its dependence on any Lay Patrons. This is what he acquaints that Count with, by the ſixty ninth Letter of the firſt Book, wherein he upbraids him for having ſeiz'd on the Revenues of the Church of Dia. This Letter bears Date March the 16*th*. 1074.

By the three and fortieth Letter of the ſecond Book, dated January the 5*th*. 1075. he orders that Biſhop to accept of the Reſtitutions which thoſe of his Church ſhould make him, and to abſolve them, upon condition that they would come and appear before the Synod of Rome.

Councils held in France, by Hugh Biſhop of Dia, in the Year, 1077.

Gregory VII. repoſing a great deal of Confidence on this Biſhop, made him his Legate or Vicar in France; and in that Quality referr'd to him a great many Affairs: Among others, that which related to the Biſhop of Cambray, who after he had been elected, had receiv'd the Inveſtiture thereof from King Henry. The Pope orders his Legate by the two and twentieth Letter of the fourth Book, to examine this Affair in a Council, with Hugh Abbot of Cluny, and ſeveral Biſhops of France: And that if he who was elected to the Biſhoprick of Cambray, would ſwear, that when he receiv'd the Inveſtiture from Henry, he did not know that he was excommunicated, or that the Pope had prohibited ſuch Inveſtitures, he ſhould confirm his Election. By the ſame Letter he likewiſe committed to him, the taking Cognizance of the Affairs which related to the Biſhop of Chalons, the Churches of Cartres, Puy and Chlermont, and that of the Monaſtery of St. Dennis. This Letter is dated May the 2*d*. in the Year, 1077.

This Legate in purſuance of his Commiſſion, held ſeveral Councils in France in the Year, 1077. Among the reſt he held one at Clermont, wherein he depos'd the Biſhop of that City, and the Biſhop of Puy in Velay: Another at Dijon againſt the Simoniacal: A third at Autun, to which he cited moſt of the Archbiſhops of France, and condemn'd all thoſe who would not appear; to wit, Manaſſes Archbiſhop of Rheims, accus'd of Simony by his Clergy; the Archbiſhop of Sens, becauſe he would not acknowledge the Legate; the Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, becauſe he had not appear'd at the Council of Clermont, and becauſe after he had been Suſpended, he ſtill continu'd to diſcharge his Functions; the Archbiſhop of Bourges, for having relinquiſh'd his Church; the Archbiſhop of Tours, accus'd of being Vexatious and Simoniacal; the Archbiſhop of Lyons, convicted of Simony, in whoſe Place Gebuin Archdeacon of Langres, was elected and ordain'd; the Biſhops of Senlis, Chartres, Auxerre, for having receiv'd the Inveſtiture from the King; the Biſhop of Noyon, who own'd himſelf Guilty of Simony; and the Biſhop of Autun, for not aſſiſting at the Council. Gregory VII.

The Council of Poitiers, in the Year, 1078.

The next Year Hugh Biſhop of Dia, held another Council at Poitiers, in ſpight of the Prohibitions of the King of France, who perceiving how roughly his Biſhops were handled, had written to the Count of Poitiers, and to the Biſhops of his Kingdom, not to ſuffer the Pope's Legate to hold ſuch Councils, which he Nicknames Conventicles. The Archbiſhop of Tours and the Biſhop of Rennes came to this Council, but it was to diſturb it; for which the Legate ſuſpended both of them. However, they ſtill ſpoke boldly againſt the Legate's Proceedings, and even offer'd ſome Violence to him. Afterwards they withdrew with the Suffragan Biſhops of the Archbiſhoprick of Tours, and left him with a very ſmall Number of Prelates. The next day he held a Council in the Church of St. Hilary: The Archbiſhop of Tours perſiſted to inveigh hotly againſt the Legate, who ſuſpended him; and appeal'd to the Holy See. The Legate referr'd him to the Pope. Afterwards he depos'd the Abbot of Bergues, as being Guilty of Simony. The Archbiſhop of Bezanzon was ſuſpended for not appearing at the Synod of Autun and Poitiers. The Judgment of the Biſhops of Beauvais and Noyon, accus'd of Simony, was referr'd to the Pope. He who had intruded into the Church of Amiens was likewiſe referr'd to the Pope, together with the Biſhops of Laon, Senlis and Soiſſons, who had ordain'd him. The Abſolution of the Count of Angers, was likewiſe referr'd to the Holy See. Hugh of Dia in this Council, heard the Cauſe between the Biſhops of Terrouane and Poitiers, and after he had diſcuſs'd theſe Perſonal Cauſes, he made ten Canons upon the Diſcipline of the Church.

The Canons of the Council of Poitiers

In the firſt, Eccleſiaſticks are prohibited from receiving the Inveſtiture or Collation of Benefices, from the King, or any Lay Patron. The Laicks who held any Churches in their Poſſeſſion, were excommunicated, and theſe Churches interdicted.

In the ſecond, It is prohibited, to hold two Benefices in two different Churches.

The third imports, That no Perſon ſhall pretend to hold Eccleſiaſtical Benefices, by right of Succeſſion.

The fourth imports, That Biſhops ſhall take nothing for Ordinations, nor for Conſecrating Churches.

The fifth, That neither Abbots nor Monks ſhall adminiſter the Sacrament of Penance, without the Commiſſion of the Biſhop firſt had.

The ſixth, That neither Abbots, Monks, nor Prebendaries ſhall purchaſe Churches, or get the Impropriation of of them by any Method whatſoever, unleſs it be with the Conſent of the Biſhop, in whoſe Dioceſs theſe Churches are: That however, they ſhall ſtill hold, and quietly poſſeſs the Benefices which they already have; but that the Prieſt who ſerves them, ſhall be anſwerable to the Biſhop for the Charge of Souls, and for his Miniſtery.

The ſeventh, That the Abbots, Deans, and Archprieſts who are not Prieſts, ſhall enter into Prieſt's Orders, or loſe their Benefices: And that the Archdeacons ſhall be Deacons, under the ſame Penalty.

The eighth, That the Children of Prieſts, and Baſtards, ſhall not be admitted into Holy Orders, unleſs they be Monks, or live in a regular Convent: But that they ſhall not hold any Eccleſiaſtical Preferments. That Slaves cannot be admitted into Orders, unleſs their Maſters give them their Freedom.

The ninth, That the Subdeacons, Deacons and Prieſts ſhall have no Concubines, or any other ſuſpicious Women in their Houſes; and that all thoſe, who ſhall wittingly hear the Maſs of a Prieſt who keeps a Concubine, or is Guilty of Simony, ſhall be excommunicated.

The tenth, That Clerks who bear Arms, or are Uſurers, ſhall be depos'd.

Moſt of the Prelates, who were condemn'd by Hugh Biſhop of Dia, had recourſe to the Pope, who releas'd them from their Condemnations, upon condition (as we ſaid before) that they would clear themſelves before his Legate. For this, you may conſult the Letters of Hugh of Dia to Gregory VII. thoſe of Manaſſes to the ſame; and the the Letter of that Pope by which he re-establishes them, which is the seventeenth of the fifth Book, dated March the 8*th*. 1078.

Gregory VII.

Of all these Prelates, Manasses was almost the only Person who persisted in his Resolution of not owning Hugh of Dia as Legate, who continued to prosecute him till he had pronounc'd a definitive Sentence against him, in the Council which he held at Lyons in the Year, 1080. wherein he depos'd him; and his Judgment was confirm'd by Gregory VII. as appears by this seventh Letter of the fifth Book.

The Councils of Avignon and Meaux in the Year, 1080.

The same Year this Legate held two other Councils: The one at Avignon, wherein Aebard, who had intruded into the Church of Arles, was turn'd out, and Gibelin put into his place: And the other at Meaux, wherein he depos'd Ursion, Bishop of Soissons, and caus'd Arnulphus, Monk of St. Medard, to be elected in his Room.

The Council of Meaux, in the Year, 1082.

In the Year, 1082. he held another Council at Meaux, wherein he ordain'd Robert Abbot of Rebais, Bishop of that City. But because this Ordination was done without the Approbation of Richerus Archbishop of Sens, the Bishops of the Province would not own him; and Richerus ordain'd another Bishop, after he had excommunicated Robert.

The Pope referr'd to Hugh of Dia, the Absolution of Robert Count of Flanders, excommunicated by the Bishop of Langres, with Commission to put other Persons in his place; this appears by the seventh Letter of the sixth Book, dated November the 25*th*. 1079.

By the sixteenth Letter of the seventh Book, dated March the 26*th*. 1080. he orders Hubert Bishop of Terrouane, whom Hugh of Dia had cited twice before him, to justify himself before that Legate.

Hugh of Dia as a Recompence of the good Services he had done to the Holy See, was translated from the Bishoprick of Dia, to the Archbishoprick of Lyons, in the Year, 1083. and became so powerful, that after the Death of Gregory VII. he was one of those who pretended to the Popedom; and upon that Subject, had contests with Victor III. who had been preferr'd before him. That Pope excommunicated him: However, in the Popedom of Urban II. Hugh was re-taken again into Favour, and continued to exercise his Legation in France, as we shall shew in its proper place. He dy'd in the Year, 1106. in October, at Susa, in his Journey to the Council which Pope Paschal II. held about the end of that Year at Guastilla, in the Dukedom of Mantua.

There are a great many other Affairs relating to France, Normandy, Flanders, England and Bretagne, which Hugh and his Colleagues took Cognizance of, and pass'd Sentence upon either Definitively, after it had been referr'd to them by the Pope, or else Provisionally for any to have liberty of appealing to the Holy See. We shall have Opportunity of speaking more largely of these Things hereafter.

Gregory VII. to add the more Strength to his Authority, thought it expedient to make choice of one of the most eminent Sees of France, on which he might confer the perpetual Vicarship or Primacy of the Holy See. The Vicarship of the Popes in France, (by virtue of which those, to whom it was granted, pretended to a Jurisdiction above Metropolitans), and the Quality of Primates, had till then pass'd from Church to Church, according as they had been more or less favour'd by the Holy See. The Church of Arles is the first on whom this Privilege was conferr'd by Pope Zozimus, in Consideration of the Merits of Patroclus, who was Archbishop of that Place. Pope Symmachus confirm'd this Privilege in favour of Cesarius Archbishop of Arles, as to that Part of Gaul, which was then under the Dominion of the Goths: But at the same Time he made St. Remy, Archbishop of Rheims, his Vicar in the Kingdom under Clovis. However, afterward the Vicarship of the Archbishop of Arles spread it self in the Kingdom under Childebert, and even through all France, by the favour of the Popes Vigilius, Pelagius I. Gregory the Great, and John VIII. But Adrian I. restor'd this Honour to the Archbishop of Rheims; and the Popes Benedict III. and Nicholas I. confirm'd it. Pope Sergius granted it to the Bishop of Metz, in Consideration of the Person of Drenx, the Emperor's Uncle. But the Bishops of France would not acknowledge him, and we do not find that his Successors have pretended thereto. Anségisus Archbishop of Sens, obtain'd the same Privilege from John VIII. and his Successors retain'd the Quality of Primates of Gaul and Germany, tho' the Bishops of France would not acknowledge it in the Council of Pontyon, and ever since it has been disputed with them.

Vicars of the Popes in France.

The erecting the Primacy of Lyons, by Gregory VII.

At last Gregory VII. made choice of the Church of Lyons, as the Church of most Note, to Honour with this Quality, and granted it the Primacy over four Provinces of France; namely, of Lyons, Roan, Tours, and Sens, by the four and thirtieth Letter of the sixth Book, directed to Gebuin Archbishop of Lyons; and by the five and thirtieth Letter of the same Book, directed to the Archbishops of Roan, Tours and Sens, which are both dated April the 20*th*. in the Year, 1079. To establish this, he supposes that the Distinction of Dioceses, Provinces, Primacies, and Metropolitanships was made by the Apostles themselves, or by the Holy Apostolick See, and that the Dignity of Primate had been granted by his Predecessors to the Archbishop of Lions. However, it would be a hard matter to prove this out of any Authentick Record. Besides, the Archbishops of Sens and Roan, would not acknowledge the Archbishop of Lyons for Primate: Which oblig'd Urban II. in the Council held at Clermont, in the Year, 1095. to suspend Richerus Archbishop of Sens from the Use of the Pall; to enjoyn his Suffragans not to obey him; and to threaten the Archbishop of Roan with the same Punishment, if he did not within three Months acknowledge the Primacy of the Archbishop of Lyons.

Gregory VII.

The Rights or Priviledges of the Primates of France.

The Rights or Privileges annex'd to the Pope's Vicars or Primates in France, have been of a greater or less extent, according to the difference of the Times. Pope Zozimus granted three Things to the Archbishop of Arles, viz. (1.) That all the Bishops who were minded to come to Rome, shall be oblig'd to take along with them recommendatory Letters from the Archbishop of Arles. (2.) That the Ordinations in the Provinces of Vienna and Narbonne shall be his Peculiars. (3.) That he shall have the same Jurisdiction over the Churches, which he has had over them for a long Time, tho' they be not in his Territory. Of these three Privileges, the two last belong to the Archbishop of Arles as Metropolitan; and the first was granted him as Vicar of the Pope. Symmachus, besides these, granted him a Power of calling Councils of the Bishops of France and Spain: Vigilius added thereto the Honour of wearing the Pall; but he desires that if he should meet with any difficult Point, which could not be determin'd by the Councils, he should make his Report thereof to the Holy See. Pelagius granted him in general, a Power of Acting in France, with respect to every thing which concern'd the Administration of Ecclesiastical Affairs. Lastly, Pope Gregory took notice in Particular, wherein this Power consisted, which is, (1.) To cause all the Canons to be Religiously observ'd, and to maintain the Faith. (2.) To call a Synod when 'tis necessary. (3.) To make his Report to the Holy See, of the Controversies of Faith, and of the most Momentary and difficult Causes. The Privilege granted by the Popes to the Archbishops of Rheims, consists chiefly in being immediately Subject to no other than the Holy See, and in having the Right of Ordination and Inspection in the whole compass of his Vicarship. The Bishop of Metz had a Commission to call general Councils; to receive the Judgments pass'd in the Provincial Synods; to hear upon the first instance, the Causes of Appealing to the Holy See; to inform himself of the Lives of the Abbots and Bishops, and to provide for the Necessities of the Church. The Privileges granted to the Archbishop of Sens, are to call Councils, and to examine into all the Ecclesiastical Affairs of France and Germany; to receive and publish the Decrees of the Holy See, and to make his Report to it, of all the Affairs of Moment and Consequence.

Gregory VII. does not enter into the particulars of the Privileges of the Archbishop of Lyons; but only says in general, that the Ecclesiastical Affairs of any Consequence ought to be brought before him; and that it belongs to him to confirm and disannul the Judgments of the Ordinaries, and to judge the Causes of Bishops, and the Affairs of Importance, but without Prejudice to the Holy See.

The Cause of Rheims.

Before Gregory VII. was Pope, Manasses was Archbishop of Rheims. That Prelate being very powerful, thought that the Monks of the Abby of St. Remy of that City, ought to pay an entire Submission to him. He was for giving them such an Abbot as he thought fit, and took part of their Revenues into his Possession. These Monks having preferr'd their Complaints to Alexander II. that Pope wrote to Manasses, and admonished him to put an end to these Complaints, and to give Orders that that Abby should be provided with a regular Abbot, who should have the Administration both of Spirituals and Temporals in his own Hands. Gregory VII. continued the same Remonstrances: But being inform'd that Manasses, notwithstanding all the Promises which he had made by his Deputies, to give him Satisfaction, continu'd his Abuses to those Religious, and enjoy'd their Revenues, He wrote a Letter to him full of Invectives, wherein he threatens to shew him the utmost Severity, if he did not immediately cause a Regular Abbot to be put into that Abby, and if he did not give such Orders as that the Religious might have no farther Reason to complain of Him: And at the same Time he orders Hugh Abbot of Cluny to convey that Letter to him, and to learn his Answer. These are the thirteenth and fourteenth Letters of the first Book, dated June the 29*th*. 1073. and the first which Gregory wrote after his Ordination.

Manasses obey'd the Pope's Orders, and caus'd William, Abbot of St. Arnulphus of Metz, to be elected also Abbot of St. Remy of Rheims. The Pope approv'd of the Choice of the Person; but he thought it hard that one Man should have the Charge of two Abbies. However, he per-of Manasses Archbishop of Rheims.

Gregory VII.

mitted William to hold, or relinquiſh that of Remy, as he thought fit. He held it for ſome time; but not being able to endure the Tyranny and Oppreſſion of Manaſſes, he reſign'd that Abby. The Pope wrote to Manaſſes to order another Abbot to be elected, and gave at the ſame time notice to Herman Biſhop of Metz, that Abbot William was willing to reſide in the Abby of his Dioceſs. This is the Subject Matter of the fifty ſecond and third Letters of the firſt Book, dated March the 14*th*. 1074.

The next Year the Pope, by the fifty ſixth Letter of the ſecond Book, dated March the 4*th*. committed to Manaſſes, the Execution of the Sentence paſs'd againſt the Biſhop of Chalons, who had been depos'd for not appearing before the Synod of Rome, to which he had been cited, upon the account of ſome Differences between him and his Clergy. And by the fifty eighth dated the fifth of the ſame Month, he orders him to cauſe the Biſhop of Noyon to reſtore to the Biſhop of Utrecht, a Church which he had unlawfully ſeiz'd upon.

Hugh Biſhop of Dia, Legate of the Holy See in France, having cited Manaſſes to a Council, which he had call'd at Autun, that Archbiſhop thought it beneath him to appear there; which caus'd the Legate to Condemn him. Manaſſes went immediately to Rome to clear himſelf; and by the Pope's Order waited there three Months together for Hugh of Dia. But when that Biſhop came not, the Cauſe of Manaſſes was argu'd in a Council, between Him and the Deputies of Hugh of Dia. Manaſſes having no Body to Accuſe him, did with eaſe juſtify himſelf; and having affirm'd that it was not in Contempt of the Holy See, that he did not appear before the Council of Autun, the Sentence paſs'd againſt him in that Council was declar'd invalid, upon Condition that he would appear before the Pope's Legate, whenever he ſhould be ſummoned: But he declar'd that he would not admit the Biſhop of Dia to be his Judge. The Pope ask'd him whom he was willing ſhould be his Judge; Manaſſes reply'd, The Abbot of CLUNY: Whereupon the Pope deputed that Abbot to be the Judge in the Cauſe of Manaſſes; after he had made him promiſe, that if he were call'd to any Synod by the Holy See, or to any by that Legate, he would not fail to make his Appearance. Manaſſes being return'd to France, was ſummon'd in the Name of Hugh of Dia and the Abbot of Cluny, to a Council to be held at Troyes; he went thither with Part of his Clergy: But the Clerks who accus'd him not daring to come thither, he was countermanded, and the Legates of the Pope were not at that Council. Manaſſes appeard there, notwithſtanding the Orders to the Contrary, and thought he had diſcharg'd the Promiſe which he had made to the Pope. He pretended likewiſe that according to the Promiſes he made, he was oblig'd to appear before none beſide the Pope, or before the Roman Legates ſent immediately from the Holy See, and not before the Biſhops on the other ſide the Mountains. He wrote to the Pope about it, and at the ſame time complain'd of the Archbiſhop of Vienna, who had depos'd and re-eſtabliſh'd ſeveral Prieſts of the Dioceſs of Rheims; and of the Biſhops of Laon and Soiſſons his Suffragans, who had ordain'd a Biſhop of Amiens without conſulting him, and even whilſt he was at Rome. Gregory reply'd to him by the ſecond Letter of the ſixth Book, dated Auguſt the 22*d*. 1078. That he ought to acknowledge the Legates nam'd by the Holy See upon the Place, as well as thoſe who were ſent immediately from Rome; and that he ought forthwith to clear himſelf of the Things laid to his Charge before Hugh of Dia and the Abbot of Cluny; and that they ſhould do him Juſtice, with reſpect to the Complaints which he had made. This is what he acquaints the Biſhop of Dia with, by the next Letter dated the ſame Day.

The Cauſe of Manaſſes Archbiſhop of Rheims.

In the mean time Hugh of Dia caus'd Manaſſes to be ſummon'd twice to a Council to be held at Lyons, to anſwer to the Accuſations which Count Manaſſes, and ſeveral Clerks of the Church of Rheims, preferr'd againſt him. The Archbiſhop of Rheims refus'd to come to that Council, and publiſh'd an Apology or Manifeſto, wherein he alledges ſeveral Reaſons for his not Appearing. The firſt is, Becauſe there is no mention made of the Abbot of Cluny in the Order, by which he was ſummon'd to that Council. The ſecond, Becauſe that Council was held in a City, which was not in that Part of France, wherein he ought to be judg'd. The third, Becauſe the Province which lay between that of Rheims and that of Lyons, and through which he muſt paſs, was engag'd in a War; ſo that he could not come without Danger of being made Priſoner. The fourth, Becauſe he underſtood that that Council was to conſiſt of the ſame Perſons, who had already condemn'd him raſhly and unjuſtly. The fifth, Becauſe according to the Canons, it was requir'd that ſuch a Place ſhould be made choice of to Try any one, as was near to his own Country, where one might produce Witneſſes, and paſs a definitive Sentence. That beſides, he was reconcil'd to Count Manaſſes, and to all thoſe who were at Difference with him, except Bruno, who was neither his Clerk, nor Born nor Baptiz'd in his Dioceſs, but a Prebendary of St. Cunibert of Cologne, for whom he was not much concern'd; and who had ſerv'd him baſely, tho' under particular Obligations to him; and except another Clerk, nam'd Pontius, whom he had convicted of Falſhood in the Council of Rome. That if he had no Accuſers, he was not oblig'd to come and clear himſelf before the Council, by the Teſtimony of ſix Biſhops of an unblameable Life: That when he would have done it, he could not, becauſe of the ſhortneſs of the Time that was allow'd him; and that it would be difficult to find in his Province ſix Biſhops, who were not his Enemies, and without Reproach: That when he had promis'd to the Pope to appear before the Council which ſhould be held by his Legates, he meant only ſuch a Council as ſhould be held in France, and in caſe he had not lawful Reaſons to excuſe his Non-appearance: Laſtly, That for his part, he did not acknowledge Hugh of Dia to be Legate; ſince the Pope had granted him the Favour of refuſing him for his Judge: That however, to ſhew his Submiſſion to the Holy See, he offer'd him to appear at a Synod which ſhould be held in ſome City near to Rheims, either in Lent or at Eaſter; and that he would there receive him with all the Honour that was due to the Legates of the Pope: That he exhorted him to accept of this Offer; becauſe it would be more advantageous to the Holy See, to attract the Reſpect and Submiſſion of the French by Acts of Moderation, than by Acts of Severity to keep them at a diſtance: That if notwithſtanding this Remonſtrance, he ſtill would perſiſt in the ſame Mind, and pronounce a Sentence of Depoſition and Excommunication againſt him, the Popes St. Gregory and St. Leo had inſtructed him that he ought not to look upon ſuch an Excommunication as iſſuing from the Holy See. Theſe are the Reaſons contain'd in the Apology of Manaſſes, which is a very fine Piece, and written in a very elegant Style, and publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Treaſury of Italy.

Gregory VII.

Hugh of Dia had no regard to this Manifeſto, but in the Council of Lyons pronounc'd a Sentence of Depoſition againſt Manaſſes and the Pope confirm'd it in the Synod of Rome, held the beginning of the Year, 1080. and gave Manaſſes notice of it by the twentieth Letter of the Seventh Book, dated April the 7*th*. of the ſame Year; allowing him notwithſtanding further Time till the Feaſt of St. Michael to juſtifie himſelf, either at Rome, or before his Legates; by producing as an Evidence of his Innocence ſome Biſhops his Suffragans; by reſtoring to the two Perſons who had accus'd him, the Revenues which he had taken from them; and upon Condition that he would retire to Cluny or ſome other Monaſtery till Aſcenſion-day, and forbear till then all Epiſcopal Functions.

Manaſſes did not hearken to this Sentence, and continued in Poſſeſſion of his Archbiſhoprick without ſubmitting in the leaſt to the Pope; who wrote immediately to the Clergy and Laity of Rheims, to the Suffragans of that Metropolitanſhip, to King Philip and to Count Ebold, ordering them no longer to acknowledge him for Archbiſhop of Rheims, to turn him out of that Church, and to elect or cauſe to be elected another in his Stead. This is the Subject Matter of the ſeventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth Letters of the eighth Book, dated Dec. 27*th*. in the ſame Year.

This Manaſſes is accus'd by the Authors of that Time of having attain'd to the Archbiſhoprick of Rheims by Simony, and of having exercis'd an inſupportable Tyranny and Oppreſſion over his Clergy; of having rifled Churches, plunder'd Monaſteries, exacted Money from his Clergy, perſecuted Men of Eſtates; of ſeizing the Revenues of the richeſt Abbies; of having liv'd more like a great Lord, than a Biſhop; of having greater Care of his Soldiers, than of his Clergy; of having more Concern for the Temporalities, than for the Spiritualities of his Archbiſhoprick; and of being ſo impious as to ſay, That the Archbiſhoprick of Rheims would be a very pretty Thing, if no ſinging of Maſs were required. 'Tis thus that he is ſet out by William Abbot of St. Arnulphus of Metz, Guilbert Abbot of Nogent, and Hugh of Flaviany. However, Fulcoius Subdeacon of Meaux, has made his Elogy; and the Clergy of Noyon (in a Letter which they wrote at that very Time to the Clergy of Cambray, to prove that the Sons of Clerks and Prieſts might be admitted into Prieſts Orders) maintain, That the Excommunication of Manaſſes had been made by a Motive of Envy; and that it was raſh and unjuſt. This Letter is related by Father Mabillon, after the Apology of Manaſſes. All this makes it appear, That tho' Manaſſes had been as guilty as they would have him thought to be, yet he was not condemn'd in due Form.

The Cauſe of the Archbiſhop of Tours, and the Biſhop of Dol.

There had been for ſeveral Years paſt a Conteſt between the Archbiſhop of Tours and the Biſhop of Dol, who pretended likewiſe to the Dignity of an Archbiſhop, or the Right of Metropolitan over the Biſhops of Bretagne. The Popes always declar'd themſelves in Favour of the Archbiſhop of Tours. Gregory VII. ſeem'd at firſt to favour the Biſhop of Dol; for the Clergy and Laity having ſent to the

Pope

Gregory VII.

Pope him whom they had elected to be Bishop, he refused to ordain him, because he was too young: But having chosen Yves Abbot of St. Melaine, who was come to Rome with the Deputies of Dol, he consecrated him by their Consent, and granted him the Pall, upon Condition that he would come to Rome whenever he should be sent for thither, to regulate the Contest which was between the Church of Dol and that of Tours about the Right of Metropolitanship. The Archbishop of Tours thinking that the Pope had by this prejudiced his Right, complain'd of it; but Gregory sent him Word, that he had no Occasion to complain, since he had taken such Measures, that what he had done should be no Prejudice to him, and that he would do him Justice, when that Affair was in a Posture of being try'd. This is the Subject Matter of the fourth, fifth, and thirteenth Letters of the fourth Book, of which the two first, about the Ordination of Yves, are directed, the one to the People of Dol, and the other to the Bishops of Bretagne, dated Sept. 27. in the Year 1076. and the last to Radulphus Archbishop of Tours, dated the first of March, 1077.

The Pope was deceived in the Choice of the Man whom he had ordain'd to the Church of Dol. He soon receiv'd Complaints of his bad Conduct: And after he had examin'd the Accusations brought against him, he was just ready to depose him; when he received a Letter from William King of England, who interceeded for him. This caus'd the Pope to supersede the Execution of that Sentence, till he should send upon the Place Hugh Bishop of Dia, and two other Legates, to inform themselves more fully about that Affair. This appears by the seventeenth Letter of the fourth Book, written to the King of England, and dated March the 2*d.* in the Year 1077. He committed the Determination of that Affair to Hugh of Dia, to the Abbot of Cluny, and to two other Clerks, by the two and three and twentieth Letters of the fifth Book, dated May 22*d.* 1078.

At last the Contest between the Churches of Tours and Dol, for the Right of Metropolitanship, having been debated in the Council held at Rome, the Beginning of the Year 1080. And the Archbishop of Tours having made it appear, by good Titles, That Bretagne belong'd to his Metropolitanship; whereas the Bishop of Dol not being able to produce such authentick ones, was pleas'd to say, That he had forgot behind him several of his Titles: The Pope granted him a farther Time, and declar'd that he would send Legates upon the Place, to determine that Affair: And that if it appear'd that the Bishop of Dol had sufficient Titles whereon to ground his Exception, he should still remain in Possession of it; if not, that then the Bishop of Dol and the other Bishops of Bretagne shall be subject to the Archbishop of Tours, as to their Metropolitan; upon Condition however that the Bishop of Dol shall still enjoy the Privilege of wearing the Pall. This is what he intimates to the People of Tours and Bretagne, by the fifteenth Letter of the seventh Book, dated March 8*th.* in the Year 1080.

The Cause of the Bishop of Toul.

The Bishop of Toul having refus'd to one of his Clerks a Church, which he pretended to belong to his Prebendship, and having absolutely suspended him, that Clerk was incens'd against him, and accus'd him of selling Benefices and sacred Things; of holding a shameful and dishonourable Commerce with a certain Woman, and of having bought his Bishoprick. The Bishop's Friends, to avenge his Quarrel, threaten to be even with that Clerk, if ever they could catch him. Whereupon that Clerk not thinking himself secure, absconded, and the Bishop immediately caus'd all that he had to be sold. That Clerk having made his Complaints thereof to Rome, Gregory VII. by the tenth Letter of the second Book, dated Octob. the 14*th.* 1074. commission'd the Archbishop of Treves, and the Bishop of Metz, to try this Cause. He enjoyns them in the first Place to put that Clerk into the Possession of his Benefice; afterwards to make Inquiry into the Life of the Bishop: If he were innocent, to punish the Clerk who had scandaliz'd him; and if he were guilty, to depose him.

The Cause of William Duke of Aquitain.

William Duke of Aquitain, and Count of Poitiers, having marry'd one of his Relations, the Legate of the Holy See, and the Archbishop of Bordeaux, call'd a Synod, to oblige him to part from her. Isembert Bishop of Poitiers disturb'd that Assembly, and offer'd Violence to those who were there. However, the Duke of his own accord parted from his Wife. Gregory no less pleas'd with his Submission, than he was offended at the Action of the Bishop of Poitiers, complimented the Duke upon it by the third Letter of the second Book, and cited the Bishop to the Council of Rome by the second Letter of the same Book, threatning to depose and excommunicate him; and by the fourth of the same Book advises the Archbishop of Bordeaux to come to Rome, or to send some body thither to accuse Isembert. These three Letters are dated Sept. the 2*d.* 1074, Isembert not appearing at the Synod, the Pope not only confirm'd the Suspension which his Legate had pronounc'd against him, but likewise excommunicated him, till such Time as he should come to the Synod, to be held at Rome the Beginning of Lent, as appears by the three and four and twentieth Letters of the same Book, dated Nov. the 16*th.* in the same Year.

Gregory VII.

The Causes which Gregory hear'd and try'd at Rome.

The Letters of Gregory are full of Instances of Bishops whom he cited to Rome, to give an Account of their Conduct, or condemn'd for not appearing; or absolv'd when they did appear; or depos'd or enjoyn'd to do Penance. We may consult beside those already mention'd, the fifty sixth Letter of the first Book, by which he summons the Bishop of Chalons, to come and clear himself at Rome: The fifty seventh, by which he orders the Bishop of Pavia, to come to him with the Marquis Aso, accus'd of Incest with that Bishop's Sister. This Woman's Name was Matilda, which gave Occasion to some Authors to think her to be the same with the Princess Matilda, the Wife of Godfrey. But she was quite another Woman; for she whom we speak of, was the Sister of William Bishop of Pavia, who had marry'd her Kinsman Aso, before the Death of Godfrey, the Princess Matilda's Husband. The Pope wrote to her by the thirty sixth Letter of the second Book, to part from Aso, till such Time as she should prove in the Synod of Rome, that the Marquis was not her Kinsman. And by the thirty fifth Letter, he likewise cited William Bishop of Pavia upon the same Account. These two Letters are dated Dec. the 16*th.* 1074.

Causes referr'd by the Pope to his Legates.

Sometimes Gregory VII. commission'd Bishops upon the Places to pass a definitive Sentence upon the Affairs in dispute. Thus he committed to the Archbishops of Bourges and Tours, the Determination of the Process between the Monastery of Dol, And the Abby of St. Sulpicius, by the ninth Letter of the second Book, to Richerus Archbishop of Sens, by the twentieth Letter of the same Book, the correcting of Lancelin, who had injur'd the Archbishop of Tours.

By the sixteenth Letter of the fourth Book, he referr'd to Hugh Bishop of Dia, the Trial of the Difference which was between the Clergy of Romagne, and the Archbishop of Vienna.

In the twentieth of the same Book, he referr'd to Josefroy Bishop of Paris, the Absolution of several Persons excommunicated by the Archbishop of Rheims, and granted him Power to absolve them, in Case he found them innocent, if that Archbishop would not do it.

In the one and twentieth, he referr'd to Herman Bishop of Metz, the Trial of the Process between the Bishop of Liege, and the Abbot of St. Laurence, who having been turn'd out of his Monastery by the Bishop, had appeal'd to the Holy See.

In the fourth Letter of the sixth Book, he referr'd to the Archbishop of Treves and the Bishop of Metz, the Cause of one who complain'd that he had been unjustly excommunicated by the Bishop of Liege.

In the fifth of the same Book, he advises Herman Bishop of Metz, to assist the Bishop of Toul, whom he had order'd to call a Council of six Bishops, to clear himself canonically of what had been laid to his Charge.

By the thirty ninth of the same Book, he referr'd to the Bishop of Cumæ, the Trial of the Election of the Bishop of Pergamo.

By the eight and twentieth Letter of the seventh Book, he committed to the Bishop of Benevento, and the Abbot of Mount Cassin, the Trial of an Armenian Heretick.

By the nineteenth Letter of the ninth Book, he referr'd to the Archbishop of Lyons, the Trial of the Cause of an Abbot, who produc'd a Grant of Alexander II. which prov'd that he had been falsly accus'd.

By the two and twentieth of the same Book, he referr'd to a Council of the Province, to be held in the Presence of his Legates, the Trial of the Count of Angiers, excommunicated by the Archbishop of Tours, upon the Account of a Concubine which he kept.

He referr'd to the same Archbishop, by the thirty second Letter of the same Book, the Cause of the Bishop of Terrouane, who being favour'd by the Count of Flanders, had broke open the Church, and offer'd several Violences. You may consult on this Subject the thirteenth, two and thirtieth, three and thirtieth, and four and thirtieth Letters of the ninth Book, and the first of the eleventh.

By the thirty first of the same Book, he referr'd to a Bishop the Trial of the Difference which was between the Clergy of Autun, and the Monks of Fleury, about a Privilege which the latter pretended to.

The Cause cited to, and judg'd at Rome by Gregory.

To conclude, there were scarce any Controversies in the Dioceses between the Bishops and their Clerks, or Monks, and even Laicks themselves, which Gregory VII. was not minded to take Cognizance of, to try at Rome, and to oblige the Bishops to put his Sentence into Execution, as may be seen by a great many Letters, about several Subjects.

In the fifty fourth of the first Book, he orders against the Bishop of Poitiers, that the Canons of that City shall observe their usual Custom concerning their Stations upon the Feasts of St. Hilary, and All-Saints. In the one and twentieth of the second Book, he enjoyns the Abbot of Beaulieu, to be obedient to the Archbishop of Tours; and that if he thought he had any Reason not to be subject to him, he ſhould come to Rome, and make his Pretenſions good. In the two and twentieth, he enjoyns Hugh, Knight of St. Maur, to reſtore to the Archbiſhop of Tours the Revenues of his Church, which he had taken away from him: And in Caſe that he thought that they belong'd to him, to come to Rome to demand Juſtice in the Caſe. In the five and twentieth, he orders the Biſhop of Cologne to try the Difference which was between the Biſhop of Oſnaburg and the Abbot of Corbey in Saxony, upon Condition that if he could not determine it, he would ſend them to his Synod of Rome. In the thirty third, he reproves the Biſhop of Turin for not coming to the Synod of Rome, and for having offer'd an Injury to the Monaſtery of St. Michael.

Gregory VII.

By the ſixty fourth and ſixty fifth Letters of the ſecond Book, dated March the 25*th*. in the Year, 1075. he orders, that the Accuſation which the Monks of St. Dennis in France had brought againſt their Abbot, ſhall be try'd by his Legates, or in a Synod of Rome. He likewiſe call'd to Rome by the ſixty ninth, the Conteſt which was between the Biſhop of Turin, and the Monks of the Monaſtery of St. Michael; this Letter is dated April the 9*th*. in the ſame Year. By the thirtieth Letter of the third Book, he determines a Difference which was between the Church of Roſcelle and the Church of Piombino, in Favour of the former.

The Cauſe of Everard Dean of Orleans.

There was at that Time a great Conteſt in the Church of Orleans, concerning a Deanery, between the Biſhop and his Prebendaries. The Cauſe having been brought before Pope Alexander, he had determin'd it in Favour of Joſceline, whom the Prebendaries were for, and excommunicated Everard whom the Biſhop had favour'd. Notwithſtanding this Sentence, the Biſhop of Orleans had ſtill ſupported Everard, and was likewiſe accus'd of having receiv'd Money for the Collation of a Prebendſhip, the Revenue whereof was appropriated to the Maintenance of the Poor: Gregory VII. being inform'd of it, in the firſt Place cited Everard to Rome, by the fifty ſecond Letter of the ſecond Book, dated March the 1*ſt*. 1075. and afterwards having confirm'd the Sentence paſs'd by his Predeceſſor againſt him, he wrote to the Biſhop of Orleans to turn him out, to put Joſceline into Poſſeſſion of the Prebendſhip then in Queſtion, and to ſuffer the Poor to enjoy the Revenue of that Prebendſhip which belong'd to them; if not, he threatned to excommunicate him; and at the ſame Time he order'd Richerus Archbiſhop of Sens to do it, if he did not ſubmit. Theſe two Letters are the ſixteenth and ſeventeenth of the third Book, dated in April 1076. The Biſhop of Orleans returning no Anſwer to Gregory, that Pope wrote a ſecond Time to the Archbiſhop of Sens, ordering him to thunder out the Excommunication againſt that Biſhop, unleſs he aſſur'd him upon Oath, that he had not come to the leaſt Knowledge of the Pope's Letter; and he order'd him to come to Rome along with the Parties concern'd in that Affair. He likewiſe by this Letter commiſſions Richerus Archbiſhop of Sens, not only to take Cognizance of this, but alſo of ſeveral other Matters which concern'd the Churches of France. This is the Subject Matter of the ninth Letter of the fourth Book, dated Nov. the 2*d*. in the ſame Year.

The Biſhop of Orleans did not much regard all theſe Menaces of the Pope, and caus'd the Perſon who brought his Letters to be apprehended. Gregory enrag'd at this Proceeding, wrote to the Archbiſhop of Sens and Bourges, ordering them to cite him before them at a Place which they ſhould appoint him; and if he continu'd Refractory, to depoſe him, and put Sanzon in his Place: He likewiſe advertis'd the Biſhop of Orleans, that he had given this Order. Theſe are the eighth and ninth Letters of the fifth Book, dated Octob. the 6*th*. 1077. This Sanzon was elected in Purſuance of this Order, and the Pope by the fourteenth Letter of the ſame Book, dated Jan. the 28*th*. in the Year, 1078. orders the Clergy and Laity of Orleans to acknowledge him: However, by another Letter dated April the 24*th*. which is the twentieth of the ſame Book, he writes to Rainier, who was the depos'd Biſhop of Orleans, ordering him to appear at the Synod which ſhould be appointed by Hugh Biſhop of Die, and Hugh Abbot of Cluny, in order to receive a final Sentence. Laſtly, by the three and twentieth of the ſixth Book, dated March the 5*th*. 1079. he acquaints the People of Orleans that he approv'd of the Election of Sanzon, but that he could not confirm him in Form, till ſuch Time as he ſhould ſend Legates upon the Place.

The Cauſe of Robert, nominated to the Biſhoprick of Chartres.

Robert Abbot of St. Euphemia in Calabria, had been nominated by the King of France to the Biſhoprick of Chartres. Gregory VII. who lik'd not ſuch Sort of Nominations, and look'd upon them as Simoniacal, charg'd him by his Legate to quit his Biſhoprick. But Robert was not very forward to obey; whereupon the Pope declar'd him to have forfeited his Title to it, order'd the People of Chartres to elect another Biſhop, and enjoyn'd Richerus Archbiſhop of Sens and his Suffragans to ſee this Order put in Execution. You may conſult the fourteenth and fifteenth Letters of the fourth Book, dated March the 4*th*. 1077. However, by a Letter directed to Hugh of Die, which is the eleventh of the fifth Book, he gave that Biſhop Orders to examine into that Buſineſs, and to make his Report thereof to him.

Gregory VII.

Stephen Biſhop of Annecy had the ſame Fortune. Hugh of Die the Pope's Legate excommunicated him, and Gregory ratified his Sentence by two Letters; the one written to the Clergy of Annecy, and the other to the Biſhops of France, which are the eighteenth and nineteenth of the fourth Book, dated March the 23*d*. in the Year, 1077.

The Cauſe of the Biſhop of Annecy.

The Archbiſhop of Roan being grown infirm and uncapable of governing his Dioceſs, Gregory VII. ſent him one Hubert a Subdeacon, to enquire whether Things were ſo or no, and to perſuade him to give his Conſent, that another be put in his Place, if he were capable of giving ſuch a Conſent; and in caſe he were wholly infirm, to cauſe another to be elected. This is what he acquaints the King of England with, by the nineteenth Letter of the fifth Book, dated April the 4*th*. 1078.

The Cauſe of the Archbiſhop of Roan.

The Canons of the Caſtle of St. Paul and St. Omer, having ſent Deputies to Rome, to complain of the Counts Hubert, Guy and Hugh, who had ſeiz'd upon ſome Revenues which belong'd to them; the Pope wrote to theſe Counts, ordering them to make Reſtitution, according as it had been enjoyn'd in a Council held at Poitiers by Hugh of Die, or elſe to juſtify their Pretenſions to theſe Revenues before that Legate within the Space of forty Days. If they would not obey, he order'd the Defenders of the Church to re-enter upon the Premiſſes, and the Canons of Terrouane, to ſee that this Sentence be put in Execution. This is the Subject Matter of the eighth and ninth Letters of the ſixth Book, dated Nov. the 25*th*. 1079.

The Cauſe of the Canons of St. Omers.

Cardinal Richard elected Abbot of Marſeilles.

In the ſeventh and eighth Letters of the ſixth Book, he approves of the Election which the Monks of Marſeilles had made of Cardinal Richard for their Abbot: He declares to them that he wiſh'd that that Monaſtery were united to the Monaſtery of St. Paul.

The Letters of Gregory concerning Diſcipline.

We will conclude the Account of the Letters of Gregory VII. with ſeveral Points of Eccleſiaſtical and Monaſtical Diſcipline, which he decided, and of which we have had no Opportunity of ſpeaking.

In the fifth Letter of the firſt Book, directed to Rainier Archbiſhop of Florence, he determines that a Woman who had marry'd one of her Kinſmen, and was become a Widow, ought not to receive her Dowry from any Part of her Husband's Revenue, nor to have any Advantage of that Marriage, which was in its own Nature null.

In the four and twentieth Letter of the firſt Book, he recommends to the Biſhop of Verona a conſtant Submiſſion to the Holy See, and promiſes him the Pall, provided he would come in his proper Perſon to Rome: Becauſe his Predeceſſors had order'd that the Pall ſhould be beſtow'd only on Perſons who were preſent. This Letter bears Date Sept. the 24*th*. 1073.

In the four and thirtieth Letter of the ſame Book, directed to the Biſhop of Lincoln, he determines that according to the Opinions of the Fathers, a Prieſt who had been guilty of Homicide, ought no longer to attend at the Service of the Altar; but he is willing that in caſe he be truly Penitent, a Subſiſtence ſhould be allow'd him out of the Eccleſiaſtical Contributions. Afterwards he gives that Biſhop Abſolution of all his Sins.

In the ſeven and fortieth of the ſame Book, he exhorts the Princeſs Matilda to frequent Communion, and to bear a due Reſpect and Devotion to the bleſſed Virgin.

In the eight and fortieth, he enjoyns that a Woman accus'd by her Husband of Adultery, ſhall be admitted to juſtify her Innocence.

In the ſixty fifth, he reproves the People of Raguſa for having firſt apprehended Vitalius their Biſhop, and then elected another in his Room. He enjoyns them to ſet him at Liberty, and to ſuffer his Cauſe to be try'd by the Archbiſhop of Siponto, whom he had commiſſion'd for that very Purpoſe, with a Charge that if it could not be determin'd upon the Place, they ſhould ſend to Rome their old Biſhop, and him whom they had newly elected, that ſo he might decide the Controverſy between them.

In the ſeven and fortieth of the ſecond Book, he acquaints the Lord Rainier, that he had order'd the Biſhop of Chiuſi, to turn out of the Proveſtſhip of a Church, a Prieſt who had been condemn'd by his Predeceſſor Alexander, and whom that Biſhop would re-eſtabliſh in defiance to the Authority of the Holy See.

In the eight and fortieth, he orders two of his Legates to prevent a Man who had kill'd his Brother, from marrying till he had done Penance.

By the fiftieth, he determines that one who is not born in lawful Wedlock, cannot be advanc'd to the Epiſcopacy, becauſe 'tis contrary to the Canons. He likewiſe therein declares, that he would not accept of the Reſignation of the Biſhop of Arragon, who had deſir'd to relinquiſh his Biſhoprick becauſe of his Infirmities. He ſays, that he had adviſ'd him to make uſe of an Eccleſiaſtick to take Care of the Temporalities of his Dioceſs, and to apply himſelf wholly to Spiritual Affairs with the Aſſiſtance of his Neighbouring Biſhops;

Gregory VII.

Bishops; and that if his Infirmities continu'd upon him longer than an Year, and he were no longer capable of discharging his Episcopal Functions, one might with the Consent of the Clergy of that Church accept of his Resignation, and ordain in his Stead the Person who should be elected to assist him in the Government of his Dioceſs, if he were fit for that Dignity. This Letter is directed to Sancho King of Arragon, and bears Date Jan. the 25th. 1075.

The Letters of Gregory concerning Discipline.

In the seventy seventh Letter of the same Book, directed to Gebehard Archbishop of Salzbourgh, he advertises that Archbishop, that he ought not to detain the Tenths of a certain Territory, wherein a Bishoprick had been founded in the Time of Alexander II.

In the sixth Letter of the fourth Book, he determines that one cannot communicate with a dead Bishop who is excommunicate, nor pray for him: And he absolves him in case that he had involuntarily subscrib'd to what the Emperor had acted against the Church. And in the eighth Letter of the same Book, he orders Absolution to be given at the Point of Death to an excommunicate Bishop, if he requir'd it, even before he had finish'd the Penance assign'd him.

In the tenth Letter of the same Book, directed to the Countess of Flanders, he declares that the Clerks who kept Concubines, ought not to be tolerated to say Mass, or celebrate any Divine Office. And in the twentieth and several others he says, That the People ought not to assist them therein.

In the first Letter of the fifth Book, he reproves the Canons of Lucca for having bought their Benefices, and interdicts all those who had given Money for being instituted and inducted into a great Church, and prohibits them from holding such Benefices.

In the thirteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth of the same Book, he determines that the Elections of Bishops ought to be done by the Clergy and Laity, with an unanimous Freedom and Consent.

In the eleventh Letter of the sixth Book, he enjoyns the Canons of St. Martins of Lucca to live regularly and in Common, or at least to allow their Bishop a Prebendship for the Necessities of the Church.

In the six and thirtieth of the same Book, he threatens to excommunicate those who should buy Benefices. In the thirty fourth, he had reckon'd up three Sorts of Simony, viz. a Manu, ab obsequio, a lingua: The first Sort, is when one gives Money either in ones own Person, or by others, for the obtaining a Benefice. The second, is when in Hopes of a Benefice, one does some signal Service to a Patron, who bestows it by Way of Recompence for that Service. The third is when one petitions, or causes another in one's Behalf to petition for a Benefice, and when one obtains it by Recommendation.

In the second Letter of the seventh Book, he declares the Canons who disobey their Bishop, to have for ever forfeited their Benefices, and forbids both Clergy and Laity from communicating with them.

In the tenth of the same Book, he desires that the Canonical Discipline of Penance should be re-establish'd in England, and sends a Legate thither for that Purpose. He therein declares that that Penance is hypocritical, which is not attended with an Amendment of Life.

In the eleventh, he would not permit Divine Service to be celebrated among the Sclavonians in their own Language.

In the thirteenth, he orders the Bishop of Verdun to enjoyn a Count Penance, who had robb'd a Bishop of Liege in his Journey to Rome, and to anathematize him, in case he would not submit to the Penance.

In the eighth Letter of the eighth Book, he congratulates the Bishop of Salerno, for having found the Relicks of St. Matthew, and exhorts him to shew them the Veneration which they deserve.

In the tenth of the same Book, it is observ'd that the Legate of the Holy See in Sardinia, oblig'd a Grecian Archbishop to cut off his Beard; the which Gregory approv'd of.

In the fifteenth of the same Book, he declares that he had order'd a Bishop of Italy, who had without just Cause relinquish'd his Bishoprick, to retire to the Monastery of Mount Cassin, and to stay there till such Time as it was determin'd what should be done with him. But that Bishop instead of obeying him, re-enter'd upon his Church without his Permission: Wherefore he prohibits his Clergy from acknowledging him for their Bishop, and from obeying him.

In the second Letter of the fourth Book, and in the one and twentieth of the eighth, he undertakes to prove that the Popes might excommunicate Kings and Sovereign Princes, and even absolve their Subjects from the Oath of Allegiance taken to them. But all the Authorities and Arguments which he makes use of to prove the Latter, are such as are either suppositious, or founded on false Matters of Fact, or such as conclude nothing.

In the first Letter of the ninth Book, he reproves the Archbishop of Rouen, for not having sent to desire the Pall from the Holy See, and prohibits him from performing any Ordination, or any Consecration of the Church, till such Time as he should receive it from thence. This is the first Instance we meet with of the Popes obliging Archbishops to take the Pall, under the Penalty of being depos'd till they should receive them.

Gregory VII.

In the four and twentieth of the same Book, he refus'd to ordain a Bishop of Malta, because that Ordination belong'd to the Bishop of Reatino.

The Letters of Gregory concerning Monastical Discipline.

With respect to the Monastical Discipline, Gregory VII. apply'd himself chiefly to preserve or increase the Exemptions and Privileges of Monasteries, or to regulate the Differences which happen'd between the Abbots, the Religious and the Bishops. We have already mention'd several of these Kind of Causes, which he try'd himself at Rome, or referr'd to his Legates, or to other Commissaries upon the Place. We will now relate some others which we have not had Occasion to speak of.

By the two and thirtieth Letter of the first Book, dated Nov. the 27th. 1073. he orders the Bishop of Chartres to re-establish Isimbard Abbot of St. Laumer, who had quitted his Abby to go to Jerusalem, in case he were guilty of no other Fault, and to turn out Guy, who had been put in his Place, and who, they said, had not so much Piety as Isimbard, nor was so proper to govern that Monastery.

In the three and thirtieth, dated the next Day, he writes Word to the Religious of the Monastery of St. Mary, in the Dioceſs of Tortone, that he was not willing to confirm the Privilege, which being under the Name of Alexander II. had been presented to him, by Benedict whom they had elected their Abbot in the Room of Hubert; since he had discover'd it to be forg'd upon these two Accounts, first because it had false Latin in it, and secondly because it contain'd something in it contrary to the Intention of the Canons: That he did not think it advisable to grant them a new one, till the Church of Tortone had a Bishop elected according to the Canon, by whose Consent he might grant them a Privilege conformable to the Ecclesiastical Authority. With Respect to him whom they had elected for their Abbot, he acquaints them, that he did not think him proper for that Place, by Reason of his great Age, and his Infirmities, and that he had advised him to resign it.

In the one and fiftieth Letter of the first Book, he reprimands the Abbot of St. Severus, for not appearing at the Synod of Rome, to answer the Complaints preferr'd against him, concerning the Monastery of the Holy Cross, from which this Abbot was minded to take a Church. He prohibits him from giving that Monastery any Disturbance, and orders him if he thought he had Reason for what he did, to come to the Synod held in November with the Abbot of the Holy Cross. This Letter is dated March the 14th. in the Year, 1074.

By the sixty sixth, sixty seventh, sixty eighth, seventy second, eighty first, eighty second Letters of the same Book; by the fifteenth, seventeenth, forty sixth, fifty ninth, sixtieth, and sixty first of the second Book; by the twenty fourth, twenty fifth, thirty first, and thirty third of the sixth Book; by the seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, and twenty fourth of the seventh Book; and by the sixth, seventh, and twenty ninth of the ninth Book, he vindicates the Privilege of several Monasteries against the Bishops, or any other Persons who seiz'd on their Revennes, and had done any Prejudice to their Rights or Immunities.

Thus have we given you a full Account of the Actions, Conduct, Life, Writings, Sentences, and Determinations of Gregory VII. during his Pontificate, extracted out of his Letters, wherein he has describ'd his own Character, and discover'd what his Sentiments and Designs were. They are in all 359. which compose a Register divided into nine Books, containing all the Letters which he wrote from April 1073. to the Year, 1082. 'Tis observ'd that there was a tenth Book, but 'tis lost: That which is call'd the eleventh, contains only one entire Letter, and the Fragment of another, which may be connected with seven or eight other Letters extracted out of Lanfrank, and St. Anselm, or other Authors.

The various Judgments pass'd upon Gregory.

The Judgments which have been pass'd on the Person, Conduct, Manners and Genius of Gregory VII. have been wholly contrary to each other. His Partisans have represented him to us as a Man very religious and pious, just, equitable, humble, patient, unblameable both in his Life and Morals; a learned Canonist and a good Divine, zealous for the Welfare of the Church, a Lover of Discipline, an Enemy to Vice, a Protector of the Innocent, an undaunted Defender of the Ecclesiastical Rights and Privileges, and a faithful Imitator of Gregory the Great in his Pastoral Care. His Enemies on the contrary have made him pass for a cruel, ambitious, and perfidious Man, who having seiz'd by Force on the Papal Chair, had put the whole Church into Confusion to gratify his Ambition, and to attain to his Designs; who without Respect to the Royal Majesty or to the Sacerdotal Dignity, had a Mind to make Kings his Slaves, and Bishops his Creatures, by depriving the one of their States, and by unjustly condemning the others, that he might afterwards give them Absolution: Who had utterly overturn'd the Discipline of the Church, by being willing to establish in his own Person a Monarchy, or rather Gregory VII. Tyranny over Things both Spiritual and Temporal: Who had advanc'd this unheard of Error ſo far as to maintain, That Popes might, by excommunicating Kings and Princes, diveſt them of their States, and abſolve their Subjects from the Oath of Allegiance taken to them: Who had thunder'd out ſo many Excommunications, and extended them ſo far, that there was ſcarce a Man in his Time who was ſure of not being excommunicated. I omit ſpeaking of the other groſs Enormities with which they charg'd him; ſuch as his being guilty of Sorcery, of holding a diſhoneſt Familiarity with the Princeſs Matilda, and of being in the ſame Error as Berenger was about the Euchariſt. There is no Doubt to be made, but that the Zeal of the one, and the Paſſion of the others, carry'd them both into Extreams. To paſs therefore a right Judgment upon him, it muſt be acknowledg'd, that this Pope was a great Genius, capable of great Things, conſtant and undaunted in the Execution of his Deſigns, well vers'd in the Conſtitutions of his Predeceſſors, zealous for the Intereſts of the Holy See, an Enemy to Simony and Libertiniſm, Vices which he ſtrongly oppos'd, full of Chriſtian Thoughts and Zeal for the Reformation of the Manners of the Clergy; and there is not the leaſt Colour to think that he was tainted in his own Morals. But it muſt likewiſe be confeſs'd, that he was advanc'd to the Papal Chair a little too precipitately: That his Zeal to promote the Grandeur of the Holy See carry'd him to undertake ſuch Things as were unreaſonable and beyond his Power: That he was the Cauſe of great Diſturbances both in the Church and in the Empire: That he aſſum'd to himſelf a Power over Kings and their States, which he never had: And that he carry'd the Eccleſiaſtical Authority of the Holy See beyond its due Bounds. This is the Judgment which we ſuppoſe every one will paſs upon him, who ſhall read over his Letters with a diſintereſted and unprejudic'd Mind. In ſhort, they are penn'd with a great Deal of Eloquence, full of good Matter, and embelliſh'd with noble and pious Thoughts: And we may boldly ſay, that no Pope ſince Gregory I. wrote ſuch ſtrong and fine Letters as this laſt Gregory did.

An Examen of the Decree ſaid to belong to Gregory.

We find among his Letters, after the fifty fifth of the ſecond Book, a Piece intitled, DICTATUS PAPÆ. i. e. An Edict of the Pope, or Papal Deciſions; which contains ſeven and twenty Propoſitions, concerning the Rights of the Holy See, ſome feign'd, and ſome true. The Summary of them is as follows. 1. That the Church of Rome owes its Foundation to none but God alone. 2. That no other Perſon beſide the Pope of Rome has a Right to be call'd UNIVERSAL BISHOP. 3. That 'tis he alone who can depoſe Biſhops and re-eſtabliſh them. 4. That his Legate ought in Council to preſide over all Biſhops, even tho' he be inferior to them in Dignity; and that he may pronounce a Sentence of Depoſition againſt them. 5. That the Pope may depoſe even abſent Biſhops. 6. That no Man ought to live in the ſame Houſe with them whom he has excommunicated. 7. That 'tis lawful for him alone to make new Laws, when Times require it, to found new Churches, to turn a Canonſhip into an Abby, to divide a rich Biſhoprick into two, and to conſolidate poor ones. 8. That 'tis he alone, who can wear the Imperial Robes. 9. That all Princes ſhould kiſs the Pope's Feet, and that 'tis to him alone they ought to pay this Honour. 10. That his Name alone is to be repeated in the Churches. 11. That there is no other Name but his in the World (that is, according to ſome, that to him alone belongs the Name of Pope; an Explication which ſeems to be very much ſtrain'd.) 12. That 'tis lawful to him to depoſe Emperors. 13. That he has the Power of tranſlating Biſhops from one Biſhoprick to another, when there is a Neceſſity for it. 14. That he can ordain a Clerk in any Church whatſoever. 15. That a Clerk whom he has ordain'd, may enter into another Church; but that he cannot be oblig'd to ſerve there; and that he cannot be promoted to a ſuperior Order by any other Biſhop. 16. That no general Council ought to be held without his Order. 17. That no Book can be canonical without his Authority. 18. That his Judgment ought to be corrected by none, and that he can correct the Judgments of all other Perſons. 19. That no Perſon ought to judge him. 20. That no Perſon whatſoever dare to condemn him, who appeals to the Holy See. 21. That the Cognizance of the moſt material Cauſes of all Churches belongs to him. 22. That the Church of Rome has always been, and will always be Infallible, according to the Teſtimony of the Scriptures. 23. That the Pope of Rome ordain'd Canonically, becomes unqueſtionably HOLY by the Merits of St. Peter, according to the Teſtimony of Ennodius Biſhop of Pavia, approv'd of by ſeveral Saints, and as it is recorded in the Decretals of Pope Symmachus. 24. That by his Permiſſion 'tis lawful for Inferiors to accuſe Superiors. 25. That he can depoſe and re-eſtabliſh Biſhops without calling a Synod. 26. That he who does not agree with the Church of Rome, is no true Catholick. 27. That he can declare the Subjects of wicked Princes, abſolv'd from the Oath of Allegiance, which they have taken to them.

Gregory VII.

This Piece has no Relation to the Letter which precedes it, nor to that which follows it; and we have not the leaſt Proof that it was made in the Council of Rome, in the Year 1076. as Baronius pretends. Nor is it probable that it belongs to Gregory VII. For tho' there be in this Collection ſeveral Propoſitions which have Relation to what he wrote in his Letters, yet there are a great many which he never advanc'd, nor approv'd of. There are likewiſe ſome of them that are equivocal, others expreſs'd in odious Terms, and others intolerable. They are almoſt all of them drawn up ſo ill, that one cannot ſay Gregory VII. who had a good Genius, was the Author of them. This is what inclines me to believe, that 'tis the Work of one who was an Enemy to Gregory, who was minded to render his Doctrine odious, by comprehending it in theſe ſeven and twenty Propoſitions drawn up at random, which bear ſome Reſemblance to the Genius and Manners of that Pope. If this Conjecture be not agreeable to ſome, we may ſay that 'tis the Work of ſome Roman bigotted to the Maxims of the Court of Rome, who ſuppos'd he might deduce theſe Propoſitions from the Letters of Gregory VII. and made this Collection of them, which has been ſince inſerted in the Regiſter of that Pope. Let the Caſe be how it will, one cannot ſay without Injuſtice to Gregory, that 'tis his Piece, nor maintain all theſe Propoſitions without doing Injury to the Holy See.

Other Writings of Gregory.

'Tis to be obſerv'd, that the Commentary upon the ſeven Penitential Pſalms, aſcrib'd to Gregory the Great, was compos'd in the Time of Gregory VII. becauſe the Author of this Commentary ſpeaks in three Places, viz. in Pſal. 5. v. 9. 26. and in Pſal. 27. againſt an Emperor of his Days, whom he accuſes of renewing Simony in the Church; of having diſturb'd it by a dangerous Schiſm, of having a Mind to make it his Slave; of having ſeiz'd upon what belong'd to it; of making himſelf Maſter of the Church of Rome, and of having begun to exerciſe his Power againſt it. This has inclin'd many to believe that 'tis the Work of Gregory VII. which his Name made others think that it belong'd to Gregory the Great: But the Style of this Piece does not ſeem ſo elegant as the Style of that Pope: However perhaps he might be more remiſs in a Work of this Nature. There is in England a Commentary upon St. Mathew in Manuſcript, which is aſcribed to Gregory VII. and which they ſay he compos'd whilſt he was only a ſimple Religious: But it has never yet been publiſh'd.

CHAP. VI.

An Account of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who ſucceeded Gregory VII. to the end of this Century.

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who ſucceeded Gregory VII.

AFter the Death of Gregory VII. the Cardinals and the Clergy of Rome had their Eyes upon Didier Abbot of Mount Caſſin, to advance him to the Popedom. Some Authors ſay that Gregory VII. had recommended him to them, before he died. He was deſcended from a noble Family of Benevento, and had ſpent all his Life in the Monaſtery of Mount Caſſin. He at firſt refus'd the Dignity which was offer'd him; ſo that the Holy See remain'd Vacant for almoſt a whole Year. In the mean time Guilbert the Antipope became Maſter of one Part of the Churches of Rome, and would fain have been acknowledg'd for lawful Pope. The Cardinals and Biſhops who acknowledg'd Gregory, to prevent Guilbert's deſign, came to Rome about Eaſter in the Year, 1086. with the Prince of Salerno, and Duke Roger, to proceed to the Election of a Pope. When they were there, they renew'd their Importunities to Didier, to engage him to accept of the Popedom; but he would never expreſly conſent to it. However, they elected him, and having taken him by force, carry'd him to the Church of St. Lewis to proclaim him Pope under the Name of VICTOR. III. But when they were about to put on him the Pontifical Robes, he made ſo great a Reſiſtance, that they could not put his Albe on him, but only caſt a red Cloppe about his Body. Four Days after he left Rome, and when he came to Terracina, threw off all the Enſigns of Pontificate, and retir'd

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who ſucceeded Gregory VII.

Victor III.

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who succeeded Gregory VII.

retir'd to Mount Caſſin, where he liv'd privately, and could by no means be prevail'd upon to be ordain'd. But the Year after in a Council held at Capua during Lent, he yielded to the Intreaties of Duke Roger, of the Prince of Capua and of the Biſhops, reaſſum'd the Purple and Pontifical Groſs; and after he had ſpent the Eaſter Holidays in his Monaſtery, was conducted to Rome by the Princes of Salerno and Capua, who having taken the Church of St. Peter by force from Guilbert, caus'd Victor to be ordain'd by the Biſhops of Oſtia, Freſcati, Pavia and Albany, and plac'd him on the Papal Chair, May the 9*th.* in the ſame Year. This Election was not only oppos'd by the Favourers of Guilbert, but alſo by Hugh, who from the Biſhoprick of Dia was tranſlated to the Archbiſhoprick of Lyons, and pretended to the Popedom; by the Archbiſhop of Aix and by Cardinal Richard Abbot of Marſeilles, who were underhand ſupported by the Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia, who had himſelf likewiſe ſome Votes on his ſide. The Archbiſhop of Lyons was the greateſt oppoſer of Victor's Ordination, and wrote againſt him two Letters to the Princeſs Matilda, to hinder her from acknowledging and aſſiſting him: Accuſing him of holding correſpondence with the Emperor Henry. But theſe Letters made no impreſſion on the Mind of that Princeſs; on the contrary ſhe came forthwith to Rome with ſome Forces, and retook from Guilbert that part of the City of Rome which he was poſſeſs'd of, and the Caſtle of St. Angelo. Within a while after, the Romans who favour'd that Antipope, being got together, aſſaulted the Church of St. Peter on the Vigil of that Apoſtle's Feſtival, and oblig'd thoſe who held out for Victor to throw themſelves into the Caſtle of St. Angelo. The two Parties continued theſe Acts of Hoſtility for ſeveral Days together. But at laſt Victor deſiſted, and retired to his Monaſtery; from whence he went out in Auguſt, to hold a Council at Benevento, compos'd of the Biſhops of Apulia and Calabria; wherein he made a Speech againſt Guilbert, and iſſu'd out a freſh Anathema againſt him. He therein likewiſe excommunicated the Archbiſhop of Lyons, and Richard Abbot of Marſeilles; renew'd the Prohibitions againſt receiving Benefices from the Hands of Lay Patrons, and the Penalties inflicted on thoſe who were Guilty of Simony; and prohibits the receiving the Communion from the Hands of excommunicated and Simoniacal Perſons. Victor fell Sick during this Council, which oblig'd him to return immediately to Mount Caſſin, where he died September the 16*th.* 1087. after he had recommended Otto Biſhop of Oſtia for his Succeſſor.

The Letters of Hugh Archbiſhop of Lyons.

The Council of Benevento under Victor III.

Urban II.

Otto was a French Man of Chatillon upon the Marne in the Dioceſs of Rheims. He had been taken out of the Monaſtery of Cluny to be Cardinal, and had done ſignal Services for Gregory VII. who had ſent him Legate into Germany againſt King Henry. He could not be elected immediately after the Death of Victor; becauſe the Cardinals and the Biſhops were diſpers'd. The Counteſs Matilda conven'd them again to Terracina the beginning of Lent in the Year enſuing, whither John Biſhop of Porto, brought the Conſent of the abſent Cardinals; and Benedict Prefect of Rome, brought a Commiſſion from the People of that City, to acknowledge him who ſhould be elected Pope by the Aſſembly. Otto was proclaim'd by the Cardinal Biſhops of Porto, Freſcati, and Albany, and the Choice confirm'd by the whole Aſſembly. They gave him the Name of Urban II. and plac'd him on the Papal Chair. Upon his departure from Terracina, he went to Mount Caſſin, where they ſay that he was miraculouſly cur'd of a Pain in his Side, by St. Benedict who appear'd to him, and who aſſur'd him that his Body was repoſited in that Monaſtery. Roger and Beaumont the Counts of Apulia and Calabria, waited upon him in that Place, and carry'd him along with them into Apulia. He was almoſt conſtantly reſident on their Territories or in Campania, and went now and then to Rome, which ſometimes favour'd Guilbert, and ſometimes Him. For Guilbert was at firſt turn'd out by the Romans, and oblig'd to renounce the Popedom. Afterwards he was receiv'd there in the Year, 1091. retook the Caſtle of St. Angelo, and continued Lord of that City, ſo long as the Emperor Henry had the better of it: But his Son Conrad revolting in the Year, 1093. and in League with Welpho Duke of Italy, whom Urban had got to Marry the Princeſs Matilda; Guilbert's Faction began to grow weaker, and Conrad whom that Pope favour'd in his Revolt, caus'd Urban to be acknowledg'd in Lombardy, and to be receiv'd in Placenza, where he held a famous Council in the Year, 1095. He went from thence into France, where he call'd a Council at Clermont in Auvergne, wherein he gave in the Project of the grand CROISADE, which was perform'd under his Popedom in the Eaſt. When he return'd into Italy, he at laſt became Maſter of Rome, tho' Guilbert had a great many Favourers in that City. He dy'd there July the 29*th.* in the Year, 1099.

The Letters of Urban II.

The Regiſter of this Pope's Letters is loſt: Thoſe that are left us are as follow.

Urban's firſt Letter, is a Privilege granted to the Monaſtery of Bantino, which the Pope had founded at the Inſtance of the Dukes Roger and Beaumont.

The ſecond and third are directed to the Archbiſhops of Toledo and Tarragon, about their Primacy.

In the fourth, he preſcribes to the Archbiſhop of Milan the method he ought to uſe in reconciling thoſe who had been ordain'd during the Schiſm: Which is to order them to come at the time wherein he gives the Bleſſing, and the Impoſition of Hands, that is, at the time of Ordination, and to perform all the Ceremonies with relation to them, except the Unction.

By the fifth, he confirms to the Archbiſhop of Bari or Canoſa, the dignity of Metropolitan, and grants him the Pall.

In the ſixth, he exhorts the Dukes Roger and Beaumont to protect the Abbot and Monks of Bantino, againſt the Lords who perſecuted them, and ſeiz'd upon their Eſtates.

In the ſeventh, he grants the Archbiſhoprick of Tarragon to the Biſhop of Vich, which Berenger Count of Barcelona had lately re-eſtabliſh'd and peopled with Chriſtians.

In the eighth, he ſent word to the Clergy and People of Chartres, that he approv'd of the Choice which they had made of Yves for their Biſhop in the place of Geofry who had been depos'd, and that he would ſend him to them, after he had conſecrated him. By the following Letter he acquainted Richerus Archbiſhop of Sens with the ſame thing, who had refus'd to Conſecrate him, and enjoyns him to receive him, and to uſe him kindly. This Letter is follow'd by a Diſcourſe of that Pope, which contains a great many Inſtructions in a few Words, directed to Yves of Chartres after his Conſecration.

The tenth is a Privilege granted by the Pope and Duke Roger to the Monaſtery of Cave.

The eleventh and twelfth contain the Confirmation of the Privileges granted to the Canons of St. Martin of Tours.

The thirteenth is a kind of Declaration which the Pope made to Roger Count of Calabria and Sicily, that he would not ſend any Legate into his Dominions without his Conſent: That he and the Princes his Succeſſors ſhall be the innate Legates of the Holy See in their own Territories: And that when the Pope ſhall ſend for any Biſhops or Abbots of their Country, he gives them leave to ſend whom they pleas'd, and retain thoſe whom they ſhould think fit.

In the fourteenth, he advertiſes the Count Radulphus, that the Clerks ought to be Subject to none beſides their Biſhops, and that ſecular Perſons have no Juriſdiction over them.

In the fifteenth, he interdicts a Prieſt of Salerno, who held a Church as the Patronage of a Laick, and pronounces the ſame Penalty againſt all thoſe who receiv'd the Inveſtiture of Benefices from any beſide their Biſhops.

By the ſixteenth, he acquaints Alexius the Emperor of Conſtantinople, of the great number of thoſe engag'd in the CROISADE for the Relief of the Chriſtians of the Eaſt, and exhorts him to aſſiſt them in their Expedition.

In the ſeventeenth, he replies to Lucius Provoſt of St. Iuvenſius of Pavia upon ſeveral Queſtions which he had propoſed to him. In this Letter he proves that all manner of Selling Eccleſiaſtical Things is Simony. And as to what that Provoſt had demanded, whether the Ordinations and Sacraments adminiſtred by the Simoniacal, by the Adulterous, or by any other notorious Offenders, were valid: He replies, that in caſe they be not ſeparated from the Church by Schiſm or Hereſy, their Ordinations are valid, and their Sacraments Holy and Venerable: That however his Predeceſſors Pope Nicholas II. and Pope Gregory VII. had prohibited the aſſiſting at the Maſs of ſuch Prieſts as were Guilty of theſe Irregularities, in order to bring them to Penance: But as to Schiſmaticks and Hereticks, that they have indeed the Form of the Sacraments, but not the Power and Efficacy of them; and that they do not produce their Effect, till thoſe who have received them are reconcil'd to the Church by the impoſition of Hands.

The eighteenth is a confirmation of the Privileges granted to the Archbiſhop of Salerno.

In the nineteenth, he acquaints two Abbots of Foſſombrona, that he had excommunicated and depos'd Gueziſon Archbiſhop of Maience, who was conſecrated by excommunicated Perſons.

In the twentieth, directed to the Archbiſhop of Sens and other Biſhops of France, he declares that no Biſhop has any power of abſolving the King of France, whom he had excommunicated.

In the one and twentieth, he wrote to the Archbiſhop of Lyons to uſe his utmoſt Endeavours to oblige an Abbot to return to his Abby, who was withdrawn to lead an heremetical Life.

The ancient Collection of Urban's Letters contains only theſe one twenty: There have been ſeveral others added since, of which a new Collection is made under other Heads.

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who succeeded Gregory VII.

The first of these is a Letter directed to Gebehard Bishop of Constance, about the Difficulties he met with in executing the Excommunications thunder'd out by Gregory VII. He therein determines, (1.) That Guilbert and King Henry are excommunicated. (2.) That all those who assist them are excommunicated likewise. (3.) That those who Communicate with these excommunicated Persons to the third Degree, ought not to be admitted into the Communion of the Church till they have been absolv'd. (4.) That he will make an Order in a general Council concerning the Clerks who have been ordain'd by excommunicated Bishops; but that in the mean Time, they ought to hold their Orders, who have been ordain'd without Simony by Catholick, tho' excommunicated Bishops, after they had been enjoyn'd Penance: But yet they should not be permitted to take upon them any higher Order without urgent Necessity. (5.) That he ought to turn out of the Clerical Order all those who are guilty of a Crime which deserves to be punish'd according to Law, whether they have committed it before or after their Ordination. Lastly, he makes that Bishop, as well as the Bishop of Passaw, Vicar of the Holy See for the Ecclesiastical Affairs of Germany.

The second is directed to Robert Count of Flanders, whom he exhorts to suffer the Church to enjoy the Revenues which belong to it. Notwithstanding this Remonstrance, that Prince continu'd to rifle the Revenues of the Church; whereupon the Clergy of Flanders preferr'd their Complaints against him to the Archbishop of Rheims, who order'd in a Council held in the Year, 1092. that Robert should restore to the Churches what he had taken away from them, under the Pain of Excommunication. That Prince obey'd, and dy'd within a short Time after.

The next fourteen relate to the Re-establishment of the Bishoprick of Arras.

In the seventeenth, directed to Pibo Bishop of Toul, he renews the Decrees of Gregory VII. against the Simoniacal, and those who kept Concubines; and the Decree which prohibits the Children of Priests from entring into Holy Orders. He repeats what he had said in his Letter to Gebehard concerning Ordinations which were perform'd by excommunicated Persons. He excommunicates the Simoniacal, and declares that the Churches which they consecrate, ought to be consecrated over again by a Catholick Bishop. He leaves to the Pleasure of Bishops, the receiving or rejecting those who are ordain'd without a Title. Lastly, He renews the Law which forbids Holy Orders to those who were guilty of Bigamy.

In the eighteenth, he permits Richerus Archbishop of Sens, to bestow some Livings on some Regular Canons.

In the nineteenth, he answers Hugh Archbishop of Lyons, that he may, if he thinks fit, admit of the Ordinations of the Clerks of his Diocess, who have receiv'd Orders from the Hands of another Bishop, if there be no other defect in their Ordination.

In the twentieth, he admonishes the Bishop of Laon, not to take away from the Monks of St. Remy of Rheims, a Church which they had in his Diocess, and determines in the general, that all the Churches which the Monks have been in Possession of for thirty or forty Years together, shall still be theirs.

In the one and twentieth, he recommends to Count Raimond and the People of Narbonne, their Archbishop Dalmatius, and orders them to cause Restitution to be made to the Church of Narbonne, of all the Revenues which belong to it.

In the two and twentieth, he orders the Abbot of Toneri to restore several Revenues which he had taken from the Church of Narbonne, and the Monastery of St. Cucufate of Barcelona. By the next Letter he refers that Affair to Rainier his Legate upon the Place.

The nine next Letters concern the Primacy of the Church of Toledo.

The thirty third, contains an Agreement between the Monks of St. Aubin of Angers, and the Monks of Trinity of Vendome.

By the four and thirtieth, he enjoyns the Count of Poitiers to restore several Revenues which he had taken away from the Monastery of Vendome.

In the five and thirtieth, he upbraids the Archbishop of Rheims and the Bishops his Suffragans, for having permitted the King of France to part from his Wife, and to marry one of his Kindred, and for that the Bishop of Senlis had bless'd him upon the Marriage. He exhorts them to reprove the King, to prevail upon him to turn to his Duty, to set at Liberty Ives of Chartres, and if he did not obey, to excommunicate him, and interdict his Kingdom.

These Letters are follow'd by a Collection of several Letters of Reginald Archbishop of Rheims, of Pope Urban, of Lambert Bishop of Arras, and of several others written about the Ordination of that Bishop of Arras, who having been elected by the Clergy and Laity of that City, had been deny'd Ordination by the Archbishop of Rheims. Pope Urban being inform'd thereof, enjoyns that Archbishop to ordain him. Instead of doing it, he sent him to Rome, where the Pope ordain'd him himself. The Archbishop of Rheims was oblig'd to approve of this Ordination, and he wrote to Robert Count of Flanders in his Behalf. The Pope when he went into France, sent for Lambert to the Council of Clermont. That Bishop was taken Prisoner as he was going through Provence, and set at Liberty afterwards at the Pope's Desire, who gave him a very kind Reception, confirm'd the Privileges of the Church of Arras, and depos'd Gaucher Bishop of Cambray. Sometime after the Archbishop of Rheims wrote to Lambert against a Lord who had plunder'd and burnt a Village belonging to the Church of Cambray. This is the Subject Matter of the Letters we mention'd.

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who succeeded Gregory VII.

Pope Urban held several Councils; the first at Rome in the Year, 1089. wherein he confirm'd all that Gregory VII. had done against Guilbert. Several Lords propos'd to the Emperor Henry, to abandon Guilbert, for the procuring of Peace to the Empire and the Church. He was well enough inclin'd to it, but was diverted from it by his Bishops, who fear'd being depos'd as well as Guilbert. The Council of Rome, in the Year 1089.

The same Year Urban held a Council at Melphi, wherein he renew'd the Decrees against the Simoniacal, and concerning the Celibacy of those who were in Holy Orders. He therein enjoyns that none should be admitted into Holy Orders but such as had led chast Lives, and had never been marry'd to any more than one Woman: That none should be ordain'd Subdeacon before he was fourteen Years old, nor Deacon before one and twenty, nor Priest before thirty. He therein prohibits Laicks from granting the Donation of Churches, without the Consent of the Bishop or the Pope: And Abbots from exacting Money of those who took upon them the Monastical Habit. He therein abolish'd the Custom of exempt Clerks, who either were in the Service of great Lords or depended on them. He therein declares the Sons of Priests uncapable of entring into Holy Orders, unless they have taken upon them the Monastical Habit; and he advises Ecclesiasticks to behave themselves modestly. This is the Subject Matter of the sixteen Canons made in that Council, which was held in the Presence of Count Roger. The Council of Melphi, in the Year, 1089.

The Legates of this Pope, held a Council at Toulouse in the Year, 1090. wherein they made several Decrees about Discipline. The Archbishop of Toulouse clear'd himself in this Council, and they there resolv'd to send Legates to Toledo for the re-establishing of the Faith. The Council of Toulouse, in the Year, 1090.

In the Year, 1091. August the 1*st*. Urban held a Council at Benevento, wherein he renew'd the Condemnations issu'd out against Guilbert, and made four Canons. By the first, he prohibits the electing any one for Bishop who is not in Holy Orders, that is, according to his Explication, who is not Deacon or Priest: And with respect to Subdeacons, he enjoyns, that they cannot be promoted to Episcopacy, unless upon an extraordinary Occasion, and with the Permission of the Holy See. In the second, he suspends ab officio the Chaplains who are nominated and paid by Lay-Patrons, without the Consent of the Bishop. In the third, he prohibits the receiving Clerks, who were Strangers, without Letters Dimissory from their Bishop. In the fourth, Laicks are forbid the eating of Flesh after Ashwednesday, and all the Faithful of both Sexes are enjoyn'd to put Ashes on their Heads on that Day: It is likewise order'd that no Marriage shall be solemniz'd from Septuagesima Sunday till after the Octave of Whitsuntide, and from the first Sunday in Advent till after the Octave of Epiphany. The Council of Benevento, in the Year, 1091.

In the Year, 1093. he held a Council in a City of Apulia, call'd Troyes, wherein he renew'd the Prohibitions against contracting Marriages between Kindred. The Council of Troyes in Apulia, in the Year, 1093.

In the Year, 1094. Gebehard Bishop of Constance, his Legate in Germany, held a Council in his City against Incontinent and Simoniacal Clerks. He likewise order'd that Ember Week in March should be held the first Week in Lent, and that in June the Whitsun-Week, and that there should be no more than three Holy-days at Easter and Whitsuntide; for till then they were us'd to keep Holy-day all the Week long. The Princess Praxedis, Henry the Emperor's Wife, appear'd before that Council, and discover'd a great many Enormities, which she said she had been constrain'd by her Husband to commit. The Council of Constance, in the Year, 1094.

She made the same Declaration before the Pope, in the Council held at Plaisance in the Year, 1095. during Lent, which was so numerous that they were forc'd to hold the Assembly in the open Field. Philip King of France sent his Ambassadors thither to excuse his not appearing. The Pope allow'd him Time till Whitsuntide. Hugh Archbishop of Lyons was suspended in this Council, because he neither appear'd there himself, nor sent any Deputy to excuse him. The Pope gave audience to the Ambassadors of the Emperor of Constantinople, who demanded assistance against the Infidels, and he engag'd the Lords who were there present The Council of Plaisance, in the Year, 1095.

to

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who ſucceeded Gregory VII.

to promiſe to go into the Eaſt for that Purpoſe: This was the firſt Step towards the CROISADE, which was fully reſolv'd upon in the Council of Clermont. There were likewiſe ſeveral Rules of Diſcipline made in this Council, by which it is order'd that thoſe who will not Part with their Concubines, or pardon their Enemies, or were habituated in any mortal Sin, ſhould not be admitted to the Holy Communion. That the Prieſts ſhall admit none to Penance but thoſe who ſhall be referr'd to them by the Biſhops. That the Euchariſt ſhall not be deny'd to thoſe, who ſhall confeſs themſelves as they ought. They renew'd likewiſe the Decrees againſt the Simoniacal, and the Incontinent, and the Judgments paſs'd againſt the Hereſy of Berenger, againſt Guilbert, and againſt thoſe who were ordain'd by Schiſmaticks.

The Council of Clermont in the Year, 1095.

Urban going into France, in November, 1095. held a Council at Clermont in Auvergne, which was compos'd of thirteen Archbiſhops, and a great many Biſhops their Suffragans; wherein he confirms the Decrees of the Council of Plaiſance, and made other new ones; publiſh'd the CROISADE for the Eaſt; excommunicated King Philip; confirm'd the Primacy of the Archbiſhop of Lyons, and made a great many other Inſtitutions. Theſe are the Things we will ſpeak of more particularly, and will begin with the Excommunication of Philip I. King of France. This Prince had put away his Wife Bertha, the Daughter of Florentius the chief Count of Holland, and of Gertrude of of Saxony, for being too nigh a Kin to Him. This Divorce having been made in form by the Authority of the Church in the Year, 1086. and in Purſuance of a juridical Sentence, the King baniſh'd her to Monſtrevil a Sea Port, and look'd after another Wife. At firſt he courted the Daughter of Roger Count of Sicily, nam'd Emma, who was carry'd to the Borders of Provence; but the Match broke off, perhaps becauſe ſhe did not think it ſafe to marry a Prince who had another Wife Living. Bertrade the Daughter of Simon of Montfert, who had marry'd Fulcus Rechinus Count of Anjou, pleas'd the King, and ſhe made no ſcruple to part from her Husband and marry him: She was the Kings Relation in the fifth or ſixth Degree, and Rechinus her Husband, in the third or fourth Degree. Beſides, if Philip were free as he pretended, Bertrade was not, her firſt Marriage being ſtill valid. All theſe Conſiderations were of no Weight to King Philip, who ſurmounted them all, and reſolv'd upon ſolemnizing this Marriage with Bertrade publickly. He fix'd upon a Day to celebrate it at Paris, and ſent for Reginald Archbiſhop of Rheims, Yves of Chartres, and ſeveral other Prelates to render the Solemnity the more Authentick. Yves of Chartres ſent the King word, that he could not be there, nor could he conſent to, or approve of that Marriage, becauſe his Divorce from Bertha had not as yet been confirm'd by the Authority of the Holy See, and becauſe Bertrade could not marry him, being another Man's Wife. He ſent likewiſe word to the Archbiſhop of Rheims; that he ought not to celebrate this Marriage, but rather to diſſuade the King from it. Laſtly, he wrote to Hugh Archbiſhop of Lyons (who becauſe of this Buſineſs refus'd to take upon him the Quality of Legate of the Holy See in France) telling him that he ought to be inſpirited with a Holy Zeal in order to oppoſe this Criminal Proceeding of the King. Notwithſtanding this, Philip, marry'd Bertrade, and found out a Biſhop who dar'd to marry them for the Revenue of ſome Churches which the King gave him. Hugh of Lyons at the inſtance of Yves of Chartres held a Council at Autun October the 16*th*. in the Year, 1094. wherein he excommunicated Philip, becauſe he had married a ſecond Wife whilſt the firſt was Living. In this Council he likewiſe renew'd the Excommunications againſt the Emperor Henry, and againſt the Antipope Guilbert; and the Decrees againſt the Simony and Incontinence of the Clergy; and prohibited Monks from uſurping the Functions and Rights of Curats. Pope Urban ſuſpended the Execution of this Decree againſt Philip, and cited him to the Council of Plaiſance, whither he ſent, as we mention'd before, his Ambaſſadors, who obtain'd a farther Reſpite till Whitſuntide. Afterwards when Urban was come to France, the King ſent his Deputies before him, to endeavour to work the Pope into a good Diſpoſition, and to prevail upon him to cancel the Excommunication, and to confirm his Marriage: But the Pope being prevented by the Letters of Yves of Chartres, refus'd to grant him what he deſir'd, and wrote to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of France ordering them to exhort the King to do Penance for his Fault, and to part from Bertrade: Yves of Chartres was the only Perſon who did it with Reſolution, which was the Cauſe of his being perſecuted, and taken Priſoner. The Pope perceiving that all his Admonitions prov'd ineffectual, in the Council of Clermont thunder'd out a Bull of Excommunication againſt King Philip, and his Concubine Bertrade.

King Philip I. Divorc'd from Bertha.

The Council of Autun in the Year, 1094.

The CROISADE under Urban II.

As to the CROISADE ſet on foot for the Relief of the Chriſtians in the Eaſt, Gregory VII. was the firſt Promoter of it, but could not put it into Practice becauſe of his Differences with the Emperor. Victor III. notwithſtanding the Difficulties he labour'd under, found out a Means of ſending an hundred thouſand fighting Men into Africa againſt the Infidels. Urban in Imitation of thoſe great Exemplars, and being importun'd by the Letters of Alexius Emperor of the Eaſt, and by the Remonſtrances of Peter the Hermit, a Gentleman of Picardy neat Amiens, who had brought a Letter from Jeruſalem from the Patriarch Simeon, who conjur'd the Chriſtians to free the Holy Land from the Tyranny of the Turks, did ſo animate the By-ſtanders, by his warm and pathetical Diſcourſes to undertake the Conquering of the Holy Land, and ſo far prevail'd upon all the Prelates to make uſe of the ſame Exhortations in their Dioceſſes, that within a very ſhort Time an infinite Number of Men were liſted for that Service, and took a Voyage by Sea under the Conduct of a great many Princes and Perſons of Quality. The Badge which the Soldiers wore was a Red Croſs ſew'd on the left Shoulder, and the Military Word, Deo placet.

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who ſucceeded Gregory VII.

The Canons of the Council of Clermont.

We have not all the Canons which were made in this Council of Clermont compleat, but only an Abridgment of them, of which the largeſt is that which was made by Lambert Biſhop of Arras, who was, as we ſaid before, at that Council. They are two and thirty in all. The firſt takes notice of the Days wherein the Breach of the Peace or Truce of God was made. The ſecond imports, that the Voyage of thoſe who went to Jeruſalem out of Devotion to deliver the Church of that City, ſhall ſerve them inſtead of all manner of Penances. The third, that the Deaneries of Churches ſhall be beſtow'd only on Prieſts; and the Archdeaconeries only on Deacons. The fourth, that the Clerks ſhall not bear Arms. The fifth, that Laicks cannot be choſen Biſhops, and that thoſe who are elected, ſhall be Subdeacons at leaſt. The ſixth, that no Perſon ſhall ſell Prebendſhips or any other Benefices, and that thoſe who ſhall give any Money for them, ſhall reſign them into the Hands of the Biſhop. The ſeventh, that the Altars beſtow'd on the Congregations of Monks or Canons, after the Death of thoſe who gave them ſhall be at the Diſpoſal of the Biſhops, if they have not been confirm'd to them by their Letters. The eighth, that no Perſon ſhall exact any Duty for Burial. The ninth and tenth are againſt thoſe Clerks who keep Concubines. The eleventh prohibits the promoting to Holy Orders and to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities the Sons of Concubines; or the beſtowing any Benefices upon them unleſs they have embrac'd the Monaſtical or Canonical Life. The twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth prohibit one and the ſame Perſon from holding two Prebendſhips, or two Livings in the ſame, or in ſeveral Churches, and from altering the Title. The fifteenth prohibits the receiving the inveſtiture of Livings from Lay Patrons. The ſixteenth prohibits Kings and Princes from granting the inveſtiture of Livings. The ſeventeenth prohibits Biſhops and Prieſts from taking an Oath of Allegiance to Kings or any other Laick. The eighteenth prohibits Laicks from having Chaplains Independent on the Biſhop. The nineteenth and twentieth prohibit them from detaining the Tenths or Churches. The one and two and twentieth prohibits the granting Abſolution to thoſe who are in Poſſeſſion of another's Right, unleſs they make Reſtitution; and to thoſe who live in the habitual Commiſſion of any mortal Sin. The three and twentieth prohibits Chriſtians from eating Fleſh from Aſhwedneſday till Eaſter. The four and twentieth fixes the Times of Ordination, viz. the four Ember Weeks, and the Saturday of the third Week in Lent: And declares that if it were poſſible, they ſhould continue their faſt till Sunday Morning, that ſo the Celebration of Holy Orders might be on that Day. The five and twentieth imports, that the Children of Prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons ſhall not be promoted to Holy Orders, if they be not either Monks or regular Canons. The ſix and twentieth, that on Holy Saturday the Faſt ſhall laſt till Night. The ſeven and twentieth, that the Ember Week in Spring ſhall be always the firſt Week of Lent, and that in Summer in the Whitſun Week. The eighth and twentieth, that all thoſe who ſhall communicate at the Altar ſhall receive the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt under both Kinds, if there be no Neceſſity or Proviſion made for the Contrary. The nine and twentieth and thirtieth, that thoſe who fly to a Croſs, when purſued by their Enemies, ſhall be as ſecure as thoſe who fly into a Church: And that they ſhall not be deliver'd up to Juſtice, till they are aſſur'd that no Violence ſhall be offer'd to their Lives or Members. The one and thirtieth anathematizes thoſe who ſhall ſeize on the Revenues of the Church. And the two and thirtieth declares that thoſe who ſhall apprehend or impriſon a Biſhop, ſhall be in perpetual Diſgrace, and never capable of bearing Arms.

The Confirmation of the Primacy of Lyons.

In this very Council Pope Urban confirm'd the Primacy of the Archbiſhop of Lyons, in Oppoſition to the Archbiſhop of Sens, as 'tis intimated in the Bull of Confirmation, dated the firſt of December in the Year, 1095. publiſh'd by Monſieur de Marca, with an ingenious Diſcourſe of his own about Primacies. Richerus Archbiſhop of Sens would not ſubmit to this Conſtitution; but Hugh Archbiſhop of Lyons, got it ratified in the two ſucceeding Councils held at Tours and at Niſmes: And Urban oblig'd Danibert, who ſucceeded Richerus, to promiſe that he would acknowledge the Archbiſhop of Lyons for his Primat. Urban likewiſe in this Council adjuſted the Difference which was between the Archbiſhop of Tours and the Monks of the Monaſtery of St. Martins, upon Condition that that Archbiſhop ſhould not have any Station, nor perform any Office in their Church, nor be capable of excommunicating them: Only they ſhould receive Holy Orders and the other Sacraments from the Hands of the Archbiſhop of Tours.

Of the Church of Rome, and of the Popes who ſucceeded Gregory VII.

The Council of Limoges in the Year, 1095.

Before the Council of Clermont broke up, the Pope appointed another Council at Tours, to be held in Lent the Year enſuing; and in his Journey thither he held a Council at Limoges in December, 1095. wherein 'tis ſaid that he depos'd Humboldus Biſhop of that City. When he arriv'd at Tours he held a Council there according to Appointment, wherein he renew'd his Exhortations to engage all manner of Perſons to undertake the Expedition to the Holy-Land, and adjuſted the Differences of ſeveral Monaſteries. From thence he went to Niſmes, where he held another Council, wherein he gave abſolution to King Philip, who promis'd to part from Bertrade; and made ſixteen Canons.

The Council of Tours and Niſmes in the Year, 1096.

The Canons of the Council of Niſmes.

By the firſt all Biſhops are prohibited from beſtowing Altars, Churches or Prebendſhips for Money: And a Reſervation is made to the Monks of the Altars and Tenths which they have been in Poſſeſſion of for thirty Years paſt, upon Condition that they pay the yearly Quit-rent. It is therein likewiſe order'd that the Monks ſhall not inſtitute and induct Prieſts into the Churches which they poſſeſs, without the Conſent of the Biſhop: That they ſhall be inſtituted and inducted into them by the Biſhop with the Approbation of the Abbot, and that they ſhall be accountable to the Biſhop for the Spiritualities, and to the Abbot for the Temporalities.

By the ſecond and third it is prov'd by ſeveral Authorities, that the Monks may adminiſter the Sacraments, and take upon them the Care of Souls.

The fourth ſets a Brand of Infamy upon, and excommunicates thoſe who dare to make the Eccleſiaſticks Priſoners.

The fifth enjoyns that after the Death of the Biſhop, two Perſons of Probity ſhall be made choice of to take care of the Revenues of his Church, and to preſerve them for the Uſe of his Succeſſor: And excommunicates all that ſhall ſeize on them; and interdicts the Cathedral Church and the Churches that depend upon it.

The ſixth and ſeventh excommunicate the Laicks who poſſeſs or detain the Revenues of the Church.

The eighth injoyns that thoſe who ſhall receive Benefices from the Hands of Laicks ſhall be ſuſpended ab officio.

The ninth, that thoſe, who leave a ſmall Church to go to a great one, ſhall loſe both of them.

The tenth, that thoſe who marry their Relations ſhall be excommunicated.

The eleventh, that Raviſhers who are kill'd in the very Rape, without having done Penance, ſhall be depriv'd of Chriſtian Burial, and of the Prayers of the Church.

The twelfth, that the Prieſts who are guilty of Fornication ſhall be depos'd.

The thirteenth, that young Women ſhall not be marry'd before they are twelve Years old.

The fourteenth, that it is not Lawful to alien the Revenues given to the Church, nor to cite Clerks before ſecular Judges.

The fifteenth, that Biſhops ſhall not entertain thoſe who have been excommunicated by other Biſhops.

The ſixteenth, that Monks ſhall not grant Burial to, nor admit to Divine Service Perſons who are excommunicated, ſuſpended, or are guilty of Rape.

The Councils of Bari and Rome in the Year, 1098.

When the Pope was return'd to Italy, he held a Council at Bari in the Year, 1098. wherein St. Anſelm diſputed againſt the Greeks about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt. He held likewiſe another Council about the End of the ſame Year at Rome, of which we have no Monument, except his granting a farther Time to the King of England. Laſtly, in the Year, 1099. he call'd a grand Council at Rome the laſt of March, wherein he publiſhed eighteen Canons, which are only a Repetition of the Canons of the Council of Placenza, and of the other laſt Councils, againſt the Simoniacal, and the Uſurpators of the Revenues of the Church.

The Council of Roan in the Year, 1096.

The Canons of the Council of Clermont were publiſh'd and confirm'd in a Council held at Roan in the Year, 1096. under William Archbiſhop of that City, wherein eight Canons were made, of which the firſt four are about that which they call the Truce of God: That is to ſay, the Days wherein it is prohibited to make War, and the Perſons whom 'tis not Lawful to Aſſault. The fifth reſerves to the Churches all the Revenues of which they were in Poſſeſſion, and prohibits Laicks from exacting any thing from them. The ſixth prohibits likewiſe Laicks from giving Churches to, or taking them from Prieſts without the Conſent of the Biſhop; and prohibits in general all the Faithful from wearing long Hair. The ſeventh imports that Laicks ſhall have no Eccleſiaſtical Courts of Judicature. And the eighth, that the Prieſts ſhall not be Vaſſals to Laicks.

CHAP. VII.

An Account of the Controverſies on foot between the Latin and the Greek Churches in the eleventh Century.

Of the Controverſies between the Latin and the Greek Churches.

THO' the Latin and Greek Churches were not in a cloſe Communion with each other ever ſince the Affair of Photius, yet they did not proceed to an open Rupture till the Time of Pope Leo IX. and of Michael Cerularius Patriarch of Conſtantinople. This Breach began by a Letter which the Latter wrote in the Year, 1053. in his own Name, and in the Name of Leo Archbiſhop of Acridia and of all Bulgaria, to John Biſhop of Trani in Apulia, that he might communicate it to the Pope and to all the Weſtern Church. In this Letter they reprov'd the Latins. (1.) Becauſe they made uſe of unleaven'd Bread in the Celebration of the Euchariſt. (2.) Becauſe they faſted on the Saturdays in Lent. (3.) Becauſe they eat the Blood of Beaſts, and Things ſtrangled. (4.) Becauſe they did not Sing ALLELUIAH in Lent. At the ſame Time Michael Cerularius order'd the Churches of the Latins who were at Conſtantinople to be ſhut up, and to deprive the Abbots and Latin Religious, who would not renounce the Ceremonies of the Roman Church, of the Monaſteries which they held in that City.

The Letter of Leo IX. to Cerularius.

This Letter of Michael being brought into Italy by an Officer of the Emperor Conſtantine Monomachus, who went thither to carry on a Treaty with the Pope againſt the Normans, was communicated to Cardinal Humbert, who was at Trani; he turn'd it into Latin, and ſent a Copy of it to Pope Leo. This Pope wrote upon that Subject a Letter to Cerularius and to Leo of Acridia, wherein he extols the Dignity of the Church of Rome, and complains of the unkind Uſage which the Greeks had ſhewn to the Latins at Conſtantinople without diſcanting on any of the particular Points. He only obſerv'd in general, that the Diverſity of Ceremonies is no lawful Foundation for the Breach of the Unity of the Church. This is the firſt Letter of Leo, of which we have made Mention in another Place.

Of the Controverſies between the Latin and the Greek Churches.

The Greek Emperor, whoſe Intereſt it was to hold it fair with the Pope, that he might ſtill be Maſter of that little which he had in the Weſt, wrote him a Letter, whereby he declares that he was willing to procure the Union of both Churches: And the Patriarch of Conſtantinople took notice to him likewiſe that he deſir'd the ſame. The Pope who as much deſired this Re-union as the Greeks, as well for the Welfare of the Church, as becauſe he was willing to be ſecur'd againſt the Normans in Apulia, the next Year ſent three Legates to Conſtantinople, viz. Cardinal Humbert Biſhop of Blancheſolva, Cardinal Frederick Archdeacon and Chancellor of the Church of Rome; and Peter Archbiſhop of Melphi. He ſent them with Letters to the Emperor and to the Patriarch, wherein he commends the Zeal which the Emperor expreſs'd for the Peace of the Church, and complain'd of the Patriarch's Proceedings againſt the Church of Rome, even at a Time when he pretended to be deſirous of Peace. Theſe are the ſixth and ſeventh Letters of Leo. In that which is directed to the Patriarch he upbraids him with four Things of which Mention is made * before, and which 'tis not thought fit to repeat. This Letter is dated in January, 1054.

The Letter of the Greek Emperor to the Pope.

The Legation of the Pope to* Conſtantinople p. 25, 26.

The Legates being arriv'd at Conſtantinople on the Feaſt of St. John Baptiſt, were kindly receiv'd by the Emperor, Prince the Pope's Letters, and gave Michael that which was directed to him. He likewiſe preſented to the Emperor a Writing which he had compos'd in Anſwer to the Letter of Cerularius, with a Refutation of the Treatiſe compos'd by Nicetas Pectoratus Monk of Studia, againſt the Practices of the Latins. The Emperor having caus'd them to be turn'd into Greek, made them to be publiſh'd in Conſtantinople, concealing the Names of Humbert and Michael under thoſe of Romanus and Conſtantinopolitanus.

Humbert preſents the writings and Letters to the Emperor of Greece.

In

Of the Controversies between the Latin and Greek Churches.

Humbert's Reply to the Letter of Cerularius.

In the Reply to the Letter of Cerularius, Humbert accuses the Greeks of tolerating Hereticks among them, and surpassing all of them in their Rashness; because they had the Confidence to confront the Church of Rome, and to anathematize it openly; which never any Heretick dar'd to do. He afterwards demonstrates that 'tis a Piece of Malice to accuse the Latins of imitating the Jews in Unleaven'd Bread, and in the Sabbath: Since they observe not the Crremonies of their Passovers; and are so far from feasting on their Sabbath, that they fast on that Day. That this reflected rather on the Greeks, who spent the Saturday in Mirth, as if it were a festival Day. He proves that the Unleaven'd is the true Bread, and enlarges himself on the Advantages and mystical Significations, which it may have. He observes that the Bread which is offer'd in the Church of Rome is a great deal more proper and convenient than that which the Greeks make use of; because 'tis made in the Vestry with fine Wheat, and clear Water by the Ministers of the Altar, and they offer a whole Loaf: Whereas the Greeks make use of all Manner of Bread, of which they cut a round Piece to put upon the Altar, and return or interr the Remainder, a Practice which Humbert condemns as contrary to the Respect due to those Holy Mysteries. As to the second Charge, relating to the Saturday's Fast, Humbert only replies in one Word, that the Latins do not feast on the Sabbath or Saturday, as do the Jews, neither in Lent nor out of Lent. As to the third Point relating to Things strangled, he says that the Latins make use of that Liberty which the Apostle has given them, of eating all Manner of Meats; but withal observing the Custom of the Churches wherein they live, that they might give no Occasion of Offence. He adds, that they likewise abhor eating of Blood, or the Flesh of such Animals as are drown'd or stifled, and that they enjoyn Penance to those who do it: But as to Beasts kill'd or taken in Hunting, 'tis their Custom to eat thereof without any Scruple. In short, as to the last Head, which relates to the Omission of singing Alleluiah in Lent, he makes it appear, that the Latins do not omit it out of any Aversion thereto; but that they look upon it as an Hymn of Thanksgiving, which is not so suitable to that holy Time of Penance and Humiliation. In this Treatise he speaks very sharply against the Greeks, whom by Way of Induction he accuses of being Marcionites, Manichees, Theopaschites, &c. He upbraids them with Re-baptizing the Latins; with suffering Children to dye without Baptism, if they be not eight Days old; with interring the Remainder of the Holy Eucharist; with permitting marry'd Men to wait at the Altars, even at a Time when they have had to do with their Wives, when at the same Time they refus'd to give the Communion to Women newly brought to Bed, or who have their usual Infirmities upon them; with tolerating Sarabait Monks guilty of Fornication, whereas they blam'd the Rule of St. Benedict, which allows the Monks of that Order to wear Breeches in a Journey, and to eat of Flesh when they have Occasion for it; and lastly, because they represent in their Crucifixes the Figure of a dying Man, so that upon the Cross of Jesus Christ a Sort of Antichrist is exhibited to be ador'd as a God.

Is it not a great Sign that Cardinal Humbert, and the other great Men of these Times had little to do, when they thus left the Substance to hunt after the mere Shadow of Religion?

The Writings of Nicetas.

The writing of Nicetas Pectoratus, a Studite Monk, against the Latin Church is a great deal more fierce than the Letter of Michael Cerularius. He begins with an Admonition to the Latins, to hearken with Humility and Charity to the Remonstrances which he would offer to them, concerning Unleavened Bread, the Fast of Saturday, and the Marriage of Priests. Upon the first Point he says, That those who make use of Unleavened Bread are still under the Shadow of the Law: That they assist at the Table of the Jews, and do not eat that Bread which is Supersubstantial, or Consubstantial to us; because Unleavened Bread is dead Bread, which has no Virtue or Efficacy in it: That 'tis not such Bread as is perfect, compleat, or compos'd of three Things which figure out to us the Body of Jesus Christ, which are the Leaven, the Meal, and the Water; Representations of the Spirit, the Water, and the Blood of our Saviour. He pretends that Jesus Christ made use of Leaven'd Bread in the Institution of the Holy Eucharist; because he instituted it on the thirteenth, and not on the fourteenth Day of the Moon of March before the Feast of Unleavened Bread; and that the Apostles forbad the making use of Unleavened Bread. As to the second Point, he asks the Latins, upon what they ground the Fast on Saturday, since St. Clement has instituted the Fasts on Wednesday and Friday, because Jesus Christ was betray'd on Wednesday, and fasten'd to the Cross on Friday: But that he prohibited the Fast on Saturday, since there was not the least Colour for it. He moreover cites the Canons of the Apostles, the Constitutions of St. Clement, and a Canon which is attributed to the sixth Council. He likewise found Fault that the Latins did celebrate the whole Mass on Fast Days; and to refute this Custom he produc'd a Canon of the Apostles, several Canons of the Councils of Gangres and Laodicea, and of the Council of Trullo, which he again cites under the Name of the sixth Council, which he makes use of to authorise the Usage of the Mass of preconsecrated Bread every Fast Day, which he sets forth in these Terms.

Of the Controversies between the Latin and Greek Churches.

" On Saturday and Sunday (says he) about nine a Clock ' we offer the Sacrifice, and consecrate as much Bread as ' will serve the rest of the Week: On other Days about ' three a Clock in the Afternoon, when the Service is ended ' by the * Complines, the Priests and Deacons come in ' carrying a Censer; and after they have read the Prophe- ' sies, and said the Prayers prescrib'd by St. Basil, before ' the Altar where the Sacred Mysteries lye, we repeat the ' Lord's Prayer; and afterwards we elevate the preconse- ' crated Bread, and say, Sancta Sanctis: After which we ' receive the Communion of the Bread and Cup, and ha- ' ving return'd Thanks to God, we send away the Peo- ' ple, and those who please, take their Repast of Pulse and ' Water. And there are some who go the whole Week ' without any other Nourishment than that of the Com- ' munion.' Lastly, upon the last Head, which is concerning the Marriage of Priests, he ask'd the Latins who taught them to hinder marry'd Persons from being ordain'd Priests, or to force them to part from their Wives? He confuted this Custom by the Constitutions of St. Clement, and by the Council of Trullo. He concludes this Treatise with an Exhortation to the Latins to submit to his Admonitions, or to produce manifest Authorities from the Holy Scriptures to justify their Customs.

* The Roman Vespers.

Humbert's Reply to Nicetas.

Humbert in his Reply begins with casting Reflections and Reproaches on this Monk, and took it very ill that he (contrary to the Duties of his Profession) should concern himself in writing against the Roman Church. He rejects his Thought concerning the Consubstantiality of the Leaven'd Bread, as a Chimera bred only in his own Brain; and his Application of the Passage out of St. John concerning the Spirit, the Water, and the Blood, as wresting the true Sense of the Scripture: And he takes an Occasion to charge him with Heresie, because he had said that the Quickning Spirit remain'd in the Body of Jesus Christ after his Death. He does not enlarge himself much about the Use of Unleavened Bread, supposing that he had said enough in his Reply to Michael Cerularius; he only observes that it cannot be said that Jesus Christ celebrated the Passover the thirteenth of the Moon of March, and with Leaven'd Bread, because if it had been so, he would have been guilty of a double Breach of the Law, which he had observ'd in all its Parts with the greatest Strictness imaginable. He rejects the Constitutions and Canons of the Apostles, except the first fifty, as Apocryphal Pieces. He pretends, that after the sixth Council, the Emperor Constantine Heraclius having ask'd the Pope's Legates after what Manner they celebrated the Eucharist, they return'd this Answer, viz. That they made use of Wine mingled with Water, and of Unleavened Bread; and that the Emperor approv'd of the Tradition of the Holy Apostolical See. This is a Matter of Fact of Humbert's advancing that cannot be met with in any Record: As to what concerns the Saturday's Fast, he says, that since the Greeks think it requisite to fast every Wednesday and Friday in the Year, because our Saviour was betray'd and crucified on those Days, and since they were likewise willing to fast on Holy Saturday, because of his remaining in the Sepulchre on that Day, they ought for the same Reason either to fast every Saturday in the Year, or else to fast only on the Wednesday and Friday of the Holy Week, and to celebrate Easter Sunday only in Honour of the Resurrection of our Saviour. He rejects the Canons of the Council of Trullo, as suppositious or corrupted; he disapproves of the making use of preconsecrated Bread on Fast-days, as being contrary to the Practice of the Apostles, and the Example of Jesus Christ, who consecrated the Bread just before they distributed it. He calls Nicetas a perfidious Sterconaniste, because he seems to suppose that the Eucharist broke the Fast, from whence he concludes that he believ'd that the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ were of the same Nature with other Aliments, and were turn'd into Excrements. He says, that in the Latin Church they usually celebrated Mass on Sundays and Holydays at the * Tierce Hour, and on Fast-days at Noon, or about Night; but that when Necessity required, it might be celebrated at any Hour without breaking one's Fast. He reproves the Greeks, because in breaking the Consecrated Bread they took no Care to gather up the Crumbs which fell; because they rub'd their Patines with Leaves, or a Brush; because they crouded the Consecrated Bread into their Boxes, by thrusting it down with their Hands; because in elevating the Consecrated Bread, at the Mass of the preconsecrated Bread, they seem'd to offer one and the same Oblation twice; because they did not observe the Decretal of Pope Clement, who requir'd that no more Hosts should be consecrated than what were sufficient for the Communicants, and that if any were left, they should not be kept till the Morrow, but be consum'd; because immediately after they had communicated, they fell to eating; becauſe that a great many of them did not obſerve Lent, and becauſe ſeveral others faſted only a Week, the which they ſtyl'd, The Lent of Theodorus. Laſtly, he charges Nicetas with being a Nicolaitan, becauſe he oppos'd the Celibacy of Prieſts and Deacons. He explains the Canons which prohibit Prieſts from parting with their Wives; of the Care which they ought to take of them, in looking upon them ſtill as their Wives, tho' they have no carnal Knowledge of them. He produces the Canon of the Council of Nice, concerning Women who live with Clerks, and ſeveral Authorities of the Popes, to prove that Prieſts ought to live chaſtly. In ſhort, he charges the Greeks for not ordaining Miniſters till after they had oblig'd them to marry, and concludes all by anathematizing Nicetas.

* A Popish Canonical Hour.

Of the Controverſies between the Latin and Greek Churches.

The Retractation of Nicetas.

Cardinal Humbert was not ſatisfied with having refuted this Monk in ſo blunt a Way, he was willing likewiſe to make him recant; and when he went with the Emperor and the other Legates to the Monaſtery of Studius, he oblig'd him to condemn and burn his own Writing, and to anathematize all thoſe who deny'd that the Church of Rome was the chief Church of the World, and who dar'd to call its Doctrine into Queſtion. The next Day Nicetas went himſelf to wait upon the Legates at the Palace of Pigi, without the City, where they reſided; and after he had a ſecond Time condemn'd what he had written or done againſt the Holy See, he was admitted into their Communion, and became one of their Friends. But as for Michael Cerularius he was not ſo forward to revoke what he had written; on the contrary he avoided meeting with the Legates, and holding any Conference with them. When the Legates perceiv'd that he continu'd obſtinate, they went, July the 16*th*. which happen'd to be a Saturday, to the Church of St. Sophia, about nine a Clock, when they were juſt upon celebrating Maſs; and after they had complain'd of the Obſtinacy of Michael Cerularius, they lay'd on the high Altar, in the Preſence both of Clergy and Laity, a Sentence of Excommunication againſt that Patriarch, drawn up in theſe Terms:

The Excommunication of Michael Cerularius by the Pope's Legates.

HUMBERT, by the Grace of God, Cardinal Biſhop of the Holy Church of Rome, PETER, Archbiſhop of Melphi, FREDERICK, Deacon and Chancellor, to all the Sons of the Catholick Church Greeting.

The Holy Apoſtolick See of Rome, which is the Chief of the whole World, to which as to the Head belongs in a more ſpecial Manner the Care of all the Churches; has ſent us to this Royal City, in the Quality of its Legates, for the Welfare and Peace of the Church, that as it is written, we ſhould go down and ſee whether the Cries which pierce its Ears from this great City be true or no. Let therefore the Emperors, Clergy, Senate and People of this City of Conſtantinople know, That we have here found more Good to excite our Joy, than Evil to raiſe our Sorrow. For as to the Supporters of the Empire, and the principal Citizens, the City is wholly Chriſtian and Orthodox: But as for Michael, who took upon him the falſe Title of Patriarch, and his Adherents, we have found that they have ſown Diſcord and Hereſie in the Midſt of this City, becauſe they ſell the Gifts of God like the Simoniacal; becauſe they imitate the Valeſians, in cauſing Eunuchs to take upon them Holy Orders, and in advancing them to the Epiſcopacy it ſelf; becauſe they re-baptiz'd, as did the Arians, thoſe who had been baptiz'd in the Name of the Bleſſed Trinity, and particularly the Latins; becauſe with the Donatiſts they maintain that the Greek Church is the only true Church, and that the Sacrifices and Baptiſm of none elſe are valid; becauſe with the Nicolaitans they allow of Prieſts cohabiting with their Wives; becauſe with the Severians they enjoyn'd the Obſervation of the Law of Moſes; becauſe they have ſtruck out of the Creed the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from the Perſon of the Son, as the Pneumatomachi (that is the Macedons, who deny'd the Divinity of the Holy Ghoſt); becauſe with the Manichees they aſcrib'd a Soul to the Leaven'd Bread; becauſe with the Nazarens they were ſuch ſtrict Obſervers of the Legal Purity, that they would not baptize Infants, who dy'd within eight Days after they were born, nor admit Women in Travail, or who had the uſual Infirmities of Nature upon them, to Baptiſm or the Communion; and laſtly, becauſe they condemn'd and excommunicated thoſe who ſhav'd their Beards, according to the Cuſtom of the Roman Church. Michael having been advertis'd of theſe Errors, and reprov'd for ſeveral other Proceedings by the Letter of Pope Leo, has ſtill perſiſted in them, and when that we would have apply'd a Remedy to theſe Evils, he refus'd to appear before, or to have any Conference with us, and has likewiſe forbad our Entrance into the Churches to perform Divine Service therein, forasmuch as he had formerly ſhut up the Churches of the Latins, calling them Azymite, perſecuting and excommunicating them, all which reflected on the Holy See, in Contempt whereof he ſtyl'd himſelf OECUMENICAL or UNIVERSAL PATRIARCH. Wherefore not being able any longer to tolerate ſuch an unheard of Abuſe as was offer'd to the Holy Apoſtolical See; and looking upon it as a Violation of the Catholick Faith in ſeveral Inſtances: By the Authority of the Holy Trinity, by the Authority of the Holy Apoſtolical See, whereof We are Legates, by the Authority of all the Orthodox Fathers, the ſeven Councils, and the whole Catholick Church, WE do ſubſcribe to the Anathema which our moſt Holy Father the Pope has denounc'd againſt Michael and his Adherents, if they do not retract their Errors; and in Purſuance hereof we declare that Michael, ſtyling himſelf Patriarch, a Novice, who was made Monk only by the Fear of Men, one of a diſſolute and vicious Life; Leo of Acridia, ſtyling himſelf Biſhop; Conſtantine, Michael's Chaplain, who had trodden under Foot the Sacrifices of the Latins; and all the Followers of their Errors, and the Abetters of their Proceedings are Anathematiz'd, with the Simoniſts, Valeſians, Arians, Donatiſts, Nicolaitans, Severians, Pneumatomachi, Manichees, Nazarens, and all the other Hereticks, or rather with the Devil and his Angels, if they do not repent. At the ſame Time, in the Preſence of the Emperor and his Court, they pronounc'd viva voce, an Excommunication againſt all thoſe, who ſhould contradict the Faith of the Church of Rome, or condemn its Sacrifice; and declar'd that ſuch Perſons ought not to be look'd upon as Chriſtians, but as Hereticks.

Of the Controverſies between the Latin and Greek Churches.

After they had publiſh'd theſe Excommunications, they ſet in Order the Latin Churches; prohibited under Pain of Excommunication, the receiving the Communion from the Hand of any Greek Prieſt, who ſhould condemn the Sacrifice of the Latin Church. And when they had taken Leave of the Emperor, they went out of Conſtantinople, July the 17*th*. and ſet forward on their Journey homeward. But the Emperor caus'd them to return again on the 19*th*. of the ſame Month, at the Inſtance of Michael Cerularius, who promis'd him to enter into a Conference with them. The Deſign of this Patriarch was to draw them into the Church of St. Sophia, under colour of holding a Council there, and to cauſe them to be ſton'd by the People, by reading to them the Legates Decree of Excommunication, which he had corrupted in tranſlating it, in order to render it the more odious. The Emperor foreſeeing what would happen, would not permit the Legates to appear in any Aſſembly out of his Preſence. Michael having refus'd this Offer, the Emperor ſent the Legates away; which incens'd that Patriarch ſo far, that after he had excommunicated them by a publick Writing, he rais'd an Inſurrection againſt the Emperor himſelf, who was forc'd to deliver up the Legates Interpreters, who were abus'd and caſt into Priſon. The Legates ſent the Emperor, by his Courriers, a true Copy of the Excommunication which they had denounc'd againſt Cerularius, by which that Patriarch was convicted of being an Impoſtor. This occaſion'd an intire Rupture between the Patriarch and the Emperor, who drove out of his Court all the Relations and Friends whom Michael had there, and would never have pardon'd him, if he had liv'd longer. But he dy'd the ſame Year, leaving the Empire to Theodora Porphyrogenita, Daughter to Conſtantine, and Siſter to Zoe, under whom, as well as under Michael Stratioticus, to whom ſhe left the Empire, dying within two Years after. Cerularius continu'd in quiet Poſſeſſion of the Patriarchſhip, and grew ſo great, that he oblig'd the latter to reſign the Empire, in the Year 1057. to Iſaac Commenius. By this Means, the Church of Conſtantinople was wholly ſeparated from the Church of Rome; and theſe two Churches, which till then, were in a Manner tolerated and treated with Reſpect, were look'd upon as Enemies, Schiſmaticks and Hereticks, and became almoſt irreconcilable through the Fault of the Greeks.

The Departure of the Pope's Legates.

Within a while after the Latins endeavour'd to withdraw Peter Patriarch of Antioch, from Communion with the Patriarch of Conſtantinople. They thought this the more feaſible becauſe that Patriarch, immediately after his Advancement, had writ to Pope Leo, who had return'd him an Anſwer, whereby he approv'd of the Profeſſion of Faith which he had ſent him, and took Notice to him, of his being very well inclin'd to carry on the Union of both Churches. The Patriarch of Grado nam'd Dominick, who held the greateſt Correſpondence with the Greeks, becauſe the Provinces of Venice and Iſtra belong'd to his Patriarchſhip, was order'd to write to Peter of Antioch about it. He did it in ſuch a Manner as might have engag'd that Patriarch to enter into the Intereſts of the Church of Rome. For in the Beginning of his Letter he declares, that without mentioning the Submiſſion, the Deference, and the Amity which ought to be had for the Church of Antioch, which is the Siſter of the Church of Rome, and the ſecond Church of the World: The Reputation of his Piety, and the particular Eſteem, which he had for his Perſon, inclin'd him to deſire an Intereſt in his Reſpects, and to wiſh to be in an intire Friendſhip with him. He tells him that he thought himſelf oblig'd to let him know, that his Church had been founded by St. Mark, that St. Peter conferr'd upon it the Dignity of a Patriarchal See, and that he had the Right of Pope in the Councils which were held in Italy: That he would inform him upon what theſe Privileges were founded, when they could come to have a Correſpondence with each other by Letters, but that at preſent he only wrote to him him to have the Happiness of being acquainted with him, and to begin a Friendship which might be hereafter corroborated: That however he could not forbear acquainting him, that he understood that the Clergy of Constantinople blam'd the Church of Rome, because it celebrated the Holy Mysteries with Unleaven'd Bread, and believ'd by Reason of that, that the Latins were separated from the Unity of the Church; that tho' the Latins make use of Unleaven'd Bread, according to the Tradition of Jesus Christ and the Apostles, yet they condemn'd not the Custom of the Greek Church, because as the Mixture of Leaven with the Meal may be the Figure of the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, so the Unleaven'd Bread may likewise represent the Purity of the Flesh of Jesus Christ. That therefore he thought it expedient that he should advertise the Greeks not to condemn the Custom of the Latins, nor to maintain that all their Sacrifices were null, and that they were out of the Road to Eternal Salvation.

The Letter of Dominick Patriarch of Grado to Peter of Antioch.

Of the Controversies between the Latin and the Greek Churches.

Peter Patriarch of Antioch, answer'd him with a great deal of Integrity, without approving of his Opinion concerning the Use of Unleaven'd Bread, or his Pretensions concerning the Patriarchship. For he makes it appear to him by his Letter, that there were never acknowledg'd in the Church any more than five Patriarchs, and that the Bishops of the Capital Cities of Provinces, greater than his, never assum'd this Quality. And with respect to the use of Unleaven'd Bread, he at first excuses the Patriarch of Constantinople, by saying, that he does not absolutely condemn the Latins as Hereticks; but was only sorry that they swerv'd from the ancient Tradition of the Church, and did not make use of perfect, but of Unleaven'd Bread, in Imitation of the Jews. He afterwards opposes this Usage by several Arguments, but particularly by the Passages of the Gospel, which seem to prove that Jesus Christ instituted the Eucharist before the Feast of the Passover, and at a Time when they did not as yet make use of Unleaven'd Bread. At the Close of his Letter he takes notice that two Years ago he had wrote to Pope Leo in the Beginning of his Popedom, to which he had not as yet received any Answer, and that he desir'd he might have a Sight of this.

The Answer of Peter of Antioch, to the Patriarch of Grado.

Michael Cerularius on the contrary wrote to Peter of Antioch, to engage him to declare openly against the Church of Rome. After he had thank'd him in the Beginning of his Letter, for having at his Recommendation granted to a Deacon a Place which he had demanded of him, he gives him to understand, that having some Time since heard that the last deceased Pope was a virtuous, honest and learn'd Man, he had writ to him with a great deal of Humility about the Re-union of the two Churches, in order to procure his Favour, that he might give some Assistance to the Greeks against the Normans: That having committed this Letter to an Officer of the Emperor's, who carry'd likewise another from that Prince, they were put into the Hands of Duke Argyrus, who detain'd them, as well as the Money which the Emperor had sent by that Officer: That Argyrus thought fit to send three Persons to Constantinople in the Quality of Legates of the Holy See, whereof one had formerly been Archbishop of Melphi, who he understood had been turn'd out of his Church five Years ago: Another had only the Title of Archbishop, but where his Diocess lay none could tell; and to the third he had given the Title of Chancellor: That these three Men having accosted the Emperor with a fierce and arrogant Air, caused the Cross and the Pastoral Rod to be carry'd before them: That afterwards they gave him a Visit, but in a Way of Insolence and Contempt: And that without saluting him, or paying him the Respects which were due to him, they clap'd into his Hands a Letter sealed up, which contain'd the same Things concerning Unleaven'd Bread, as Argyrus had formerly advanc'd whilst he stay'd at Constantinople, for the which he had been excommunicated: But that having examin'd the Seal, he found it was false, and that it was nothing but a Piece of Forgery of this Argyrus, as he had afterwards been assur'd by the Archbishop of Trani, and by his Chancellor, who had unravel'd the whole Mystery to him. After he had given this Account of that Transaction, he says, That it was reported of him that he inserted the Names of the Popes in the Church Registers, and that the Patriarchs of Alexandria and Jerusalem did the same: That however he did not suppose them so ignorant, but that they knew that since the Time of Pope Vigilius, who would not pronounce an Anathema against the Writings of Theodoret, and the Letter of Ibas, there was no Notice taken of the Bishops of Rome, in the Churches of the East: That he likewise heard, that these two Patriarchs admitted to their Communion those who celebrated with Unleaven'd Bread, and that they made use of the same sometimes themselves: That not being fully satisfied of this Matter of Fact, he left him to the Liberty of inquiring into it, and desired he would send him Word how the Case was: That moreover he had read the Letter which he had written to the Patriarch of Grado, wherein he oppos'd the making use of Unleaven'd Bread: But that the Latins hold a great many other Errors, which ought to be rejected; such as believing that one might eat Things strangled, that Men ought to be shaven, to observe the Sabbath, to eat unclean Things, that Monks might be permitted to eat Flesh and Bacon: That one might eat Flesh in the first Week of Lent, and in the Weeks wherein one ought to abstain from Flesh and Milk, as well as on every Wednesday in the Year: That they were guilty of eating Cheese and Eggs in the Holy Week; of fasting on Saturdays, all of them being Customs belonging to the Jews; of having added to the Creed, that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son; of not permitting Priests to be married; of allowing two Brothers to marry two Sisters; of observing that one of the Ministers of the Altar who has eaten Unleaven'd Bread, shall imbrace the rest in the Sacrifice, by giving Pax Vobis to them; of giving to the Bishops a Ring which they wear on their Thumb; of baptizing only with one Immersion; of not honouring the Relicks of the Saints, and several of them not so much as Images; of not reckoning among the Saints the Doctors of the Greek Church, such as St. Gregory the Theologue, St. Basil the Great, and St. Chrysostom the Divine, and of not observing their Doctrine: But what is more strange is, that when they were at Constantinople they declar'd, that they were not come to enter into a Dispute, nor to be inform'd of the Differences that might be between them, but to teach and persuade others to hold their Tenets.

The Letter of Cerularius to Peter of Antioch.

Of the Controversies between the Latin and the Greek Churches.

There is likwise another Letter of Cerularius to the same Patriarch of Antioch, wherein he gave him a particular Account of what the Pope's Legates, (whom he still imagines to be Impostors sent by Argyrus, who had trump'd up these false Letters) had done against him at Constantinople, by excommunicating him, and exhorts that Patriarch to joyn with him in revenging the Affront.

Peter of Antioch reply'd to Michael Cerularius, That he wonder'd that Argyrus, who was a Laick, should concern himself in the Disposal of the Affairs of the Church, and make use of such Artifices as he had acquainted him with: That the Name of the Pope was not in the Registers of the Church of Antioch; but that it could not be truly said that even since the Time of Pope Vigilius, the Name of the Bishop of Rome had been left out of the Registers of the Greek Church: That it was a gross Omission in his Secretary; since in the sixth Council, held one hundred and twenty nine Years after Vigilius, Pope Agatho was recogniz'd: That when he himself was at Constantinople, about five and forty Years ago, in the Time of Dominus the Patriarch, he found the Name of Pope Sergius in the Registers among the rest of the other Patriarchs; and that he could not tell upon what Grounds it had since been left out: That of the Errors and Faults which in his Letter he attributed to the Latins, there were some which ought to be avoided and abhor'd, several others which it were easy to remedy; and lastly, others at which it would be proper to connive. 'For (says he) what is it to us, if their Bishops do shave their 'Beards, and wear Rings on their Fingers? Do not we 'make a Crown upon our Heads, and do not we wear 'Gloves, Maniples and Stoles imbroider'd with Gold? 'Will not you likewise find some of our Monks who eat 'Flesh and Bacon? Do not the Monks of Bythinia, Thrace 'and Lydia, eat Magpies, Jays and Turtle-Doves? Do not 'the Holy Fathers leave us at Liberty to eat indifferently of 'all Manner of Things which God has created?' In Particular he demonstrates, that St. Basil and St. Pacomius allow'd their Religious to eat Bacon. But he does not pass the same Judgment on what was added to the Creed, and he pretends that 'tis a very great Abuse, as well as to baptize with only one Immersion: However, he thinks it requisite to be of a Temper inclinable to Peace, because the Latins are their Brethren, altho' through Rusticity or Ignorance, they might be in some Errors: That so punctual an Exactness could not be expected from Barbarians; that it was very well that they held the true Doctrine about the Trinity and the Incarnation: That he blam'd them for their Custom relating to the Celibacy of Priests, and for their eating Flesh and Cheese the first Week in Lent. That as to the Question about Unleavened Bread, he had handled that in the Letter which he wrote to the Patriarch of Venice; and that he was of Opinion, that every Church ought therein to observe its ancient Customs, that as to that Part of their Charge, of eating Things strangled, and of allowing one and the same Person to marry two Sisters; it was to be believ'd, that this was not among them by the Approbation of the Pope and the Bishops, but by the Abuse of some particular Persons, as there are a great many of the same Nature in the East, which 'tis very difficult to abolish. That moreover, he ought to insist particularly on the Addition to the Creed, and on the Marriage of Priests: That with Respect to the other Articles, it was not requisite to stand much upon them, because they are such as do not concern the Faith, and because most of them are false. That therefore he thought it proper, that being thus inclin'd, he should write to the Pope who was to be elected, who perhaps would disown what is impos'd on the Latins, or else alter alter his Mind: That no Perſon can imagine that the Romans do not honour Relicks and Images, ſince they ſet ſo high a Value on the Relicks of St. Peter and St. Paul; ſince Pope Adrian by his Legates was Preſident of the ſeventh Council, and condemn'd the Iconoclaſts; and ſince it was obſervable that ſeveral Images were brought from Rome, and that the Latins honour'd them. He therefore conjur'd the Patriarch of Conſtantinople to think upon an Accommodation, and to require nothing of the Latins beſide the ſtricking out the Addition which they had made to the Creed. Laſtly, he acquaints him that he ſends him indors'd, the Letter which Pope Leo had written to him; and that the Letters which he had directed to the Patriarchs of Alexandria and Jeruſalem, he had convey'd to them. Theſe four Letters have been publiſh'd in Greek and Latin by Monſieur Cotelier, in the ſecond Tome of his Monuments of the Greek Church.

The Answer of Peter of Antioch to Cerularius

Of the Controverſies between the Latin and the Greek Churches.

A new Atempt made for the re-uniting the Greek and the Latin Churches.

Tho' this Action of Cardinal Humbert ſeem'd to put a Stop to the Re-union of the two Churches, yet the Popes were not quite out of Hopes of bringing it about. For this Purpoſe, Stephen IX. reſolv'd upon ſending Didier Abbot of Mount Caſſin, and two other Legates to Conſtantinople, who ſet forward upon that Deſign in the Beginning of the Year 1058. but being detain'd at Bari by the Badneſs of the Seaſon, they there heard the News of that Pope's Death, and return'd home again. That ſame Year Michael Cerularius building too much upon the Obligation under which the Emperor Iſaac Commenus lay to him, was for aſſuming to himſelf too great an Authority, threatning the Emperor himſelf, That if he did not follow his Councils, he would be an Inſtrument of making him loſe that Crown which he had procur'd for him. This impudent Boldneſs, and his Pride in wearing Purple colour'd Shoes and Stockings, and in ſaying, That there was no Difference between the Sacerdotal Office and the Empire, made Iſaac reſolve to Out him. But foraſmuch as Michael was belov'd by the People of Conſtantinople, he took an Opportunity to cauſe him to be apprehended, when he went on the Feaſt of All-Saints to perform his Office in a Church of the Suburbs of that City. He ſent thither ſeveral of his Soldiers, who pull'd the Patriarch out of his Epiſcopal Chair, and carry'd him immediately to the next Sea-Port, where they imbark'd him and his Relations, to be convey'd into Exile to Proconeſſus. The Emperor had a great Mind to cauſe him to be depos'd in a Council, but he durſt not attempt it, becauſe Michael was a Man of great Parts, and had great Friends. The Death of that Patriarch put an End to his Troubles, but made no Alteration in the Affairs of the Church; nor did it procure the Re-union of the two Churches, which ever after remain'd divided, tho' frequent Attempts have been made to re-unite them, and tho' there have been ſeveral Treaties between them, which never laſted long, by Reaſon of the Inconſtancy of the Greeks.

Of the Controverſies between the Latin and the Greek Churches.

The Baniſhment of Cerularius

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Life and Writings of Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

PETER ſirnam'd Damien from the Name of his Brother, was born at Ravenna the beginning of the eleventh Century. He was deſcended from an honourable Family, and his Parents took Care to beſtow upon him good Education; and in his very Youth he was noted for his ſingular Piety. After he had went through the whole Courſe of his Studies, he retir'd into the Monaſtery of the Holy Croſs of Avellane near Eugubio, the Monks of which Place are call'd Hermits, becauſe they ſpent their Lives in great Retirement, tho' in Common and under an Abbot. He was call'd by Guy Abbot of Pomposio to reform his Monaſtery. At two Years End he return'd to Avellane, where he was made Prior, and afterwards Abbot of that Monaſtery, which in a ſhort Time he augmented, and founded ſeveral others, where the ſame Rule was obſerv'd. He was in ſo great a Repute and Eſteem, that he was nominated Cardinal, and made Biſhop of Oſtia by Pope Stephen IX. He likewiſe held by Way of Commendam the Biſhoprick of Eugubio, and began to have a great Share in the Affairs of the Church of Rome. In the Year 1059. under the Pontificate of Nicholas II. he was ſent Legate to Milan, to reform the Clergy of that Church, where Simony was publickly practis'd. He acquitted himſelf in this Legation with a great deal of Authority and Prudence, and return'd after he had caus'd an Order to be made, to prevent this and ſuch like Diſorders for the Time to come. Some Time after, he reſolv'd upon quitting his Biſhopricks, and the Imployments which he had at large in the World, and to retire into Solitude; he thereupon reſign'd them into the Hands of Pope Alexander II. and return'd back to his own Monaſtery. However, this did not prevent him from having great Concerns with the Popes, Biſhops and Noblemen, who ask'd his Advice, and made uſe of him in Matters of the higheſt Importance. Alexander II. ſent him as his Legate into France, to put an End to the Difference there on Foot, between the Biſhop of Maſcon and the Abbot of Cluny, concerning the Privileges of that Abby. He held a Council at Chalons, wherein he made ſeveral Orders; confirm'd the Privileges granted by the Popes to the Abby of Cluny, and made the Biſhop of Maſcon to conſent thereto. He was likewiſe ſent by the ſame Pope to Florence, to put a Stop to the Schiſm which was between Peter, Biſhop of that City, and his Clergy. Afterwards in the Year 1068. he went as Legate into Germany, to hinder the Emperor Henry from being divorc'd from his Wife Bertha. Some Time after he took a Journey to the Monaſtery of Mount Caſſin, to conſolate the Religious of that Place. Laſtly, in the Year 1072. he was ſent by the ſame Pope to Ravenna, to take off the Excommunication iſſu'd, a long Time ſince, againſt that City, becauſe of the Differences which Henry Biſhop of Ravenna, lately deceas'd, had with the Holy See. After he had diſcharg'd the Commiſſion, he dy'd the 22d of February the Year enſuing, at Faenza, being ſixty ſix Years old.

The Works of this Author, in the laſt Edition, are divided into four Tomes.

The firſt contains the Letters, rang'd in eight Books, according to the Quality of the Perſons to whom they were written; of which the firſt is compos'd of the Letters which are directed to the Popes.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The firſt is to Gregory VI. whom he congratulates upon his Advancement to the Popedom, exhorts to root out Simony, and admoniſhes to depoſe the Biſhop of Peſaro.

His Letters to the Popes

The ſecond is directed to the ſame Pope; he gives him to underſtand, That the Man who was elected Biſhop of Foſſombrona, was not altogether worthy of the Epiſcopacy, becauſe of his Ambition; but that yet he was to be preferr'd to a great many others, and that in other Reſpects he had the Qualifications neceſſary to a Biſhop.

The third is to Clement II. to whom he writes Word, That the Emperor had order'd him to wait upon him, to inform him of the Abuſes of ſeveral Churches, and of what he thought neceſſary to put a Stop to them; that being upon his Journey, he had receiv'd a Letter from that Prince which was directed to him; that being return'd to his Solitude he ſent it to him, where he waits for his Orders to depart. He declares on the one Hand, That he would be very well ſatisfied to be excus'd from the Journey, that ſo he might not loſe his Time in going and coming; but that on the other Hand, he could not but be mov'd with the miſerable Condition of the Churches of his Country, which were in a ſtrange Confuſion, by Reaſon of the Irregularity of the Biſhops and Abbots. He remonſtrates to him, That it ſignified nothing that the Holy See was paſs'd from Darkneſs to Light, if the reſt of the Churches were ſtill in Darkneſs, and exhorts him to apply ſome ſpeedy Remedy to theſe Evils, and to puniſh the Biſhop of Fano.

The fourth is to Leo IX. He therein complains for that this Pope had given too lightly Credit to the Calumnies rais'd againſt him, and he calls God to witneſs how Innocent he was.

The fifth is to Victor II. He remonſtrates to this Pope, That he ought to protect a Lord who had devoted himſelf to the Service of God, and whom they would diſpoſſeſs of his Eſtate.

The ſixth, directed to Nicholas II. is amongſt the Opuſcula of this Author, of which it makes the ſeventeenth.

The ſeventh is to the ſame Pope. He congratulates him for that the Church was in Peace under his Pontificate; and petitions him in Behalf of the Inhabitants of Antona, who had been excommunicated.

In the eighth, directed to Pope Nicholas and the Archdeacon Hildebrand, he deſires to quit his Biſhoprick, ſince they had diveſted him both of his Sacerdotal Habits, and of his Revennes.

The ninth and tenth are among the Opuſcula, and they make the nineteenth and twentieth of them.

The eleventh is directed to Alexander II. He recommends to him the Church of Orbano which was then in Trouble.

The twelfth, directed to the ſame Pope, is very conſiderable. He therein reproves two Abuſes, which he ſays were too frequently practis'd by the Court of Rome in his Time,

Peter Damien, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia.

Time, and he intreats the Pope to redress them. The first is, That in almost all the Decretals, the Penalty of Excommunication was inserted. The second is, That the Clerks and Laicks were hinder'd from reproving the Vices of their Bishops. 'The first (says he) makes the Salvation 'of Men very Dangerous; because Persons are often ex-'communicated without knowing any Thing of it, and 'that for Things of little or no Consequence; the most 'trivial Faults being punish'd with the same Penalty as 'the more heinous ones: They punish a Man more rigo-'rously for having violated an humane Law, than ever 'God does for the breaking of his Commands. He says, That St. Gregory and the other Popes had no such Custom, and that they seldom pronounc'd an Anathema in their Decretals, except when the Faith was in dispute. He therefore conjures this Pope to abolish this Custom, and for the future to strike this Clause out of their Decretals, by assigning some other Penalty in its Stead. As to the other Abuse, which supposes that it is not lawful for Inferiors to accuse their Bishops in a Superior Court, or to alledge against them what ought to be Corrected. 'This (says he) 'is a very unreasonable Thing, and contrary to the Dis-'cipline of the Church. For to whom can one better ad-'dress ones self to discover the Faults, which a Bishop 'commits, than to him who has the Office of a Master, 'and who has the Pre-eminence among his Brethren, to 'correct the Faults of the Bishops, according to the Pri-'vilege of his See? And is it not a piece of insupportable 'Arrogance, Pride and Vanity, that a Bishop shall live as 'he pleases, and not condescend to harken to the Com-'plaints of those who are under him, in Things wherein he 'may be deceiv'd; especially when they do not apply them-'selves to secular Judges, but to Bishops, that they may 'honourably and gravely redress those Grievances which 'might attract the Smiles of the Laity? Is it not reason-'able, that he who is accus'd should justify and clear 'himself, or else acknowledge his Faults? To this he subjoyns the Example of St. Peter, who did not make use of his Authority to reject the Complaints of the Faithful, who took it ill that he should preach the Gospel to the Gentiles, but gave them a Reason for this his Proceeding. To this Instance he adds that of David, who acknowledg'd his Offence when he was reprov'd for it by Nathan; the Example of Mary, who suffer'd the Reproof of her Sister Martha; and another Instance of St. Peter, who did not take it ill that St. Paul rebuk'd him. Afterwards he starts this Objection: 'But I am Bishop; I am 'the Pastor of the Flock, I am not to be accus'd by those 'who ought to be subject to me, and whom I ought to 'lead; they ought patiently to suffer my Failings. And 'to this he answers, that in the Gospel it is said, that we 'ought to declare to the Church the Faults of our Bre-'thren, when they do not amend after they had been pri-'vately reprov'd; the which being express'd in general 'Terms, ought to be understood as well of the Faults of 'Bishops, as of the Faults of the rest of the Faithful; that 'if the Bishop would not submit to the Laws of the 'Church, who would? Lastly, He concludes, that no-thing would more conduce to the abating the Pride of Bishops, who valued themselves too much upon the account of their Divinity, to the maintaining of Peace, and to prevent Tyranny, than to suffer Inferiors to have recourse to a Superior Authority, and to Synods, there to prefer their Complaints against their Bishops.

In the thirteenth, directed to the same Pope, he opposes an Error which grew very prevalent in his Time; to wit, that it was not Simony to buy a Bishoprick of a King, or any other Prince; provided nothing was given for Consecration. Two Chaplains of Prince Godfry Marquis of Tuscany, had broach'd this Doctrine, and maintain'd it by saying, that in this Case, they do not buy either the Sacerdotal Office or the Church, but only the Temporalities and the enjoyment of the Revenues. Peter Damien makes it appear that this is a Fallacy; because since a Man cannot be divided into two distinct Persons, whereof one shall enjoy the Temporalities, and the other perform the Spiritual Functions, when he buys the Temporalities, which he cannot enjoy till he be advanc'd to the Ecclesiastical Dignity, and perform the Functions thereof; it may be truly said, that he buys the Ecclesiastical Dignity and the Sacrament too. This he proves, because the Prince in granting the Investiture of a Bishopric does not give a meer Rod only, but the Pastoral Rod, and the Title of Priesthood, the Sacrament whereof is receiv'd by the Ordination. He adds, That 'tis only in Pursuance of this Nomination of the Prince that the Man is ordain'd, and therefore tho' he does not directly give Money for his Ordination, yet it cannot be said to be gratuitous, since Money made the way for him. Afterwards carrying his Thought a little farther, he says, 'When the Prince has put the Pas-'toral Rod into your Hands, did he say, Receive the Lands 'and Revenues of such or such a Church? No. Did he not 'say to you, Receive this Church? If you pretend to have 'receiv'd the Revenues of the Church without the Church, 'you are a Schismatick, and guilty of Sacrilege; and if 'you receiv'd the Church by this Investiture, as you must 'needs own, then you are Guilty of Simony. Lastly, He says, that the Possession of the Ecclesiastical Revenues, and the Consecration are so closely connected together, that he who receives the Right of possessing the Revenues of the Church, cannot enjoy them till he be consecrated, and that he who is consecrated, ought necessarily to have the Management of the Revenues of the Church. To conclude, He confirms these Maxims by several Passages taken out of the Decretals; and shews that it is not only Simony to buy and sell Bishopricks and great Benefices, but also to buy and sell small Benefices, such as Curacies and Prebendships. In the Close, he exhorts the Pope to condemn the Error, which he had refuted in this Letter, and not to permit any Persons to be promoted to the Priesthood, who have acquir'd it by Money, or (which he pretends to be more blameable) by any Services which they have done for their Princes.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia.

In the fourteenth, he makes his Complaints to Alexander II. for that he had abus'd and rais'd a Disturbance in the Church of Eugubio, which had been committed to his Care, by the Predecessors of that Pope. He puts him in mind of the Obligations which he lay under to him, which deserv'd quite another sort of Usage, and takes notice that if Satisfaction were not done him, he would make his just Grief to break out the more. He likewise intreated him to take off the Excommunication which he had issu'd out against the Archbishop of Ravenna, whom he look'd upon to be very unfortunate; because it was an unworthy Thing that so great a Multitude of Men should be in Danger of perishing for the Fault of one single Man.

The fifteenth is an Answer to a Letter of that Pope, who complain'd that he had not wrote to him, being too much taken up with Contemplation. He gives him to understand, that indeed he did enjoy a little more Repose, since he had quitted the Episcopacy; but that still he was taken up with a great many Visits, and a multiplicity of Business, and was so highly concern'd at the Disorders of the World, that he had neither Time nor Courage to write. This gave him an Occasion to describe the corrupted Manners of his Time. Afterwards he conjures the Pope, who had taken from him the Earldom of Ostia, to discharge him likewise from his Bishoprick. Lastly, He exhorts him to use his utmost Endeavours to reform the Church, and concludes his Letter with eight Verses, which puts him in mind of his Duty.

In the sixteenth, directed to the same Pope and to Hildebrand, he excuses himself for having wrote to the Archbishop of Cologne, by sending to them the Copy of his Letter, thereby to let them know that they had no Reason to be offended at it. He excus'd himself likewise from taking a Journey to Rome, to which they had summon'd him; but does not refuse to go to Mantua, because he thought that Journey would turn to greater Account.

The three next Letters are among his Opuscula; the two first are the three and four and twentieth of these Opuscula, and the last is the Life of St. Radulphus.

The twentieth is directed to Cadalous Bishop of Parma, the Antipope, whom he extreamly upbraided, for having caus'd himself to be elected Bishop of Rome; or at least, for having permitted it: He made it appear that his Election is Adulterate, Schismatical, Heretical and Vicious. (1.) Because he had been elected, whilst the Holy See was fill'd with a Lawful Pope. (2.) Because he had not been elected by the Cardinals, who have the greatest Share in the Election of a Pope, nor by the Clergy and Laity of Rome; but by two Bishops of a bad Life, and who had no Right in this Election. (3.) Because the Church of Rome would not acknowledge him. Afterwards he threatens him with the Judgments of God, and with a speedy Correction.

This Letter made no Impression on Cadalous; on the contrary, that Bishop came to Rome with an Army, and became Master of it by Force. Upon this Peter Damien wrote him a second Letter more vehement than the former, wherein he compares him to the most cruel Tyrants, and puts him in mind of the Punishment inflicted on the Bishop of Placenza, who had usurp'd the Holy See by such like Methods, in turning out Gregory IV.

The second Book contains the Letters which Peter Damien wrote to the Cardinals.

His Letters to the Cardinals.

The first is directed to the Cardinals of the Church of Lateran; he exhorts them to bear a strict Watch over themselves and others, that they may be Exemplary in so corrupted an Age. He therein shews how the Lives of Bishops ought to be Holy and Unblameable. He declaims against Bishops who are Ambitious, against those who follow the Court, and who enter into the Service of Grandees, in order to obtain Ecclesiastical Preferments by way of recompence. He says, That there are three sorts of Presents, which are alike prohibited for the gaining of Benefices: Munus a Manu, Munus ab obsequio, Munus a lingua; that is, is, Money, Preſents, and Flatteries. After he had inveigh'd ſufficiently againſt this Abuſe, he exhorts the Cardinals to lead ſuch exemplary Lives, as might ſerve as a Pattern to the Biſhops and all the Clergy.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The two next Letters are in the Opuſcula, the one is the two and twentieth, and the other the one and thirtieth.

The fourth is directed to Boniface Cardinal of Albany, and to Stephen the Prieſt: He recommends to them an Abbot of the Monaſtery of St. Apollinarius.

The fifth directed to Cardinal Hildebrand Archdeacon of Rome, and to Peter the Prieſt; contains a great many Myſtical Reflections about the Sabbath, and the ſix Days of the Creation.

In the ſixth, directed to the ſame Perſons, he ingenuouſly complains of Alexander II. his taking away from him a Book which he had compos'd; he commends this Pope, declaims againſt Cadalous, and makes mention of what he had ſuffer'd in the Service of the Holy See.

The ſeventh is likewiſe amongſt the Opuſcula, of which it makes the two and thirtieth.

In the eighth, he Complains that Hildebrand, to whom he had written not only took no Notice of him, and return'd him no Anſwer, but likewiſe ſpoke very much to his Diſadvantage. He puts him in mind what Services he had done to the Holy See, and to him in particular. Laſtly, He declares to him, that he ſurrender'd up to him the Biſhoprick which had been beſtow'd on him.

In the ninth, he makes his complaint to the ſame Perſon, for having too lightly given Credit to his Enemies, who had told him, that he had founded a Monaſtery in a Place where he had no Right to do it. He made it appear that it had been granted to him by the Uncle of Guy, who was the Perſon who complain'd that the Monaſtery had been built on his Demeans.

The tenth is amongſt the Opuſcula, and makes the eighteenth.

The three next Letters are directed to Didier Abbot of Mount Caſſin and Cardinal of St. Cecilia, to whom he gives a great many wholſome Advices about his Conduct; as for Inſtance, to have always an Eye upon his Faults, and not to regard his Virtues; to be glad when he was reprov'd by others; not to ſlight, but to correct, as his Duty requir'd him, the Faults of thoſe who were committed to his Charge; to ſay no ill of the Abſent, but to reprove thoſe who were Faulty face to face; to have a due Veneration for Faſt-days, and often to celebrate the Holy Sacrifice, that ſo, ſays he, the old Serpent ſeeing your Lips tinctur'd with the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, may tremble for Fear, retire in Confeſion, and not approach to the Sacrament, which has made him a Captive.

The five others, directed to the ſame Perſon, are among the Opuſcula, of which they make the thirty third, the thirty fourth, the thirty fifth, the thirty ſixth and the thirty ſeventh.

The nineteenth is a Letter of Compliment and Friendſhip, to Peter a Cardinal and Chancellor.

His Letters to the Archbiſhops.

The two laſt make the thirty ſeventh of the Opuſcula.

The third Book is compos'd of the Letters directed to Archbiſhops; the Number of thoſe is but ſmall.

The firſt is the eight and thirtieth of the Opuſcula.

The ſecond is directed to Gebehard Archbiſhop of Ravenna, who had deſir'd him to come to him. He excus'd himſelf for not obeying him, becauſe he had not wherewithal to undertake this Journey; being Poor himſelf, and having the Government of a very poor Monaſtery in his Hands. He commends this Archbiſhop, gives him a great deal of good Council, and conjures him to give him no further Trouble.

In the third, he declares to that Prelate what a great Affection he bore to him, and exhorts him to turn out the Biſhops of Fano and Peſaro, who were Men of an infamous Life, and guilty of ſeveral Crimes.

The fourth is directed to Henry Archbiſhop of Ravenna, who had ſent to know what his Opinion was concerning the Elections of Cadalous and Alexander. He returns him this Anſwer, that the Latter is the lawful Pope, and the other is a Simoniſt and an Intruder: And afterwards making a Compariſon between the Manners and the Genius of both; he ſays that Alexander II. is a Man of Parts, Learning and Piety, and that he is Chaſt and Charitable: whereas Cadalous is not able to explain one Line. Laſtly, he declares to him that he cannot conceal his own particular Sentiment, and that he thinks himſelf oblig'd to avow freely what he thinks, and ſtiffly to maintain the Truth and Honour of the Holy See.

The fifth is directed to a third Archbiſhop of Ravenna nam'd Wigbert. He complains of the Severity which that Archbiſhop ſhew'd to him and his Monaſtery. He intreats him to forbear oppreſſing him by exacting Money ſtill from him, even after he had been diveſted of Part of his Demeans.

The ſixth is to Anno Archbiſhop of Cologne: He commends him for the Care he had taken of Henry the Emperor's Son, who had been committed to his Truſt by that Prince; and for having declar'd himſelf againſt Cadalous; and exhorts him to continue and uſe his utmoſt Endeavours, that a general Council might be held to put an End to the Schiſm.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The ſeventh is a Letter of Compliment to the Archbiſhop of Milan, whom he thanks with a great deal of Addreſs and Neatneſs, for the Sacerdotal Habits which he had beſtow'd upon him.

The three next are among the Opuſcula, of which they make the twenty fifth, the thirty fourth and the thirty ninth.

The fourth Book contains the Letters of Peter Damien directed to Biſhops.

His Letters to the Biſhops.

The firſt is written to Biſhop Albert: He exhorts him to do his Duty, and to lead an unblameable Life. In a more eſpecial Manner he adviſes him to be Charitable, and to beware of Avarice and Simony.

In the ſecond, he thanks a Biſhop for the Alms which he had beſtow'd on his Monaſtery, and exhorts him to add the other Virtues to his Liberality. Laſtly, he intreats him to confer the Order of Deacon on two Clerks, which he ſent him, and who had obtain'd a Diſpenſation from their Biſhop for it.

The third is among the Opuſcula, and is compris'd in the eighteenth.

In the fourth to the Biſhop of Oſmo, he makes uſe of the great number of dead Perſons which he found in his Return, as a Motive to perſuade that Biſhop not to put off his Converſion.

In the fifth, he gives us a lively and frightful Deſcription of the laſt Judgment, to perſuade him to whom he wrote to lead a Life becoming a Chriſtian.

In the ſixth, he exhorts another Biſhop to a Contempt of this World.

In the ſeventh, he adviſes the Biſhop to whom he wrote, to receive no Preſents; and upon that Account he relates a Viſion that had happen'd to a Prieſt, who had ſeen the Confeſſor of Count Hildebrand puniſh'd in the other World, for having receiv'd Preſents from him; and that Count himſelf in Torments for not having repented of his Cruelties, ſo as he ought to have done, by the over Indulgence of his Confeſſor. The ſame Prieſt ſaid, that he likewiſe ſaw Count Lotharius in a Fire of Brimſtone, who intreated him to admoniſh his Family to reſtore to the Church a Territory which belong'd to it, that ſo by this means he might be throughly deliver'd from his Torments, and that he underſtood that Count Guy was ſuddenly expected in that very Place, where ſeveral Torments were preparing for him. After the Relation of this Viſion, Peter Damien ſays, that it was not requiſite to receive Preſents indifferently from all ſorts of Perſons; but only from ſuch as were well pleaſing to God, becauſe the Gifts of the wicked are dangerous.

In the eighth, he exhorts the Biſhop of Eugubio to redeem the Revenues and the Ornaments of his Churches which were given or mortgag'd to Laicks. He likewiſe gives him ſeveral good Inſtructions about the Virtues which he ought to put in Practice, and relates the untimely End of Pope John XII. which happen'd that very Day, wherein his Guards pull'd out the Eyes of an Holy Abbot.

In the ninth, directed to the Biſhop of Fermo, after he had with a great deal of Modeſty rejected the Title of Holineſs, which that Biſhop had beſtow'd upon him, he bewails the Misfortunes and Irregularities of his Age, which inclin'd him to think that the End of the World was at Hand. More particularly he declaims againſt the Schiſm of Cadalous, and againſt the Liberty which at that Time was granted to the Biſhops and other Eccleſiaſticks, of maintaining their Rights and Properties with a Sword in their Hand. He makes it appear that War and Revenge is downright contrary to the Genius and Spirit of the true Church, which breaths forth nothing but Peace, and is for Pardoning all Mankind, that nothing than them can be more diſſonant to the Life of Jeſus Chriſt himſelf led upon Earth, and which he propos'd as an Example to his Followers, when he taught to ſuffer with Patience, and not to revenge by Force the Injuries offer'd him: That Laſtly, the Difference between the Regal and Sacerdotal Power lay in this, that the King makes uſe of Material Arms, but the Prieſt of the Sword of the Spirit, viz. the Word of God: That ſince it had never been allow'd to take up Arms for the Defence of the Faith, much leſs was it lawful to take them up for the Maintenance of temporal and tranſitory Goods: And that if the Saints of old never put any Heretick or Idolater to Death, but rather ſuffer'd Death themſelves; With what Face could any of the Faithful kill his Brother, who was purchas'd and redeem'd by the precious Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, only for the Loſs of meer periſhable and contemptible Things?

[This is ſound and Orthodox Doctrine which Peter Damien here Preaches, and ſuch as is conſonant to the Doctrine and Practice of the primitive Chriſtians: But how diſſonant to the Spirit, Genius and Practice

Afterwards he relates an In-

ſtance

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

of the preſent Church of Rome, let their Fire and Faggot, their Inquiſitions and Dragooning, and the Doctrine of your new Doctors the Jeſuites Speak.] him; but went to meet him with his Monks unarm'd, with only the Croſs carry'd before them. This Action ſo much ſurpriz'd that Lord and all his Men, that inſtead of offering them any harm, they begg'd them Pardon, and threw themſelves at their Feet. Laſtly he ſays, that if any one ſhould object that St. Leo ('tis Leo IX. he here means and not Leo I.) did engage himſelf in a War, he would anſwer him thus, that as St. Peter had not the Primacy for having deny'd his Maſter, nor David the Gift of Propheſy, for the Sake of his Adultery: So an Eſtimate of the Good or Evil of any Perſon ought not to be drawn from the merit of that Perſon, but all Actions ought to be conſider'd nakedly in themſelves. That St. Gregory who ſuffe.'d ſo many Plunderings and Injuries from the Lombards, never made War againſt them. That St. Ambroſe never fat upon the Arians, tho' they perſecuted him very Cruelly. That not one Inſtance could be given of any of the Holy Biſhops riſing up in Arms. That Laſtly, all Cauſes relating to Eccleſiaſtical Matters ought to be try'd, either by ſecular Judges according to the Laws, or by the Deciſions of Biſhops; and that they ought not to the Shame and Diſgrace of Eccleſiaſticks to determine that by Force, which ought to be decided by the Courts of Juſtice, or by the Decrees of Biſhops.

In the tenth, he excuſes himſelf to the Biſhop of Engubio for having permitted his Church to be conſecrated by the Biſhop of Foſſombrona, who pretended that he had a Right of Conſecrating the Churches of that Place, tho' it were under the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of Engubio. He ſays, That he durſt not oppoſe his proceeding, and the rather becauſe he was already his Enemy: But that he did not pretend to exempt himſelf from the Juriſdiction of the Church of Engubio, which he promiſes to Re-cognize very chearfully. Wherefore he intreats the Biſhop of Engubio to take off the Interdiction he had iſſu'd out againſt that Church; and to be perſuaded that not only that Place, but alſo that whatſoever his Monaſtery could enjoy were intirely at his Service, and he begs him to grant him his Protection.

The eleventh is a Letter whereby he Dedicates ſeveral of his Works to the Biſhops of Sinagaglia and Engubio.

In the twelfth he reproves a certain Biſhop, who alienated the Revenues of his Church. He asks him whether he had forgot that Pope Victor in a Council held at Florence, had prohibited it under the Pain of Excommunication? Whether he did not know that the Revenues of the Church were appropriated to the Maintenance of the Poor, and to the Relief of Widows and Orphans? This gave him an Occaſion of treating concerning the Original of Church Revenues; upon which he obſerves that in the Primitive Church the Faithful brought the Price of their Lands, and laid them at the Apoſtles Feet, that ſo they might diſtribute them to the Poor: And that afterwards it was thought more proper to ſettle Eſtates on Churches, not only for the maintenance of the Clergy, but likewiſe for the Relief of the Poor. That therefore thoſe who rob the Church of the Revenues which belong to it, were guilty of a World of Homicides in depriving the Poor of their neceſſary Subſiſtence. He adds, That as Sinners by giving their Eſtates to the Church, obtain'd by this means an Abſolution of their Sins: So thoſe on the contrary who take them do bind and engage themſelves to ſuffer that Penance from which the others are exempted by their Charity.

The thirteenth contains nothing very remarkable: He thanks the Biſhop of Ceſena for the kind Reception he gave to a young Man whom he had recommended to him: And exhorts him to a Chriſtian watchfulneſs by ſetting before him the Hour of Death and the Day of Judgment.

The fourteenth is referr'd to the twenty ſixth of his Opuſcula.

In the fifteenth, he ſhews what a guard Eccleſiaſticks ought to put over their Senſes, which are the Source and Fountain of a great many Diſorders.

In the ſixteenth, he maintains that the Octave of the Feſtival of St. John Baptiſt ought to be ſolemniz'd in the ſame Manner as the Feſtival it ſelf, and afterwards explains the eight ſolemn Feſtivals of the Jews, which by way of Allegory he applies to Chriſtianity.

His Letters to the Clergy.

The fifth Book contains the Letters directed to ſeveral of the Clergy.

In the firſt directed to the Arch-prieſts, he maintains what he had advanc'd in one of his Sermons, that every Man's Soul ſhall appear at the Day of Judgment in the ſame State wherein it left the Body. Several Perſons were offended at this Poſition believing that from thence it follows, that the Prayers, Oblations and Sacrifices which were offer'd for the Dead, ſignified nothing to them. Peter Damien denies this Inference, and makes it appear that he aſſerted no more than what St. Gregory had aſſerted before him.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The ſecond Letter is directed to his Brother Damien. He therein makes an ingenuous Confeſſion of the Faults to which he was addicted, and eſpecially of his Propenſity to rail at others. He entreats his Brother to pray to God to give him Grace to redreſs his Default.

In the third, he gives a lively Deſcription of the Soul juſt upon its Departure out of the Body.

In the fourth, he makes uſe of a Paſſage out of Jeremy, to demonſtrate how far the Intemperance of Clerks is an Offence to God.

The fifth is a Letter of Compliment directed to an Archdeacon.

The ſixth is written in the name of Leo IX. to the People of Oſmo, againſt a Cuſtom which prevail'd in that Church of riffling the Goods of the Biſhop after his Death: This Cuſtom is therein prohibited under the Penalty of Excommunication.

The ſeventh is writ in the name of Alexander II. to the Clergy and Laity of Milan, whom that Pope acquaints of his Exaltation to the Popedom, and exhorts them to Labour earneſtly for the carrying on of their own Salvation.

The eighth directed to the Clergy of Florence, concerning the Uſe of Diſciplines, is one of the moſt Curious of his Pieces. He had writ about this Practice to a certain Monk: His Letter falling into the Hands of ſome ſecular Perſons, and of ſome Monks of a leſs ſtrick Life, they were very much offended at this new Kind of Penance, unknown to all former Ages, and which ſeem'd to overthrow the Order of the Canons and the ancient Cuſtom. Peter Damien in this Letter, undertakes to maintain it. Firſt, from the Example of our Saviour, of the Apoſtles and Martyres, who have been ſcourg'd for the Sake of Jeſus Chriſt: From whence he infers, that God may very well be pleas'd with the voluntary Offering to him ſuch a Penance as he caus'd his Servants to endure againſt their Will. As to what might be objected, that indeed we do read, that the Saints were ſcourged by others, but that we never find they did it themſelves: He replies, That as we ought voluntarily to imitate the Mortification of the Croſs, ſo likewiſe one may imitate the other Sufferings of Jeſus Chriſt; and that as no body can blame him who of his own accord Faſts at other Times than thoſe enjoyn'd by the Church: So one ought not to imagine, that he who Chaſtiſes himſelf with his own Hand, does a Deed leſs acceptable to God. That on the contrary, he undergoes a real Penance, by mortifying his Fleſh, and making it ſuffer for the Pleaſures which it has enjoy'd; that it ſignifies nothing to what Sort of Puniſhment it is Condemn'd, provided that the preceeding Pleaſures be puniſh'd by a ſubſequent Puniſhment. He asks thoſe who pretended that this new Cuſtom ſubverted the Canons; whether the Reverend Bede did ill in enjoyning ſeveral Penitents to wear Iron Girdles? Whether the Holy Fathers did ill in putting ſuch Auſterities and Penances into Practice, of which no Mention is made in the Canons? He adds, That ſince the Laicks might redeem themſelves from a long Penance by beſtowing a certain Sum to Charitable Uſes; tho' no Mention be made of theſe Redemptions in the Canons; the Monks who may have deſerv'd a long Penance, and cannot make Compenſation for it by their Alms, ought not to be hindred from doing it by this Mortification of their Fleſh.

The ninth is among the Opuſcula, of which it makes the twenty ſixth.

In the tenth, he excuſes himſelf to the Clergy and Laity of Fayence, for his not being able to come to them after the Death of their Biſhop, and he adviſes them to put off the Election of another Biſhop, till the Arrival of the Emperor.

The eleventh is referr'd to the forty firſt of the Opuſcula.

In the twelfth, he asks the Advice of the Treaſurer of the Church of Ravenna, whether he ought to remain in that City, or return to his Solitude. He relates the Reaſons that might be alledg'd on both Sides: On the one Side, he might be ſerviceable to the ſaving of Souls at Ravenna, but there he was had in Contempt: On the other Side, he was had in Eſteem in his own Monaſtery, but he was afraid this Eſteem would puff him up with Pride. He refers himſelf wholly to the Counſel of him to whom he wrote, what he ought to do in the Caſe.

The thirteenth is directed to the Chaplains of Duke Godfrey who charg'd him with Avarice. The Occaſion of which Charge was this; one of the Chaplains had a Difference with him about a Piece of Gold which the Dutcheſs had preſented at the Offering of the Maſs, which Peter Damien Celebrated: The Monk who had receiv'd it, left it upon the Altar, together with another Piece of Gold preſented by a Marchioneſs. One of theſe Chaplains took away one of the Pieces which the Dutcheſs had order'd to be given him: But afterwards Peter Damien uſing his utmoſt Endeavours to make him reſtore it to him again he would not, but left it with one of the Monks. This Conduct of Peter Damien's being perfectly free from any Partiality, ſufficiently clear'd him from the Accuſation of theſe Chaplains; but in his turn he reprov'd them for two Errors, Firſt becauſe they taught, that Prieſts might marry; and then becauſe they maintain'd, that it was no Simony to give Money for the Preſentation of a Living provided nothing was given for Ordination.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The fourteenth and fifteenth are directed to the Clergy of the Church of Milan, who maintain'd the Truth and Purity of Diſcipline; he exhorted them to perſevere with Conſtancy and Stedfaſtneſs.

The two next are part, one of the forty ſecond, and the other of the eighth of his Opuſcula.

In the eighteenth, he returns an Anſwer to a Prieſt who had ask'd his advice about two Ceremonies relating to Baptiſm and the Celebration of the Maſs: And after he had intimated that no new Cuſtoms ought to be introduc'd, he determines, that only the Holy Chriſm ought to be put into the Water of Baptiſm, and not any Oyl or Wine; and that in the Celebration of the Maſs the Ablution of the Chalice ought not to be omitted, but when it was to be celebrated twice in a Day.

The nineteenth, is among the Opuſcula of which it makes the twenty eighth.

The ſixth Book contains ſuch Letters as are written to Abbots and Monks.

The firſt is referr'd to the forty third of his Opuſcula.

The ſecond is directed to Hugh Abbot of Cluny; the Monks of that Abby as an acknowledgment of the Love which Peter Damien had for them, and of the Services which he had done them, had promis'd him, that they would ſay an Office for him every Year on the Day of his Death. He prayes the Abbot of Cluny that this might be perform'd not only in that Abby, but likewiſe in others which were of the ſame Order.

The third directed to the ſame Abbot, is only a Letter of Compliment for the kind Entertainment he had given to one of Peter Damien's Nephews.

In the fourth, he recommends to him again the Prayers which he had promis'd to offer up for him after his Death.

In the fifth, directed to the Monks of that Abby, he commends the Diſcipline and the good Order which was obſerv'd in their Monaſtery; thanks them for the Acknowledgment they made of the good Services he had done them, and conjures them to pray to God for him after his Death.

The two next contain nothing in them very remarkable.

The eighth is among the Opuſcula, of which it makes the twenty firſt.

In the ninth, he reproves a Monk whom he had made Superior of an Hermitage, for having quitted it, to be an Abbot of another Monaſtery; and orders him either to return to the Charge committed to him, or elſe to live only as a Monk in that Monaſtery.

In the tenth, he retracts what he had ſaid of St. John the Baptiſt's being conceiv'd during the Feaſt of Tabernacles.

The eleventh is among the Opuſcula, of which it makes the forty fourth.

In the twelfth, he anſwers to the Reproaches caſt upon him by an Abbot, for having entertain'd a Monk who came out of another Monaſtery, which ſeem'd contrary to the Rule of St. Benedict. He makes it appear, that this Rule ought only to be underſtood of the Monaſteries of the Cœnobites, and not of the Hermits, whoſe Life is moſt perfect. He pretends that St. Benedict was as the firſt an Hermit, and that he always prefer'd the Life of the Hermits, before that of the Cœnobites.

The thirteenth is directed to the Monks of a Monaſtery of Conſtantinople; but contains nothing in it remarkable.

The fourteenth is among the Opuſcula, of which it makes the twenty ninth.

In the fifteenth, he admoniſhes an Abbot not to detain one of his Monks, who had deſerted him and was excommunicated, promiſing withal, that if that Monk would return, he would uſe him kindly.

The three next make the forty fifth, forty ſixth, and fifty ninth of his Opuſcula.

In the nineteenth, he gives a deſcription of the Diſtempers, under which he labour'd; of the Patience wherewith he endur'd them; and of the Extremity to which he was brought; which was ſuch, that they adminiſtred the extreme Unction to him, and laid him upon Aſhes and Hair-cloth, as the Cuſtom then was. He takes notice that his Remedy was communicated to one of his Monks in a Viſion, and procur'd by Alms, and that he had much ado to perſuade himſelf to eat Fleſh.

In the twentieth, he adviſes a Monk not to engage himſelf upon every turn to expiate the Faults of others, and readily to perform thoſe Penances with which he was engag'd. He moreover relates an inſtance of another Monk, who had ſuffer'd great Puniſhments in the other World, for having not done Penances for another, according as he undertook.

The twenty firſt is among his Opuſcula, of which it makes the forty ſeventh.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The twenty ſecond is to his Nephew Damien, whom he exhorts to be zealous in the Exerciſes of the Monaſtical Life, and reproves for having gone from an Hermitage to a Monaſtery, and exhorts to return thither again.

In the twenty third, he reproves a Monk, who delay'd turning Hermit, upon the account that he had much ado to perſuade himſelf not to drink Wine.

The twenty fourth and twenty ſixth, are refert'd to the forty eighth and ninth of his Opuſcula.

In the twenty fifth, he makes it appear, that it was upon ſome Grounds that he had a Deſign of quitting his Church; he thereupon relates two extraordinary Events.

The twenty ſeventh is directed to the Monk Cerebroſus, who had with ſome Sharpneſs blam'd the Practice of Diſcipline. Peter Damien maintain'd it by the ſame Arguments which he had already alledg'd. He pretended that it was a ſort of Martyrdom; that it was what was very well known to the Ancients; that it is founded upon the Canons; and that it was in Uſe before his Time in the Religious Monaſteries, wherein it was Cuſtomary to buy off a whole Year's Penance, by a thouſand Stripes of a Rod. That Monk did not find Fault with the Diſcipline, which was us'd during the reading of a Chapter for light Faults; but he blam'd thoſe ſevere and long Diſciplines of ſo many hundred Stripes. Peter Damien ſays, that if one approves the leſſer Diſcipline, one ought not to Condemn that which was more ſevere and mortifying.

In the twenty eighth, he illuſtrates two Paſſages out of St. Gregory.

In the twenty ninth, he adviſes a Monk, every Day, to ſay the Roſary, and to read the Holy Scriptures.

The two next make the fifty firſt and the fifty third of his Opuſcula.

In the thirty ſecond, he reproves the Hermits of a Monaſtery near his, for having neglected the Rule which he had given them, for being too much in love with Money, and too much given to Eaſe and Luxury.

For their Inſtruction, he relates the Puniſhments of ſeveral Monks, who had not liv'd up to that Strictneſs which they ought, and the Penance inflicted upon them for their Faults.

The thirty third is amongſt his Opuſcula, of which it makes the fifty fourth.

The thirty fourth, is likewiſe directed to ſeveral Hermits of his Congregation, whom he reprov'd for being too ſevere and too long in the Exerciſe of their Diſcipline. He would not have any one, every Day, be diſciplin'd any longer than during the reading of forty Pſalms, and in Advent and Lent, only whilſt ſixty Pſalms were Reading.

The thirty fifth is amongſt his Opuſcula, of which it makes the twenty fifth.

In the laſt, he exhorts his Monks to live peaceably after his Death, and requires that all the Poſſeſſions belonging to another Monaſtery, which he permitted them to enjoy during his Life-time, ſhould be reſtored after his Deceaſe.

The ſeventh Book contains the Letters written to Princes and Princeſſes, the two firſt of which are directed to the Emperor Henry III. In one of them he deſires that Count Giſler may be ſet at liberty, and in the other, he commends that Prince for having diſpoſſeſs'd Wiguier of the Archbiſhoprick of Ravenna, who had obtain'd it by ſiniſter Practices.

The third is directed to the young Prince Henry, the Son of the former, whom he earneſtly exhorts to defend the Church, and to oppoſe Cadalous's Schiſm.

The next are directed to the Empreſs Agnes, the Wife of Henry III. and written about different Affairs. In one of them, he gives that Princeſs to underſtand, that the Pope could not ſend the Pall to the Archbiſhop of Mentz, till he himſelf came to deſire it, or till he were examin'd by his Legates. In the two others, he comforts and exhorts the ſame Princeſs to beg Aſſiſtance of Jeſus Chriſt, and in the laſt, he invites her to Rome.

The ninth is written in the name of Pope Nicholas II. to the Queen of France, whom he exhorts to continue her Bounty and pious Inclinations; adviſing her at the ſame time, to inſpire the King her Husband with the ſame Principles, and to cauſe her Children to be educated in the ſame Manner.

In the tenth, directed to Godfrey Duke of Tuſcany, he expreſſes himſelf how much he was concern'd, that that Prince, had given Entertainment to Cadalous, and admoniſhes him to make amends for that Fault.

The two next directed to the ſame Duke, are compris'd in the fifty ſeventh Opuſculum.

In the thirteenth, he entreats that Prince to remit a certain Sum of Money to the Abby of St. John Baptiſt, to pay for a Library which he had bought.

In the fourteenth, directed to Beatrix Dutcheſs of Tuſcany, he approves of the Reſolution that ſhe and her Huſband had taken to live in perpetual Continency, and propoſes many Examples of Virtue, for her Imitation.

In

Peter Damien, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia.

In the fifteenth, he exhorts a certain Prince, to contemn all Worldly Poſſeſſions, and to ſeek after the Heavenly.

The ſixteenth, is comprehended in the eighteenth Opuſculum.

In the ſeventeenth, he exhorts the Marquiſs Renier, who had been enjoin'd, by Way of Penance for his Offences, to go in Pilgrimage to Rome; to ſet forward on his Journey, aſſoon as poſſible, and produces divers Examples, of the Protection that God has afforded to Pilgrims.

In the eighteenth, he admoniſhes the Counteſs Gille, newly marry'd to the Marquiſs Renier, not to retain the Spoils of the Widows and Orphans, but to reſtore every Thing that her Husband had got by Rapine, and adviſes her in order to prevent him from committing thoſe Outrages for the Future, to cauſe the Lands to be well cultivated, and to give Alms to the Poor.

The nineteenth, is among the Opuſcula, of which it makes the fiftieth.

The laſt Book of Peter Damien's Letters, contains thoſe that were written by him to divers particular Perſons.

In the firſt, directed to Cinthius Preſect of Rome, he commends him for the Exhortation that he made to the People on Twelfth-day, and adviſes him to perſevere in adminiſtring Juſtice in the City, and in maintaining the Rights of the Church.

In the Second, he admoniſhes the ſame Cinthius, that he ſhould not ſo much give himſelf up to praying as to neglect doing Juſtice.

In the third, he exhorts the Perſon to whom he writes, to ſhew due Reſpect to his Mother, and enlarges on the Duties of Children to their Parents.

The fourth, is a Conſolatory Letter to a Father, upon the Death of his Son. He maintains that the Death of Children is a peculiar Favour of God, and that we ought to rejoyce rather than to be troubled at it.

In the fifth, he exhorts a Senator of the City of Rome, to compleat the Building of a Church that he had begun, ſhewing by many Examples, that it is an Action, which deſerves Reward.

In the ſixth, he comforts a ſick Perſon, giving him to underſtand, that Sufferings are a Mark of Predeſtination, and that a Chriſtian ought to bear them with Patience and Cheerfulneſs.

The ſeventh, is compris'd in the forty ſecond Opuſculum.

In the eighth, he exhorts a Judge to meditate on the future State, and on the Day of Judgment, and produces a great number of Sentences of Scripture on that Subject, to the end that he might take the Matter into ſerious Conſideration.

The ninth, is amongſt the Opuſcula, of which it makes the fifty eighth.

In the tenth, he exhorts a certain Perſon, who was apt to forſwear himſelf to abſtain altogether from Swearing, and adviſes him to give Alms.

The eleventh, makes the thirtieth Opuſculum.

The twelfth, is an Invective againſt Pride.

The thirteenth, is contain'd in the fifty ninth Opuſculum.

The fourteenth, is directed to his two Siſters, to whom he gives a great deal of Advice about the Religious Life.

The fifteenth, is a Prayer made by Peter Damien, on behalf of a Man, who was at the Point of Death, and it is one of thoſe that are now us'd in the Church (i. e. of Rome) for Perſons in ſuch a Condition.

From the Letters paſs we to the Opuſcula or ſmall Tracts, which conſtitute the third Volum of Peter Damien's Works; reſerving the Account of the ſecond, which contains his Sermons, till we have made the Extract of his Opuſcula.

The firſt bears this Title, Of the Catholick Faith, and is dedicated to Ambroſe. He explains therein, the Myſteries of the Trinity and Incarnation, and more eſpecially eſtabliſhes the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt from the Perſons of the Father and of the Son.

In the ſecond, call'd Anſilegus againſt the Jews, he makes it appear by ſeveral Proofs taken out of the Old Teſtament, That Jeſus Chriſt is the true Meſſiah the Son of God.

The third is on the ſame Subject, in which he anſwers divers Queſtions propoſed in the Name of the Jews, concerning Jeſus Chriſt.

The fourth, is a Dialogue between the Emperor Henry's Attorney General, and an Advocate of the Church of Rome, concerning the Right that the Emperors of Germany have to the Election of a Pope. After the Death of Nicholas II. the Romans choſe Alexander II. without the Emperor Henry's Knowledge; whereupon that Prince being highly diſpleaſed that the Election was carried on without his Authority, nominated Cadalus Biſhop of Parma to the Papal Dignity. Peter Damien ſuppoſes the Queſtion about the Validity of both thoſe Elections to be debated in a Council, between the Advocate of the Church of Rome, and the Emperor's Attorney General. The latter maintains, That the Election of a Pope cannot be duly made, without the Prince's Conſent, and that they had apparently done him an Injury in conſecrating Alexander without his Knowledge. On the other ſide, the Advocate of the Church of Rome aſſerts, that the Right of chooſing a Pope, or of confirming his Election, does not belong to his Imperial Majeſty; ſince not only the Pagan Emperors, but alſo all the Chriſtian Princes to the laſt Greek Emperors, never laid Claim to that Right, nor had any Share in the Election of a Pope, which was always perform'd by the Church of Rome. The Attorney General replies, That Henry the Father and Predeceſſor of the Prince, whoſe Right he maintain'd, enjoy'd ſuch a Privilege, and that it was confirm'd by Pope Nicholas II. to the Emperor his Maſter. The Advocate of the Church of Rome acknowledges that Conceſſion, and willingly agrees, that the Emperor ſhould enjoy the ſame Privilege; but he inſiſts, that as to the Matter in Debate, the Emperor Henry being under Age, the Church of Rome, acted as his Tutor in that Election, and perform'd the Office that belong'd to him, by Reaſon that a Child is uncapable of making ſuch a Choice: That therefore what was done at Rome, was not prejudicial to the Emperor's Right, but only made it appear, that there might be ſome Occaſions, in which it cannot take Place. The Attorney General averr'd, That at leaſt it could not be deny'd, that they had done that Prince Wrong, in not making Application to him: That three Months had paſſed from Pope Nicholas's Death to the Day of Alexander's Ordination, and that there was more Time than was requiſite for the obtaining of a Pragmatical Sanction from the Imperial Court. The Advocate of the Church of Rome replies, That the German Noblemen and ſome of the Biſhops of the Empire, who were diſaffected to the Church of Rome, call'd a Kind of a Council, in which, by an unheard of Boldneſs, they diſannull'd every Thing that was ordain'd by Pope Nicholas: That they refuſ'd to hearken to Stephen Cardinal Prieſt and Legate of the Holy See, and that at the Solliciration of Count Gerard, whom Pope Nicholas had excommunicated in a full Synod, they proceeded to the Election of a Perſon, who was altogether unworthy. Thereupon he demands, which of the two Competitors ought to be acknowledg'd as lawful Pope; either he who was unanimouſly choſen by the Cardinals, who was nominated by the Clergy and People of Rome, and who was fairly elected in that City, and in the Boſom of the Holy Apoſtolick See; or he who had no other Suffrage in his Favour, but that of an excommunicated Perſon? The Attorney General acquieſces to theſe Arguments, being well ſatisfied, that his Sovereign's Right was ſufficiently ſecur'd, and that the Perſon who was choſen, could not be unacceptable to him, becauſe he belong'd to his Court. Then the Advocate of the Church of Rome concludes, wiſhing, That the Sacerdotal and Imperial Powers were inſeparably united, and that they might always concur to the ſame End.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia.

The fifth Opuſculum or ſmall Tract, is a Relation directed to Hildebrand the Archdeacon, of what befel Peter Damien, during his Journey to Milan, where he was ſent in Quality of Legate of the Holy See, to ſuppreſs the Diſorders committed by the unchaſte and Simoniacal Clergy of that Church. 'Tis related by him, that upon his Arrival at Milan, he had no ſooner given Notice of the Purport of his Commiſſion, but the Clergy under Colour that their Church ought not to be govern'd by the Laws, nor to ſubmit to the Yoke of Rome, rais'd a Sedition. That the People ran in Crowds to the Epiſcopal Palace, threatning to cauſe him to be put to Death: and that afterwards appearing between the Archbiſhop of Milan, and Anſelm Biſhop of Lucca, he allay'd their Fury by a Diſcourſe, which he produces. In that Speech Peter Damien remonſtrates to them, that he was not come to enhance the Grandeur and Authority of the Holy See; but to promote their Salvation: That that Church derives its Dignity and Primacy from the Inſtitution of Jeſus Chriſt, and that no Attempt can be made on its Rights without violating the Faith: That St. Nazarius, St. Gervaſe and St. Proteſius, the firſt Planters of the Church of Milan, receiv'd their Miſſion from the Apoſtles St. Peter and St. Paul: That St. Ambroſe had Recourſe to Pope Siricius, to put a Stop to the Irregularities of ſome of his Clergymen, and that he declar'd, that he was ready in all Points to obey the Church of Rome as his Patroneſs. The Cardinal of Oſtia, having by this Means pacified the People, call'd an Aſſembly of the Clergy, and after having made enquiry into the Manner of their Ordination, ſcarce found one Man, among ſo great a Number, who was admitted into Orders without diſburſing Money, becauſe every one upon that Occaſion, was oblig'd to pay a certain ſet Rate.

This general Diſorder extremely perplexed Peter Damien, in regard that it would be unjuſt to puniſh ſome, and to pardon others, who were leſs culpable. Therefore he took a Reſolution, to grant an Amneſty for paſt Tranſgreſſions, and to make a Conſtitution to prevent ſuch Enormities for the Future. It was drawn up in the Name of Guy Archbiſhop of Milan, who declar'd, That he condemn'd the Cuſtom or rather Abuſe, which prevail'd in his Dioceſs, and that he oblig'd himſelf and his Succeſſors to exact nothing for Ordinations: That he likewiſe condemn'd the Marriage of Prieſts, Deacons and Subdeacons, and that he promis'd to uſe his utmoſt Endeavours, to hinder them from keeping Wives or Concubines: That he further engag'd both for himself and his Officers, not to take any Thing, for the Benediction of Abbies and Chappels; for the Investiture and Collation of Benefices; for the Ordination of Bishops; for the Administration of the Holy Chrism, or for the Consecration of Churches. This Decree was signed by the Archbishop of Milan, and by the principal Clergy, who took an Oath to observe it, and did Penance for their past'd Offences: The former impos'd on himself a Penance of a hundred Years, and nominated how much he determin'd to give for the Redemption of it. The other Clergymen were in like Manner enjoin'd Fasting, which nevertheless they might redeem by reciting the Psalter, or by giving Alms. Furthermore the Archbishop made a Vow to go in Pilgrimage to the Sepulchre of St. James in Gallicia, and to send his Clerks to Rome or Tours, or to some other Place usually frequented by Pilgrims.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia.

In the sixth Tract, directed to Henry Archbishop of Ravenna, Peter Damien debates this Question, viz. Whether those who were ordain'd by Priests Simoniacally promoted, ought to be re-ordain'd or not? This Question was propos'd in a Council, where it was not judg'd expedient to resolve it, till it were farther discuss'd. Peter Damien maintains the Negative, by Reason that 'tis not the Bishop, who is the only Minister, but God, that consecrates: That the same Thing may be said of Ordination, as of Baptism, viz. That it ought not to be reiterated, altho' it were administer'd by an unworthy Minister: That provided the Orders be conferr'd in the Catholick Church, and that both he who confers them, and he who takes them have Faith, the vicious Clerk is as effectually ordain'd by an unworthy Minister, as the vertuous Clerk by a worthy Minister: That there are three principal Sacraments in the Church, viz. Baptism, the Eucharist and Orders: That St. Augustine proves as to the first, and Paschasius with Respect to the second, That those Sacraments are not made more or less efficacious by worthy or unworthy Ministers; and altho' the Question was never as yet stated in reference to Ordinations; nevertheless the Case ought to be argu'd after the same Manner, according to St. Augustine's Principles, on which Peter Damien enlarges in this Book, and adds many Examples to shew, that Ordinations conferred by unworthy Ministers are valid, and that those Persons who were once admitted into Orders, ought not to be re-ordain'd, which he applies in particular to Simonists, and commends the Conduct of Pope Leo IX. who only imposes a Penance of forty Days on those that were ordain'd by Priests guilty of Simony, but did not lay out any Money upon that Account. He likewise commends the Emperor Henry, for opposing that Irregularity, and concludes with a Declamation against Simonists.

The seventh Treatise, call'd the Gomorrhean, is dedicated to Pope Leo IX. who approv'd of it in a Letter, which is prefix'd at the Beginning. In this Tract, Peter Damien proves, that Clergymen who have committed Sins of Uncleanness, which Modesty does not permit to be named, ought to be depriv'd of the Functions of their Order for ever: He rejects the Canons of the Penitential Books, which impose too light Penances for those Sorts of Crimes, of which he shews the Enormity: He inveighs against those Persons who are guilty of such notorious Offences, and exhorts them to a speedy Repentance, and to do severe Penance.

The eighth Tract dedicated to John Bishop of Cesena and to the Archdeacon of Ravenna, relates to the Degrees of Consanguinity in which it is forbidden to contract Marriage. He confutes the Opinion of the Lawyers who restrain'd them to the fourth, and imagin'd that Grand-Nephews and Grand Nieces might inter-marry. He reckons up the Degrees by Generations, and maintains, That as far as any Consanguinity or Affinity can be discern'd, Matrimony ought not to be contracted, which takes Place at least in the seventh Degree. He asserts in this Treatise, that in computing the Degrees of Consanguinity, the Number of Persons ought always to exceed that of the Generations by one, so that there are but five Generations, where there are six Persons; But he retracts this Opinion in a Dissertation made by him on purpose to be annex'd to the same Treatise.

In the ninth, he treats at large of Alms-giving, and shews the Usefulness of it, both for the Living and the Dead, in this World and in the future State.

The tenth, is about the Divine Service, in which he gives an Account of the Number of the Canonical Hours, of the Prayers which make the Office, and of the Difference between the Office of Clergymen and that of the Monks: He shews how beneficial 'tis to recite it, and even recommends it to Laicks, as well as the small Office of the Virgin Mary. In this Tract he likewise discourses of the seven mortal Sins, amongst which he does not reckon Gluttony, but distinguishes vain Glory from Pride.

In the eleventh, he states this Question, viz. Whether those who recite their Office alone in Private ought to say, Dominus vobiscum, Jube Domine, &c. He concludes in the Affirmative, because, since the Church is one in many; it may be said, that divers Persons are comprehended in one single Member of it, and by Reason of that Unity, one single Person may speak for all, and as if he join'd in Prayer with many: That one single Person often speaks in the Name of many, and many in that of a single Person: That if it were requisite to retrench these Prayers, because they seem to suppose the Presence of many Persons; other Parts of the Divine Office, which are of the same Nature, ought likewise to be omitted: That the Sacrifice of the Mass is offer'd up for all the Faithful, tho' in a special Manner by the Priest, in Regard that he holds in his Hands, every Thing that the Faithful offer in their Mind: That altho' only one single Person assists at the Celebration of Mass; yet he does not forbear to say Dominus vobiscum, and not Dominus tecum: That the Church has no Regard to Numbers, Cases or Terms, but adheres only to that which tends to Edification: That that which one omits, may be supply'd by another; and lastly, that these Words may be refer'd as well to the Absent as to the Present. He concludes with a Commendation of the solitary Life, in Favour of the Hermit, to whom he wrote, and leaves the Resolution of this Question to his Judgment. It may also be observ'd in this Treatise, That at that Time, the Bishops were wont to say, Pax Vobis, whereas the Priests only said Dominus vobiscum.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia.

The twelfth, is written against the disorderly Lives of the Monks of his Time, and he rebukes them chiefly for four irregular Practices, viz. 1. That they enjoy'd Estates and hoarded up Money, contrary to the Vow of Poverty. 2. That they ran about continually, and kept Company with Laymen, even with excommunicated Persons, or such as deserv'd to be so punish'd, according to the Tenor of the ancient Canons. 3. That they kept rich Apparel and other Garments so sorry, that they wore them only to shew their Affectation of Vain Glory. 4. That they were too much immers'd in Worldly Affairs, and that they did not lead a Life sufficiently retired. This Treatise is written with a great deal of Energy; so that the Author gives a very lively Description of the Enormities of the Monks of those Times, and endeavours to reform their Manners by Precepts and contrary Examples.

In the next Treatise that bears this Title, Of the Perfection of Monks, he instructs them in their Duty and in the Vertues they ought to practise.

The fourteenth dedicated to his Hermits, contains an Abridgment of the Rule, and of the Manner of living that they ought to observe.

He enlarges farther on the same Subject, in the fifteenth Tract, which may be look'd upon as an entire System of the Rules of his Order.

The sixteenth, is an Invective against a certain Bishop, who asserted, That a Person who had assum'd the Monastick Habit by Reason of the Indisposition of his Body, or upon some other Motive, without serving as a Novice for a considerable Time, according to the Rule, might return to a secular Course of Life. Peter Damien maintains the contrary Opinion, and establishes it on the Tenor of the Canons, which absolutely forbids all those, who have voluntarily imbrac'd the Monastick Life, and even Children, whom their Parents have engag'd in that Station, to quit their Profession. He says, that the compleat Probation specified in St. Benedict's Rule, does not prove that those who get Admission without undergoing a Trial, may disengage themselves at Pleasure: That it is a Precaution requisite for the Satisfaction of those who have a Right to admit, rather than for the Benefit of the Persons to be admitted; and that it is not so absolutely necessary, that it cannot be dispensed with, when there is Assurance, that they who present themselves for that Purpose, are endow'd with proper Qualities, and are really in a State of Grace.

The seventeenth, is dedicated to Pope Nicholas II. whom he earnestly exhorts to put a Stop to the Enormities committed by unchaste and dissolute Clergymen, and to make use of the Severity of the Canons against them, in Imitation of Phineas's Zeal.

The eighteenth, is compos'd of three Letters against the Incontinency of Clergymen, in which Peter Damien shews, that they are oblig'd to lead a single Life; inveighs against those who are marry'd or keep Concubines; vigorously opposes these Disorders, and powerfully exhorts the Persons, to whom he writes, who are Peter Cardinal of Rome, the Bishop of Florence, and the Dutchess Adelaide, to interpose their Authority, in order to prevent them for the future.

In the nineteenth, he resigns his Bishoprick and two Abbies into the Hands of Pope Nicolas, and to induce him to approve of that Resignation, he represents the Examples of divers Prelates, who have in like Manner quitted their Bishopricks, and gives an Account of certain Apparitions of Bishops or other Persons, condemned to endure the Torments of Hell, or of Purgatory, for neglecting to perform their Duty. Indeed one cannot but admire at the great Number

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

Number of Examples of that Nature produced by him; but if any be deſirous to be inform'd of the Particulars, they need only peruſe this Treatiſe; in which the Author, for his own Part alledges, as a Motive to his Reſignation, that at the Time of his Promotion to the Epiſcopal Dignity, he was not worthy of it; and that his Life and Converſation were culpable, which induc'd him to believe, that it was much ſafer to depoſe himſelf, than to have a Sentence of Depoſition paſſed upon him at the Day of Judgment, accompanied with everlaſting Damnation.

The next Tract dedicated to the ſame Pope Nicholas, is written on the ſame Subject, and full of Examples of the like Nature: He enlarges farther on the Reaſons that oblig'd him to quit his Biſhoprick, and more particularly on this, viz. That he was no longer in a Condition to take Care of the two Biſhopricks, which the Holy See thought fit to commit to his Charge.

In the twenty firſt, he commends an Abbot, for reſigning his Office, to be diſcharg'd of the Cares, Troubles and Multiplicity of Buſineſs that unavoidably attended that Dignity, and exhorts him to withſtand, for the Future, the Temptations, with which the Devil uſually aſſaults thoſe, who have quitted Eccleſiaſtical Preferments, by inſpiring them with a Deſire to reſume them.

The twenty ſecond, is written againſt Clergymen who reſide at Court, and put themſelves into the Service of Princes or Potentates, to obtain Biſhopricks or Abbies. He ſhews that they are not free from the Imputation of Simony, although they diſburſe no Money, but that on the contrary, they are blame-worthy; becauſe they ſell themſelves as it were for Slaves, and part with their Liberty to get Eccleſiaſtical Livings: Beſides, that their Services are of greater Value, than the Money that is paid by others: 'For ſuppoſe (ſays 'he) that two Clergymen are poſſeſs'd of an equal Here-'ditary Eſtate, that they both ſell it, and that one of them 'reſorts to Court, where he ſpends his Stock by Degrees 'in the Prince's Service, whilſt the other, on the contrary, 'keeps his entire. Afterwards a Benefice is beſtow'd on 'each of them, that is to ſay, on the former, as a Recom-'pence for his Service, and on the other, for his Money; 'now the Queſtion is, Which of the two bought the Be-'nefice at the deareſt Rate? The Value of the Money is 'equal, ſince it was the Product of both their Eſtates; but 'one obtain'd with a great deal of Pains and Fatigues, that 'which the other got without any Trouble or Difficulty; 'and therefore the Purchaſe made by the former, coſt much 'more than that by the latter.

The twenty third, is dedicated to Pope Alexander II. upon his Return from the Council of Mantua, and contains an Anſwer to a Queſtion which he had formerly propos'd to Peter Damien, viz. Upon what Account it happens that the Lives of the Popes are generally ſo ſhort? The latter reſolves it by a Moral Reflection, That God permits it ſo to fall out, to the End that the Frailty of Humane Life, may be moſt conſpicuous in thoſe, who are promoted to the Supreme Dignity; and that all Men who have Regard to the Popes, may be ſtruck with Terror at their Death. This gives him an Occaſion to enlarge upon Providence and the Goodneſs of the Divine Majeſty.

In the twenty fourth, he writes againſt thoſe Canons, who being maintain'd in common, by the Church-Revenues, affect to enjoy private Poſſeſſions. He exhorts Pope Alexander, to whom his Letter is directed, to make uſe of his Authority, to oblige them to quit that Claim.

In the twenty fifth, he extols the Sacerdotal Dignity, and diſcourſes on the Obligations that accompany it.

In the twenty ſixth, he declaims againſt the Ignorance, ſupine Negligence and Slothfulneſs of Clergymen. He makes it appear to be the Source of the principal Diſorders in the Church, and exhorts the Biſhops to inſpect the Lives and Converſation of the inferior Clergy, and to take Care that none be admitted into the Eccleſiaſtical State, but ſuch as are capable of performing thoſe Functions.

The twenty ſeventh is directed to the Canons of the Church of Fano, who were at Variance one with another, by Reaſon that ſome of them were deſirous to live ſeparatly, and the others in Common. Peter Damien takes part with the latter, and maintains, that the Canons ought to live in Common, and to have no private Property, following the Examples of the Apoſtles and of the Chriſtians of the primitive Church.

The twenty eighth is compos'd in Favour of the Monks, againſt the Secular Clerks and Canons. The latter inſiſted, that the Monks ought not to adminiſter the Euchariſt or other Sacraments. Peter Damien maintains on the contrary, that the Monks ought not to be excluded from thoſe Functions; and to prove his Aſſertion, brings ſeveral Examples of Monks, who being made Biſhops or Prieſts, have actually adminiſter'd them. He extols the Monaſtick Order, deriving its Original from the Prophets and Apoſtles; and in the Cloſe, cites a Decretal made by Pope Boniface IV. in which Monks are authorized to adminiſter the Sacrament of Penance.

The twenty ninth is directed to a certain Abbot, whom he reproves for wearing too ſumptuous Apparel.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The thirtieth is written to the Inhabitants of Florence, and more eſpecially to the Monks of that City, who refus'd to communicate with their Biſhop, and to receive the Sacraments from his Hands, becauſe they ſuſpected him to be guilty of Simony. Peter Damien makes it appear, that although the Information they brought againſt him were true, yet they ought not to withdraw themſelves from his Communion, till he were legally convicted, nor to refuſe to receive the Sacraments adminiſter'd by him; by Reaſon that unworthy Miniſters are capable of adminiſtring them as well as the worthy.

In the thirty firſt, he exhorts the Cardinals to oppoſe the Covetouſneſs and Concupiſcence of the Clergy, which was the Source of the greateſt Part of the Diſorders and Calamities that befel the Church.

The thirty ſecond, is a moral and myſtical Treatiſe on Lent or the forty Days Faſt, and on the forty Stations of the Iſraelites in the Wilderneſs.

The thirty third, is a Letter directed to the Abbot of Mount Caſſin, who had threaten'd that if he did not come to him, he ſhould no longer partake of the Benefit of the Prayers put up in his Monaſtery. Peter Damien excuſes himſelf, upon Account that he was ſenſible that the Time of his Diſſolution drew near, and that he was afraid of going in Queſt after a Monaſtery, leſt he ſhould die without the Precincts of a Monaſtery. He entreats that Abbot not to deprive him of the Advantages that might ariſe from the Supplications of thoſe of his Order: He enlarges on the Devotions to be perform'd to the Virgin Mary, and produces a great Number of Miracles wrought by her Interceſſion, in Favour of thoſe who had a particular Reſpect for her; and amongſt others, he ſays, that ſhe appear'd to his Brother Damien a little before his Death. Afterwards he ſhews, that Alms diſtributed for the Dead, procure them Conſolation, as well as Prayers and Sacrifices.

The thirty fourth, is a Collection of a great Number of Miracles, Viſions, Apparitions and Hiſtorical Paſſages, relating to the Puniſhment of evil Actions, and the Reward of Good, the Torments of Hell, and the Deliverance of Souls out of Purgatory.

In the thirty fifth, after having alledged for a Reaſon, why the Image of St. Paul is uſually plac'd on the Right-hand and St. Peter's on the Left; that the former was of the Tribe of Benjamin, which ſignifies the Son of the Right-hand; he enlarges on the Commendation of that Apoſtle.

In the thirty ſixth, he treats of the Eternity, Immenſity, Purity, and more eſpecially of the Omnipotence of God.

In the thirty ſeventh, he explains ſeveral Difficulties relating to the Holy Scripture, that were propoſed to him.

In the thirty eighth, he confutes the Opinion of the Greeks, concerning the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt.

In the thirty ninth, after having commended the Archbiſhop of Beſanſon, for the good Order he had eſtabliſhed in his Church, and for having caus'd a Tomb to be prepar'd for himſelf, he finds Fault with the Cuſtom of his Church and of ſome other Churches of France, in which the Clerks and even the Monks, in ſome Places, were permitted to ſit, during the Celebration of Divine Service. He is of Opinion, that all thoſe who aſſiſt at it, ought to continue ſtanding, till it be perform'd.

In the fortieth, after having congratulated a certain Biſhop, upon the Recovery of his Health, he exhorts him not to give Way to Paſſion for the Future, and to forgive his Enemies.

In the forty firſt, he maintains, That thoſe Perſons who make Matrimonial Contracts within the Time prohibited by the Church, that is to ſay, in Lent; three Weeks before the Feſtival of St. John Baptiſt; and from Advent to Epiphany; ought to be divorc'd, and their Marriage declar'd null: But foraſmuch as ſome, made no Scruple to marry at thoſe Times, and imagin'd that it was ſufficient to abſtain from the Uſe of Marriage, to avoid the Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, he confutes that Opinion, by ſhewing, that it is not Carnal Copulation, but the mutual Conſent of the Parties that makes the Marriage.

The forty ſecond contains two Letters, in which he admoniſhes two ſeveral Perſons, to perform the Vow that they had made, to enter into a Religious Order; ſhewing by divers Authorities and Examples, the Obligation they lie under, to fulfil their Vows, who have once made them.

In the forty third, he exhorts the Monks of Mount Caſſin, to diſcipline themſelves every Friday.

In the forty fourth, he gives Moral Explications of the ten Plagues of Egypt.

In the forty fifth, to comfort a tender-conſcienced Monk, who was troubled for his Ignorance; he ſhews that Learning often occaſions many Vices, more eſpecially when it is not accompanied with other Vertues, but that downright Integrity is always profitable to Salvation.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

In the forty ſixth, he exhorts that Monk, patiently and cheerfully to bear Reprimands and Corrections.

In the forty ſeventh, he recommends Chaſtity to his Nephew Damien, and perſuades him to receive the Communion every Day, to be in a Condition to preſerve that Vertue. Afterwards he gives him wholſome Inſtructions to withſtand the Temptations of the Devil.

In the forty eighth, he reproves a Monk, who had ſtill ſome Inclination for delicious Fare and coſtly Apparel, and admoniſhes him to fix all his Delight and Repoſe in God.

In the forty ninth, he gives a great deal of wholſome Advice, concerning the Spiritual Life to a young Monk his Nephew.

The fiftieth, is a moral Inſtruction, dedicated to the Counteſs Blanche, who had taken a Nun's Habit.

The fifty firſt, is directed to a Monk nam'd Tenzo, who having left his Monaſtery, retir'd to a Celi in the Middle of the City, and refus'd to entertain Peter Damien as well as his Abbot, when they came to viſit him. He exhorts him with a great deal of Charity and Gentleneſs, to quit that particular Way of living and to return to his Duty.

In the fifty ſecond, he makes divers Moral Reflections, on the Qualities of ſeveral Sorts of Animals.

In the fifty third, he ſhews the Advantages that ariſe from Afflictions and Adverſity.

In the fifty fourth, he exhorts certain Monks to faſt on Saturdays, in Honour of our Saviour's Burial, and makes uſe of an Apparition to confirm that Cuſtom.

In the fifty fifth, he admoniſhes the Monks of his Order, to faſt on the Vigils of the Feſtivals of the Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary, of Chriſtmaſs, of the Epiphany, of Holy Thurſday, of Whitſunday, of the Nativity of St. John Baptiſt, and of thoſe of all the Feſtivals of the Apoſtles, as alſo to obſerve a Faſt on all Saturdays throughout the Year.

In the fifty ſixth, he commends the Empreſs Agnes, upon Account of the ſingular Modeſty and Humility ſhe had ſhewn in going to viſit the Sepulchre of St. Peter and St. Paul, and makes it appear, that Potentates ought not to take a Pride in their Grandeur, nor in the Riches of this World.

In the fifty ſeventh, he admoniſhes Prince Godfrey, that he did not uſe ſufficient Severity in the puniſhing of Criminals, and ſhews how neceſſary it is, that Princes ſhould be very punctual in the Adminiſtration of Juſtice.

In the fifty eighth, he demonſtrates, That there is no perfect Felicity in this World, and that all profane Sciences are not capable of making us truly wiſe or happy. Therefore he warns Boniface, to whom he writes, that if he has not taken a Reſolution entirely to renounce worldly Wealth and Knowledge; at leaſt, he ought to make uſe of them only as Means for the attaining of the real Poſſeſſions and of the true Wiſdom.

In the fifty ninth, he treats of the laſt Judgment and Antichriſt; and ſhews that it is difficult to diſcourſe appoſitely on that Subject, but very profitable to meditate ſeriouſly upon it. He ſays, that Antichriſt ſhall reign three Years and a half; that he ſhall be kill'd on the Mount of Olives; and that forty Days ſhall paſs from his Death, to the Coming of Jeſus Chriſt, during which the Perſecution ſhall ceaſe, and the Juſt, whoſe Faith hath been ſhaken, ſhall perform Acts of Repentance: That afterwards the Earth and Air ſhall be involv'd in univerſal Flames, which ſhall purifie the Elect. Then he produces ten Signs that ought to precede the Day of Judgment, according to St. Jerom.

The ſixtieth and laſt Tract, contains Allegorical Explications on divers Paſſages of the Book of Geneſis.

We have given an Account of the Opuſcula after the Letters, becauſe the greateſt Part of thoſe Tracts, are in Effect only of that Nature, and it were more expedient to leave them among the Letters, (as in the firſt Edition) and to diſpoſe them all according to the Order of Time or the Subjects they treat of, than to diſtribute them in ſuch a Manner, as they appear at preſent. Let us now return to the ſecond Tome that contains Peter Damien's Sermons, which are ſeventy five in Number, diſpoſed according to the Order of the Feſtivals of the Year, but ſome of them do not belong to this Cardinal, particularly that of St. Martin. The ſecond Sermon of St. Andrew; that of St. Nicholas; that on Chriſtmaſs-Eve; and that of St. Stephen the Protomartyr; which are inſerted among St Bernard's Sermons, and which were publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the Edition of the Works of that Saint, under the Name of Nicholas Abbot of Cairvaux; as alſo, thoſe on the Feſtivals of the Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary, and of All-Saints, the firſt on Chriſtmaſs Day, and that on the Dedication of a certain Church, appear to have been compos'd by the ſame Author.

Peter Damien, Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

The Sermons are follow'd by the Lives of St. Odilo, St. Maurus Biſhop of Ceſena, St. Romualdus, St. Rodulphus Biſhop of Engubio, and the Hiſtory of the Paſſions of St. Flora and St. Lucilia. As for the other Lives of the Saints, taken out of Surius by Peter Damien, they conſtitute Part of the Sermons.

In the laſt Tome, are contain'd divers Prayers, Hymns and * Proſes attributed to Peter Damien, to which are annexed certain Extracts taken out of the Works of that Father, by a nameleſs Writer who was one of his Pupils, and out of the Rule of the Canons, compos'd by Petrus de Honeſtis, a Clerk of Ravenna, whom ſome have unadviſedly confounded with Peter Damien; ſince that Rule was dedicated to Pope Paſchal II. who was not promoted to the Papal Dignity till A. D. 1099. after the Death of the latter.

* A Part of the Maſs

Petrus de Honeſtis.

The Treatiſe of the Reformation of the Biſhops and Popes, extant in Goldaſtus, is not a Work falſly aſcribed to Peter Damien, as Poſſevinus imagin'd, but a Fragment of the twelfth Letter of the firſt Book.

The five Sermons, that Father Luke Dachery ſet forth under the Name of Peter Damien, in the ſeventh Tome of the Spicilegium, do not belong to this Author, but rather to St. Petrus Chryſologus, as it is own'd by that Father himſelf, in the End of his Preface to the eighth Tome.

Peter Damien wrote with a great deal of Facility and Clearneſs. His Style is polite and elegant, full of Figures and agreeable Varieties: He produces divers fine Notions, and gives an admirable Turn to his Writings, inſomuch that ſome of his Letters are compos'd with all poſſible Art and Accuracy. He had a Genius proper for Negociations; and was ſo dextrous in the Management of Affairs, that even thoſe whom he condemn'd or reprov'd, were conſtrain'd to acknowledge, that he had Reaſon to do it. He deliver'd his Mind with a great deal of Freedom, to the Popes and other Perſons of Eminency; nevertheleſs, without failing to ſhew all the Reſpect that was due to their Quality. He us'd his utmoſt Endeavours to revive, at leaſt a Shadow of the ancient Diſcipline in that corrupted Age, and to put a Stop to the Career of the Enormities committed by the Clergy and Monks of his Time. He attain'd to a profound Skill in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, and more eſpecially in thoſe that relate to the Conſtitutions and Diſcipline of the Church. He was alſo well vers'd in the Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, but inſiſted on the Allegorical rather than the Literal Senſe of them. He had peruſ'd the Works of the Latin Fathers, and chiefly thoſe of St. Auguſtine and St. Gregory, whoſe Doctrine and Maxims he thoroughly imbib'd: He argues ſubtilly about Theological Queſtions, and Controverſial Matters. He ſhew'd a great deal of Devotion to the Virgin Mary, and was a punctual Obſerver of the Rites of the Church, and of Monaſtical Cuſtoms: But he produces a great Number of Viſions and Apparitions, which he very eaſily gives Credit to.

Peter Damien's Character.

The Works of this Author were publiſhed by Father Conſtantine Caietan, a Monk of the Order of Mount Caſſin, and printed at Rome, in three Volumes, in the Years 1606, 1608, and 1615. Theſe three Tomes were re-printed with a fourth at Lyons, A. D. 1623. in one ſingle Volume in Folio, and afterwards at Paris in 1663. not to mention an Edition of his Letters in Quarto, ſet forth by Nivelle at Paris, in 1610.

CHAP. IX.

An Account of the Churches of England from King William the Conqueror, to Henry I. with the Life of St. Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and an Abridgment of his Works.

Of the Churches of England.

THE Churches and Kingdom of England, which were in a flouriſhing Condition, and enjoy'd a profound Peace and Tranquility in St. Dunſtan's Time, were miſerably diſtreſs'd after his Death, (according to his Prediction) with innumerable Troubles and Calamities. The Countries over-run by the Barbarians; the Churches were pillag'd and ſet on Fire; the Monaſteries were ruin'd; the City of Canterbury was burnt; and Alphegus the Archbiſhop was carry'd away Priſoner with the Clergy of that Province. Theſe Calamities were follow'd by the Diſſenſions and Civil Wars, between King Edward the Son of Ethelred, and Godwin Earl of Kent with his Son Harold, as well as by a general Barbariſy and Corruption of Manners; till at laſt the Death of Edward the Confeſſor,

Of the Churches of England.

Of the Churches of England

Confeſſor, who left no Iſſue, compleated the Ruin of the Kingdom. Affairs being in this Poſture, William Duke of Normandy paſſing over the Sea, ſubdu'd it in the Year, 1066. having kill'd Harold in Battel, who had taken Poſſeſſion of the Throne after the Deceaſe of King Edward; and caus'd new Laws, as well Eccleſiaſtical as Civil, to be eſtabliſh'd throughout his Dominions: He prohibited his Subjects to acknowledge any Pope without his Leave, and to receive any Bulls from Rome till they were ſhewn to him: Neither would he ſuffer the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, tho' ſtyl'd Primate of all England, to make any Conſtitutions in his Councils, which were not conformable to his Inclination, and that were not before concerted with him: Laſtly, he forbid that any of his Barons, Lords, Miniſters of State, or Officers ſhould be excommunicated without his Order. In the fifth Year of his Reign, Lanfranc, Abbot of St. Stephen at Caen, was ordain'd Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and went a little while after to Rome, with Thomas Archbiſhop of York, and Remigius Biſhop of Lincoln, to obtain the Pall of Pope Alexander II. who receiv'd them with particular Marks of his Eſteem and Friendſhip. The next Day, Lanfranc accus'd both theſe Biſhops, who accompany'd him, upon Account of their illegitimate Ordination; by Reaſon that one was the Son of a Prieſt, and the other had given a certain Sum of Money to King William for his Biſhoprick. The Effect of this Accuſation was, that the two Prelats reſign'd their Paſtoral Staves and Rings into the Hands of the Pope, who gave theſe Ornaments back again to them, upon Lanfranc's Requeſt. This Archbiſhop upon his return to Rome with the Pall, took much pains in re-eſtabliſhing the Churches of England, and maintain'd their Rights and Revenues againſt the Secular Powers with ſo great Efficacy, that neither King William I. nor his Son William II. thought fit to make any Attempt upon them, as long as he liv'd; but after his Death, the latter caus'd all the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues belonging to his Dominions to be regiſter'd, and having computed what was requiſite for the Maintenance of the Monks; re-united the reſt to the Demeans of the Crown, letting them out to Farm every Year, to thoſe who offer'd moſt; but in order to get an abſolute Power over the Churches, when the Biſhops dy'd, he left their Sees vacant, and enjoy'd their Revenues. That of Canterbury was vacant above five Years, till King William falling dangerouſly ſick, ſent for the Abbot Anſelm, and inveſted him with that Archbiſhoprick againſt his Will:

Lanfranc Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

St. Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

This Saint was the Son of Gondulphus and Ermemberga, and was born at Aoſta on the Alps, A. D. 1033. After having compleated his Studies, and having travell'd for ſome time in Burgundy and France, he embrac'd the Monaſtick Life (at the Age of 27 Years) in the Abby of Bec, and put himſelf under the Tuition of Lanfranc Prior of that Monaſtery: When the latter was made Abbot of St. Stephen at Caen, about three Years after, he was ſubſtituted in his Room, and in like manner ſucceeded Herluin Abbot of Bec, who died in 1078. St. Anſelm took ſome Journies into England whilſt he had the Government of that Abby; by which Means having given ſpecial Proofs of his extraordinary Abilities in this Kingdom, he was choſen Archbiſhop of Canterbury, March 6. A. D. 1093. and was conſecrated on the fourth Day of December following. Then he went to ſalute the King, and offer'd him the Sum of five hundred Pounds towards carrying on the War which that Prince undertook againſt his Brother Richard, to recover the Dukedom of Normandy. The King at firſt ſeem'd to be well ſatisfy'd with this Preſent, but ſome of his Courtiers inſiſted that it was not Sufficient, and that if his Majeſty would ſignify his Diſſatisfaction never ſo little to the Archbiſhop, as much more might be got from him: Therefore the King ſent him Word, that he was unwilling to receive the Money which was proffered by him, as being too ſmall a Sum: The Archbiſhop after having entreated him to accept of it, refuſs'd to give any more, and withdrew from the Court. However, ſome time after, he went to meet the King at Haſtings juſt before his departure for Normandy, and deliver'd his Mind freely to him, concerning the Reformation of the Churches of England, and the Neceſſity of calling a Council for that Purpoſe. The King was not well pleas'd with what he ſaid, and made another Demand of Money: But the Archbiſhop refuſing even to diſburſe what he had proffer'd at firſt, incurr'd his high Diſpleaſure, and was oblig'd to retire with Precipitation. Upon the Return of this Prince, he begg'd Leave to go to Rome, to receive the Pall from the Hands of Pope Urban II. but the King denying his Requeſt, told him, that 'twas not Cuſtomary in his Kingdom, to acknowledge any other Perſon as Pope, than him whom he and his Prelates ſhould think fit to approve, and having afterwards held an Aſſembly of Biſhops and Lords for that Purpoſe, it was declar'd therein, that Urban II. ſhould not be acknowledged. Whereupon St. Anſelm having undertaken to vindicate that Pope, all the Prelates except the Biſhop of Rochester reſolv'd, as well as the King, no longer to own him as Primate or Archbiſhop: He preferr'd a Petition that he might have Leave to depart out of England, but it was rejected; nevertheleſs a Delay was propos'd till Whitſuntide, which being accepted of by him, he was left at Liberty to return to Canterbury; yet he was no ſooner arriv'd there, but his moſt faithful Friends and Servants were made Priſoners or Baniſhed.

Of the Churches of England

In the mean while, the King ſent two Clergymen to Rome, to endeavour to bring over Pope Urban to his Party, and to make himſelf Maſter of the Pall: The Pope ſent back the Biſhop of Albany with the two Clerks, who manag'd the Buſineſs ſo well, that he perſwaded the King to cauſe Urban to be own'd; nevertheleſs this Legate could not be induc'd to conſent to the depoſing of Anſelm. At laſt the King perceiving himſelf not to be able to accompliſh his Deſign, either to cauſe him to be depos'd, or to oblige him to do what he requir'd, was reconcil'd with him, by giving him the Pall which Urban's Legate had brought for his Uſe. St. Anſelm liv'd in Quiet for ſome time, whilſt the King paſs over into Normandy, which Dutchy was reſign'd to him by his Brother Richard; but at his Return, a Reſolution was taken to exact a great Sum of Money of the Archbiſhop, who to avoid the Storm, ſued for a Permiſſion to go to Rome; but not being able to obtain it, notwithſtanding his reiterated Sollicitations at three ſeveral times, he departed without Leave, and embark'd at Dover; from whence he paſs'd into France, and afterwards taking a Journey to Italy, went directly to Rome in the Year, 1098. where he was joyfully entertain'd by Pope Urban, but his Reſidence in that City being inconvenient by Reaſon of the exceſſive Heats, he retir'd to a Village near Capua, where the Pope ſoon gave him a Viſit, upon his Arrival at the Siege of Capua, which Place was inveſted by Roger Duke of Apulia. After the raiſing of the Siege, the Pope held a Council at Bari, in which St. Anſelm aſſiſting, diſputed earneſtly againſt the Greeks, about the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, and entreated the Pope and the Biſhops, not to excommunicate the King of England. When the Council was concluded, he accompany'd the Pope to Rome, and ſome Days after, the King of England, to whom Urban had written that he ought to reeſtabliſh St. Anſelm in his Metropolitan See, ſent thither an Ambaſſador, who obtain'd the Demurrer till the Feſtival of St Michael. St. Anſelm being inform'd of the matter, determin'd to go to Lyons; but the Pope oblig'd him to ſtay, in order to be preſent in a Council, which was to be held at Eaſter in the Year, 1099. Thus he reſided during ſix Months at Rome, and was very highly eſteem'd in that City. The Writer of his Life obſerves, that certain Engliſh Men, who came to viſit him, being deſirous to Kiſs his Feet as it was uſually done to the Popes, he would not ſuffer them to do it, and that the Pope admir'd his Humility in that Particular: Laſtly, St. Anſelm having aſſiſted in the Council of Rome, A. D. 1099. in which Laicks who took upon them to give Inveſtitures, and thoſe Clergymen who receiv'd them from their Hands, were excommunicated, he took Leave of the Pope, and retir'd to Lyons; where within a little while after, he was inform'd of the Death of Urban II. and afterward of that of William II. King of England, which happen'd the Month of Auguſt A. D. 1100.

Henry I. his Succeſſor immediately recall'd St. Anſelm to England, where he was no ſooner arriv'd, but he had new Conteſts with that Prince about the Inveſtitures and the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, which he refus'd to take. Foraſmuch as this Affair was regulated at Rome, it was Requiſite that the King ſhould make Application to that Court, to endeavour to cauſe the Reſolution which had been taken there, to be chang'd: However, St. Anſelm refus'd to ordain the Biſhops, who had receiv'd Inveſtiture from the King, and nothing could be obtain'd from Rome. Afterward this Archbiſhop being perſuaded by the King to take a Journey to Rome, to find out ſome Expedients for the adjuſting of that Affair, went thither accompany'd with an Ambaſſador: Upon their Arrival the Matter was debated A. D. 1105. in the preſence of Pope Paſchal II. to whom the Ambaſſador peremptorily declar'd, That the King his Maſter would ſooner be prevail'd upon to part with his Kingdom, than with his Right to the Inveſtitures; The Pope reply'd, That he would ſooner loſe his Life than ſuffer him to retain it. However, at laſt it was agreed upon, that the King of England ſhould enjoy certain Privileges which were in his Poſſeſſion, but that he ſhould lay no Manner of Claim to the Inveſtitures; Therefore the Excommunication which he was ſuppos'd to have incurr'd, by granting the Inveſtiture of Benefices, was taken off; but it was ordain'd, that thoſe Perſons who had receiv'd them from his Hands, ſhould remain excommunicated for ſome time, and that the giving them Abſolution for that Offence ſhould be reſerv'd to St. Anſelm. The Affair being thus determin'd, the Ambaſſador and St. Anſelm ſet forward in their Journey, but when they were arriv'd near Lyons, the Ambaſſador declar'd to him in his Maſter's name, that he was forbidden to return to England, unleſs he would promiſe him to ſubmit to the Cuſtom which prevail'd in that Kingdom, without having any Regard to what had been ordain'd to the contrary by the Pope. St. Anſelm refuſing to enter into ſuch an Engagement, ſtay'd ſome Time at Lyons, and having paſs'd from thence into Normandy, at laſt came to an Accommodation with the King of England, on Condition that the Churches which King William II. had firſt made ſubject to the Payment of a certain Tax, ſhould be exempted from it, and that his Majeſty ſhould reſtore what he had exacted of the Clergy, and every thing that was taken from the Church of Canterbury, during the Exile of the Archbiſhop. After this Agreement, which was concluded, A. D. 1106. between the King and the Archbiſhop at Bec Abby, St Anſelm return'd to England, was re-eſtabliſh'd in his Archbiſhoprick, and enjoy'd it peaceably till his Death, which happen'd three Years after, in the 16*th.* ſince his Advancement to that Dignity, and the 76*th.* of his Age, A. D. 1109.

Of the Churches of England

St. Anſelm is no leſs famous for his Learning, and the great Number of his Writings, than for his Conduct and the Zeal he ſhew'd in maintaining the Rights of the Church. The largeſt Edition of his Works is the laſt, publiſh'd by Father Gerberon, and it is that which we ſhall follow, being divided into three Parts: The firſt of theſe containing Dogmatical Treatiſes, bears the Title of Monologia; that is to ſay, a Treatiſe of the Exiſtence of God, of his Attributes, and of the Holy Trinity: It is ſo call'd, by Reaſon that it is compos'd in Form of the Meditations of a Man, who reaſons with himſelf to find out Divine Truths, and who explains them accordingly as they are diſcover'd by him. It is a very ſubtile Work, and contains a great Number of Metaphyſical Arguments.

He continues to Treat of the ſame Subject, and obſerves the ſame Method of Writing in the Proſlogia, where the Perſon who reaſon'd with himſelf in the firſt Work, making his Addreſſes to God, Diſcourſes of his Exiſtence, Juſtice, Wiſdom, Immenſity, Eternity, and of his being the Summum Bonum or Soveraign Good. A certain Monk nam'd Gaunilon, having perus'd this Treatiſe, could not approve the Argument which St. Anſelm makes uſe of therein, to prove the Exiſtence of God, taken from the Idea of a moſt perfect Being: We have (ſays he) at leaſt the Idea of a moſt perfect Being; therefore this Being of neceſſity Exiſts. Gaunilon not being able to comprehend this Argument (which ſeems to be a Sophiſm or meer Fallacy to thoſe who are not endu'd with a ſound and penetrating Judgment to diſcern the Force of it) wrote a ſmall Tract on purpoſe to refute it, in which he objects every Thing that is moſt ſubtile and plauſible, to overthrow this Ratiocination. St. Anſelm return'd a very ſolid Anſwer, in which he enervates his Adverſary's Objections, and makes it appear, that his Argument is Rational and Convincing.

The Treatiſe of Faith, of the Holy Trinity, and of the Incarnation dedicated to Pope Urban II. was written againſt a French Clergy-man nam'd Roſcelin Tutor to Abaelard, who undertook to prove, that the three Perſons of the Trinity are three different Things; becauſe otherwiſe it might be ſaid, that the Father and the Holy Ghoſt were Incarnate. St. Anſelm being as yet Abbot of Bec, began a Treatiſe to confute this Error; but the Maintainer thereof having abjur'd it in a Council held by the Archbiſhop of Rheims in his Province, he left the Work imperfect; yet compleated it afterward in England, being there inform'd, that he who broach'd this Error, perſiſted therein, and declar'd that he abjur'd it, only for Fear of being aſſaſſinated by the People. St. Anſelm at firſt lays down for a Maxim, that we ought not to argue againſt that which the Church believes, nor againſt that which Faith Teaches us, and that we ought not to Reject that which we cannot Comprehend; but that we ought to acknowledge, that there are many Things which are above our Underſtanding. Afterward he relates Roſcelin's Propoſition expreſſed in theſe Terms: If the three Divine Perſons be one and the ſame Thing and not three Things conſider'd every one a part, as three Angels or three Souls, nevertheleſs in ſuch a manner, that they are the ſame Thing in Will and Power; it follows, That the Father and the Holy Ghoſt were Incarnate with the Son. St. Anſelm declares that this Man admits three Gods, or elſe that he does not know what he ſays: He asks him what he means by three Things, and acknowledges, that in one Senſe it may be ſaid, that the three Perſons of the Trinity are three Things, if their Relation one to another be underſtood by that Term; but that it cannot be ſo ſaid, if their Subſtance be underſtood, which ſeems to be Roſcelin's Meaning, ſince he ſays, that they are three diſtinct Things, as three Souls and three Angels: He confutes this Opinion, and ſhews, that the Diſtinction of the Perſons is ſufficient to the End that it may be ſaid, that the Son is Incarnate, without inferring, that the Father and the Holy Ghoſt are ſo. Afterward he reſolves this Queſtion, Why the Son was Incarnate rather than the Father or the Holy Ghoſt; ſhews that there is but one Perſon and two Natures in Jeſus Chriſt; and explains the Proceſſion of the Divine Perſons.

Of the Churches of England

The Treatiſe of the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt againſt the Greeks, is no leſs Theological than the former: For the Archbiſhop proves therein, that the Holy Ghoſt proceeds from the Son as well as from the Father, and diſcuſſes the principal Queſtions, relating to his Proceſſion.

His Treatiſe of the Fall of the Devil, is written in Form of a Dialogue and the Subject of it is leſs Obſcure. He ſhews, That altho' the Good Angels receiv'd from God, all the Good that was done by them, and even the Gift of Perſeverance; yet it cannot be ſaid, that the Bad did not perſevere, becauſe God deny'd them that Gift, but becauſe they would not perſevere: That the Good Angels were in a Capacity of Sinning as well as the Bad; but that having freely preferr'd Righteouſneſs to Unrighteouſneſs, they had as a Recompence, the Aſſurance of never ſwerving from the former: And that the Bad on the contrary, having voluntarily fallen from Righteouſneſs, loſt for ever the Good which they had, and put themſelves out of a Capacity of ever becoming Righteous. Afterward he treats of the Nature of Evil, and proves that it conſiſts only in a Privation of Good, and debates ſome other ſubtile Queſtions.

The Treatiſe which ſhews, Why God was made Man? Diſcovers its Subject in the very Title, and is more particularly explain'd in the Preface. This Treatiſe (ſays he) is divided into two Books; the firſt of which contains the Objections rais'd by the Infidels, who imagine it to be contrary to Reaſon, that a God ſhould become Man, with the Anſwers of the Faithful to their Arguments; and it is ſhewn therein, that 'tis impoſſible for any Man to be ſav'd without the Mediation of a God Incarnate. In the ſecond Book 'tis prov'd, that Humane Nature is deſign'd to enjoy everlaſting Life, both in reſpect of the Soul and of the Body; and that this Advantage cannot be obtain'd but by the means of a God-Man.

The Treatiſe of Original Sin, was compos'd immediately after the preceding, and in it are diſcuſs'd many Queſtions about the Nature of Sin, and the Manner how it is communicated to all the Poſterity of Adam.

The Treatiſe of Truth, of the Will, and of Liberty, contains Variety of Metaphyſical Principles concerning thoſe Matters, to explain their Nature and Kinds. Theſe Diſcourſes are written, in form of Dialogues as well as the preceding.

In the following Treatiſe, he enquires into the Means of reconciling Free-will with Fore-knowledge, Predeſtination and Grace. As for Fore-knowledge and Predeſtination, all his Diſcourſe on thoſe Matters is rambling, and in ſome Places very Obſcure.

The Subject of the three next Treatiſes is leſs intricate, and the firſt of them dedicated to Valeran Biſhop of Naumburg, is about the uſe of unleavened Bread; in which the Author maintains againſt the Greeks, that altho' the Euchariſt may be adminiſtred with unleavened and leavened Bread, yet 'tis moſt expedient to make Uſe of the former. The ſecond is a Letter written by the ſaid Valeran, complaining of the great Number of Ceremonies uſed in the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and entreating St. Anſelm to reſolve this Queſtion, viz. Why the Sign of the Croſs is made on the Bread, and on the Chalice; and why the Chalice is uſually cover'd with a Vail or † Pale before the Conſecration? In the End he gives him to underſtand, that he was reconcil'd with Pope Paſchal II. St. Anſelm returns him an Anſwer in the following Treatiſe, that the Variety of Cuſtoms and Ceremonies, does not hinder he Unity of the Faith, and alledges certain Myſtical Reaſons for making the Sign of the Croſs on the Hoſt, and on the Chalice, and for covering the latter with a Vail.

† A Square Paſtboard covered with fine Linen.

To theſe Treatiſes is annex'd another ſmall Tract, in which he aſſerts, that Clergy-men, who make Confeſſion of Sins of the Fleſh committed privately, may be reeſtabliſh'd in the Functions of their Order, after having done Penance. This Piece is only an Extract of St. Anſelm's Letter to the Abbot William.

In the Treatiſe of Marriages forbidden between near Relations, he enquires into the Reaſons of that Prohibition, which he extends only to the fifth degree of Conſanguinity.

There is nothing relating to Divinity in his Treatiſe of the Grammarian.

In that of the Will of God, being the laſt of the Dogmatical, of which the firſt Part of his Works is compos'd, he explains the different Senſes, in which the Term of the Will of God is taken, and the different Kinds of Wills that may be diſtinguiſh'd in them.

To theſe Works is to be added a Treatiſe of Peace and Concord, which is inſerted in the End of the Volume; a Piece that is well worthy of St. Anſelm and which is altogether written in his Style.

The ſecond Part of the Works of this learned Prelate contains the Parænetick and Aſcetick Treatiſes, viz. 1. Sixteen Homelies, the firſt of which is on the 24*th.* Chapter of of Eccleſiaſtes, and the others on divers Goſpels: Indeed the firſt is only found in the ancient Editions of his Works, and the reſt were ſince added; but they are all of the ſame Style, and ſome of them bear St. Anſelm's Name in certain Manuſcripts; ſo that 'tis very probable, that they all belong to him. 2. An Exhortation to the Contempt of Temporal Things, and to the Deſire of Eternal, publiſh'd by Father Theophilus Renaudæus, which contains wholſome Admonitions compris'd in ſhort and Pathetical Sentences. Altho' there be no Proof, that this Piece is St. Anſelm's; nevertheleſs it is very conformable to his Manner of Writing. 3. Advice to a dying Perſon, which is a Form of aſſiſting Perſons at the Hour of Death, bearing St. Anſelm's Name in certain Manuſcripts. 4. A Poem in Hexameter and Pentameter Verſes, on the Contempt of the World, which altho' printed under this Archbiſhop's Name; yet does not bear it in the Manuſcripts, but that of Bernard of Cluny, and in another, that of Roger Monk of Bec: This Poem is follow'd by two other very ſhort Pieces on the ſame Subject, which appear to be written by the ſame Author. 5. A Collection of 21 Meditations on different Subjects. 6. Seventy four Prayers. 7. A Pſalter in Honour of the Virgin Mary; that is to ſay, certain Stanza's of Hymns on the Pſalms of her Office, with other entire Hymns for the Canonical Hours, and the Feſtivals of the Bleſſed Virgin. This Piece does not bear St. Anſelm's Name in any Manuſcript, and ſeems to me to be unworthy of ſo great an Author.

Of the Churches of England

The third Part comprehends St. Anſelm's Letters diſtributed into four Books, in the firſt of which are contain'd thoſe that he wrote whilſt he was a ſimple Monk; which are 77 in Number; in the ſecond, thoſe that were written by him being Abbot of Bec, to the Number of 53; in the third, thoſe that he compos'd when Archbiſhop; and in the fourth, 106 Letters which never were as yet Printed. There are alſo nine others in the Supplement taken out of Tome IX. of the Spicilegium by Father Luke Dachery. We ſhall not here produce the Extracts of all theſe Letters, it being ſufficient to hint, that they are either ſuch as relate to Compliments or particular Affairs, or to Morality and Piety, or to the Monaſtick Diſcipline and that of the Churches of England. Beſides theſe Letters but now recited, there are eight others in the ninth Tome of the Spicilegium, which are not compris'd in the four Books of Letters belonging to the Works of this Archbiſhop.

The Works falſly attributed to St. Anſelm are reſerv'd for the Appendix, and the firſt of theſe is call'd, An Illuſtration or Dialogue concerning Theological Points; being a Body of Divinity by way of Queſtion and Anſwer, which bears St. Anſelm's Name in ſome Manuſcripts, but neither is of his Style, nor conformable to his Doctrine. Trithemius attributes a Piece under this Title, to Honoratus of Autun.

The ſecond is a Dialogue concerning the Paſſion of our Lord, in which the Virgin Mary is introduc'd diſcourſing with St. Anſelm: It is a Suppoſitious Piece and forged at Pleaſure.

The third is the Treatiſe of the Meaſure of the Croſs, which is a Moral Explication of theſe Words of Jeſus Chriſt: If any one will follow me, he muſt deny himſelf, and take up his Croſs. 'Tis a Book full of very devout Expreſſions, in which the Author cites St. Bernard, and therefore it cannot belong to St. Anſelm, who died before that Saint was in a Capacity to write.

The fourth is a Treatiſe of the Conception of the Virgin Mary, the Author of which explains the Solemnity of the Feſtival of the Conception: The State of the Queſtion plainly ſhews, that this Piece is of a later Date than the Time of St. Anſelm; ſince the Author treats of that Feſtival, which he ſuppoſes to be of conſiderable Antiquity, and yet did not begin to be inſtituted till St. Bernard's Time. There is a certain Manuſcript, in which this Treatiſe is attributed to Hervæus, a Monk of the Monaſtery founded by Elbo, in the Village of Dol near Bourges, who liv'd in the XII. Century.

The fifth is another Tract in the ſame Feſtival of the Conception of the Virgin Mary, which is more viſibly ſpurious.

The ſixth is an Hiſtory of the Paſſion of St. Guignier and his Companions, which is rather a Romance, than a pious and true Narration.

The ſeventh is a ſmall Tract on the Monaſtick Stability, of which St. Anſelm may well be reputed to be the Author.

The eighth is a Dialogue about Matters of Religion between a Chriſtian and a Jew, compos'd by Giſlebert a Monk of Weſtminſter, and dedicated to St. Anſelm.

The ninth is another Dialogue of the ſame Nature, compos'd by the Abbot Rupert.

The tenth is a Collection of certain uſeful Sentences, that are attributed to St. Anſelm and which are very ſuitable to his Genius, as well as two other ſmall Tracts that follow them.

The laſt is a Fabulous Relation of two Miracles falſly aſcrib'd to St. James the Apoſtle.

This Edition does not contain the Treatiſe of the Sacrament of the Altar, imputed in ſome Manuſcripts to St. Anſelm, which cannot be his, in regard that it comprehends certain Extracts of the Book of Divine Offices, by the Abbot Rupert; and which belongs to William of St. Thierry, according to the Manuſcript of Longpont, under whoſe Name it was printed in the Bibliotheca Ordinis Ciſtercienſis. Neither do we find in the ſame Edition, the Treatiſe of the Parts and Actions attributed to God, which are extant among St. Bonaventure's Works, and among the Suppoſitious Works of St. Auguſtine and St. Jerome; becauſe it does not bear St. Anſelm's Name in any Manuſcript, no more than the Tracts of the Image of the World, that are inſerted among the Works of Honoratus of Autun, and of which the Authors are unknown.

Of the Churches of England

We do not meet with any Eccleſiaſtical Writers before St. Anſelm, who wrote after ſo Scholaſtick a Manner, nor who have ſtarted ſo many Metaphyſical Queſtions, and argu'd ſo Subtlely, as he has done: He is alſo the Firſt who compos'd long Prayers in Form of Meditations: His Letters are Written in a plainer Style, but they are leſs Accurate: His Exhortations are ſimple Homelies, full of Myſtical Notions, in which there is not much Eloquence, and very little Morality. He does not ſeem to have been well vers'd in poſitive Divinity, nevertheleſs he had perus'd St. Auguſtine's Works, and took out of them many Principles, which he makes uſe of, in his Theological Ratiocinations.

There are two Gothick Editions of his Works, viz. one A. D. 1491. at Nuremberg, and the other at Paris in 1544 and 1549. They were alſo publiſh'd at Venice in the laſt of theſe Years, and at Colen in 1573. Father Picard a Regular Canon of St. Victor at Paris, ſet forth an Edition much larger than the former, printed at Colen in 1612. Some time after, Father Theophilus Renaudæus a Jeſuite caus'd one to be printed at Lyons in 1630. And at laſt Father Gerberon a Benedictin Monk of the Congregation of St. Maur, publiſh'd a new Edition much finer and more correct than the preceding, printed at Paris in 1675. which is a ſignal Proof of his accurate Induſtry and ſound Judgment, whoſe Merit is well known in the Common-wealth of Learning.

To St. Anſelm's Works are annex'd thoſe of Eadmar a Monk of Canterbury and his Pupil; the firſt of which is the Life of his Tutor, written very largely, and in a very plain Style.

Eadmar St. Anſelm's Pupil.

The ſecond is call'd, The Hiſtory of Novelties, and divided into ſix Books, of which the firſt four contain a Relation of the Conteſts which St. Anſelm had with the Kings of England about the Affair of the Inveſtitures, and of the Perſecutions he ſuffer'd upon that Account; and the two laſt, the Hiſtory of the Tranſactions in the Church of Canterbury under Radulphus his Succeſſor, who was tranſlated from the Biſhoprick of Rocheſter to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury, five Years after St. Anſelm's Death, and govern'd that Church till A. D. 1122.

The third is a Treatiſe of the excellent Qualities of the Virgin Mary, in which he extols her Nativity, Annunciation, Aſſumption, the Love that ſhe had for her Son, and the Advantages ſhe procur'd for Men, and ends with a Prayer made to her.

The fourth is a particular Tract of the four Cardinal Virtues obſervable in the Bleſſed Virgin.

The fifth is a Diſcourſe of Beatitude, or rather of the State of the Bleſſed in Heaven, which he had heard deliver'd by St. Anſelm.

The ſixth is a Collection of divers Similitudes and Compariſons that were taken out of St. Anſelm's Works, or which he had heard from his Mouth.

The ſame Author likewiſe compos'd a Treatiſe of Eccleſiaſtical Liberty, and wrote the Lives of St. Wilfrid and St. Dunſtan, and many Letters which are not as yet publiſhed. He died A. D. 1121.

CHAP. X.

Of the Eccleſiaſtical Writers of the eleventh Age, who compos'd Treatiſes of Church-diſcipline or Commentaries on the Holy Scripture.

Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Burchard a German by Nation, a Monk of Lobes and the Pupil of Olbert Abbot of Gemblours, ſucceeded Franco his Brother in the Biſhoprick of Worms A. D. 996. He aſſiſted in the Council of Selingenſtadt held by Aribo Archbiſhop of Mentz in 1023. and died in 1026. He compil'd by the Help of Olbert a Collection of Canons, diſtributed according to the Matters, and divided into twenty Books, call'd Decrees; in which he has copy'd out and follow'd Regino, but he has added many Things and even committed ſeveral Errors which Regino never fell into. This Work was printed at Colen in 1548. and the next Year at Paris, and at the end of it are annexed the Canons of the Council of Selingenſtadt: 'Tis compos'd very Methodically, but without a due Choice of Matters; being full of Quotations of the falſe Decretals of the Popes, according to the Cuſtom of that Time.

Burchard Biſhop of Worms.

Godehard Biſhop of Hildeſheim.

Godehard Abbot of Tergernſee, and afterwards Biſhop of Hildeſheim, flouriſh'd in the Beginning of the Century: Father Mabillon has publiſh'd five Letters written by him, in the fourth Tome of his Analectes.

Gosbert Abbot of Tergernſee.

Gosbert was in like Manner Abbot of Tergernſee, and Contemporary with the former: Four of his Letters are publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the ſame Place.

Guy Aretin Abbot of LaCroix St. Lewfroy.

Guy Aretin, Abbot of La Croix-St. Lewfroy, flouriſh'd from the Year, 1020. to 1030. and compos'd a new Method for learning the Art of Muſick, call'd Micrologus. He likewiſe wrote a Treatiſe of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt againſt Berenger, which is loſt.

Aribo Archbiſhop of Mentz.

Aribo, the nineteenth Archbiſhop of Mentz is plac'd by Sigebert and Trithemius in the Claſs of the Eccleſiaſtical Writers: The former only attributes to him a certain Commentary on the fifteen gradual Pſalms, and the other adds a Letter to Berno Abbot of Richenaw and ſome others. He ſays, That that Archbiſhop held in the Year, 1023. a Council at Selingenſtadt, with Burchard Biſhop of Worms, and the other Biſhops and Abbots of his Province, in which were made very uſeful Conſtitutions, and that he died under the Emperor Conrad, A. D. 1031.

Berno Abbot of Richenaw.

Berno, a Monk of St. Gall, and afterward Abbot of Richenaw, who was contemporary with, and the familiar Friend of Aribo, is likewiſe recommended by Trithemius, as a Perſon not inferior in Knowledge to any of the learned Men of his Time: He was more eſpecially Skilful in the Art of Muſick, which was much ſtudy'd in that Age, and compos'd many Works, as well in Proſe as in Verſe. We ſhall here mention thoſe that Trithemius has taken Notice of, viz. A very elegant and uſeful Treatiſe, dedicated to Pilgrin Archbiſhop of Colen, but he does not declare the Subject of it; A Treatiſe of Muſical Inſtruments, Another of the coming of our Lord, dedicated to Aribo; A Book of the Office of the Maſs; one of the Faſt of the Ember-Weeks; one of Saturdays Faſt; another of the Time of the Monocord, and ſeveral Letters. But Trithemius has forgotten to make Mention of the Life of St. Ulric Biſhop of Augsburg, compos'd by that Author, and ſet forth by Surius; as alſo of the Life of St. Meginrad Biſhop and Martyr, which Father Mabillon publiſh'd in the ſecond Part of the fourth Benedictin Century. Berno flouriſh'd under the Emperor Henry II. from A. D. 1014. till 1348. when he died, after having been Abbot during forty Years.

His principal Work is the Treatiſe of the Office of the Maſs, in which he enquires into the Authors of it, and the Original of the Prayers of which 'tis compos'd. He ſuppoſes that in the Beginning of the Church, the Maſs was not ſaid after the ſame Manner as afterwards; that in the time of the Apoſtles, no other Prayers were recited but the Lord's Prayer; and that for that Reaſon St. Gregory Pope ordain'd, that the Lord's Prayer ſhould be ſaid over the Hoſt after the Conſecration: He adds, That the Canon was not made by a ſingle Perſon, but that it was augmented from Time to Time; and that the other Parts of the Maſs were eſtabliſh'd by Popes or by Holy Fathers: Laſtly, he Treats in particular, of the Gloria in Excelſis, and of the Times when it ought to be ſaid; of the Solemnity of the Octaves, of Pentecoſt, of the Office for the Sundays in Advent and other Sundays of the Year; of that of the four Ember-Weeks; and of other Rubricks of the Divine Office. But it ought to be obſerv'd, That in this Book, as in other Works of the ſame Nature, divers Matters of Fact are advanc'd, without ſufficient Ground, and even contrary to the Truth of Hiſtory.

Bruno Biſhop of Wurtzburgh.

Bruno Duke of Carinthia, Uncle by the Father's ſide to the Emperor Conrad II. was ordain'd Biſhop of Wurtzburg. A. D. 1033. He wrote a Commentary on the Pſalms, taken out of the Works of the Fathers, with certain Annotations on the Songs of the Old and New Teſtament, on the Lord's Prayer, and on the Apoſtles Creed, as alſo on thoſe of St. Athanaſius and St. Ambroſe. He died, A. D. 1045. being cruſh'd to Pieces under the Ruins of a Houſe which fell upon him, as he accompany'd the Emperor Henry III. who was going to carry on the War in Hungary. His Works were printed at Colen in 1494. and inſerted in the Bibliotheca Patrum of the Colen Edition, and in the laſt at Lyons.

Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Father Mabillon, publiſh'd in the firſt Tome of his Analecta, the Preface belonging to a Treatiſe of Prayers, taken out of the Fathers, and dedicated (as he proves it) to the Empreſs Agnes, the Wife of the Emperor Henry III. with certain Extracts of theſe Prayers, copied out of an ancient Manuſcript of the Monaſtery of St. Arnulphus at Metz. The Preface bears the Name of John Abbot, and Father Mabillon ſhews that he is apparently John ſirnam'd Jeannelin by reaſon of the lowneſs of his Stature, who was ſometime Monk of St. Benignus at Dijon, afterwards Prior of Fecamp under William Abbot, and at laſt nominated Abbot of Erbreſtein, by the Emperor Henry III. A. D. 1052. This Author makes Mention in that Preface, of four or five other Treatiſes which he had compos'd, viz. one of the Inſtitution of a Widow; another of the Life and Manners of Virgins; a third of Alms; and a fourth of the Heavenly Jeruſalem or of Contemplation; the greateſt part of thoſe Prayers are alſo contain'd in the Book of Meditations, attributed to St. Auguſtine.

John or Jeannelin Abbot of Erbreſtein.

There are likewiſe in the ſame Place, Letters of the ſame Abbot, written by him when Prior of Fecamp: In the two firſt, he conſents to the Propoſal made him by William I. King of England, that Vitalis Abbot of Bernay, ſhould be tranſlated to Weſtminſter, and that his Brother Osbern, a Monk of Troarn, ſhould be ſubſtituted in his Room. By the third, directed to Warin Abbot of St. Arnulphus at Metz, he requires a certain Monk, nam'd Benedict, to be ſent back again, who was then in his Abby.

Warin Abbot of St. Arnulphus at Metz.

Warin returns him a large Anſwer, complaining of his rude Manner of treating him; and declares, that the Monk whom he demanded, did not belong to his Juriſdiction, by Reaſon that after having taken upon him the Vows of Religion, under the Abbot William, he was plac'd by that Abbot in the Monaſtery of Gorze, which he left to go to that of St. Arnulphus, with the Permiſſion of the Priors of Gorze, and even of the Abbot William.

William Abbot of St. Arnulphus at Metz.

Warin had for his Succeſſor, in the Abby of St. Arnulphus at Metz, William, who was choſen by Manaſſes Archbiſhop of Rheims, to be alſo Abbot of St. Remy. William wrote to Pope Gregory VII. about the Affair, proteſting that he did not accept of that Office without a great deal of Reluctancy and Trouble, and ſo much the rather, in regard that he had no proſpect of diſcharging it with good Succeſs, by Reaſon of the Irregularities that were then Predominant among the Monks of that Monaſtery. The Pope did not approve that this Abbot ſhould have the Government of two Abbies at once, yet left him at Liberty to retain both: However, William himſelf ſoon repented of having had any Thing to do with the Abby of St. Remy; for Manaſſes, who only nominated him, to the End that he might Pillage the Revenues of the Monaſtery, with greater Impunity, perceiving that the Abbot would not ſuffer it, treated him ſo Rudely, that at laſt he forc'd him to leave it; which William did, ſeverely reprehending the Archbiſhop for his Tyrannical and Exorbitant Practices, as it appears from the two Letters which he wrote to him, publiſh'd by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of his Analecta, with that Abbot's Letter to Pope Gregory VII. four other Letters, and a Prayer by the ſame Author.

Robert de Tombalene Abbot of St. Vigor at Bayeux.

At the ſame time liv'd Robert de Tombalene, a Monk of St. Michael's Mount, and afterwards Abbot of St. Vigor at Bayeux, who wrote a Commentary on the Canticles, the Prologomena to which, was ſet forth by Father Mabillon, with an Extract of the Work it ſelf, in the firſt Tome of his Analecta. This Extract makes it appear, that the Commentary is not much different, from that which is attributed to St. Gregory the Great. There is a certain Manuſcript without the Author's Name, in the Library of St. Victor, and it was publiſh'd under that of Radulphus Abbot of Fontanelle, by Father Homy of the Order of the Hermits of St. Auguſtine, and printed by Peter de Launne at Paris, A. D. 1684. This good Friar apparently had no other other Ground to ascribe it to Radulphus than the Letter R. which he found in his Manuscript, which denoted Robert and not Radulphus, as he imagin'd.

Ecclesiastical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Anselm born at Mantua, of a noble Family, succeeded Alexander II. in the Bishoprick of Lucca: He receiv'd the Investiture from the Emperor Henry IV. and repenting of it some Time after, retir'd to the Monastery of Cluny, from whence he was re-call'd by Gregory VII. to govern his Bishoprick in 1073. Afterwards he was always extremely wedded to the Interests of that Pope, and stifly maintain'd them against the Emperor and Guibert the Antipope: He wrote two Letters against Guibert, in Vindication of Gregory; and made a Collection of certain Sentences, to shew, That Kings have no Right to be Masters of the Church-Revenues. These Works are referr'd to by Canisius, in the sixth Tome of his Antiquities. To him likewise is attributed a large Collection of Canons, of which there are some Manuscript Copies in divers Libraries; but although it bears his Name in a certain Manuscript of the Barberine Library, nevertheless 'tis not probable that it belongs to him; as M. Baluzius has prov'd, in his Preface to Antonius Augustinus: 1. Because the Author of the Life of St. Anselm, Sigebert and Trithemius, have not made any Mention of it. And 2. By reason that it contains some Decrees of Popes of a later Date than the Year 1086. which was that of the Death of Anselm of Lucca. Antonius Augustinus ascribes this Collection to Hildebert Archbishop of Mans.

Anselm Bishop of Lucca.

Some in like Manner attribute to Deus-dedit Cardinal, with the Title of St. Eudoxia, who liv'd under Pope Victor III. a Collection of Canons divided into four Books, a Manuscript Copy of which is to be found in the Vatican Library. There is also a third Collection, bearing the same Date, and call'd Polycarp; which was made by another Cardinal of the Church of Rome, nam'd Gregory, and of which there are some Manuscript Copies in M. Colbert's Library.

Deus-dedit Cardinal.

Gregory Cardinal.

Benno, a German by Nation and Cardinal of the Church of Rome, was one of the greatest Adversaries of Pope Gregory VII. and wrote two Books against him, full of Reproaches and Invectives, which are compris'd in the Collection made by Orthuinus Gratius, under the Title of Fasciculus rerum Expetendarum & Fugiendarum, printed in 1535. and afterwards set forth by Goldastus, in a Collection of Pieces, compos'd in Favour of the Emperor Henry IV. against Pope Gregory VII.

Benno Cardinal.

In this Collection, by Goldastus, is likewise contain'd a Treatise by Conrad, Tutor to Henry Bishop of Utrecht, call'd, An Apology for preserving the Unity of the Church, and putting an End to the Schism between the Emperor Henry, and Pope Gregory VII. which is also printed among the Historians of Germany, publish'd by Freherus. Indeed some Persons attribute this last Treatise to Waldramus of Naumberg, and others to Wenceric Bishop of Verceil, who flourish'd at the same Time. Trithemius says, That the latter wrote a Letter in the Name of Thierry Bishop of Verdun, to Pope Gregory VII. in which he admonishes him, as a Friend, of every Thing that (as it was reported) he had acted or alledg'd contrary to the Rules of Justice and Equity, and conjur'd him to put a Stop to those Irregularities.

Conrad Bishop of Utrecht.

Wenceric Bishop of Verceil.

Ulric, descended of a Family of Bavaria at Ratisbon, a Monk of Cluny, made a Collection of the ancient Customs of that Abby, in three Books, at the Request of William Abbot of Richenaw. This Collection is contain'd in the fourth Tome of the Spicilegium, by Father Luke Dachery.

Ulric a Monk of Cluny.

Bernard, a Monk of the same Monastery, was likewise imploy'd about that Time, in writing on the same Subject; but his Work being not so compleat, Father Dachery did not think fit to publish it. But Care must be taken, not to confound this Writer with another of the same Name, a Monk of Corbey in Saxony, who flourish'd some Time after, and wrote a Book in a very fine Style, but very Satyrical against the Emperor Henry IV. which is mention'd by Sigebert and Trithemius.

Bernard Monk of Cluny.

Bernard Monk of Corbey in Saxony.

There is also a third Author of the same Name, who was a Clerk of the Church of Utrecht, and wrote Commentaries on Theodulus's Eclogues, of which Mention is made in Sigebert. To these Authors may be added, certain Writers, of whom Trithemius takes particular Notice, and whose Works are not as yet come to our Hands.

Bernard Clerk of the Church of Utrecht.

Ægilnothus, Archbishop of Canterbury, famous for his extraordinary Charity, to whom he attributes a Piece in Commendation of the Virgin Mary, certain Letters and some other Works, flourish'd (according to his Account) under the Emperor Conrad the Young, A. D. 1030.

Ægilnothus Archbishop of Canterbury.

Campanus of Lombardy, a renown'd Philosopher and Astronomer, was a Man of a subtle Wit, an able School-Divine, well vers'd in the Holy Scriptures, and very skilful in the Art of Arithmetick, more especially in the Calendar: For all these commendable Qualities are attributed to him by Trithemius, who adds, That he set forth many small Tracts, the reading of which might be of very great Use to Bishops, and among which he himself had perus'd the following, viz. A Treatise of Ecclesiastical Numbers; another of the Manner of making Sun-dials; a Calendar; and some other Astronomical Works. This Author flourish'd, A. D. 1040.

Campanus of Lombardy.

Sigebert of Gemblours, makes mention of another Scholastick Philosopher of Liege, nam'd Franco, who liv'd in the Year 1060. He compos'd a Treatise of the Quadrature of a Circle; another of the Calendar; and certain Commentaries on the Holy Scripture.

Franco a Philosopher of Liege.

Bertharius, Abbot of the Monastery of Mount Cassin, joyn'd (according to Trithemius) the Study of the Holy Scriptures, to that of the profane Sciences: and after having written, before his Conversion, certain Works relating to Philosophy and Physick; he compos'd, when Abbot, divers Discourses for the Edification and Benefit of the Monks under his Tuition.

Erard, a Benedictin Monk, spent his Time in preaching and explaining the Holy Scriptures. Trithemius met with certain Commentaries on the whole Pentateuch, and divers Homilies written by this Author.

Erard a Benedictin Monk.

Adam, Abbot of Perseme, in the like Manner apply'd himself to Preaching: He compos'd many Discourses for the Use of his Monks, with several Homilies on the Festivals of the Saints, and on different Subjects, and some Commentaries on the Holy Scripture, of which Trithemius makes mention, without having seen any of them. M. Baluzius has publish'd in the first Tome of his Miscellaneous Works, five Moral Letters by this Author, directed to Osmond a Monk of Mortemer in Normandy.

Adam Abbot of Perseme.

CHAP. XI.

Of the Authors who wrote Ecclesiastical History; or the Lives of the Saints in the Eleventh Century.

Ecclesiastical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Megenfroy Monk of Fulda.

MEgenfroy, Meginfroy or Meginfred, a Monk of Fulda, wrote in the Year 1010. the Life of St. Emmeram Bishop of Ratisbon, directed to Arnulphus Count of Vogburg, and afterwards a Monk of the Monastery of St. Emmeram at Ratisbon, and referr'd to by Canisius in the second Tome of his Antiquities. The same Author compos'd twenty four Books of History, cited by Trithemius, in the Life of St. Maximus Bishop of Metz, which is in Surius's sixth Tome, Nov. 18.

Syrus, a Monk of Cluny, and the Pupil of St. Maiol, wrote about the same Time, the Life of his Tutor, dedicated to Odilo; which was publish'd with great Accuracy by Father Mabillon, in the fifth Benedictin Century, and with Aldebaldus's Addition by the Bollandists, in May 11.

Syrus Monk of Cluny.

Osbern or Osbert, a Monk and Chanter of Canterbury, wrote in the Beginning of the Century, the Life of St. Dunstan, with those of St. Odo and St. Alphegus. The Life of St. Dunstan, was set forth by Surius, under the Name of Osbert; but that Narration belongs to a later Author, since it was written in Lanfranc's Time, and Father Mabillon has publish'd the genuine Life of that Archbishop of Osbert, as well as that of Odo of Canterbury, and the Life of St. Alphegus, referr'd to by Bollandus in April 19.

Osbern Monk of Canterbury.

Tangmarus, a Saxon, Dean of Hildesheim, compos'd a Relation of the Life of St. Bernard Bishop of that City, and his Pupil, which was publish'd by Browerus and afterwards inserted in the last Edition of Surius. This Author wrote in the Year of our Lord, 1023.

Arnold, a Canon of Herfeldt, wrote the Life of St. Godebard Abbot of that Monastery, who succeeded St. Bernard in the Bishoprick of Hildesheim, A. D. 993. and died in 1036. This Author was Meginfroy's Pupil, and had seen Godebard in his Youth, but he was inform'd of the Passages which he committed to Writing, by a certain old Man, who had spent his Life with that Saint. This Piece was set forth by Browers, with the Life of St. Bernard; and these two Lives may well be reckon'd among the most accurate, that were written at that Time.

Ecclesiastical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Tangmarus Dean of Hildesheim.

Arnold Canon of Herfeldt.

Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Eberard, made a Narrative of the Life of St. Harvic Biſhop of Saltzburg, who died in 1024. He was his Pupil, and wrote a little while after his Death. This Work is inſerted in the ſecond Tome of Caniſius's Collection.

Eberard St. Harvic's Pupil.

Arnulphus, Count of Vogburg, and afterwards a Monk of St. Emmeran at Ratisbon, compos'd two Books in Form of Dialogues, of the Life of St. Emmeran, which were publiſh'd by Caniſius, in the ſecond Tome of his Antiquities.

Arnulphus Monk of St. Emmeran.

Erchinfroy or Erchinfred, Abbot of Melck in Auſtria, wrote A. D. 1012. an Account of the Life and Miracles of St. Colman a Scotſman, which is cited by Lambecius, in his Bibleotheca.

Erchinfroy Abbot of Melck.

Trithemius reckons among the Eccleſiaſtical Writers, of the Beginning of this Century, Rupert, Abbot of Mount Caſſin, whom he much commends; and ſays, That he compos'd certain Sermons, and ſome other Works, but we have none of his Pieces in our Poſſeſſion.

Rupert Abbot of Mount Caſſin.

Ditbmar, the Son of Count Sigefroy and of Cunegonda, born in Saxony, A. D. 976. became a Monk of St. John at Magdeburg, under the Abbot Riddagius; was afterwards made Provoſt of Walbeck, and at laſt Biſhop of Mersburg after Wigbert, whom he ſucceeded in 1008. He compil'd ſeven Books of Hiſtorical Chronicles, containing the Occurences and Tranſactions under five Emperors, viz. Henry the Fowler, the Otho's, and Henry II. He intermixes in ſeveral Places, a great deal of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, and enlarges in the Commendation of many reverend Biſhops of his Time. He died, A. D. 1018. and his Works were printed at Francfort in 1580. as alſo among thoſe of the German Hiſtoriographers.

Dithmar Biſhop of Mersburg.

Ademar or Aimar de Chabanois, Monk of St. Cicar in Angouleſme.

Ademar, or Aimar de Chabanois, a Monk of the Monaſtery of St. Cibar at Angouleſme, compos'd a Chronicle of the Hiſtory of France, which begins A. C. 829. and ends in 1029 with a Catalogue of the Abbots of St. Martial at Limoges; publiſh'd by Father Labbe in his ſecond Tome of his Library of Manuſcripts: He took care to procure the Writing of the Treatiſe of Offices by Amalarius, and ſome attribute to him the Supplement to that Work, relating to St. Benedict's Rule, which Father Mabillon inſerted in the ſecond Tome of his Analecta, tho' 'tis more probable, that it belongs to Amalarius himſelf. We have alſo Ademar's Acroſtick Verſes, taken out of an Extract that he made of the Lives of the Popes, attributed to Damaſus, by the Order of Robon Biſhop of Angouleſme, which Verſes were ſet forth by the ſame Father, in the firſt Tome of his Analecta. M. Baluſius has in his Poſſeſſion, a certain Manuſcript Letter, (which he has thought fit to communicate to us) written by this Author, after the firſt Council of Limoges, held A. D. 1029. in which he aſſiſted, and directed to Jourdain Biſhop of Limoges, and to the Abbots and other Clergymen of that Dioceſs; as alſo, to Arnulphus Biſhop of Rhodez, to Thierry Biſhop of Metz, to the Empreſs Cunegonda the Widow of the Emperor Henry, to Conon, to the Emperor Conrad, to William Duke of Guienne, and to Pope John, who is branded therein, as a brutiſh, cholerick and cruel Man. In this Letter, he relates many remarkable Paſſages that happen'd during the Conteſt about the Apoſtolical Dignity of St. Martial Biſhop of Limoges, chiefly in Reference to Benedict, Prior of the Abby of St. Michael at Cluſe in Piemont, who a little after the Seſſion of that Council, being arriv'd at a certain Place call'd La Buſſiere, in the Province of Limouſin, on the Feſtival of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, publickly gave it out, with a great deal of Heat and Paſſion, That St. Martial ought not to be reckon'd among the Apoſtles, and that the Inhabitants of Aquitaine, who look'd upon him to be ſo, were Aſſes and ignorant Doters.

This being reported in the Monaſtery of St. Cibar, by two Monks of that Convent, who were then preſent at La Buſſiere, made ſo great an Impreſſion on the Minds of the Friars, that all, except Aimar and Gosbert, imbrac'd Benedict's Opinion; which gave Occaſion to this Letter, in which Aimar treats Benedict very rudely, who nevertheleſs, (even according to Aimar's Report) was a judicious and learned Perſon, but extremely Paſſionate, if we may give Credit in that Reſpect to Aimar, in his own Cauſe: For it appears, That the Prior inveigh'd againſt him moſt bitterly at La Buſſiere; accuſing him as the Author of that Innovation, which he alſo term'd Hereſie, and affirming that 'twas deviſ'd by him through Flattery, on purpoſe to gratifie the Abbot and Monks of Limoges, who had corrupted him with Money. Benedict added, That having diſputed with Aimar upon that Point, he had baffl'd him, and had oblig'd him to hide himſelf. Now Aimar wrote this Letter to refute the Prior's Arguments, declaring what had paſs'd at Limoges, between himſelf and Benedict, whom he cenſures as an Impoſtor and profligate Wretch: He likewiſe gives an Account of the Conteſt that he had at Angouleſme, about the ſame Affair, with a certain Monk of Ravenna, being alſo an able Phyſician, nam'd Bernard, who came to La Buſſiere with Benedict, and had learnt of him all the Arguments againſt the Apoſtleſhip of St. Martial. But it ought to be obſerv'd, that this Benedict ſaid, That the Diſpute could not be determin'd, but by a general Council of France and Italy, held in the Pope's Preſence: Quis auſus fuit Martialem prædicare Apoſtolum, niſi prius grande generale Concilium omnium Epiſcoporum Galliæ & Italiæ, una cum Papa Romano congregaretur, & ibi eſſet probatum, ſi eſt aut non eſt Apoſtolus? And foraſmuch as Benedict and a Monk of St. John d' Angely, who likewiſe maintain'd that St. Martial was not an Apoſtle, peremptorily declar'd, That 'twas requiſite to make Application to the Pope, and to cauſe the Monks of St. Martial to be forbidden to place him in the Rank of the Apoſtles for the Future; Aimar replies, 'That 'if the Pope being ſurpris'd by the Inſinuations of envious 'Perſons, ſhould publiſh ſuch a Prohibition, it would be 'more expedient to obey God, rather than the Pope of 'Rome; by Reaſon that no Pope has receiv'd Power to 'abſolve or excommunicate the Holy Apoſtles, nor to hin'der the Church of God from doing well and ſpeaking well: Si Papa ſubripiente conſilio invidorum hoc prohibet, tamen obedire oportet Deo magis quam Papæ Romano. Nulli etenim Papæ data eſt poteſtas vel abſolvendi, vel excommunicandi ſanctos Apoſtolos Dei, vel prohibendi Eccleſiam Dei à beneſaciendo & recte loquendo. M. Baluſius has alſo divers Sermons made in the Council of Limoges, relating to the Apoſtolical Dignity of St. Martial, which he ſuppoſes to have been written by the ſame Author.

Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Hugh Archdeacon of Tours.

Hugh, Archdeacon of Tours, compos'd a ſmall Dialogue between him and Fulbert Biſhop of Chartres, containing an Account of an Apparition of St. Martin, ſeen by Herveus Treaſurer of St. Martin at Tours, in the Beginning of this Century, which was publiſh'd by Father Mabillon, in the ſecond Tome of his Anelecta.

Odoran Monk of St. Peter Le Vif.

Odoran, a Monk of St. Peter le Vif at Sens, is the Author of a Chronicle, which begins at the Year of our Lord 675. and ends in 1032. It was printed in M. Du Cheſne's Collection of the Hiſtorians of France.

Anſelm Dean of Namur.

Anſelm, a Canon of Liege, and afterwards Dean of Namur, wrote upon the Requeſt of Ida Abbeſs of St. Cecilia at Colen, the Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Liege, from St. Theodard, who liv'd, A. C. 666. to Waſon, who ſucceeded Richard in 1041. and died in 1048. It was ſet forth by Chapeaville, in his Collection of the Hiſtorians of Liege.

Herman. Contractus, Monk of Richenaw.

Hermannus, ſirnam'd Contractus, by reaſon that his Limbs were ſhrunk, the Son of the Count of Weringen in Suevia, who was educated in the Monaſtery of St. Gall, and afterwards became a Monk of Richenaw, flouriſh'd in the middle of the Century, and acquir'd much Skill in divers Languages and liberal Sciences. He compos'd a Chronicle, from the Creation of the World, to A. D. 1052. continu'd by Bertulphus of Conſtance, to 1065. It was printed at Francfort, in 1583. in the Edition of the Hiſtorians of Germany, by Piſtorius; in Caniſius's Antiquities; and in the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum. To him are alſo attributed certain Anthems in Honour of the Virgin Mary; the Veni Sancte Spiritus; and ſome other * Proſes or Hymns. Trithemius likewiſe makes Mention of the following Works of this Author, viz. a Treatiſe of the Science of Muſick; another of the Monochord; three Books of the Manner of making the Aſtrolabe; one of its Uſefulneſs; one of the Eclipſes; another of the Calendar; a Treatiſe of the Quadrature of a Circle, one of the Diſcord of Sounds, one of Phyſiognomy; and the Lives of divers Saints.

* A Part of the Maſs.

Glaber Radulphus Monk of Cluny.

Glaber Radulphus, a Monk of St. German at Auxerre, and afterwards of Cluny, compos'd in the Year 1045. an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory dedicated to Odilo Abbot of Cluny, which begins at A. C. 900. and ends in 1045. This Hiſtory being very accurately and faithfully written, was printed at Francfort in 1596. and is contain'd M. Du Cheſne's Collection of the Hiſtorians of France. He likewiſe wrote the Life of St. William Abbot of St. Benignus at Dijon, who died in 1031. which is referr'd to by Bollandus in Jan. 1.

Gualdo Monk of Corbie.

Gualdo, a Monk of Corbie, wrote in Verſe, the Life of Anſcharius Biſhop of Hamburg, dedicated to Adalbert Archbiſhop of Bremen. It is compriz'd in the ſecond Tome of the fourth Benedictin Century, by Father Mabillon.

Drogo Monk of St. Winoch.

Drogo, a Monk of St. Winoch, wrote the Lives of St. Genelena, of St. Oſwald King of Northumberland, and of St. Winoch: The two firſt of theſe are in Surius, and the third is only to be found in Manuſcript.

Helgaud Monk of Fleury.

Helgaud, a Monk of Fleury, wrote A. D. 1050. the Life of King Robert, which was publiſh'd from a Manuſcript of Petrus Pithœus's Library, and printed at Francfort in 1596. alſo in M. Du Cheſne's Collection of Hiſtorians.

Wirpo Chaplain to the Emperor Henry III.

Wirpo or Wippo, Chaplain to the Emperor Henry III. compos'd a Relation of the Life and Actions of Conrad the Father of that Emperor, which is extant in the Collection of the German Writers by Piſtorius, and a Panegyrick on Henry III. which is printed in Caniſius's Antiquities.

Ebervin Abbot of St. Maurice at Tolen.

Ebervin or Everwin, Abbot of St. Maurice at Tolen in the Dioceſs of Trier, wrote the Life of St. Simeon of Syracuſe a Monk of Trier, who died in 1035. which was dedicated to Poppo Archbiſhop of that Dioceſs, and is referr'd to by Surius in June 1.

Everſhelm

Ecclesiastical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Evershelm Abbot of Aumont.

Everſhelm, Abbot of Aumont in Hainaut, is the Author of a Life of St. Poppo Abbot of Stavelo, his Kinſman, cited by Surius and Bollandus in Jan. 25. He was made Abbot of St. Peter at Ghent in 1058. and died in 1069.

Guibert Archdeacon of Toul.

Guibert, Archdeacon of Toul, wrote the Life of Pope Leo IX. publiſh'd by Father Sirmond, A. D. 1615. and afterwards by Henſchenius and Papebrochius in April 19.

Metellus Abbot of Tergenſee.

Metellus, Abbot of Tergenſee, who flouriſh'd, A. D. 1060. left certain Eclogues call'd Quirinales, in Commendation of St. Quirinus Martyr, which were ſet forth by Caniſius in the firſt Tome of his Antiquities.

Folcard Monk of St. Berthin

Folcard, a Monk of St. Berthin, wrote the Life of that Saint, and that of St. Omer, both referr'd to by Surius, viz. one in Sept. 5. and the other under the 15*th.* Day of the ſame Month.

Gerard Abbot of St. Vincent at Laon.

Gerard, a Sacriſtain or Veſtry-keeper in the Monaſtery of Corbie in Saxony, and afterwards Abbot of St. Vincent at Laon, is the Writer of the Life of St. Adelard, publiſh'd by Surius and Bollandus in Jan. 2. and by Father Mabillon in the firſt Tome of the fourth Benedictin Century. He was afterwards made Abbot of St. Medard at Soiſſons, A. D. 1077. but being turn'd out thence, by Queen Bertha, he founded the Monaſtery of Sauvemajeur, in the Dioceſs of Bourdeaux, where he died in 1095.

Willeran Abbot of St. Peter at Mersburg.

Willeran, a Monk of Fulda, and afterward Abbot of St. Peter at Mersburg, compos'd an Epithalamium on the Marriage between Jeſus Chriſt and the Church, or a Commentary on the Canticles, contain'd in three Books in Proſe, intermix'd with Verſe: A certain Piece of that Nature, was publiſh'd under his Name in Latin, and in the old Gauliſh Language, printed at Leyden, A. D. 1598.

Urſio Abbot of Aumont.

Urſio, Abbot of Aumont in Hainault, wrote an Hiſtorical Account of the Life of St. Marcellus Pope, A. D. 1080.

Deſiderius Abbot of Mount Caſſin.

Deſiderius, Abbot of Mount Caſſin, who was afterwards Pope, under the Name of Victor III. being as yet Abbot, compos'd a Dialogue concerning the Miracles of St. Benedict.

Paul Canon of Benrieden

Paul, a Canon and Provoſt of Benrieden, wrote in the End of the Century a Treatiſe of the Actions of Pope Gregory VII. and the Life of St. Herlucia a Virgin, both publiſh'd by Gretzer, printed at Ingolſtadt, and inſerted in the Collection of the Bollandiſts.

Conrad a Monk of Bruvilliers.

Conrad, a Monk of the Monaſtery of Bruvilliers, in the Dioceſs of Colen, wrote in the Year 1096. the Life of St. Wolphelin Abbot of that Abby, deceaſed in 1091. which was publiſh'd by the Bollandiſts, in April 22.

Geffrey de Maleterre a Norman Monk.

Gaufroy or Geffrey de Maleterre, a Norman Monk, compos'd an Hiſtory of the Conqueſts of the Normans, under the Dukes Robert Guiſcard and Roger, in Apulia, Calabria and Sicily. It was printed ſeparately, and is alſo to be found among the Hiſtorians of Hiſpania Illuſtrata printed at Francfort, A. D. 1603.

William of Apulia.

William of Apulia, wrote in the End of this Century, at the Requeſt of Pope Urban II. a Poem on the ſame Subject, printed ſeparately at Paris in 1652. as alſo in the Collection of the Hiſtorians of Normandy, by Du Cheſne, and in that of the Hiſtoriographers of Sicily.

Bertulphus Prieſt of Conſtance

Bertulphus or Bernulphus, a Prieſt of Conſtance, beſides a Continuation of Hermannus Contractus's Chronicle, and an Hiſtory of his Time, from the Year 1053. to the End of the Century, compos'd a Treatiſe, to ſhew that the Company of excommunicated Perſons ought to be avoided, and ſome other ſmall Tracts in Favour of Pope Gregory VII. which were publiſh'd by Gretzer in his Apology for Cardinal Bellarmin, printed at Ingolſtadt, A. D. 1612.

Kalgod Monk of Cluny.

Kalgod, a Monk of Cluny, wrote in the End of the Century, the Lives of St. Odo and St. Mayol, ſet forth by the Bollandiſts, and by Father Mabillon.

Othlo Monk of St. Boniface.

Othlo, a Prieſt and Monk of the Monaſtery of St. Boniface in Germany, is the Writer of the Life of that Saint, ſometime Archbiſhop of Mentz, which was publiſh'd by Caniſius in the fourth Tome of his Antiquities, and by Father Mabillon in the ſecond Tome of the third Benedictin Century.

Ingulphus Abbot of Croyland.

Ingulphus, an Engliſhman of the City of London, the Son of an Officer belonging to King Edward's Court, apply'd himſelf to Study in his Youth, and acquir'd ſo great Reputation for his Learning, that William Duke of Normandy paſſing into England, brought him back with his Retinue, and made him his principal Miniſter. He undertook a Journey to the Holy Land, A. D. 1064. and returning from thence was admitted into the Monaſtery of Fontanelle, of which he was made Prior ſoon after, in 1076. William I. King of England invited him over into this Kingdom, and conſtituted him Abbot of Croyland, from whence he had turn'd out Wulketulus; but Ingulphus obtain'd Leave to retire from that Abby, the Hiſtory of which he compos'd from A. C. 664. to 1091. It was publiſh'd by Sir Henry Savil in 1596. and among the Hiſtorians of England, printed at London in 1684. This Author died in 1109.

Ecclesiastical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Thierry Abbot of St. Trudo.

Thierry, a Monk of St. Peter at Ghent, and afterwards Abbot of St. Trudo in the Dioceſs of Liege, wrote the Lives of St. Bavo, St. Trudo, St. Rumold, and St. Landrada, publiſh'd by Surius. Trithemius ſays, That he was likewiſe the Author of a Life of St. Benedict, and of an Account of the Tranſlation of his Body, with certain Letters and ſome other Works in Proſe and Verſe: He flouriſh'd, A. D. 1050.

Alphanus Archbiſhop of Salerno.

Alphanus, a Monk of Mount Caſſin, afterward Abbot of St. Benedict at Salerno, and at laſt Biſhop of that City, from A. D. 1057. to 1086, is reputed to be the Author of divers Hymns, in Honour of the Saints, and of ſome other Poetical Pieces, referr'd to by Ughellus, in the ſecond Tome of Italia Sacra.

Amatus a Biſhop of Italy.

Amatus, a Monk of Mount Caſſin and Biſhop in Italy, although 'tis not known of what Church, compos'd four Books in Verſe, dedicated to Pope Gregory VII. on the Actions of the Apoſtles St. Peter and St. Paul, and eight Books of the Hiſtory of the Normans, which (as they ſay) are kept in Manuſcript in the Library of Mount Caſſin. He likewiſe wrote certain Poems in commendation of Gregory VII. on the twelve precious Stones of the Breaſt-plate of the High Prieſt; and on the Celeſtial Jeruſalem.

Hepidannus Monk of St. Gall.

Hepidannus, a Monk of St. Gall, who flouriſh'd during a conſiderable Part of this Century, is the Author of a Chronicle which begins at the Year 709. and ends in 1044. It is inſerted in the Collection of the Hiſtorians of Germany, ſet forth by Goldaſtus, and printed at Francfort in 1606. He likewiſe compos'd two Books of the Life and Miracles of St. Wiborad, dedicated to Ulric Abbot of St. Gall, which are referr'd to in the ſame Place, as alſo by the Bollandiſts, and by Father Mabillon. They were written, A. D. 1072. and this Author might be dead in 1080.

Marianus Scotus.

Marianus, a Scotiſhman or Iriſhman by Nation, related to venerable Bede, (if we may give Credit to Matthew of Weſtminſter) was born A. D. 1028. turn'd Monk in 1052. paſs'd over into Germany in 1058. was ten Years a Recluſe in the Monaſtery of Fulda, and ſpent the reſt of his Life at Mentz, where he died in 1086. He compos'd a Chronicle from the Creation of the World, to A. D. 1083. in which he follow'd Caſſiodorus. It was continu'd to the Year 1200. by Dodechin Abbot of St. Dyſibod in the Dioceſs of Triers, and was printed in ſeveral Places, more eſpecially among the German Hiſtorians.

Lambert Monk of Hirsfeldt.

Lambert of Aſchaffemburg aſſum'd the Monaſtick Habit, in the Convent of Hirſfeldt, under the Abbot Meginher, A. D. 1058. was ordain'd Prieſt the ſame Year, by Lupold Archbiſhop of Mentz; and ſoon after undertook a Journey to Jeruſalem, without the Knowledge of his Abbot, from whence he return'd the next Year. He compos'd an Hiſtorical Chronology from the Creation of the World, to A. D. 1077. which is only an Epitome of general Hiſtory to the Year 1050. and a particular Hiſtory of Germany of a competent Largeneſs, from that Year to 1077. This Work is written with a great deal of Accuracy and Elegancy, and there are few German Authors, who have ſhew'd ſo much Politeneſs in their Writings. It was printed ſeparately at Tubingen in 1533. and alſo among the Hiſtorians of Germany.

Adam Canon of Bremen.

Adam, a Canon of Bremen, in the Year 1077. compos'd four Books of the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of his Church, in which he treats of the Original and Propagation of the Chriſtian Religion in the Dioceſſes of Bremen and Hamburg, from the Time of the Emperor Charlemagne, to that of Henry IV. He has annex'd at the End, a ſmall Treatiſe of the Situation of Denmark and other Northern Kingdoms; of the Nature of thoſe Countries, and of the Religion and Manners of the Inhabitants. The whole Work was publiſh'd by Lidembrocius and printed at Hanaw, A. D. 1579. at Leyden in 1595. and afterwards at Helmſtadt in 1670.

Albert a Benedictin Monk of Mets.

Sigebert and Trithemius make mention of a Benedictin Monk of Metz, nam'd Albert, who wrote certain Works, and among others, an Hiſtory of his Time, dedicated to the Biſhop of that Dioceſs.

Anſelm a Benedictin Monk of Rheims.

They likewiſe take Notice of another Benedictin Monk of the City of Rheims, nam'd Anſelm, who compos'd an Hiſtorical Account of the Voyage of Pope Leo IX. to France; of the Synods he held there; and of other Affairs tranſacted by him in that Kingdom. This Piece was call'd Pope Leo's Itinerary.

Gonthier Monk of St. Amand.

Laſtly, Sigebert mentions a Monk of St. Amand, known by the Name of Gonthier or Gontherius, who wrote in Verſe a Relation of the Martyrdom of St. Syricius.

Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

An Addition of ſome other Authors who wrote in the Eleventh Century.

Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Warman Biſhop of Conſtance

WArman, Count of Dilingen, afterwards Monk of Richenaw, and at laſt Biſhop of Conſtance, wrote the Life of St. Pyrmin. He died A. D. 1034.

Britwol Biſhop of Winton.

Britwol, a Monk of Glaſſenbury, and afterwards Biſhop of Wincheſter, wrote the Life of St. Egwin, ſometime Biſhop of the ſame Dioceſs, and died A. D. 1045.

Ingelran Abbot of St. Riquier

Ingelran, a Monk, and afterwards Abbot of St. Riquier, compos'd a Poem divided into four Books, the firſt of which contains the Life of St. Riquier; the ſecond and third, a Narrative of the Miracles wrought by him; and the fourth, an Account of the Tranſlation of his Body to the Abby that bears his Name. Some Part of this Poem is inſerted in the ſecond Century of the Acts of St Benedict. This Author likewiſe wrote certain Copies of Verſes, in Honour of St. Wilfran Archbiſhop of Sens, and died A. D. 1045.

Bertha a Nun of Willock.

Bertha or Bertrada, a Nun of Willock near Bonne, the Siſter of St. Wolphemus, Abbot, wrote the Life of St. Adelaida, the firſt Abbeſs of her Monaſtery.

Giſlebert Monk of St. Germain at Auxerre.

Giſlebert, a Monk of St. Germain at Auxerre, under the Abbot Winneman, compos'd in the middle of the Century, two Books of the Life of St. Romanus, an Abbot near Auxerre, who is ſuppos'd to be the ſame that gave Food to St. Benedict, in the Grot of Subiago, of which St. Gregory makes mention in his Dialogues. This Piece is contain'd in the firſt Benedictin Century by Father Mabillon.

Diodericus Monk of Hirſfeldt.

Diodericus, a Monk of Hirſfelds, compos'd in the Beginning of this Century, a Treatiſe concerning the Tranſlation of St. Benedict, which is inſerted in the ſecond Part of the fourth Benedictin Century. Trithemius falſely attributes to him the Book of the Tranſlation of St. Benedict, which belongs to Adalbert a Monk, who died A. C. 853.

Andrew Monk of Fleury.

Andrew, a Monk of Fleury, or of St. Benedict on the Loire, wrote in like Manner, at the ſame Time, a Treatiſe of the Miracles of St. Benedict.

Odo Monk of St. Maur des Foſſez.

Odo, a Monk of St. Maur des Foſſes, compleated a Relation of the Life of Count Burchard, A. D. 1058.

Bovo Abbot of St. Berthin

Bovo, Abbot of St. Berthin, compos'd a Narrative of the Canonization of that Saint, and dedicated it to Guy Archbiſhop of Rheims. He died A. D. 1069. four Years after having reſign'd the Government of his Abby.

Giſlebert Monk of St. Amand.

Giſlebert, a Monk of St. Amand, wrote four Books containing an Account of the Life of that Saint, and of the Deſtruction of his Monaſtery. He died A. D. 1095.

St. William Abbot of Richenaw.

St. William, Abbot of Richenaw, compos'd two Books concerning the Cuſtoms of that Abby, with ſome other Works, and died in 1091.

Alberic Cardinal.

Alberic, Cardinal, is the Author of the Life of St. Dominick of Sora. See Petrus Diaconus, Cap. 12.

Jotſald Monk of Cluny.

Jotſald, a Monk of Cluny, wrote the Life of St. Odilo his Abbot. Father Mabillon deſigns to publiſh it more entire, than it has been hitherto, in his ſixth Benedictin Century.

Eccleſiaſtical Authors of the Eleventh Century.

Wolferus Canon of Hildeſheim.

Wolferus, a Monk of Altaich, or rather Canon of Hildeſheim, left a Relation of the Lives of St. Gonthier the Hermit, and of St. Godehard Biſhop of Hildeſheim. Some have attributed this Piece to Alcuin, by whom it was only reviſ'd.

Gotzelin Monk of Canterbury.

Gotzelin, a Monk of St. Berthin, and afterwards of Canterbury, compos'd an Hiſtory of the Life and Miracles of St. Auguſtine the Monk, who converted the Engliſh Nation to Chriſtianity, with an Account of the Tranſlation of the ſame Saint, made in his Time. William of Malmesbury extols him as the moſt famous Writer in England after Bede; eſpecially in Reference to the Hiſtory of the Saints of this Kingdom, many of whoſe Lives were written by him.

Peter Monk of Maillezais

Peter, a Monk of Maillezais, wrote the Hiſtory of his Monaſtery, and dedicated it to Goderan Abbot of the ſame Convent, who flouriſh'd, A. D. 1070.

William Monk of Chiuſi.

William, a Monk of Chiuſi in Tuſcany, wrote the Life of St. Benedict Abbot of that Monaſtery in the Eleventh Century.

Raimond Monk of S. Andrew at Avignon

Raimond, a Monk of St. Andrew at Avignon, compos'd a Relation of the Life of St. Pons Abbot of the ſame Monaſtery, in the End of that Century.

Heymo Monk of Richenaw.

Heymo, a Monk of Richenaw, is the Author of the Life of St. William of Richenaw, which is referr'd by Trithemius to the Year of our Lord 1091.

Gerard de Venna Monk of La Chaiſe Dieu.

Gerard de Venna, a Monk of La Chaiſe Dieu, left a Relation of the Life of St. Robert Abbot and Founder of that Abby. This Life not being well Written, was reviſ'd by Marbodus Biſhop of Rennes.

Egerward Monk of St. Burchard at Wurtzburg.

Egerward, a Monk of St. Burchard at Wurtzburg, made ſome Additions to the Life of the ſame Saint.

Gautier Monk of St. Burchard at Wurtzburg.

Gautier or Gauterius, wrote the Life of St. Anaſtaſius the Hermit, who liv'd in the End of this Century, in the Dioceſs of Rieux.

Grimaldus Monk of Canterbury.

Grimaldus, compos'd an Hiſtorical Account of the Tranſlation of St. Felix, ſometime Pupil to St. Emilian the Patron of Spain.

Rudolf a Monk of La Chaiſe Dieu.

Rudolf, a Monk of La Chaiſe Dieu, wrote the Life of St. Adelelm the third Abbot of that Monaſtery, and afterward Prior of St. John at Burgos in Spain, who died in the End of the Century.

Notcherus Abbot of Hautvilliers.

Notcherus, Abbot of Hautvilliers in the Dioceſs of Rheims, compos'd in the End of the Century, a Narrative of the Tranſlation of St. Helena, made in his Monaſtery.

W. a Monk of Walſor.

W. a Monk of Walſor, wrote in the middle of the Century, the Life of St. Hilvrada a Virgin, which is inſerted in the ſecond Part of the third Benedictin Century.

To theſe may be added the nameleſs Writers of the ſame Age, who compos'd the following Works, viz.

Nameleſs Authors.

THE Life of St. Gildas, firnam'd the Wiſe, Abbot of Ruis in Bretagne, written by a nameleſs Author, who likewiſe makes mention of certain Saints of the ſame Monaſtery, who liv'd in his Time. This Piece is extant in the Library of Fleury, and in the firſt Benedictin Century.

A Relation of the Miracles of St. Martin at Verton, in the ſame Benedictin Century.

The Life of St. Bertulf Abbot of Renty, written by a Monk of Blandin at Ghent, in the firſt Part of the third Benedictin Century.

The Life of St. Chafer, which is contain'd in the ſame Volume.

The Author of the Chronicle of St. Vincent at Vulturno in Italy, in M. Du Cheſne's third Tome.

The Life of St. Oditia Abbeſs of Homburg in Alſatia, which is to be found in the ſecond Part of the third Benedictin Century.

An Account of the Miracles of St. Hubert Biſhop of Liege, written by a certain Monk of St. Hubert's Abby in Ardenne, which is in the firſt Part of the fourth Benedictin Century.

A Narrative of the Tranſlation of St. Cuthbert Biſhop, by a Monk of Durham, contain'd in the ſecond Part of the ſame Volume.

Nameleſs Authors.

Another of the Life and Tranſlation of the Body of St. Hugh a Monk of St. Martine at Autun, by a nameleſs Monk. This Piece is in the fifth Benedictin Century.

Another of the Tranſlation of the Body of St. Valery of Flanders, to the Abby that bears his Name, by a Monk of the ſame Convent, which is inſerted in the ſame Volume.

The Life of St. Simon Count of Crepy, who died, A. D. 1082. written by a nameleſs Author of the ſame Time.

The Life of St. Simeon an Armenian Hermit, at Padolyrona near Mantua.

The Life of St. Thierry Abbot of St. Hubert, in the Foreſt of Ardenne. who died, A. D. 1087.

The Life of St. Richard Abbot of St. Vannes, deceas'd in 1046. which was written by a certain Monk of the ſame Monaſtery, a little after his Death; although that Abbot was never ſeen by him.

The Life of St. Tſarn Abbot of St. Victor at Marſeilles, who died, A. D. 1048.

The Life of St. Benenius Abbot of Lucedia in Piemont, who died in 1016. written by one of his Pupils.

A Relation of the Life and Miracles of St. Gautier or Gauterius, the firſt Abbot of St. Martin at Pontoiſe, deceaſed in 1094. which was compos'd in like manner by one of his Pupils.

The Life of St. Guy Abbot of Pompoſa in Italy, who died, A. D. 1046.

CHAP.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Greek Ecclesiastical Writers who flourish'd in the Eleventh Century.

Leo the Grammarian.

LEO, the Grammarian, is the Author of a Continuation of Theophanes's Chronicle, from A. C. 813. to 1013. which is apparently the Year when he Wrote. It was publish'd by Father Combefis, in the End of Theophanes's Works; printed at Paris, A. D. 1655.

Alexius' Patriarch of Constantinople.

Alexius, a Monk of the Monastery of Studa, and afterward Patriarch of the Church of Constantinople, which he govern'd from A. D. 1025. to 1043. compil'd certain Constitutions relating to Ecclesiastical Affairs, which are referr'd to in the Collection of the Greek and Roman Law.

Eugesippus.

Eugesippus, an Author very little known, compos'd a Geographical Treatise of the Holy Land, publish'd by Allatius, in his Collection of the Greek and Latin Writers. 'Tis reported that this Treatise was written about A. D. 1040.

Theophanes the Cerameau, Archbishop of Tauromenium.

Theophanes the Cerameau, Archbishop of Tauromenium in Sicily, liv'd in this Century, although we have already made mention of him in the ninth Age, to which he is generally referr'd; but two Reasons invincibly prove, that he belongs to the Eleventh: The first is, That he cites Metaphrastes; and the other, that 'tis express'd, that the Homily on Palm-Sunday, was made in the Presence of King Roger, who could be no other Person but the Count of Sicily, whom he Styles King and Emperor, according to the usual Custom of the Greeks. The Homilies attributed to Gregory the Cerameau, in some Manuscripts, are not different from those of Theophanes; insomuch, that it must either be an Error of the Transcribers, or else Theophanes had two Names. Let the Case be how it will, these Homilies being 72 in Number, are not Contemptible; in which the Author explains the literal Sense of the Gospels, and afterwards enlarges on the Allegorical and Moral; but his Style is Plain, without any Manner of Ornament, or Loftiness of Expression.

Nilus Doxopatrius, Archimandrita.

At the same Time likewise flourish'd Nilus Doxopatrius, Archimandrita or Abbot of his Convent; who by Count Roger's Order, compos'd a Treatise of the five Patriarchal Sees, and of the Archbishopricks and Bishopricks under their Jurisdiction; as also concerning the Institution of those Patriarchs, their Ranks, Titles, Rights and Privileges. Allatius has produc'd many Fragments of this Piece; and it was publish'd entire by M. Le Moine, in the first Tome of his sacred Varieties.

Nicetas Pectoratus Monk of Studa.

Nicetas Pectoratus, besides the above-mention'd Treatise against the Latins, compos'd also some other Works; particularly a Treatise of the Soul, of which Allatius set forth a Fragment; an Hymn in Honour of St. Nicolas; and another in Commendation of Metaphrastes, referr'd to by the same Author.

Michael Psellus Senator.

Michael Psellus, descended of a noble Family in Constantinople, made so great Progress in the Studies to which he apply'd himself, that he became one of the most learn'd Men of that Age: He exercis'd the Office of a Senator, and was highly esteem'd by the Emperors: He was one of those Deputies whom Michael sirnam'd Stratioticus, sent to Isaac Comnenus to treat with him, and the latter made Use of his Service against Michael Cerularius; afterward he was chosen Tutor to Michael Ducas, who was advanc'd to the imperial Throne by his Means, A. D. 1071. He follow'd the Fortune of that Emperor; and was oblig'd, when the same Prince was depos'd in 1078. to retire to a Monastery, where he died a little while after. The Greek Writers, who succeeded him, made many Encomium's on his profound Skill in all Manner of Sciences; more especially Allatius, who gives us a very particular Character of him; and says, that none in that Age nor in the following, was ever more Successful in inventing; nor observ'd a more regular Method; nor wrote with so admirable Eloquence, and discuss'd Matters so thoroughly; and lastly, that there is no Science, in which he has not written Commentaries, Abridgments or Treatises.

The printed Works of Michael Psellus, are a Paraphrase in Verse on the Canticles, dedicated to Nicephorus Botoniata, which was publish'd in Greek by Meursius, and printed at Leyden, A. D. 1617. and in Latin at Venice in 1573. A Commentary on the same Book, taken out of St. Gregory Nyssen, St. Nilus and St. Maximus, which is extant among Theodoret's Works: Certain Questions about the Holy Trinity and the Person of Jesus Christ, printed as Augsburgh in 1608. Iambick Verses on the Vertues and Vices: Moral Discourses on Tantalus and Circe, and an Allegory of Sphinx, printed at Basil in 1545. A Dialogue of the Operation of Demons, printed at Paris in 1615. with M. Gaulmin's Notes: A Scholion or brief Commentary on the Chaldaick Oracles, printed at Venice in 1593. and at Paris in 1599. A Treatise of the Faculties of the Soul, printed at Paris in 1624. with Origen's Philocalia: Annotations on some Passages of St. Gregory Nazianzen, publish'd by Billius: The Panegyrick and Office of Simeon Metaphrastes, set forth by Allatius: And a Treatise of the seven general Councils, publish'd with several Poems by M. Bosquet, and printed at Paris in 1632. Not to mention a great Number of Books of Philosophy and Commentaries on Aristotle, which bear the Name of this Author, and are printed at several Places.

Allatius likewise produces a Catalogue of many other Treatises written by Psellus, which are only extant in Manuscript; particularly, a Treatise against Eunomius; an Epitome of the Books of Moses; certain Theological Questions; divers Tracts about the Mysteries of Jesus Christ; many Homilies and some Letters: Notwithstanding the high Esteem that Allatius has for this Author, his Works do not appear to be very useful, nor very learn'd, in respect of Ecclesiastical Matters, nor very eloquent. Although he was no Friend to Michael Cerularius, yet he maintain'd the Opinion of the Greeks concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost.

Simeon the Young, Abbot of Xerocercе.

In the End of the same Century liv'd Simeon sirnam'd the Younger, Abbot of the Monastery of Xerocerce, of whom we have 33 Orations or Sermons on Faith, and on the Christian and Monastick Manners; as also a Pious Treatise call'd, Hymns of Divine Love, in measur'd Prose, which the Greeks call Politick or Blank Verse; and 228 moral Maxims, which Jacobus Pontanus translated into Latin from the Manuscripts of the Libraries of Bavaria and Augsburg, and caus'd to be printed at Ingolstadt in Quarto, A. D. 1603. Allatius gives us a Catalogue of 79 Homilies, 58 Hymns, and some Instructions by this Author, with the Titles and Beginnings of them: Of the Homilies there are only fifteen among those of Pontanus, and of the Hymns there are twenty, which Pontanus has not publish'd, no more than the Instructions of which he makes Mention. These Works are full of Moral and Ascetick Precepts; but there are also certain Maxims of the Hesychasts or Quietists: So that perhaps it may not be amiss, here to shew after what Manner he lays down those Principles of Quietism, in his third Discourse of Prayer.

'In the first Place, (says he) three Things are to be 'practis'd, in Order to attain to what you desire, viz. the 'Contempt of all rational and irrational Creatures, Mor'tification, and a pure Conscience, free from all Manner of 'Passions and particular Interests. Afterwards sitting a'lone in Tranquility in a Corner of your Cell, do what I 'am now about to tell you: Keeping your Door shut, lift 'up your Mind above all Vanities; that is to say, above 'all temporary and transitory Things, and bowing your 'Head to your Belly, hold your Breath; seek your Heart 'in Mind: At first you'll find thick Darkness, but by con'tinuing this Practice Day and Night, you will discover 'Wonders and meet with endless Consolation: For when 'the Mind has once found out the Place of the Soul, it 'clearly perceives Things which it never comprehended 'before; it discerns Air round about the Heart, and be'comes altogether Luminous and full of Wisdom: And 'when a Man is arriv'd to that Height of Perfection, if 'any evil Thought intervenes, it is expell'd and immedia'tely disappears, before it can make any Impression; so 'that the Mind being exasperated drives away the De'vil: You may learn the rest with God, by preserving Je'sus Christ in your Heart.

This is the Model of Quietism fram'd by that Monk, who talks of nothing for the most part in his System of Divine Love, but Divine Illuminations and Lights, Divine Unions, Essential Unions with God; the Transformation of our Members into those of Jesus Christ, and other Matters of the like Nature. However it must be acknowledg'd, that otherwise the Works of this Author are full of most excellent Maxims, solid Principles, and very useful Instructions for promoting the Spiritual Life. There are also two other small Tracts by the same Author, viz. one of the Alteration and Impressions which the Elements make on the Bodies and Souls of Men; and the other, of the Manner of God's Omnipresence in all Places, and how his Light is dispers'd every where. The same Method of Writing, and the same Principles are observable in these Pieces:

Of the Greek Eccleſiaſtical Writers in the Eleventh Century.

But Simeon was caſt into Priſon in the End of his Life, for reproving the Emperor too freely (as ſome ſay) or as others will have it, upon account of his Erroneous Doctrines. He is alſo reputed to have firſt broach'd the Error of thoſe Greek Monks, who imagin'd, that the Light which appear'd on Mount Tabor, was the uncreated and Eternal Light of the Divine Majeſty; and that all Happineſs conſiſted in the Contemplation of it.

John Archbiſhop of Euchita.

John, Archbiſhop of Euchaita in Paphlagonia, compos'd in the Middle of this Century, certain Poetical Pieces in Iambick Verſe, on the principal Hiſtories of the Feſtivals of the Year, printed at Eton, A. D. 1610. As alſo a Relation of the Lives of St. Euſebius and St. Dorotheus the Younger; ſome Extracts of which are produc'd by Allatius, in his Book of the Agreement of the Greek and Latin Churches, concerning Purgatory.

Joannes Thraceſius Scylitzes, Curopalata.

Johannes Thraceſius Scylitzes, † Curopalata, who flouriſh'd under Alexis Comnenus, wrote a Continuation of Theophanes's Hiſtory, from the Year 813. to 1081. when Alexis Comnenus was advanc'd to the imperial Dignity. It was printed at Venice in Latin, of Gabius's Tranſlation; and Peter Goar publiſh'd it in Greek. at the end of Cedrenus's Chronicle, part of the ſame Hiſtory by Scylitzes, which begins at A. D. 1057. and ends in 1081.

† The Name of one of the principal Miniſters of State, in the Court of the Eaſtern Emperors.

Georgius Cedrenus, A certain Officer under the Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Georgius Cedrenus, a Monk, flouriſh'd in like manner in the end of the Century, and wrote Annals or an Epitome of Hiſtory, from the beginning of the World to the Year 1057. It is only a Collection of divers Authors, more eſpecially of George the * Syncellus, whoſe Chronography he copied out from the Creation of the World, to the Reign of Diocletian; of Theophanes, from Diocletian to Michael Curopalata; and of Joannes Thraceſius Scylitzes, afterward Curopalata, to his Time. In a word, his whole Hiſtory is taken out of the Works of ſeveral Writers, the Extracts of which he has drawn up without much Judgment or Skill, in the Art of Critick. Theſe Annals were tranſlated by Xylander, and printed at Baſil, A. D. 1566. and afterward at Paris in the Royal Printing-Houſe, with the Notes of Fabrot and James Goar, in 1647.

Conſtantin Lichudes, Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Conſtantin Lichudes, who ſucceeded Michael Cerularius, A. D. 1058. in the Patriarchal See of Conſtantinople, compil'd certain Synodal Conſtitutions, which are contain'd in the Collection of the Greek and Roman Law, as well as a Synodal Deciſion of Michael Cerularius about Marriages, to the ſeventh Degree of Conſanguinity; and ſome other Fragments of Conſtitutions by the ſame Patriarch, relating to forbidden Marriages.

John Xiphilin Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

John Xiphilin, of Trebiſond or Trapezut, a Monk of Mount Olympus, ſucceeded Conſtantin Lichudes, A. D. 1066. and died in 1078. We have ſtill in our Poſſeſſion his Homily on the Croſs, or on the third Week of Lent, cited by Gretzer, and certain Decrees about Marriage inſerted in the Collection of the Greek and Roman Law. 'Tis alſo reported, That there are to be ſeen in ſome Libraries, certain Homilies by this Patriarch, on all the Sundays of the Year; and ſome have imagin'd him to be the Author of the Epitome of Dion Caſſius's Hiſtory, but the latter aſſures us himſelf, that he was his Nephew, and that he compos'd that Abridgment under the Emperor Michael Ducas.

Samonas Archbiſhop of Gaza.

Samonas, Archbiſhop of Gaza, flouriſh'd (as 'tis ſuppos'd) in the End of this Century, and wrote a ſmall Tract in form of a Dialogue, between Himſelf and a Saracen; in which he proves, that the Bread and Wine in the Euchariſt, are chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt. This Piece is extant in the Bibliotheca Patrum; but 'tis more probable, that that Archbiſhop did not live till the thirteenth Century.

Nicolas Biſhop of Metone.

Nicolas, Biſhop of Metone, is alſo referr'd to the eleventh Century: He compos'd a Treatiſe of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, like that of Samonas, againſt thoſe who doubted that the conſecrated Bread and Wine, were really his Body and Blood: But there is yet a much greater Probability that this Author belongs to the twelfth Century.

He likewiſe compos'd three Treatiſes of the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt againſt the Latins, of which ſome Manuſcript-Copies (as we are inform'd by Allatius) are preſerv'd in the Vatican Library: His Treatiſe of the Euchariſt is in the Bibliotheca Patrum.

Of the Greek Eccleſiaſtical Writers in the Eleventh Century.

Theophylact Archbiſhop of Acris.

Theophylact, Archbiſhop of Acris in Bulgaria, flouriſh'd under the Emperors Romanus Diogenes, Michael Ducas and Nicephorus Botoniata. He took a great deal of Pains in explaining the Holy Scripture, by making an Abridgment of St. Chryſoſtom's Commentaries, and after that manner compos'd his Commentaries on the four Goſpels, on the Acts of the Apoſtles, on St. Paul's Epiſtles, and on four of the leſſer Prophets, viz. Habakkuk, Jonas, Nahum and Hoſea.

Theſe Commentaries were printed in Latin at Paris, A. D. 1554. and at Baſil in 1570. The Commentaries on the Goſpels were printed in Latin at Antwerp in 1564. in Greek at Rome in 1542. and 1568. and in Greek and Latin at Paris in 1562. The Commentaries on the Acts, were printed in Greek and Latin at Colen in 1568. The Commentaries on St. Paul's Epiſtles, were printed in Latin at Rome in 1469. at Antwerp in 1564. at Colen in 1531. and at Paris in 1552. as alſo in Greek and Latin at London in 1536. Laſtly, The Commentaries on the four leſſer Prophets were printed at Paris in 1549. and 'tis reported that there is extant an entire Manuſcript Commentary on all the leſſer Prophets, in the Library of Augsburg; Meurſius has publiſh'd 75 Letters by this Author in Greek, printed at Leyden in 1617. which were afterward tranſlated into Latin by Marinerius, and printed at Colen in 1622. Gretſer likewiſe ſet forth under Theophylact's Name, a Diſcourſe of the Croſs, and Father Pouſtin another Treatiſe, which is an Inſtitution dedicated to Conſtantin Porphyrogenneta. Joannes Veccus has cited certain Paſſages of the ſame Archbiſhop, relating to the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt, againſt the Latins; and 'tis reported that there is to be ſeen in the Library of the Duke of Bavaria, a Manuſcript Treatiſe by him, concerning the Differences between the Greeks and Latins, and a Diſcourſe on the Emperor Alexis Comnenus. Theophylact's Commentaries are very uſeful for the Literal Explication of the Holy Scriptures.

Nicetas Serron, Archbiſhop of Heraclea.

Nicetas Serron, a Deacon of the Church of Conſtantinople, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Heraclea, Cotemporary with Theophylact, wrote a Commentary on St. Gregory Nazianzen's Homilies, which is inſerted in Latin among the Works of that Father: To him likewiſe is attributed a Catena on the Book of Job, printed in Latin at Venice in 1587. and at London in 1637. which nevertheleſs may be rather appropriated to Olympiodorus, than to this Author; but 'tis probable that the Commentary on the Poems of St. Gregory Nazianzen, printed at Venice in 1563. under the name of Nicetas the Paphlagonian, belongs to this Nicetas of Heraclea.

Nicolas the Grammarian, Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

Nicolas, ſirnam'd the Grammarian, choſen Patriarch of Conſtantinople, in the Year 1084. wrote a large Letter to the Emperor Alexis Comnenus to prove, that 'tis not lawful to take away Biſhopricks from the Metropolitans. He likewiſe made certain Conſtitutions about Marriage, which are to be found with this Letter, in the Collection of the Greek and Roman Law.

Peter Chartophylax, of the Church of Conſtantinople.

Peter, Deacon and Chartophylax or Keeper of the Records of the Church of Conſtantinople, made, A. D. 1090. his brief Anſwers to certain Caſes that were propos'd to him: They are in like manner compris'd in the Collection of the Greek and Roman Law.

Samuel of Morocco, a converted Jew.

Among all theſe Authors may be reckon'd, a certain Jew of Africa, nam'd Samuel of Morocco, converted to the Chriſtian Religion; who compos'd a ſmall Tract to prove, that the Meſſiah was come; in which he gives us to underſtand, that he wrote a thouſand Years after the Deſtruction of the Temple of Jeruſalem: This Piece was printed at ſeveral Times ſeparately, and is extant in ſome Collections of Authors.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

Of the Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

HAving already given an Hiſtorical Account of divers Councils, treating of other Eccleſiaſtical Affairs tranſacted in this Century, we ſhall now proceed to do the ſame Thing, in reference to thoſe of which we have not hitherto had Occaſion to make Mention.

Of the Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

The

The Councils of France.

The Councils of France.

IN the Year of our Lord, 1017. certain concealed Hereticks were discover'd, who spread abroad detestable Doctrines and committed no less infamous Actions; and this Discovery was first made by a Norman Lord nam'd Arefastus: He had a Clergyman in his House, who going to Orleans to hold Conferences with the learn'd of that City, met two other Clerks, one nam'd Stephen, Professor of School-Divinity in St. Peter's Monastery, and the other Lisoius, Clerk of the Convent of St. Croix, who were then in great Repute for their Learning and Piety. He convers'd with them for some Time, till they communicated their Errors to him, and afterward returning to Normandy, acquainted his Patron with their Tenets, who disclos'd the matter to Duke Richard. Whereupon the Duke gave Notice of it to King Robert, and at the same Time sent Arefastus with his Chaplain in order to discover and convict the Hereticks. Arefastus pass'd through Chartres, to know of Fulbert what Measures were most expedient to be taken in this Case; but not meeting with him, he consulted Evrard, a Doctor of Divinity and Prebend of the Church of Chartres, who advis'd him to give himself up to Prayer, to receive the Holy Communion, and to fortify himself every Day with the Sign of the Cross, before he enter'd into Conference with those Hereticks; not to contradict what he heard them say, and feigning to be their Disciple, to make a Discovery of all their Errors. He follow'd this Advice, and having associated himself with them several Times, was inform'd by them, 'That they did 'not believe that Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Ma-'ry, nor that he died for the Salvation of Mankind, nor 'that he was bury'd and rose again: And that they main-'tain'd, That Baptism did not procure the Remission of 'Sins; that the Consecration by the Priest did not Con-'stitute the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Lord; 'and that it was unprofitable to make Prayers to the Holy 'Martyrs and Confessors. Afterward Arefastus having in-'terrogated them about the Salvation which they hop'd to be partakers of, they inform'd him, that at certain Hours of the Night, they were wont to meet together in a particular Place, every one being furnish'd with a Lamp, where after having invok'd the Demons, they perpetrated infamous Villanies, and even burnt the Children born of their Incestuous Copulations, whose Ashes they reserv'd to be given to sick Persons as a kind of Viaticum.

The Councils of France.

King Robert being arriv'd at Orleans with some Bishops, caus'd this Herd of Miscreants to be apprehended and Arefastus among them, by whose Testimony they were convicted, and their Errors were refuted by the Bishops: But upon their Refusal to abjure their Heresy, they were depriv'd of their Ecclesiastical Habits and all Burnt in a House, except one single Clerk and a Nun, who were converted. These Circumstances are thus related in an ancient History of the Council of Orleans, referr'd to by Father Luke Dachery, in the second Tome of his Spicilegium; and Glaber a Cotemporary Historian, relates them almost after the same Manner as to the Matter of Fact, except that he makes no Mention of Arefastus; but he attributes to them some other Errors, viz. 'That they deny'd the Holy Tri-'nity, affirm'd the World to be Eternal, and believ'd that 'sensual Pleasures are not to be punish'd in the future State, 'and that good Works are Unprofitable. This Author adds, That the Persons burnt upon that Account, were thirteen in Number.

The Synod of Arras, held in the Year, 1025.

The Synod of Arras.

SOme Time after there appear'd in Flanders another Sect of Hereticks, which was likewise condemn'd in a Synod held at Arras, A. D. 1025. on the Festival of Christmas, by Gerard Bishop of Cambray and Arras; for both these Cities had then but one Bishop. Gerard residing some Days in the latter, News was brought him, that certain Persons were arriv'd from Italy, who introduc'd a new Sort of Heresy, which ruin'd the Gospel Ordinances, and the Discipline of the Church; and that these Miscreants making Profession of perfect Righteousness, gave it out, that that alone was sufficient for the Justification of a Person, and that there was no other Sacrament in the Church for the attaining of Salvation.

Upon this Report, Gerard caus'd a strict Search to be made after those, who were suspected to be Maintainers of this Heresy; insomuch, that they were apprehended by the Governor's Order, and even brought before the Bishop, who being taken up at that Instant with other Affairs, after he had examin'd them for some Time concerning their Doctrine, and perceiv'd them to be in an Error, caus'd them to be confin'd during three Days, and order'd a Fast to be kept the next Day, by the Clerks and Monks who were there Present, that Almighty God might be implor'd to give Grace to those Miscreants to acknowledge their Errors. On the third Day, being Sunday, he held a Synod compos'd of the Abbots, Archdeacons, Monks and other Clergy, and caus'd the Prisoners to be brought forth in the Presence of the People: Then, after having made a Speech to the Assembly, he demanded of the Prisoners, what their Doctrine was, and who were their Teachers: They reply'd, that they were the Disciples of an Italian nam'd Gandulphus, who had instructed them in the Commandments of the Gospel, and of the Apostles; that they receiv'd no other Scripture, but that they observ'd that very strictly. The Bishop having heard it reported, that they abhorr'd Baptism; that they rejected the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ; that they gave it out, that Penance was altogether unprofitable; that they despis'd the Churches; that they condemn'd lawful Marriages; that they did not acknowledge any Eminency in the Confessors; and that they affirm'd, that none ought to be honour'd except the Apostles and Martyrs; he thought fit to interrogate them, and to give them Instructions about those Points. As to the first, they own'd, 'That their Master had taught 'them, that provided that they practis'd the Precepts of the 'Gospel; that they renounced the Vanities of the World; 'that they did not follow their Passions; that they got 'their Livelihood by the Labour of their Hands; that they 'did no Injury to any; and that they exercis'd Charity to-'ward those, who were animated with the same Zeal; it 'was not necessary to receive Baptism; that if the Perfor-'mance of these Duties were neglected Baptism would be 'unprofitable, and that altho' 'twere granted that it had 'some Efficacy; yet it was now become altogether useless 'and of none Effect for these three Reasons, viz. 1. Up-'on Account of the irregular Practices and Conversation 'of the Ministers. 2. Because the Sins which might have 'been remitted by Baptism, are committed again by Pro-'fessours during the whole Course of their Lives. 3. In 'regard that Infants are Baptis'd, who have neither Faith 'nor Free-will; who cannot desire Baptism, nor know 'what is meant by Faith or Free-Will; neither can the 'Profession of others avail them any Thing.

The Synod of Arras.

The Bishop reply'd upon that Article, 'That altho' Je-'sus Christ was perfectly Righteous, yet he condescended 'to receive Baptism from St. John; That he instituted it 'for the Regeneration and the Remission of Sins: That in 'this Sacrament the Holy Ghost operates invisibly in the 'Soul, what is done outwardly by the Water, on the Body; 'That altho' it be administer'd by worthy or unworthy Mi-'nisters, nevertheless it is always effectual; because it is the 'Holy Ghost who sanctifies, and the Iniquity of a Man can-'not hinder the Effect of the Operation of God: That whilst 'the Minister outwardly sprinkles the Body, the Soul is 'inwardly purify'd by the Operation of the Holy Ghost: 'That afterward Holy Unction is administr'd to the Infant, 'for its farther Sanctification after Baptism; by Reason 'that as Sin is remitted by Baptism, so Unction sanctifies 'the Person after Baptism: That the Imposition of Hands 'was also added, to procure the Descent of the Holy 'Ghost: That the necessity of Baptism is prov'd by the 'Doctrine of the Gospel and of the Apostles: That how 'Holy or Innocent soever, the Life of a Man may be, 'yet he cannot be sav'd without receiving this Sacrament: 'That Baptism takes away both Original and Actual Sins, 'and re-establishes Man in the same State of Uprightness, 'in which he was created, altho' it does not render him 'immortal: That the Example of the Man sick of the 'Palsey, whom our Saviour cur'd, having regard to the 'Faith of those Persons, who brought him into his Pre-'sence; and that of the Canaanitish Woman, who by 'Faith obtain'd a Cure for her Daughter, give us to un-'derstand, that the Faith of those who present an Infant 'to be Baptis'd, may stand it in some stead. Lastly, he demanded of them, for what Reason, they express'd so great Contempt of the Sacraments of the Church, who were so punctual in observing the Ceremony of washing their Feet? Neither does he insist less on the second Article, concerning the Mystery of the Eucharist, of which he explains the Effects, proving the real Presence of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, and answering the Objections that was made about the Impossibility, that the same Body should be present in divers Places, to which Purpose he relates a great Number of Miracles.

These Hereticks being convinc'd by his Discourse, acknowledg'd their Error, and sued for a Pardon: The Biſhop gave them ſome hopes of obtaining their Requeſt, and proceeded to the other Points of Diſcipline, to which they had no regard, viz. thoſe that related to the Churches, Altars, Sacred Orders, Unction, Exorciſms, Bells and Funeral Rites. After having vindicated the Cuſtoms of the Church as to theſe Matters, he endeavour'd to prove againſt them, the Uſefulneſs of Penance for the Living, and that of Prayer, good Works and Sacrifices for the Dead. He ſhews, 'That lawful Marriages is not forbidden by 'the Ordinances of the Goſpel: That the Confeſſors ought 'to be honour'd as well as the Martyrs: That the ſinging 'of Pſalms is not only allow'd of, but alſo commendable: 'That a due Veneration ought to be had for the Croſs, by 'referring that Worſhip to Jeſus Chriſt: That the Uſe and 'Adoration of the Images of our Saviour, and of the Saints 'is profitable; becauſe the Sight of them repreſents their 'Actions, and puts us in Mind of their Virtues. He concludes with diſcourſing of the Uſefulneſs and Diſtinctions of Sacred Orders, and about the Neceſſity of the Grace of Jeſus Chriſt.

Of the Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

Upon the Concluſion of this Diſcourſe, the Hereticks, who were preſent, declar'd, That they acknowledg'd the Truths, which the Biſhop of Arras had explain'd to them; inſomuch that a Form of a Confeſſion of Faith contrary to the Errors which were refuted by that Prelate, was immediately drawn up and recited by him and the reſt of the Clergy: Afterward they caus'd it to be explain'd in the Vulgar Tongue, by an Interpreter in Favour of theſe Hereticks, who did not well underſtand the Latin: Then they approv'd and ſign'd it, and were diſmiſs'd in Peace after having receiv'd Benediction from the Biſhop. The ſaid Gerard himſelf compil'd the Acts of this Synod, and dedicated them to one of his Neighbouring Biſhops whoſe name is mark'd by the Letter R prefix'd at the Beginning of the Epiſtle which he wrote to him, and who is apparently Reginald of Liege. Theſe Acts were publiſh'd by Father Luke Dacbery, in the thirteenth Tome of his Spicilegium, and may well be eſteem'd as one of the fineſt Monuments of thoſe Times.

Of the Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

The Council of Bourges, held in the Year, 1031.

The Council of Bourges, in the Year, 1031.

Aimo, Archbiſhop of Bourges, held a Council on the firſt Day of November, A. D. 1031. in that City, in which aſſiſted the Biſhops of Puy en Velay, Clermont, Alby, Cahors and Mande, with the Abbot of Micy and ſeveral others. Pope John's 18*th*. Letter was read concerning the Affair of St. Martial's Apoſtleſhip; proper Means were ſought for, to put a ſtop to the Civil Wars and to eſtabliſh Peace in the Kingdom, and the following Conſtitutions were rectify'd.

The firſt Ordains, That the Commemoration of St. Martial ſhall be made among the Apoſtles, and not among the Confeſſors.

The ſecond, That the Prieſt ſhall not keep the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, conſecrated under the ſame Hoſts longer, than from one Sunday to another.

The third imports, That the Biſhops ſhall not receive any Preſents upon Account of Ordinations, nor even their Officers, who were wont to take ſomewhat for Regiſtering the Names of thoſe Perſons, who were propos'd for Ordination.

The fourth, That none ſhall obtain an Archdeaconry, who is not a Deacon.

The fifth, That Prieſts, who cohabit with their Wives, ſhall only be Readers or Chanters for the future; and that Deacons and Subdeacons ſhall not be ſuffer'd to keep either Wives or Concubines.

The ſixth, That the Biſhops ſhall oblige them to take an Oath to that Purpoſe, at their Ordination.

The ſeventh enjoyns, That all thoſe who are employ'd in the Miniſterial Functions, ſhall have Eccleſiaſtical Tonſure; that is to ſay, their Beards ſhav'd, and the Crown made on their Heads.

The eighth, That the Sons of Deacons and Subdeacons, ſhall not be admitted into the Clergy.

The ninth, That Slaves ſhall not be ordain'd Clerks, till they have obtain'd Freedom of their Maſters.

The tenth, That ſuch Perſons ſhall not be look'd upon as the Sons of Clergymen, as were born after their Fathers quitted the Eccleſiaſtical State, and return'd to that of Laicks.

The eleventh, That the Biſhops ſhall declare at the Time of Ordination, that they excommunicate thoſe who ſhall preſume to preſent to them any Sons of Clergymen or Slaves to be ordain'd, and that Perſons under ſuch Circumſtances, who have got their Ordination by ſurpriſe, ſhall be depos'd.

The twelfth, That nothing ſhall be exacted for the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm and Penance, nor for burying the Dead; nevertheleſs that it ſhall be permitted to receive whatever the Faithful ſhall think fit to beſtow voluntarily upon thoſe Occaſions.

The Council of Bourges, in the Year, 1031.

The thirteenth Orders, That the Prieſts ſhall have the Offerings, and the Funeral Torches, which are preſented to them, but that the Paſchal-Taper ſhall remain to give Light to the Altar.

The fourteenth, That Linnen Cloths which have ſerv'd to cover dead Bodies, ſhall not be laid on the Altar.

The fifteenth, That no publick Meetings ſhall be held on Sundays for the Management of Secular Affairs, unleſs they be call'd to perform Works of Charity, to oppoſe the Inſults of Enemies, in caſe of Danger, or to tranſact Buſineſs upon ſome other emergent Occaſion.

The ſixteenth ordains, That thoſe Perſons who leave their Wives, except upon Account of Adultery, ſhall not marry others as long as the former are living, nor the Women other Husbands in the like Caſes.

The ſeventeenth, That no Man ſhall take to Wife a Relation to the ſixth or ſeventh Degree of Conſanguinity.

The eighteenth, That none in like Manner ſhall be permitted to marry his Kinſman's Wife.

The nineteenth, That no Man ſhall give his Daughter in Marriage to any Prieſt, Deacon or Subdeacon, nor to their Sons.

The twentieth, That none ſhall marry their Daughters.

The twenty firſt imports, That Lay-men ſhall not enjoy Eccleſiaſtical Benefices.

The twenty ſecond, That Laicks ſhall not put Prieſts in their Churches without the Approbation of the Biſhop.

The twenty third, That thoſe Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, who renounce their Clerkſhip or Miniſterial Functions, ſhall be ſeparated from the reſt of the Clergy.

The twenty fourth, That Monks, who quit their Habit, ſhall be depriv'd of the Communion of the Church, till they have reſum'd it; and if the Abbots or Monks refuſe to re-admit them, they ſhall reſide with the Clerks in Churches or in other Monaſteries, wearing the Habit of Monks and obſerving the Monaſtick Rule.

The twenty fifth, That neither the Canons nor Monks ſhall paſs from one Church or from one Monaſtery to another, without a Licence from the Biſhop or Abbot.

After the Seſſion of this Synod, Aimo made a Declaration, that St. Martial ſhould be ſtyl'd an Apoſtle in all the Church-Offices.

The Council of Limoges held in the Year, 1031.

The Council of Limoges in the Year, 1031.

THE ſame Queſtion was debated at large in the Council of Limoges, aſſembled eighteen Days after in the Church of that City, where the greateſt Part of the Prelates who had aſſiſted in the Council of Bourges, were preſent, with Jourdain Biſhop of Limoges, Iſambert of Poitiers, Arnold of Perigueux, Robon of Angouleſme and ſome others. There were only two Seſſions, viz. the firſt on the 18*th*. Day of November, and the other on the 19*th*. In the former after many Debates, the Apoſtolical Dignity was confirm'd to St. Martial.

In the ſecond, after having obſerv'd, that different Cuſtoms might be in Uſe in ſeveral Churches, the Conſtitutions made in the Council of Bourges were read; and the ſecond, concerning the renewing of the Hoſt every Sunday was alter'd, becauſe 'twas judg'd ſufficient that they ſhould be renew'd twelve Times a Year. Afterward the Affair of the Abby of Beaulieu was propos'd, which was poſſeſs'd by a ſecular Abbot: He was ſummon'd to the Synod, and after he had conſented that it ſhould be reform'd according to the Rule, 'twas ordain'd that the Biſhop of Limoges ſhould place a regular Abbot therein, before the Feſtival of Chriſtmas. This gave Occaſion to treat of the Monaſtick Regularity in the Council: The Biſhop of Limoges was very well ſatisfied with the Conduct of the Abbots and Monks of his Dioceſs, and only complain'd of one Abbot, who had ſuffer'd a certain Viſcount, excommunicated by the Biſhop and deceaſed without Abſolution, to be interr'd in his Church: The Abbot vindicated himſelf; alledging, That it was done without his Knowledge by the Soldiers of that Viſcount, who bury'd him themſelves; but that as ſoon as he was inform'd of the Matter of Fact, he caus'd his Corps to be dug up, and to be laid without the conſecrated Ground. The Biſhop of Cahors related an Accident of the like Nature, which happen'd in his Dioceſs. Then the Prelates of the Council proceded to find out Means to oblige the great Lords and Noblemen to make Peace

The Council of Limoges in the Year, 1031.

Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

Peace one with another, and Excommunication and Suſpenſion from Divine Service were propos'd to that End. The Monks of St. Martial had their Cuſtom confirm'd of adminiſtring Baptiſm on the Feſtivals of Eaſter and Whitſuntide; and the Abbots had a Privilege granted them to have a Chaplain and three Deacons aſſiſting at their Celebration of Maſs, on the ſolemn Feſtivals: The Canons againſt incontinent Clergymen and Simoniacal Practices were reviv'd; and the time of Ordination was fix'd on the four Ember-Weeks. Upon a Remonſtrance, that divers Perſons excommunicated by their Biſhops for notorious Crimes, went to Rome and receiv'd Abſolution from the Pope; the Biſhop of Puy en Velay reported, that ſome Years ago, the Count of Clermont being excommunicated by the Biſhop, for leaving his lawful Wife to marry another, made a Journey to the Court of Rome, where he obtain'd Abſolution of the Pope, who had no Notice of the Sentence of Excommunication paſs'd againſt him: That the Biſhop having made a Complaint, the Pope return'd for Anſwer, That he ought to blame himſelf for what had happen'd, by reaſon that he never gave him any Information that the Count was excommunicated; the Pope added, That if he had known it, he would have confirm'd the Biſhop's Sentence, becauſe he makes Profeſſion to aſſiſt his Brethren in every Thing, and not to oppoſe them; that he ſhould be very ſorry, to hear of any Schiſm or Miſunderſtanding between him and them; and that therefore he abrogated and made void the Penance and Abſolution, which he had granted to that excommunicated Perſon, by whom he was ſurpriz'd, and who ought to expect nothing but a Curſe, till he has made Satisfaction and has been duely abſolv'd by his Dioceſan.

Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

This Narrative makes it appear, That theſe Sorts of Abſolutions were often ſurreptitiouſly got of the Popes, as it may be further evinc'd from another Paſſage of the like Nature, which happen'd at Angouleſme; where a certain excommunicated Perſon, who could not obtain Abſolution, by reaſon that he was unwilling to make Satisfaction, preſented to his Biſhop a Letter from the Pope, in which he intreated him to admit the ſaid Perſon to the Penance which he had enjoyn'd: The Biſhop, without being ſurpriz'd, reply'd, That he did not believe that that Order came from the Pope, and that it ſhould not be ſerviceable to the Offender, who ſhould remain under the Sentence of Excommunication, till he had accepted of, and done the Penance, that ſhould be impos'd on him by himſelf or by his Archdeacon by his Order. Upon theſe Conſiderations, the Biſhops unanimouſly declar'd, That the Pope had indeed a Right to confirm, augment or diminiſh the Penance enjoyn'd an Offender by his Dioceſan, or even to impoſe it on thoſe whom the Biſhops ſhould nominate for that Purpoſe; but that he had no Power either to impoſe Penance or to grant Abſolution, in reſpect of an excommunicated Perſon, without conſulting the Dioceſan. And that it was his Office, rather to confirm than to diſannul the Sentences of the other Biſhops; in regard that if the Members ought to follow their Head, the Head alſo ought to take Care not to oppreſs the Members: The Acts of this Council are very large, and contain a great Number of Matters of Fact, Authorities and Arguments, relating to the Affair of St. Martial, which are of no very great Moment.

Divers Councils held in France, A. D. 1040.

Councils held in France.

MAny other Councils were conven'd at the ſame Time in divers Provinces of France, particularly in Aquitaine, Burgundy and Lyonnois for the reeſtabliſhing of Peace and Church-Diſcipline. Effectual Means were chiefly ſought for therein, to put a Stop to the Civil Wars, publick Robberies and Outrages that were committed, more eſpecially in reference to the Church-Revenues and Clergy. It was ordain'd in all theſe Councils, that the People ſhould abſtain from eating Fleſh on Fridays and Saturdays, and from drinking Wine on Fridays; that thoſe who were deſirous to be exempted, for ſome lawful Cauſe, ſhould be oblig'd to maintain their indigent Perſons on thoſe Days; and that in Conſideration of this Abſtinence, Offenders ſhould be diſcharg'd from other Penances, provided that they bound themſelves by an Oath to obſerve it. However ſome Biſhops oppos'd this Conſtitution, and among others Gerard Biſhop of Cambray, who maintain'd, That that Yoke ought not to be laid equally on all People, becauſe there were ſome who were not able to undergo it, by Reaſon of the Weakneſs of their Bodies; neither perhaps did their Tranſgreſſions deſerve ſo ſevere a Chaſtiſement; and there were others, in Reſpect of whom, this Satisfaction is not proportioned to the Hainouſneſs of their Offences: That it were more expedient to follow the Canonical Rules in the impoſing of Penances; and that much leſs ought the People to be conſtrain'd by an Oath to obſerve this Abſtinence; ſince that were by ſuch Means to expoſe them not only to the Hazard of breaking a Commandment, but alſo of incurring Perjury. The ſame Prelate did not think fit that the Biſhops ſhould be concern'd in Military Affairs, and the bearing of Arms; ſaying, That it is the Province of Kings to take Cognizance of thoſe Matters, and not that of Clergymen.

Councils held in France.

'Tis a Thing very obſervable, that a great Number of Bodies of Saints and Abundance of Relicks were brought into thoſe Councils, and that 'twas generally believ'd, that many Miracles were wrought therein: There were alſo held at the ſame Time divers other particular Councils, either for the Dedicating of Churches, or for the granting of Privileges to Monaſteries, or for the determining of private Differences among the Biſhops, about the Limits of their Dioceſſes, or to put an End to other Conteſts, which are mention'd by the Writers of that Time, but do not deſerve to be inſiſted upon in this Place.

The Council of Rheims, held in the Year, 1049.

Council of Rheims.

HErimar, Abbot of St. Remy at Rheims, having invited over Leo IX. to conſecrate his new Church, that Pope arriv'd there in the Month of October, A. D. 1049. accompany'd with the Archbiſhops of Triers, Lyons and Bezanſon, and the Biſhop of Porto, and after having perform'd the Ceremony, and that of the Tranſlation of the Body of St. Remy to this new Church, he held a Council therein, which continu'd during ſome Days: It was compos'd of the Archbiſhops of Rheims, Triers, Lyons and Bezanſon; of the Biſhops of Soiſſons, Teronane, Senlis, Metz, Langres. Coutances, Liſieux, Bayeux, Auranches, Verdun, Nevers, Angers, Nantes and Porto, and of a Biſhop of England, with divers Abbots and other Clergymen, to the Number of fifty. Peter Deacon of the Church of Rome open'd the Council, declaring, That it was requiſite to treat about the Reformation of many Abuſes which had crept into the Churches of France, particularly Simony, the ſeizing of Churches by Laicks, forbidden Marriages, the Apoſtacy of Clerks and Monks, &c. But above all Things, he admoniſh'd the Biſhops to declare under Pain of an Anathema, whether they were ordain'd for Money or otherwiſe: The Archbiſhops of Triers, Lyons and Bezanſon, proteſted that they were not, but the Metropolitan of Rheims deſired Time to return an Anſwer: Among the Biſhops there were only four, who were not able to clear themſelves, viz. thoſe of Langres, Nevers, Coutances and Nantes. The Abbots being ask'd the ſame Queſtion, many of them proteſted themſelves innocent, and others own'd their Fault by their Silence. The Abbot of Poitiers was accuſed of Incontinency by the Biſhop of Langres, and not having ſufficiently clear'd himſelf, was depos'd. In the End of this Seſſion, it was prohibited under the Penalty of an Anathema to attribute the Title of Univerſal Primate of the Church to any but the Biſhop of Rome.

Council of Rheims.

The next Day, the Archbiſhop of Rheims after having had a private Conference with the Pope and ſome other Prelates, entreated the Biſhop of Senlis to ſpeak in his Favour, who accordingly declar'd that the Archbiſhop was not guilty of Simony; but the Pope order'd that he ſhould clear himſelf by Oath; whereupon he ſued for longer Time, which was granted, on Condition that he ſhould appear in a Council to be held at Rome in the middle of April in the following Year. The Determination of the Cauſe that was depending between that Archbiſhop and the Biſhop of Toul, about the Abby of Monſtier-Randy, was referr'd to the next Day. Afterward certain Clerks of the Church of Tours, brought an Accuſation againſt the Biſhop of Dol for aſſuming the Quality of Archbiſhop, and withdrawing himſelf with the ſeven Biſhops of Bretagne from the Juriſdiction of the Metropolitan of Tours: It was order'd that he ſhould be ſummon'd to the Council of Rome, in the Month of April following. Then the Biſhop of Langres was accuſed of Simony, of bearing Arms and committing Murders, of tyrannizing over his Clergy, and of perpetrating other more notorious Crimes: One of his Clerks depos'd, that the ſaid Biſhop took away his Wife, whom he had whilſt he was as yet a Layman, and after having abus'd her, made her a Nun: A certain Prieſt gave in Evidence, that he caus'd him to be kept in Cuſtody under a Guard and to endure much Hardſhip, on Purpoſe to extort Money from him. The Biſhop of Langres demanded Counſel, and made Application to the Archbiſhops of Lyons and Bezanſon: The latter going about to plead for him, falter'd in his Speech, and the other acknowledg'd, that the Biſhop had expos'd the ſacred Orders to Sale, and exacted a Sum of Money of that Prieſt, but deny'd that he caus'd him to be miſ-us'd. Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

On the third Day, the Biſhop of Langres not daring to appear, and being ſummon'd thrice, and ſought for to no Purpoſe, was at laſt excommunicated. The Biſhop of Nevers own'd, that his Relations had given a Sum of Money for his Biſhoprick, but that he was altogether ignorant of what they had done; nevertheleſs he declar'd, that he deſign'd to leave it, and even at the ſame Time laid down his Croſier-Staff at the Pope's Feet, who caus'd him to take it up again, after he had taken an Oath, that that Money was paid without his Knowledge. Then an ancient Copy of a Privilege granted to the Church of Rheims was read, which made it appear, that the Abby of Monſtier Randy belong'd to its Juriſdiction, and it was accordingly adjudg'd to that Church. The Biſhop of Coutances confeſs'd, that his Brother had laid out a Sum of Money to get him advanc'd to the Epiſcopal Dignity; but having taken an Oath, that it was done without his Knowledge, he was declar'd innocent. The Biſhop of Nantes was not ſo favourably treated; for having own'd that he ſucceeded his Father in his Biſhoprick, after having disburs'd a certain Sum of Money, he was depos'd, and only permitted to exerciſe the Office of a Prieſt. Laſtly, a Sentence of Excommunication was denounc'd againſt the Prelates who were ſummon'd to this Council but did not appear, and the following Conſtitutions were agreed upon, viz. Councils held in the Eleventh Century.

1. That none ſhall be promoted to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, but by the Election of the Clergy and People. 2. That none ſhall buy or make Sale of the Sacred Orders, Eccleſiaſtical Offices or Altars. 3. That Laicks ſhall not retain Spiritual Livings. 4. That none but the Biſhop or ſome Perſon deputed by him ſhall be impower'd to levy any Sums of Money within the Precincts of the Churches. 5. That nothing ſhall be exacted for burying the Dead, or for adminiſtring the Sacraments of Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper. 6. That Clergymen ſhall not bear Arms, nor go on Warfare. 7. That no Clerk nor Layman ſhall lend Money upon Uſe. 8. That the Monks and Clerks ſhall not quit their Profeſſion. 9. That none ſhall offer Violence to Clergymen as they are travelling. 10. That there ſhall not be ſuffer'd any Manner of Oppreſſion of the Poor. 11. That no Man ſhall take to Wife any of his near Relations. 12. That it ſhould be prohibited to leave a lawful Wife, in order to marry another. Laſtly, all thoſe Perſons were excommunicated, who ſhould protect or hold Correſpondence with the new Hereticks of France, the Sodomites and certain Lords, who had contracted forbidden Marriages and aſſaulted ſome Biſhops and other Clergymen.

The Council of Tours, held in the Year, 1060.

Council of Tours.

THE Cuſtom being now introduc'd, that the Councils for the Reformation of Church-diſcipline, ſhould be held in the Preſence, or by the Authority of the Legates of the See of Rome; Stephen Cardinal and Legate of Pope Nicholas II. call'd one A. D. 1060. at Tours, in which it was ordain'd,

1. That all thoſe Perſons who give Money for any Eccleſiaſtical Dignity, ſhall be depriv'd of it for ever.

2. That if any Biſhop or Patron confer Benefices for Money, the Clerks ſhall be allow'd to oppoſe their Proceedings, and to have Recourſe to the Arbitration of the neighbouring Biſhops; nay, even to appeal from them to the See of Rome.

3. That no new Benefice can be ſold, nor any Church-Revenues alienated.

4. That none ſhall purchaſe any Spiritual Livings of Laymen.

5. That the ſame Perſon cannot enjoy two Benefices in different Churches.

6. That the Biſhops, Prieſts and Deacons, who knowing the Prohibition made by Pope Nicholas, do not forbear the Exerciſe of their Miniſterial Functions, when they have been engag'd in a ſcandalous Converſation with Women, or who ſhall refuſe to deſiſt for the Future, after having receiv'd Information of that Prohibition, ſhall be depos'd without a Poſſibility of Reſtoration. Council of Tours.

7. That Clergymen who bear Arms, ſhall be depriv'd of their Benefices and Dignities.

8. That Laicks, who preſume to ſell or diſpoſe of the Church-Revenues ſhall be excommunicated.

9. That thoſe Men who marry their Kinſwomen, or thoſe Women who keep an unchaſt Correſpondence with their Kinſmen, and refuſe to leave them, or to do Penance, ſhall be excluded from the Communion of the Faithful, and turn'd out of the Church.

10. That thoſe Monks who quit the Monaſtick State, ſhall likewiſe be ſeparated from the Communion of the Church as Apoſtates.

The Council of Soiſſons, held in the Year, 1092.

Council of Soiſſons.

Roſcelin, a Clerk of the Church of Compiegne, and a very able Logician, gave it out in the End of the Eleventh Century, That the three Divine Perſons of the Holy Trinity were three Things: This Opinion was condemn'd in a Council held at Soiſſons, A. D. 1092. under Raynold Archbiſhop of Rheims, and confuted by St. Anſelm, by Ives of Chartres, and even by Abelard, who is reputed to have been his Pupil. Roſcelin was oblig'd to make an Abjuration of his Error in that Council, but afterward he did not forbear to maintain it obſtinately, and for that Reaſon was baniſh'd from France and England. Theobald, a Clerk of the Church of Etampes likewiſe wrote a Letter againſt him, on another Subject, viz. to ſhew, That the Sons of Prieſts may be admitted into the Clergy. Council of Soiſſons.

Divers Councils held in Normandy.

The Council of Rouen, conven'd, A. D. 1050.

Council of Rouen.

Maugier, Archbiſhop of Rouen, held a Council in that City, A. D. 1050. with Hugh Biſhop of Evreux, and Robert of Coutances, in which he drew up a Letter directed to the Biſhops and Faithful of his Province, containing the following Conſtitutions, viz.

1. That the Articles of Faith, compris'd in the Creed of the Catholick and Apoſtolick Church, ought to be firmly adher'd to.

2. That no Preſents ſhall be made to Princes, nor to their Officers for the obtaining of Biſhopricks.

3. That the Biſhops ſhall not covet to be tranſlated from one See to another, out of a Principle of Ambition.

4. That the Monks ſhall not cauſe themſelves to be made Abbots for Money.

5. That one Biſhop ſhall not diſpoſſes another, nor one Abbot another.

6. That the Biſhops ſhall not exact any Thing for Ordinations.

7. That their Officers, that is to ſay, their Archdeacons or Secretaries ſhall not in like manner demand any Thing upon that Account.

8. That no Perſon ſhall be ordain'd who is not of a competent Age, and who has not made a ſufficient Progreſs in Learning. Council of Rouen.

9. That a Biſhop ſhall not ordain a Clerk of another Dioceſs without the Permiſſion of his Dioceſan.

10. That the Biſhops ſhall not beſtow the Revenues, Lands and Benefices of the Clergy on Laicks.

11, 12, and 13. That Clergymen ſhall not endeavour to ſupplant one another.

14, 15, and 16. That nothing ſhall be exacted for the Holy Chriſm, nor for the Conſecration of Churches, nor for the Adminiſtration of Baptiſm.

17. That on the eight Days, during which new baptized Perſons wear the * Albe, they ſhall be obliged only to offer their Wax-Tapers and the Linnen with which their Heads were cover'd, by reaſon of the Holy Chriſm. * A Sort of Veſtments worn by Popiſh Prieſts.

18. That the Penance impos'd on Offenders, ſhall neither be augmented nor diminiſh'd for Money.

19. That the new baptized Perſons ſhall ſpend eight Days in wearing the Albes, and holding lighted Tapers in the Church, where they were baptized.

The

The Council of Lisieux, held A. D. 1055. and that of Rouen in 1063.

Council of Lisieux.

THE Archbishop of Rouen, under whom the preceding Council was held, was depos'd, A. D. 1055. in another Council conven'd at Lisieux, in the Presence of Stephen Bishop of Sion in Switzerland, the Pope's Legate, which consisted of the Bishops of that Province. He was accus'd of having robb'd his Church, of consuming its Revenues in unprofitable Expences, and of dissipating Part of them to Largesses only to satisfie his Ambition: He was also suspected to be guilty of infamous Crimes, and was censur'd for not shewing a due Respect to the See of Rome: He was apparently culpable, but that which chiefly brought upon him this Condemnation, was the Displeasure of Duke William his Nephew, who was incens'd against him, because he had excommunicated that Prince upon Account of his Marriage with the Princess Mathilda his Kinswoman, the Daughter of Baldwin Count of Flanders, and favour'd the Party of Duke Arques his Brother: Therefore the Duke banish'd him immediately after his Condemnation, to the Isle of Guernsey, and caus'd Maurillus, a Monk of Fecamp, to be substituted in his Room. The latter was zealous in endeavouring to re-establish the Church-Discipline and to reform the Corruption of Manners: To which Purpose he call'd divers Synods, and made some Constitutions. In that which was held by him at Rouen, A. D. 1063 for the Dedication of the Cathedral Church, the building of which was compleated at that Time, he publish'd a Confession of Faith against Berenger's erroneous Opinion, of which we have made mention elsewhere.

Council of Lisieux.

The Council of Rouen, held A. D. 1072.

Council of Rouen.

MAurillus dying A. D. 1069. Duke William caus'd John de Bayeux, Bishop of Auranches, to be chosen to supply his Place, and sent Lanfrank on Purpose to Rome, to get that Election confirm'd by the Pope. This Archbishop held a Council at Rouen in 1072. with his Suffragans; in which after having reviv'd the Creeds of the Councils of Nice, Constantinople, Ephesus and Chalcedon, they set forth twenty four Canons, relating to Church-Discipline.

The first imports, That the Bishop shall perform the Consecration of the Holy Chrism and of the Oils, after the Hour of † None, having at least twelve Priests for his Assistants.

† One of the Popish Canonical Hours.

The second, That the Archdeacons shall not content themselves, only with receiving some few Drops of the Chrism and consecrated Oil, to be mixt with the other Oil; as it is commonly practis'd in some Places by an Abuse, but that they shall present all their Chrism and Oil to the Bishop to be consecrated by him.

The third, That the Deans, being cloathed with Albes, shall distribute the Chrism and consecrated Oil with Reverence, and keep them in well stopt Vessels.

The fourth ordains, That none shall celebrate Mass without the Communion.

The fifth, That the Priests shall remain fasting and cloath'd with the Albe and Stole, when they go about to administer Baptism, unless in Case of Necessity.

The sixth, That the Viaticum or Holy Water, shall not be kept above eight Days; and that Hosts already consecrated, shall not be consecrated a second Time.

The seventh, That to confer Confirmation, 'tis requisite that the Bishop and those Persons who receive it should be fasting, and that Tapers be lighted.

The eighth, That sacred Orders shall be conferr'd in the Evening on Saturdays or Sunday Morning, if Saturday's Fast were not broken.

The ninth, That the Fast shall be exactly observ'd during the Ember-Weeks.

The tenth, That Clerks who have caus'd themselves to be ordain'd by Surprize, shall be depos'd.

The eleventh, That those who have receiv'd Crowns with Benediction, and presume to quit them, shall be excommunicated, till they have made Satisfaction; and that Clerks who are desirous to be ordain'd, shall repair to the Bishop on Fridays for that Purpose.

The twelfth enjoyns, That vagabond Monks, or such as have been turn'd out of their Monastery for some Misdemeanour, shall be constrain'd by the Bishop's Authority to return to them; but if the Abbots refuse to re-admit those whom they have expell'd, they shall be oblig'd to give them Alms, and to maintain them.

The thirteenth, That no Merchandise shall be made of Spiritual Livings.

The fourteenth, That no Marriages shall be solemniz'd privately, nor after Meals; but that the Bridegroom and Bride being fasting, shall be bless'd by a Priest in like Manner fasting; and that before he proceed to marry them, Enquiry shall be made, whether the Parties be not Relations in the seventh Degree of Consanguinity.

The fifteenth declares, That Priests, Deacons and Subdeacons, who are marry'd, cannot enjoy any Church-Revenues, nor dispose of them themselves, or by others.

The sixteenth, That a Man cannot marry a Widow, with whom he is suspected to have convers'd scandalously, in her Husband's Life-time.

The seventeenth, That a Man, whose Wife is vail'd a Nun, cannot take another, as long as she is living.

Council of Rouen.

The eighteenth, That a Woman cannot marry again, till she be certainly assur'd of her Husband's Death.

The nineteenth orders, That Clerks who have committed enormous and publick Sins, shall not be restor'd to their Dignities, till after a long Course of Penance.

The twentieth, That if any Clergyman be guilty of a Crime, for which he ought to be depos'd, his Diocesan shall summon such a Number of his Colleagues, as is requir'd by the Canons; that is to say, six for the deposing of a Priest, and three for that of a Deacon; and that those who cannot assist in Person, shall be permitted to send their Deputies to supply their Place.

The twenty first, That during the time of Lent, none shall take any Repast before the * Hour of None.

The twenty second, That on Saturday the Vigil of Easter-Festival, the Office shall not be begun before the Hour of None, by reason that it is the Nocturnal Office, which belongs to Easter-Sunday, and that no Mass ought to be said during the two preceding Days.

The twenty third, That if any Festival happens to fall on a Day, when it cannot be celebrated, it shall be transferr'd to another within the Octave.

The twenty fourth, That the solemn and general Baptism of adult Persons, shall be administer'd only at Easter and Whitsuntide, and not even on the Festival of the Epiphany, unless in Case of Necessity; but as for Infants, they may be baptiz'd at all times.

In the following Year, there happen'd a notable Quarrel between John de Bayeux the Archbishop, and the Monks of the Abby of St. Owen at Rouen: It was a customary thing for the Metropolitan of that City, to celebrate a solemn Mass in their Church on the Patron's Festival; Archbishop John having made them stay somewhat longer than ordinary, they began the Office without him; but he arriv'd when the Hymn call'd Gloria in excelsis was ended; and being incens'd, because they did not wait for him, he excommunicated all the Monks, caus'd the Divine Service to cease, and the Abbot of Seez, who was officiating, to depart from the Altar. By this Means a great Tumult was rais'd, during which one of the Monks, or one of their Servants, got up into the Steeple, rung the Alarm-bell, and cry'd out from the Top of the Tower, That the Archbishop was come to take away the Relicks of St. Owen: Whereupon the People were gathered together; some with Hatchets, and others with Staves; ran in Crowds to the Church; and broke in furiously; whilst others climb'd upon the Vaults: The Archbishop terrify'd with the Danger, retir'd toward the Church-doors, caus'd them to be shut, and made a Rampart of Seats and Benches against those who were in the Church. In the mean While his Attendants fell foul upon the Monks with Candlesticks and Staves, and the Monks on the other side, defended themselves as resolutely; till at last the Sheriff of the City being inform'd of this Tumult, and of the Danger to which the Archbishop was expos'd, came with his Guards and rescu'd him out of the Hands of the Rabble: The latter immediately wrote to King William about the Affair, and the Monks did the like on their Side. This Prince order'd, that the Archbishop should reconcile the Church, and upon his Refusal, caus'd it to be done by the Bishop of Auranches; nevertheless, to give Satisfaction to the Archbishop, some of the Monks were put into Prison, and others were dispers'd in divers Monasteries.

The Council of Rouen, held A. D. 1074.

Council of Rouen.

IN the Year 1074. the ſame Archbiſhop John, held another Council at Rouen with his Suffragans, in which he publiſh'd fourteen Canons.

The firſt imports, that to extirpate Simony, 'tis forbidden to buy or ſell any Sort of Benefice, whether it be an Abby, Archdeaconry, Deanry or Cure of Souls, and to exact any Thing for Admiſſion into Orders.

The ſecond, that Abbies ſhall only be beſtow'd on thoſe who are well vers'd in Matters of Church-Diſcipline, by the Means of a continu'd Practice of it for ſeveral Years.

The third, that the ancient Conſtitution ſhall be obſerv'd, which prohibits to entertain any Clerk, without a Letter of Recommendation from his Dioceſan.

The fourth, that ſeveral Orders ſhall not be receiv'd on the ſame Day.

The fifth, that the Subdeacons, Deacons and Prieſts, ſhall not be ordain'd but upon making a ſolemn Profeſſion, according to the Injunctions of the Council of Toledo.

The ſixth, that Monks or Nuns, who have fallen into any publick notorious Enormity, ſhall be excluded for ever from the Exerciſe of their Functions.

The ſeventh enjoyns, that the Monks and Nuns take care exactly to obſerve St. Benedict's Rule.

The eighth, that Clergymen who are ordain'd, ſhall be inſtructed in thoſe things which are expreſs'd in the eighth Canon of the eighth Council of Toledo.

The ninth, that Chriſtian Burial ſhall not be deny'd thoſe Perſons who die ſuddenly, if they do not actually lie under the Guilt of ſome notorious Crime: Nor to Women with Child, or newly brought to Bed.

The tenth, that no Credit ſhall be given to the Depoſitions of thoſe Perſons, who under a Colour of a Scruple of Conſcience, declare that they have had to do with the Siſters or Relations of their Wives, to have a Pretence to leave them, unleſs they bring ſufficient Proof of the Matter of Fact.

The eleventh, that they ſhall likewiſe be oblig'd to the ſame thing, who give it out that they did not receive all the inferiour Orders, when they were ordain'd Prieſts, on purpoſe to get an Opportunity to quit the Sacerdotal Functions. Council of Rouen.

The twelfth, that Clergymen degraded for their Miſdemeanours, ſhall not have the Liberty to lead a ſecular Life, as Laicks.

The thirteenth, that thoſe Perſons whoſe Marriage is declar'd null, becauſe it was contracted with near Relations, ſhall live continently till they be married to others.

The fourteenth, that the Chriſtians ſhall not have any Jews for their Slaves, nor any Jewiſh Women for their Nurſes.

Some time after, this Archbiſhop of Rouen falling ſick of a Palſey, King William the Conqueror demanded a Licence of Gregory VII. to ſubſtitute another Clerk in his Room. This Pope gave Orders to Hubert Subdeacon of the Church of Rome his Legate, with the Biſhops and Abbots of the Province, and the Clergy of the City of Rouen, to enquire whether John de Bayeux their Metropolitan were really uncapable any longer to perform the Epiſcopal Functions, and in caſe it appear'd ſo, that they ſhould exhort him to conſent to the Election of another Archbiſhop; but if his Diſtemper hinder'd him from giving ſuch Conſent, they might proceed to the Choice of a Perſon worthy of being advanc'd to that Dignity. Upon mature Deliberation, John being found uncapable was oblig'd to make a Reſignation in due Form, and retir'd to one of his Country-Houſes: The King caus'd William Abbot of St. Stephen at Caen, the Son of Radbodus Biſhop of Sees to be choſen to ſupply his Place. Pope Gregory diſapprov'd this Election, becauſe he was the Son of a Prieſt; but notwithſtanding his Prohibition, William was ordain'd, A. D. 1079. whilſt John was as yet living, who died ſome time after.

The Council of Lillebonne, held A. D. 1080.

Council of Lillebonne

William I. ſirnam'd the Conqueror, King of England and Duke of Normandy, caus'd a Council of the Prelates of Normandy to be held at Lillebonne in his Preſence, A. D. 1080. William Archbiſhop of Rouen preſided in this Synod, and divers Conſtitutions were made therein, againſt thoſe who married their Relations; againſt Clergymen, who had Wives; to prohibit Simoniacal Practices and Exactions for the Performance of Eccleſiaſtical Functions; concerning the Reſtitution of Revenues uſurp'd from the Churches; the Rights of Biſhops and Archdeacons; the Maintenance of Prieſts to ſerve the Churches that belong to Monks; and about the Puniſhments to be inflicted on Criminals and the Infringers of the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Laws. Council of Lillebonne

The Councils of the Province of Aquitaine.

The Council of Narbonne, held in the Year 1054.

Council of Narbonne

Geffrey, Archbiſhop of Narbonne, held in that City, A. D. 1054. a Council conſiſting of ten Biſhops, and made a large Ordinance concerning the Laws of Peace and Truce; in which he marks the Days on which it is forbidden to make War, as alſo the Perſons and Goods that ought to be free from. Inſults, even in the Time of War, who are more eſpecially Clergymen, Husbandmen and Merchants; with the Effects belonging to their reſpective Qualities. Council of Narbonne

The Council of Toulouſe, held A. D. 1056.

Council of Toulouſe.

POpe Victor II. having given Orders to Rambaldus Archbiſhop of Arles, and to Pontius Archbiſhop of Aix, his Vicars, to call a Council for the Extirpation of Simony, and the Reſtoration of Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline: They met together, A. D. 1054. at Toulouſe, with the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, and divers other Biſhops of France, and drew up thirteen Canons.

In the firſt it is decreed, That thoſe Perſons who receive Ordination for Money, ſhall be degraded from their Dignity, as well as they who ordain'd them.

In the ſecond, that a Biſhop, Abbot or Prieſt ſhall not be ordain'd till the Age of thirty Years, nor a Deacon till he has attain'd to that of twenty five.

In the third, that nothing ſhall be taken for the Dedication of Churches.

In the fourth, that nothing ſhall be given to obtain Eccleſiaſtical Benefices.

In the fifth, that they who turn Monks with a Deſign to get the Government of an Abby, ſhall never be promoted to that Dignity.

In the ſixth, that the Abbots ſhall govern their Monks according to St. Benedict's Rule, and that they ſhall not ſuffer them to enjoy any private Eſtate, nor to hold a Provoſtſhip or Superiority without their Conſent.

The ſeventh enjoyns Prieſts and Deacons to lead a ſingle Life.

The eighth, that Laymen ſhall not have any Spiritual Livings. Council of Toulouſe.

The ninth, that the Eſtates and Goods of deceaſed Perſons ſhall not be pillag'd, but that they ſhall be diſpos'd of according to their laſt Will and Teſtament.

The tenth ordains, that the Churches ſhall be oblig'd to pay the accuſtomed Duties to the Epiſcopal See, and that thoſe that do not pay any, ſhall allot the third Part of their Tithes and the Oblations, for the Uſe of the Biſhops and Clerks.

The eleventh, that in the Churches which belong to the Juriſdiction of Noblemen, the third Part of the Tithes, and the Offerings ſhall be reſerv'd for the Prieſts and Clerks, who officiate therein.

The twelfth denounces a Sentence of Excommunication againſt Adulterers and inceſtuous Perſons, as alſo againſt thoſe who are found guilty of Perjury.

The thirteenth orders the like Sentence to paſs upon thoſe who hold Correſpondence or Converſe with excommunicated Perſons, unleſs to reprove or admoniſh them.

The

The Councils of Germany.

The Council of Dortmund, held in the Year, 1005.

The Council of Dortmund.

IT is related by Dithmar the Historian, that a great Council was held at Dortmund in Westphalia July 7. A. D. 1005. in which the Emperor Henry II. complaining of the Irregularities in reference to Church-Discipline, induc'd the Bishops to revive the Ecclesiastical Laws, and to endeavour to reform the Exorbitances and corrupt Manners of the Clergy and Laity, by making Divers useful Canons: But the Acts and Constitutions of this Council are lost.

The Council of Dortmund.

The Council of Selingenstadt, held A. D. 1023.

The Council of Selingenstadt.

ARIBO, Archbishop of Mentz, held in the Year, 1023. a Council at Selingenstadt, compos'd of Burchard Bishop of Worms, Vernarius Bishop of Strasburg, Bruno of Augsburg, Eberhard of Bamberg and Meginhard of Wurtzburg, in which these Bishops made the following Constitutions, viz.

The first ordains, That Abstinence from eating Flesh shall be observ'd fourteen Days before the Festival of St. John, as many before that of Christmas, and on the Vigils of the Epiphany, of the Festivals of the Apostles, of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, of St. Laurence and of all the Saints.

The second, fixes the Ember-Weeks.

The third, denotes the Time, when the Solemnization of Marriages is forbidden, viz. from Advent till after the Epiphany, and from Septuagesima till after Easter, as also on the above specified Days of Abstinence, as well as the Vigils of the solemn Festivals.

The fourth imports, That a Priest who has drunk plentifully after the Cock-crowing in the Summer, or even in Winter, shall not be allow'd to say Mass the next Day, unless in case of Necessity.

The fifth, prohibits Priests to celebrate above three Masses in one Day.

The sixth, forbids under Pain of an Anathema that † Corporals should be thrown into the Fire to put a stop to the Conflagration.

† A Consecrated Linen Cloth in which the Chalice and Host are set in the Popish Churches.

The seventh ordains, That if two Persons suspected to have committed Adultery together, one confesses the Crime, and the other denies it, the Party who owns it shall be put to Penance, and the other shall clear himself by taking his Trial.

The eight, forbids the carrying of Swords into the Church, except the Sword of State.

The ninth, prohibits Meetings in the Church-yards.

The tenth, condemns the Custom of some Laicks, and more especially of certain Ladies, who contented themselves only to hear every Day the Gospel In principio, or to cause the Masses of the Trinity and of St. Michael to be said in their Presence; and ordains, That this shall not be done for the future, but in the proper Time: Otherwise if any Persons be desirous to hear a particular Mass, being mov'd by a singular Veneration for the Holy Trinity, and not by any superstitious Conceit; they shall hear a Mass for the Day, or one for the Consolation and Safety of the Living, or one for the Dead.

The Council of Selingenstadt.

The eleventh imports, That the first Degree of Consanguinity shall be reckon'd from the Cousins German.

The twelfth, That the Houses of Laicks which are contiguous to Churches shall be pull'd down, and that none shall be built in the Courts belonging to them, except those of Priests.

In the thirteenth, Laymen are forbidden to consign their Churches to Priests, without the Consent and Approbation of the Bishop or of his Grand Vicar.

The fourteenth imports, That two Persons being accus'd of having committed Adultery together, which they deny; if either of the Parties desire that they may both undergo a Trial, and if one be cast, they shall both be reputed guilty.

The fifteenth enjoyns, That the publick Fasts appointed by the Bishops shall be observ'd, or else that they shall be redeem'd by allotting a certain Largess for the Sustenance of poor People.

The sixteenth, That none shall take a Journey to Rome, without a Licence from the Bishop or his Grand Vicar.

The seventeenth, That no Priest shall retrench any thing from the forty Days Fast imposed on Penitents.

The eighteenth is against those who being guilty of enormous Crimes, refuse to receive Penance from their Diocesan, upon a Presumption, that going to Rome, the Pope will forgive all their Sins: The Council declares, that this Indulgence shall stand them in no stead, and that they ought at first to receive a Penance proportioned to the Heinousness of their Offences, after which they may go to Rome with the Permission and recommendatory Letters of their Diocesan.

In the nineteenth, Penitents are prohibited to Travel during the forty Days of their Fast.

The twentieth, forbids Priests to admit into the Church, such Persons as are not allow'd to enter therein, by Reason of their Crimes, without having receiv'd an Order from the Bishop.

These Canons are follow'd with a Form of Ceremonies to be observ'd, and Prayers to be said during the Session of a Synod.

The Council of Mentz, held, A. D. 1069.

The Council of Mentz.

SIgesroy or Sigefrid Archbishop of Mentz succeeded Luitbold, A. D. 1059. and govern'd that Church till 1084. He held a Council in 1069. at Mentz, in which the Emperor Henry IV. made a Proposal to divorce his Wife, by Reason that he could not have any Issue of her Body. Sigefrid inclin'd to his Opinion; but Peter Damien the Pope's Legate being arriv'd, and having prevented the Divorce, the Archbishop wrote to Alexander II. that he had prohibited the Emperor from Divorcing his Wife, under Pain of Excommunication; but that this Prince having alledg'd, that he could not have Carnal Copulation with her, and the Empress having own'd her Impotency, he found himself oblig'd to consult the Holy See, about so extraordinary a Case; that he was unwilling to pass Judgment on the Affair in a Council, which was called upon that Occasion, till he had receiv'd his Answer; and that he entreated him to send his Legates to examine and decide the Matter in Germany.

The Council of Mentz.

The Council of Mentz, A. D. 1071.

The Council of Mentz.

THE same Archbishop held another Council at Mentz, A. D. 1071. to enquire into the Ordination of Charles nominated to the Bishoprick of Constance: He was accus'd of Simony, and the Pope forbid Sigefrid to Ordain him Bishop; nevertheless the Emperor peremptorily requir'd it, and wrote to the Pope about the Affair, who referr'd the Examination of it to the Archbishops of Colen and Mentz. Whereupon they summon'd a Council, but the Emperor would not suffer it to be held, and took a Resolution to send Charles to Rome, to the End that the Pope might take Cognizance of the Matter and ordain him Bishop. Sigefrid prevented the Pope, and entreated him not to consecrate Charles, but if he found him Innocent, to send him back to him and to his Collegues, to receive Ordination from them. The Pope refusing to determine this Affair at Rome, sent him back to be examin'd in his own Country, and it was referr'd to the Council which Sigefrid held at Mentz in the Month of August, A. D. 1071. The Archbishops of Saltzburgh and Triers with nine Bishops of Germany assisted in this Synod, in which, Matters were debated during four Days between Charles and his Adversaries, till at last Charles fearing lest he should not be able to carry the Point, declar'd that he would not be Bishop contrary to the Inclination of those whom he was to govern, and deliver'd up his Ring and Crosier into the Emperor's Hands. The Acts of this Council, which were sent to the Pope and Sigefrid's Letters are still Extant.

The Council of Mentz.

The Councils of Erford, A. D. 1073.

The Councils of Erford.

IN the Year, 1073. there happen'd a Difference between Sigefrid and the Clergy of Thuringen, about the Tithes of that Province, which this Archbiſhop claim'd as his Right, and which were conteſted with him by the ſaid Clergy, more eſpecially by the Abbots of Fulda and Herfelt. The matter was debated in an Aſſembly held at Erford in the ſame Year, and determin'd by the Emperor to the Advantage of Sigefrid, who wrote about it to Hildebrand, and to Pope Alexander. The Hiſtory of this Council is written by Lambert, and we ſtill have Sigefred's two Letters, in the laſt of which, he makes mention of the Outrages committed againſt the Archbiſhop of Triers, declaring that he was taken away by Force, extremely abus'd, and at laſt ſhamefully put to Death.

The Councils of Erford.

The Councils of England.

The Council of Aenham, held in the Year, 1010.

The Council of Aenham.

KING Ethelred call'd a Council about the Year, 1010. in which Elphegus Archbiſhop of Canterbury and Ethelred Archbiſhop of York aſſiſted, and made a great Number of Conſtitutions concerning the Reformation of Manners and Church Diſcipline; Rules that ought to be follow'd by the Clerks and Monks; the Celebacy of Prieſts and other Clergymen; againſt ſuperſtitious Practices and Incontinency; about the Rights of Churches, particularly St. Peter's Pence, the Tribute of funeral Torches, which was paid thrice a Year, that of Burials, &c. concerning the Feſtivals and Faſts that ought to be obſerv'd, viz. the great Feſtival of the Virgin Mary, preceded by a Faſt; and the Feſtivals of the Apoſtles in like manner preceded by their reſpective Vigils, except that of St. James and St. Philip, when a Faſt is not to be kept, by reaſon of the Paſchal Solemnity; the Faſt of the four Ember-Weeks, and that on all Fridays: Concerning the Time, in which Marriages are forbidden to be ſolemniz'd, that is to ſay, the ſolemn Feſtivals; the Ember-Weeks; from Advent, to the Octave of the Epiphany, and from Septuageſima, to the End of the Fortnight after Eaſter: About the Interval that ought to be obſerv'd by Widows before they marry again, which is the ſpace of a Year: Laſtly, concerning frequent Confeſſions; the receiving of the Communion; and divers other Points of Morality. For the Ordinances of this Council contain many excellent Inſtructions and very prudent Exhortations: Foraſmuch as it was held under Elphegus Archbiſhop of Canterbury, it muſt needs be between the Year of our Lord, 1006. and 1013. There are two different Editions of the Acts of the Council of Aenham.

The Council of Aenham.

The Law of the Kings Ethelred and Canut.

The Council of the Kings Ethelred and Canut.

THE ſame Ethelred publiſh'd A. D. 1012. certain Laws, among which are ſome relating to Eccleſiaſtical Affairs; particularly, about the Payment of Peter's Pence; to oblige all the Faithful to Faſt three Days before the Feſtival of St. Michael; concerning the Prayers which ought to be ſaid in the Churches for the State, and about Alms-giving.

King Canut in like manner in the Year, 1032. caus'd divers Laws to be proclaim'd which relate to Church-Affairs, viz. concerning the exterior Religious Worſhip; the Peace of the Churches; the Reſpect due to Clergymen; unlawful Marriages; the Payment of Tithes, Peter's Pence and other Tributes; the Obſervation of Feſtivals, Sundays and Days of Abſtinence; the Functions and Manners of the Clergy and of the Faithful; and againſt Irregularities, Abuſes and Miſdemeanors. Theſe Laws are full of moral Maxims and Pious Exhortations; There are alſo ſome others of the like Nature enacted by King Edward III.

The Law of the Kings Ethelred and Canut.

The Council of London, held in the Year, 1075.

The Council of London.

'TWAS a long Time ſince any Councils were held, or any Conſtitutions made relating to Church-diſcipline in England, when Lanfranc was ordain'd Archbiſhop of Canterbury, neither could ſuch an Aſſembly be ſummon'd for ſome Time after, becauſe the King would not ſuffer any to be conven'd without his Permiſſion. At laſt he held a National Synod at London, A. D. 1075. in which Thomas Archbiſhop of York aſſiſted and eleven Biſhops of England, with the Biſhop of Coutances, who was admitted to the Council, becauſe he had a conſiderable Eſtate in this Kingdom: There were alſo preſent 21 Abbots in this Council, in which it was firſt ordain'd, that all the Biſhops ſhould take their Places according to the Antiquity of their Ordination, except thoſe who had a peculiar Privilege upon Account of the Dignity of their Sees; and after having ſought for thoſe who might lay claim to ſuch a Privilege in England, it was determin'd that the Archbiſhop of York ſhould be plac'd on the right Hand of the Metropolitan of Canterbury; the Biſhop of London on the left, and the Biſhop of Wincheſter next the Archbiſhop of York; and that in the Abſence of the latter, the Biſhop of London ſhould ſit on the right Hand of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and the Biſhop of Wincheſter on the Left. Afterward it was decreed, That all the Monks ſhould live according to St. Benedict's Rule; that they ſhould take care to inſtruct the Youth, and that they ſhould not have any private Poſſeſſions: Then three Epiſcopal Sees which were erected in Towns, were tranſlated to Cities, according to the Tenor of the third Conſtitution, and the ancient Injunctions were reviv'd, which prohibited to receive a Clerk who was Subject to the Juriſdiction of another Biſhop, without Letters of Recommendation from his Dioceſan, and to marry a near Kinſwoman. Simoniacal Practices, Witchcraft and Pagan Superſtitions were likewiſe forbidden, and the Celebacy of the Clergy was ſtrictly enjoyn'd.

The Council of London.

The Council of Wincheſter, held, A. D. 1076.

The Council of Wincheſter.

IN a Council held the next Year at Wincheſter, Lanfranc caus'd divers Canons to be drawn up againſt Perſons guilty of Simony; for the Celebration of Provincial Councils; the Subjection of Clerks to their Biſhops, and the Payment of Tithes; concerning the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments and Divers other Points of Diſcipline, among which the following are more eſpecially remarkable, viz.

That the Altars ought to be made of Stone: That the Maſs cannot be celebrated with Beer or Water: That Divine Service ſhall not be perform'd in Churches till they be conſecrated by the Biſhops: That none ſhall be bury'd in the Churches: That the Bells ſhall not be Rung during the Canon of the Maſs: And that the Chalices ſhall not be made of Wax nor Wood. Conſtitutions were alſo made about the Time of Penance for Divers Crimes.

The Council of Wincheſter.

The Council of London, held A. D. 1102.

The Council of London.

ARchbiſhop Lanfranc continued to celebrate divers other Councils in England in his Life-time, the Canons of which are not as yet come to our Hands; but after his Death, much time paſs'd ere any could be conven'd, and St. Anſelm his Succeſſor in vain importun'd the Kings of England to that Purpoſe, till at laſt he held a ſolemn Synod at London, A. D. 1102. the Conſtitutions of which were tranſmitted to us by Eadmer: The Archbiſhop of York and twelve Biſhops of England aſſiſted in this Council, and made the following Conſtitutions.

By the firſt, They condemn'd Simony, and depos'd ſeveral Abbots, who were convicted of that Crime.

The ſecond, Forbids Biſhops to exerciſe the Functions of Civil Magiſtrates, and enjoyns them to wear Habits ſuitable to their Profeſſion.

The Council of London.

In

The Study of Divinity in the Eleventh Century.

In the third, It is prohibited to let out Archdeaconries to Farm, or to confer them on any other Persons than Deacons.

The fourth, Revives the Constitutions about Celibacy.

In the fifth, Clergymen are forbidden to undertake the Management of secular Affairs, or to sit as Judges in Criminal Causes, and to drink in Victualling Houses or Places of publick Resort: They are also enjoyn'd to wear Habits of one single Colour, and to have their Crowns shav'd.

The seventh declares, That Tithes ought only to be paid to the Churches.

The eighth, Is a Prohibition to build new Chappels without the Consent of the Bishops, and without raising a sufficient Fund for the Maintenance of the Priest and Church.

In the ninth, Abbots are prohibited to bear Arms, and enjoyn'd to reside in their Monasteries, with their Monks.

The tenth, Prohibits that Monks should administer Penance without the Consent of their Abbot, and that Abbots should impose it on other Persons than those, who are under their Tuition.

In the eleventh, Monks are forbidden to hold Farms; to stand as God-fathers; to get Churches into their Possession without the Consent of the Bishops; or to take the Revenues of those that are granted to them, without allowing a competent Maintenance for the Priests who serve in them, and a sufficient Fund for the keeping them in Repair.

The Study of Divinity in the Eleventh Century.

The twelfth, Declares the Promises of Marriage, made without Witnesses, to be Null, if it be deny'd by one of the Parties.

The thirteenth, Enjoyns the cutting of the Hair short, so that part of the Ears and the Eyes may be discover'd.

The fourteenth, Prohibits Marriages, to the seventh Degree of Consanguinity.

The fifteenth, Forbids to bury the Dead without the Bounds of their Parish, unless the accustomed Duties be paid to the Curate; and to honour their Memory, without the Bishop's Authority.

In the sixteenth, It is prohibited to make Merchandise of Men, by selling them for Slaves as it was often Practis'd. Lastly, Sodomy is forbidden under very severe Penalties, and this Case it reserv'd to the Cognizance of the Bishops. These Constitutions were confirm'd by the Authority of the See of Rome.

The Council of London, 1108.

In the Year 1108. St. Anselm held another Council at London, in which he made ten very rigid Canons against Priests and Deacons, who were marry'd or liv'd incontinently.

The Councils of Spain.

The Council of Leon, held A. D. 1012.

The Council of Leon.

FEW Councils were call'd in Spain in this Century, by Reason that Part of that Kingdom was then under the Dominion of the Moors. However, King Alphonsus held a notable Assembly at Leon, A. D. 1012 in which the Bishops drew up seven Canons.

The first imports, That Ecclesiastical Affairs shall be first treated of, at the opening of the Synods.

The second, That the Churches shall peaceably enjoy such Revenues as are left them by last Wills and Testaments, and that the Clergymen shall pass Judgment as to their Validity.

The third that Abbots, Abesses, Munks and Nuns shall be Subject to the Jurisdiction of their Diocesan Bishop.

The fourth ordains, That none shall seize on the Church-Revenues.

The Council of Leon.

The fifth, That the Kings Officers shall Prosecute those who have kill'd a Clergyman.

The sixth, That after having dispatch'd Ecclesiastical Affairs, the Bishops shall proceed to the Examination of those of the Kingdom.

The seventh, That none shall buy the Estate of a Vassal of the Church, and he who has done it, shall lose the Money he gave for the Purchase.

These Decrees are follow'd with forty others for the Advantage of the State, some of which nevertheless have reference to the Preservation of Ecclesiastical Revenues.

The Council of Coyaco, held A. D. 1050.

The Council of Coyaco.

SINCE the Time of King Alphonsus, we do not find that any Ecclesiastical Constitutions were made in Spain, till the Reign of Ferdinand I. King of Castille, who being desirous to revive the ancient Church-Discipline, which was for so long a time disus'd, call'd a Council in the Year 1050. at Coyaco, a Castle in the Dioceses of Oviedo, where the Bishop of that City assisted, together with eight other Bishops of Spain; and the following Constitutions were ratify'd by them.

The first ordains, That the Bishops shall govern their Dioceses, and perform their Ecclesiastical Functions with their Clerks, according to the Order of the Church.

The second, That the Abbots and Abbesses shall likewise govern their Monasteries according to St. Benedict's Rule, and shall be Subject to the Bishops; and that they shall not admit any Religious Persons of another Monastery, without the Permission of their Abbot or Abbess.

The third, That the Churches and Clergy shall be under the Jurisdiction of the Bishops, and not under that of Laicks: That the Churches shall not be divided, but that they shall be supply'd with Priests and Deacons, and furnish'd with Service-Books and Ornaments; so that there may be no need of wooden or earthen Chalices: That the Habits of the Priests during the Celebration of the Mass, by the Amict, the Albe, the Cincture, the Stole, the Chasuble and the Maniple; and those of a Deacon, the Amict, the Albe, the Cincture, the Stole, the Dalmatick and the Maniple: That the Altar be intirely made of Stone, and consecrated by the Bishop: That the Host be altogether of pure Wheat and without any Defect: That the Wine be likewise pure, and the Water clean; the Altar decently adorn'd and cover'd with a white Linnen Cloth, with a Corporal above and below the Chalice: That the Priests and Deacons shall not bear Arms; but that they shall always have the Crown of their Head and Beards shav'd: That they shall not keep any Women in their Houses; unless their Mother, Sister, Aunt or Mother-in-Law: And that they shall teach Children the Creed and the Lord's Prayer.

The fourth imports, That Persons guilty of Murder, Adultery, or any other sort of Uncleanness, shall be oblig'd to do Penance; and if they refuse to submit to it, they shall be separated from the Church and the Communion.

The fifth, That those whom the Archdeacon presents for Ordination, in the Ember-Weeks, shall be well vers'd in in the Psalter, the Hymns, the Canticles, the Epistles, the Gospels, and the Prayers: That the Priests shall not be present at Weddings to eat among the Guests, but only to give the Benediction: That the Clerks and Lay-men, who partake of the funeral Banquets, eating the Bread of the Deceased, shall do some good Work for their Souls, and that they shall invite the Poor and the Sick to these Banquets.

The Council of Coyaco.

The sixth, That all the Christians shall go to Church, on Saturday Evening and on Sunday Morning; that they shall assist on that Day at the Masses and the whole divine Service; that they shall do no servile Work, nor undertake any Journeys except for Devotion sake, or to bury the Dead and visit the Sick, or to put in Execution some private Order receiv'd from the Prince, or to defend themselves against the Saracens: And that the Christians shall not keep any Correspondence with the Jews.

The seventh, That the Counts or chief Magistrates shall govern the People with Justice; shall admit upon a Tryal, only the Evidence of Eye or Ear Witnesses; and shall severely punish false Witnesses.

The eighth, That Justice shall be administer'd in the Kingdoms of Leon, Gallicia, Asturio and Portugal, according to Alphonsus's Law, and in Castille, according to those of Sanchez.

The ninth declares, That the Triennial Prescription shall not take Place, in reference to the Churches.

The tenth, That he who has manur'd Land or cultivated a Vineyard, shall gather the Fruits with a Proviso, till the Point be debated by the Parties concern'd about the Propriety.

The eleventh imports, That all the Christians shall Fast on Fridays.

The twelfth, That those who have taken Sanctuary in the Churches; nay, even within thirty Paces of the Church, cannot be taken away from thence by Force.

The thirteenth, That the Subjects of the Kingdom shall be Obedient to their Prince, as they were to Alphonsus and Sanchez. These Constitutions were made in the Presence, and by the Authority of King Ferdinand and Queen Sanchia.

The Council of Elna in Rouſſillon, held A. D. 1065.

The Council of Elna in Rouſſillon.

TO theſe Councils may be join'd an Aſſembly of Biſhops and Counts, held in the Year 1065. at Elna in the County of Rouſſillon, where the Epiſcopal See of Perpignan was formerly fix'd: Divers Conſtitutions were made in this Council, for the Preſervation of Church-Revennes, and more eſpecially that which was call'd, The Truce of God.

The Council of Elna in Rouſſillon.

CHAP. XIV.

Obſervations on the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of the Eleventh Century.

Obſervations on the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of the Eleventh Century.

THE Study of Divinity, which was neglected in the preceding Age, was reviv'd in this Century; and many Perſons made publick Lectures of it in the Schools of the Cathedral Churches or of the Monaſteries. In the Beginning, they contented themſelves (according to the ancient Method) to relate the Explications of the Fathers on the Holy Scriptures, and Points of Doctrine were only treated of by the Way, and when ſome remarkable Occaſion induc'd them to do it. But in the End of this Century, they began to make Divinity-Lectures on the Doctrinal Points of Religion; to propoſe divers Queſtions about the ſacred Myſteries; and to reſolve them by the Principles of Ratiocination and according to the Logical Method. This was the Original of Scholaſtick Divinity, which became in a little after, the Principal and almoſt only Employment of thoſe, who ſtudied Matters of Religion.

Some of thoſe, who follow'd this Method, relying too much on their nice Ratiocinations, and departing from the plain manner of Diſcourſing us'd by the ancient Fathers of the Church, advanc'd ſome Erroneous Propoſitions. In this Century, Roſcelin, who was Profeſſor of Divinity at Compiegne, ſtarted a Propoſition about the Holy Trinity, which gave Offence to every Body; viz. That the three Divine Perſons were three Things; nevertheleſs 'tis not probable, that he deſign'd to maintain the Error of the Tritheites, or to admit three different Subſtances in God; and one may reaſonably ſuppoſe, that by thoſe three Things, he underſtood only three ſubſiſting and diſtinct Perſons, altho' of the ſame Nature.

But altho' no new * Hereſie ſprung up in this Age about the Myſteries of the Trinity and the Incarnation, yet there were divers in reſpect of the Sacraments and Church-Diſcipline. We have ſhewn that in the Beginning of the Century, certain Hereticks were diſcover'd at Orleans in Flanders, and at Toulouſe, who deny'd the real Preſence of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the Euchariſt; the Neceſſity of Baptiſm, and the Efficacy of the Sacraments; who rejected the Worſhip of Saints and Croſſes, and the Uſe of Images; who condemn'd lawful Marriages, and cenſur'd the moſt Part of the Ceremonies of the Church. Some time after, Berengarius divulg'd his Opinions about the Sacrament of the Euchariſt, which were condemn'd in divers Councils. The Controverſies that were debated in this Century, between the Greek and Latin Churches, have regard only to Points of Diſcipline, and particularly to the Uſe of unleavened Bread in the Communion. Lutheric Archbiſhop of Sens, is wrongfully accus'd of having deny'd the real Preſence of the Body of Jeſus Chriſt in the ſame Sacrament, in the Beginning of this Century; and 'tis falſly ſuppos'd that he was reprov'd by King Robert upon that Account: For Helgnad does not ſay, that he embrac'd that Opinion, but only that he was wont to make uſe of the Euchariſt, to try whether Perſons were unworthy or not, by ſaying to thoſe to whom he was ready to adminiſter that Sacrament, If you are worthy to receive it, draw near and take it: And that King Robert found great Fault with this Expreſſion, and reprov'd him very ſharply for it; but that Lutheric turn'd the Reprimand to his own Advantage.

* We have not thought fit in this Tranſlation, any where to omit the Words of the Author; who being of the Church of Rome, relates many things as Hereſies, which the Proteſtants eſteem not ſo: Wherefore we doubt not but the diſcreet Proteſtant Reader will always uſe his own Judgment.

Of the Rights of the Popes, and of the Church of Rome.

The Quarrels that broke forth between the Popes and the Emperors, caus'd very great Confuſions and Diſorders in the Church and the Weſtern Empire. During theſe Commotions, the Popes took an Occaſion to eſtabliſh their Temporal Sovereignty in Rome, and endeavour'd to make themſelves independent of the Emperors. Gregory VII. extended his Pretenſions yet farther, and us'd his utmoſt Efforts to perſuade the World, that he was rightful Sovereign of the whole Univerſe, as well in Civil as in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs: He was the firſt of the Popes, who attempted directly to diſpoſſeſs the Emperor and the Kings of their Dominions, and imagin'd that he had a Right to diſpoſe of them in favour of whomſoever he ſhould think fit to advance to that Dignity. As for the Spiritual Supremacy, he carry'd it beyond its due Bounds, and abrogated almoſt the whole Authority of the Biſhops, and the Liberties of particular Churches. The great Number of Legates of the See of Rome ſent abroad on all ſides, and the Power which they aſſum'd to themſelves, did not a little contribute to ruin the Authority of the Ordinaries, and was extremely Chargeable to the reſpective Churches: The Dignity of the Cardinals was augmented to the Detriment of that of the Biſhops, and they began to have the greateſt ſhare in the Election of Popes, and in the Managment of the Affairs of the Church: The Archbiſhops were oblig'd to receive the Pall, before they were permitted to exerciſe the Functions of their Order; and to conclude, the Court of Rome, under divers Pretences, got the Cognizance and Determination of all manner of Eccleſiaſtical Affairs.

Obſervations on the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs of the Eleventh Century.

Divers Points of Diſciplin concerning the Clergy.

The Simoniacal Practices, Marriage and Concubinage of Clergymen were repreſs'd, and their Career at laſt quite ſtopt by the means of a vaſt Number of Decrees: Some to palliate Simony, thought fit to diſtinguiſh the Temporal Revenue of Benefices from the Spiritual; and maintain'd, That in giving Money for a Benefice, they did not commit Simony, becauſe they purchas'd only the Temporalities. This gave Occaſion to determine, That it was Simony, to buy the Revenues annexed to Church Livings, the Functions of which were Spiritual: The famous Diſtinction of three Sorts of Simony, ab officio, a manu, a lingua was in Vogue at that Time: St. Gregory was the firſt who made the Remark, and it was reviv'd by Gregory VII. The Laicks who had Tithes in their Poſſeſſion, were mov'd by a ſcruple of Conſcience to reſtore them; but they often beſtow'd them on Monks, and apply'd them to the Founding of Monaſteries: The Biſhops oppos'd this Practice, and ordain'd that they cannot be given to Monaſteries: without the Permiſſion of the Dioceſans and of the Pope: However, the Monks did not forbear to retain thoſe that they had in their Poſſeſſion, nor even to accept of others, when offer'd to them. The Elections of Biſhops were ſtill in Uſe; but the Princes often nominated them, or caus'd thoſe to be choſen whom they thought fit to promote, and ſometimes the Popes took care to provide them, or ordain'd thoſe who were elected, when the Metropolitan refus'd to do it.

The Emperors and Kings ſtill had the Power of granting the Inveſtiture of Biſhopricks and Abbys; and this Right was not contеſted with them, till about the End of the Eleventh Century: The Plurality of Benefices began to be in Uſe, and was condemn'd by divers Conſtitutions: A great Number of Monks were promoted to the Epiſcopal Dignity, and ſome Biſhops left their Biſhopricks to retire to Monaſteries, after having obtain'd a Licence from the Pope. Many Biſhopricks were made Metropolitan Sees, and many others were newly erected. The Archbiſhop of Lyons was inſtituted Primate of France: In the End of the Century, the Biſhopricks of Arras and Cambray were ſeparated, and the Epiſcopal Sees of Gaſcogne, which had lain for a long time vacant, were fill'd up again. The Sons of the Clergy were declar'd unworthy to be admitted into Holy Orders; but this Decree was not generally receiv'd, nor without Oppoſition: For in many Places, the admiſſion into the Monaſtick State, or into the Order of Regular Canons, remov'd that Obſtacle. A great Number of Churches, Abbies and Monaſteries were then founded, and almoſt all the old Churches were demoliſh'd, to build new ones.

The Diſcipline of the Church, relating to Penance, was not ſo ſtrict nor ſo ſevere as in the preceding Century; for the Pilgrimages, the Abſolutions fetch'd from Rome, the Redemptions, the Diſciplining Whip and the Cruſades, contributed much to the Abeliſhing of the Injunction: Private Confeſſion was more eſpecially recommended. The Sentences of Excommunication were ſo frequent, that they became contemptible; and they were extended not only to Perſons actually excommunicated, but alſo to thoſe who convers'd or kept Correſpondence with them, even to the third Generation; a Practice which can ſcarce be met with in any other Age of the Church. The ancient Severity of the Canons, which ordain, that Clergymen guilty of of notorious Offences, more especially of Simony, should be suspended from their Office for ever, was no longer observ'd; but they were generally re-establish'd in the Functions of their Orders, and restor'd to their former Rights, by the Means of certain particular Ceremonies.

The Study of Divinity in the Eleventh Century.

Remarks on the Scourging, Discipline and Fasts.

The Use of the Disciplining Whip, unknown to all Antiquity, began in the End of this Century, having had its Opposers and Maintainers; the Custom of doing Penance for another, was likewise introduc'd at that Time. The Fasts on the four Ember-Weeks were strictly observ'd; but the Ember-Week of the Summer-Quarter, was not as yet fix'd; for some took it to be the second Week of the Month of June, and others referr'd it to the Week immediately following Whitsunday. Divers Councils ordain'd Abstinence from Flesh on Saturdays, and from Flesh and Wine on Fridays: In the former Ages of the Church, 'twas customary to fast on Fridays and Saturdays, till the Hour of None: The Church of Rome was wont to keep a Fast on Saturdays instead of Wednesdays: The Churches of France for a long time, observ'd the Fasts of Wednesday and Friday, but that Custom was abolish'd; neither was any Regard had even to Abstinence on those Days. A Constitution was made to that Purpose in this Century, for Friday and Saturday, although it met with some Opposition.

Observations on the Mass.

The Priests were forbidden to celebrate above one Mass in a Day, unless in Case of Necessity, or when it was requisite that one should be said for a deceased Person; for then they were allowed to say such a Mass, and that of the Day: Some Sorts of Penance were impos'd on Priests who let fall an Host through Carelessness: In some Churches 'twas customary to give a consecrated Host to the Priests on the Day of their Ordination, with which they communicated during forty Days. This Question was debated at that time, viz. Whether it were lawful for a Priest to celebrate Mass, without being attended with divers Assistants, and when he officiated in that Manner, whether he ought to say, Dominus vobiscum? All the Faithful were obliged to receive the Holy Communion at Easter, and it was still usually administer'd in all the Churches, under both Kinds: However, in some, the consecrated Bread was steept in the Wine; and perhaps the Canon of the Council of Clermont, which ordains, That both the Species should be receiv'd separately, was made against that Custom.

The general Commemoration of all the Dead, the next Day after the Festival of All-Saints, was instituted in the End of this Century: Odilo Abbot of Cluny, enjoyn'd it to his whole Order; and this Custom was introduc'd into the Church a little while after. It was ordain'd in the Council of Clermont, That the Office of the Virgin Mary should be said every Saturday, and there arose Disputes about the Festival of her Annuntiation, viz. Whether it ought to be celebrated on March 25. or on Dec. 18. but it was usually referr'd to the former: Some other Questions of less Importance were likewise started, and hotly debated, particularly, that about the Apostolical Dignity, attributed to St. Martial. The Benedictins of the Abby of Fleury, and those of Mount Cassin, had a long Contest for the Body of St. Benedict, the Founder of their Order, and the Monks of St. Dennis and of St. Emmeran at Ratisbon, in like Manner contended for that of St. Dionysius, or Dennis the Areopagite.

Observations on the Monastick Life

The Monastick State receiv'd very considerable Accessions and Advantages in the Eleventh Century. The Congregation of Cluny was much augmented by a vast Number of Monasteries newly founded, and by the great Revenues, with which it was endow'd; but the Increase of Riches occasion'd Remissness of Discipline; caus'd Ambition to be predominant, and immers'd the Monks in secular Affairs. A serious Reflection on these Irregularities induc'd many Persons to imbrace a more austere Sort of Monastick Life, and more conformable to that which is enjoyn'd in St. Benedict's Rule, and gave Occasion to the founding of several new Orders, who all made Profession to follow the same Rule made by St. Benedict; altho' they had their peculiar Customs. Thus St. Romuald founded that of the Camaldolites in Italy, in the Beginning of the Century. He became a Monk, A. C. 971. at the Age of 20 Years in the Abby of Classe in the Diocess of Ravenna, but perceiving the Disorders in which his Monastery was involv'd, and considering that the Engagement of the Monks in secular Affairs, was the Cause of their Irregularity, he put himself under the Tuition of a certain reverend Hermit nam'd Marinus, who resided in the Territories of Venice, and imbrac'd the Hermetick Life, which he re-establish'd in the Western Countries. Their Institution was not to live alone, as the ancient Hermits, but to dwell together in the same Place, separated from other Men, and in distinct Cells, under the Government of the same Superior, and observing the same Rule: These Sorts of Monasteries were anciently call'd Laur, and St. Romuald founded a very great Number of them in Italy: One of the most famous, was that which was built on Mount Apennin near Arezzo, in a Place which was given them by a certain Person nam'd Camaldoli, from whence the Order took the Name of Camaldoli: St. Romuald liv'd 100 Years after he had taken upon him the Vows of Religion, and saw his Order in a flourishing Condition. Peter Damien in like Manner instituted a Congregation of Hermits of the same Kind: These Hermits practis'd great Austerities, and are reputed to have done very extraordinary Things. John Gualbert of Florence having likewise quitted his Monastery to lead a more regular Course of Life, retir'd to Vall' Ombrosa, and there laid the Foundation of a new religious Society.

The Order of Camaldolites.

The Study of Divinity in the Eleventh Century.

The Order of Carthusians.

The Order of the Carthusians was instituted A. D. 1086. by Bruno, a Native of Colen, and Canon of Rheims, who repair'd, with six of his Companions, to the Solitude of Chartreuse, which was assign'd to them by Hugh Bishop of Grenoble. Some time after, two Gentlemen of Vienne nam'd Gaston and Girond, having devoted their Persons and Estates to the Relief of those who being seiz'd with the Distemper commonly call'd St. Anthony's Fire, came to implore the Intercession of St. Anthony at Vienne, where the Body of that Saint was translated from Constantinople by Joscelin D'Albon, in the time of King Lothaire the Son of Lewis D'Outremer, gave Occasion to the Institution of the Order of St. Anthony, which was compos'd at first of certain Laymen, and afterwards of Monks, who made Profession of St. Augustine's Rule. In the Year 1098. Robert Abbot of Molesme retired to Cisteaux in the Diocess of Challon upon Saone, with 21 Monks of his Convent, to practise St. Benedict's Rule with greater Strictness: His Design being approv'd by Gautier Bishop of Challon, and by Hugh Archbishop of Lyons, he built a Monastery in that Place, which was endow'd by Eudas Duke of Burgundy; but he had not long the Government of it, for Pope Paschal II. enjoin'd him, the next Year, to return to Molesme. The other Monks continu'd at Cisteaux, under the Tuition of Alberic, and this Reform was approv'd by the Pope, A. D. 1100. Stephen Hardingus, who succeeded Alberic, in 1109. brought this Order to its full Perfection, insomuch, that it became very numerous and obtain'd great Reputation. About the same Time Robert D'Arvisselles Archdeacon of Rennes, having receiv'd a Mission from Pope Urban II. to preach to the People, by that Means gather'd together a great Multitude of Persons of both Sexes, and caus'd many Cells to be built for them in the Forest of Frontrewault, at the Distance of three Leagues from Saumur. Afterward he shut up the Nuns in a separate Apartment, and in the Year of our Lord, 1100. made a great Monastery, which was govern'd by him till the End of his Life; but before he died, he caus'd Petronilla de Chemille to be chosen Abbess, A. D. 1115. and confer'd on her, both the Government of the Nuns, and of the Monks of that Order.

The Order of St. Anthony.

The Cistertian Order.

Of the regular Canons.

The regular Manner of living in Common, peculiar to the Canons, which was instituted in the Ninth Century, was now almost every where abolish'd; nevertheless some Bishops reviv'd it in their Chapters, and it was re-establish'd in the End of the Century in another Form: For then certain religious Houses were founded, in which Clergymen, who were desirous to lead a more regular Course of Life, retir'd thither, to live in Common, without having any Manner of private Property. These last Canons were different from those of the Ninth Century. 1. In regard that the former had Benefices annex'd to Churches, and were oblig'd to officiate in them; whereas there were many among these who had not any peculiar Church-Living. 2. Because the former were wont to live in Common, of the Church-Revenues, but they might also retain those of their private Patrimony; whereas these were oblig'd to renounce them, as well as the Monks. 3. Upon Account that the others were at Liberty to quit that Course of Life; whereas these last profess'd to live always after the same Manner, and they were positively forbidden to do otherwise. The latter Canons liv'd in Common, under an Abbot, Superior or Provost, and made Profession, as the Monks, of Poverty, Constancy and Obedience; altho' they were not as yet bound by an express Vow; neither were they only imploy'd in serving the Church or Monastery, where they resided, but they were also taken sometimes out of their House, to receive a Cure, and to exercise other Ecclesiastical Functions. Ives afterwards Bishop of Chartres, establish'd this strict Reform in the Monastery of St. Quentin, A. D. 1078. Afterward that religious House supply'd France, with many other Convents of regular Canons, and in the Beginning of the following Century, the Congregations of St. Rufus and St. Norbert were instituted; insomuch, that the Order of regular Canons, became very numerous, and extended very far within a short Space of Time.

CHAP. I.

Of the Life and Writings of Ivo, Biſhop of Chartres.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

IVO, Biſhop of Chartres, (though born in the XIth. Age of the Church,) not dying till the Year 1115. ſhall begin our Catalogue of the Writers of this XIIth. Century; and his Life and Works have ſo many Things remarkable in them, as to deſerve a Chapter by themſelves.

He was the Son of Hugo de Altylo and Hilemburga, and was born at Beauvais; where he alſo began his Studies; but removing afterwards to the Abby of Bec, he applied himſelf to Divinity under Lanfranc, and chiefly to the reading and ſtudying of the Eccleſiaſtical Canons. Guy Biſhop of Beauvais made Choice of him for Abbot of the Monaſtery of St. Quentin, which he had founded in the Year 1078. He gave all his Eſtate to this Foundation; wherein, by his Care and good Government, Religion and Learning did mightily flouriſh, and by ſome of the Members of this, were ſeveral other Monaſteries of Canons Regulars erected in divers Parts of France.

Geofry, at this time Biſhop of Chartres, was ſummon'd to anſwer before Pope Gregory VII. to the Charge of Simony, laid againſt him, which, nevertheleſs there appear'd not ſufficient Evidence at that time to make out; but being afterwards cited before Urban II. he was found guilty of divers Crimes, and depoſed by that Pope from his Biſhoprick. The Clergy and People of Chartres elected Ivo into his Place, and preſented him to King Philip, who gave him the Inveſtiture: but Richerius, Archbiſhop of Sens, being enrag'd that Geofry was turn'd out, without acquainting him with it, refuſes to conſecrate Ivo, though the Clergy and People of Chartres demanded it with much Earneſtneſs. The Archbiſhop perſiſting in his Temper, Ivo addreſſes himſelf to Pope Urban II. and from him receives his Conſecration, with an Expreſs to Richerius to acknowledge him, and by Vertue of it was ſoon put in Poſſeſſion of the Biſhoprick of Chartres, and Geofry obliged to retire to that Part of the Dioceſs which lay in Normandy, which for ſome time after he retain'd, by the Favour and Intereſt of the Duke of that Province. Richerius, in Revenge of the Affront put upon him, and to aſſert his own Rights and Privileges, ſummons Ivo before the Council he was to hold at Stampæ, to anſwer for his having ſeiz'd himſelf of the Church of Chartres, while Geofry was yet living: Ivo not thinking it ſafe for him to appear there, the Archbiſhop, together with the Biſhops of Paris, Meaux and Troyes, declar'd him guilty of High-Treaſon againſt the King and the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, in having gotten himſelf conſecrated by the Pope, and reſolv'd to re-ſettle Geofry in his Dioceſs, but Ivo appealing once more to Rome, the Pope interdicts Richerius the Uſe of the Pallium, in caſe he ſhou'd any longer oppoſe the Eſtabliſhment of Ivo; upon which, Geofry was at laſt intirely driven out of the whole Dioceſs. The great Zeal Ivo always expreſs'd for maintaining Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline, the Obſervation of the Canons and Purity of Manners, and his undaunted Courage in aſſerting the Liberties of the Church, in oppoſing all Innovations and Irregularities, and in diſcouraging and diſcountenancing all Remiſneſs and Neglect of Duties, as it engag'd him in many Differences with others, and involv'd him in much Trouble, ſo it gave Occaſion to the World to perceive and admire his great Learning and Knowledge, and his mighty Wiſdom and Conſtancy. He died at Chartres, the 23*d*. of December, in the Year 1115.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

His Works.

THere are yet extant 287. Letters written by Ivo Biſhop of Chartres, which, being full of remarkable Obſervations concerning the Diſcipline and Hiſtory of the Church, and containing many excellent Leſſons of Morality, judicious Determinations of ſeveral Caſes of Conſcience and Law-Queſtions, propoſed to him by others, are of no ſmall Value, and it will be well worth our while to give the Reader a ſhort and exact Abridgment of each of them.

The two firſt in the Collection, are from Pope Urban II. one to the Clergy and People of Chartres, the other to Richerius Biſhop of Sens, in which, he adverтiſes them of his having conſecrated Ivo Biſhop of Chartres: At the End of them follows the Pope's Advice to him after his Conſecration.

The 3*d*. Letter is from Ivo to the Pope, regreting his having been by him drawn from his Solitudes and Retirement to be made a Biſhop, and recommending to him the Biſhop of Beauvais.

In the 4*th*. he admoniſhes Bernard, Abbot of Marmoutier, not to entertain any Monks of his Dioceſs, and in particular, demands of him one Walter, who had been Abbot of Bonneval, and quitted his Station for that Retirement.

The 5*th*. Letter to Adela Counteſs of Chartres, ſeverely reprimands her for countenancing the Marriage of her Kinſwoman Adelaida with William, and adviſes that they forbear having carnal Knowledge of each other, till the Matter be determined in a Conſiſtory.

The 6*th*. is a Letter of Thanks for a Preſent he had receiv'd from Girard; (ſuppos'd to have been a Regular Canon of St. Quentin at Beauvais, and afterwards Abbot of the Monaſtery of St. Lonp in Troyes) He gives him alſo ſome Account of the Contrivances of his Enemies againſt him, and invites him to his Houſe. He tells him in the Concluſion, that Geofry was forc'd to quit the whole Biſhoprick, except a ſmall Corner of it, which he yet held by the Duke of Normandy's Aſſiſtance.

The 7*th*. is directed to Roſcelin, a Prieſt of the Church of Compiegne, who had been condemn'd of Hereſie, in the Council of Soiſſons, and forc'd to a Recantation, which he afterwards abjuring, was turn'd out of his Benefice, and not knowing, in that Condition, where to find a Retreat, had addreſs'd himſelf for Relief to Ivo Biſhop of Chartres. Our Prelate anſwers, that he would willingly grant his Requeſt and afford him Entertainment, were he ſure he had ſincerely renounc'd his former Errors; but having Reaſon to believe the contrary of him, and fearing the People of Chartres would not endure him among them, muſt refuſe what he asks of him, that the beſt Advice he can give him is to bear his Condition patiently, and to reſolve on a publick and authentick Abjuration of his Errors in Religion.

The 8*th*. Letter of Ivo's is to Richerius Archbiſhop of Sens, who had ſeverely inveigh'd againſt him, in a Letter, by which he cited him to appear and anſwer before him, for having uſurp'd the See from Geofry. Ivo, in this Letter, remonſtrates to him, how injuriouſly he dealt, and what Inconveniencies he would draw upon himſelf, by undertaking the Cauſe of one who had been found guilty of the moſt notorious Crimes, and ſtood condemn'd by the Holy See: that for his Part, he was ſo far from aſpiring to the Biſhoprick of Chartres, that after the Clergy of that Church had elected him, and forc'd him to take Inveſtiture of the King, he had ſtill declin'd entring upon that Charge, till he was fully certified of the Depoſition of Geofry, and that it was the Pope's Pleaſure he ſhould ſucceed him: that upon the Archbiſhop's refuſing to admit him, he had Recourſe to the Pope, who oblig'd him to accept the Biſhoprick, and conſecrated him himſelf. He reminds the Archbiſhop likewiſe, that the Pope had written to him, and commanded him to receive him as his Suffragan, that he had ever ſince endeavour'd to behave himſelf according to the Reſpect and Obedience due from him to his Metropolitan: he adds, that he is willing to attend the Council at Stampæ, if a ſafe Conduct may be granted him, and that Stephen Earl of Chartres ſhould be ready there, on the King's Side, to anſwer to all that ſhou'd be objected againſt him, without Prejudice to the Authority of the Holy See, before which this Matter might one Day be brought.

The 9*th*. Letter is addreſs'd to Philip King of France, and gives his Majeſty an Account how Ivo had accommodated the Differences between the Monks of Bec and thoſe of Moleſme, with which the King was not ſatisfied.

In the 10*th*. he gives ſeveral Inſtructions to the Nuns of St. Avita near Châteaudun, and adviſes them in particular, to take care of their Reputations.

In the 11*th*. he congratulates Gonthier, upon his Return to his Duty, orders him to retire into the Church of Sancta Maria de Gournay, where he ſhould have the Charge of ſome Monks, and exhorts him to live there peaceably and orderly.

In the 12*th*. he conſults Pope Urban about an odd Practice of ſome in his Dioceſs, who would live by the Altar, but not ſerve at the Altar, and offer'd Money to him for Altars, as they were wont to purchaſe them of his Predeceſſors, under the Title of Perſonnats: Of this Matter, Ivo intreats the Pope's Opinion, and his Advice how to deal with theſe Traders. He informs him alſo, that the Archbiſhop of Sens, aſſiſted by the Biſhops of Paris, Meaux, and and Troyes, had pronounc'd his Consecration void, and intended to reinstate Geofry. He appeals therefore to the Holy See, and judges it necessary that the Pope write to them, and oblige them either to give them no farther Disturbance, or else to appear at Rome, and give an Account of their Proceedings. Lastly, he delivers his Opinion, that 'twould be convenient the Pope should send a Legate into France, to endeavour the Reformation of the Churches: and prays the Pope, that if any Persons banish'd out of his Dioceſs for notorious Crimes, shall repair to Rome, he will not decree any Thing concerning them, till he have fully inform'd himself of the whole Merits of their Causes.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

The 13*th*. and 14*th*. Letters are to the Archbishop Richerius, and the other Bishops invited by the King to his Marriage with Bertrade, whom Ivo dissuades from going to Court, and exhorts to do all they can to hinder that Marriage.

In the 15*th*. he freely declares his Mind to King Philip, that he neither can nor will assist at his intended Marriage with Bertrade, till his former Marriage be pronounced void in a General Council.

The 16*th*. is an Answer to Walter Bishop of Meaux's, upon this Question, If it be lawful for a Man to marry his Concubine? He tells him that some Laws have forbid it, and others have permitted it, and leaves the whole Matter to the Discretion and Judgment of the Bishops; after which, he exhorts the Bishop of Meaux, not to approve of King Philip's Marriage with Bertrade.

The 17*th*. to the regular Canons of St. Quentin, at Beauvais, does with a great Deal of Eloquence set forth the Troubles he is involved in, since he was made a Bishop; admonishes them to continue to observe the Rules of their Institution and to make Choice of a Superior in his Place.

In the 18*th*. Ivo highly blames Cardinal Roger, the Pope's Legate, for being inclin'd to absolve Simon Count of Nioſle, whom he had excommunicated for Adultery. This Count, after the Death of his Wife, marries one with whom he had formerly been too familiar, and now demands Absolution; Ivo absolutely refuses it, and sends him to the Pope with a Letter, setting forth the whole Affair: The Count makes his Suit to Roger, hoping to meet with more gentle Treatment from him than at the Pope's Hands; Ivo hereupon declares to the Cardinal, that he cannot absolve him, nor will he admit him to the Communion, till he has an Answer from the Pope, either in Writing or by Word of Mouth.

The 19*th*. Letter is written to William, Abbot of Fecamp, who had compar'd him to St. John and to Elijah, for his Boldness, in declaring his Dislike of the King's Marriage. Ivo acquaints him how great Inconveniences that Liberty of his had brought him under, and desires the Prayers of him and his Monks. He cannot grant the Abbot's Request in Behalf of a Canon Regular, who would have Leave to quit his Rule and enter into the Monastery of Fecamp; he tells him, if he knew the Man, he would not be concern'd for him, that he is a proud and idle Fellow, that for ten Years together he had never as he ought observ'd his Week for reading Mass, but was at any Time for reading out of his Turn, when there was an Occasion of serving his Vanity by it; however, if the Canons his Brethren, would consent he should leave their House, he would not hinder him, and gave him full Leave to ask them.

Ivo being taken into Custody for opposing King Philip's Marriage, the Clergy and People of Chartres threatned to assault the Count, unless he would release him: To them therefore Ivo writes, dissuading them from all Thoughts of taking Arms, which would be a Means not of procuring his Liberty, but prolonging his Confinement, that it would moreover offend the Divine Majesty, that it was not fit for a Bishop to recover his Rights by Violence, that he was resolv'd rather to dye, than that any Man should lose his Life to rescue him; that that would much sooner be obtain'd by their Prayers, which was all he had to beg or expect from them. These are the Contents of his 20*th*. Letter.

In the 21*st*. he pays his Thanks to Hoel Bishop of Mans, for the Prayers he had put up to God for his Deliverance. He desires of him the Relicks of St. Julian's Body, which had been lately translated to Mans.

The 22*d*. to King Philip, acknowledges that having been by that Prince advanc'd to a Bishoprick, he owes to him under God the highest Respect and Observance: But that having had the Misfortune to fall under his Displeasure, for offering him as a true and faithful Servant necessary and wholsome Advice, he had been ill treated, and the Goods of his Bishoprick imbezled by his Enemies; that therefore he pray'd his Majesty to excuse his not coming to Court, and to allow him some time to breathe, and to put his Affairs into Order again. He hopes God will one Day convince him by Experience of the Truth of that Maxim of Solomon's, that the Wounds and harsh Usage of our Friends who love us, are to be prefer'd before the Kisses of our Enemies and Flatterers. He concludes with assuring the King, that he is ready to answer his Accusers, when he may know what they have to object against him, and that he will defend himself in the Church, if his Crimes fall under the Ecclesiastical Cognizance, or before his Majesty's Council, if he be charg'd with any against the State.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

The 23*d*. is to Guy, chief Master of the King's Household, who had interceded with the King, in Favour of Ivo: he returns him Thanks for his good Offices, and assures him 'tis impossible they should come to any good Terms, till the King have totally quitted Bertrade; that he had seen a Letter of Pope Urban's to all the Prelates of the Kingdom, commanding them to excommunicate him in case he continu'd to live with her, and that this Letter had been long since publish'd, if he had not conceal'd it out of the true Love he bore his Majesty, and his unwillingness that his own People should rise up against him.

The 24*th*. is to Hugh, Archbishop of Lyons; he acquaints him how great Joy it was to him to hear that Pope Urban had appointed him Legate of France, in which Imployment he had had so well acquitted himself under Gregory VII. but, that he was now not a little griev'd to understand he had by the Advice of several of his Friends refus'd to accept of that Office again, by reason of the too great Business which must lie upon him, at the present Juncture of Affairs, while the Church labour'd under such Troubles as would not easily admit of being compos'd. Ivo tells him, he had been ill counsel'd, and ought not to be sway'd by his Friends Persuasions, that though in Italy a second Ahab was arisen, and France had another Jezebel, who endeavour'd to overthrow the Altars and kill the Prophets of the Lord, yet he should remember the Saying of Elijah, That God had yet left him seven thousand Servants, who had not bow'd their Knees to Baal: That though their Herodias should request the Head of John, and Herod should grant her what she ask'd, yet John should not be afraid to tell him, 'Tis not lawful for thee to put away thy own Wife, and to marry another Man's Wife or Concubine. These and the like Instances are urged by Ivo, to induce Hugh to take upon him the Legatine Authority, which he hopes he will soon acquaint him he has yielded to, and desires to know where he may meet him about the Beginning of Lent.

His 25*th*. Letter is address'd to Pope Urban; and lays before him an Account of the Troubles and Difficulties he was daily oblig'd to encounter with, which made him often resolve to quit his Bishoprick. He then intreats the Pope not to hearken to what should be alledg'd, in his own Defence, by one of the Clergy of Chartres, who had been degraded for Simony, Money-coining, and other Irregularities.

The 26*th*. is to Walter, Abbot of St. Maur des Fossez, who had Thoughts of leaving his Monastery, by reason of the great Corruptions and Disorders amongst his Monks. Ivo dissuades him from pursuing that Resolution, if he hath yet any Hopes of doing Good upon, and reforming but some of them; but in case they continue all incorrigible, thinks he may leave them.

The 27*th*. is to Eudes, Chief-Justice of Normandy, who had ask'd his Opinion, how he ought to proceed against a certain Bishop; who, being formerly accus'd of Simony and other Misdemeanours, had gotten himself consecrated before the Day appointed for his Trial. Ivo advises this Magistrate not to regard him as a Bishop, but to treat him as a Heretick and an Intruder; and that if he could not have Justice done upon him by the Bishops of the Province, he should cite both him and his Judges before the See of Rome, without whose Determination such Causes were seldom brought to a due Issue.

The 28*th*. to King Philip, carries his Excuses for not appearing with his Soldiers at Pontoise, or Chaumont, according to the King's Orders. 1. Because Pope Urban having forbid the King to keep Company with Bertrade, under Pain of Excommunication, he could not have forborn publickly admonishing his Majesty of it. 2. Because most of the Guards and Militia of the Dioceſs lying under Excommunication for being concern'd in a Rebellion, he could not, till they had undergone a Penance, receive them into the Communion of the Church, nor send them against the Enemy while they were under her Censures; and 3. Because he thought it not safe for him to be at Court, where he was hated by the Sex that seldom pardon even their best Friends.

The 29*th*. severely reprimands Roger the Priest, for his ill Conduct and Behaviour.

The 30*th*. contains Ivo's Advice to Fulk, Bishop of Beauvais, not to persist in opposing Hugh the Pope's Legate, and communicates to him the Letters sent him by the Pope, relating to King Philip's Affair.

By the 31*st*. to the same Prelate, he resigns up into his Hands the Provostship of St. Quentin in Beauvais, conjuring him to see that his Successor be chosen by the Majority and soundest Part of that Society. And in the 32*d*. he sends his Advice to them, to elect a fit and able Person for their Governor

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

The 33*d.* and 34*th.* Letters have nothing remarkable in them.

The 35*th.* is addreſs'd to Richerius, Archbiſhop of Sens, and the other Prelates aſſembled with him at Rheims, and ſets forth his Reaſons why he would not obey their Citation of him before that Council: 1. That he was cited by Biſhops of other Provinces, who had no Power to be his Judges. 2. Becauſe they intended to try him out of the Juriſdiction of the Province he was under; and 3. Becauſe the Accuſations laid againſt him proceeded only from their Malice and Hatred of his Perſon: That therefore he appeal'd to the Holy See of Rome, where he ſhould be ſure to meet with the Favour allow'd to all others in his Condition, of being heard by the Pope himſelf, or by his Vicars: That he did not take this Method to avoid a Trial, being able enough to defend himſelf againſt their Charge of Perjury, by bringing Proof that he had not ſo much as taken any Oath, but that he did it to prevent his giving an ill Example to others, and expoſing himſelf to apparent Hazard of his Life, ſince he could not by any Means obtain the King's Paſs-port; that beſides all this, he well enough foreſaw he ſhould not be allow'd Liberty of Speech in their Aſſembly, ſince they had already accus'd him of Diſloyalty to the King, and of being an Enemy to his Majeſty, only for having had the Courage to tell him his Duty, as he thought all of them in Conſcience bound to do; whereas his Majeſty's real Enemies were thoſe who diſſembled with him, and dar'd not ſearch his Wounds with Fire and Sword; that the King might deal with him as his Majeſty ſhould think fit, but that he was firmly reſolv'd never to approve of his Marriage.

In the 36*th.* Letter to the Biſhop of Beauvais, he ſhews him the Reaſons he had to complain of him; particularly, that having requeſted him to ſend a Canon Regular to be preſer'd to a Vacancy in his Dioceſs, that Biſhop would have had him put in a Monk, contrary to the Conſtitutions of that Church ordained by the Pope. Hereupon, Ivo takes Occaſion to ſhew the Dignity of the Regular Clergy above that of the Monks, and cites, to this Purpoſe, a Paſſage of St. Auſtine, wherein that Father ſays, he ſcarce ever knew a Monk prove a good Clerk, and ſome Places out of St. Jerome, preferring the Clergy before the Monks. He proteſts however, that he does not intend all this to reproach and diſparage the Monaſtick Way of living, but to put them in mind that they ought to continue truly Monks, and be content to lead a retir'd Life. 'We praiſe their Inſtitution, 'ſays he, and believe their State to be as perfectly happy 'as any on Earth, while they confine themſelves within 'the Bounds aſſign'd them by their Founders; but we think 'them fitter to be Subjects than Governors, and would 'have them be humble and obedient, not proud and aſ'piring.

In the 37*th.* he exhorts a certain Canon Regular to go on as he had begun, in all due Submiſſion to his Superiors, and in the Practice of Vertue and Religion.

The 38*th.* is a Letter of Thanks to the Biſhop of Winchester, for a Chalice he had made him a Preſent of, to hold the holy Chriſm.

In the 39*th.* he acquaints St. Anſelm, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, that he had ſhewn what Kindneſs he could to the Monks of Bec, in taking their Part againſt thoſe of Moleſme, and that he had long ſince done them Juſtice, in their Demands upon the Abby of Poiſſy, if they had not reſolv'd to wait firſt of all for the King's Conſent.

There is nothing obſervable in the 40*th.* Letter.

The 41*ſt.* written to Geofry Abbot of Vendome, treats of the following Queſtion, viz. Whether a Monk taking the Vow upon him, and receiving the Benediction from another Monk, ought again to receive it from his Abbot? Ivo determines, that it may be either repeated or omitted, without any Prejudice either to the one or the other of the Parties, becauſe the Benediction of a Monk is not by Impoſition of Hands, nor the Adminiſtration of any Sacrament of Apoſtolical Tradition, and that it has no other Vertue in it than what is in the Abſolution of a Penitent, or the Prayers of a Prieſt for his People; that a private Monk having no body but himſelf to take Care of, may, by his own Act, dedicate himſelf to that State of Life, without the Benediction of any Monk or Abbot, ſince that which conſtitutes him a Monk, is not any new Dignity conferr'd on him, but only his Contempt of the World and Love of God; that this is ſo, appears from conſidering the Practice of the firſt Inſtitutors of the Monaſtick Orders, who neither receiv'd nor us'd any Benedictions; that indeed, when the Communities of Monks began to be numerous, Vows were exacted of them, and they were admitted by Benedictions, which Cuſtom, was prudentially taken up, to oblige them firmer and more ſolemnly, in the Preſence both of God and Men, to Diligence and Conſtancy in the Way of Life they had choſe and undertaken; which if they ſhould afterward offer to renounce, they would have the more Witneſſes to condemn them; that theſe Ceremonies were the beſt Security could be found out againſt the Fickleneſs of Mens Minds and reſolutions; and that therefore, 'were convenient it ſhould be left to the Diſcretion of every Abbot to oblige his Monks, if he thought fit, to renew the Vows they had come under before Witneſſes, and to repeat the Benedictions they had receiv'd from others, or wholly to omit them; ſince theſe were not Sacraments, which ought not to be repeated; but if the Benediction were look'd upon as ſuch, it ought not to be adminiſtred a ſecond Time, as Biſhops were not to conſecrate anew the Nuns that had been already conſecrated by Prieſts.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

The 42*d.* is a Letter of moral Advice, to the Biſhop of Soiſſons.

The 43*d.* congratulates Pope Urban, upon the Reſtitution of Peace to the greateſt Part of Italy; and acquaints him, that one William, a Clergyman of his Dioceſs, was elected Biſhop of Paris.

The 44*th.* is an Admonition to all the Biſhops of France, to put in Execution a Law which prohibits all Manner of War, four Days in the Week.

The 45*th.* forbids the whole Clergy of the Archdeaconry of Poiſſy to marry the Count de Meulan to the Daughter of the Count Crepy, they being within the Degrees of Conſanguinity, as he proves from the Genealogy of the two Families.

The 46*th.* Letter to Pope Urban, adverтiſes him that the King of France was diſpatching a Deputation of ſome Courtiers to him, to obtain from him, either by Threatnings or fair Offers, an Abſolution; and exhorts him not to be prevail'd on by them to grant it.

In the 47*th.* he tells Guy, the chief Maſter of the King's Houſhold, that 'tis in vain for that Prince to think of procuring a Diſpenſation of his Marriage with Bertrade, by his Promiſes of beſtowing great Endowments on the Church; that it can never be granted him, nor can he atone for his great Sin by ſo good a Work, or ever hope for Remiſſion of it, while he reſolves to keep to her.

In the 48*th.* he acquaints Pope Urban with the Promotion of Manaſſes II. to the Archbiſhoprick of Rheims.

The 49*th.* is written to Stephen Earl of Chartres and Blois, denying him the Exemption of the Cloyſter of the Canons, from the Biſhop's Juriſdiction, and refuſing to ſwear Homage to him, out of the Bounds of the City of Chartres.

In the 50*th.* he makes his Excuſes to Richerius, Archbiſhop of Sens, for not waiting upon him, without the King's Paſſport: He interpoſes his Advice concerning the Diſpute for Primacy, between the Archbiſhop of Lions and Richerius, that if he have good Authorities to produce, he ſhould do it, and deſires he would ſend him the Copies of them; but if no ſuch can be found, he thinks he had beſt refer the Matter to the Pope's Deciſion: He acquaints him, that William is elected Archbiſhop of Paris, praying that he would conſecrate him before the Feaſt of St. Remy, letting him alſo know, that he had obtain'd leave for him of the Pope, to make uſe of his Pallium on this Occaſion, though otherwiſe, it had been forbidden him.

The 51*ſt.* Letter is written to Sanction, Dean of Orleans, who had been elected Biſhop of that Church, in the Year 1099. John, the Subdean, had us'd underhand Meaſures to get himſelf into that Biſhoprick, and ſome of the Clergy of his Faction, had, by Letters to Ivo, accus'd Sanction of Simony: Ivo hereupon, endeavours to diſſuade him from aſpiring after that Dignity, and from getting himſelf conſecrated, till he had the Pope's Order for it, and had clear'd him of the Aſperſion caſt upon him. In the mean while, the Clergy and People of Orleans, had prevail'd on the Archbiſhop of Sens, to command Ivo to conſecrate him; he refus'd to do it at Châteaulandon, bordering on the Dioceſs of Sens, by reaſon of the Difference between the Archbiſhop of Sens and the Pope, about the Primacy of Lyons; but the Clergy having intereſs'd the King to confirm their Election, Ivo ſends forth his Citation for Sanction's Adverſaries to appear at Chartres, which they not obeying, and Sanction having purg'd himſelf by Oath, of what they had alledg'd againſt him, he was conſecrated by Ivo Biſhop of Chartres, William Biſhop of Paris, and Walter Biſhop of Meaux, as is fully related by Ivo, in his 54*th.* Letter, written on this Occaſion, to Hugh Archbiſhop of Lyons. No ſooner was Sanction ſettled in his new Dignity, but he began to abuſe and inſult over thoſe of his Clergy who had oppos'd him, which drew from Ivo the 53*d.* Letter in this Collection, wherein he ſeverely taxes him for his indecent Behaviour. The Archbiſhop of Lyons was highly diſpleas'd at Sanction's Conſecration, and took care to let Ivo know how ill he reſented it at his Hands: To him therefore, Ivo proteſts, (in his 59*th.* Letter) that he had not taken any Money for performing that Office; that he knew nothing of the Crimes Sanction was accus'd of; that Sanction had denied them all upon Oath; that he did not give him Notice of that Solemnity, becauſe 'twas not cuſtomary to do ſo; nor did he conceive that the Archbiſhop could by Vertue of his Legatine Authority, challenge ſuch Juriſdiction over the Biſhops of France, as that they ſhould not have Power of Conſecration, without his Leave and Licence.

In the 52*d.* Letter, Ivo writes to Gaufroy, Dean of Mans, about one Everard a Canon-Regular, who had entred himſelf self a Monk, in the Abby of Marmoutier, and had a mind to return to his former Order, that he ought by no means to suffer him to quit his Monastery, nor receive him again among the Clergy.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

In the 55th. he requests the Archbishop of Lyons to confirm the Election of one who had been chosen Bishop of Beauvais, notwithstanding some Objections he had against him.

In the 56th. he Answers King Philip, that he could not hear, that Hugh Archbishop of Lyons intended to call another General Council this Year, the Pope having already held two within his Majesty's Dominions; and that if he should Summon one, 'twould be contrary to the Apostolical Institutions and the Practice of the Church; that if the Pope's Legates shall after any reasonable Distance of Time, think fit to Convene the Bishops, they are to obey their Orders; but, if they shall begin to impose a new and intolerable Yoke upon the Bishops, he hopes his Majesty will think it his Duty to put a stop to their Encroachments.

In the 57th. he tells Geofry, Abbot of Vendome, That he ought to deny the Rite of Burial, among his Monks, to one of them, who had four Times quitted his Monastery; because, at his last Return thither, he had not brought back with him, the Goods he had Sacrilegiously carried away from the Monastery.

Richerius, Archbishop of Sens, dying in the Beginning of the Year 1096, the Clergy elected Daimbert, and sent to Ivo, to ordain him both Priest, and Bishop; who answers them, in the 58th. Letter, That he could not do it, but within the Times appointed for Ordinations; and, that before his Election could be confirm'd, he must confer with the rest of his Brethren the Bishops, about an Obstacle that offer'd it self. This Obstacle, was, the Opposition of Hugh, Archbishop of Lyons, who gave out, that no Bishops could be ordain'd in France, without his Permission; and that he would, in particular, do all he could to hinder Daimbert's succeeding to the Archbishoprick of Sens, 'till he should acknowledge the Primacy of Lyons. Ivo, therefore, in the 59th. Letter, demands of Hugh, if he may ordain him? And prays his Answer with all Speed. Hugh absolutely refusing to give him Leave to do it, Ivo lets him know by the 60th. Letter, that he will obey his Pleasure therein, and had communicated it to the Bishops of his Province; but he intreats and advises him, to be more moderate, and reserv'd for the future, in the Exercise of his Authority, and not to insist so Rigorously, in exacting their Obedience, to all the Commands of the Holy See; Lest, by imposing on them Burdens too heavy for them to bear, he force them to disown her Power, through an Impossibility of performing what she lays upon them; or out of some Necessity, and Expediency, of acting contrary to it: That tho' they are all very well inclin'd to Pay due Observance to the Orders, or Prohibitions of the Holy See, in Matters relating to Faith and Morality, either concerning the Defence of Religion, the Punishment of wicked Men, the preventing Dangers, and Evils, and the like; and tho' they are ready to suffer any Thing, in Obedience to what she shall Command, and Appoint, to any such good Ends and Purposes; yet, as to indifferent Matters, the observing, or not observing of which, has no Influence upon our Salvation: And as to the Endeavours of the Court of Rome, to alter ancient Customs, established by the Holy Fathers, he intreats him to consider with himself, Whether they ought not rather to adhere to what they have establish'd, than to receive her new Constitutions? The ancient Canons (he tells him) do constantly Order, that Metropolitans be consecrated by the Bishops of the Province; and therefore, he wonders, that Hugh should go about to Introduce another Custom, and pretend to oblige the New-elected Archbishop of Sens, to come to him before his Consecration, and to promise Submission, and Obedience to him; which is contrary to what was ever practised in the Province of France, or in any other Country; and, that since Daimbert had not been accused of any Crimes, and had been elected duly, and without Simony, he had no Authority to cite him before him: And whereas, Hugh complains, in his Letter, that Daimbert had receiv'd Investiture from the King's Hands; Ivo tells him, he knew of no such Matter; and that tho' it were so, he could not see how that Ceremony should concern Faith and Religion, since, upon a Canonical Election, their Kings had always assum'd a Right of Conferring Bishopricks, and the Popes themselves had written to them, to give Investiture to such as had been duly elected; and, sometimes, had sent Orders to defer the Consecrations of Bishops, who had not obtain'd the King's Consent. He urges, moreover, that Pope Urban oppos'd only the real Investitures, and did not exclude their Kings from electing, or confirming Elections: And tho' the eight General Council prohibited their being present at Elections, yet it allow'd them to admit the Person elected, to the Possession of his Bishoprick; that it matters not, whether that Ceremony be administred by the Hand, or some other Sign; whether by pronouncing any Form, or giving the pastoral Staff; since Kings pretended not to convey any thing Spiritual, but only to shew their Approbation of the Peoples Choice of a Pastor, and to give him Possession of such Lands, and other Ecclesiastical Profits and Advantages, as the Churches were intitled to, from the Liberality of Princes; that the putting a stop to the Practice of such Investitures, had occasion'd may Evils in the Church, which could not be prevented, or remedied, but by permitting again the Exercise of them: Not that he speaks this out of any Disrespect to the Authority of the Holy See, but to shew how much he wisheth, that the Ministers of the Church of Rome, would apply themselves to the Correcting the greatest Evils, and Distempers, and not lay out themselves, so much, upon such small and insignificant Matters: And therefore, Ivo demands, again, with much Earnestness, that he, and his Brethren, may be permitted to consecrate the Archbishop of Sens; which, if Hugh will grant them, he promises to prevail on him, to own the Primacy of Lyons; but if he deny this their Request, tho' they did not, at present, think of doing it without his Leave, yet, if a Schism should, hereupon, break out in the Church, the Blame would not lie at their Doors. Ivo ends this large Epistle, by letting Hugh understand, that he had Reason to demand Satisfaction of him, for the Wrong done to himself, and his Church, by those of Puiset, who lay under an Excommunication, which Hugh had taken off, without his Knowledge; whereby they had been encourag'd to farther Sacrilegious Attempts, presuming to get off so again for the future.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

But this was not the only Instance of the strange Carriage of Hugh, Archbishop of Lyons: For he pretended, also, to oblige the New-elected Bishop of Nevers, to wait upon him for his Consecration, at Autun. And herein Ivo oppos'd him again, and tells him, in the 61st. Letter, that the Privilege he assum'd, was a Violation both of the Laws, and Customs of the Church, by which Bishops were to be consecrated by their Metropolitan; or, when that could not be, by the Bishops of the same Province.

Ivo, having accommodated Matters with Adelecia, Countess of Puiset, writes the 62d. Letter to Sanction, Bishop of Orleans, letting him know, that the Agreement made between them, did not at all meddle with the Difference that Bishop had with the Clergy, and Monks, of Puiset; that he may still execute the Sentence of the Canon upon them, for celebrating divine Service, while they lay under an Interdict from him; tho' he would advise him, not to meddle with them, but by the Archbishop of Lyons's Consent, without which he would not get Justice done upon them. He tells him also, he need not wonder at his having receiv'd Gervase, (Count of Châteauneuf, in Thimerais) into the Communion of the Church; being oblig'd so to do, out of Respect to the King, by the Canon, which enjoyns, That if the King admit any excommunicated Person to eat at his Table, the Bishops are to restore him to Ecclesiastical Communion.

In the 63d. Letter, he proves, That none but such as are in the Holy Orders, can consecrate, and administer the Sacraments.

The 65th. to Pope Urban, acquaints him, That the Bishop of Paris is on his Journey toward Rome; recommends him to the Pope, and prays, he will give him so good Instructions, and wholesome Advice, that he may return wiser, and of a more manageable Temper, than he had formerly been: He Petitions, also, in the same Bishop's behalf, for an Inhibition, to prevent the Abbot, and Monks, of Lagny, from withdrawing themselves from under his Jurisdiction; and Lastly, intreats the Pope to determine what should be done, in the Affair of the New-elected Archbishop of Sens, whom the Archbishop of Lyons would not consecrate, 'till he would submit to his Primacy.

Sanction had not been long in Possession of the Bishoprick of Orleans, before he was deposed by the Archbishop of Lyons, at the Request, and Instigation of the Archbishop of Tours, to make room for John, one of his Creatures; but a very infamous Person, who had been Archdeacon of that Church, under Sanction's Predecessor: To bring this Matter about, the Archbishop of Tours had crown'd King Philip, at Christmas, and obtain'd his Grant, that John should be consecrated Bishop of Orleans: But as soon as Ivo understood it, he wrote to Hugh, Archbishop of Lyons, conjuring him to put a stop to it, and accusing John of many notorious Crimes, particularly of having procured the Bishoprick by Simony. These are the Contents of the 66th. Letter.

In the 67th. Ivo writes to Pope Urban likewise, to interpose his Authority, that so scandalous a Wretch may not be suffer'd to get into the Episcopal Order: And in this Letter, he offers his Apology to the Pope, who was incens'd against him, on Account of what he had written to the Archbishop of Lyons, touching the Election, and and Consecration of Daimbert, to the Archbishoprick of Sens: Ivo protests, he had no other Design in it, but to induce the Archbishop of Lyons to cut off all Occasion of thoſe Complaints that were daily made againſt him, by the Biſhops of France; and to take Care, that the Churches of that Kingdom be not oppreſs'd, and overburden'd by the Regulations, and Decrees of the Holy See; that if any Thing he had ſaid, relating to the Primacy claim'd by the Archbiſhop of Lyons, had been diſpleaſing to him, he thought he might take leave to ſpeak his Opinion freely upon that Subject, to one, eſpecially, for whom no Man, on this ſide the Alps, had ſo entire a Reſpect, and by devoting himſelf to whoſe Intereſts he had been a great Sufferer: However, if his Holineſs were offended at any Expreſſion that had dropt from him, he would retract it, and would reſign his Biſhoprick, rather than beat his Anger, whether he had deſerv'd it or not: And if by this Means he might make Satisfaction, for any Thing his Holineſs might have taken amiſs, he would willingly ſtand to his Offer, and prays him to accept it: Adding, moreover, that if the Pope would not permit him to quit his Dioceſs, he fear'd he muſt ſhortly be conſtrain'd to do it, by the King's violent Hatred of him, and the miſerable Contempt of God's Word, among the People under his Care. This Letter is dated nine Years after he came to his Biſhoprick, which ſhews it was written in the firſt Year of this twelfth Century.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

Hugh, Archbiſhop of Lyons, making no Account of theſe Remonſtrances of Ivo, cites him to bring Proof of what he had to alledge againſt the Perſon, and Election of John: But, Ivo, inſtead of obeying this Summons, anſwers him, by the 68*th*. Letter, that the Crimes being ſo notorious, 'twas needleſs to ſearch after farther Evidence; and if there were Occaſion for it, he could produce ſufficient Witneſs, that John had already diſtributed Money among the Queen's Servants, and had promis'd them a farther Sum, to procure for himſelf the Biſhoprick of Orleans: That, beſides, his being elected by the King only, made his Title void by the Canons; and, that however the Examination of this whole Affair, ought to be made in the Province, to which his Accuſers were Subject, and where the Evidence lay that was to be brought againſt him, and not in any other.

The 69*th*. Letter, is, to the Provoſt of the Canons Regulars of Eſtreppe, in the Dioceſs of Limoges, who complain'd, That the Biſhop had iſſued out a Prohibition againſt their taking upon them the Cure of Souls, and the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of Penance. Our Prelate tells him he is of Opinion, that the Biſhop had done better, if he had endeavour'd to bring all the Clergy to a regular Way of Living, rather than to have refus'd the Paſtoral Office to thoſe who were already oblig'd to it: However, they might make a good Uſe of this Exemption, in having the better leiſure to look after the State of their own Souls. The Regular Clergy, he thinks, ought not to be univerſally forbid undertaking the Cure of the Souls; nor ought it to be permitted to all of them, ſince it would be an Injury to the Order it ſelf, and tend to the Diſſolution of it, tho' the Correction, and Inſtruction of others, may more ſafely be truſted in the Hands of ſuch as have been long train'd, and carefully exercis'd, in examining, and well-ordering their own Lives and Manners; therefore that Charge is not to be impos'd upon, and enjoyn'd to all the Regular Clergy: For, by that means, their Diſcipline will ſoon be deſtroy'd; and inſtead of learned and able Champions in the Cauſe of Religion, the Monaſteries will afford us but weak Defenders, and Betrayers of it: To prevent which fatal Miſchief, the moſt prudent, and beſt approv'd among them, ſhould be pick'd out for this weighty Employment, and be preſented to the Biſhop, as fit to be entruſted by him, with the Care of other Mens Souls.

The 70*th*. Letter, is an Admonition to the Biſhop of Meaux, to Reform the Monaſtery of Marmoutier; which was ſcandalous for very great Irregularities.

In the 71ſt. he lays before William Rufus, King of England, the Reaſon why he had abſolv'd Nivard, of Septeuil, from the Oath he had taken to that King, viz. Becauſe it was contrary to the Obligations of his former Oaths, to his own natural and lawful Princes.

The 72*d*. to Girard, Abbot of St. Vandrille, contains this Deciſion; That the chief Stone, or Altar-piece of an Altar that has been demoliſh'd, or pull'd down, tho' it had been formerly conſecrated, is to be conſecrated again, when laid upon another Altar: And whereas it is objected, that the Portable Altars do not loſe their Conſecration, by being carried from one place to another, he anſwers, That there is a Difference between the moving theſe Altars from place to place, and taking the Stones from an old Altar, becauſe the Stones of theſe Portable Altars are faſtned upon a Plank of Wood, or ſome other Pedeſtal; and ſo to whatever Place you remove them, they remain ſtill as they were when firſt conſecrated.

The 73*d*. Letter is ſent to Bernard, Abbot of Marmoutier, whom ſome of the Monks refus'd to ſubmit to, as their lawful Abbot; becauſe, as they pretended, he had been conſecrated by an excommunicated Biſhop. Ivo, in anſwer to this, maintains, That the Promotion of an Abbot depends, rather upon the Election of the Monks, than the Biſhop's Benediction; which, in the preſent Caſe, is not given by Impoſition of Hands, nor is it properly a Conſecration, but only a Formularly of Prayer.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

The 74*th*. Letter is to Hildebert, Biſhop of Mans; who is in a great Streight, Whether, or no, he ſhall put himſelf upon the Trial of Ordeal, or walking Blindfolded, and Barefoot, over red-hot Plowſhares, to juſtifie his Innocence to the King of England, who accuſed him of having treacherouſly ſurrendred the Town of Mans. Ivo tells him, That the Eccleſiaſtical Laws having utterly condemn'd that Practice, he ſhould endure any thing, rather than undergo it.

The 75*th*. is to John, who was conſecrated Biſhop of Orleans, notwithſtanding all the Efforts of Ivo to prevent it. The Counteſs of Puiſet, and her Adherents, continuing to give Diſturbance to the Church of Chartres, Ivo was oblig'd to ask Leave of the Pope, to excommunicate them; which was granted him: John, out of ſpight to Ivo, pretended, 'twas his own Right to pronounce the Excommunication againſt them, being of his Dioceſs, and offer'd to try the Matter with Ivo, at Orleans. Ivo inſiſts upon the Pope's having commiſſioned him to do it; and, that the Caſe ought to be decided at Chartres, not at Orleans; ſince it was the Church of Chartres that had received the Affront, and that all Differences ought to be tried upon the Place where they began.

The 76*th*. Letter is written to Daimbert, whom the Pope himſelf had ordain'd Archbiſhop of Sens, (tho' Hugh, Archbiſhop of Lyons, had refus'd to do it) and who had thereupon ſubmitted to the Primacy of Lyons. Ivo lets him hereby know, That he intends to come and aſſiſt at the Provincial Council he had invited him to; prays him, to defer the Ordination of the Biſhop of Nevers, (becauſe of a Scruple about the Election) and to excommunicate the Lady of Puiſet, her Son Hugh, and all that aſſiſted, or belong'd to them.

The 77*th*. is written to Hugh, Dean of Beauvais, and to the Chapter of that Church, upon Occaſion of a Trial they had had about a Mill belonging to them, but rendred uſeleſs, by ſome Bridges, and other Buildings, that cut off its Supply of Water: Ivo adviſes them to complain to the Metropolitan, or the Pope's Legate, in caſe the Biſhop of Beauvais will not remedy that Inconvenience.

The 78*th*. is a Letter of Advice to the Monks of the Monaſtery of Dol, in the Dioceſs of Bourges, to put an End to their Quarrels, and Diviſions, about the Election of Bernier, (formerly a Monk of Bonneval) for their Abbot. Ivo aſſures them, he had had a very good Account of his Life and Converſation; that whereas ſome had thought ill of him, for quitting his Monaſtery without Leave from his Brethren, he had been forc'd to do it by the ſcandalous Irregularities that were therein, which had likewiſe occaſion'd their Abbot himſelf and ſeveral others of the Monks who abhorr'd the Villainies of the reſt to take the ſame Courſe.

The 79*th*. Letter is written in the Name of Ivo Biſhop of Chartres, William Biſhop of Paris, John Biſhop of Orleans, Walter Biſhop of Meaux, and Humband Biſhop of Auxerre, aſſembled in Synod at Stampe, to Philip Biſhop of Troyes, who was ſummon'd to this Council, but had not made his Appearance: They tell him, they might have paſs'd Sentence againſt him, but would allow him time, till the Sunday before Chriſtmaſs, and then he muſt not fail to defend himſelf, if he could, for this Contempt of their Authority. This Letter appears to have been written in the Year, 1100.

The 80*th*. to William Abbot of Fecamp, confirms the Deciſion of the 72*d*. Letter, about the Re-conſecration of Altars that have been remov'd out of their Places.

The 81ſt. is a congratulatory Letter to Pope Paſchal II. upon his Elevation to the Pontifical Chair.

In the 82*d*. he counſels Geofroy, Abbot of Vendôme, to forbear his Severities againſt a certain Monk of his Convent, and either to confine him to a Cell by himſelf, or elſe ſuffer him to retire to ſome other Monaſtery.

The 83*d*. Letter is addreſs'd to the Biſhops of the Province of Rheims, adviſing them, in regard to their own Honour, and that of the Biſhop of Soiſſons, not to ſuffer the Inſults of their Metropolitan; for that if the Archbiſhops ſhall thus take upon them to do what they pleaſe in the Churches of their Provinces, and, without the Ordinaries Conſent, to Judge and ſuſpend any of the Clergy, as they ſhall think fit; they will quite overthrow the Credit of the Epiſcopal Dignity and the Orders in the Church, eſtabliſh'd by the Canons: That therefore, they ought to oppoſe any ſuch Innovations, and if the Clergy of Soiſſons are ready to juſtifie themſelves by their Biſhop, the Metropolitan has no power to condemn them for Hereſie or Sacrilege.

The 84*th*. is to Manaſſes Archbiſhop of Rheims, upon the ſame Subject. He lets him know, that he thought his Letter a little too ſevere, and exhorts him to uſe gentle Methods to bring the Church of Soiſſons to their Duty, and to accept of the Submiſſion and Satisfaction they tendred him.

The

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

The 85*th*. Letter to John, Priest, Cardinal-Legate for Pope Paschal in France, highly commends him for refusing to Communicate with the King, though some Bishops of the Belgick-Province had dar'd to put the Crown upon that Prince's Head, at Whitsuntide, contrary to the Pope's express Prohibition to them all.

Ivo approves likewise his Intentions of assembling a Council in the Province of Aquitain, but wishes, he would defer it till the Beginning of Autumn.

In the 86*th*. he demands Satisfaction of Stephen Earl of Chartres, for having abus'd some of his Clergy.

By the 87*th*. he advertises John and Benet, Legates of the Holy See, that Guarland, elected Bishop of Beauvais, is an ignorant and debauch'd Sot, altogether unworthy of that Preferment; and observes to them farther, that the Church of Beauvais has a long time had the Misfortune to be govern'd by very ill Bishops.

By 88*th*. he acquaints Pope Paschal, that Hilgode, heretofore Bishop of Soissons, was not depos'd for any Misdemeanours, as his Holiness had been inform'd, but that he voluntarily retir'd into a Monastery, to avoid the Inconveniencies all Prelates are expos'd to, choosing rather to live in Meanness and Obscurity, to secure the State of his own Soul, than to hazard the Salvation of it, in the heights of Honour and Preferments: And whereas, some were now against his being made an Abbot, 'twas not out of any dislike of him, but because they thought it not seemly that a Bishop should come to receive Benediction from an Abbot, which Ivo thinks needs not be made a Scruple of, but that the Ceremony may be well enough quite omitted, or may be us'd to one of his Character, without any Prejudice, since it is not a Sacrament reiterated.

The 89*th*. Letter is to the same Pope, and admonishes him not to give Credit too easily to any Complaints that shall be brought to him, against the Bishops, or any private Persons of France, not to proceed to Censures against them, but upon good Evidence given in by credible Persons, and such as live near them: He acquaints him moreover, that the Bishop Elect of Beauvais is very undeserving of his Preferment, and that he had been already driven out of the Church, for his scandalous Behaviour, by Hugh Archbishop of Lyons.

In the 90*th*. to Daimbert, Archbishop of Sens, he examines this Case; if a Man who had kill'd another, excepted out of the Articles of Peace agreed and sworn to, were to be deem'd a violator of God's Laws and subject to the Punishments due to such a one! and concludes, That though he be guilty of Manslaughter, yet, he has not thereby offended God.

By the 91*st*. he congratulates Adela Countess of Chartres, upon the Recovery of her Health, and exhorts her to protect the Churches.

The 92*d*. Letter is written to Pope Paschal, at the request and in behalf of Stephen, Bishop Elect of Beauvais, praying his Holiness to confirm his Election, though he have not yet taken Orders, assuring him there is no other Objection can lie against him; that the Accusations that had been brought against him were found to be false and groundless; that Lisiard Archdeacon of Beauvais, the chief Promoter of them has acknowledg'd as much, by being fully reconciled to Stephen, and vindicating him on all Occasions, and that if any be yet dissatisfied, he is ready to give them all full and Canonical Satisfaction.

Notwithstanding this Letter, Pope Paschal would not allow of Stephen's Election, but severely reprimanded Ivo for offering one to him so unworthy of any Favour or Preferment as every Body else represented him to be; at which Ivo was so far from being displeas'd, that he lets the Pope know, by the 95*th*. Letter, how glad he is that Stephen had miss'd of his Aim; and assures his Holiness, he had extorted the former Letter from him, by his Importunities, and that he did not think when he wrote it, 'twould prove a Help to his desired Advancement, or be taken for a serious Recommendation of him, by his Holiness, or any intelligent Person that should observe the Stile of it. He likewise minds the Pope, that his Holiness had proceeded too far in approving of Drogo's Pretensions to the Treasurership of Châlons, because the Merits of them having been examin'd in the Council of Poitiers, it appear'd that the late Bishop of Châlons had not the Power to bestow the Place upon him, unless, as was required by the Ecclesiastical Laws, he were first Canon, (or Prebend) of that Church; which Drogo could never pretend to, because he was Canon and Archdeacon of another: And that therefore they had decreed his Institution to the Treasurership of Châlons null and void, following therein the Opinion of his Holiness himself, and of his Predecessors, who have determin'd that no Man shall have Preferment in two Churches, at the same Time: And therefore Ivo intreats the Pope to consider well of this Matter, and the ill Consequences that may ensue, if he do not revoke what he has order'd in it, contrary to the Opinion and Resolution of the Council.

The 93*d*. Letter, after having complimented Daimbert, (or rather, Dagobert) Patriarch of Jerusalem, recommends to him some of Ivo's Dioceses, who were travelling to that City.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

By the 94*th*. Ivo requests Pope Paschal to grant his Bull to the Clergy of Chartres, empowering them to excommunicate all such as should at any time hereafter pretend to renew the Claim which the present Earl had quitted, in his own and his Successor's Name, to the Goods and Houses belonging to the Bishop and to that Church; and to proceed to the like Severity against any Bishop of Chartres, who shall connive at, or consent to any Attempts of that Nature.

In the 96*th*. Letter, he asserts that Christian-Burial is not to be denied to any one who dyes in the Communion of the Church.

The 97*th*. is an Exhortation to the People of Beauvais, to choose for their Bishop one who is Eminent for Piety and Learning.

In the 98*th*. he desires Lambert Bishop of Arras, and John of Teroüane, to write to the Archbishop of Rheims, to take care that a new Bishop be chosen at Beauvais, in the room of Stephen, whose Election Pope Paschal would not allow of.

The 99*th*. is the Resolution of a Question propos'd to him by Gualon, Abbot of St Quintin, in Beauvais, viz. if Children under six Years of Age, can be contracted or be married with one another, and in case there be only a Contract between them, and one of the Parties die, whether the surviving Party may marry the Brother or Sister of the other? To which Ivo answers, that none can actually marry till the Age of fourteen, but that Children may promise Marriage to each other assoon as they are at Years of Discretion, which he determines they are at seven Years of Age, and that a Contract agreed on at that Age shall hinder either Party, if one of them die before they are compleatly married, from marrying with the Brother or Sister of the deceased.

In the 100*th*. Letter, he demands of John Bishop of Orleans, the Restitution of an Altar, (or Church) which had been adjudg'd by the Council of Poitiers, to belong to the Dioceses of Chartres.

In the 101*st*. Letter, to Adela Countess of Chartres, he Complains of her having assum'd Authority to cite before her Judges Ralph, a chief Clergyman of his Dioceses, to answer for his having seiz'd the Goods of a Counterfeit Nun: Ivo puts her in mind, that it has ever been the undisputed Right of his and all other Churches of France, that none but the Ecclesiastical Judges shall take Cognizance of, and inflict Punishments on disorderly Clergymen and Monks, unless their Crimes are such as deserve Death, in which case only, they are to be deliver'd over to the Justice of the Civil Magistrate.

In the 102*d*. he presses Manasses Archbishop of Rheims, to proceed to the Consecration of the new elected Bishop of Beauvais, without waiting any longer for leave from the King: The Election of Bishops (he tells him) is the Churches Prerogative, and has been yielded to them by the Capitulars or Grants of Charlemain and Louis le Debonnaire.

By 103*d*. he acquaints Pope Paschal, that the Bishop of Senlis, who had been forc'd out of his Dioceses for adhering to his Holiness's Interests, could not regain Possession of it, though he had produc'd his Holiness's Letters in his behalf to the King, and to his own Metropolitan; but that moreover, the Dean of Paris had also seiz'd to his own Use the Prebend this Bishop had in that Church.

In the 104*th*. he advertises the same Pope, that the soundest and most judicious of the Clergy of Beauvais, having elected for their Bishop one Gualon, a Person of excellent Learning and Morals, some who were still zealous for Stephen, had slily insinuated to the King, that the other being a Disciple of Ivo and nominated by the Pope, his Majesty had Reason to fear he would prove no very good Subject of his: Upon which Suggestion, the King absolutely refus'd to Consent to the Election of Gualon, and to give him Investiture. Ivo tells the Pope, he had ere this been Petition'd on that Occasion, but the Metropolitan kept the Clergy from it, under pretence of speedily compromising the Matter, perhaps to please the King by delaying it as long as he can, in hopes of terminating it to his Satisfaction; and therefore conjures his Holiness to interpose his Authority, for the Confirmation of what he has begun, and to stop his Enemies Mouths. He acquaints him, that the King has declar'd he will go shortly to Rome, but he scarce believes it; though whether he go or send thither, 'twould be requisite his Holiness should be cautious of absolving him, or do it only conditionally, for fear of a Return to his beloved Sin, and should signifie as much to all the Churches of France.

In the 105*th*. Letter, he farther informs the Pope, that the King had taken a Solemn Oath, that Gualon should never be Bishop of Beauvais, in his Reign; and humbly remonstrates, that if his Holiness take any notice of this Oath, and do not resolutely shew his Power to the contrary, there shall never any more regard be had for Elections in France.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

Ivo concludes this Letter with Praying the Pope's Direction on what Courſe he ſhall take, if the King after obtaining his Holineſs's Abſolution, ſhould re-aſſume his former ill Practices, as he much fear'd he would.

The 106*th*. and 107*th*. Letters are to Henry the I. King of England, and his Queen Mathilda, exhorting them above all Things, to promote Religion, and take Care of the Churches in their Dominions, recommending alſo to their Bounty the neceſſitous State of the Church of Chartres, of which they would be more fully inform'd by two of the Canons of it, whom he had ſent on purpoſe to their Majeſties.

In the 108*th*. he gives Pope Paſchal an Account of the Quarrels between Ralph Archbiſhop of Tours, and the Abbot of Marmoutier, whom the former had accus'd of divers Miſdemeanors: Ivo thinks the Archbiſhop ought not to be heard againſt him; 1. Becauſe he was not himſelf legally ordain'd; 2. Becauſe the Abbot was never guilty of what is laid to his Charge; or, 3. If he were, the Archbiſhop ſhould then have objected them againſt him, while he was concern'd in Church-Affairs, and not now he is retir'd into a Cloyſter. 4. The Ground of the Archbiſhop's Malice againſt him, is, that he cannot have leave to read Maſs publickly, in the Church of Marmoutier, to inſult over the Monks, and embezzle the Goods of the Monaſtery; and therefore, to ſhow his ſpite againſt it, he had lately in Synod, prohibited any of his Dioceſs from entering into that Abby: 5. All the Witneſſes he had to produce againſt the Abbot, were either his own Kindred, or Men of a ſcandalous Reputation, or ſuch as he had brib'd and ſuborn'd; all which, he prays his Holineſs to take into his prudent Conſideration, and do what he thinks requiſite thereupon.

In the 109*th*. Letter, to the ſame Pope, he intreats him to conſtitute for his Legate in France, ſome Biſhop whoſe Dioceſs lies on this ſide of the Alps; for that the Cardinals who were wont to be ſent from the other ſide could not ſtay there long enough to put the Affairs of the Church in order, which miniſtred Occaſion to the Enemies of the Holy See, to ſay that they were not ſent to regulate Abuſes, but to ſcrape up Money for their own Pockets, or the Uſe of the Court of Rome: To prevent ſuch clamours, Ivo propoſes Hugh, Archbiſhop of Lyons, as the fitteſt Perſon he can think of for this Employment, in which he had heretofore acquitted himſelf with great Applauſe, and done excellent Service to the Church of Rome, and to thoſe of France.

In the 110*th*. he acquaints the Pope, that having almoſt reſolv'd to reſign his Biſhoprick, by reaſon of the exceſſive Wickedneſs of his People, and his deſpairing of doing any good among them, he was got as far as the Alps, on his way towards Rome, to conſult his Holineſs on this Occaſion, when he was inform'd of a treacherous Deſign his Enemies had againſt him, which oblig'd him to return home and ſend Gualon, who could better paſs unſuſpected, and by whom he deſires to know his Holineſs's Opinion and Pleaſure.

By the 111*th*. he requeſts Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, to excommunicate Hugh, Lord of Puiſet, as he had already done, for his violent and unjuſt Practices againſt the Church of Chartres, and to interdict the Uſe of Divine Service in the Village of Merville, which ſided with him.

In the 112*th*. he tells the Dean and Chapter of Paris, that they have power to excommunicate any under their Juriſdiction, as has the Church of Chartres, and ſeveral others: But he blames them for receiving into their Church Hugh Earl of Puiſet, and his Followers, whom he had excommunicated.

By the 113*th*. he ſends word to Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, that he is glad of the Election of Manaſſes to the Biſhoprick of Meaux, and is ready to aſſiſt at his Ordination, if it be at any Place whither he may ſecurely come, or obtain a Paſs-port for his Safety; otherwiſe, he would conſent and approve of it by Letters under his own Hand. The 115*th*. Letter is to the ſame Purpoſe.

In the 114*th*. he aſſures John Biſhop of Orleans, that his Conſcience cannot in the leaſt accuſe him of having done any Thing that ſhould Offend King Lewis; (the Son of Philip, ſirnamed le Gros,) and as to Hugh Earl of Puiſet, and his Companion, he cannot receive them into the Church, till they have given good Satisfaction for their Offences.

In the 116*th*. he intreats Adela, Counteſs of Chartres, not to give credit to, nor encourage any malicious and falſe Stories that ſhall be brought to her againſt him.

By the 117*th*. Letter, he acquaints Pope Paſchal, that he had publiſh'd the Injunctions ſent him by his Holineſs, for the reforming ſome Abuſes in the Church, which were ſo well receiv'd by his Brethren, the Clergy of his Dioceſs, that few ſhow'd any diſlike of them; but that ſome Additions were thought neceſſary for the Honour and Liberty of the Churches, which he prays the Pope to confirm, that Poſterity may be oblig'd to obſerve them.

The 118*th*. Letter to Henry King of England, requeſts him again, to beſtow ſomewhat on the Church of Chartres.

In the 119*th*. he tells Daimbert, that though the Oppoſition made againſt the Validity of Manaſſes's Election was without any juſt Ground, yet, to leave no room for Suſpicion or Calumny, he thinks it convenient that ſome of the Clergy of Meaux vouch for him upon their Oaths, and that then he may proceed to conſecrate him publickly. Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

The 120*th*. Letter is to Robert Earl of Ponthieu and Bellême, whoſe Territories were put under an Interdict, by the Biſhop of Seés. This Earl had ſent to Ivo for ſome of the conſecrated Chriſm, which he tells him, he muſt be forc'd to refuſe him, becauſe the Canons abſolutely forbid a Biſhop's communicating with any Perſon excommunicated by another Biſhop: He aſſures him nevertheleſs, that he is heartily ſorry for his Sufferings, and ſhould be glad if he might have an Opportunity of doing him any Service.

In the 121*ſt*. he expoſtulates with Adela Counteſs of Chartres, concerning the outrages committed by her Servants upon his Eccleſiaſticks, and aſſures her, he is ready to aſſiſt them in obliging her to do them Juſtice, if ſhe ſhall not think fit to endeavour it upon this third Admonition from him.

The 122*d*. to Volgrin, Archdeacon of Paris, aſſerts, that a Jewiſh Woman marrying with a Chriſtian Husband, and afterwards returning to Judaiſm, is not freed from her Conjugal Vow, nor, though ſhe leave him, can the Man marry with any other Woman during her Life.

In the 123*d*. to Gaultier, Library-Keeper of the Church of Beauvais, he gives his Opinion of a difficult Caſe he had conſulted him upon, viz. how he ſhould proceed againſt a Prieſt, who had in a prophane Manner, made uſe of other Ceremonies and Words than are preſcribed in the Form of Marriage? Ivo tells him, he had never yet heard of ſo foul a Sacrilege, nor was there any Proviſion againſt it in the Canons; and therefore, this being a Crime wholly new and unparallell'd, ſome more than ordinary Puniſhment ought to be inflicted on the Author of it: However, not to deal too ſeverely without Warrant and Authority from Scripture or the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, he thinks it ſufficient that ſuch Puniſhment be laid on him as the Canons order to be inflicted upon thoſe that violate the Sacraments and holy Things.

In the 124*th*. Ivo acquaints Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, that Hugh Earl of Puiſet having reſtored to the Church of Chartres their Goods he had detained, and given Security for what he had taken from himſelf and his Domeſticks, he deſires he may be abſolv'd from the Excommunication he lay under: But, as to King Lewis (le Gros,) he tells him, that Prince will not be yet reconcil'd to him, becauſe he refuſes to beſtow Preferment on one who had begun a cruel Schiſm in the Church of Chartres.

In the 125*th*. to the ſame Archbiſhop, he gives his Opinion, that thoſe whoſe Wives had committed Adultery while they were abſent in the Holy-Land, ought either to be reconciled to their Wives, or, remain unmarried to any others during their Lives.

In the 126*th*. he returns his Thanks to the ſame Archbiſhop, for adviſing him to be reconcil'd with the Counteſs of Chartres, to which he tells him, he is very well inclin'd, but that he cannot releaſe his Clergy from an Oath they had oblig'd themſelves by, not to admit into their Church any but the Sons of Free-men.

By the 127*th*. to King Lewis, he excuſes himſelf for not waiting on his Majeſty, becauſe he was not in a Condition to take a Journey, when His Majeſty's Orders came to him: And beſides, having agreed with the Counteſs of Chartres, to refer the Difference between them to the Biſhop of Albane, he thought it would look unfair or ſuſpicious in him to go to Court before the Arrival of that Biſhop.

In the 128*th*. he ſends word to Odon, a Regular Canon of St. Quintin in Beauvais, that he does not care to enter into Conference, or to have any think to do with the Perſon he was ſending to him, who had been his bitter Enemy.

In the 129*th*. he writes to Geofry, Earl of Vendôme, not to marry with the Viſcounteſs of Blois, whoſe firſt Husband was his Kinſman, and threatens him with Excommunication if he venture to do it.

In the 130*th*. he ſends the ſame Meſſage to the Viſcounteſs of Blois, and adviſes her to defer the Marriage, at leaſt, till the Scruple about their Conſanguinity be cleared and tried before him.

In the 131*ſt*. he adviſes Volgrin, Archdeacon of Paris, not to ſuffer a Prieſt who had reſign'd his Benefice to him, to re-enter it again by Force; and if he attempt it to excommunicate him and all that ſhall dare to aſſiſt him.

In the 132*d*. he prays Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, to puniſh a Prieſt of Stampes, in his Dioceſs, who had abus'd a Clergyman of the Church of Chartres; and asks his Advice about a Diſpute among the Clergy of that Church about Money that had been expended out of the common Stock, to defray the charge of a Deputation to the King, to demand Juſtice againſt the bold Enterprizes of the Counteſs of Chartres.

The

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

The 133*d.* Letter is to Richard, Bishop of Albane, the Pope's Legate, who had accus'd him of conniving at Simony in his Diocese: Ivo clears himself from this Aspersion, and tells him, if the Dean and Chanter, and the other Church Officers demand a Fee of every one that is admitted to a Canonry, 'tis what he cannot prevent, and has endeavour'd to remedy, but a Custom they plead Authority for, from the Example of the Church of Rome, where the Chamberlains and the other Officers of the sacred Palace, exact of the Bishops and Abbots that come for Consecration excessive Sums, under the Specious names of Oblations, or Benedictions; and that though he has endeavour'd, with all his might, to banish this wicked Custom out of his Church, yet he is forc'd to yield to the Practice of it by the Iniquity of the Times.

In the 134*th.* Letter to Daimbert, Archbishop of Sens, he asserts, and proves from good Authorities, that a Daughter promised in Marriage by her Father, to another Man's Son, is not bound thereby when she comes to Years of Discretion, though her Father be then living. Ivo acquaints the Archbishop likewise, that William, Son of the Countess of Chartres, notwithstanding the Accommodation between them, and without any Provocation given, had himself sworn, and compell'd others to take an Oath at the Altar, to destroy him and his whole Clergy, if they will not yield to his unreasonable Pretensions; that thereupon he had refus'd to celebrate Divine Service, when they are in the Church, and to give them the Episcopal Benediction, daily us'd; but that he defer'd pronouncing them excommunicate, till he had the Advice and Assistance of the Archbishop, and the rest of his Brethren.

The 135*th.* is sent to Pope Paschal, by a Knight, who came from the Siege of Jerusalem: This Knight had caus'd a Priest of Bonneval to be gelt, for detecting his Servants in a Robbery; for this unparallell'd Presumption, Ivo had cashier'd him, and enjoyn'd him a severe Penance for fourteen Years; to which he readily submitted; but his Enemies taking Advantage of his Misfortunes, and beginning to be very troublesom to him, the Knight begs Leave of Ivo to permit him to use his Arms again, in his own Defence; Ivo, upon great Intercession made for him, recommends him to the Pope's Mercy for Absolution.

The 136*th.* Letter is to Adela, Countess of Chartres, telling her, that if his Inclinations were for War and Broils, he had the Offer of such potent Succours, as might enable him to create her great Disturbance; but, Peace he had always desir'd, and thought it had been firmly settled between them, till he had the News of her Son William's rash Oath, to ruin him and his Church; that, out of Respect to her, he had hitherto forborn to excommunicate him, and hoped she should contrive some Means to prevent all such Irregularities for the Future.

The 137*th.* is to the Chapter of Beauvais, concerning one of their Canons, who was prosecuted by an Action of Law in the King's Court of Justice: Ivo minds them, that by the Orders of the Church, no Clergyman is to be cited before any but the Ecclesiastical Judges, and that if they have Courage enough, they ought to endure any Thing rather than the Loss of their Rights and Privileges; but if they cannot resolve to suffer in Defence of them, he can only advise them to submit to what they cannot remedy, and assist them by his Prayers, for their prudent Behaviour and good Success.

The 138*th.* Letter, to Volgrin and Stephen Archdeacons of Paris, is occasion'd by the great Contests among the Clergy of that City, about the Election of a Bishop: Ivo declares, he will never consent to any Election that is not made by the unanimous Consent of the Clergy and People, and confirm'd by the Metropolitan and his Suffragans: He admonishes them not to be sway'd by Hatred or Ambition, and wonders at their consenting to a Hearing of this Cause before the King.

In the 139*th.* he puts Daimbert, Archbishop of Sens, in mind, that the Contest about the Election of a Bishop of Paris, ought to be determined by him in Consistory, and that he should convene the Bishops his Suffragans, for that Purpose, when and where he pleas'd.

In the 140*th.* he asserts, that no Man ought to scruple assisting at Divine Service, or receiving the Sacrament from the Hands of a Priest suspected of Scandal, or notorious for an ill Life.

In the 141*st.* he assures Richard, Bishop of Albane and Legate of the Holy See, that he should as heartily rejoyce at King Philip's Absolution, as he had griev'd at his being excommunicate, if it might be for the Honour of God and of the Holy See, to grant it; that, though he somewhat doubts of the Sincerity of the King's Conversion, yet he will not oppose his being absolv'd; but advises that the Ceremony be perform'd as publickly, and solemnly as is possible, and rather at any other Place than at Sens: He tells him moreover, he would willingly appear at the Council he summons him to, if he will obtain for him the King's Passport, without which he dares not venture abroad, his Majesty having been incens'd against him for these ten Years past. This Letter was written in the Year 1104.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

The 142*d.* is a Letter of Thanks to Mathilda, Queen of England, for the Bells she had given to the Church of Chartres, and her Promise of repairing and new adorning that Church.

The 143*d.* carries Ivo's Acknowledgments, to Robert Earl of Meulan, for the kind Reception he gave to Richard Abbot of Preaux, and prays him to hasten the Restitution of the Goods of his Monastery.

The 144*th.* informs Pope Paschal of what was done in the Assembly of Bishops, call'd together at Baugency, by his Legate Girard, Bishop of Albane, to be Witnesses of the Separation of King Philip and Bertrade. He tells him, they were both ready to swear, upon the holy Evangelists, that they would forbear all carnal Knowledge of each other; the Legate would have had the Bishops have given Judgment upon them, but they declin'd it, and so the whole came to nothing: Ivo therefore prays the Pope to put an End to this Matter, and dispense with the King as far as he can. He acquaints the Pope also, that Gualon not finding it possible to get Possession of the Bishoprick of Beauvais, because of King Lewis's Oath against admitting him, he hopes he may be transferr'd to the See of Paris, to which he has been also elected by the Clergy and People of that City.

In the 145*th.* he intreats Manasses Archbishop of Rheims, to determine, as speedily as may be, whether Gualon shall continue Bishop of Beauvais, or not.

In the 146*th.* he acquaints Daimbert, Archbishop of Sens, that the Clergy and People of Paris have unanimously elected Gualon for their Bishop, and that since no Bishop can be translated to another See without Leave from his Metropolitan, and the Pope's Dispensation, he prays him to use his Interest at Rome, to obtain one for Gualon.

In the 147*th.* he interceeds with Pope Paschal to dispense with the Oath taken by the Chapter of Chartres, not to admit into their Fraternity, the Sons of such as had been Servants to any one, so that they may hereafter be allow'd to admit the Sons of any of the Earl of Chartres's Domesticks, or the Officers of the King's Revenues; and assures his Holiness that without abating of the Rigor of that Oath, the Church of Chartres could never enjoy any Peace.

In the 148*th.* to Hildebert, Bishop of Mans, he determines, that a certain Man who (as he writes) had promised Marriage to his Concubine in her Sickness, was bound by the Law of God, to acknowledge her, afterwards for his Wife.

In the 149*th.* he exhorts William Archbishop of Rouen, to expel out of the Diocese of Lisieux the Sons of Count Ranulf Flambard, who had seiz'd upon it, and to substitute in their Place the Archdeacon of Evreux.

In the 150*th.* he excuses himself to Pope Paschal, for not coming to the Council held by him in the Month of March, of which he had not Notice time enough before-hand.

In the 151*st.* he complains to Walter Bishop of Beauvais, of his having consecrated Odo, Abbot of St. Quintin, in that City, without his Consent, and contrary to the Opinion and Desires of the Fraternity of that House.

In the 152*d.* he stirs up Ledger, Archbishop of Bourges, to vindicate a certain Earl of his Country, who had formerly shewn himself his true Friend, from the Abuses he suffers under.

In the 153*d.* he earnestly exhorts William, Archbishop of Rouen, and Gilbert Bishop of Evreux, to drive out of the Bishoprick of Lisieux, Ranulf Bishop of Durham in England, and his two Sons, who had possess'd themselves of that Diocese.

In the 154*th.* he advises Robert Earl of Meulan, to petition the King of England not to countenance the Usurpations of Ranulf.

In the 155*th.* to Odo, Archdeacon of Orleans, Ivo treats of this Question; If a Woman who has committed Fornication, and is great with Child, may marry? And concludes, that in strictness, no great belly'd Woman ought to have carnal Knowledge of any Man; but considering the Infirmity of the Flesh, St. Paul advises Men to use their own Wives, for avoiding Fornication, although they are with Child; and therefore, by consequence, a Man may marry a Woman in that Condition.

In the 156*th.* to Ulric, he solves another Difficulty, viz. if in Confession to a Priest, a Man have own'd himself guilty of a Crime deserving Excommunication, the Priest ought publickly to refuse him the Communion of the Church? To which Ivo answers, That unless the Fault be publickly known, the Priest is not to take Notice of it, before others, but only to abhor it in his own Heart, and to give publick Notice to his People, in general Terms, that those who are guilty of such Crimes are already Excommunicate in the Sight of God.

In the 157*th.* he gives Pope Paschal an Account of what had hapned in the Diocese of Lisieux; that, after Ranulf Flambard was driven out, who had kept it several Years by Violence, William, Archdeacon of Evreux, was canonically nically elected Biſhop, who deferring being conſecrated, upon Account of his Metropolitan's (the Archbiſhop of Rouen's) being under Suſpenſion, Flambard had prevail'd with the Duke of Normandy to put one of his Clergy into that See. Ivo having thereupon counſell'd William to appeal, in Perſon, to the Pope, intreats his Holineſs to confirm his Election, and to conſecrate him at Rome.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

In the 158*th*. he acquaints Hugh, Archbiſhop of Lyons, that King Philip and his Son are reſolv'd to make void the Marriage of Conſtance, the King's Daughter, and Hugh Earl of Troyes, becauſe of their being too nearly related, and deſires the Archbiſhop to ſend ſpeedily to all the Biſhops, ſummon'd to Court on this Occaſion, the Genealogy of both Families.

In the 159. he writes to Pope Paſchal, that, when any complain to him of Judgments given againſt them in the Court of Rome, he adviſes them to have Recourſe again to the Holy See, for Relief, not thinking it fit to remove into any other Court a Cauſe that has been determin'd there: This Method he has perſuaded the Monks of St. Maur des Feſſez to take, who had been forc'd by the Council of Tours, held by Pope Urban, to ſurrender to the Earl of Angers the Juriſdiction they had held for 300 Years, over the Monaſtery of St. Maur de Glanfeuil; and prays the Pope to examine again, the Rights of their Pretenſions.

The 160*th*. to Odo, Abbot of Jumieges, prays him to receive kindly a Monk who had left his Monaſtery, and deſires to be admitted into it again.

The 161*ſt*. to the Provoſt of the Church of Rheims, aſſerts, that a Man, who promiſes Marriage to a Woman, and afterward marries another, ought to be divorc'd and return to his firſt Engagement.

In the 162*d*. he prays John Biſhop of Orleans, to degrade, in as publick and ſevere a Manner as may be, a certain Prieſt, who profanely treated the Sacraments of the Church, before a Woman's Statue.

In the 163*d*. he perſuades Geofry, Abbot of Vendome, not to ſuffer one of his Monks to hold a Benefice he was poſſeſs'd of.

In the 164*th*. Ivo reprimands Geofry, Abbot of Blois, for repenting of his having reſign'd his Abby into the Hands of the Pope's Legate, and giving his Voice for Maurice to ſucceed him.

The 165*th*. is a Letter of Thanks and Friendſhip, to Sampſon Biſhop of Worceſter.

The 166*th*. is to Humbald, Biſhop of Auxerre, acquainting him that Hugh le Blanc having made his Complaint to Bruno, Biſhop of Signi, that Pontius, Nephew to the Biſhop of Troyes, had married his Daughter Mathilda by Force, who had been promiſed by her Parents to Galeran, the King's Chamberlain, and that the Legate having given Orders to the Biſhop of Paris to cite Pontius and Mathilda before him, to anſwer for themſelves, that Biſhop had ſummon'd them to appear before a Council held by him, for that Purpoſe at Paris: There Mathilda affirm'd, that Pontius married her without her Conſent, or that of her Parents; Pontius could not anſwer any Thing in his own Defence, but ſtole out of Court: Then Mathilda brought ten Witneſſes to ſwear ſhe had been eſpouſed to another Man, and was married to Pontius againſt her Will; upon which the Biſhops declar'd the Marriage null, and that ſhe was free to marry any other Man. Ivo acquaints the Biſhop of Auxerre with theſe particulars, underſtanding that one of his Dioceſs had a mind to marry her, which he aſſures him he may do without Scruple. This Letter was written in the Year 1106.

In the 167*th*. he writes to the Biſhop of Mans, to hinder the Marriage of one who had already engag'd himſelf to another Woman.

In the 168*th*. Letter to Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, he ſpeaks of the Difference that had been between the Viſcount of Chartres and Count Rotroc, about a Farm, in the Dioceſs of Chartres: The former of them had given it to Ivo, Lord of Courbeville, whom the Party of Rotroc ſeiz'd and kept Priſoner, though he were one of thoſe appointed to go to the Holy Land: The Viſcount of Chartres having complain'd of this Matter to the Pope, his Holineſs appointed the Archbiſhop of Sens, the Biſhops of Chartres and Orleans, Commiſſioners to ſettle it.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres, after he has, by this Letter, inſtructed Daimbert in the Merits of the Cauſe, adviſes him to take care how he proceeds in it, and to conſider if it will be moſt adviſable for them to excommunicate Rotroc, or to cite both Parties before them: Daimbert is of Opinion that they are oblig'd, by the Pope's Letter to them, immediately to excommunicate Rotroc; but Ivo thinking this too hard Meaſure, conſults Gualon, Biſhop of Paris, about it, in the 169*th*. Letter; and in the 170*th*. Letter, tells Daimbert again, that he cannot joyn in ſo unjuſt an Action, as cutting off one from the Communion of the Church, before he be found, upon fair Trial, to deſerve it, eſpecially ſince Rotroc is willing to ſtand to the Examination and Sentence of their Court, which his Adverſaries decline doing as much as they can. In his Letter alſo he determines, that a Woman that marries her Husband's Murderer, ought not to be ſeparated from him, if ſhe can juſtify her ſelf from having a Hand in the Murder, and the Man can offer reaſonable Proof, that he had never carnal Knowledge of her during her Husband's Life, nor contriv'd his Death, to have the Enjoyment of her to himſelf.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

In the 171*ſt*. Letter, he tells Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, that he ſcarce knows how to adviſe him to deal with ſome he had excommunicated for ſtealing the Goods of the Church, and violating the Obſervation of Holy-Days; if he receive them to the Communion again, before they have made Reſtitution, 'twill be directly contrary to the Laws; if he perſiſt in keeping them out, he muſt of Neceſſity, incur the King's Diſpleaſure: And though, if he have Courage enough, he ought to ſee that the Rigor of Diſcipline be obſerv'd; yet, becauſe ſuch Severity may occaſion diſmal Inconveniences, he adviſes him to uſe Moderation; chiefly becauſe the Adminiſtration of temporal Affairs naturally belongs to Kings, who are not, unadviſedly, to be exaſperated, if they ſometimes go beyond the Bounds of their Authority, but muſt be left to God's Judgment, when they will not yield to the humble Admonitions and Remonſtrances of the Clergy. for his Part, Ivo proteſts, that were he oblig'd, in Obedience to his Superiors, to readmit an excommunicate Perſon into the Church, without Penance or Satisfaction, he would do it by ſome ſuch Form as this; 'Do not deceive your ſelf; I admit you into the viſible Church, notwithſtanding the Crimes you are guilty of; but I cannot open to you the Gates of the Kingdom of Heaven, and therefore I abſolve you, no farther than I have Power to do it; thoſe of more Courage and Piety, may find out better Methods in ſuch Caſes'. This ſeems to me proper enough; not that I hereby preſcribe to others, but to prevent farther Miſchiefs to the Church, think it beſt to ſubmit, thus far, to the Neceſſity of the Times.

The 172*d*. Letter contains a Judgment given by Ivo, in Favour of the Monks of St. Laurner at Blois, againſt the Abbot and Monks of Vendome, concerning a Chappel near Baugency, which he adjudges to belong to the Juriſdiction of the former, notwithſtanding the Abbot of Vendome's having appeal'd to the Holy See.

In the 173*d*. he relates to Pope Paſchal, what had paſs'd at the Trial of Rotroc, who, he tells him, has now appeal'd to his Holineſs.

In the 174*th*. he aſſures Mathilda, Queen of England, that he will pray for the Soul of her Brother (Edgar King of Scotland, who died without Iſſue, in the Year 1107.) for though he doubts not but his Soul is in Abraham's Boſom; yet ſince we cannot be certain of the State of Souls in the other World, it is a Piece of commendable Devotion to pray even for thoſe in Heaven, that their Happineſs may be augmented; and for thoſe in Purgatory, that their Sins may be forgiven them.

In the 175*th*. he excuſes himſelf to Pope Paſchal, for not appearing at the Council he cites him to, (held at Troyes, Anno 1107.) by reaſon of his being very much indiſpos'd; but tells his Holineſs, he has ſent his three Archdeacons in his Stead.

In the 176. to the ſame Pope, he prays him not to oblige Volgrin Chancellor of the Church of Chartres, to accept of the Biſhoprick of Dol, to which he was elected by the Deputies of that Church in the Council of Troyes; and,

In the 177*th*. Letter, he acquaints the Clergy of Dol, that Volgrin will not accept of that Biſhoprick.

In the 178*th*. he counſels Geofry, Biſhop of Beauvais, to puniſh one of his Clergy, who had admitted to Divine Service, and conſorted with an excommunicated Perſon.

In the 179*th*. to Adela, Counteſs of Chartres, he complains of her denying the Clergy of his Church the Privileges of travelling the Roads, and of buying Bread and Wine, and threatens her, in caſe ſhe do not revoke the Orders ſhe has publiſh'd to this Effect, that the whole Clergy of the Province ſhall daily curſe her at the high Altar.

The 180*th*. Letter gives Ledger, Archbiſhop of Bourges, Advice to abate ſometimes the Rigor of Juſtice; and not to be ſo wholly govern'd by ſome of his Clergy, as not to do any Thing but according to their Pleaſure, even in judicial Matters; as hapned lately, in the Caſe of Arnoulf of Vierſon, who was ſo exaſperated by his hard Uſage, that he was forc'd to appeal to Rome, upon the very firſt hearing before them.

The 181*ſt*. is to Richard, Biſhop of Albane, the Pope's Legate, upon a Diſpute between the Monks of Vezelay and thoſe of St. Lucian at Beauvais, about a Church they both of them laid claim to.

The 182*d*. is to Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, concerning a Difference between Ivo and the Chapter of Chartres, who had violently oppoſed and affronted him, for conferring the Office of Subdeacon upon Fulk: The Archbiſhop is agreed upon to be Judge between them, and Ivo prays him to appoint the Day and Place, where their Cauſe ſhall be heard, which he wiſhes may be at Chartres.

In

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

In the 183*d.* to William, Biſhop of Paris, he aſſerts, that if a Man challenge a Woman for his Wife, upon Pretence that her Father promis'd her to him, he muſt bring Witneſſes of ſuch Promiſe, and that the Trial by ſingle Combat is not to be allowed in Caſes of this Nature.

The 184*th.* to Walter, Library-Keeper of Beauvais, maintains, that all Actions about Goods belonging to the Church are to brought before Eccleſiaſtical Judges.

In the 185*th.* he gives anſwer to what William, Archbiſhop of Rouen had written him, about one who had gotten himſelf ordain'd Subdeacon, before he had paſs'd the inferior Degrees of Holy Orders: In ſtrictneſs of Law, Ivo acknowledges, that he ſhould not be permitted to exerciſe the Functions of the Order he has obtain'd, nor to riſe to the higher Orders; however, if his Life and Converſation be unexceptionable, and the Good of the Church require it, he thinks the Archbiſhop may give him the Clerical Benediction, and let him aſſiſt at Ordinations, not to be re-ordain'd, but to confirm him in his Orders.

In the 186*th.* Letter, he anſwers ſeveral Queſtions propos'd to him by Laurence, a Monk of the Monaſtery of Charity: 1. He aſſerts that we are oblig'd to avoid only thoſe that are excommunicated for the moſt notorious and abominable Faults; 2. That of ſuch we are not to receive any Thing, but in extream Neceſſity, nor are we to give them any Thing, but for their Relief, in utmoſt Want and Miſery; That thoſe of the Clergy who buy of Laymen Goods, that formerly belong'd to the Church, or receive ſuch from them by way of Gift, are much to blame, if they do it with any other Deſign but of reſtoring them to the Church: 4. That they who, in private Confeſſion, diſcover themſelves to be guilty of the greateſt Crimes, are not therefore to be excommunicated, nor put to publick Penance, as publick Offenders; however, they are to be admoniſh'd to abſtain from the Sacrament, and from the Functions of their Orders, if they are Eccleſiaſticks: 5. That the Sacraments are not the leſs profitable for being adminiſtred by wicked Prieſts, nor 6. by Simoniacal ones, or ſuch as are married: 7. That the People ought not to abandon their Prelate, nor fail in their Obedience to him, though in many Reſpects blameable, till he is publickly condemn'd or excommunicated: 8. That Confeſſion of common and ſmall Sins may be made to any Chriſtian, but that great Faults are to be confeſs'd only to thoſe who have the Power of binding and looſing: 9. That one may entertain an excommunicated Perſon, provided he do not eat with him, nor ſalute him.

In the 187*th.* he admoniſhes the Counteſs of Chartres, to leave troubling the Abbot and Monks of Bonneval on Account of the Murder of Hugh the Black.

In the 188*th.* to Ralph, Archbiſhop of Rheims, he delivers his Opinion, That a Woman who is deliver'd of a Child within two or three Months after her Marriage, is not to be divorced from her Husband.

The 189*th.* contains Ivo's Anſwer to the Complaints of the Archbiſhop and Clergy of Rheims, againſt the Archbiſhop of Sens, for having conſecrated King Lewis le Gros: Ivo remonſtrates, that the Conſecration could not be longer defer'd, that it could not be perform'd at Rheims, becauſe Ralph was not then fully poſſeſs'd of that Archbiſhoprick, and the City of Rheims was under an Interdict; that beſides, he knows no Law that orders that Office to be perform'd there, but can prove that ſeveral of the Kings of France have been conſecrated elſewhere, and by the Biſhops of other Cities.

In the 190*th.* Ivo gives Pope Paſchal an Account of the Accommodation agreed to between the King and Ralph Archbiſhop of Rheims, on Condition that Ralph take an Oath of Homage to the King for his Archbiſhoprick: This he ſays they were oblig'd to conſent to, not as a Thing neceſſary in it ſelf, but to procure Peace, and prevent farther Diſtraction in the Nation.

In the 191*ſt.* he interceeds with Hugh Abbot of Cluny in Behalf of one of his Monaſtery, whom he had degraded, upon an Accuſation brought againſt him of having procur'd Abortion to a Woman great with Child, before he took the Vow of a Monk upon him. Ivo thinks his Puniſhment too ſevere, and that though the Fact were clearly prov'd againſt him, as it is not, he ſhould not ſuffer for ever, for a Fault he may have long ſince repented of.

In the 192*d.* to the Monks of Colomb, near Nogent le Roi, he diſſuades them from hearkning to the Advice ſomebody had been giving them of quitting their Monaſtery, becauſe their Superiors had taken away ſome Tithes, belonging to the Biſhop's Juriſdiction; he ſhews them, that they ought rather to remain in Subjection to their Superiors, and live upon ſuch Tithes as the Church ſhall in Charity allow to the Monaſteries, as ſhe does to Hoſpitals, than turn Sarabaites, and live upon the Goods of the Poor, or the gain of Uſury: nevertheleſs, he blames the Abbots and Superiors of Monaſteries, for buying Tithes of Laymen for their own Uſes, to the Damage of the Church, though this be no Reaſon for the Monks to withdraw themſelves from the Monaſteries and the Subjection they have ſworn to them: He approves well enough of the Lives of ſuch Anchorets, as after having been train'd up in Monaſteries, retire wholly into Solitudes; but highly blames thoſe who make it their Buſineſs to run from Town to Town to be admir'd at themſelves, and proudly deſpiſe all that are not of their Profeſſion, deſiring to be thought Maſters, before they have been Scholars.

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

In the 193*d.* he adviſes Geofrey, Biſhop of Beauvais, not to infringe the Privileges granted to the Monaſtery of St. Quintin, by the Biſhops his Predeceſſors, and confirm'd to them by the Authorities of the Holy See and the King's Majeſty.

In the 194*th.* he ſends Notice to Hugh Dean of Orleans, and Volgrin, his Archdeacon, that he has excommunicated Chenard, belonging to his Dioceſs, and therefore, according to the Direction of the Canon, they are not to entertain him.

The 195*th.* is a very ſevere Anſwer to a diſpleaſing Letter he had received from Geofrey, Abbot of Vendome, with whom, for the future, he renounces all Correſpondence, till he behave himſelf better.

In the 196*th.* to King Lewis le Gros, he begs that Prince not to order Proceſs againſt the Abbot of St. Denys for what he is charg'd with by a certain Monk, who having own'd himſelf a Criminal, his Teſtimony againſt the Innocence of others is not to be receiv'd.

In the 197*th.* to William Abbot of Marmoutier, he agrees with him that a Prieſt, who, to fright his Enemies, ſet Fire to his own Houſe, and thereby unhappily burnt a Neighbour's Child, ought to undergo the Penalties appointed by the Canons.

The 198*th*, the 199*th*, and the 201*ſt.* Letters are about a Difference, between Giſlebert, Nephew to the Archbiſhop of Tours, and Geofry Canon of that Church, concerning the Government of Syeurry, the Determination of which Matter the Pope had put into the Hands of Ivo Biſhop of Chartres, and the Biſhops of Paris and Soiſſons: By the two firſt Letters, he cites Giſlebert, to appear before them; and by the laſt, he acquaints the Pope, that upon his refuſing to own their Authority, he had ſent Geofrey to his Holineſs for Juſtice.

In the 199*th.* Letter, he admoniſhes Daimbert, Archbiſhop of Sens, to correct two ſcandalous Practices in his Church; one, of the Chaunter's holding another Preferment, contrary to his Oath; the other, in one of the Chapter's keeping in his Houſe two Women of very ill Fame.

The 202*d*, Letter is a notable Inſtance of the Liberty us'd by Ivo, in dealing with the greateſt Princes King Lewis had ſent to him for ſome outlandiſh Furrs, Ivo tells him, 'tis not decent for a King to ask ſuch Vanities of a Biſhop, nor is he bound to obey any ſuch Orders from a King; that he could not believe, at firſt, the Letter came from his Majeſty, and ſends this Anſwer, that he may not any more make ſuch Requeſts to him, or any other Biſhop, if he deſire they ſhould retain a due Eſteem for his Majeſty.

In the 203*d.* to Liſiard, Biſhop of Soiſſons, he ſhews him, from good Authority, that he has a Right to demand of the Archdeacons of his Dioceſs, Part of the Profits due to the Biſhop, which they have taken upon them to receive for themſelves, both before and ſince his Acceſſion to the Biſhoprick.

By the 204*th.* he informs Pope Paſchal, that he had excommunicated Guy of Puiſet, for his ſacrilegious and outragious Attempts againſt the Church of Chartres, and petitions his Holineſs to confirm the Excommunication, and to order the Archbiſhop of Sens, and the Biſhops of Paris and Orleans, to publiſh it in their Churches: He informs the Pope likewiſe, of a Difference between the Dean and Subdean of Chartres, and prays him to compoſe it.

The 205*th.* Letter is written to a Knight, who ſuſpected his Wife to have been with Child by another Man, becauſe he had been abſent from her ſeven Days longer than is uſual between the Times of Conception and bringing forth, and becauſe the Perſon whom he ſuſpected of being too familiar with her, had been burnt in paſſing the Trial of Ordeal: As to the Computation of Time, Ivo tells him, that ought not to ſway him, ſince many Women go much longer with Child; and, for the Trial by Fire, no Heed is to be given to it, ſo that theſe two Reaſons prove nothing againſt the Honeſty of his Wife, whoſe Oath, and the good Word of her Neighbours and Acquaintance, ought fully to ſuffice in Vindication of her.

In the 206*th.* Letter, to Hildebert, Biſhop of Mans, he examines by what Method an Eccleſiaſtick, accus'd of Crimes or Miſdemeanors, is to purge himſelf, and ſays, that heretofore, his ſingle Oath was ſufficient, but that for better Security, the Oaths of ſix or ſeven other Clergymen have been requir'd, together with that of the Party's.

The 207*th.* is a Letter of Thanks to the Biſhop of Worceſter.

In the 208*th.* Letter, Ivo reproves Geofrey, Abbot of Vendome, that, having quitted that Place and retir'd into a private Cell, he entertains there Monks that are disobedient to, and abuse their Abbot, and that he hinders those who hold Estates of the Abbot, from doing Homage to him.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

In the 209th. he represents to Hugh Earl of Troyes, that the Consultation intended to be held at Sens about the Validity of the King's Marriage with the Marquis Bonifface's Daughter, the Earl's Kinswoman, will neither be honourable, nor of any Advantage to her: It will be to no Purpose, because the Marriage will certainly be declar'd null by the Bishops and Lords of the Realm; nor will it be for her Honour, because it will occasion the illegitimacy of her Birth to be talk'd of; so that, Ivo advises the Earl to hinder, if he can, all Debates about that Matter.

In the 210th. he writes Pope Paschal Word, that Odo, Bishop of Cambray, complains of his Holiness, for turning out of the Archdeaconry of his Church, one who was a zealous Friend of the Holy See, and putting in one who is an Enemy to it.

In the 211th. to Ralph, Archbishop of Rheims, he deduces the Genealogies of the Earl of Flanders, and the Daughter of the Earl of Rennes, to shew they are nearly related.

The 212th. to Geofrey Bishop of Beauvais, is about the Validity of a Donation granted to the Monastery of St. Simphorien.

In the 213th. to John Bishop of Orleans, he proves that the Regular Clergy may have Cure of Souls and Parishes committed to them.

In the 214th. to Bruno Archbishop of Treves, he bemoans the sad State of Religion, under the unhappy Divisions between the Church and the Civil Government.

The 215th. is a Letter of Compliment and Friendship, to Thomas Archbishop of York.

In the 216th. and 217th. Letters, he gives Richard, Bishop of Albane, Legate of the Holy See, an Account of the Dispute between the Monks of Bonneval and those of Blois, which he tells him he had us'd his best Endeavours to accommodate, but could not yet effect it.

In the 218th. he writes to Gualon, Bishop of Paris, that the Canon of that Church, who had lately been married, ought to loose his Preferment and be degraded from being a Clergyman, but that his Marriage must remain good and valid.

In the 219th. he justifies himself to Pope Paschal, for having divided Part of a Prebend of his Church among the Canons by daily Distributions, for the Encouragement of such as assisted constantly, in performing Divine Service.

In the 220th. to Hildebert, Bishop of Mans, he shews, that when an Appeal is made from one Judge to another, the Party concern'd is, within five Days after he appeals, to get a Letter from the first Judge to the other he appeals to, who is not else oblig'd to take Cognizance of the Matter. He asserts also, in this Letter, that it is not in the Power of any Bishop, to give up the Estate of a religious Society to the sole Disposal of the Abbot.

In the 221st. Letter, to John Bishop of Orleans, concerning a Freeman's having married a Slave, without knowing her to be so; Ivo says, that by the Civil Law, the Marriage is void, and he may quit her and marry another Woman; but that, by the Laws of God and of Nature, they ought to keep together, or at least, if he put her away he may not marry again.

In the 222d. to the Clergy of Autun, he inquires, if a Woman that has been guilty of Adultery, must necessarily be divorc'd from her Husband, and concludes that in Strictness, she ought; but, by the Wisdom of the Gospel, such a Temper was prescrib'd as may reconcile her to her Husband.

In the 223d. to Owen, Bishop of Evreux, he persuades him to excommunicate and deny Christian Burial, to such as imbezel the Patrimony of the Church.

In the 224th. he tells Guy, Abbot of Malevne, that one of his Monks having been with him, and acknowledged with great Sorrow, that he took Orders for the Sake of Temporal Gain only, though by the Rigor of the Canons he ought for ever to be turn'd out of the Clergy, yet having express'd true Repentance for his Sin, he thinks he may be permitted to retain his Orders, and to exercise the Functions of them.

In the 225th. to Daimbert, Archbishop of Sens, he delivers his Judgment, that a certain Person who came and confess'd, that before he was married he had carnal Knowledge of his Wife's Sister, ought to be deem'd ever after infamous, and his Evidence not to be heard against any Man; that he ought also to be divorc'd from his Wife, and live the rest of his Life unmarried; but that his Wife should have her Portion back again.

In the 226th. he requests Bernier, Abbot of Bonneval, to receive kindly one of his Monks, who was sorry for having left his Monastery, and beg'd Leave to come into it again.

The 227th. is a Letter of Condolance to Pope Paschal; and acquaints him, that being desirous of bestowing a Prebend, in his Church, upon Guerin, he is oppos'd, thereby the Dean and Chapter.

In the 228th. to Gauthier, a Priest, Ivo answers a Scruple he had propos'd to him, viz. How to reconcile these Words of the Prophet Ezekiel, (At what Time soever a Sinner shall repent, and turn from the Evil of his Ways, he shall save his Soul alive, or be forgiven,) with the Sentence and Discipline of the Ecclesiastical Canons, which suspends, for some Time, even Penitents from the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper? And how it comes to pass, that those whom Christ, who is the Head, immediately releases, the Church, who is the Body, should detain under the Penalty of Sin: This Difficulty, Ivo says, 'tis easy to solve, if we consider the Manner of God's remitting Sins, and the Frailty of Mankind; that God, who knows the Heart, forgives the Sin assoon as he sees the Heart is converted, but that the Church, which knows not the inward Thoughts of a Man, cannot absolve a Sinner till his Conversion be made evident by publick Signs of it.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

In the 229th. to Lisiard, Bishop of Soissons, he declares, that a Man who defames a married Woman, to any of her Relations, by saying he had carnal Knowledge of her before her Marriage, ought not to be admitted in Court as an Evidence against her, because he is criminal himself by his own Confession.

In the 230th. to Hildebert, Bishop of Mans, he asserts that a Jewish Woman who turns Christian may not quit her Husband, nor marry another, at least unless her Husband were her near Relation.

In the 231st. to Pontius, Abbot of Cluny, after giving some mystical Reasons of the Elevation of the Chalice and the Host, and Signs of the Cross made upon those Occasions, he delivers his Opinion that a Monk who was forc'd to make himself a Eunuch, to prevent Epileptick Fits he was subject to, may notwithstanding be allow'd to take Orders.

In the 232d. to Hildebert, Bishop of Mans, he maintains that a Man who had been too familiar with his Wife's Mother before his Marriage, ought not to be divorc'd from his Wife, but upon good Proof of his having been carnally joyn'd to the Mother.

In the 233d. to Henry Abbot of St. John d'Angeli, he declares that he adheres to the Opinion of the Popes, Gregory and Urban, touching Investitures given by Laymen, and believes that they who allow them the Power of bestowing Church-preferments are Schismaticks; nor is he afraid of hereby offending Pope Paschal, who has own'd in several Letters to him, that what he had done with Relation to the Investitures, he had been constrain'd to do by the Violence of others, but was still in his Heart of another Opinion.

In the 234th. he persuades William, Abbot of Marmoutier, to end his Quarrels with Ralph, Archbishop of Tours; and in the 235th. he tells that Archbishop, he is glad that the Bishops of Mans and Angers labour to procure Peace between him and the Abbot.

The 236th. Letter is written in the Name of Daimbert, Archbishop of Sens, and his Suffragans, to John Archbishop of Lyons, who had summon'd them to a Council, call'd at Anse near Lyons, to consult about Matters of Faith and the Dispute of Investitures. They assure him, though they have a great Respect for him, yet they will not go beyond the Limits set them by their Ancestors, and that the Holy Fathers allow'd no Authority to the Bishop of the Chief See to call the other Bishops to any Council, out of their peculiar Provinces, unless by the express Command of the Holy See; or, that upon some Controversy, which could not be terminated within the Province, any of the Bishops of it should appeal to the Primate. As to the Matter of Investitures, propos'd to be treated of in this Council, they tell him it cannot be done without discovering the Nakedness of their Father the Pope; and besides, 'twould be needless to have any Thing prov'd against Persons they dare not pass Sentence upon; that the Pope may be excus'd for granting Investitures, since he did it only by Force, and in Cases of Necessity; that 'tis foolishly done of some to bestow the Name of Heresie upon Investitures, since Heresie can be only in Matters of Faith, not in the Practice and Discipline of the Church; or at most, those only can be reckon'd guilty of Error who suppose some Sacrament or Grace confer'd by the Investiture, if ever any were so weak as to think so; that however, Investitures are an Invasion upon the Rights and Liberties of the Churches, and ought to be abolish'd in all Places, where it may be effected without endangering a Schism.

The 237th. is the Archbishop of Lyons's Answer to the foregoing Letter, wherein he protests he did not mean to force them out of their Province to a Council, but only desir'd to confer with them, and ask their Advices about the State of the Church; not but that the Church of Lyons has such Authority over the other Churches of France: As to the Persons he would have treated about, he says, there is not one of them but ought to submit to the Pleasure of a Council, even Kings and Emperors being subject to the Authority of the Bishops; that he did not design to uncover, but to hide the Nakedness of their Father the Pope; that no

Dangers

Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

Dangers nor Obſtacles ought to hinder them from courageouſly defending the Cauſe of the Church; that thoſe who approve of Inveſtitures remaining in the Hands of the Laity, are Hereticks in their Hearts; that he will not uſurp any undue Authority over the Dioceſs of Sens, but prays them to remember, 'twas always ſubject to the Primacy of the Archbiſhop of Lyons.

In the 138*th.* Letter to Pope Paſchal, Ivo endeavours to diſſuade him from conſtituting a Biſhop over the Church of Tournay, and exempting it from the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of Noyon, it has been under theſe 400 Years; leſt his Holineſs, by ſo doing, create a Miſunderſtanding between the King and the Clergy, and raiſe ſuch a Schiſm as happened in Germany.

In the 239*th.* he compliments King Lewis le Gros, upon his intended Marriage with a Niece of the Earl of Flanders.

In the 240*th.* he warns a certain Monk of the Scandal he occaſions by his too great Familiarity with a Nun.

In the 241*ſt.* he writes to Humbaud, Biſhop of Auxerre, not to ſuffer a Cauſe, already determin'd in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, to be brought again before the Earl, or any Secular Judge.

In the 242*d.* to Owen Biſhop of Evreux, he explains himſelf concerning his having given his Opinion that a Freeman, who had married a Slave, without knowing her to be ſuch, ought to be divorced from her; and adds, that this is not diſſolving a lawful Marriage, but only declaring that 'tis unlawful for them to live together any longer, their Marriage being null by Law.

In the 243*d.* to Gualon, Biſhop of Paris, he ſays, that a Marriage concluded on by the Parents, between two Children in their Cradles, is of no Force.

The 244*th.* is written to Pope Paſchal, in Favour of Hubert, Biſhop of Senlis, accus'd by ſome of his Clergy, to the Metropolitan, of ſelling Holy Orders. He had met with hard Uſage from the Biſhops of his own Province, and therefore appeals to the Pope, to whom Ivo recommends his Caſe.

The 245*th.* is to Hugh Earl of Troyes, who having liſted himſelf for the Holy Land, deſign'd to put away his Wife and live in Celibacy. Ivo commends his Reſolution, but adviſes him to do it with his Wife's conſent, and to lead a regular Life.

In the 246*th.* to Liſiard Biſhop of Soiſſons, he declares that 'tis not allowable for a Man to marry two Siſters ſucceſſively, though the Marriage with the former of them were not conſummated.

In the 247*th.* to John Biſhop of Orleans, Ivo highly blames him, that upon a Quarrel between the Earl of Orleans and Ralph Lord of Baugency, he and his Church had conſented that they ſhould decide it by ſingle Combat: And,

In the 248*th.* he adviſes the latter to carry himſelf reſpectfully towards the Earl of Orleans.

In the 249*th.* to Gilbert, Archdeacon of Paris, he affirms, that thoſe who had been aſſiſtant, and conſenting to an Adultery, cannot be receiv'd as Witneſſes againſt the Adultereſs.

In the 250*th.* he interceeds with Pope Paſchal, that he will grant to Ralph, Biſhop of Rocheſter, elected to the See of Canterbury, the Confirmation of that Dignity, and alſo the Pallium which he is not able to come and aſk in Perſon of his Holineſs.

In the 251*ſt.* to Manaſſes Biſhop of Meaux, he tells him, he did well to refuſe adminiſtring the Viaticum (or laſt Sacrament) to a dying Perſon, who was troubled with a conſtant Vomiting.

In the 252*d.* he writes to Ralph Archbiſhop of Rheims, that he thinks it unreaſonable that a Woman ſuſpected of Adultery by her Husband, ſhould undergo the Trial of Ordeal, but that it is ſufficient for her to purge her ſelf upon Oath.

In the 253*d.* he recommends to King Lewis's Favour and Protection Geoffrey, Biſhop of Amiens, who had met with ill Uſage in his Dioceſs.

In the 254*th.* he vouches for Geoffrey, Archbiſhop of Rouen, to Pope Paſchal, that it was not in his Power to wait upon his Holineſs at Rome, as he would otherwiſe have done.

The 255*th.* is a Letter of Conſolation to Ralph, Abbot of Peſeia, in his Sickneſs; exhorting him to bear his Afflictions patiently, and to ſee one choſen in his Stead to govern the Monaſtery, if he find himſelf uncapable of doing it: telling him alſo, that the Extream Unction being a Sacrament, needs not be repeated.

In the 256*th.* he diſſuades Rainaud, a Monk, from turning Hermite.

In the 257*th.* he gives Philip, Biſhop of Troyes, an Account of the Accommodation made by the Regular Canons of St. Quintin, at Beauvais, between Odo Prior of St. Georges, and ſome of his Canons.

In the 258*th.* he recommends to Pope Paſchal the Affairs of Hubert, Biſhop of Senlis.

In the 259*th.* he expoſtulates with Ralph, Archbiſhop of Rheims, concerning a Judgment he had given againſt the Church of St. Quintin, at Beauvais with Relation to a Mill they claim'd Right to; and lays before him the wrong he conceives done to them. Ivo Biſhop of Chartres.

In the 260*th.* he aſſures Stephen of Gnarland, the King's Chancellor, that he may with a ſafe Conſcience, be elected to ſucceed Gualon, Biſhop of Paris, who is to be remov'd to Beauvais.

In the 261*ſt.* he diſſuades Henry, King of England, from marrying his Daughter to Hugh, an Earl in the Dioceſs of Chartres, there being too near a Relation between them.

In the 262*d.* to Pontius, Abbot of Cluny, he ſhews him the Reaſon, why in the Conſecration of the Cup, at the Lord's Supper, the words [Myſtery of Faith] are added, which were not us'd by our Saviour, at the Inſtitution of this Sacrament? and ſays, (among other things) that this is done becauſe we judge of the greatneſs of the Myſtery contain'd in it not by the Senſes but by Faith.

By the 263*d.* he repreſents to the Clergy of Beauvais, how much he is griev'd for their ſufferings.

In the 264*th.* he intercedes with King Lewis, for the Clergy and People of that City.

In the 265*th.* he acquaints that Prince, how much he had been miſinform'd by ſome, who had ſuggeſted to him that the Clergy of the Church of Chartres, do invade the Rights of the Chapter and repreſents to him, that they only hinder them from ſome exactions prohibited by the Holy See.

In the 266*th.* to Conon, Biſhop of Paleſtine, and Legate of the Holy See, in France, after giving him an Account of his having excommunicated Hugh, for a breach of Peace, he prays him to make choice of wiſe and Religious Perſons to be Judges at the Tryal he is to have with the Monks of Marmoutier, for the Church of St. Nicholas de Courbeville.

The 267*th.* Letter is to the ſame Legate, about the ſame Affair: Ivo, therein ſends his Excuſe, that he could not wait on him in Perſon to plead for himſelf.

In the 268*th.* he writes to the Biſhops of Beauvais, Chalons, Amiens and Senlis, Commiſſioners for hearing this Cauſe, letting them know that Judgment had already been given, in Favour of the Biſhop of Chartres, by Hugh, Biſhop of Die, in a Council held at Iſſoudun.

In the 269*th.* he tells Bernier, Abbot of Bonneval, that he ought not to hinder one of his Monks from turning Hermite.

In the 270*th.* to Turgedus, Biſhop of Auranches, he adviſes him to ſubmit to the Deciſion of the Pope's Legate, or to ſend deputies to Rome, to plead there in his own behalf.

In the 271*ſt.* he thanks Pope Paſchal, for granting to the Clergy of Chartres a Confirmation of their Privileges, to ſhelter them from the Exactions of the Chapter: And whereas two of that Body had diſputed the Authority of the Pope's Decree, and complain'd of it to the King, he prays his Holineſs to do what he thinks further neceſſary to enforce the Execution of it.

In the 272*d.* he exhorts Reginald, Biſhop of Angers, to be reconciled to one Mathilda, of his Dioceſs and to endeavour to reclaim her from ill Courſes.

In the 273*d.* he intercedes with Conon, the Pope's Legate, to moderate the Sentence of Excommunication, iſſued out by him againſt the Biſhops of Normandy, in Favour of the Biſhop of Bayeux.

In the 274*th.* he writes to Pope Paſchal, concerning a Controverſy he has with the Monks of Marmoutier, who to create him Trouble, had appeal'd to Rome and cited him to appear there, though living at a great diſtance and very ill: He intreats the Pope to appoint ſome to judge between them at Home, and wiſhes him not to grant any Clergyman a Diſpenſation to hold two Benefices.

In the 275*th.* he informs Conon, the Pope's Legate, that he has acquainted Count Theobald with the Sentence of Excommunication he had publiſh'd againſt all that had a hand in taking the Earl of Nevers, and which would have its Courſe againſt him, if he did not ſet the Earl at Liberty, by a time therein prefix'd him: He ſays the Count was ſomewhat ſurpriz'd that the King had refer'd this matter to the Eccleſiaſtical Judicature; ſince he is very ready to appear before the King's Judges, and doubts not but he can make it appear to them that not he but the Earl of Nevers is to blame, and offers, if they ſhall require it, to deliver him up to them.

By the 276*th.* he recommends to Pope Paſchal, Turſtin Archbiſhop of York elect.

In the 277*th.* to Aldevert, Biſhop elect of Mans, he tells him, he hears he was guilty of ſeveral irregularities, while he was an Archdeacon, and that he was not Canonically elected to the Biſhoprick. He refers him therefore to the Witneſs of his own Conſcience, and exhorts him not to take the Government of others upon him while he himſelf lies under any ſuch Guilt.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

The 278th. is a Letter of Compliment, to Robert, Bishop of Lincoln.

In the 279th. to Lisiard, Bishop of Soissons, he persuades him to receive one of the Clergy of his Church, upon his submitting to Penance, or to give him leave to remove to some other Church.

In the 280th. to the same Bishop, Ivo determines, that a married Man may not be suffer'd to accuse his Wife of Adultery, upon Suspicion only, nor to force her to pass the Tryal by red-hot Irons.

In the 281st. he writes to Anselm, Bishop of Beauvais, that he is ready at any time to attest, that the Clergy of St. Peters, in Beauvais, had granted to the Regular Canons of St. Quintin, in that City, the Inheritance of a piece of Land they now lay claim to again.

The 282d. is an Instrument in Form, by which Ivo takes into the Protection of the Church of Chartres an Hospital for poor People, lying at Châteaudun.

The 283d. is an Act, for consecrating a piece of Ground near Tiron, for a Church-yard, and putting it under the Jurisdiction of the Church of Chartres.

The 284th. is a Deed making over, for ever, to the Monastery of Bonneval the Church of St. Peter, at Châteaudun, which some of the Clergy had redeem'd from a Layman, in whose Possession it was before.

Ivo Bishop of Chartres.

The 285th. is a Confirmation of the Gift of the Church of St. Nicasius, at Meulan, by Robert Earl of Meulan, to the Monks of Bec.

The 286th. is the Charter of the Foundation of the Abby of St. John du Val, in the Suburbs of Chartres.

The 287th. is concerning the Eucharist, of which we have already given an Extract. It was written by Ivo, while he was a Regular Canon of St. Quintin at Beauvais.

The 288th. is a Confirmation of a Grant, formerly made, to the Monastery of Marmoutier, of the Church of Hanche and a Chappel annex'd to it.

The last is a Letter to the Abbot of the Monastery of Marmoutier, written in very pressing Terms, to persuade him and his Monks to stand to the Arbitration made by himself and the Earl of Chartres, of the Difference between them and the Church of Chartres.

Of the Pannormia of Ivo.

Of the Pannormia of Ivo.

IVO, Bishop of Chartres, has left us two Collections of the Ecclesiastical Canons; one of them intituled Pannormia, which makes but a small Volume; the other pretty large commonly known by the Name of the Decretal; the former in eight Books, the Decretum is divided into Seventeen. The same Preface is prefix'd to both of them.

The Pannormia is suppos'd by some to have been written by Hugh, Bishop of Châlons: And indeed, Vincent, Bishop of Beauvais, mentions an Abridgment of the Decretum of Ivo, drawn by him: But that must be different from this we are speaking of, which is not an Epitome of any other Book, but an Original Work. In all the Manuscripts, that can be found, it bears the Name of Ivo's Pannormia; particularly, in that in the Library of St. Victor, which was written before the time Hugh Bishop of Châlons liv'd in; which is an evident Proof that the Pannormia cannot be his. The Decrees of Innocent IId. who was Pope since Ivo's Death, though added in the Editions, are not in the ancient Manuscript, nor in several others, as has been observ'd by Antonius Augustinus. The Pannormia was compos'd before the Decretal.

Of the Pannormia of Ivo.

Of the Decretum of Ivo.

Of the Decretum of Ivo.

THE Decretum is a Collection of Rules and Constitutions in Church-Affairs, taken out of the Letters of the Popes, the ancient Canons and Councils, the Writings of the Fathers of the Church and the Laws of Catholick Princes. In the Preface, Ivo gives notice, that he has rang'd them under general Heads, or Titles, for the easier finding out any Canon the Reader has Occasion to consult. And admonishes that if one Canon shall seem to have a different Meaning from that of another, we are not presently to conclude they are contradictory; but to remember that some are to be understood according to the Rigor of their Import, others are to be taken with Allowances; for that all Ecclesiastical Discipline aiming only at that Edification which is founded upon Charity, every Rule and Order of the Church is intended for the same End; upon which Account, the Spiritual Physicians, the Guides of Souls, accommodate their Remedies and Prescriptions to the Quality of the Distempers and the Condition of their Patients: That moreover, We are to distinguish between what is laid down by way of Advice, and what is deliver'd as a Precept or Command, what is forbid from what is permitted or tolerated only: And among those Things that are commanded or forbidden, we must carefully consider that some of them are so, by an eternal and immutable Law; others, by the Laws of Men, which may be either changed, repealed, or dispensed with: Of all which Distinctions, Exceptions, Restrictions and Allowances he gives very pertinent Instances and Illustrations out of the Writings of the Fathers.

Of the Decretum of Ivo.

The Contents of the XVII. Parts of the Decretal.

The Contents of the XVII Parts of the Decretal.

THE 1st. Part treats of Faith, and of the Sacrament of Faith called Baptism, of the Qualifications requir'd in those that are to be baptiz'd, of the Ministration, the Ceremonies, the Vertues and Effects of Baptism and of Confirmation.

The 2d. is concerning the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, of the Manner of receiving it, of the Celebration of the Mass, and of the Sanctity of this and the other Sacraments.

The 3d. is of the Church and what belongs to it, and the Reverence and Observance due thereto.

The 4th. treats of the Observation of the Feasts and Fasts of the Church, of the Holy Scriptures, of the Customs and Councils of the Church.

The 5th. of the Supremacy of the Church of Rome, the Rights of Primates, Metropolitans and Bishops, their Ordination and Soveraign Dignity.

The 6th. is of the Conversation and Ordinations of the Clergy; how they are to be tryed and punished for Offences.

The 7th. is of the Retirement and single Lives of Monks and Nuns; and of the Penance to be undergone for Breach of the vow of Continency.

The 8th. of Lawful Marriages, of Virgins and un-veiled Widows; of Rapes, of Concubines, of Transgressions of the Marriage-vow; of the Punishment of Adultery.

The 9th. speaks of Incestuous Marriages and Fornication; of the Degrees of Affinity and Consanguinity, within which Marriage may not be contracted; of the Penances and Punishments due to the Violators of Laws.

The 10th. of Murders voluntary and accidental, of all Sorts; and of the Guilt and Punishments of them.

The 11th. of Conjurers, Sorcerers, Juglers, Stage-Players, and the Penalties they are liable to.

The 12th. treats of Lyes and Perjuries, of Informers, Evidences, False-witnesses, Judges and Advocates.

The 13th. contains the several Canons against Ravishers, Robbers, Usurers, Hunters, Drunkards, Rioters and Jews.

The 14th. is concerning Excommunication just and unjust, in what Manner and for what Offences to be inflicted.

The 15th. of Penances, and Commutations of Penances.

The 16th. sets forth the Duties of the Laity; and in what Manner they are to be proceeded against, when they are guilty of any Crimes or Irregularities.

The 17th. consists of the Reflections and Speculations of the Fathers, particularly of St. Gregory, concerning Faith, Hope, and Charity.

The Contents of the XVII Parts of the Decretal.

Besides the Works already nam'd, there are twenty four Discourses or Sermons of Ivo, Bishop of Chartres.

The 1st. of them concerning the Sacrament of Baptism.

The 2d. of the Dignity of Holy Orders, and the Conversation and Duties of Churchmen.

The 3d. upon the Mystical Significations of the Sacerdotal Habits.

The 4th. of the Dedication of Churches.

The 5th. of the Agreement between the Holy Rites of the Old and New Testament.

The 6th. upon the Birth and Sufferings of our Blessed Saviour.

The 7th. upon his second Advent.

The 8th. upon the Nativity.

The 9th. upon the Circumcision.

The 10th. upon the Epiphany.

The

The Contents of the XVII Parts of the Decretal.

The 11*th.* upon the Purification of the Virgin Mary.
The 12*th.* upon the Septuagesima.
The 13*th.* upon Ashwednesday.
The 14*th.* upon the Lent.
The 15*th.* upon the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin.
The 16*th.* upon Palm-Sunday.
The 17*th.* upon Monday-Thursday.
The 18*th.* upon Easter-Day.
The 19*th.* upon our Saviour's Ascension.
The 20*th.* upon Whitsunday.
The 21*st.* upon the Day of St. Peter's being made Bishop of Rome, (as is suppos'd.)
The 22*d.* upon the Lord's Prayer.
The 23*d.* upon the Apostle's Creed.
The 24*th.* of the indecent Apparel of Men and Women.

The Contents of the XVII Parts of the Decretal.

THere is also a short Chronicle, of the Kings of France, from Pharmond to Philip the first, reckoned, by some, to be written by Ivo, Bishop of Chartres; but neither does this seem to be his, nor another much larger (ascrib'd to him by some) from Ninus King of Assyria, to Louis, le Debonnaire, which was written by Hugo Floriacensis.

The Pannormia of Ivo, Bishop of Chartres, was printed at Basil, in 1499. and at Louvain, in 1557.

The Decretum was printed at Louvain, in 1561. And at Paris, in 1647. with the Letters and Sermons correctly published by Father Fronto, a Regular Canon of St. Genevieve: In which Edition are added the learned Notes of Juretus Canon of Langres, and of Souchet Canon of Chartres upon the Letters of our Bishop.

CHAP. II.

The History of the Church of Rome under the Popedom of Paschal II. Gelasus II. and Calixtus II. Containing the Rise, Progress and Conclusion of the Contests between the Holy See and the Empire, about the Right of Investitures.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

The Election of Paschal II.

PAschal II. call'd, before he was Pope, Rainier, was a Tuscan, the Son of Crescentius and Alsatia. He embrac'd the Monastick Life, and practis'd it in the Abby of Cluny, under the Abbot Hugh. He was created Cardinal Priest of St. Clement, by Gregory VII. and made Abbot of the Monastery of St. Stephen, and St. Laurence of Rome. After the Death of Urban II. the Cardinals cast their Eyes upon him to advance him to the Papal Chair. When he had Intimation of this, he absconded for some Time; but being afterwards discovered, he was proclaimed Pope by all the Cardinals, with the loud Acclamations of the People, and consecrated the 14*th.* Day of August, in the Year 1099.

The Death of Guibert. The Anti-popes who succeded him.

The first Thing he did was entirely to drive out the Anti-pope Guibert. He declar'd War against him, and forc'd him to fly to the Mountains of Abruzzo, whether he died, in the Year 1100. His Death did not put an End to the Schism which had lasted twenty Years already; for after him came three more Anti-popes, who succeeded one after another, but fell within a short Time. The first was Albert of Atella, whom Richard Duke of Campania, the great Supporter of Guibert, caus'd to be elected in his stead. At the End of four Months he was taken by Pope Paschal's Friends, and shut up in the Monastery of St. Lawrence. After this the People of Cava a small Town near Palestrina, undertook to bestow the Pontificate on a Roman nam'd Theodoric, who enjoy'd the Title of Pope only three Months, and thought himself very happy in relinquishing it and becoming an Anchoret. Maginulphus who was elected at Ravenna, by the name of Silvester IV. seem'd to have a greater Interest, but he dy'd within a short time after. By this means Paschal being freed from all his Rivals, retook Castellano and Benevento from the Prince of Capua, and the Town of Cava, on which Peter Collona Abbot of Farfa had seized, and driven Stephen Corso out of Rome, who having seiz'd upon St. Paul's Church, annoy'd the Romans by his continual Incursions.

The designs of Paschal II. against the Emperor Henry.

Having thus quieted Italy, his Designs were aim'd against the Emperor Henry. Conrad the Son of that Emperor, who was Governor of Italy, dying in the Year 1101. Henry had a Design of passing into Italy, going to Rome, and holding a Council there the Beginning of the Year 1102. to adjust the Differences that had been between him and the Holy See. The Pope made no open Opposition to it, nay, he invited the Emperor thither: But forasmuch as they could not trust each other, the Emperor would not venture to rely on the Italians, and Paschal was not very sorry that Henry did not come into Italy.

The Council of Rome under Paschal II. against the Emperor Henry.

However, he held a very large Council at Rome, about the End of Lent, where, Henry, not appearing in Person, nor having sent any Ambassadors thither, was excommunicated with all his Adherents. And because several maintain'd that there ought to be no regard had to such kind of Anathema's, the Pope in this Council drew up a Form in these Terms: 'I anathematize all Heresie, and chiefly that 'which disturbs the State of the present Church, which 'teaches and maintains that no regard is to be had to Anathema's, and that one may lawfully contemn the Ecclesiastical Sanctions. I promise to obey Pope Pascal and 'his Successors; I approve and condemn what the Holy 'Catholick Church approves and condemns. The Pope exacted this Oath of all that assisted at the Council, and on Holy-Thursday published the Excommunication against Henry, drawn up in these Words: 'Whereas Henry has not 'ceased from rending the Garment of Jesus Christ, that 'is, has not ceas'd from ravaging the Church by Fire and 'Sword, from dishonouring it by his Perjuries, Incontinence, and Homicides; he as been excommunicated and 'condemn'd for his Contumacy and Disobedience, by 'Pope Gregory of Blessed Memory, and by our Predecessor, 'Urban II, and we also have anathematiz'd him for ever 'in our last Synod by the Judgment of the whole Church, 'which we desire may be notified to the whole World, 'and especially the People residing beyond the Mountains, 'that they may have no hand in his Iniquity,

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

Henry, to avoid the Stroke of this Excommunication, about the End of the Year, order'd Publication to be made, that he intended to resign the Empire to his Son Henry, and to travel to the Holy-Land. He not only caus'd this to be published by Bishop Eginard, but likewise engag'd himself by a Vow to undertake this Journey. This Proposal engag'd the Affection of the Princes and Clergy of the Empire to him; and several of his Subjects made Preparations to accompany him in this Expedition. But when they perceiv'd that he had no Design to perform his Vow, they began to change their Inclination towards him; which gave his Son Henry an Occasion of rebelling against him, when by his Father's stay he saw his Hopes of very suddenly enjoying the Empire frustrated. Having enter'd upon this Design by the wicked Counsels of three great Lords, he left his Father at Mentz, where he had spent the Christmass Holy-Days in the Year 1104 and withdrew to Bavaria, Religon being the Cloak to cover this unatural Disloyalty. He began by anathematizing the Heresie of his Father, and by promising Obedience to the Pope. The Nobless of Austria, Germany, and the Eastern parts of France declaring for him, he enter'd into Saxony, where he was very well received; and having spent the Easter Holy-Days at Quintilineburg, he was acknowledg'd Emperor by all the Towns of that Country. Rothard Archbishop of Mentz, and Gebehard Bishop of Canstance, the Pope's Vicars in in Germany entred into this Confederacy, and advis'd young Henry to reconcile all Saxony to the Holy See.

The Rebellion of Henry V. against his Father.

The Assembly of Northusa in the Year 1105.

Young Henry to establish his Power appointed a general Assembly of the Bishops and Clergy to be held on the 29*th.* of May, in the Year 1105. at Northusa, a Royal Seat; wherein, they made several Orders with respect to the Discipline of the Church. They reform'd upon the Spot what they thought they might safely do; and what appear'd to be of the most Consequence they referr'd to the Determination of the Holy See. They therein condemn'd the Heresie of the Simoniacal, and that of the Nicolaitans, namely of such Clerks as would not live in Celibacy. They therein fix'd the Summer Ember-Week, which was to be the Whitsun-Week; and order'd that those Persons who had been consecrated by false Bishops should be reconcil'd the next Ember-Week. Henry V. would not appear at that Council till after he had been invited thither; and when he came he seem'd to behave himself with a great deal of Modesty, Humility, and Wisdom. He declar'd to them, that he did not not covet his Father's Throne, and was ready to resign it to him, if he would but submit to St. Peter and his Successors. The Bishops of Hildesheim, Paderborne, and Halberstat, throwing themselves at the Feet of the Archbishop of Mentz their Metropolitan, declar'd, that they would submit to the Holy See; whereupon their Cause was referred to be tried by the Pope.

The War between the two Henries.

No sooner did this Assembly break up, but Henry V. marched towards Mentz at the Head of some Troops, in order to render himself Master of that City, and to reestablish the Archbishop thereof. The Emperor his Father being within the Place, Henry would not venture to invest it, but drew his Forces off to Wirtsburgh, which he took by Surprize, drove out thence Bishop Erlong, and put Robert in his Place. Afterwards he invested the Castle of Nuremberg, which surrendred to him at the End of two Months; and being come to Ratisbon, he was set upon by his Father who defeated him and retook that City. young Henry without being shocked at this Overthrow rally'd up more Forces, and having been joyn'd by the Saxons, he encamped over against his Father's Army, being separated from each other only by the River Regen. After several slight Skirmishes, young Henry found a way of winning over the Princes and great Men who were in his Father's Army. They would not fight, so that the Emperor was forc'd to fly, and left his Son Master of the Field, who seiz'd on his Father's Treasures that were at Spires.

Henry IV. is cast into Prison and dethron'd.

About the End of the Year it was agreed that a Convention should be held at Mentz, to adjust the Difference then on Foot between the two Emperors. The Father came upon the Rhine with an Intention of being there; but the Son being afraid he should not obtain all that he desir'd from this Convention, had recourse to Fraud and Treachery. He waited upon his Father, protested to him that he was very sorry for what had passed, accompanied him towards Mentz: But in the Road some Body acquainted the old Emperor that a very great Number of Lords of Suabia and Saxony his Enemies were arrived there: Upon this, his Son shew'd him that it would not be safe to trust himself in their Hands, and persuaded him to retire to the Castle of Bingben near Mentz. He no sooner enter'd the Place, but the Gates were shut upon him, where he was kept close Prisoner. Afterwards they sent to him requiring him to deliver up the Ensigns of his Imperial Dignity, that they might forthwith be conferred on his Son Henry. The Bishops of Albany and Constance, the Pope's Legates in this Assembly, repeated the Excommunication issued out against him. At last, they took him out of the Castle of Bingben, and carry'd him to Ingelheim, where they forc'd him to renounce the Empire, to confess that he had been in Fault, and on his Knees to ask Absolution of the Bishop of Albany, who deny'd it him, and referr'd him to the Pope. Young Henry was crown'd Emperor, and acknowledg'd as such by the Assembly of Mentz. He dispatched six Bishops in the Quality of Deputies to Rome with several Persons of Quality, to obtain a Confirmation of all that had been done at Northusa and Mentz.

Henry IV. retires to Liege, and issues forth a Declaration.

However; old Henry having made his Escape from Ingelheim, was receiv'd by Henry de Limbourg, Duke of the Lower Lorrain, and by Obert Bishop of Liege who held out several Places upon the Rhine for him. The City of Liege was the Place he made choice of for his Residence, from whence he wrote Letters to the King of France, to his Son, to the Bishops, and to the Princes of Saxony and Germany. Wherein he makes loud Complaints of the Manner wherein he had been us'd, and Protests against all that they had forc'd him to do by Constraint. In the last Letters, he declar'd that he was ready to pay all manner of Respect to the Pope, to regulate all the Affairs of the Empire by the Advice of Henry Abbot of Cluny, and appeals to the Pope's Determination of all that had been done against him in Germany.

The Reply of his Son Henry.

His Son caus'd an Answer to be return'd to him in the Name of the Lords, to this Effect; 'That the Miseries 'which he had brought upon both the Church and State 'had oblig'd them to depose him, and set up his Son on the 'Throne in his stead: That he had acknowledg'd himself 'that he was unworthy of the Empire, and had resign'd it 'into his Son's Hands: That the promises he at present 'made signified nothing, since they could not tell how to 'give any Credit to them: That however, that he might have 'no Reason to complain, they would consent to have 'the Business examin'd over again in an Assembly of the 'Lords and Commons.

The Death of Henry IV.

Notwithstanding this young Henry pursued his Father, and after he had been beaten off from the Bridge of Visel, he invested Cologne, designing afterwards to march to Liege. But the Besieged held out more vigorously than he expected; and after two Months Siege, he was ready to break up, when he received the News of his Father's Death at Liege, the 7th. of August, in the Year 1106. The People of Liege obtain'd their Pardon, upon Condition, that they would dig up the Body of the late Emperor, which was carry'd to Spires, and put into a Sepulchre of Stone, where it remained without the Church unburied for five Years together: The Pope's Partisans were of Opinion, that since he died excommunicated, they could not give him Ecclesiastical Burial. Guibert the Antipope was us'd after the same manner, whom they dug up six Years after his Burial, and cast his Bones to the Common-Shore to insult over his Memory.

The Council of Guastalla, in the Year 1106.

After the Death of the Emperor Henry IV. those Princes and People who had continu'd firm to his Interests were oblig'd to submit to the new Emperor. The Pope was invited into Germany, and left Rome with that Design. In the way, on the 19th. of October, in the Year 1106, he held a Council at Guastalla, a Town of Lombardy, situated on the Po, therein to regulate what concern'd the Churches of Germany and Lombardy, which had been engag'd in the Schism. He therein declar'd that the Bishops, the Priests, and the other Clerks who had been ordain'd during the Schism, should still keep their Orders, provided, they had not procur'd them by Simony or by Force, nor were Conscious to themselves of being Guilty of any other Crimes. He therein renew'd the Decrees of his Predecessors against Investitures, and prohibited the Alienation of the Church Revenues. He took away from the Metropolis of Ravenna the Towns of Emilia, that is, Placenza, Parma, Reggio, Modena, and Bologne, to punish it for its Rebellion.

The Contest between the Pope and the Emperor concerning Investitures.

The Decree against Investitures was dislik'd by the Emperor, whereupon Paschal instead of going to Mentz, as he had design'd, retir'd into France; and after he had spent the Christmass Holy-Days in the Abby of Cluny, he went to implore the Protection of King Philip. However, the German Nobles and Bishops being conven'd at Mentz, resolv'd upon sending Deputies to the Pope, to let him know that the Power of creating Bishops had been granted by the Holy See to Charlemagne and his Successors; and that therefore he could not divest that Prince of it. These Deputies enter'd into a Conference with the Pope at Chalons, and the Archbishop of Treves being their Prolocutor, after he had told the Pope that the Emperor wish'd him all manner of Prosperity, and profer'd to serve him to the utmost of his Power so long as it did not prejudice the Rights of the Empire, he declar'd that from the Time of St. Gregory the Great, the Emperor had Notice given him of the Person to be chosen; that after he had given his Consent, the Election was publickly made; that then he who who was elected was consecrated; and that after the Consecration he waited upon the Emperor, to receive from him the Investiture for the Royalties, by the Ring and Pastoral Staff, by which at the same Time he did Homage and swore Allegiance to the Emperor: That this Custom seem'd to be very reasonable, because without it the Bishops could not enjoy the Cities, Castles, Territories, Fiefs, or any other Revenues depending on the Empire.

The Reasons alledg'd by the Emperor's Deputies for the Investitures.

The Pope reply'd by the Bishop of Placenza, that the Church being redeem'd by the Blood of Jesus Christ was free, and therefore ought not to be put into Bondage: That if it could not chuse its Prelates without the Consent of the Emperor, it would become his Vassal; and that if these Prelates after their Election were oblig'd to receive the Investiture from him by the Ring and Pastoral Staff, this would be an Usurpation on the Prerogative of God himself: That lastly, it was unbecoming and beneath the Sacerdotal Order and Unction, that Hands consecrated by the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ should be put into Hands stain'd with Blood-shed.

The breaking up of the Conference about Investitures.

The Emperor's Deputies withdrew, being very much dissatisfied at this reply, threatning to put an End to this Debate at Rome, with their Swords in their Hands. The Pope would willingly have renew'd the Business with Adelbert the Emperor's Chancellor; but they could not come to an Agreement in any one Point, and the Emperor's Deputies return'd back into Germany.

The Council of Troys in the Year 1107.

The Pope on his part assembled a Council at Troyes in Campagne, about Ascension-day, in the Year 1107. wherein after he had made several Institutions about Church Discipline, he propos'd to renew the Decrees of his Predecessors against Laicks concerning themselves with Ecclesiastical Dignities. The Emperor who had spent the Easter Holy-Days at Mentz, made his approaches towards the Council, and sent thither his Ambassadors to acquaint them that the Popes had formerly granted to Charlemagne, the Right of making Bishops; and that if they would not consent thereto, to declare that he would prevent the determining of that Affair in a strange Country. Upon this Remonstrance the Council granted the Emperor a Years Time, that he himself might come in Person to Rome, there to plead the Cause in a general Council which should determine it.

The Emperor's Journey into Italy.

The Emperor put off his Journey till such time as he had fully regulated the Affairs of the Empire; after which, in the Beginning of the Year 1110. he held a Convention at Ratisbon, wherein he declar'd that he had resolv'd to go to Rome, there to receive the Imperial Crown, and to adjust the Differences betwixt the Pope and him. He order'd der'd the Princes of the Empire to prepare to wait upon him, and to raiſe an Army by Auguſt. At that Time he ſet out according to his former Reſolution. His Army conſiſting of 30000 Horſe, was divided into two Bodies; He put himſelf at the Head of the one at Turea, and the other ſtay'd for him at Novara, and joyn'd him near Milan, where he was Crown'd King of Lombardy, by Archbiſhop Chryſolaus. Afterwards he croſs'd the Po and came to Placenza, where and at Parma he ſtay'd for ſome Time, whilſt he ſent his Deputies to adjuſt Matters with the Princeſs Mathildis, whom he continu'd in her Dominions, upon Condition, that ſhe ſhould not oppoſe his Paſſage. The Seaſon being very far gone, he loſt a great many Sumpter Horſes in croſſing the Appennine Mountains, which oblig'd him to ſtay ſome Time at Florence, where he ſpent the Chriſtmaſs Holy-Days. From thence he marched to Sutri, after he had in his Paſſage demoliſh'd the Town of Arezzo, which oppos'd his March.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

The Treaty between the Pope and the Emperor

The Embaſſadors which he had ſent to the Pope, waited upon him at this Place, with the Legates of his Holineſs; and they agreed that the Pope ſhould crown Henry, and that this Prince ſhould allow the Churches their Liberty, and grant no more Inveſtitures to Biſhops, upon Condition that he ſhould retain the Dutchies, Counties, Marquiſates, Territories, the Rights of Money, Juſtice, and Marches, the Revenues, Fiefs, and other Eſtates which they held of the Empire. This Agreement ſeem'd at firſt Sight to be very advantageous to the Church; but in reality ſtripp'd the Biſhops of their Eſtates and Dignities, for a Chimerical Honour, and reduced them to extream Poverty. The Emperor foreſeeing that one of theſe two Things would happen, either that this Agreement ſhould be executed, and he be a great Gainer thereby; or that if the Pope could not prevail upon the Biſhops of Germany to quit their Pretenſions to thoſe great Eſtates, he ſhould re-enter upon the Rights of the Inveſtitures, made no ſcruple to ratify this Treaty, upon Condition that the Pope would prevail upon the Biſhops to approve thereof. The Pope for his Part, who loſt nothing by it, and was ſatisfied that by this means he ſhould humble the Biſhops of Germany, was likewiſe very well pleas'd with this Treaty. Whereupon it was ſign'd and ſworn to, and Hoſtages exchang'd on both ſides.

The Pope and Cardinals apprehended by the Emperor's Order.

After the Concluſion of this Treaty, the Emperor marched towards Rome, and on the 11*th*. of February in the Year MCXI, arriv'd at the Town Leonina, where he was receiv'd by the Clergy and Laity, who came to wait upon him, and conducted him with loud Acclamations to St. Peter's Palace, where he met with the Pope and the Cardinals who attended his coming to the Top of the Stairs. He kiſs'd the Feet of his Holineſs, and afterwards his Forehead, Eyes and Mouth, and went into the Church on the Pope's right Hand, who celebrated Maſs. When they came to the Ceremony of the Coronation, the Pope ask'd the Emperor whether he was willing to obſerve the Treaty to which they had agreed, and remit his Right of Inveſtitures: The Emperor reply'd that he was ready to do it, provided the Biſhops of Germany would conſent thereto; and that it was requiſite to know their Sentiments of the Matter. The Biſhops of Germany oppos'd it all they could, and complain'd that the Pope was minded to diſpoſe of that which did not belong to him. The Pope in vain remonſtrated to them that theſe Eſtates were committed to them by way of Truſt, and that they need not ſcruple to reſign them back to the Emperor; for they would never conſent to ſo diſadvantageous a Propoſition. Upon theſe Debates, Henry ſummon'd the Pope to crown him, and upon his refuſing to do it, order'd his Guards to apprehend him and ſeveral Cardinals. The News of this being noiſ'd about the City, the Romans ran to their Arms, animated thereto by the Cardinals of Freſcati and Oſtia, kill'd ſeveral Germans ſtragling in the City, and ſet upon the Emperor's Forces very vigorouſly. The Engagement was very obſtinate on both ſides, the Emperor was in great Danger of his Life, but at laſt repuls'd the Romans, and marched out of the City two Days after, carrying along with him the Pope and Cardinals Priſoners.

The Pope grants the Right of Inveſtitures to the Emperor.

He quartered near two Months about Rome, till at laſt the Pope to put an End to the War which was ready to break out, and to get his Liberty, reſolv'd to grant him the Right of Inveſtitures and to crown him. Being thus agreed with the Emperor, they re-enter'd Rome the thirteenth of April, and coming to St. Peter's Palace, the Emperor receiv'd the Imperial Crown at the Hands of the Pope. They ſay that the Pope communicated to him a Moiety of the Hoſt which he had conſecrated, proteſting that he gave it him as a Seal and Pledge of the Peace which he had made with him, and of the Concord that was between them; and that whoever of them ſhould break this Concord or violate this Peace, ſhould have no Part or Portion in the Kingdom of Jeſus Chriſt. The Pope likewiſe granted him a Bull of Confirmation of the Right of Inveſtitures, importing that he granted and confirm'd the Privilege which the Emperors his Predeceſſors had of giving Inveſtitures by the Ring and Croſier to the Biſhops and Abbots of his Dominions elected without Simony or Violence: That they ſhould not be conſecrated till after they had receiv'd Inveſtiture, excepting ſuch as were us'd to be inveſted by the Archbiſhops or the Pope. This Conceſſion is founded on theſe two Reaſons; Firſt, becauſe the Predeceſſors of Henry had conſiderably enrich'd the Churches, by the Revenues of the Crown which they had beſtowed on them: And ſecondly, becauſe it was neceſſary that the Diſſentions and Diſturbances which might happen upon Elections, might be appeas'd by the Royal Authority. Laſtly the Pope in this Bull denounc'd an Anathema againſt thoſe who ſhould oppoſe this Conceſſion. Of the Church of Rome, &c.

The Emperor having thus compaſs'd his Deſign, departed from Rome, being attended by the Pope. They parted very good Friends in Appearance, by ſhewing to each other a reciprocal Good-will and Affection. The Pope returned to Rome, and the Emperor as he went through Lombardy, took an Oath of Fidelity from all the Towns, and arriv'd at Spires, Auguſt 4. Where he interr'd his Father's Corps with great Magnificence, according to the Leave he had from the Pope, upon the Teſtimony given that he dy'd a Penitent.

The Grant of Inveſtitures diſapprov'd by the Cardinals.

Notwithſtanding this, Pope Paſchal at his Return, found a great many Cardinals offended that he had granted the Right of Inveſtitures to the Emperor, and he excus'd himſelf as well as he could, upon the Account of the Extremity he was in, and the Miſeries which threatned Rome, if he had not made this Condeſcention. Theſe Reaſons did not ſatisfy the more Reſolute, who took an Occaſion from the Pope's going into the Country, to call an Aſſembly, wherein they cancell'd all that the Pope had done, renew'd and confirm'd the Decrees of his Predeceſſors againſt Inveſtitures. The Pope having heard of it ſent them Word, that though their Intention might be good, yet their Way of Proceeding was not to be tolerated: That he hop'd for the Future to make Amends for what he had done Amiſs, only to divert the Ruin of Rome and all the Country; but that they ought to have Patience, and to take Care that the Zeal they have for the Welfare of the Church does not prove prejudicial to it.

Bruno Biſhop of Signi, Abbot of Mount Caſſin, was one of thoſe who was the freeſt in ſpeaking againſt Inveſtitures; and who ſollicited the Pope moſt to revoke what he had done, and to anathematize the Emperor. The Cardinals who had been taken Priſoners with the Pope, were divided in their Sentiments; ſome were for what he had done, others diſapprov'd it. The Pope offended that this Diviſion roſe ſo high, and fearing it would ſpread farther, if the Monks of Mount Caſſin follow'd their Abbot's Sentiments, order'd Bruno to retire to his Biſhoprick, and another Abbot to be elected in his Room. This Queſtion was likewiſe debated out of Italy, and we are inform'd that John Archbiſhop of Lyons, would have call'd a Council to condemn what the Pope had done, and that Ivo of Chartres endeavour'd to diſſuade him from it. Some maintain'd that one could not approve of Inveſtitures without being guilty of Hereſy; others believ'd that they might be tolerated, though they were irregular, and a third openly ſtood up in their Vindication. Pope Paſchal was very ſorry that he had deviated from the Decrees of his Predeceſſors, and deſir'd nothing more than to revoke what he had done; but durſt not undertake it on his own Head after the Oath which he had taken, and the ſolemn Bull he had granted.

The Council of Lateran, in the Year 1112.

To wind himſelf out of this Difficulty, he aſſembled a Council of one hundred Biſhops or thereabouts in the Lateran Church in March 1112. The chief Inſtitution of which was the repealing the Right of Inveſtitures. For after they had renew'd againſt the Clerks, the Favourers of Guibert the Antipope, the Interdiction pronounced againſt them, the fifth Day of the Seſſion the Pope ſhew'd in what Manner he and the Cardinals had been apprehended by King Henry, and how contrary to his Reſolution he had been forc'd to grant to that Prince the Inveſtitures for to obtain his Freedom, the Peace of the Church and the People: That he had taken an Oath that he would give him no farther Diſturbance about Inveſtitures, and that he would pronounce no Anathema againſt his Perſon: That though the King had not obſerv'd the Conditions of that Oath, yet he was reſolv'd to ſtand to what he had done; that however he acknowleg'd that he had done amiſs, and deſir'd it ſhould be redreſs'd, ſo that the Church might come to no Prejudice. To clear himſelf the more fully from all Suſpicion of Hereſy, the next Day he made a Profeſſion of Faith, wherein he declar'd that he imbrac'd the Faith and Doctrine contain'd in the Holy Scriptures, in the four General Councils, and in the Decrees of the Popes his ~~Succeſſors~~ Predeceſſors, eſpecially thoſe of Gregory VII. and Urban II. that he approv'd of what thoſe Popes approv'd, and that he condemn'd what they had condemn'd. After this Declaration, Gerard Biſhop of Angouleme read a Paper, importing that all thoſe who were then preſent at that Council condemn'd, declar'd null, and abſolutely cancell'd the Privilege, or rather Pra-vilege extorted from Pope Paschal, by the Compulsion of Henry, particularly that which imply'd, that those who should be canonically Elected by the Clergy and People, could not be consecrated till such Time as they had received Investiture from the King. This Sentence was approv'd by all the Prelates of the Council, consisting of twelve Archbishops, an hundred and fourteen Bishops, and twenty three Cardinals, Priests and Deacons.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

The Decrees against Henry upon the Account of Investitures.

There was nothing done in this Council against the Person of the Emperor Henry, but Guy Archbishop of Vienna the Pope's Legate, a Man very zealous for promoting the Interests of the Holy See, call'd a Council together in September, wherein he not only cancell'd the Privilege of Investitures, as had been done before in the Lateran Council, but farther declar'd, that it was Heresie to receive Investiture at the Hand of any Laicks, and excommunicated the Emperor Henry. He sent the Pope Word of what he had done in that Council, and desir'd that he would be pleas'd to confirm it. The Pope who had already declar'd against what himself had done, made no Scruple to grant his Request. Cardinal Conon, Bishop of Palestrina, and Legate of the Holy See in the East, thunder'd out Excommunications against Henry, as well in a Council held at Jerusalem, as in those he held at his Return, in the Years 1114, and 1115. at Beauvais, at Rheims, at Cologne, and at Chalons. Thierry Cardinal and Legate of the Holy See appointed a Council to be held at Cologne, in the Christmass Holy-days, 1115. and set out with an Intention of being there; but he dy'd by the Way; however, the Council thunder'd out an Excommunication against the Emperor Henry.

The Emperor Henry's second Journey into Italy.

That Prince perceiving himself to be thus frustrated of the Hopes which he had conceiv'd of quietly enjoying the Investitures, resolv'd upon marching a second Time into Italy, and the rather because his Presence there was requisite for the taking Possession of the Dominions of the Princess Mathildis, who dy'd the 24th. of July 1115. Thereupon having enter'd into Lombardy, he made a stay near the River Po, to take Possession of the Estates left him by the Death of that Princess; and in the mean Time sent the Abbot of Cluny, and several other Deputies to the Pope, to endeavour an Accommodation with the Holy See.

The Lateran Council in the Year 1116.

The Pope held at that Time a second Council in the Lateran, which commenc'd the 6th. of March, the three first Sessions whereof were wholly taken up in discussing the private Affairs of some Bishops. Several of those who assisted in this Council complained that they spent too much Time on such Affairs as were of little or no Consequence to the Church, and required that they might enter immediately upon the Debate of that, for which they were more especially assembled, that they might know what the Pope's Sentiments were, and what they ought to teach when they were returned to their Dioceses. Upon this Remonstrance the Pope declar'd, that he freely acknowledg'd, that designing to put a Stop to the Robberies, Burnings, Murders, and other Crimes which were daily committed; he had done amiss in granting the Privilege of Investitures, which now he condemn'd with an eternal Anathema, and desir'd they would do the same. All who were there present, cry'd out, Let it be so, Let it be so. Bruno of Signi immediately said, 'Let us give God Thanks, for that Pope 'Paschal, President of this Council, has in our hearing con'demn'd this wicked Privilege so full of Injustice and Heresie.' Moreover, a Bishop averr'd, that since this Privilege was Heresie, he who had granted it, by consequence, was an Heretick. This Discourse mov'd Cardinal John Cajetan, who applying himself to that Bishop, How dare you, says he, in our Presence call the Pope Heretick? The Writing indeed which he granted was bad, but not heretical. Another added, that strictly speaking, it could not be call'd bad, because it had been done to deliver the People of God; which according to the Gospel was a good Work. The Pope who was out of Patience to hear himself accus'd of Heresie, caus'd Silence to be made, and then with a loud Voice expressed himself thus. 'Hark ye, my Lords and Brethren; '* let the whole World know 'that the Church of Rome has 'never been guilty of Here'sie, and that it has extirpated 'them all: That the Arian 'Heresie which lasted for 300 'Years together was last con'demn'd at Rome: That the Heresies of Eutychius and 'Sabellius were there likewise condemn'd: That Photinus 'and the other Hereticks receiv'd their Condemnation at 'Rome: That lastly, 'tis for this Church the Son of God 'pray'd just before his Passion, when he said, Peter, I have 'pray'd for thee that thy Faith fail not.' And thus ended the third Session. At the fourth, which was held on Thursday, the Pope was not present, because he was taken up in giving Audience about the Emperor's Affairs to the Abbot of Cluny, to John Cajetan, and to Peter Leo, Prefect of the City of Rome, and to the other Favourers of Henry.

* This is a bold Assertion, and fit only for a Pope, an infallible Pope to make; but how true it is, we with him appeal to the Determination of the whole World.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

The fifth Session on Friday, began with the Disputes between John Cajetan and the other Defenders of the Emperor Henry, and Conon of Palestrina, who was absolutely for excommunicating him. The Pope to pacifie them said, that the Church in the primitive Times flourished by its Martyrs, and by the Piety of its Professors; that afterwards, when Emperors and Kings were converted to the Faith, they honour'd the Church by granting it Demeans, Revenues, and temporal Rights and Dignities: That it was reasonable she should enjoy the Benevolence of Princes, and bestow those Goods on her Sons as she judg'd most convenient. He afterwards repealed the Privilege of Investitures, and renew'd the Decrees of Gregory VII. but would pronounce nothing in particular against Henry's Person. However, he confirm'd what Cardinal Conon of Palestrina had done against that Prince in Syria, in Greece, in Hungary, in Saxony, in Lorrain, and in France. This was pass'd by the majority of Voices.

The next Day the Pope discuss'd in the Council the Contest between Grosolanus, or Chrysolanus and Jordanes, Pretenders to the Archbishoprick of Milan; and after he had observ'd that the Translations of Bishops were never allow'd, but in Case of Necessity, or for the Churches greater Benefit, he declar'd that of Grosolanus null, which had been more prejudicial than advantageous to the Church. Afterwards he granted Indulgences of forty Days, to those who would visit the Sepulchres of the Apostles, and dissolv'd the Council by giving his Blessing to the Prelates.

Henry enters Rome, Paschal withdraws.

The Emperor Henry having heard of the Proceedings of this Council, thought it requisite that he himself should appear personally at Rome, to prevent the Consequences of the Excommunication, and maintain the Privilege which the Pope had granted him. He thereupon order'd his Army to advance towards that City. The Pope not venturing to stay his coming, retir'd to Mount Cassin, and from thence for the greater Security went into Apulia. The Emperor came to Rome, and enter'd it without any Opposition, and caus'd himself to be crown'd a second Time, by Maurice Burdin Archbishop of Brague. This Archbishop was Limosin, who went into Spain to wait upon Bernard Archbishop of Toledo, who made him Archdeacon of his Church, from whence he was preferr'd to the Bishoprick of Conimbra, and afterwards to the Archbishoprick of Brague. He was come to Rome to defend the Rights of his Church against the Archbishop of Toledo, and stay'd there two Years. The Emperor spent the Easter Holy-days at Rome, but was forc'd by the excessive Hotness of the Season to draw off towards Tuscany, from whence he sent Ambassadors to the Pope to promise him all Manner of Satisfaction, provided, he would but absolve him from the Excommunication. The Pope return'd him this Answer, That for his Part he had not excommunicated him, because he had engag'd himself upon Oath to do no such Thing; but that he could not take off the Excommunication which others had denounc'd against him, till he had heard what they and he had to say for themselves in a Synod. In the mean time, the Pope return'd towards Rome with the Norman Troops of Apulia, and fell sick at Anagnia. Being recover'd of his Illness, he went and spent the Christmass Holy-days at Palestrina, and from thence advanc'd towards Rome and enter'd it; and as he was studying to bring his Enemies to submit, he died two Days after his Return, in January 1118.

Paschal returns to Rome.

Gelasius II. elected Pope.

After his Death, the Cardinals met in a Monastery of the Benedictines of Rome, call'd the Palladium, near to the Palace of Franchipani, and six Days after elected John Cajetan the Chancellor, who was call'd Gelasius II. and proclaim'd Pope. Cincius of Franchipani being offended that they had not made choice of a Cardinal whom he had propos'd, enter'd the Monastery in a forcible Manner, with armed Men, fell upon the Pope, abus'd him, and carry'd him away Prisoner to his Palace. The Romans could not endure this Affront; the Chief among them met, and sent to demand the Pope from Cincius, and the Common-people rose up in Arms to set him at Liberty. Upon this, Cincius was forced to deliver him. He was put in Possession of the Papal Chair, which he enjoy'd very peaceably till the Arrival of the Emperor, who being inform'd that Gelasius would not confirm the Privilege of Investitures, march'd directly with his Army to Rome. The Pope made his Escape by Sea to Cajeta, where he was consecrated by the Bishop of Ostia, in the Presence of William Duke of Apulia, and Robert Prince of Capua. After his Consecration he came to Capua, where he heard that the Emperor had caus'd Maurice Burdin Archbishop of Brague to be proclaim'd Pope, under the Name of Gregory VIII. In the mean time Gelasius rais'd Forces, William of Apulia came in to his Assistance; they march'd towards the Territories of Rome, where the Emperor invested a Place of some Strength, who hearing that Forces were coming to its Relief, rais'd the Siege immediately, and retir'd into Germany. The Pope retook several Places in the Country, and enter'd privately into Rome; but his Enemies there being more powerful than himself, after he had settled his Affairs in a good Posture, he Henry comes to Rome, and causes Maurice Burdin to be proclaim'd Pope.

he went into France, and retir'd to Cluny, the usual Sanctuary of the Popes, where he dy'd of a Pleurisie on the 29*th.* of January, in the Year 1119. after he had nominated Cardinal Guy Archbishop of Vienna for his Successor, upon the Refusal of Conon Bishop of Palestrina.

The Election of Calixtus II.

This Choice was approv'd of by all the Cardinals then present at Cluny when the Pope dy'd: They unanimously elected Guy who was nam'd Calixtus II. and their Election being confirmed by the Cardinals who were at Rome, he was consecrated by the Bishop of Ostia.

The Conference between the Emperor and William of Champeaux concerning Investitures.

The Emperor Henry, who had been excommunicated afresh by Conon in two Councils held in Germany, to screen himself from these Proceedings, and to restore Peace to Germany, held a Convention at Tribur, wherein it was propos'd to put an End to the Difference between him and the Pope, by Way of Accommodation. He promis'd to do it, and to go to the Council which the Pope had appointed to be held at Rheims on the 18*th.* of October. In the mean time to prepare Matters for the Peace, William of Champeaux Bishop of Chalons, and Pontius Abbot of Cluny, went to Strasburg to begin the Treaty. The Emperor demanded how he might put an End to this Affair, without losing any Thing of his Prerogative; to which the Bishop of Chalons reply'd, That if he were sincere in his Desires of the Peace, it was requisite he should remit the Investitures, but that he would not thereby diminish the least of his Prerogative; because then the Case would be the same as it was in France, where, though the Bishops neither before nor after Consecration receiv'd their Investiture from the King, yet they were not thereby dispens'd from discharging their Duties to him, whether in paying Taxes, or contributing towards the Soldiery, or any other Dues whatsoever. The Emperor said, That he desired nothing more, provided the Pope would do him Justice, and restore to his Subjects the Lands which they had lost during the War. These two Deputies having gain'd this Concession from the Emperor, went to wait upon the Pope who was hard by Paris, and propos'd the Business to him. He immediately sent the Cardinal Bishop of Ostia, and another Cardinal to finish the Treaty with him. They met the Emperor between Metz and Verdun, and agreed with him in Writing about the same Things; and for a compleat Consumation of this Affair, the Emperor promis'd to meet the Pope at Mouzon on the 24*th.* of October.

The Council of Rheims in the Year 1119.

The Council of Rheims open'd on the 21*st.* of October. The Pope and Lewis King of France were personally present at it, and it consisted of fifteen Archbishops, above 200 Bishops of France, Spain, Germany, and England, and a great many Abbots and other Ecclesiasticks. The Pope made a Discourse on the Gospel for the Day, and Conon made another upon the Pastoral Care. In this Council, King Lewis preferr'd several Complaints against Henry King of England. Geofrey Archbishop of Roan undertook to answer him, but was forc'd to be silent by the Noise that arose in the Assembly. Afterwards Hildegarda Countess of Poictiers appear'd in the Council, and complain'd that her Husband had left her and marry'd another Woman. The Bishop of Saintes, and other Prelates of Aquitain undertook the Defence of their Prince, and excus'd him for not appearing because he was sick. The Pope accepted of this Excuse, and put off the Trial of this Cause till another Time. The contest which afterwards was started between Audin Bishop of Evreux, and Amaury who had turn'd him out of that Bishoprick, rais'd a great Heat between the French and the Normans. The Pope to lay it, made a Discourse on the Advantages of Peace and Unity, and declar'd that the Emperor had propos'd an Accommodation, and that he was to meet him at Mouzon to put an End to it; that he desir'd the Prelates to stay till his Return, which should be very speedy. The Cardinals who had waited upon the Emperor, the Bishop of Chalons, and the Abbot of Cluny, gave an Account of their Negotiation to the Council.

The Negotiation between the Pope and the Emperor.

On the Morrow the Pope took his Leave of the Assembly, recommended them to put up their Prayers and Wishes for the Peace, and the next Day set out for Mouzon. He arriv'd there on the Thursday, and after he had conferr'd with the Prelates whom he had brought along with him, and read over again the Projects of the Accommodation, he sent the Deputies who had already commenc'd this Negotiation to the Emperor. That Prince at first deny'd that he had made any such Promise; afterwards they debated how the Pope should receive him, in giving him Absolution, but could come to no Agreement. On the Morrow the Emperor desir'd farther Time, and the Pope perceiving that he sought to procrastinate the Business, retir'd to a Castle belonging to the Count of Troyes, with an Intention of returning back again. The Emperor desir'd Time till Monday, but the Pope would not grant it; and after he had order'd him to be told, that if he were sincerely intent upon Peace, he was ready to grant it him, either in or after the Council. He set out on Sunday Morning, and return'd with all Expedition to Rheims. The next Day being fatigued by his Journey, he could not stay long in the Council, he only gave them an Account of his Proceedings at Mouzon. On Tuesday he was not there at all, but on Wednesday he appear'd. At first they debated of a great many private Matters, and afterwards the Pope publish'd five Canons.

The first was against the Simoniacal, who either bought or sold any Ecclesiastical Goods.

The second was against Investitures.

The third against those who either seiz'd or detain'd the Revenues of Churches.

The fourth against those who left them to their Heirs by Way of Succession, and against the Priests who exacted Money for the Administration of the Sacraments or for Burial.

And the fifth against the Priests, Deacons and Subdeacons who had Wives or Concubines.

The Canon concerning Investitures made a great Noise in the Council. It was drawn up in these Terms: We absolutely forbid the receiving the Investiture of Churches, or any other Ecclesiastical Things from the Hands of Laicks. Several were of Opinion, that this Canon thus expres'd, took away from the Ecclesiasticks the Tenths and Benefices which they held or receiv'd from Laicks, so that the Contest arising upon this Article, hinder'd the Council from determining any Thing about it that Day. On the Morrow the Pope remov'd this Difficulty by mending the Canon and drawing it up in these Terms. We absolutely forbid the receiving the Investiture of Bishopricks and Abbies from the Hands of Laicks. Afterwards they brought in 427 Candles, which were given to the Assistants, who rose up and held them lighted whilst the Pope solemnly excommunicated the Emperor Henry, the Antipope Burdin, and all their Adherents: He likewise declar'd all the Emperor's Subjects dissolv'd from their Oath of Allegiance to him, and forbad them to obey him, till he return'd to his Duty, and had made the Church Satisfaction. Thus the Council broke up.

Calixtus II. is receiv'd into Rome and Burdin shamefully divested.

The next Year Calixtus went into Italy, with a Design of going to Rome. He was joyfully receiv'd every where, and enter'd Rome as in Triumph. The Antipope Burdin being drove out of that City, retir'd to Sutri, from whence he made several Excursions, to the very Gates of Rome. Calixtus to rid himself of this Enemy, went into Apulia to desire Assistance from Duke William, and having rais'd a considerable Army, he march'd to invest Sutri. The Inhabitants of this City perceiving they should be taken by Storm, seiz'd upon Burdin, and deliver'd him up to the Normans, who, by Way of Derision, cloath'd him with a Goat's-Skin, made in the Form of a Cope, set him on a white Camel, with his Face towards the Tail, which serv'd him for a Bridle, and in this Manner led him through the whole City, heaping Affronts upon him. Afterwards he was shut up in a Castle, and confin'd in a Monastery of Cava, where he spent the rest of his Days in a forc'd Penance.

The Treaty between Calixtus II. and Henry V.

After this Victory the Pope becoming absolute Master of Rome, where he caus'd the Forts of the Franchipani and of the other Favourers of the Emperor to be raz'd, sent an Ambassy to Adalbert Archbishop of Mentz, a profess'd Enemy to the Emperor, and sollicited him to stir up Saxony against that Prince. This Enterprize succeeded, and within a short Time all Saxony revolted, and rais'd an Army against Henry, who likewise for his Part rais'd some Forces: So that there would have been a bloody War in Germany, if the Lords on both Sides had not agreed upon a Treaty of Peace, by which they agreed to restore to the Emperor what belong'd to him; that he should likewise restore to Churches the Revenues which had been taken away from them; and send Deputies to Rome to make up an Accommodation with the Pope. This Treaty was concluded at Wirtzburgh, in the Year 1121. Bruno Bishop of Spires and Arnulphus Abbot of Fulda, were chosen for this Deputation. They came to Rome, where they negotiated this Accommodation; and being agreed about it, the Pope sent Lambert Cardinal Bishop of Ostia, and two other Cardinals, who met with the Emperor Henry at Worms in September 1122. and there concluded the Treaty between the Pope and him. The Emperor remitted the Right of Investiture, which was given by the Ring and Crosier; and engag'd himself to leave to all the Churches within his Dominions, the Liberty of Elections and Consecrations; to restore to the Church of Rome all the Revenues which had been taken away from it since the Beginning of this Contest, whether under his Reign, or during the Reign of his Father; to restore likewise to other Churches, Princes and private Persons, as well Ecclesiasticks as Laicks all the Revenues which have been taken away from them; to live in Peace with the Church of Rome, and assist it, whenever it should have Occasion. The Pope on his part granted to the Emperor, that the Elections of Bishops and Abbots within the Kingdom of Germany should be made in his Presence, without Simony and Force, upon Condition that in Case of any Contest, he should favour him, who should be approv'd by the Metropolitan and the Bishops of the Province.

He consented that the Person who should be elected, should receive the Royalties from the Emperor by the Sceptre, except of such Things as belong'd to the Church of Rome, and should faithfully perform what he was bound to by Virtue of those Royalties: That the Prelates of the other States of the Empire, should likewise receive the Royalties at the Emperor's Hands, within six Months after their Consecration. He likewise oblig'd himself to assist the Emperor on all Occasions, and fully, granted Absolution to him and all his Adherents. These Articles of Peace were solemnly publish'd in the Emperor's Camp, and within a short Time that Prince was receiv'd into the Communion of the Church by the Pope's Legates, who carry'd this Treaty to Rome, where it was confirm'd in the general Council of the Lateran, held in the Year 1123. and publish'd in Rome. Thus ended the Quarrel about Investitures, which lasted six and fifty Years, and which has caus'd so much Disturbance to the Church and Empire. We shall farther illustrate this by some Reflections on the Original and Use of Investitures.

The Original and Progress of Investitures.

The Word Investiture signifies the Grant of any Fief, Territory, Dignity, Place of Trust, or Privilege, made by a Lord to his Vassal or Client, or by a Prince to his Subject, upon Condition that he prove faithful to him, and do him all the Service and Duty requir'd of him. This Investiture was perform'd with certain Ceremonies, by putting into the Person's Hands, to whom it was granted, something as a Symbol or Sign of the Donation then made, such as a Piece of Turf, a Staff, green Boughs, the Ornaments or the Habits of the Dignity or Place of Trust, or other such like Tokens, which had Resemblance to, or denoted the Thing given. The Christian Church, which in the primitive Times had no other Goods than those of the voluntary Oblations of the Faithful, or the Revenues of such Estates as had been bestow'd upon it by private Persons, began in the Time of Pepin and Charlemagne to be possess'd of a great many Fiefs, with which those Princes enrich'd it. This render'd the Bishops and Abbots more considerable in the State, and engag'd them to take an Oath of Fealty and Homage to their Prince for the Fiefs which they held of him, to supply him with a certain Number of Soldiers for the Wars, to go themselves thither in Person, to concern themselves with the Affairs of the State, and to discharge the other Duties to which they were bound by Virtue of the Fiefs and Dignities which they enjoy'd. According to ancient Custom, after the Death of those who had those Fiefs, the Lord of the Manour enter'd into the Possession of them, and held them, till such Time as the Heir or Successor were invested anew, and had taken the Oath of Fealty and Homage. Upon this Account, after the Death of a Bishop, the Princes and Lords enter'd into the Possession of his Fiefs, and held them till such Time as the Person elected in his Stead had receiv'd Investiture from them, and had taken the Oath of Homage and Fealty. In Process of Time this Prerogative extended to all the other Revenues left by the Bishop, and the Princes granted indifferently the Investiture of all the Revenues of the Bishoprick, to the Person who was elected canonically before he was consecrated, but they never pretended by this Ceremony to confer any Spiritual Power or Mission to the Bishops. Some are of Opinion, that this Right of Investiture was granted to Charlemagne by Pope Adrian, as 'tis related by Gratian, Distinct. 63. Ch. Adrianus, which is taken out of the Chronicon of Sigebert of Gembloux, wherein 'tis said that the Pope in a Council held at Rome, in the Year 774. granted to Charlemagne the Right of electing Popes, and order'd that all Archbishops and Bishops within his Dominions should receive Investiture at his Hands before they were consecrated. But most of the Learned are persuaded, that this Matter of Fact is forged, because neither Eginard, who wrote the Life of Charlemagne, nor any other cotemporary Author, make any Mention either of this Grant, or of Charlemagne's going to Rome this Year. This Constitution notwithstanding is cited by Leo VIII. who renew'd it in Favour of Otho I. both with Respect to the Election of the Pope, and to the Investiture of Bishops. But tho' we cannot found the Original of Investitures upon Gratian's Chapter intitled Adrianus, which is at least doubtful, yet we may be certain that this Custom commenc'd a long Time before Otho, and soon after Charlemagne, and that it was observ'd not only by the Emperors, but likewise by the Kings of France and England, and by most of the other Christian Princes.

The Ceremonies used in Investitures.

We are not certain what Ceremony was us'd at first in the Investiture of Bishops and Abbots; but 'tis very probable that they made use of the Crosier, or the Ring, the Marks and Tokens of their Dignity; as the Custom was with regard to secular Offices. We find in the Author of the Life of St. Romanus Archbishop of Rouen, that when this Saint was elected, the great Men about Court unanimously advis'd the King to approve his Election, and that that Prince ('twas Clovis 2. or his Father Dagobert) having conven'd the Bishops and Abbots, gave him the Pastoral Rod, in Consequence whereof he was consecrated. The Author of the Life of Aldric Bishop of Mans, tells us that after the Election of that Bishop, made in the Year 832, Lewis the Gentle having taken the Pastoral Rod from the Hands of Landrammus Archbishop of Tours, the Metropolitan of Mans, gave it to Aldric, and in giving it to him, committed to him the Care and Management of that Bishoprick. Glaber in the Life of King Robert, relates that that Prince desiring to gratify an Abbot who had presented him with a fine Horse, demanded the Crosier of him, and that having put it into the Hand of our Saviour's Statue, had the Abbot take it again, and by Virtue thereof to enjoy his Dignity, without any Manner of Dependance. We find that in the Tenth Century, this Custom was become common in Germany, and that those who were instituted into Bishopricks, carry'd the Pastoral Rod, and the other Enfigns of their Dignity, even before they were consecrated. Ivo of Chartres takes Notice, that the King had inducted him into his Bishoprick, by giving him the Pastoral Rod. However this Ceremony was not so general nor so necessary, but it was sometimes omitted, or supply'd by some other. Investiture might be given by Writing, or by Word of Mouth, or even by a dumb Sign. Several Authors tell us, that the Emperor Henry II. confer'd the Bishoprick of Paderborne on Meinwercus, by presenting him with one of his Gloves. Let this Account be how it will, 'tis certain that 'tis a Thing very indifferent with what Ceremony, or after what Manner the Investiture was confer'd. Yet there can be no Question made, but that commonly in granting the Investitures of Bishopricks and Abbies, they made use of the Pastoral Staff, to which they afterwards join'd the Ring, because these were the Tokens and Enfigns of the Episcopal Dignity.

The Beginning of the Contest about Investitures.

When this Quarrel about Investitures first began, it was not the Ceremony, but the Thing it self which rais'd the Heat; and Gregory VII. in prohibiting Investitures, not only oppos'd those which were perform'd by the Pastoral Rod and Ring, but in General all Manner of Investitures of Benefices granted by Laicks. The principal Reason that induced him to prohibit them was, that it very much hinder'd the Liberty of Elections, and render'd Princes the Masters and sole Disposers of all Benefices. For when a Person canonically elected could not enjoy his Benefice, nor be consecrated till he had receiv'd Investiture from his Prince, it was unavoidably requisite before they proceeded to an Election, to know whether the Person they had an Eye to were agreeable to the Prince or no; and in case they elected one who was not so, the Election would be invalid. By this Means it absolutely depended on the Will of the Prince to confer Bishopricks and Abbies on whomsoever he pleas'd. Oftentimes he granted them as a Reward for some Service done, or to the Man who was the highest Bidder. This was that Abuse which mov'd Gregory VII. absolutely to prohibit all Investitures of Benefices; and he carry'd it so high, as to forbid Bishops taking an Oath of Homage and Fealty to their Princes. Victor III. and Urban II. his immediate Successors prohibited likewise in general all Manner of Investitures. Ivo of Chartres tells us, that Urban only forbad Princes the Corporal Investiture; but that he never prohibited them from concerning them with any Election to which they had a Right, as being Heads of the People, and that he had not taken away from them the Right of Concession. However that Pope in the Council of Clermont absolutely prohibited all Investitures, and even the Bishop's Oath of Fealty to their Prince.

The State of the Contest in the Time of Paschal II.

It was in the Time of Pope Paschal II. that they began to have a more particular Design upon the Ceremony of granting them by the Rod and Ring; and hence they rais'd a fresh Argument against Investitures, by looking upon those Ornaments as Tokens of the Ecclesiastical Power appertaining to the Altar; from whence 'twas concluded, that the Prince in making use of this Ceremony, seem'd to confer the Ecclesiastical Power. 'Tis thus that Paschal explain'd himself in the Conference which he held at Chalons with the Emperor's Deputies; and 'tis chiefly upon this Reason those Men argu'd, who look'd upon Investitures as an Heresy worse than Simony. The Princes on their side urg'd to no purpose, that they did not pretend by this Ceremony to bestow any Spiritual Power; That their Intention was only to invest the Bishops, as they did the other Lords, with the Temporalities which belong'd to the Church by the Grants of Princes. But the Enemies to this Right, to render it the more odious, would persuade us that this Ceremony had another Meaning. The Accommodation which was set on Foot between Pope Paschal II. and the Emperor Henry V. entirely remov'd the Difficulty: For it took away from the Bishops all the Fiefs and other Temporalities which they possess'd by the Donation of the Emperors since Charlemagne, which were the only ones for which the Princes could justly demand the Right of Investitures; but it divested the Churches of great, real and solid Goods, for a chimerical, fanciful Independance: The Bishops likewise did not relish this Accommodation, and so it it came to nothing. The forc'd Concession of Investitures made by Pope Paschal was resented by some as an Heresy, and consider'd by others as a dangerous Relaxation. There were some who would have it pass for a necessary Toleration, and others for a Thing reasonable and lawful.

The State of the Question under Calixtus II.

In the Beginning of the Popedom of Calixtus II. the Difficulty seem'd to be reduc'd to the Ceremony of Investiture with the Ring and Rod: At least those who were concern'd in the Negotiation thought so. Henry V. was very ready to renounce this, provided it did not Prejudice his Prerogative; and if the Bishops and Abbots would hold their Fiefs and Royalties of him; take to him the Oaths of Allegiance, and Pay him all the Dues to which they were oblig'd by Virtue of the Estates which they possess'd. But the Pope always insisted upon a general Prohibition of receiving any Manner of Investiture or Ecclesiastical Benefices at the Hands of Laicks; to which the Emperor would never consent. The French themselves would not admit this Prohibition to extend to Bishopricks and Abbies.

Remarks upon the Treaty concluded between Calixtus II. and Henry V.

In short the last Accommodation made between Pope Calixtus and Henry, Was a great deal more advantageous to the Princes than the Ecclesiasticks. For the Princes pretended to these three Things. (1.) That no Election of Bishops or Abbots ought to be made without their Consent. (2.) That the Person elected ought to receive Investiture with the Pastoral Rod and Ring before he was consecrated. (3.) That he was oblig'd to take an Oath of Fealty to them, and do them Homage for the Fiefs, and Royalties which were dependent on them. Now by this Treaty it was granted to them. (1.) That the Elections of Bishops and Abbots should be made in their Presence and Consequently with their Consent. (2.) That in Germany the Bishop Elect shall be invested with the Royalties (that is all the Estates which he holds of the Crown, by the Sceptre, before his Consecration; and in the other States within six Months after his Consecration. (3.) It preserves to them all the Dues and Services to which the Bishops were oblig'd by Virtue of their Fiefs and Royalties. So that all the Alteration it made to the ancient Custom of the Emperors consisted. (1.) In that it took away the Ceremony of Investiture by the Pastoral Rod and Ring, and order'd that it should be done with the Sceptre. (2.) That it restrain'd this Ceremony precisely to the Royalties, that is, to such Fiefs and other Estates which the Bishops held of the Crown. (3.) In that it permitted the Consecration of Bishops out of Germany before they had receiv'd Investiture, yet upon Condition that they should receive it within six Months after.

The Execution of the Treaty made with Henry.

The Treaty made between Pope Calixtus II. and the Emperor Henry V. was executed on both sides. But Lotharius, Henry's Successor, in the Time of the Schism which was between Pope Innocent II. and his Adversary Peter de Leon, thought he had a favourable Opportunity of re-entering upon the Right of Investiture. He made this Proposal in the Conference which he had with Pope Innocent at Liege, letting him know that he would not acknowledge him but upon this Condition. This very much startled the Roman Prelates, but St. Bernard persuaded that Prince not to insist on this Pretension, and Things remain'd in the same State wherein they were before.

The Custom of France with Respect to Investitures.

This is what relates to the Empire: As to France the Kings had never any Contest with the Pope's about Investitures. They enjoy'd them quietly, even in the Time of Gregory VII, who was not indeed pleas'd at it, but durst not fall out with France upon that Subject. Under the succeeding Popes the Kings of France left off giving Investiture by the Pastoral Rod and Ring, and were pleas'd to confer it by a Writing or by Word of Mouth; so that the Popes whose chief Design was to abolish that external Ceremony, left them in the quiet Enjoyment of their Prerogative.

The Custom of England with Respect to the same.

This Affair made a greater Noise in England than in France: For St. Anselm willing to be conformable to the Decrees of the Popes against Investitures, refus'd to pay Homage and Fealty to the Kings. This Contest lasted a great many Years, and neither the Popes, nor the Kings of England would yield the Point: But at last they both conform'd themselves to the Regulation of Calixtus II.

Investitures granted to petty Princes.

The Right of Investitures was not the Peculiar Prerogative of Emperors and Kings; but Dukes, Counts and other Lords who had Bishopricks or Abbies in their States, possessing Fiefs or Revenues in their Dominions, did likewise enjoy the same Right. Thus it appears by a Letter wrote by Gregory VII. to Rudolphus Archbishop of Tours, that the Counts of Bretagne had been in Possession of the Right of granting Investitures to Bishops, since that Pope commends them for having receded from that Custom which they had so long enjoy'd, in compliance to the Holy See. St. Anselm tells us likewise that Robert Count of Flanders had been us'd to invest the Abbots after their Election. Ivo of Chartres in several Places takes Notice, that Robert Duke of Normandy granted Investiture to the Bishops and Abbots of that Province, The Counts of Champagne, Anjou and Savoy had the same Custom, and even the petty Lords claim'd this Privilege to themselves: As the Lord of Rotrou, whom we find in the Chartulary of St. Denys of Nogent, to have granted to Humbert the Investiture of that Abby with the Crosier, to that when Gregory VII. and the other Popes condemn'd Investitures, this did not only extend to the Emperors and Kings, but likewise to Dukes, Marquisses, Counts, and in general to every Lay Person whether Man or Woman.

The general Lateran Council in the Year, 1123.

The Lateran Council which approv'd of the Treaty about Investitures, made between Pope Calixtus and the Emperor Henry, is that which is call'd the first general Lateran Council. It was held in March A. D. 1124. and compos'd of three hundred Prelates or thereabouts, according to the Testimony of Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, who was present at the Council, a more creditable Witness than the Abbot of Usperge, who reckons four hundred twenty six; and than Pandulphus who tells us of almost a thousand. There were two and twenty Canons made in this Council.

The 1*st.* renews the Canons made against the Simoniacal, and ordains that all those who shall have obtain'd any Ecclesiastical Dignity for Money, shall be turn'd out of it.

The 2*d.* forbids the bestowing the Dignities of a Provost, Arch-Priest or Dean on any but Priests, or that of Arch-Deacon on any other but Deacons.

The 3*d.* renews the Prohibitons made by the Laws of the Church against Clerks having Wives or Concubines, or to live with Women, excepting such as are exempted in the Canon of the Council of Nice.

The 4*th.* Imports that the Laicks, how Pious soever they may be, shall not have the Disposal of the Revenues of the Church, and that this shall be Peculiar to Bishops, and declares those Princes and Laicks who shall attribute it to themselves Sacrilegious.

The 5*th.* renews the Prohibition of Marriages among Relations.

The 6*th.* declares the Ordinations made by the Arch-Heretick Burdin after his Condemnation, and those that had been made by the false Bishops whom he had ordain'd, to be Null and Void.

The 7*th.* Prohibits Archdeacons, Arch-Priests, Provosts and Deans from giving any Benefices, having the Charge of Souls, or Prebends, without the Consent and Approbation of the Bishop.

The 8*th.* pronounces an Anathema against any Person whatsoever who shall Seize upon the Town of Benevento.

The 9*th.* renews the Prohibitions made in the Canons, against admitting those who had been excommunicated by their Bishop to the Communion.

The 10*th.* prohibits the Consecrating of a Bishop, who has not been elected canonically.

The 11*th.* grants remission of Sins to those who go to Jerusalem to aid the Christians against the Infidels, puts their Persons, their Families, and their Estates under the Protection of the Holy See; prohibits the offering any Violence to them under the Pain of Excommunication; and enjoyns all those, who were cross'd to go into the Holy Land, or into Spain, and who having chang'd their Minds, had laid aside their Cross, to take it up again, and go that Expedition within a Year under the Pain of Excommunication.

The 12*th.* abolishes the Custom of Seizing on the Estates of those who dy'd without Heirs.

The 13*th.* Orders that they shall be declar'd excommunicated who shall violate the Truce enjoyn'd for Certain Days.

The 14*th.* prohibits Laicks from seizing on any Oblations made to Churches, and from inclosing any Churches within the Bounds of Castles.

The 15*th.* is against counterfeit Coiners.

The 16*th.* excommunicates those who rob or exact any Tribute from the Pilgrims who go to Rome or to any other Places of Devotion.

The 17*th.* prohibits Abbots and Monks, from admitting Sinners to publick Penance, from visiting the Sick, from performing the Extream Unction, and from singing Solemn and publick Masses, and enjoyns them to receive from their Bishop the Holy Chrism, the Holy Oyls, and Ordination.

The 18*th.* enjoyns that the Curats shall be established by the Bishops, and that no Person shall receive a Church or Tenths from the Hand of Laicks without the Consent of the Bishop.

The 19*th.* imports that the Monasteries shall continue to pay the Bishops the Services and Duties which they have paid them since the Time of Gregory VII. and it takes away from Abbots and Monks the Right of claiming the Possession of thirty Years, in Order to hold those Churches which belong to the Bishops.

The 20*th.* provides for the Security of the Church Revenues.

The 21*st.* does again prohibit Priests, Deacons, Sub-Deacons and Monks from having Wives or Concubines, and declares the Marriages which they have contracted, null. This is the Canon which expresly pronounces the Nullity of the Marriages of such Persons as are in Holy Orders.

The 22d. declares the Alienations of Church Revenues made by Bishops, Abbots, or any other Ecclesiasticks null, and void.

This is the Summary of what we have left of the general Lateran Council, held under Pope Calixtus II. who dy'd the Year after. To compleat the History of those three Popes already mention'd, we have nothing more to do, than to give you an Extract of the Letters which they wrote.

The Letters of Paschal II.

Paschal II. was he who wrote most; of which a Collection is made of an hundred and seven, without reckoning the Fragments of several others which are to be met with in Gratian, and in the other Collectors of Canons.

In the 1st. he congratulates those Persons of the Croisade in the Holy Land, for the Victories they had gain'd.

In the 2d. he confirms the Establishment of a new Monastery in the Diocess of Chalons, and the Treaty which had been between the Religious of that Monastery and those of Molesme by the Archbishop of Lyons according to the Order he had receiv'd from Urban II.

In the 3d. he commends St. Anselm Archbishop of Canterbury for the Stedfastness he shew'd in standing up for the Rights of the Church.

In the 4th. directed to Bernard Archbishop of Toledo, he confirm'd the Primacy of that Church.

The 5th. and 6th. are not two distinct Letters. The former of the two is only a Fragment of the latter, whose Inscription has been chang'd: It is directed to an Archbishop of Poland, who scrupled to take an Oath to the Pope, in receiving the Pall. He therein magnifies the Dignity and Authority of the Church of Rome, and the Necessity of the Pall.

The 7th. is directed to Robert Count of Flanders, whom he commends for having executed his Orders touching the Church of Cambray; and whom he exhorts to persecute the Emperor Henry IV. and the Inhabitants of Liege, to whom that Prince was retir'd.

The Clergy of Liege having procur'd a Copy of this Letter return'd a very smart Reply to it: Wherein they made it appear how contrary that Order which the Pope gave in this Letter of making War against them, was to the Spirit of the Church, and to the Charity which the Pope, the common Father of all the Faithful, ought to bear towards all the Churches. They say that they could not tell how to believe that the Pope had approv'd of the Destruction of the Church of Cambray, and the Outrages which had been there committed, had they not learn'd from his own Mouth, that all this was done by his Order; without mentioning the dividing of that Bishoprick into two, and the Expulsion of Gautier, who was Bishop thereof. They make mention of several Instances to prove that one ought not to make Use of the Sword, or engage in a War to put the Sentences of Excommunication in Execution: That moreover they have done nothing which deserv'd either Death or Excommunication: That they were excommunicated only because they had paid to their Lawful Soveraign the Respect which they ow'd him, according as they were oblig'd by the Law of God: That they are not Simoniacal, but on the contrary avoid those who are so, and that they have no less Abhorence to those who pretending to give Ecclesiastical Graces for nothing, sell them under a Pretence of Charity: That in Fact they had not been excommunicated by their Archbishop, and that they suppos'd they had not been excommunicated by the Pope, since he could not do it without hearing them first. That no one could say that they were excommunicated, because they communicated with their Bishop, who would not fail in his Duty towards his Prince, since therein that Prelate had done his Duty, and had greater Reason to fear the Curse which God had pronounc'd against those who obey'd not his Commandments, than that which some Popes have within a while invented against those who would not be Rebels to their Lawful Prince; That the Holy Fathers inform us that Kings ought not to be excommunicated, or at least but very rarely: That according to the ancient Custom they stand to the Desisions of their Metropolitan and of their Provincial Synod, and they did not recognize those Legates à Latere, who ran from place to place to enrich themselves, and who reform'd neither Manners nor Discipline, but were the Cause of rifling Churches and of the Wars: That they liv'd as Regular Clerks, according to the Rule of the Canon. Lastly, they inveigh'd against the Memory of Gregory VII. who was the first that stir'd up the People against their Emperor, and was for extending the Spiritual Power of binding and unbinding even to Temporalities; which they prov'd to be contrary to the Maxims and Practice of the Popes his Predecessors.

The 8th. Letter of Paschal is directed to the Clergy and People of Bamberg, to whom he recommends Otho their Bishop Elect.

By the 9th. directed to Henry King of England he exhorts that Prince to renounce his Right of Investitures.

By the 10th. he advises Didacus Bishop of Compostella, to take care that his Clergy live regularly, to hinder forbidden Marriages, and not to suffer the Monks to live with the Nuns.

The 11th. is the Bull of Canonization of Peter Bishop of Anagnia, by which he orders that his Feast should be celebrated on the third of August.

In the 12th. directed to Gebehard Bishop of Constance, and to Odorick Bishop of Passaw, he determines that those who unwillingly converse with excommunicated Persons by Necessity or in Duty, are not liable to Excommunication.

By the 13th. he cites the Laity and Clergy of Augsburgh, who accus'd their Bishop; and by the 14th. congratulates their being reconcil'd to him.

By the 15th. he advises the Clergy and Laity of Arles to Elect another Archbishop in the place of Gibbeline, who had been made Patriarch of Jerusalem.

In the 16th. he congratulates St. Anselm for his being reconcil'd to the King of England, and grants him a Power of absolving those who had opposed the Decrees of the Holy See about the Investitures of Benefices granted by Laicks, or who had done Homage to the King for Ecclesiastical Preferments.

In the 17th. he advises Gerard Archbishop of York to submit to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

By the 18th. he writes to Baldwin King of Jerusalem, to subject all the Churches which shall be conquer'd by him to the Church of Jerusalem as their Metropolitan.

In the 19th. he grants this Privilege to Gibbeline Patriarch of Jerusalem.

In the 20th. he declares to Bernard Patriarch of Antioch, that he did not thereby intend to prejudice his Rights.

In the 21st. he orders Urraca, the Daughter of the King of Castile, to part from Alphonso King of Arragon her Kinsman in the third Degree.

The 22d. is the Draught of a Bull which he had thought of making, according to the first Agreement which he had made with the Emperor Henry V. whereby he enjoyns the Bishops and Abbots of Germany to abandon all the Fiefs and other Estates which they held of the Empire, upon Condition that the Emperor should make no Pretension to the Estates which had not been bestow'd on the Church by the Emperor.

The 23d. is written to John Cardinal-Bishop of Frescati, to Leo of Verceil, and to other cardinals, who were met at Rome to cancel the Decree of Pope Paschal, whereby he had granted the Right of Investiture to the Emperor Henry.

In the 24th. directed to Guy Archbishop of Vienna, he himself cancels this Decree, and declares the Concession null and void.

In the 25th. he advertises the Clergy of Augsburgh, that he had interdicted their Bishop five Years ago, upon the Complaints that had been preferr'd against him; and that since that Bishop never appear'd to clear himself of the Crimes laid to his Charge, he thought it not convenient to take off the Interdiction pronounc'd against him.

In the 26th. he refers this Affair to the Determination of Arnulphus Archbishop of Mentz.

The 27th. directed to the Chapter of Augsburgh does not at all agree with the two former: For he therein excuses the Bishop of Augsburgh, and refers his Affair to Guy Bishop of Coire; which has made Baronius suppose that it was surreptitious.

In the 29th. written to the Patriarch of Antioch, he renews the Declaration which he had formerly made; that by the Letter which he had written in favour of the Patriarch of Jerusalem, he did not pretend to prejudice the Rights of the Church of Antioch. He wrote the same Thing to Baldwin King of Jerusalem by the twenty ninth.

In the 30th. he wrote word to Henry King of England that he would not meddle with the Rights and Privileges of the Church of Canterbury.

In the 31st. directed to the same Prince he complains of their having turn'd Turstin Archbishop of York out of his Church, without having observ'd any Forms of Justice.

In the 32d. written to Pontius Abbot of Cluny, he orders that in the Communion they should give the Bread and Wine apart, which was contrary to the Custom of Cluny, where sometimes they dip'd the Host in the Wine. However he excepts Infants and Infirm Persons.

In the 33d. he sent word to Daimbert Archbishop of Sens, that he had consecrated him who had been elected Bishop of Paris without prejudicing the Rights of the Church of Sens.

By the 34th. directed to Lambert Bishop of Arras, he confirms the Disunion which had been made by his Predecessor Urban II. of the Bishoprick of Arras, from that of Cambray; gives two Arch-Deaconries to the Former, and orders it should enjoy all the Territories which depended on it formerly.

By

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

By the 35*th.* he wrote word to the Biſhops of the Provinces of Rheims, Sens, and Tours, that he had commiſſion'd them with Lambert Biſhop of Arras, to give King Philip Abſolution, in caſe he would ſincerely part with Bertrada. To this Letter is annex'd the Oath which that Prince and Bertrada took at Paris in the Year 1104. in the Preſence of thoſe Biſhops, to have nothing more to do with each other.

In the 36*th.* he Commiſſions Daimbert Archbiſhop of Sens to try the Difference which was between the Abbot of Vezelay and the Abbot of Flavigny.

The 37*th.* is the Bull of the Legation of Gerard Biſhop of Angouleme, in the Provinces of Bourges, Bourdeaux, Auche, Tours and Bretagne.

In the 38*th.* directed to Norigand Biſhop of Autun, he confirms his Election, and orders that he ſhall freely enjoy all the Revenues of his Church.

The next written to Stephen Biſhop of Autun contains ſome thing like the former.

The ſix next Letters are directed to St. Anſelm Archbiſhop of Canterbury. In the 42*d.* he anſwers to ſeveral Queſtions which that Archbiſhop had propoſed, eſpecially about the Inveſtitures of Churches, and he therein determines that a Biſhop may receive Eccleſiaſtical Revenues from the Hands of Laicks, who beſtow them on the Church, provided it were within his own Dioceſs, but that he ought not to receive thoſe which are in another Dioceſs, and that Abbots ought not to receive them but from the Hands of Biſhops: That one might not receive a Church from the King, as a Recompence of thoſe Eccleſiaſtical Revenues which he had ſeiz'd upon: That an Eccleſiaſtick ought not to pay Homage to a lay Prince: That the Sons of Prieſts may be admitted into Holy Orders: That it was better in caſe of Extremity one ſhould receive the Viaticum from the Hands of a married Prieſt, rather than not receive it at all.

In the 46*th.* he wrote word to the Clergy of Terrouane, that they ought not to ſuffer any marry'd Clergy amongſt them.

The 47*th.* is a Privilege granted to the Monaſtery of St. Sophia near Benevento.

The 48*th.* directed to Richard Archbiſhop of Narbonne, is a Confirmation of the Revenues and Privileges appertaining to that Archbiſhoprick, with Prohibitions againſt making any Attempts on them.

In the 49*th.* he prohibits two Abbots from admitting into Communion two Perſons excommunicated by the Archbiſhop of Narbonne.

In the 50*th.* directed to Rhotard Archbiſhop of Mentz, he wrote againſt the Inveſtitures of Churches, which Princes made with the Paſtoral Rod and Ring. He therein renews the Decree of the Council of Placenza under Urban II. againſt the Clerks ordain'd during the Schiſm, and refers to a Council to determine how they ought to proceed againſt excommunicate and ſchiſmatical Perſons who had procur'd themſelves to be ordain'd Biſhops.

The 51*ſt*, is a Privilege granted to the Abby of Vezelay, The five next Letters are written in favour of that Abby.

The 57*th.* and 8*th.* confirm the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Biſhop of Arras.

In the two next he nominates Umpires to decide the Difference between the Clergy of Arras and the Monks of St. Vaaſt.

The next Letters to the 76*th.* are particularly in favour of the Abby of Cluny. He grants that Abbot a Power of wearing the Mitre and the Croſier, and the Pontifical Habits: But forbids him to cauſe the Holy Chriſm to be conſecrated in his Abby.

In the 76*th.* he commends Otho Biſhop of Bamberg, for not accepting of that Biſhoprick from the Hands of the Emperor.

In the 77*th.* he recommends to the Clergy of Paris, Gaulon their Biſhop, and exhorts them to joyn with him in the Recovery and Preſervation of the Revenues of their Church. He therein prohibits the great Prebendaries from exacting Homage from the Demi-Prebendaries.

The four next are directed to Guy Archbiſhop of Vienna, Legate of the Holy See: In the firſt he confirms to him his Privileges: In the ſecond and third he orders him to determine the Difference which was between the Canons of Beſanzon and thoſe of St. Stephen in the ſame City: And in the laſt he confirms what that Archbiſhop had done in the Council of Vienna. The Conteſt between the Canons of St. John and St. Stephen of Beſanzon was about the Right of the Cathedral. The Pope had referr'd the Determination thereof to William the Predeceſſor of Guy; afterwards the Cauſe was heard at Rome: The Pope there order'd that in caſe the Canons of St. Stephen could prove that they had been in quiet Poſſeſſion of the right of the Cathedral for thirty Years paſt, they ſhould enjoy it without any more Diſpute. It was upon this and ſeveral other Differences that their Cauſe was referr'd to the Archbiſhop of Beſanzon, who having call'd a Council at Tornus, in the Year 1115. found that the Canons of St. Stephen produc'd very ſorry Witneſſes to prove their Poſſeſſion, and thereupon adjudg'd the Right to the Chapter of St. John.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

Pope Paſchal was not ſatisfied with this Sentence, as appears by his third Letter written to Guy; but Calixtus II. confirm'd the Judgment of the Council of Tornus. But this did not put an End to the Diſpute, till Cardinal Hugh united thoſe two Churches by a Treaty concluded between them, An. Dom. 1153.

In the 84*th.* he confirms the Limits granted to the Cittadel of Velitra by Gregory VII.

In the 85*th.* he wrote word to William Archbiſhop of Melphi, that he put down the Biſhoprick eſtabliſhed in the Burrough of Lavella, and confirms the Privileges of the Church of Melphi.

In the 86*th.* directed to Guy Biſhop of Pavia, he confirm'd the Rights and Privileges of the Church of Pavia.

Moſt of the following Letters are confirmations of Privileges.

The 96*th.* 97*th.* 99*th.* the 100*th.* 100*th.* and 1*ſt.* and 2*d.* are written to Henry King of England, and to St. Anſelm about Inveſtitures, and about the Prohibition made againſt admitting the Sons of Prieſts into Orders.

The next Letters are likewiſe directed to the ſame Perſons, and have regard to the Affairs of England; ſuch as the Inſtitution of the Biſhoprick of Ely, and the Tranſlation of Radulphus from the Biſhoprick of Rocheſter to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury. In the 98*th* directed to Osborn Biſhop of Exon, he determines that he ought to allow the Monks to have a Church-Yard within their Monaſtery to bury their Dead.

Theſe Letters are followed by ſeveral Fragments of other Letters attributed to this Pope, in the Collection of Gratian, ſeveral of which are againſt the Laicks who were for conferring the Inveſtiture of Churches, or ſeiz'd on their Revenues; others about Tenths; ſome whereby the Monks were prohibited from claiming the Rights which belong'd to Biſhops, or from exempting themſelves from their Juriſdiction; and others againſt Marriages between Relations.

The Letters of Gelaſius II.

Pope Gelaſus II. being but a ſhort Time on the Chair, wrote but a very few Letters.

In the 1*ſt.* directed to all the Prelates of the Kingdom of France, he gives them to underſtand that the Emperor being unexſpectedly come to Rome had drove him thence, and that afterwards he threatned to do him all the Miſchief he could, if he would not grant him what he deſir'd. That he had return'd this Anſwer to him, that he was ready to determine the Difference which was between the Church and the Empire, at Milan or at Cremona, about St. Luke's-day, by thoſe whom God had appointed to be Judges in the Church: That notwithſtanding this Propoſal, he had ſet on the Chair Maurice Archbiſhop of Bragne, excommunicated by his Predeceſſor Pope Paſchal: That thanks be to God the Emperor had not been favour'd by any of the Romans in this his proceeding; but only by thoſe of the Faction of Guibert. He exhorts the Prelates of that Kingdom to find out Ways of vindicating the Honour of the Church.

The 2*d.* directed to Bernard of Toledo, is upon the ſame Subject.

In the 3*d.* he exhorts the Clergy and Laity of Rome to have no Correſpondence with Maurice the Intruder, who was both perjur'd and excommunicated.

In the 4*th.* he congratulates Gautier Archbiſhop of Ravenna, his being advanc'd to that Archbiſhoprick, and the Re-union which he had procur'd between that Church and the Holy See; in purſuance whereof, he reſtores to the Archbiſhoprick of Ravenna all the Biſhopricks of Æmilia, which had been taken away from it during the Schiſm, and granted him the Pall.

In the 5*th.* he recommends to the Chriſtians who were at the Siege of Saragoſſa to receive him whom he had conſecrated Archbiſhop of that City, and grants Indulgences to all who ſhould die in that Expedition.

The 6*th.* and 7*th.* are Privileges granted to the Abby of Cluny.

Calixtus II. wrote more Letters.

The Letters of Calixtus II.

By the firſt he informs Adalbert Archbiſhop of Mentz of his Election to the Popedom.

The 2*d.* is a confirmation of the Conſtitutions of the Order of Ciſteaux.

The 3*d.* is a Confirmation of the Privileges, Rights, and Revenues of the Church of Vienna.

The 4*th.* is written to the Biſhops of France, about the taking of Maurice Burdin.

The 5*th.* is a congratulatory Letter to the Emperor Henry V. upon the Concluſion of the Treaty which he had made with the Holy See about Inveſtitures.

By the 6*th.* he confirms the Privileges of the Church of Bragne.

By the 7*th.* and 8*th.* thoſe of the Church of Bamberg.

By the 9*th.* and 10*th.* thoſe of the Abby of Vendome.

In the 11*th.* he refers to the Biſhop of Langres a Difference which was between the Monaſtery of St. Peter the Lively of Sens, and the Abbots of Moleſme, and of St. Rhemy of Rheims.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

The next are written in favour of the Chapter of St. John of Besanzon, to whom he adjudg'd the Right of the Cathedral.

The four next are Privileges granted to the Abby of Tornus.

The 21*st*. and 22*d*. are other Privileges granted to the Abby of Cluny.

The 23*d*. is a Letter of Compliment to King Lewis the Gross, to whom he recommends his Legate.

The 24*th*. is directed to Gerbert Bishop of Paris: He therein orders that all the Churches and Abbies of his Diocess shall be Subject to him, and that the Canon of his Church who had been made a Bishop, shall no longer hold his Prebend.

In the 25*th*, he permits a certain Lord of Germany to found a Monastery; upon Condition, that the Revenues which he bestow'd should be under the Protection of the Holy See, to which that Monastery should give every fourth Year an Albe and some white Vestments; and that neither he nor his Successors should have any Thing to do with what related to the Monastery.

In the 26*th*. and 27*th*. he approves the Institution of the Regular Canons in the Churches of Bewriad and Berchgetesgaden.

By the 28*th*. he establishes Gerard Bishop of Angoulesme, his Legate in the Provinces of Bourges, Bourdeaux, Auche, Tours, and Bretagne.

In the 29*th*. directed to the Bishops of Orleans and Paris, he confirms the Prohibitions made by his Legate against celebrating Divine Service, where ever William the Son of Count Robert, who had marry'd the Daughter of the Count Angers his Kinsman, should be.

In the 30*th*. directed to Pontius Abbot of Aniana, he adjudg'd to that Abbot a Priory, which was contested between him and the Archbishop of Arles, and the Monks of the Abby de la Chaise-Dieu.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

In the 31*st*. and 32*d*. he order'd that those who pillag'd the Revenues of the Village of Mongodin, belonging to the Chapter of Mascon, shall be excommunicated.

In the four next, he confirms the Primacy of the Archbishoprick of Toledo.

To these Letters is annex'd a Letter of Lewis the Gross, directed to that Pope, as an Answer to that which he had sent into France upon the taking of Burdin; wherein, after he had declar'd to him the Joy he conceiv'd at this Success, he returns him Thanks for having superseded for a while the Sentence pass'd against the Archbishop of Sens, in favour of the Archbishop of Lyons, and desires he would be pleas'd wholly to revoke it, observing to him that he had laid this Business very much to Heart, and would expose himself and his Kingdom to the utmost Dangers, rather than put up such an Affront. He puts his Holiness in mind of the great Services which the Kings of France had always done to the Holy See, and of those which in a particular Manner he had done for him by being present at the Council of Rheims, wherein he had more regard to the Honour of the Holy See than to his own Interest. He conjur'd him as an Acknowledgement of those good Turns, that he would be pleas'd to preserve the Church of Sens in its ancient Liberty, which could not be taken away from it by a Privilege granted by Stealth, and without his Knowledge, to the Archbishop of Lyons.

The four Sermons upon St. James attributed to Calixtus II. publish'd by Mariana, and inserted in the Bibliotheca Patrum, are supposititious Pieces, and unworthy of that Pope.

CHAP. III.

The History and Letters of the Popes, Honorius II. Innocent II. Celestine II. Lucius II. and Eugenius III.

The History and Letters of the Popes, &c.

Honorius II.

POpe Calixtus being Dead, Leo Frangipani forbad the Cardinals to proceed to a new Election till three Days after, under Pretence, that they might have Time sufficient to deliberate on the Choice they were to make, and to consult the Canons, relating to Elections thereupon. Frangipani's Design was to get Lambert Bishop of Ostia elected; the People were for the Cardinal of St. Stephen, whom Frangipani seem'd also to favour: But, the Cardinals casting an Eye upon Thibaud, Priest and Cardinal of St. Anastasius, gave their Votes for him, and would have proclaim'd him Pope under the Name of Celestine II. When in the mean time Leo Frangipani, observing the People were against this Election, propos'd to them the aforesaid Lambert; who was soon after proclaim'd by the common Suffrage of the Clergy and People, was cloth'd in his Pontifical Habit, and nam'd Honorius II. Nevertheless, the better to gain the Cardinal's Approbation, in few Days after he threw off his Papal Ornaments in their Presence; which won so extreamly upon them, that they were soon brought to acknowledge him and confirm his Election. He govern'd peaceably and prudently the Holy See for five Years and two Months. In the Year 1125. he excommunicated Frederick and Conrade, Nephews to the Emperor Henry V. who would have seiz'd upon the Empire, and who made War upon Lotharius. In 1127 he declar'd War himself against Roger Count of Sicily, who pretended to have a right to the Dutchies of Calabria and Apulia Independant from the Pope. The Year after he excommunicated this Prince, and dy'd the 14*th*. of February, in the Year 1130.

Innocent II.

After the Death of Honorius II. the Cardinals that were then Present, on the same Day elected Gregory Cardinal of St. Angelo, who was then nam'd Innocent II. At the same time Cardinal Peter of Leon, formerly a Monk of the Abby of Cluny, caus'd himself to the elected, under the Name of Anacletus, by another Faction of Cardinals. The Party of Cardinal Peter was by much the stronger, which oblig'd those that were for Innocent to retire to strong Holds, and afterwards to fly with that Pope to the City of Pisa. This occasion'd Innocent to come into France, where an Assembly of Prelates was held on his account at Etampes, in the Year 1130. to which St. Bernard was sent. He spoke very notably in favour of Innocent, and his Opinion was follow'd by the whole Council. This Pope being thus acknowledg'd by France went immediately thither, and was splendidly receiv'd at Orleans by King Lewis the Gross, and several Bishops that came to wait on that Prince. From thence he set forwards to Chartres, where Henry I. King of England acknowledg'd him likewise. He had not long after the Approbation and Consent of the Emperor Lotharius, whom he went to meet at Liege in the Beginning of the following Year. This Prince receiv'd him very honourably, but however he would needs make Use of this Occasion to get the Investitures restor'd. This very much surpriz'd the Romans, and St. Bernard labour'd all he could to dissuade the Emperor from insisting on such a Demand.

The History and Letters of the Popes, &c.

At the breaking up of this Conference, the Pope held a Council at Rheims, at which he crown'd King Lewis the Younger, in the Room of his Brother Philip, then lately dead. After this Council was over he made some short Stay at Auxerre and thence return'd into Italy, having first comply'd with Lotharius, who thereupon promis'd to march to Rome and Re-establish him in the Papal Chair. Upon this Lotharius kept punctually to his word; came to Rome; put Innocent in possession of the Palace of Lateran, and in Recompence was crown'd Emperor by this Pope in the Year 1133. But, notwithstanding, all this; Peter of Leon and his Party, being become Masters of all the strong Holds in and about Rome, and Lotharius likewise being oblig'd to return Home, Innocent was constrain'd to retire a second Time to Pisa, where he call'd a Council in the Year 1134. The Church of Milan soon came under the Obedience of Innocent II. thro' the Persuasion of St. Bernard and the Legates which this Pope had sent thither. But the Province of Guienne declar'd for Peter of Leon thro' the Subtilty of Gerard Bishop of Angoulesme, who had persuaded William Duke of this Province that this was the rightful Pope, and who for Recompence was made Legate in conjunction with Giles Cradinal Bishop of Frescati: These condemn'd William Bishop of Poictiers, caus'd him to be driven out of his Diocess and placed another in his Room. They likewise dispossess'd the Bishop of Limoges and instated Ranulphus of Duras in his See. Hereupon St. Bernard and Geofrey Bishop of Chartres, went to Guienne and conferring with the Duke at Pontigni, easily enclin'd him to own Innocent for Pope. But whereas he would by no means consent to the Re-establishment of the Bishops that had been suspended, St. Bernard to surmount his Obstinacy, took the Blessed Sacrament and carrying it to the Place where the Duke was, conjur'd him in the Name of Jesus, and with such terrible Words that the frightned Duke fell flat upon the Ground and was forc'd to be reconcil'd to the Bishop of Poictiers.

The Bishop of Angoulesme, who had also possess'd himself of the Archbishoprick of Bourdeaux, dy'd some small Time after, whereby the Schism was intirely suppress'd in Guienne. Roger Duke of Sicily was now the only Prince that continu'd in the Interest of Peter of Leon, and this by Reason that he had receiv'd the Title of King from him, and moreover was in Poſſeſſion of that Part of the Patrimony of St. Peter which lay in the Province of Benevento, which he had no Mind to reſtore to the Holy See. Yet Duke Ranulphus having defeated him in a ſignal Battle, prevented his attempting any Thing againſt Pope Innocent. Peter of Leon dy'd in the Year 1138. A little while after his Death, thoſe of his Party plac'd in his Stead the Cardinal Gregory, to whom they gave the Name of Victor, but this Perſon finding his Side too weak to hold out againſt Innocent, came and publickly ſurrender'd his Pretenſions to him, in the Year 1139. Afterwards Innocent held a Council at Lateran, in which the Favourers of Peter of Leon were ſolemnly condemn'd, and the Ordinations made by this Pope declar'd null and void. Some Time after Innocent was taken by Duke Roger, which occaſion'd the Agreement afterwards made between them. This Pope dy'd the 24*th*. of September, in the Year 1143. The ſame Day Guy a Prieſt and Cardinal of St. Mark was choſen Pope by the Cardinals, and proclaim'd under the Name of Celeſtine II.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

Celeſtine II.

He had no Competitors in his Election, but his Pontificate was of no long Continuance, for he dy'd 5 Months and a few Days after, on the 8*th*. of March, in the Year 1144. He was ſucceeded by Gerard Cardinal of the Holy-Croſs, who took the Name of Lucius II. whoſe Pontificate was very much moleſted by the War with Roger Duke of Sicily, with whom nevertheleſs he at length made a Truce, and by the Revolt of ſome Italians who had a Mind to aſſert the Authority of their Senators that were aſſembled in the Capitol. This Pope dy'd of Grief as ſome will have it, but as others ſay, he was kill'd by the Fall of a Stone about the End of the firſt Year of his Pontificate, the 26*th*. of February, in the Year 1145.

Lucius II.

Eugenius III.

Bernard, Native of Piſa, Abbot of St. Anaſtaſius, and Diſciple of St. Bernard, was choſen in his Place by the Cardinals, under the Name of Eugenius III. This Pope the People would have oblig'd before his Conſecration to have confirm'd the Soveraignty of the Senators, to avoid doing which he retir'd to the Monaſtery of Forfa where he was proclaim'd and conſecrated Pope. Some time after his Conſecration he retir'd to Rome, where he liv'd for a while in a ſtrong Hold; but at length, not thinking himſelf in ſufficient Security, he retir'd to Viterbe. He was no ſooner gone, but Jordanes, who had taken upon him the Quality of a Patrician, made himſelf Maſter of Rome, pillag'd all the Cardinals and great Mens Houſes, that would not ſubmit to his Government, built divers Citadels in the City, and alſo made one of the Church of St. Peter. Againſt him, Eugenius pronounc'd the ſevereſt Anathema's, and by the Aſſiſtance of the Militia of Tivoli forc'd the Italians to make Peace, to aboliſh the Dignity of Patricius, and to receive a Præfect and Senators which he ſhould depute to govern them in his Abſence. This Agreement being concluded, he return'd to Rome, and kept the Feaſt of Chriſtmas there, but the Romans being unmindful of the Articles of the Peace, and given to rebel, Eugenius was forc'd to get away ſecretly to Tivoli, whence he retir'd to Piſa, and from thence into France, in the Year 1147. He was there kindly receiv'd by King Lewis, and had ſeveral Councils in Favour of the Croiſade, and continu'd above a Year in that Country. He return'd into Italy towards the End of the Year 1148. where after having undergone divers Fatigues of War, he at length became Maſter of the Church of St. Peter, in the Year 1150. He dy'd at Tivoli the ninth of July, in the Year 1153. His Body was carry'd to Rome and interr'd in St. Peter's Church.

Of the Church of Rome, &c.

The Letters of theſe Popes contain nothing very remarkable.

Honorius II. has writ but very few.

The Letters of Honorius II.

His firſt was upon Occaſion of the Death of Pontius, a Monk of Cluny, who dy'd out of his Abby. He gives Peter, the venerable Abbot of Cluny, to underſtand that he had bury'd him in holy Ground, out of Reſpect to that Abby whereof he had formerly been Monk.

The ſecond and third are writ concerning the Pall, which he grants to William elected Archbiſhop of Tyr, and conſecrated by the Patriarch of Jeruſalem.

In the fourth he recomends to the King of Denmark, the Legate which he had ſent into his Kingdom.

By the fifth he receives Henry, Son of Lewis VI. of France, being deſign'd for the Church, under the Protection of the Holy See.

In the ſixth, directed to the Clergy of Tours, he confirms the Excommunication pronounc'd by his Legate againſt Fulcus Earl of Angers, by reaſon that he did not break the Marriage between his Daughter and William, Son of Lord Robert.

The ſeventh is a Confirmation of the Privileges granted the Abby of Cluny by his Predeceſſors.

The three following relate to the Legateſhip of Cardinal John de Creme into England.

The laſt is addreſs'd to the Biſhops of the Province of Tours, to exhort them to obſerve the Decrees of the Council of Nantes.

The Letters of Innocent II. are very many.

Innocent II.

IN the firſt he confirms the Judgment of the Council of Jouare, againſt the Aſſociates of Thomas Prior of St. Victor, as likewiſe againſt thoſe of Archembaud Subdean of Orleans, adding ſeveral Puniſhments which were before omitted.

By the ſecond he gives all the Lands, which the Princeſs Matildis enjoy'd in Italy, and which ſhe had left to the Holy See, to the Emperor Lotharius and Henry Duke of Bavaria his Son-in-Law, on Condition that they ſwear Fealty and do Homage to the Church of Rome, and moreover to pay yearly a hundred Pound in Gold.

The third is a Confirmation of the Immunities and Revenues belonging to the Church of Piſtoia in Tuſcany, addreſs'd to the Biſhop of that City.

The five Letters following are written to the Patriarch of Jeruſalem and Antioch, and the other Biſhops of the Eaſt for Conſervation of the Dignity and Rights of Fulcus Archbiſhop of Tyr.

In the ninth he confirms the Grant made by Pope Honorius II. to Roger, of the Kingdom of Sicily, Dutchy of Apulia and Principality of Capua, together with the Title of King.

The next following contain the Condemnation of Peter Abaelard and Arnold de Breſſe.

The twelfth is a Privilege granted to the Abby of St. Memme.

In the three next he confirms the Power of the Archbiſhop of Hambourg over the Biſhopricks of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway.

In the ſixteenth he admoniſhes Hugh, Archbiſhop of Roan, to comply with the King of England his Maſter, and to permit the Abbots of Normandy to pay Fealty and Homage to him.

In the ſeventeenth, he acquaints King Lewis that he is arriv'd in perfect Health at Cluny.

Innocent II.

By the eighteenth he commands Geofrey Biſhop of Chartres, and Stephen Biſhop of Paris, to reſtore to Archembaud Subdean of Orleans, and his Fraternity, the Benefices and Goods that had been taken from them.

In the ninteenth, he orders the ſame Biſhop of Paris to take off the Suſpenſion which he had awarded againſt the Church of St Genieveve.

The four next relate to the Abby of Vezelay, to which he orders an Abbot, and whoſe Privileges he confirms.

In the twenty fourth, he commands Aloiſus Abbot of Anchin to take Care of the Church of Arras, of which he was elected Biſhop.

In the twenty fifth, he confirms the Rights and Privileges of the Biſhop of Bamberg.

In the twenty ſixth, he receives Hugh Archdeacon of Arras, under Protection of the See of Rome.

The fourteen Letters which follow, concern the Privileges and Revenues of the Abby of Cluny: and in the fifteenth, he recommends himſelf to the Prayers of this Monaſtery.

The forty ſecond is a Piece of a Letter wrote to Otho Biſhop of Lucca, concerning thoſe Witneſſes who are related to either Party.

In the forty third, he acquaints Guigue Prior of the great Charter-Houſe, that he has canoniz'd Hugh Biſhop of Grenoble, and farther commands him to write what he knows of his Life or Miracles.

There are alſo five more Letters which belong to Innocent II. and relate to the Affairs of Germany, and two concerning the Church of Angers. The firſt are at the End of the 10*th*. Tome of the Councils, and the two laſt in the 2*d*. Tome of the Miſcellanies of Monſieur de Baluze.

We have but three Letters of Celeſtine II.

Celeſtine II.

IN the firſt he acquaints Peter, the venerable Abbot of Cluny, with his Acceſſion to the Pontificate.

In the ſecond, he confirms the Donation of the Church of St. Vincent, to the Order of Cluny, by the Biſhop of Salamanca.

In the laſt, he orders the Archbiſhop of Toledo, to reſtore to the Biſhop of Orenſe, ſome Pariſhes which the late Biſhop of Aſtorgas had ſeiz'd upon.

Celeſtine II.

The Letters of Pope Lucius II. are about ten.

Lucius II.

BY the firſt he gives Peter of Cluny to underſtand, that he has made a Truce with Roger King of Sicily.

By the ſecond he demands Aid of King Conrade againſt the Italians, who were revolted, and who had choſen Jordanes for a Patrician.

In the third and fourth, he confirms the Primacy of the Church of Toledo over all the Churches of Spain.

The fifth contains a Privilege granted to the Abby of Cluny.

In the ſixth he ſubmits the Monaſtery of St. Sabas to the Abby of Cluny.

By the ſeventh, he commands the Abbot of St. Germains of Auxerre to diſcharge the Servants of the Abbot of Vezelay, who were Bail for him, and he moreover removes the Suit before Godfrey Biſhop of Langres. Lucius II.

In the eighth, he confirms the Judgment given by Pope Paſchal againſt thoſe that had kill'd Artaud Abbot of Vezelay, and forbids their being receiv'd any more into any Monaſtery.

By the ninth he orders the Count of Nevers to reſtore to the Abby of Vezelay whatever he had taken from it.

And by the tenth, he enjoyns St. Bernard to warn the ſaid Count from exacting any Thing from the aforeſaid Abby.

The Letters of Eugenius III. are in a far greater Number.

Eugenius III.

THE firſt addreſs'd to Lewis King of France, is an Exhortation to the Croiſade, to encourage the retaking the City of Edeſſe, with all others that had been conquer'd, and in a Word, to defend the Holy-Land from Invaſion. He therein confirms all the Privileges granted to the Knights of the Croſs by his Predeceſſor Urban, and moreover puts their Wives, Children and Eſtates under Protection of the Churches and Biſhops; then he prohibits any Proceſs being iſſu'd out in Prejudice of the ſaid Knights, till they were either dead or return'd from their Voyage. Next, his Will is, that they be paid Intereſt for the Money they had; permits them to mortgage their Eſtates to the Churches without Equity of Redemption; warns them not to be at a needleſs Charge about unprofitable Equipage, but to lay the moſt Part out in Arms, Horſes, and other Inſtruments of War. And laſtly, he grants them Remiſſion and Abſolution of all their Sins, which they ſhall have confeſſed with an humble and contrite Heart.

By the ſecond directed to Thibaud, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, he commands and provides that the Biſhop of St. David's ſhall be ſubject to the See of Canterbury, and likewiſe requires the two ſaid Biſhops Attendance at Rome the Year following, on St. Luke's Day, that he may judge farther of the Matter.

The third is addreſſed to Hildegarda Abbeſs of Mont St. Rupert, commending her Spirit of Prophecy, and adviſing her to preſerve by her Humility God's Grace granted to her, and moreover, always to make uſe of Prudence in the unfolding of thoſe Myſteries which God had reveal'd to her.

The fourth and fifth are againſt ſome Eccleſiaſticks of Rome, who follow'd the Doctrine of Arnaud de Breſſe.

By the ſixth he comforts King Conrade on his ill Succeſs in his Expedition to the Eaſt.

The ſeventh comprehends the Ceremonies of the Canonization of the Emperor Henry II.

The eighth is an Anſwer to the Biſhops of Germany, wherein he ſignifies his Diſlike of the intended Tranſlation of Guieman Biſhop of Naumbourg, to the Archbiſhoprick of Magdebourgh.

The ninth contains a Grant of the fourth Part of all the Offerings made in the Church of St. Peter, to the Canons of that Church. This is ſigned by the Pope and ſeveral Cardinals.

The tenth is another Act to confirm the Rights and Privileges of the Church of Colen. This is likewiſe ſigned by divers Cardinals.

The eleventh is a conſolatory Epiſtle written to Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, upon the Death of his Nephew.

In the twelfth written to the ſame Abbot, he demands the Names of thoſe French Biſhops who had refus'd to aſſiſt him in the Defence of the Kingdom, and likewiſe thanks him for his kind Offer of the Place which he deſir'd to hold a Council in. He therein alſo ſpeaks of the Excommunication of the Duke of Lorrain, and of a Favour which this Abbot had requeſted of him for a certain Church.

The thirteenth is likewiſe written to Sugerus: He therein exhorts him to place the Monks of St. Martins in the Fields, in the Church of St. Genevieve; and accordingly gives the Canons of the ſaid Church Notice thereof in the Letter following. But however, having afterwards alter'd his Mind, he orders in the fifteenth, the Regular Canons to be receiv'd in Stead of the Monks, which was ſpeedily obey'd by Sugerus, as he gives his Holineſs to underſtand, and which the Pope approves of by the ſixteenth, eighteenth, ninteenth, and twentieth Letters, all written to Sugerus.

The ſeventeenth is writ to the ſame, relating to him that had been choſen Biſhop of Arras, notwithſtanding an Appeal made to the Holy See.

In the twenty firſt, he gives this Abbot to underſtand, that Lewis King of France is return'd from the Holy-land, and arrived in Sicily.

In the twenty ſecond, he exhorts the ſaid Abbot to govern the Kingdom of France with Fidelity during the King's Abſence. And moreover, acquaints him that he has written a Letter to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of that Kingdom, by which, he commands them to excommunicate all thoſe that diſturb the publick Tranquility, and likewiſe commands the ſaid Abbot to convene the Prelates of the Kingdom to provide whatever ſhall be neceſſary for the Good of the State. Eugenius III.

The twenty third is the ſame mention'd before, written to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of France.

The twenty fourth relates to a particular Affair of two Prieſts of Meaux, accus'd by Goſlin, whoſe Cauſe he refers to Sugerus.

By the twenty fifth, twenty ſixth, and thirtieth, he alſo refers to Sugerus the Judgment pronounc'd againſt a Prieſt of the Dioceſs of Sens, who had been depriv'd of his Benefice by the Archdeacon, for having refus'd to give him ſuch Sums as he demanded.

By the twenty ſeventh, he alſo refers to the ſaid Abbot the Difference between Joſcelin Canon of Meaux and another Eccleſiaſtick.

By the twenty eighth, he exhorts the ſame Abbots, to redeem the Treaſure of St. Genevieve which had been pawn'd.

In the twenty ninth, he ſpeaks to him concerning the Croiſade of King Lewis.

In the thirty firſt, he deſires him to relieve the Church of St. Medard of Soiſſons, from which Ives Count of Soiſſons demanded a great Sum.

In the thirty ſecond, he thanks him for his Care of the Churches of the Eaſt, and moreover recommends to him the Re-eſtabliſhment of Religion in the Church of Campiegne.

The thirty third is addreſs'd to Stephen King of England, whom he deſires not to uſe the Biſhop of London ill, though he had refus'd to take the Oath of Fidelity to him. He recommends the ſame Matter to Maud Queen of England by the thirty fourth Letter.

The following Letters to the ſixtieth, concern the Differences which Pontius Abbot of Vezelay had with Count Nevers, and the Biſhop of Autun, concerning the Immunities and Privileges of his Abby. Eugenius III. takes this Abbot's Part very ſtrongly, and writes in Favour of him, to ſeveral Princes and Biſhops.

The ſixty firſt is written to Eberhard Biſhop of Bamberg, whom he commands to retain the Regular Canons, eſtabliſh'd in the Church of Hildeſheim by Gebehard Biſhop of Eichſtat, and to drive out the Secular Canons which the Archbiſhop of Mayence had introduc'd there. He writes about this Matter to ſaid Archbiſhop in the following Letter.

The ſixty third is the Title of the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Biſhoprick of Tournay, written to the Clergy and People of that City, by which he gives them to underſtand, that he has ordain'd for their Biſhop, Anſelm Abbot of St. Vincent of Laon, enjoining them to receive him, and conſequently promiſes to diſpenſe with their Oath of Fidelity which they ſhould have taken to the Biſhop of Noyon. By the following Letter he acquaints Lewis VII. King of France, with the Re-eſtabliſhing of this Biſhoprick, and recommends to him the Perſon that he had ordain'd Biſhop of Tournay.

The three following Letters are written to Moſes Archbiſhop of Ravenna, concerning him that had been elected Biſhop of Placenza, and who ought to have been conſecrated by this Archbiſhop his Metropolitan.

In the ſixty eighth he ſeverely reprimands Samſon Archbiſhop of Rheims, for having crown'd the King of France in the City of Bourges, to the Prejudice of the Archbiſhop of that City, whereupon he orders him to reſtore to the Church of Bourges the Offerings and Gifts which he had receiv'd upon that Occaſion, interdicts him the Pallium, and and moreover cites him to Rome, together with the other Biſhops who had aſſiſted at that Coronation.

Eugenius III.

The ſixty ninth contains his Grant and Confirmation of the Archbiſhop of Bourges's Primacy over the Provinces of Bourges and Bourdeaux.

By the following Letter he commands the Biſhop of Saintes to permit a new Church to be built at Rochelle.

The ſeventy firſt is a Confirmation of the Conſtitutions and Privileges, and of the Order of White Friars.

The ſeventy ſecond, with the following, till you come to the 83. and laſt, are addreſs'd to the Biſhops of Spain, relating to the Primacy of Toledo.

There are alſo three Letters of Eugenius III. wherein he commands the Abbots of St. Pons, and de Grace to preſent to the Archbiſhop of Narbonne the Prieſts which they have a Mind to place in Curacies belonging to them, to the End that they might receive their Orders from him, and pay him accordingly their Firſt-fruits and Oblations.

Monſieur Baluze in his 2*d*. Tome of Miſcellanies, has given us a Letter of this Pope's, written to the Biſhops of Reggio and Foro-Julio, whereby he forbids the ſaid Biſhops to exact any Thing from the Church of Barjole, ſince it was under Protection of the Holy See. He alſo excommunicates the Biſhops of theſe Dioceſſes for having interr'd excommunicated Perſons in conſecrated Ground. Eugenius III.

There is alſo a Privilege in Favour of the Biſhops of the Province of Bourges, whereby Eugenius confirm'd the Liberty granted them by the Kings of France, and which had been approv'd by the Popes, Innocent and Lucius, which was that they might be elected without being oblig'd to do Fealty or Homage to the Papal-Chair.

To the Letters of theſe Popes we may here add thoſe of Anacletus II. the Antipope, which have been lately publiſh'd by Chriſtianus Lupus, at the End of his Collection of Letters printed at Louvain in the Year 1682. They are in all 83. whereof the moſt conſiderable have been written about his Election, which he maintains to have been perform'd according to Cuſtom; and with the unanimous Conſent of the Clergy of Rome. He there accuſes Aimeric Chancellor of the Church of Rome, to have been the Cauſe of his Adverſaries being elected, and of the Troubles which enſu'd. Theſe Letters are writ in a good Stile, and with ſome ſort of Elegance and Force.

CHAP. IV.

The Life of St. Bernard together with his Works.

St. Bernard.

SAint Bernard was born in the Year 1091. at Fontaine, a Village of Burgundy, whereof his Father call'd Jeſchelin, was Lord. His Mother, nam'd Alethe, Daughter to Count Montbart, had 7 Children, ſix Boys and one Girl, all which ſhe educated very diſcreetly and piouſly. St. Bernard was very much inclin'd to Virtue from his Infancy, and took betimes a Reſolution to retire from the World. He alſo engag'd all his Brothers and ſeveral Friends in the ſame Reſolutions, who, after they had liv'd for ſome Time retir'd in their own Houſes, in the Year 1113. met together and went to Ciſteaux, there to enter into a Monaſtical Life. This Monaſtery is ſituated in the Dioceſs of Chalons about five Leagues from Dijon. It had been built about 15 Years before, in 1098. by Robert Abbot of Moleſme, who retreated thither with about one and twenty Monks, who all imbrac'd an auſtere and rigid Life. But in the Year following, Robert being oblig'd by the Pope's Order, to return to Moleſme, Alberic Prior of Ciſteaux, was made Abbot, who dying in 1109. Stephen Hardingue became the third Abbot. He govern'd this Monaſtery, reduc'd to a ſmall Number of Monks, by Reaſon of the Auſterity of their Lives, when St. Bernard and 30 of his Companions came into it. This extreamly augmented the Zeal of this Order, which then began to encreaſe; for the firſt Year after, the Abby of la Tecte, firſt Daughter of Ciſteaux, was founded near la Grone, in the Dioceſs of Chalons. The Year following there was another eſtabliſh'd at Pontigni four Leagues from Auxerre, and in the Year 1115. thoſe of Clairvaux and Morimond were founded in the Dioceſs of Langres. Abbot Stephen ſent St. Bernard and his Brothers to that of Clairvaux. He choſe, although he was very young, to govern this Monaſtery. He was conſecrated Abbot by William de Champeaux Biſhop of Chalons, by reaſon of the Vacancy of the Epiſcopal See of Langres. The Reputation of St. Bernard's ſingular Piety, and the ſtrict Manner of living in his Monaſtery, drew People from all Parts to be admitted of it. Inſomuch that in a little Time ſeveral Monks went out thence to eſtabliſh themſelves in other Monaſteries where they liv'd according to the ſame Rule. That of the Three Fountains was firſt founded in the Dioceſs of Chalons, in the Year 1118. That of Fontenay a little while after in the Dioceſs or Autun, in the Year 1121. Next there was one eſtabliſh'd at Foigny in the Dioceſs of Laon, and that of Igny in the Dioceſs of Rheims, and laſtly, the fourth Off-ſpring of Clairvaux was founded in the Year 1127. All theſe Monaſteries had for their firſt Founders the Monks of Clairvaux who were all Abbots ſucceſſively. But St. Bernard had a general ſuperviſorſhip over all the reſt. The Learning and Virtues of this Saint were too bright to continue long hid within the Walls of a Cloyſter, for they quickly render'd him ſo famous in the Church that nothing of Moment paſs'd there wherein he was not imploy'd. He was call'd to the Councils of Troyes and Chalons, held by Matthew Cardinal Biſhop of Albany: The firſt in the Year 1128. and the ſecond in 1129. The Schiſm and Factions which hapned in the Church of Rome after the Death of Pope Honorius II. between Innocent and Peter of Leon, gave a great deal of Trouble to St. Bernard, who was the principal Defender of Innocent for eight Years together. The King of France, before he would declare for either of theſe Competitors, aſſembled a Convocation of his Prelates at Etampes, to examine which of the two had the greater Right. To this Aſſembly St. Bernard was call'd, and the ſole Deciſion of ſo important a Matter refer'd to his Judgment. Whereupon he gave his Opinion for Innocent II. and all the Aſſembly acquieſced in it. This Pope being thus acknowledg'd by France, poſted thither with all imaginable Diligence, and St. Bernard waited on him all along during his Stay there. He carry'd him from Orleans to Chartres, where he perſuaded Henry King of England to acknowledge him. From thence he follow'd this Pope into Germany, and was preſent at the Conference his Holineſs had with the Emperor at Liege. He there ſpoke with a great deal of Freedom to this Prince, perſuading him to alter his Reſolutions of requiring the Pope to re-eſtabliſh Inveſtitures. At his Return from Liege, his Holineſs held a Council at Rheims in the Year 1131. which when ended he retir'd to Auxerre, after having viſited Cluny and Clairvaux, which did not go in Proceſſion before him clad in ſplendid Ornaments, but cloath'd in courſe Cloath, carrying a homely Crucifix, and ſinging leiſurely and modeſtly Hymns and Anthems. The Year following St. Bernard accompany'd the Pope into Italy, and brought over to him both the Piſantines and Genoeſes. At length he came with him to Rome, whence he was not long after ſent into Germany, to make Peace between Conrade and Lotharius. Having happily negotiated this Affair, he was recall'd to Piſa, whither the Pope was forc'd to retire a ſecond Time. St. Bernard aſſiſted at the Council which his Holineſs held in this City, in the Year 1134. after the Concluſion of which the Pope ſent him to Milan, to reconcile the Milaneze to the Church of Rome. He ſent alſo along with him two Cardinals in Quality of Legates, Guy Biſhop of Piſa, and Matthew Biſhop of Albany, and this, to the End that they might purge the City of Milan of the Schiſm which Anſelm a Favourer of Peter of Leon had ſpread there, and bring back all that were ſtray'd from the Church of Rome. St. Bernard took alſo along with him Geofrey Biſhop of Chartres, to adviſe with upon Occaſion. The Milaneze, who had long deſir'd St. Bernard ſhould come among them, met him before he came to the City, and receiv'd him with all imaginable Reſpect and Honour, ſo that by his Means the Church of Milan was ſoon brought over to the Obedience of the See of Rome. After this St. Bernard return'd into France, but he was no ſooner got there, but he was forc'd to leave his Monaſtery to go to Guienne with the Pope's Legate, to reduce the Duke of that Province to the Obedience of the Holy See, and to re-eſtabliſh the Biſhops of Poictiers and Limoges who had been expuls'd. He overcame the Obſtinacy of this Prince by an Action of ſurprizing Boldneſs, for when he ſaw the Duke's Reſolution, not to reſtore the Biſhop of Poictiers, was inflexible, he went to perform the Divine Office, and aſſoon as the Conſecration was over, he plac'd the Wafer upon the Chalice, walk'd out of the Church, and with Eyes full of Fury and a terrible Mein, he accoſted the Duke after this Manner: 'Hitherto, quoth he, we have pray'd and pray'd, and you have ſtill ſlighted us. Several Servants of God who were preſent at the Aſſembly, have joyn'd their Prayers with ours, yet you have never minded them. Now therefore the Son of God, who is the Lord and Head of that Church which you perſecute, is come in Perſon to ſee if you will repent. Here is your Judge, at whoſe Name every Knee bends, both in Heaven, Earth, and Hell. Here is the juſt Revenger of your Crimes, into whoſe Hands this obſtinate Spirit of yours ſhall one Day fall. Will you deſpiſe

St. Bernard.

St. Bernard.

'and flout at him? Will you be able, think you, to ſlight 'him as you have done us his Servants? Will you.' Here the Duke not being able to hear any more, fell down in a Swoun; whereupon St. Bernard took him up, and commanded him forthwith to be reconcil'd to the Biſhop of Poictiers, which the poor aſtoniſh'd Prince immediately condeſcended to; ſo that the Biſhop was quickly after reſtor'd, and all Schiſm aboliſh'd in that Province. In the Year 1137. he was recall'd into Italy by the Pope, to quell the remaining Party of Peter of Leon. He went thither, and after having brought over ſeveral to Pope Innocent's Side, he was deputed to Roger Duke of Sicily, who was then the only Prince that continu'd to ſupport Peter of Leon, there to defend his Maſter Innocent againſt Cardinal Peter of Piſa, who was to oppoſe him. He enter'd into a Conference with this Cardinal, and ſoon made him change his Opinion and Party. After Peter of Leon's Death, the Perſon that was intended to ſucceed him in his Attempt, came to beg of St. Bernard that he would intercede to Pope Innocent for his Pardon. Peace by theſe Means being reſtor'd to the Church of Rome, and Schiſm entirely extirpated, St. Bernard return'd to his Monaſtery of Clairvaux, and after his Arrival ſent the Pope ſome of his Monks to inhabit the Monaſtery of St. Anaſtaſius newly re-built. One of theſe call'd Bernard, formerly Official of the Church of Piſa, was choſen for their Abbot, who afterwards came to be Pope under the Name of Eugenius III. after the Death of Celeſtine and Lucius, Succeſſors to Innocent II. both who liv'd no long Time. It was about this Time that St. Bernard diſputed with Abaelard, a famous Philoſopher of the Univerſity of Paris, at the Council of Sens, in the Year 1140. He had often ſent to him privately to correct his Errors, maintain'd in his Books, but this obſtinate Author neglecting ſo to do, and appealing to the Archbiſhop of Sens, St. Bernard was ſent to the Council held there, whither he went, though againſt his Will. Abaelard not daring to ſupport his Errors, appeal'd to the Pope, but his Doctrine being condemn'd by this Council, he retir'd to Cluny; where after having renounc'd his Sentiments, he dy'd in the Communion of the Church of Rome. Under the Pontificate of Eugenius III. St. Bernard was deſir'd to preach up the Croiſade, at the Requeſt of Lewis the Younger, who had thoughts in his Head to undertake a Voyage into the Holy-land. St. Bernard acquitted himſelf in his Duty with ſo much Zeal, that great Numbers of People reſolv'd to accompany Lewis in that Expedition. He was preſent at three Councils, held in the Year 1147. at Etampes, Auxerre, and Paris. The ſame Year he was ſent into Aquitaine, by Alberic, Cardinal-Biſhop of Oſtia, to combat the Hereſies which Henry had promulg'd there. He quickly confounded them, as well by his Preaching as a great many Miracles which he perform'd. In the Year 1148. Gillebert of la Porree, Biſhop of Poictiers, being convinced by St. Bernard at the Council held at Rheims, retracted his Errors, and came over to the Church. At length, St. Bernard having been choſen towards the End of his Days, to be Mediator between the People of Mentz and ſome neighbouring Princes, after having happily and prudently concluded all Differences between them, on his Return, he fell ſick of a Weakneſs in his Stomach, and dy'd the 20*th*. of Auguſt, in the Year 1153. He left near 160 Monaſteries of his Order, founded by his Care. Divers Churches deſir'd to have him for their Biſhop: Thoſe of Langres and Chalons courted him exceſſively; and thoſe of Genoa and Milan offered him their Archbiſhopricks. And laſtly, Rheims earneſtly requeſted him for its Paſtor, but notwithſtanding all theſe Sollicitations, he perſevered in his Reſolutions never to be advanc'd to the Epiſcopacy.

St. Bernard, did not only render himſelf worthy of Eſteem by the Piety of his Life, and his many illuſtrious Actions. His Works alſo ſpeak high in his Behalf; in which, he diſcovers as much Wit and Elegancy, as Knowledge and Piety. We ſhall proceed to give an exact Hiſtory and Abridgment of them, as we find them rank'd in the laſt Edition, publiſh'd not long ſince by Father Mabillon. The firſt Volume contains all his true Works, and begins with the Letters which compoſe the firſt Tome.

The Letters of St. Bernard.

The firſt Letter was written to his Son Robert, to exhort him to return to the Monaſtery of Clairvaux, which he had left for that of Cluny. The Author of St. Bernard's Life ſays, that this Letter was dictated to William, who was afterwards Abbot of Rievaux, in the middle of a Field while it rain'd hard, yet the Paper was never wet. This Letter is full of Profeſſions of Love and Charity towards his Son, which ſhews, how extreamly St. Bernard was griev'd at his Abſence. 'I have long and impatiently 'expected, ſays he, my dear Son Robert, That God in his 'Mercy would pleaſe to touch thy Heart, and mine at the 'ſame Time, inſpiring thee with a hearty Compunction, 'and giving me the Pleaſure of ſeeing thy Converſion: But 'having hitherto been all along fruſtrated in my Hopes, I 'can no longer conceal my Grief, contain my Sorrow, 'nor diſſemble my Sadneſs. 'Tis that which obliges me, 'contrary to the Order that ought to be obſerved, to call 'home him who has offended me; to court one that has 'ſlighted me; to give Satisfaction to one that has affronted 'me; and in a Word, to beg of him that ought to petition 'me. For when a Man is once touch'd with extream Concern, he deliberates not, has no Shame, conſults not his 'Reaſon, thinks not of abaſing himſelf, obſerves no Meaſure, and his Soul is intirely imploy'd in the Search or 'Recovery of what he has loſt or deſires. You will tell 'me perhaps that you have never offended nor ſlighted me, 'but that it was I only that have abus'd you, and that you 'left me but to avoid the ill Uſage which I made you undergo. I grant it: You had Reaſon, but let us talk no 'more of what is paſt, nor inquire into the Cauſe of it; 'the preſent Time only demands our Conſideration. Let 'me conſider then what makes me unhappy, what ſo diſcompoſes me? Is it not becauſe I have thee no more, 'becauſe I ſee thee no more, and becauſe I live altogether 'without thee, who art only able to give me Life? I ask 'not why you went away, but I heartily grieve that you 'are not return'd. Come but a little and I ſhall be at quiet. 'I own it was my Fault that you left me; I was perhaps 'too rigid towards a young tender Youth, and dealt perhaps too hardly by thee, yet ſtill it may be I could excuſe 'my ſelf, and ſay, that the Follies of unexperienc'd Youth 'ought to be ſuppreſs'd by a ſevere Diſcipline, and our firſt 'Years ſhould be corrected by the ſevereſt Teſt of Reaſon: 'But I will not inſiſt upon this; I will as I ſaid before, 'take all upon my ſelf; I only am in the Wrong; pardon me, for I confeſs it; I will never do the like again; 'you ſhall find me quite another Man; return only and 'have no more Fear of any Thing. Others now might lay 'your Crime home to you; fright you into Thoughts of 'Guilt; Lay the Contents of your Vow before you; threaten you with God's Judgments; condemn your Diſobedience, and accuſe you of Apoſtacy; but I had rather 'bring you over by fair Means, and reclaim you with kind 'Words.' St. Bernard next deſcribes after what Manner Robert had been ſeduc'd to Cluny, and how he had been led away by the Converſation which a Prior, who was ſent by the Abbot of Cluny, had with him, 'This Preacher of 'the new Goſpel, ſays he, I ſuppoſe, cry'd up good Cheer, 'and condemn'd Self-denial and Parſimony; and told him, 'I imagine, that voluntary Poverty was a real Miſery, and 'Faſts, Watchings, Prayer, and Labour a meer Folly. To 'Idleneſs, it may be, he gave the Title of Contemplation, 'and that of Diſcretion to Gormandizing, Babling, and 'Niceneſs. Perhaps he demanded of him, if God could 'ever be pleas'd with tormenting us; or, if the Scripture 'commanded us any where to murther our ſelves? What 'Religion there could be in digging of Ground, cutting 'of Wood, carrying of Dung, or the like? Who was the 'wiſe Man, he that hated his own Fleſh, or he that cheriſh'd 'it? This poor Youth might eaſily be ſeduc'd by ſuch inſinuating Diſcourſe, and conſequently is led to Cluny, 'where they ſhave his Head, waſh his Body, tear off his 'courſe and homely Habits, and put on ſuch as were new 'and more coſtly. Next is he led in Triumph about the 'Monaſtery; every Body commends him, and congratulates his coming among them; and, in a Word, he is 'ſoon placed above thoſe of a longer ſtanding. But however, they think fit to ſend to Rome to have what they do 'authorized by the Holy See, and that the Pope may the 'better yield to their Requeſt, they pretend, that being a 'Child, he was offer'd by his Parents to their Monaſtery. 'No Body was then at Rome that could refute this Reaſon, and therefore his Holineſs has paſs'd his Judgment 'in Favour of the Preſent, to the Prejudice of the abſent; 'by a Privilege too ſevere, he has confirm'd an Abſolution too eaſy; and in a Word, has forc'd my Son to take 'up a new Profeſſion and make new Vows.' From this Allowance of the Pope's, St. Bernard appeals to the Determination of God, and the Tribunal of Chriſt, and demands which ought to prevail moſt, the Vows of a Father for his Son, or thoſe of a Son made for himſelf, principally when he has enter'd into a Vow of any great Importance. For it is certain, that Robert had never been any otherwiſe than promis'd, and never had been given to the Monaſtery of Cluny, ſince his Parents had not requir'd them to receive him, and he had not been offer'd in the Preſence of Witneſſes, neither had his Head been cover'd with the Pallium of the Altar. They likewiſe gave out, that there was a Portion given with him to their Monaſtery. 'But, 'Quoth St. Bernard, if they had a Portion with him, why 'do they not think themſelves oblig'd to keep him as well 'as the Portion? Is it becauſe they have greater Regard to 'the Money than the Perſon, and love the Pence better 'than the Soul? If he has been offer'd to the Monaſtery, 'why do they ſuffer him to live at large in the World, for 'it is from the World and not from Cluny that you came, 'Robert, to Ciſteaux? You have earneſtly entreated and 'beg'd to be receiv'd into that Brotherhood, but notwithſtanding, they delay'd two years before they would admit

'you,

St. Bernard.

'you, yet at length you got in, and after having been a 'Year Probationer, you became profeſs'd, and quitted the 'Secular Habit for the Regular.' It is here that St. Bernard ſeverely reproaches him for the Breach of his Vows, and for his Ingratitude, and that in making him ſenſible of the Care and Pains he had been at in his Education. Afterwards in Terms the moſt moving imaginable, he expreſſes the Agonies he has endur'd by his Abſence. He gives him moreover to underſtand, that a lazy and luxurious Life, which they all lead in the Order of Cluny, is very dangerous to his Salvation, and likewiſe exhorts him to do his beſt Endeavours to be in a Condition to obſerve Abſtinence, Watching, Faſts, Silence, Labour and other Auſterities, practis'd in Clairvaux, and all which the Life he leads in Cluny, will very much diſuſe him from. This Letter was writ in the Year, 1119.

In the 2*d.* he reproves Fulcus, a regular Canon, inaſmuch that having accepted of the Deanry of Langres at his Uncle's Requeſt, he thereupon quitted his Cloyſter for a ſecular Life. Altho' St. Bernard had no poſitive Authority over this young Man, yet his Zeal oblig'd him to rally him ſeverely, and openly to blame the Conduct of his Uncle. He endeavours to convince him, that to converſe with the World is dangerous, and therefore the beſt way to be ſav'd were to avoid that. At length he admoniſhes him to return to his Cell, and promiſes he will put up his Petitions to God on his behalf. In this Letter there is an elegant Paſſage relating to the Uſe of Church-Goods. You may imagine (ſays he) that what belongs to the Church belongs to you while you officiate there. But you are miſtaken, for tho' it be reaſonable that one that labours at the Altar ſhould live by the Altar, yet muſt it not be either to promote his Luxury or Pride. In a word whatever extends beyond bare Nouriſhing, and ſimple, plain Cloathing is Sacrilege and Rapine. This Letter was writ in the Year, 1120.

In the 3*d.* directed to the Canons of Audicour, in the Dioceſs of Chalons, after having rejected, with a great deal of Humility, the Commendations which they gave him, he acquaints them that he has receiv'd, with Permiſſion of the Biſhop of Chalons, ſome Regular Canons into his Monaſtery who had a mind to embrace a Monaſtick Life.

The 4*th.* was written about the Year, 1125. to Arnold Abbot of Morimond about his having quitted his Monaſtery with ſix of his Brothers without leave, firſt obtain'd from the Abbot of Ciſteaux. He had acquainted St. Bernard with what he had done, and beg'd of him not ſo much as to mention his Return to his Monaſtery. This Letter St. Bernard anſwers, and tells him that it is not in his Power to forbear Adviſing him to return, and moreover acquaints him that if he had known where to have met him, he would have run into his Arms, thrown himſelf at his Feet, beg'd, conjur'd and endeavour'd both by Tears and Words to have reclaim'd him: But ſince he had thought fit to deprive him of that Pleaſure, he earneſtly entreats him to hearken to an abſent Friend, that is ſorry for his Crime, and cordially concern'd at his Peril. He likewiſe ſhews him that it is to be fear'd that his Fall may draw others into the ſame Snare, and therefore tho' he has little Regard to himſelf yet ought he to take Care of thoſe he has the Charge of. He conjures him to think how much he expoſes both them and himſelf, and laſtly he Adds, that for his Part he cannot think he did well to leave his Convent even on a worldly Account, becauſe he did it without the Conſent of his Brothers; the Monks, the reſt of the Abbots, and without the Permiſſion of his Superior.

That which follows is addreſs'd to Adam one of the Monks that went away with Abbot Arnold. He reproaches him for his Inconſtancy and Fickleneſs.

In the 6*th.* he entreats Bruno, who was afterwards Archbiſhop of Colen, to do all in his power to cauſe ſome of theſe ſtragling Monks of Morimond that lurked about in his Dioceſs, to return to their Cloyſter.

Arnold being dead, St Bernard reinforc'd his Requeſt to Adam, that ſince his Abbot was dead, and he conſequently diſcharg'd of his Obedience, he might make no Difficulty to return. And farther upon this Abbots having commanded his Monks to follow him, St. Bernard examines into theſe Caſes how far Superiors are to be obey'd. He lays down for an unqueſtionable Maxim, that they are not to be obey'd when they command any Thing that is ill, becauſe in that Caſe they cannot be comply'd with without diſpleaſing God. Afterwards he proceeds to reckon up three ſorts of Things that may be commanded: 1. Abſolutely good, 2. Abſolutely bad, and 3. Indifferent, which may be either good or bad according to the ſeveral Circumſtances and Perſons. He obſerves that the Law of Obedience which relates to Men, has regard only to the laſt of the three; for the firſt may not be omitted tho' any body commands it. Nor the ſecond permitted tho' a Superior would have it ſo, but in the third and laſt a Superiors pleaſure is to be preferr'd to our own will, and we are to obey equally what they command or forbid. Moreover he urges that what had been commanded him by his Abbot to quit his Monaſtery and go along with him, was among the Number of thoſe Things which are forbidden by God, and that even the Pope himſelf could not have given him Permiſſion to have done it, for that the Diſpenſation which he had obtain'd was a frivolous Remedy that ſerv'd rather to palliate a diſeas'd Conſcience than cure it. We have (ſay they) aſk'd Leave of the Holy See, and we have obtain'd it; but would to God (ſays St. Bernard) that you had not aſk'd Leave but rather demanded Counſel; that would have been more for your Good and my Satisfaction. But again, why did you aſk this Leave? Was it not becauſe you had a mind to do what you ought not? Now what you ought not to do is ill when done, and you it ſeems have got a Permiſſion to do ſo. You will ſay perhaps that what you aſk'd was only ill where Leave had not been obtain'd, but being once permitted it ceaſed any longer to be ſo. But I have already ſhewn that your Petition was not of this kind, but a publick Scandal forbidden by the Law of God; ſo that this Action of yours was not leſs blameable by being allow'd of by the Pope, who I'm confident would never have conſented to your Demands, had he not been either deceiv'd or forc'd by Importunity: After having ſhewn farther by ſeveral Arguments, that it was in vain for this Monk to pretend to excuſe himſelf on pretence of Obedience to, and Command of his Abbot, he remarks that two Things are principally to be obſerv'd in Monaſteries; which are Obedience to their Abbot, and Continuance in the ſame Place. Here you may ask me perhaps (ſays he) how I can reconcile that with the continuance which I vow'd to Ciſteaux? I anſwer that in truth I was profeſs'd at Ciſteaux, but that I was ſent by my Abbot to the Place where I now reſide, without Diſcord and Scandal, purſuant both to Order and Cuſtom. There is alſo another Objection rais'd againſt me. If I condemn (ſay they) thoſe that have left their Monaſteries by the Command of the Abbot, how comes it to paſs that I have receiv'd and retain'd ſuch as have done ſo? The anſwer to this is eaſy tho' I do not know whether it will pleaſe every Body. I receive them (continu'd he) becauſe I cannot think it a Crime to aſſiſt them to obſerve their Vows in one Place which they could not do in another, and ſo to recompence the Omiſſion of Reſidence by a ſtrict Performance of all the other Precepts of a Monaſtick Life. But why, ſays one to me, do you condemn all thoſe that do not live in every particular like your ſelf? No; I do not do ſo, I know there are many Holy Men that do not live after the ſame Manner with me; I only give a Reaſon why I receive thoſe that deſire it of me without blaming thoſe than don't deſire it. Excuſe the one without accuſing the Other. The Envious only I cannot nor will Excuſe. In reſpect to others, if there be any that deſign to practiſe a Monaſtick Life in its Purity, but dare not for fear of Scandal, or cannot by Reaſon of ſome Infirmity, I do not believe they commit any Sin, providing they live Soberly, Juſtly, and Devoutly in the Place where they are; and if they are ſometimes oblig'd to live a little more looſely than our Rules preſcribe, they may be excus'd either by Charity that covers a Multitude of Faults; or Humility, which makes them ſenſible of their own Weakneſs and Imperfection.

St. Bernard.

The 8*th.* Letter of St. Bernard is written to Bruno Archbiſhop of Colen, who had demanded of him, if he might accept that Archbiſhoprick. To which he anſwers, That no mortal Man ought to reſolve that Queſtion; becauſe if God calls one to it no Body ought to diſſwade one from it, and if God does not call one to it, no Body ought to adviſe one to accept it, for the Holy Ghoſt alone is able to determine who is call'd and who not; that what troubles him more than this is that he made a Confeſſion of his Sins to him, but he Fears, has not ſufficiently repented of them; ſo that when he conſiders that he has been call'd from the State of a Sinner to that of a moſt Reverend Miniſter without Repenting, he hopes he will beg of God a ſpeedy Commiſeration and Forgiveneſs; but yet there is a great deal of Difference between meriting Pardon for Sins, and being advanc'd all of a ſudden to ſo great a Dignity, that it is true St. Matthew was call'd to the Apoſtle-ſhip even in the very Act of his Profeſſion, but nevertheleſs he thought it Adviſable to repent heartily before he accepted of his Miſſion. St. Ambroſe alſo was rais'd from a Profeſſion of the Law to that of the Goſpel, but he had all along led an innocent and inoffenſive Life. That the Converſion of St. Paul likewiſe is a Miracle which cannot be paralleld. But in fine he ſays that in Caſe he can give no other Anſwer than that he will pray God to Manifeſt his Pleaſure, and that if he doubts of any Thing more, he may conſult Norbert who being a great Scholar, and always with him may be able to give him due Satisfaction.

Bruno at laſt reſolves to Accept the Archbiſhoprick of Colen; which St. Bernard having underſtood, he writ him the two following Letters by which he exhorts him to do his Duty, and acquit himſelf in all Things as he ought to do. Theſe Letters were writ about the Year 1132.

The 11*th.* Letter is written to Guigue, Prior of the great Chartus-Houſe and to his Monks. He therein diſcourſes upon Charity and its Effects with its ſeveral kinds, and Laſtly aſſerts, that it can have no Profection in this Life.

In the 12*th.* writ to the ſame, he deſires their Prayers.

St. Bernard. By the 13*th.* he requeſts of Pope Honorius II. a Confirmation of the Election of Alberic to the Biſhoprick of Chalons. This Alberic was Native of Rheims, a Fellow-Diſciple with Abaelard, and a learned Divine. He was elected Biſhop of Chalons in the Year 1126. after the Death of Ebalus, but he was never ordain'd nor inducted into this Biſhoprick. He was tranſlated in the Year 1139. to the Archbiſhoprick of Bourges. This Letter of St. Bernard's was written ſoon after the Election of Alberic to the Biſhoprick of Chalons. This is the firſt which he wrote to Pope Honorius II. and yet he did not put his Name to it, but ſubſcrib'd himſelf a Poor Monk and great Sinner.

In the 14*th.* he recommends to the ſame Pope an Affair of the Church of Dijon.

He recommends alſo the ſame Thing in the two following Letters, to the Cardinals Haimeric and Peter.

In the 17*th.* he excuſes himſelf to the laſt of theſe Cardinals, that he did not come to wait on him, becauſe he had made a Reſolution never to ſtir out of his Monaſtery. He moreover writ to him, that he knew not what his Eminence meant by the Books he ſpeaks off, and that he knows not what he had ever writ, which could in the leaſt be worthy of his judicious Peruſal. That ſome of his Monks indeed might probably have copy'd what they heard him ſpeak, and that he believ'd Gebuin the Chanter and Archdeacon of Troyes might likely have a Copy by him; but for his own Part, he had none to his Knowledge; yet if he ever found any, or writ any thing for the future, which he thought might be agreeable to him, he would certainly ſend it.

In the following Letter addreſs'd to the ſame, he enlarges upon the Vanity of Humane Praiſe, and the Eſteem which Men have of us. I am proud, (ſays he) of the good Character you have honoured me with, but my Pride is extreamly diminiſhed, when I conſider that it is not my Actions, but the Opinion which others have of me, that has procur'd me this Eſteem. I am aſham'd to be ſo puff'd up, when I perceive that I am not ſo much lov'd and honour'd for what I am, but for what I am thought to be; for it is not I that am ſo well belov'd, but a certain Je ne ſcay quoy which is ſuppos'd to be in me, and perhaps is not. He ſhews afterwards that there is nothing in any Creature which deſerves perfectly to be lov'd, and commended, nevertheleſs (ſays he) there is an univerſal Vanity ſcatter'd amongſt the Generation of Men, which makes all covet to be prais'd, although they are never ſo blame-worthy. All Commendation beſtowed on us is Flattery, and the Joy we conceive thereupon a fruitleſs vanity. They that let themſelves be commended are moſt commonly vain Fools, and ſuch as Commend themſelves for the moſt part are impudent Lyars. Towards the End of this Letter, he promiſes to ſend him ſome of his Works. Theſe Letters are thought to have been written about the Year 1127.

The two next Letters, are likewiſe writ to the ſame Cardinals. He recommends to them an Affair of the Church of Rheims.

The 21*ſt.* is directed to Matthew, the Pope's Legate in France. In it he excuſes himſelf for not being able to wait on him, by Reaſon of his Illneſs; as alſo complains of being ſollicited to come out of his Cloyſter to embroil himſelf with the Affairs of the World. This Letter was written ſome ſhort Time before the Council of Troyes, which was held in the Year 1128.

In the 22*d* he recommends to Humbaud Archbiſhop of Lyons, an Affair belonging to the Biſhop of Meaux.

In the 23*d*. he commends Atton Biſhop of Troyes, for having diſtributed all he had among the Poor, when he once lay Sick. Moſt commonly, (ſays he,) Wills are not wont to be executed till after our Deaths, and conſequently we then give what we are no longer able to enjoy, but this Perſon being between the hopes of Life and fear of Death, gave away all his Goods to the Poor, to the end that his Charity might ſubſiſt eternally, even in deſpite of his Fate. He afterwards rejoices that this Biſhop recover'd from his Diſeaſe. Theſe two laſt Letters were written about the Year, 1128.

In the 24*th.* he Commends Gilbert Biſhop of London, for living Poor whilſt he enjoy'd ſo conſiderable a Benefice. 'It is no great Wonder (ſays he,) That Gilbert is a 'Biſhop, but it is ſomewhat extraordinary that a Biſhop of 'London ſhould live ſo meanly. The exalted Dignity of 'his Epiſcopacy could not augment the Glory of ſo great a 'Man, when his humble Poverty has not a little advanc'd 'him. To undergo want patiently is the Effect of an or'dinary Virtue, but to court it voluntarily is the Sign of 'a great Soul.

In the 25*th.* he exhorts Hugh, Archbiſhop of Roan, to Patience, and to temper his Zeal by Charity. 'A Biſhop '(ſays he,) muſt not only be Patient, that he may not be 'overcome by Evil, but he muſt be alſo a Peace-maker, 'to ſurmount the Evil with Good, inſomuch, that he 'ought to ſupport even the Wicked, and reform them that 'he ſupports. Be you therefore Patient, becauſe you are 'amongſt wicked Men, and a Peace-maker, that you may 'be able to govern Ill-doers. Let your Charity be full of 'Zeal, but let your Severity be tempered with Reaſon. St. Bernard.

The 26*th.* is a Letter to Guy Biſhop of Lauſane, which comprehends in a few Words the neceſſary Qualifications and Virtues requir'd in a Biſhop. 'You have (ſays he to 'him,) undertaken a difficult Task, you need therefore to 'have Force to go through it: You have took upon you 'to watch over Iſrael, you ought to have a great deal of 'Prudence. You expoſe your ſelf both to Fools and 'wiſe Men, therefore Juſtice is likewiſe neceſſary, and, in 'a word, you will have Occaſion for Temperance to mo'derate your Paſſion upon the greateſt Provocations.

The 27*th.* and 28*th.* contain much the like Inſtructions to Arduition Biſhop of Geneva.

In the 29*th.* he congratulates Stephen, Biſhop of Metz, upon the Peace reſtored to his Church.

In the 30*th.* he exhorts Alberon of Metz to wait patiently for the Execution of an Affair which he was treating about with his Biſhop. Theſe two Letters were written after the Year 1126.

In the 31*ſt.* he congratulates Hugh Count of Champagne, on his being made a Knight of Jeruſalem (of the Croſs.) This Count was the firſt Founder of the Abby of Clairvaux, which occaſions St. Bernard to ſay that he can never forget the great Friendſhip he has for him, on Account of his noble Beneficence to his Monaſtery.

The 32*d.* is addreſs'd to Joran Abbot of St. Nicaiſe of Rheims, who complained that the Order of Ciſteaux had received into their Fraternity, one of his Monks call'd Dreux. St. Bernard gives him to underſtand, that he does not approve of ſuch a Proceeding, and that if that Monk had asked his Advice, he ſhould not have counſell'd him to ſuch an Action, and that he would not have receiv'd him himſelf, had he been Abbot of that Monaſtery. He likewiſe acquaints Joran that he partakes of his Concern, and would aſſiſt him to his Power; but that he was able to do nothing more, than to write to the Abbot of Ciſteaux to reſtore the ſaid Monk. He moreover counſels him not to take that Matter ſo much to Heart, but to ſubmit freely to the good Pleaſure of God, and ſuppreſs his juſt Indignation by the Example of a certain Saint, who being ſollicited to look after a ſtray'd Monk, anſwer'd, I ſhall not do it; for if he be a good Chriſtian, where ever he be he is ſtill mine. St. Bernard adds further, that he himſelf had made Uſe of the Counſel which he gave; for that having had a near Relation receiv'd by the Monaſtery of Cluny againſt his Will, though he is ſenſibly griev'd for his Loſs, yet is he reſolved to reſt ſatisfy'd, praying both for the Monks, that they would reſtore him, and for the Perſon himſelf, that God would give him Grace to return. This ſhews plainly, that this Letter was written before Robert's Return, about the Year, 1120.

Although St. Bernard had thus written to the Abbot of St. Nicaiſe, nevertheleſs, his Opinion was not that this Monk was obliged to return to his Cloyſter, therefore having written before to Hugh, Abbot of Pontigni, that had receiv'd this Monk, that he thought him oblig'd to reſtore him, he was forc'd to write a ſecond Letter to undeceive him, whereby he ſignified that it was never his Intention to adviſe him to give up this Monk, but that on the contrary, he commended what he had done, and likewiſe congratulated him in it. But having been powerfully ſollicited by the Archbiſhop of Rheims, and be an Abbot, who was one of that Monks Friends, he could not prevent writing that Letter and requeſting what he feared ſhould come to paſs. He believed at the ſame Time that he had given ſome Umbrage of his Meaning by writing at the End of his Letter, that if he choſe rather to ſuffer Diſpleaſure, than to releaſe this Monk, he might do as he pleas'd, but that for his Part, he would have no Manner of Hand it it. In fine, he tells him, that he did him a great deal of Wrong, to ſuſpect that he had a Mind to ſeduce this Monk to his own Monaſtery.

In the 34*th.* he congratulates this Monk on the Reſolution he had taken, and exhorts him to perſevere in it.

The 35*th.* is addreſs'd to Hugh Farſite, Abbot of St. John of Chartres, whom he deſires to recommend the cauſe of Humbert, to the Count of Chartres. He withal aſſures him, that he has not burnt the Letter which he ſent him, although there were ſtrange Notions in it concerning the Sacraments.

Hereupon this Abbot wrote him an Anſwer to this Effect, That he had forgot that he had given him any Cauſe of Concern, but having ſent him a right Orthodox Confeſſion of Faith, St. Bernard makes known to him by the thirty ſixth Letter, that he eſteemed him a very good Catholick, and that he verily believes he gave wrong Sentiments of his Mind. He counſels him moreover, not to injure the Memory of a Holy Biſhop, with whom he never had any Difference whilſt he liv'd.

In the 37*th.* 38*th.* 39*th.* 40*th.* and 41*ſt.* St. Bernard recommends ſeveral things to Thibaud Count of Champagne. The

St. Bernard.

The 42*d.* written to Henry Archbiſhop of Sens, is to be found among St. Bernard's Opuſcula.

In the 43*th.* and 44*th* he deſires that Archbiſhop to do Juſtice to the Abby of Moleſme, concerning what he claim'd from the Church of Sevan, which belong'd to that Abby.

The 45*th.* Letter is written in the Name of the Abbot, and the whole Order of Ciſteaux to Lewis the Groſs, King of France, concerning his perſecuting of Stephen, Biſhop of Paris. He makes them ſpeak to this King with a great deal of Freedom, and declare that if His Majeſty did not think fit to do Juſtice to this Biſhop, they would aſſuredly write to the Pope about it.

This King not having made Satisfaction to the Biſhop of Paris, the Archbiſhop pronounc'd a Suſpenſion againſt him, but the King having afterwards humbled himſelf to Pope Honorius II. procur'd it to be taken off, which oblig'd Hugh Abbot of Pontigni, and St. Bernard, to write the forty ſixth Letter to this Pope, ſignifying to him, that they were ſurpriz'd that his Holineſs would ſuffer that Suſpenſion to be taken off, when if it had been continu'd, the King would certainly have done that Biſhop Juſtice, and this becauſe the Conſtancy and Courage of the Prelates of that Nation had conſiderably wrought upon the Temper of that Prince.

St. Bernard, caus'd alſo the ſame Thing to be written to the Pope, by Geofrey Biſhop of Chartres, in whoſe Name the forty ſeventh Letter was writ. He Acquaints his Holineſs that the King having been frightned with the Interdict, had promis'd to reſtore to the ſaid Biſhop of Paris, all that he had taken from him, but that ſince he had obtain'd Abſolution, he refus'd to perform his Promiſe.

In the 48*th.* he juſtifies himſelf to Haimeric, Chancellor of the Holy See, concerning the Accuſations which had been made againſt him. He deſires to know if they are grounded on the Biſhoprick of Verdun, being taken from a Perſon that was unworthy to enjoy it, or upon Fulbert Abbot of the Holy Sepulchre, at Cambray's being forc'd to yield his Place to Pervin, or by Reaſon that at Laon a place of Debauchery was become one of Devotion, by driving out of the Monaſtery of St. John, Monks which led an Irregular lewd Life, and by putting thoſe of St. Nicaiſe in their Room. He ſays, if theſe Things are laid to his Charge, he takes it for an Honour, but that to his great Grief he was not the Author of them, and by conſequence could neither deſerve the Merit nor the Blame. He adds, That the Biſhop of Albany was the Occaſion of the Firſt, the Archbiſhop of Rheims of the Second, and the Third ought to be attributed to the ſame Archbiſhop, in Conjunction with the Biſhop of Laon. All that is to be found fault with in him, he ſays, is, that he was Preſent when theſe Matters were tranſacted, when he ought to have been ſhut up in his Cloyſter, and not to have meddled in the Affairs of the World. He owns he was there Preſent. 'But (ſays he,) 'It was becauſe I was ſummon'd and forc'd thither, which 'if it be diſpleaſing to my Friends, it is leſs pleaſant to 'me, and would to God I had never gone to any of theſe 'Sorts of Aſſemblies. He then earneſtly entreats the Chancellor, That ſince his Endeavours have been eſteem'd unacceptable, he might for the future never be order'd out of his Monaſtery. 'Let theſe clamorous and troubleſome 'Frogs (ſays he,) for the future be confin'd to their Marſhes; Let them no more be heard in Councils, nor 'ſeen any more at Court: And let neither Neceſſity nor 'Authority drag them out of their Solitude. It may be 'by theſe Means your Friend may avoid the Suſpicions of 'being thought Bold. For my part I am reſolv'd henceforward never to ſtir abroad unleſs it be about the Affairs of the Order, and that too only upon Command of 'the Pope's Legate or my Biſhop.——If by your Means I 'can obtain the Favour to go no more out of my Cell upon any Account whatever, I ſhall be at reſt, and envy 'no body. But although I am permitted to remain in Silence, yet I cannot believe that the Church will ever 'be at quiet as long as the Court of Rome perſiſts to prejudice the Abſent, by obliging and humouring the Preſent. This Letter was writ in the Year, 1130.

The 49*th.* and 50*th.* are addreſs'd to Pope Honorius II. in the Name of the Abbots of Ciſtraux, Pontigni, and Clairvaux, in Favour of the Archbiſhop of Sens, perſecuted by King Lewis the Groſs. They beg of his Holineſs to permit this Archbiſhop to have Recourſe to the Holy See for Juſtice.

In the 51*ſt.* he recommends the ſame Affair to Haimeric, Chancellor of the Church of Rome.

In the 52*d.* addreſs'd to the ſame, he ſays, That the Biſhop of Chartres was in the right not to undertake the Voyage to the Holy-Land. He moreover begs of this Chancellor to uſe his Intereſt to the Pope that he may be employ'd no more abroad.

The two following are Letters of Recommendation, addreſs'd to Haimeric. Theſe ſix Letters were writ about the Year, 1127.

In the 55*th.* directed to Geofrey, Biſhop of Chartres, he prays that Biſhop to receive again a Recluſe Monk, who had repented of leaving his Cell.

St. Bernard.

In the 56*th.* he acquaints the ſame Biſhop that he does not know whether Norbert will go to Jeruſalem or no. He ſays, He is not of the Opinion of that Holy-Man, who affirm'd that Anti-Chriſt would certainly come before the Century he lived in was expir'd, and that he ſhould not die before he had ſeen a general Perſecution in the Church. He alſo recommends to the Biſhop of Chartres the Affair of Humbert.

In the 57*th.* writ to the ſame Biſhop, he ſays, That a Vow made to go to Jeruſalem ought not to hinder a Man from being receiv'd to make a better Vow.

In the 58*th.* writ to Ebalus, Biſhop of Chalons, he recommends to him to admit for Prior of the Regular Canons of his City, him whom the ſaid Canons had choſen; being a good and Religious Perſon; or if they would not do ſo, he propos'd to them another of a regular and virtuous Life, and not ſuch a one as they would have to favour their Libertiniſm.

In the 59*th.* he adviſes Guilencus Biſhop of Langres to deliver up to the Church of St. Stephen of Dijon, ſome Goods which fell to them by the Death of the Archdeacon Garnier.

In the 60*th.* addreſs'd to the ſame Biſhop, he recommends to him the Care of the Church of Moleſme.

By the 61*ſt.* he ſends a Penitent that had addreſs'd himſelf to him, to Ricuin Biſhop of Toul, he being not us'd to enjoyn Penance to any but ſuch as were under his Care. For (ſays he,) would it not be an unpardonable Raſhneſs in us to intermeddle with the Affairs of Biſhops, when we our ſelves have Recourſe to them in Matters of great Difficulty. Ricuin dy'd in 1118. ſo that this Letter muſt neceſſarily precede that Year.

In the 62*d.* he deſires Henry Biſhop of Verdun, to receive a Penitent that had addreſs'd himſelf to him.

In the 63*d.* he aſſures this Biſhop that he has never utter'd any Thing to his Prejudice. This Henry is he whom St. Bernard perſuades to lay down his Biſhoptick, and which is mention'd in the forty eight Letter.

The 64*th.* is written to Alexander, Biſhop of Lincoln, whoſe Conſent he asks to permit a certain Clerk of his nam'd Philip, who had left his Cloyſter, with Deſign to travel to Jeruſalem, to remain a Monk in his Monaſtery of Clairvaux, and he farther deſires him to pay the ſaid Monk's Debts out of the Revenues of his Prebend.

In the 65*th.* written to Aloiſus, Abbot of Anchin, in Flanders, he commends him for being ſo much concern'd at the Death of a Monk of his call'd Godwin, who dy'd in his Monaſtery of Clairvaux. He alſo excuſes himſelf for having receiv'd him.

In the 66*th.* he entreates Geofrey Abbot of St. Medard of Soiſſons to make Peace with Aloiſus.

In the 67*th.* he excuſes himſelf to the Monks of St. Germer de Flay, for having received one of their Fraternity into his Monaſtery. He tells them that he never heard any Thing of them but very lately; That this Monk came to him after he had been an Hermit above ſeven Months, and that he had ſeveral Times refus'd to admit him. Alſo having ask'd him why he would not return to his Cloyſter, that he had anſwer'd, his Abbot would not have him only in Quality of a Monk, but alſo oblig'd him to ſerve as Phyſician. But at length being over-perſuaded by his Importunities that he had receiv'd him; and as he had not forc'd him to come into his Monaſtery, ſo he would not oblige him to go out of it.

Theſe Monks being not well ſatisfy'd with this Anſwer, and having writ again to St. Bernard, to this Effect; That he did not do well to receive one of their Monks whom they had excommunicated. He anſwers by the following Letter, that if they have excommunicated him, he underſtands it was ſince he admitted him, which was not likewiſe well done on their Part. And ſince they accus'd this Monk for a Vagabond that could never reſt in a Place, and who was always diſobedient to his Abbot, they ought to rejoyce on Account of his Converſion, and in regard that he liv'd now in a Monaſtery where he ſhould perform the ſtricteſt Vows. Theſe two Letters are thought to have been written about the Year, 1125.

In the 69*th.* he comforts Guy Abbot of the Three-Fountains, who was extreamly concern'd in that being about to celebrate Maſs he happened to conſecrate a Chalice, in which, there had been nothing but Water put, through Careleſsneſs, becauſe this Crime was rather the Effect of Inadvertency and Negligence than a Deſign. He nevertheleſs enjoyns him and the Perſon that ſerv'd them at the Altar the Penance of repeating till Eaſter the ſeven Penitential Pſalms, as likewiſe to receive ſeven Lathes of a Scourge each Day. He approves of what he did when he ſaw there was no Wine in the Chalice, which was to pour a little Wine upon Part of the conſecrated Hoſt; becauſe though it was not transmuted by a proper and Solemn Consecration into the Blood of Christ, it was nevertheless become sacred by the bare Contact of his Body. He adds moreover, That there is a certain Writer who maintains that the Sacrifice cannot be Valid, unless there be both Wine, Bread, and Water, in a Manner, that if there be but one of these wanting the rest signifie nothing. He says likewise, That in this Case every one may do as he Pleases, but for his Part, if any such Accident should happen to him, he would do the same Thing with him to whom he writes, or would begin Mass with these Words. Simili modo post-quam cœnatum est, &c. and would finish the rest of the Sacrifice, not in the least doubting but that the Bread was consecrated Separately.

St. Bernard.

In the 70*th.* he counsels the same Abbot to treat one of his Monks more kindly, and to revoke the several rigorous Judgments he had pass'd against him.

In the 71*st.* address'd to the Monks of this Abby, he acquaints them that he has not yet had an Opportunity to make them a Visit, and moreover condoles them upon the Death of the Abbot Roger.

The 72*d.* is written to Raimund Abbot of Foigni. He writes to him concerning the Title of Father, which this Abbot had given him, and refuses to accept of any other but Brother.

In the 73*d.* and 74*th.* he comforts and fortifies this Abbot who had been Melancholy and seem'd dissatisfy'd with his having been elevated to this Dignity.

In the 75*th.* he dissuades Artaud Abbot of Prully from sending any of his Monks to found a Monastery in Spain.

In the 76*th.* he counsels the Abbot of the Regular Canons of St. Pierre-Mont, in the Diocess of Toul, to exert all their Force in reclaiming one of their Monks who had stray'd into the World, and was there marry'd.

The 77*th.* is the 14*th.* of the Opuscula.

In the 78*th.* he congratulates Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, for having made a Reformation in his Monastery, and quitted the exterior Pride which was in it before. He likewise commends him for having taken so Pious a Resolution. Towards the End of this Letter, he exclaims against Stephen de Guarlande Deacon, who was then Steward of the King's Houshold, bore Arms, and enjoy'd divers Benefices. This Letter was writ in the Year, 1127.

The 79*th.* was written to Luke Abbot of Cousy of the Order of Austin-Friars, in the Diocess of Laon. Whom he advises to send a certain Friar of his who had committed the Sin of the Flesh, to some Place far distant from his Cloyster, where he might do Penance.

In the 80*th.* he comforts Guy, Abbot of Moleſm, upon a certain Injury done him; and moreover, exhorts him not to think of Revenge upon that Occasion, but to Pardon freely him that did him the Wrong.

By the 81*st.* he assures Gerard, Abbot of Poictiers, in the Diocess of Langres, that he never writ any thing to the Count of Nevers in his Prejudice, but only for his Churches Benefit, that it might continue in Peace.

In the 82*d.* he dissuades Stephen Abbot of St. John of Chartres, from quitting his Monastery to go on Pilgrimage to Jerusalem.

In the 83*d.* he comforts Simon Abbot of St. Nicholas of the Woods in the Diocess of Laon, about the Persecution which he suffer'd on Account of his Monks. We understand by the Letters of Samplon Archbishop of Rheims, and Josselin Bishop of Soissons, to Pope Innocent II. that these Monks were dissatisfy'd with their Abbot by Reason that he had restored to the Church of Arras some Curacy which they were in Possession of.

By the following Letter written to the same Abbot, he intreats him to receive and use kindly a certain Monk which he sends him.

The 85*th.* address'd to William Abbot of St. Thierry, is a Christian and Spiritual Compliment to serve for Answer to an obliging Complaint which this Abbot had made him, who did not believe himself so well belov'd by St. Bernard as he lov'd him.

In the 86*th.* he writes to the same Abbot that he sends him a Monk who had stray'd out of his Monastery. He acquaints him that he has reprimanded him secretely and desires of him to do as much, and then to send him back to his Abbot with a Letter of Recommendation. He dissuades this Abbot from quitting his Cloyster to turn Hermit.

In the 87*th.* he blames the Conduct of One, a Regular Canon, who after having laid down a Curacy by the Consent of his Bishop, which he had as 'twere extorted from him, on Condition that he should remain in his Bishoprick, he address'd himself to the Metropolitan to obtain Leave to return to his Abby. Being return'd he entreates St. Bernard to instruct him how he should live. Whereupon this Saint disapproved altogether of his Conduct, yet would not have him nevertheless charge himself anew with the Care of his Curacy. He advises him to be thoroughly Sensible of his Fault, for that he considers his Retreat as an Action of no great Virtue. He afterwards gives him a great deal of good Advice in this Letter, and in the three which follow, being all likewise writ to him. He excuses himself in the eighty ninth for not writing him long Letters, because he is oblig'd to Silence, which is interrupted as well as the Tranquility of Mind by Dictating and Composing, and moreover forasmuch as his Profession is not to instruct others but bewail his own Sins.

St. Bernard.

The 91*st.* is address'd to a general Chapter of Benedictine Abbots, assembled at Soissons for Reformation of their Monasteries. St. Bernard exhorts them earnestly to labour about it, for fear (says he) 'That the World should say, 'you were met together to no Purpose. Do all in your 'power to render your Actions and Occupations perfect. 'They cannot be so too much, because a Man cannot be 'too Just, too Wise nor too Virtuous. Hearken not to 'such as will say: We will not be better than our Fathers, 'owning thereby that they are the Off-spring of luke-warm 'and loose People: Or if they pretend to be Children of 'Saints, let them imitate their Sanctity and not their Indulgence and Depravity. There is no living in this World 'without either Advancing or Retreating, Rising or Descending: If a Man has a mind to continue in the same 'State, he shall presently fall. He that desires not to be 'better was never really good; and whoever ceases endeavouring to bee good ceases to have any Worth.

The four following Letters are Letters of Compliment, the first is address'd to Henry King of England, and the others to the Prelates of his Realm.

In the 96*th.* he commends Richard Abbot of Fontaine in in the Diocess of York, for having embrac'd the Order of Cisteaux with twelve of his Monks in the Year, 1132.

In the 97*th.* he dissuades Duke Conrade from making War upon the Count of Savoy.

In the 98*th.* he answers a Question which had been put to him. Why of all the Saints that are in the Old Testament, the Church observes Feasts for none but the Maccabees? The Answer is that the Church takes Notice of them, because they are not unlike our Christian Martyrs, having suffer'd Death for not Abjuring the Law of God.

In the 99*th.* he writes to a Monk whose going out of the Monastery he was Jealous of; but having by a Letter understood the Occasion of it, his Suspicions soon vanish.

In the 100*th.* he commends the great Charity of a certain Bishop towards the Poor. It is (says he) a Thing so well becoming a Bishop; It is a great Ornament to his Function in that not being able to be Poor by Reason of his Revenues, he nevertheless has regard to the Poor and Indigent; for it is not Poverty that is a Virtue, but the Love of the Poor, and the Poor in Goods are not pronounc'd happy by the Gospel, but the Poor in Spirit.

In the 101*st.* he begs of a Monastery to receive a Monk again that had left them without Permission.

In the 102*d.* he counsels an Abbot to try all Means to bring a certain Monk to his Duty, and to expell him if he found him Irreclaimable.

In the 103*d.* he exhorts a Person to forego the inordinate Love that he had for Riches.

In the 104*th.* he advises another to quit the World.

The Letters following to the 115*th.* are Exhortations to several Persons to embrace a Monastick Life which he greatly commends.

In the 115*th.* he dissuades a Monk from turning Hermit.

The six following Letters contain only Compliments and Thanks.

The 122*d.* is a Letter of Hildebert, at that time Archbishop of Tours address'd to St. Bernard, in which he greatly commends him and begs his Friendship, which Letter St. Bernard answers after a very obliging Manner in the 123. and in the 124. he admonishes him to embrace the Interest of Pope Innocent II.

By the 125*th.* he sends to Geofrey of Loroux to engage in the Defence of this Pope against Peter of Leon.

In the 126*th.* address'd to the Bishops of Limoges, Poictiers, Perigueux and Saintes, he vigorously defends the Cause of Innocent II. against Gerard Bishop of Angoulesme whom he accuses to have engag'd in the Interest of Peter of Leon thro' Ambition.

The 127*th.* is written in the Name of Hugh Count of Burgundy; to William Count of Poictiers, whom he admonishes to quit the Party of Peter of Leon, and to acknowledge Pope Innocent.

In the 128*th.* St. Bernard reproaches Count William, in that having once procur'd Peace to the Church of Poictiers, he had afterwards drove the Clergy of Hilarius out of the City. He advises him to cease that Persecution.

In the 129*th.* he counsels the Genoese to live peaceably with the Citizens of Pisa, and to continue faithful both to the Pope and Emperor.

In the 130*th.* he advises likewise the Pisantines by Reason of the great Affection they had to the Pope.

By the 131*st.* he puts the Milanese in mind of their Reconciliation with the Church of Rome, and Pope Innocent, and earnestly exhorts them to continue their Obedience and Submission accordingly.

The

St. Bernard.

The three following are written to the Clergy and People of Milan upon the ſame Account.

In the 135*th.* he rejects, with a great Deal of Humility, the Praiſes which Peter Biſhop of Pavia had given him; and moreover commends that Perſon for his Charity.

In the 136*th.* he deſires Pope Innocent to pardon a Man that was diſpos'd to make Satisfaction.

In the 137*th.* he implores the Clemency of the Empreſs upon the Milaneſe, whom the Pope had not receiv'd into Favour till after they had acknowledg'd Lotharius for their King and Maſter.

In the 138*th.* he requires Henry King of England to aſſiſt Pope Innocent.

In the 139*th.* he excites the Emperor Lotharius to revenge the Church upon Schiſmaticks.

In the 140*th.* he recommends the Piſantines to this Prince.

In the 141*ſt.* he ſharply reproaches Humbert Abbot of Igny for having quitted his Abby.

In the 142*d.* he condoles the Monks of the Abby of the Alps for the Loſs of their Abbot of Guarin, who had been advanced to the Biſhoprick of Sion in Switzerland.

In the 143*d.* he excuſes his long Abſence to the Monks of Clairvaux, aſſuring them that he has been no leſs concern'd than they about it, and exhorting them to perſevere in their Duty.

The two following Letters are written upon the ſame Account, with the ſame Tokens of Tenderneſs and Affection.

All theſe Letters were written under the Pontificate of Innocent II. from the Year 1132. to the Year 1137.

In the 146*th.* he congratulates Burchard Abbot of Balere, inaſmuch that the Care he has taken to reform his Abby has not been fruitleſs, and ſays the Glory of it is due only to God.

The 147*th.* is a Letter of Thanks to Peter, Abbot of Cluny, for having comforted him in the Pains he had been at in procuring Peace to the Church. He therein expreſſes his Satisfaction in that the Schiſm was at length extirpated thence.

The following is a Letter of Compliment written to the ſame.

In the 149*th.* he admoniſhes this Abbot not to take ſo much Pains to bring the Monaſtery of St. Bertbin to Subjection.

In the 150*th.* he commends Pope Innocent for having made a Reformation in the Monaſtery of Vezelay, St. Benoet on the Po, and thoſe of St. Meme, and St. Satyre. As likewiſe for the Reſolution he had ſhewn at Liege in refuſing to grant Inveſtitures at the Requeſt of the Emperor Lotharius, and for excommunicating the Clerks that diſturb'd the Church of Orleans. He exhorts him to imploy the like Zeal in oppoſing Philip, Nephew to Giſlebert Archbiſhop of Tours, who had ſeiz'd upon the See of that Church.

The 151*ſt.* is addreſſed to this Philip, whom he acquaints with his Concern to ſee him ingag'd in ſo pernicious an Undertaking. Theſe two Letters were writ in the Year 1133.

In the 152*d.* he writes to Pope Innocent in Favour of the Biſhop of Troyes, who was moleſted by his Clergy. He there ſays, that the Inſolence of the inferior Clergy occaſioned by the Biſhop's Neglect, has every where diſturb'd the Peace of the Church: That Biſhops give holy Things to Dogs, and throw Pearls to Swine, who afterwards turn upon them and trample them under their Feet; That ſuch as they preſent, ſuch are they oblig'd to bear with; that they firſt enrich them with the Spoils of the Church without correcting them, and afterwards they are forc'd to ſubmit to their Inſolencies, for Prieſts that enjoy the Fruits of others Labours, live without Gratitude to their Benefactors, inſomuch, that their Iniquity moſt commonly proceeds from their Abundance. Towards the End of this Letter, St. Bernard excuſes himſelf for not having gone to wait on the Pope as he had been deſir'd.

In the 153*d.* addreſs'd to Bernard, Prior of the Charter-houſe of Portes, near the Town of Bolley, which had deſir'd of him the Expoſition of the Canticles, after having ſpoken of this Work in a very humble Manner, he promiſes to tranſcribe and ſend his Expoſition at the Beginning of that Book.

In the following addreſs'd to the ſame, having ſent him this Diſcourſe, he expreſſes his Sorrow that he had not Leiſure to go viſit that Charter-houſe.

In the 155*th.* he acquaints Pope Innocent, who had given this Prior a Biſhoprick in Lombardy, that he is very worthy of that Honour, but that he is not a proper Perſon for the Place, inſomuch, that the Lombards being a headſtrong wicked People, a young Man that has always liv'd in a Cloyſter, would find it a difficult Matter to govern them, ſo that he deſires this Pope to beſtow on him another Place.

In the 156*th.* he recomends to this Pope the Church of Orleans, whoſe See was vacant.

In the 157*th.* he recommends to Haimeric, Chancellor of the Church of Rome, the Provoſt and Canons of the Church of Alleux, in the Diocels of Orleans. Theſe two Letters with the foregoing, from the 151*ſt.* were written in the Year 1135.

St. Bernard.

The 158*th.* is written to Pope Innocent, concerning the Murther of Thomas Prior of St. Victor in Paris, who had been kill'd near Gournay, by the Relations of Thibaud Archdeacon of Paris, in his Return with Stephen Biſhop of Paris, to the Abby of Chelles, whither they went to make a Reform in that Abby. The Biſhop of Paris was ſo concern'd with this Aſſaſſination, that he after pronounc'd Excommunication againſt the Murtherers and all their Adherents, reſerving to himſelf only their Abſolution, he retir'd to Clairvaux, whence he wrote to the Pope, and to Geofrey Biſhop of Chartres, his Legate, to incline them to do Juſtice upon the Aſſaſſines. This Letter St. Bernard writ to the Pope in his Name, to excite his Zeal againſt ſo deteſtable an Action, and to beg of him to puniſh the Archdeacon of Paris, as being acceſſary to this Murther.

The following Letter is that which was writ to the Pope in the Name of the Biſhop of Paris, upon the ſame Account.

About the ſame Time there was another Murther committed on the Body of Archembaud, Subdean of the Church of Orleans, at the Inſtigation of a Canon of that Church. St Bernard writes alſo concerning this Murther to the Pope, by his 161*ſt.* Letter, to the End, that ſo barbarous a Crime might meet with an exemplary Puniſhment, not only in the Perſon of thoſe who had committed the Crime, but alſo in thoſe who were the Cauſe of it.

There are moreover, three other Letters which follow thoſe, which are the 160*th.* the 162*d.* and 163*d.* by which, he recommends this Affair to Haimeric, Chancellor of the Church of Rome, and to another Cardinal.

Geofrey Biſhop of Chartres, the Pope's Legate, upon Occaſion of theſe Murthers, commanded the Biſhops of the Provinces of Rheims, Roan, Tours, and Sens, to meet at the Council of Joarre to condemn the Authors thereof, purſuant to the utmoſt Rigor of the Canons. We have not the Tranſactions of this Council of Joarre, but we are aſſur'd by a Letter of Pope Innocent II. addreſs'd to the aforeſaid Biſhops, that they excommunicated all that were in the leaſt concern'd in theſe Murthers. The Pope confirms their Decree by this Letter, and becauſe it ſeem'd to him that this Judgment was not ſevere enough, he order'd farther, That no Maſs ſhould be celebrated in any of thoſe Places where theſe Murtherers were found, and that Thibaud, Noterius, and all others concern'd in the ſaid Murthers ſhould for ever be depriv'd either of enjoying or acquiring any Benefice. He pronounc'd alſo Anathema's againſt any that receiv'd or conceal'd theſe Aſſaſſines. All this hapned in the Year 1133. as Father Mabillon teſtifies in his Notes.

The 164*th.* Letter of St. Bernard is writ to Pope Innocent, concerning the Difference which aroſe in the Church of Langres, about the Election of a Biſhop, in the Room of William, who dy'd in 1138. Peter Archbiſhop of Lyons, and Hugh Duke of Burgundy, would have choſen a Monk of Cluny, yet Robert Dean of the ſaid Church, Pontius the Archdeacon, Olric, and the other Canons would not acquieſce in this Election, but demanded an accuſtom'd Liberty of chooſing whom they pleas'd. The Pope writ to them not to make Choice of any without the Advice of ſome pious Men, whereupon, they had Recourſe to St. Bernard, and promis'd to do nothing but with his Conſent. The Archbiſhop of Lyons agreed to, and the Pope likewiſe approv'd of the Choice they had made of St. Bernard, who was then at Rome. In his Return, St. Bernard underſtanding that they were about to conſecrate a Biſhop of Langres at Lyons, which he thought not worthy, and whom the Dean and Canons would not receive, he went immediately to the Archbiſhop, and repreſented to him, that having agreed to be determined by him, they ought to do nothing without him. The Archbiſhop laid all the Blame on Hugh, Son to the Duke of Burgundy, but promis'd, that for the future there ſhould be nothing done without his Knowledge. St. Bernard propos'd to leave the Matter to a Debate in a general Convocation of the Biſhops and Clergy. That Monk of Cluny who was about to have been elected, dar'd not appear, but being arriv'd on Friday went away on Saturday. The Archbiſhop of Lyons at the ſame Time wrote two Letters to the Chapter of Langres, quite contrary to each other, for by one, he order'd them to proceed to an Election, and by the other, told them that he had not altogether rejected, but only put off to another Time the Ordination of this Monk of Cluny. Whereupon, this Monk obſerving his Ordination to be ſtopp'd, went to the King, and obtain'd from him an Inveſtiture, and afterwards aſſign'd a Day for his Ordination. Soon after Falcon Dean of Lyons, Pontius Archdeacon of Langres, Bonami Canon of the ſame, with two Monks of Clairvaux, appeal'd to the Holy See, and cited thither as well the Perſon that would have been conſecrated, as the Perſons that would have conſecrated him. St. Bernard inform'd the Pope of all Matters that related thereto by this Letter.

In the following Letter written to Dean Falcon, and Guy

Treaſurer of the Church of Lyons, he commends them for the Zeal they had ſhown in this Affair.

St. Bernard.

Notwithſtanding the Appeal to the Court of Rome, yet the Archbiſhop of Lyons, and the Biſhops of Autun, and Maſcon, inſtalled and conſecrated the Monk of Cluny, which extreamly nettled St. Bernard, for he wrote very earneſtly about it to the Pope and Cardinals, in the 166*th*, 167*th*, and 168*th*. Letters. At length he wrought ſo much upon his Holineſs as to cauſe him to diſapprove of this Election, and to give the Chapter Leave to proceed to a new Election, after having taken Advice of St. Bernard. Whereupon they immediately went to wait upon him accordingly, and he after having made them all Friends, ſent them back to make their Election, as he acquaints his Holineſs by the 169*th*. Letter. Hereupon they elected Godfrey Prior of Clairvaux, a Relation to St. Bernard, who having met with ſome Difficulty on the Court-ſide, St. Bernard wrote the 170*th*. Letter to Lewis the Younger, in which, he proteſts that no Body had a greater Veneration for his Majeſty than himſelf, and afterwards aſſures him, that the Election of his Prior to the Biſhoprick of Langres was altogether againſt his Intention and good liking, ſince it depriv'd him of the principal Comfort of his Age and Infirmity, yet that he muſt nevertheleſs ſubmit to the Will of God: That it was neither in the Power of himſelf nor the King to oppoſe it; and that he was perſuaded his Majeſty would not attempt it, but leave the Church of Langres to remedy its Affliction, having been long vacant together with that of Rheims: That he humbly thank'd his Majeſty for what he wrote him thereupon, and would have been conformable, had not he ſeen the Danger of Delays, as likewiſe that the Revenues of that Church were in Huckſter's Hands: That this was that which gave him the greateſt Trouble, and procur'd no ſmall Diſhonour to his Majeſty, it being his Duty to preſerve the Goods of the Church: That the Election had been made altogether according to Form; that the Perſon elect was faithful, for that he would not have been for him, had he not firſt conſented to do Homage to his Majeſty for the Lands held of the Crown; that he had all along this Precaution given him; that he was not yet put into Poſſeſſion, nor yet enter'd into the City; that for his Part he had meddled but little with the Matter, tho' he had been invited to do it by the Clergy and People, and that the Oppreſſion of ſeveral, and Prayers of good Men, might well have engag'd him deeper in it: That as the Caſe now ſtands, it was for his Majeſty's Honour and the Publick Good to defer the Confirmation no longer, and that if he did not return an Anſwer by thoſe that gave him this Letter, he would peradventure raiſe the Spirits of divers religious Men againſt him, and moreover prejudice the Revenues of the Crown annex'd to this Biſhoprick. There is great likelihood that the King comply'd with St. Bernard's Requeſt, for the Year following, Falcon Dean of the Church of Lyons, having been elected Archbiſhop thereof, Godfrey and St. Bernard wrote in his Favour to Pope Innocent, which are the 171*ſt*. and 172*d*. Letters.

In the 173*d*. St. Bernard recommends to Falcon the Monks of the Monaſtery of Beniſſon-Dieu.

The 174*th*. is the famous Letter which he writ to the Canons of Lyons, concerning the Feaſt of the Conception which they had newly introduc'd. This Letter he begins with commending of the Church of Lyons, which, ſays he, 'has always been preferable to all the reſt of France, not 'only on Account of the Dignity of its See, but alſo by 'the ſtrict Order there kept. For is there any where a bet'ter Diſcipline to be found, a greater Authority eſtabliſh'd 'and of a more venerable Antiquity, principally in Regard 'of Eccleſiaſtical Duties, it having never hitherto introduc'd 'any Novelty, nor ſuffer'd its ſelf to be debauch'd by any 'Change? This has been the Occaſion (continues he) that 'we can never enough wonder that ſome of you could have 'the Boldneſs to introduce a Feaſt, which the Church has 'not the leaſt Knowledge of, which neither is ſupported by 'Reaſon, nor back'd by any Tradition: Are we to think 'our ſelves more knowing or devout than our Fore-fathers? 'and is it not a dangerous Preſumption to pretend to do 'what they thought not proper? But, ſay you, we ought 'to honour the Mother of our Saviour: Why ſo we ought 'in all Reaſon, but ſtill the Honour paid to a Queen de'mands Diſcretion. This Royal Virgin has no Need of 'falſe Honour, having ſeveral true Titles, and being of a 'Quality truly honourable. Honour then the Purity and 'Piety of her Life, admire her ſupernatural Fecundity, and 'adore her divine Off-ſpring; commend her in that ſhe 'conceiv'd without Concupiſcence, and brought forth with'out Trouble: Affirm that Angels reſpected her, all Na'tions have deſir'd her, that the Patriarchs and Prophets 'have been acquainted with her, and that ſhe was choſen 'above all Women, and preferr'd to all her Sex.—— 'The Church teaches me to have an uncommon Venera'tion for the Day when ſhe dy'd, and when ſhe was re'ceiv'd with an unexpreſſible Joy into Heaven. The ſame 'Church learns me to honour the Day of her Birth, being 'verily perſuaded, that like Jeremiah and St. John Baptiſt, 'ſhe was ſanctified in her Mother's Womb. Yes, the Mo'ther of our Lord was holy before ſhe was born, and there'fore the Church cannot err in believing that the Day of 'her Birth was alſo holy, nor in keeping it ſolemnly as 'ſuch: I am alſo thoroughly perſuaded, that ſhe was en'du'd with ſo many Graces, that not only her Birth was 'ſanctify'd, but alſo all the reſt of her Life, which was ex'empt from all Sin; a Favour that never yet was granted 'to any other of the Off-ſpring of Man.—— What then 'are we able to contribute to theſe Honours? Let her Con'ception alſo have Honours, (ſay they) ſince it preceded 'her Birth, becauſe had not this Conception preceded, her 'Birth could not have been extant to be honour'd. Very 'well! for the ſame Reaſon any one might celebrate the 'Feaſts of their Father and Mother, and mount upwards 'even to their remoteſt Anceſtors. Then we ſhould have 'a prodigious Number of Feaſts indeed, and which would 'be more proper for the Eternity of the other Life, than 'the poor circumſcrib'd Limits of this. But there is a Book 'produc'd where this Feaſt is authoriz'd, as they pretend 'by Divine Revelation. Why this might very well be, and 'I my ſelf could ſooner compoſe one in Favour of any of 'my Anceſtors. For my Part, I am not willing to credit 'any of theſe Books which have neither Reaſon nor Au'thority on their Side: For what Conſequence is there, 'that a Conception muſt be holy becauſe the Birth was ſo? 'was it made holy by its Precedence? Whence had it this 'Sanctity to communicate to the Birth? and on the con'trary is it not becauſe this Conception was not holy, that 'it was thought neceſſary to ſanctifie the Virgin afterwards? 'Whence proceeds the pretended Sanctity of this Concep'tion? Will any one ſay, that it was occaſion'd by Grace, 'to the End that ſhe might be conceiv'd holy? But then ſhe 'could not receive the Appanage of her Divinity before ſhe 'was Divine, and that ſhe could not poſſibly be before her 'Conception. Some will ſay perhaps, that ſhe was con'ceiv'd and ſanctify'd in the ſame Moment, but that is 'what they cannot reaſonably make out, for how can Ho'lineſs be where Sin is? and how can any one deny, that 'Sin is not to meet where Concupiſcence is to be found. 'If they will not affirm ſhe was conceiv'd by the Holy 'Ghoſt, which I preſume no Body will offer to aſſert, ſo 'that not having been ſanctify'd before her Conception, 'becauſe ſhe then was nothing, nor at her Conception, be'cauſe ſhe was then in the State of Sin, ſhe muſt have been 'ſanctify'd in the Womb of her Mother after her Con'tion, and that tho' her Birth was holy, her Conception 'was not. In a Word her good Fortune of being conceiv'd 'in Sanctity, is owing only to Jeſus Chriſt, for all the o'ther Children of Adam have been conceiv'd in Sin. This 'being thus, what Reaſon can there be for introducing a 'Feaſt of the Conception? How can it be maintain'd that 'a Conception which proceeds not from the Holy Ghoſt, 'but rather from Sin, can be holy? Or how could they 'conjure up a Holy-day on Account of a Thing that is 'not holy in it ſelf? The Church may have Reaſon to boaſt 'indeed of a Feaſt which honours Sin, or authorizes a falſe 'Holineſs; Yet whatever People may think, ſhe will ne'ver be brought to approve of an Innovation contrary to 'her uſual Cuſtom, that being the Mother of Raſhneſs, 'Siſter of Superſtition, and Daughter of Levity. More'over if they had proceeded rightly in introducing this Feaſt, 'they ſhould firſt have conſulted the Holy See, and not 'follow'd blindly and without Deliberation, the Suggeſti'ons of ſome hair-brain'd Ideots.' St. Bernard adds, that he has underſtood this Error was in other Places; That he had hitherto forborn taking Notice of it, out of a Veneration he had for the Holy Virgin, which proceeded to ſpread it ſelf over the whole Church, of which he was a Member, he could no longer diſſemble his Reſentments without offending all. He concludes with ſaying, that he ſubmits his Judgment to the more ſage and experienc'd, and chiefly the Authority of the Church of Rome, to whom he reſerves the Deciſion of this Matter, being ready to alter his Opinion if the Holy See ſhall be of another Mind.

St. Bernard.

Some Authors have undertaken the Defence of the Feaſt of the Conception of the Virgin, and among others, a certain Perſon has written a Treatiſe on this Subject, commonly attributed to St. Anſelm, wherein he attacks St. Bernard without naming him. This Monk has been refuted by Peter Abbot of Celles; and at the ſame Time Peter Prieſt and Monk of Prom blam'd thoſe that had receiv'd three new Feaſts, which were that of the moſt Holy Trinity, of the Transfiguration, and of the Conception of the Virgin, all which he eſteem'd very extravagant. In the Century following, John Beleth and William Durand Biſhop of Mende, diſapprove alſo of this Feaſt, but notwithſtanding it was authoriz'd in the fifteenth Century by the Council of Baſil. It muſt here be underſtood with Father Mabillon, that St. Bernard means by Conception that ſame Inſtant, in which the Body of the Virgin was conceiv'd, and not with the School-Divines, the Moment of the Union of the Soul

St. Bernard.

Soul with the Body, for he could not have overthrown thoſe that ſay that ſhe was ſanctify'd this Inſtant, but only ſuch as maintain ſhe was ſanctify'd before ſhe was animated, if he ſhould have compar'd her Sanctification with that of Jeremias and St. John Baptiſt, but he plainly inſinuates that ſhe was not ſanctify'd before her Soul was united to her Body. Thus it may be obſerv'd, that St. Bernard had no very favourable Thoughts of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary.

The 175*th*. Letter of St. Bernard, is an Anſwer to one writ to him by the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, wherein he recommends to him the Knights of the Croſs. This Patriarch was William of Flanders, who had been formerly a Hermit at Tours.

The 176*th*. is written in the Name of Alberon, Archbiſhop of Treves, to his Holineſs Pope Innocent. This Archbiſhop not being able to go in Perſon to wait on the Pope, writes him this Letter, to aſſure his Holineſs of the unfeigned Obedience of the Churches on this Side the Mountains; and moreover exhorts him not to concern himſelf at the Loſs of Benevento and Capua, which Roger of Sicily had taken from him, and likewiſe aſſures him, that the Emperor Lotharius was preparing to march to his Relief. This Letter was written in the Year 1135.

The 177*th*. is alſo written to the Pope, in the Name of the ſame Archbiſhop, who complains of the Fatigue and Care he is like to undergo in his Archbiſhoprick. He ſays, he accepted it not without regret; that he is plagu'd by his Suffragans who are young Perſons of Quality, and who rather oppoſe than aſſiſt him; that Right, good Manners, and Religion, are extinct in their Suffraganſhips; that he thinks himſelf oblig'd to acquaint his Holineſs with what he will not give him Leave to reform; that notwithſtanding, he undergoes patiently all theſe Affronts rather than act any Thing contrary to the Obedience he owes to the Papal Chair. But that he begs of his Holineſs to conſider that theſe Injuries fall on the Papal See, and that the Contempt had of him renders alſo the Holy See deſpis'd: That in a Word, he has ſeveral more Complaints to make to him, of which his Holineſs may be better inform'd by the Deputy he has ſent.

In the following Letter written alſo in the Name of the former Perſon, and addreſs'd to Pope Innocent. St. Bernard lays open all the Cauſes of Complaint which the Archbiſhop of Treves had againſt the Pope, grounded upon the frequent Uſage of Appeals, which brought all Matters before the Holy See, and quite deſtroy'd the Authority of the Archbiſhops and Biſhops. Obſerve how St. Bernard repreſents this Matter to the Pope. 'I ſpeak to you, ſays he, 'with a great deal of Freedom, becauſe I have a more than 'ordinary Affection for you, which could not be, ſhould 'I uſe Diſſimulation. The Archbiſhop of Treves's Com'plaint is not his alone, but proceeds from the Sentiments 'of ſeveral others, and chiefly thoſe that love you beſt. They 'complain that Juſtice is no more to be found in the Church, 'that the Keys thereof become of no Uſe, and the Epiſ'copal Authority is rendred deſpicable, by reaſon that the 'Biſhops have now no more Power to revenge the Injuries done to God, nor to puniſh the Offences committed 'in their Dioceſſes. The Fault of all which is laid upon 'you and the Court of Rome. It is affirm'd that you aboliſh what they have well eſtabliſh'd, and that you have 'eſtabliſh'd what they aboliſh'd with Reaſon: That all Criminals and diſobedient Perſons, whether they be of the 'Clergy or Laity, have immediately Recourſe to you, and 'boaſt when they return, that they have not met with Protectors who ought rather to have been Puniſhers of their 'Crimes. What a Shame is this! What Occaſion for Laugh'ter to the Enemies of the Church! Friends find themſelves 'confounded, the Faithful affronted, Biſhops become the 'Subjects of Scorn and Contempt, and your Authority much 'leſſen'd by the Weakneſs of your Deciſions. 'Tis thoſe 'only have a true Value for the Holy See, who labour 'heartily to procure the Peace, and advance the Grandeur 'of the Church of Rome. Why therefore will you your ſelf 'weaken your own Strength?' He afterwards proceeds to repreſent to the Pope the Miſchiefs occaſion'd in the Churches of Toul, Verdun, and Metz, by the Protection which the Holy See has unadviſedly beſtow'd. He accuſes the Biſhops of Metz, and Toul, of Tyranny and Miſgovernment, and complains that the Holy See has upheld them in it, and particularly that the Biſhop of Metz had quaſh'd a free Election made with all Form, in his Chapter, and plac'd by his Authority, a Probationer in the Church. At length he gives the Pope an extraordinary Character of the Archbiſhop of Treves, aſſuring him, that he is a much more faithful Perſon both to the Church and the Holy See.

In the 179*th*. and 180*th*. Letters, he recommends to this Pope the Affair which this Archbiſhop had with the Abbot and Monks of St. Maximine, and deſires his Holineſs to revoke the Brief which theſe laſt had obtain'd. 'One of the 'greateſt Advantages of the Holy See, ſays he, is, that it can 'revoke whatever it finds it has been overſeen in granting. 'It is certainly very juſt and commendable, that a Perſon 'ſhould not get any Advantage by his Crime, and above 'all with the Holy See and Sovereign Biſhop. This is what 'engages me in a Boldneſs to requeſt your Favour, in Behalf of the Archbiſhop of Treves, and to lay before you 'ſuch Inſtances of his Integrity as I am pretty well aſſur'd 'will ſucceed. All his Crime is having wreſted a Monaſtery out of the Hands of Laicks, and endeavouring to 'purge it of its Errors.——May God always fortifie your 'Holineſs with his Divine Grace, that the Monks may at 'no Time over-reach you: Theſe Monks that hunt not 'after Liberty more than they fly Order and Diſcipline.

St. Bernard.

The 181*ſt*. is a Letter of Thanks to Haimeric, Chancellor of the Holy See.

In the 182*d*. he writes very earneſtly to Henry, Archbiſhop of Sens, concerning his Inflexibility, which, he ſays, has procur'd him a great many Enemies.

In the 183*d*. he exhorts Conrade King of the Romans, to be obedient to the Pope.

In the 184*th*. he excuſes himſelf to Pope Innocent, for not being able to ſend him ſome religious Perſons, as he promis'd, by reaſon of three late Foundations he had made.

In the 185*th*. he exhorts Euſtace who had poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Church of Valence, not to perſiſt in his Deſign thro' a falſe Glory, and by being adviſ'd by Flatterers who play'd upon him.

In the 186*th*. he recommends to Simon, Son of the Chaſtelain of Cambray, the Monks of the Monaſtery of Vaucelles, and deſires him to confirm the Donation which his Father had made them.

The following Letters were writ in the Year 1140. againſt Peter Abaelard.

The 187*th*. is addreſs'd to thoſe Biſhops that were to aſſemble at the Council of Sens, all whom he exhorts to promote zealouſly the Intereſt of Religion.

In the 188*th*. he makes the ſame Intreaty to the Biſhops and Cardinals of the Court of Rome. He in general accuſes Peter Abaelard of contemning the Fathers; raiſing trifling Queſtions upon elevate Subjects, and in a Word, for confiding too much in his Wit, and not contenting himſelf with the Plaineſs of Faith, and afterwards deſcending to particulars, 'Read, (ſays he, to thoſe to whom he 'writes) Peter Abaelard's Book, which he calls his Theo'logy. It is eaſy to be found, becauſe it is to be ſold, and 'there are a great many Perſons at the Court of Rome who 'read it. See there how he advances upon the Holy Tri'nity, the Generation of the Son of God, the Proceſſion 'of the Holy Ghoſt, and ſeveral other Matters which both 'the Ears and Minds of Catholicks are but little accuſtomed to. Read likewiſe another which is ſaid to be his 'Book of Proverbs, but which is intitled, Noſce Teipſum: 'There you may obſerve how full his Works are of Sa'crilege and Errors. What ſtrange Opinions has he con'cerning the Soul and the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt, of his 'Deſcent into Hell, and the Sacrament of the Altar; of 'the Power of binding and of looſing, Original Sin, Con'cupiſence, the Sin of Pleaſure, the Sin of Weakneſs, the 'Sin of Ignorance, of the Action of Sinning, and the Will 'of Sinning. If you find hereby that I have Reaſon to be 'mov'd, be you alſo the like, but that you may not be 'ſo to no Purpoſe, be ſure to beſtir your ſelf ſuitable to 'the Rank, Dignity, and Authority of your Power. Lay 'theſe Works of Darkneſs open, reprehend and condemn 'them publickly, and ſtop the Mouths of thoſe that ſpeak 'Evil.

In the following Letter to Pope Innocent, he expreſſes his Concern in that Schiſm had not been ſooner extinguiſh'd, and that the Errors of Peter Abaelard, and Arnaud of Breſſe had not ſooner been aboliſh'd. He acquaints his Holineſs, that he has been invited by the Archbiſhop of Sens, to enter the Liſts with Abaelard. That he came at the Time appointed, and in the Preſence of the King, Biſhops, Abbots and ſeveral learn'd Men, he produc'd divers Articles againſt him, but as they were going to be read, this Heroe all of a ſudden went out of the Aſſembly, and appeal'd to the Judges that he had choſen, which I hope (ſays St. Bernard) will not be approv'd of. In his Abſence, the Articles propos'd were examin'd into, and found repugnant both to Faith and Truth. He concludes this Letter by earneſtly exhorting the Pope not to grant Protection or Encouragement to a Perſon that was at Variance with the eſtabliſh'd Sentiments of St. Peter.

The 190*th*. is a Treatiſe againſt the Errors of Peter Abaelard, which is alſo inſerted amongſt his Opuſcula.

The 191*ſt*. is written to Pope Innocent, in the ſeveral Names of Samſon, Archbiſhop of Rheims, Joſſelin Biſhop of Soiſſons, Geofrey of Chalons, and of Aloiſius of Arras, againſt Peter Abaelard. They are made to accuſe him of Preſumption, Error, and Hereſie, and alſo obſerve, that his Book of the Trinity has already been condemn'd to be burnt by a Legate of the Holy See; and moreover, that having been lately accus'd by the Abbot of Clairvaux, to avoid his Condemnation, he had appeal'd to the Holy See, without Cauſe or Reaſon, againſt the Judges which he himſelf had made Choice of; and that the Biſhops who were aſſembled about that Affair would not decree any Thing againſt him out of Reſpect to the Holy See, but only condemn'd ſome few Articles drawn out of his Books. In a Word, that it was neceſſary that his Holineſs ſhould apply ſome ſpeedy Remedy to a Miſchief which daily increaſed.

St. Bernard.

In the 192*d*. he counſels Guy, Cardinal of the Church of Rome, not to favour the Errors of Abaelard, on Account of Friendſhip for his Perſon, and to frighten him the more from it, he tells him, that he treats of the Trinity like Arius, like Pelagius of Grace, and like Neſtorius concerning the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the 193*d*. he writes to another Cardinal nam'd Ives, acquainting him that he is ſurpriz'd that Abaelard ſhould find ſo many Friends and Protectors at Rome.

By the 194*th*. Letter, Pope Innocent anſwers Henry Archbiſhop of Sens, Sampſon Archbiſhop of Rheims, the Biſhops their Suffragans, and St. Bernard Abbot of Clairvaux, that he has been as much concern'd for the Novelties advanc'd by Abaelard, as joyful at the Zeal they have ſhewn to oppoſe him in his Innovations, and declares, that by the Advice of the Biſhops and Cardinals of the Church of Rome, he had condemn'd the Articles which they had ſent him, and all the falſe Doctrines of Peter Abaelard, together with their Author, on whom he has enjoyn'd perpetual Silence, as being a Heretick; and moreover, that he eſteems all the Followers and Defenders of theſe Errors, to be worthy of being put out of the Communion of the Church.

In the 195*th*, he counſels the Biſhop of Conſtance to expel Arnaud of Breſſe out of his Dioceſs, he having already been driven out of Italy and France for his Errors.

In the 196*th*. he gives the ſame Advice to Guy the Pope's Legate, to whom this Arnaud was retir'd for Shelter.

In the 197*th*. he reproves Peter Dean of Bezanſon, for diſturbing the Abbot and Monks of Cherlieu.

In the Letter following, he earneſtly recommends their Caſe to Pope Innocent, who refers it to John Abbot of Bonneval, then Biſhop of Valence, and to the Biſhop of Grenoble. Theſe determin'd in Favour of the Abbot of Cherlieu. But Peter not being willing to acquieſce in their Determination, continu'd to importune the Holy See for Redreſs, which occaſion'd St. Bernard to write the 199*th*. Letter to Pope Innocent, to beg of him to confirm the Judgment pronounc'd by the Biſhops.

The 200*th*. is written to Ulger Biſhop of Angers, concerning a Difference between this Biſhop and the Abbeſs of Fontevrault.

In the 201*ſt*. he admoniſhes Baudouin Abbot of the Monaſtery of Reatino, and recommends to him in Particular three Things, 1*ſt*. To inſtruct others by his Diſcourſe, 2*dly*, To give them good Example by his Works, and 3*dly*, To apply himſelf to Prayer.

In the 202*d*. he exhorts the Clergy of Sens not to proceed too raſhly in the Election of an Archbiſhop, but to wait for the Opinion of the Suffragan Biſhops, and Conſent of the Perſons of Rank in the Dioceſs, to prevent that befalling them which hapned before to the Churches of their Neighbourhood, Orleans and Languedoc. He recommends to them moreover, to proclaim a Faſt, aſſemble the Biſhops, ſummon the Monks, and in fine, to omit none of the requiſite Ceremonies in this Election. This Letter was writen after the Death of Henry, Archbiſhop of Sens, who was ſucceeded in the Year 1144. by Hugh Abbot of Pontigni.

In the 203*d*. Letter, he counſels the Biſhop and Clergy of Troyes not to ſuffer the Subdeacon Anſelle to be marry'd and carry Arms.

The 204*th*. contains a Chriſtian Compliment to the Abbot of St. Aubin.

The 205*th*. is an Anſwer to the Biſhop of Rocheſter, who wrote to him ſomewhat ſeverely about cauſing Robert Pullus to live at Paris, when he thought it neceſſary.

In the 206*th*. he recommends one of his Kindred to Meliſenda Queen of Jeruſalem, and wiſhes her a long and happy Reign.

The three following Letters addreſs'd to Roger King of Sicily, contain nothing remarkable.

The 210*th*. and the eight following, are Letters of Recommendation addreſs'd to Pope Innocent. In the 213*th*. he complains that this Pope took little or no Notice of the Reconciliation made by his Means with Peter of Piſa. In the 216*th*. and 217*th*. he complains that Radulphus Count of Vermandois, having put away one Wife and marry'd another, was ſeemingly vindicated by the Court of Rome. He likewiſe commends Thibaud Count of Burgundy, for taking the Part of the firſt Wife which was his Niece. In the 218*th*. he juſtifies himſelf to the Pope againſt a Suſpicion had of him concerning the Goods of the Cardinal Ives, aſſuring his Holineſs that they had been imbezled contrary to his Knowledge.

The 219*th*. is addreſs'd to Alberic, Biſhop of Oſtia, Stephen of Paleſtrine, Igmar of Freſcati, and Gerard Chancellor of the Church of Rome, concerning a Difference which happened between the King of France and the Pope, on Account of the Archbiſhop of Bourges. This Archbiſhoprick being vacant, the King had given the Clergy of Bourges Leave to chooſe any other for their Archbiſhop than Peter, whom the Pope had caſt a favourable Eye upon. He was nevertheleſs elected afterwards, and conſecrated at Rome by the Pope. Whereupon the King having made an Oath, that he ſhould never be Archbiſhop during his Life-time, would not receive him, but declar'd War againſt the Count of Champagne, to whom he was retir'd. This caus'd the Pope to interdict the Dominions of France, and it was upon this Occaſion that St. Bernard writ this Letter, by which, he wills the Prelates of the Court of Rome, that they might have learnt by the Perſecution of Guibert, and Undertakings of Burdin and Peter of Leon, how much Schiſm is to be dreaded, and how hazardous it is to raiſe any Difference between the Regal and ſacerdotal Power. That therefore they muſt act with Prudence, and manage Matters with Lenity, not to incur the Danger of a new Schiſm: That he can by no Means excuſe the King for having made an Oath, which it was both a Crime and Sin to keep; nay, though he was in a Manner forc'd to perform it, being a Cuſtom among the French to obſerve any, though never ſo unjuſt, that his Intention was not to excuſe the King of France, but ask Pardon for him; and laſtly, that the Concern he was in, his Age and Majeſty, do in ſome Meaſure deſerve it, without being like to do any great Wrong to the Church.

St. Bernard.

In the 220*th*. Letter, he writes to King Lewis, that he cannot hinder the Anathema's being renew'd againſt Radulphus; and endeavours to perſuade his Majeſty, that that ought not to ſet him at Variance with Count Thibaud.

In the 221*ſt*. he ſpeaks high to this Prince, and takes a great Deal of Liberty to reprove him, affirming that he is an Enemy to Peace; that he has violated the Treaties which he has made; that he has communicated with excommunicated Perſons; that he has encourag'd Murthers, Theft, Robbery, and the Deſtruction of Churches; that not contented to aſſume an Authority over the Church of Bourges, which did not belong to him, he alſo hinders the Church of Chalons from having a Biſhop, as likewiſe permits his Brother to ſeize upon the Revenues of the Biſhopricks. He admoniſhes him to forbear ſpeedily theſe Exactions, and prevent the Anger of God by Repentance after the Example of the King of the Ninevites.

In the 222*d*. he writes to Joſſelin Biſhop of Soiſſons, and Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, likewiſe the King's Miniſter, concerning the Occaſions pretended at Court for making War upon Count Thibaud, as alſo touching the Wrong which the King did to the Churches.

Theſe Letters written with all the Freedom imaginable, extreamly incens'd the King and his Miniſters againſt St. Bernard, who having underſtood as much by the Anſwer which Joſſelin ſent him, he ſignifies again to him in the 223*d*. Letter, that perhaps he had been a little bold, but that his Preſumption was meerly caus'd by Grief, and the Zeal he had for the Welfare of the Church, and moreover that it was to have been wiſh'd that they had made uſe of the ſame Liberty, and endeavour'd to reclaim the King by the like Admonitions.

In the 224*th*. he acquaints Stephen Biſhop of Paleſtrine, with the Damage which the King had done to the Churches of France, putting him in mind that he ought to repent, having written to Rome in Favour of this Prince.

In the 225*th*. he exhorts Joſſelin to endeavour a Peace.

The 226*th*. is written to the King, in the Name of Hugh Biſhop of Auxerre, as likewiſe in his own, wherein he admoniſhes this Prince, who had juſt before fruſtrated a Negotiation begun at Corbeil, to renew the ſame, and to have more advantageous Thoughts for the Good of the Church.

In the 227*th*. he conjures Joſſelin to uſe his Intereſt that no Damage may come to him, eſpecially from the King, who was not a little incens'd againſt him. All theſe Letters were writ in the Years 1142, and 1143.

The 228*th*. is a very civil Anſwer to a Letter of Peter Abbot of Cluny's, lately written to him, whereby he gives him to underſtand, that he could heartily wiſh to renew the Friendſhip that had formerly been between them, and which was now interrupted by ſome Differences as well on Account of the Biſhop of Langres, as by Reaſon that Pope Innocent had diſcharg'd the Order of Ciſteaux, of the Tithes which they paid to Cluny.

The following is the Anſwer which Peter of Cluny gives to this Letter, in which after having heaped on St. Bernard a great many Complements, he ſearches into the Reaſons, why the Orders of Cluny and Ciſteaux, which ought to live in good Intelligence with each other, ſo continually jar and diſagree; and he makes it plainly appear, that they have no reaſonable Cauſe to be ſo divided: For in the firſt Place, if their Difference be about Lands or other temporal Goods, they have proper Judges who may regulate thoſe Matters, and make Peace between them. 2*dly*. They ought not to diſagree about their Monaſtical Obſervances, becauſe if the different Cuſtoms of different Churches, hinders

St. Bernard.

ders not the Union of the Spirit and Charity among Chriſtians, no more ought the Diverſity of Practices and Ceremonies to be a Cauſe of Diviſion among Monks, who although they are all of one Order, yet may have different Uſages and Cuſtoms, St. Bennet himſelf having been ſenſible that his Order might be ſubject to ſome Moderation or Explication. He then brings examples of theſe Differences, and ſhews that both Orders may obſerve their Cuſtoms ſeparately, and with ſimplicity of Heart, without condemning each other in them. Thirdly, he affirms that the different Colours of Habits ought to be a leſs Subject of Diviſion, ſince nothing is more ridiculous than for Men to fall out on ſuch trifling Accounts. And laſtly, He lays the Blame on the Spirit of Pride, which (he ſays) had divided the Monks of Cluny and Ciſteaux; the former being unwilling that the latter ſhould be preferr'd to them, and the latter glorying that they had been Reſtorers of the Order, and of Monaſtick Diſcipline. He concludes by exhorting both Parties to live in Peace, and to preſerve a mutual Eſteem and Value for each other.

In the 230*th.* he writes to the Cardinals of Oſtia, Freſcati and Paleſtrine, to relieve the Church of Metz, which for ſome time had rather been in the Hands of a Wolf than a Shepherd. He ſpeaks of Stephen Biſhop of that City, and Nephew to Pope Calixtus II. who came to the Biſhoprick whilſt he was young, which occaſions St. Bernard to ſay, that he began like a little Wolf, but now being become a great one, he ravaged the Herd of Chriſt by Rapines, Conflagrations and Murthers.

The 231*ſt.* is written to the ſame Cardinals, in Favour of the Abbot of Lagny, accus'd at Rome to have refus'd receiving the Pope's Nuncio, to have torn his Holineſſes Letter, to have impriſoned certain Monks, and to have given divers Lands of his Monaſtery to his Relations. St. Bernard after having exceedingly commended this Abbot, proceeds to reply to his Accuſations. Firſt he ſays he did not entertain the Nuncio which his Holineſs ſent into England, by Reaſon that the Provoſt Humbert promis'd to do it for him; that the Letter which he was accus'd to have torn, was yet whole; that he never impriſoned any Monks, but only ſent ſome that were of a very turbulent Spirit to other Monaſteries, and as for giving away the Monaſtery Lands to his Relations, he never did without a Clauſe of Reverſion, and a Rent reſerv'd according to Cuſtom, and which likewiſe was executed in Preſence of the Biſhops of Soiſſons and Auxerre, and of Thibaud Count of Champagne, Conſervator of the Rights and Privileges of the Monaſtery. As to the reſt, he ſaid it was unaccountable that a proud, rebellious and ambitious Monk, ſhould obtain his Liberty of the Holy See. Formerly (ſays he) you have been accus'd of domineering over the Clergy, and the Conſciences of all the World, contrary to the Precept of the Apoſtle; and now you add ſomething more to this Preſumption, in ſhewing an Inclination to diſpoſe abſolutely of all Religious Perſons; inſomuch, that I know not what remains for you to deſire more, unleſs you would likewiſe command over the Angels. I do not impute this to my Lord Pope Innocent, who might eaſily have been over perſwaded, being but a Man, and I beg of God not to impute it to him, not in the leaſt doubting, but when he ſhall come to a Knowledge of the Truth, he will abhor the favouring of ſo pernicious and dangerous a Perſon as that Monk was.

In the 232*d.* he writes to the ſame Cardinals, that if the Abbot of St. Theufroy, commonly called St. Chaffre, in the Dioceſs of Puy in Vellay, be guilty of thoſe Things whereof he is accuſed, they ought not to favour, but ſpeedily puniſh him.

In the 233*d.* he writes to John Abbot of Buſey, in the Dioceſs of Nantes, perſuading him to return to his Abby, which he had quitted for ſome Time before.

In the 234*th.* he deſires Herbert Abbot of St. Stephen of Dijon, to pardon one of his regular Canons, though he had written injuriouſly againſt him.

In the 235*th.* written in the Year 1143. to Pope Celeſtine II. He writes very bitterly againſt William, who had got Poſſeſſion of the Archbiſhoprick of York, being guilty of ſeveral Crimes which he was not clear'd from but by a falſe Oath. The Cauſe was removed to Rome, and he obtain'd of Pope Innocent a Bull in his Favour, whereupon St. Bernard begs of Celeſtine not to ſuffer ſo ill a Man to continue in Poſſeſſion of the Archbiſhoprick of York.

In the following Letter he writes upon the ſame Subject, and after the ſame Manner, to the Prelates of the Court of Rome.

In the 237*th.* he writes to the ſame, concerning the Elevation of Bernard, Abbot of St. Anaſtaſius, to the Sovereign Pontificate (Eugenius III. who ſucceeded Lucius II. in the Year 1145.) He admires how they could draw him out of his Cloyſter where he was at quiet, to bring him into the World, and lay the whole Care of the Church upon him, which he ſays makes him very much doubt whether he will be able to ſuſtain the Weight, and therefore recommends to them to ſupport him therein.

The 238*th.* is addreſſed to Pope Eugenius, then but newly rais'd to the Holy See. St. Bernard acquaints him with his Joy, intermixt with Grief and Fear for his Elevation to that Dignity. And afterwards he exhorts him to ſuſtain with Apoſtolick Zeal, the ſublime Miniſtry which was committed to him, and to endeavour to anſwer the Opinion People generally had of his Virtue. He writes to him particularly concerning the irregular Lives of the Archbiſhop of York and the Biſhop of Winchester. At length he recommends to him to aboliſh the wicked Cuſtom crept into the Court of Rome, of beſtowing Favours for Money; and moreover admoniſhes him to remember at all Times that he is a Man, and to think often of Death by reflecting how little Time the Pontificates of ſeveral of his Predeceſſors have laſted. St. Bernard.

In the 239*th.* and the 240*th.* he writes again to the Pope againſt the Archbiſhop of York, and preſſes his Holineſs to ſuſpend him.

The 241*ſt.* is written to Hildefonſus, Count of Tholouſe, concerning the Errors of Henry, Diſciple to Peter de Bruys, whom this Count favour'd. 'How many Diſorders (ſays he) do we every Day hear that Henry commits in the 'Church of God? That ravenous Wolf is within your Dominions cloathed in a Sheep's Skin, but we know him 'by his Works. The Churches are forſaken, the People 'are without Biſhops, and the Biſhops are no more reſpected. In a Word, the Chriſtians are without Chriſt, the 'Churches are like Synagogues, the Sanctuary deſpoil'd of 'its Holineſs, the Sacraments look'd upon as prophane Inſtitutions, the Feaſt-days have loſt their Solemnity, Men 'grow up in Sin, and every Day Souls are born away before the terrible Tribunal of Chriſt, without being firſt 'reconciled to and fortify'd with the Holy Communion. 'In refuſing Chriſtians Baptiſm, they are deny'd the Life 'of Jeſus Chriſt. A Man that teaches and acts ſo contrary to the Will and Word of God, cannot be from 'God. And yet alaſs! he is hearkened to by many, and 'finds thoſe that are ready to believe him. He would have 'People believe that the Church of God is at an End, and reduc'd only to that ſmall Number that he impoſes on: After 'having been driven out of France, he nevertheleſs finds an 'Aſylum in your Dominions. Conſider with your ſelf, 'great Prince, if this Perſon does you any Honour; he is 'an Apoſtate; for after having quitted his Cloyſter to live looſely, and not being willing to tarry in his own Country, or rather having been whipp'd out of it, he went about begging his Bread, and preaching for a wretched 'Suſtenance, and whenever it happened that he got any 'Thing over and above, he did not fail to conſume it at 'Play, or at other Means more ſhameful. This famous 'Preacher has been often found with Women of ill Lives. 'Inform your ſelf therefore, I beſeech you, how he has 'been driven out of Lauſane, Mons, Poictiers and Bourdeaux, and what Reputation he has left behind him in 'thoſe Places. St. Bernard ſends this Prince Word, that he is coming to reform the Diſorders that this Prince has cauſed in the Churches of his Dominions; that he has Authority for that Purpoſe; that he ſhall do his utmoſt Endeavours to extirpate this pernicious Plant, with Aſſiſtance of the Biſhops, and particularly by the Authority of the Cardinal of Oſtia, who will be ſent on Purpoſe by the Holy See. He takes notice to him, that it will be for his Intereſt to receive this Cardinal kindly, and to joyn his Authority with theirs, to the End, that the Pains they ſhall take for the Salvation of him, and his People may not prove of no Effect.

In the 242*d.* written by St. Bernard after his Return from this Country, he exhorts the People of Tholouſe to ſhun Hereticks, obey their Biſhop, exerciſe Hoſpitality, and not to ſuffer any Preachers among them, but ſuch as have either Ordination from their Biſhop or the Pope.

Theſe Letters were writ in the Year 1147.

The 243*d.* is addreſs'd to the Lords and People of Rome, after they had driven out Pope Eugenius III. He reproaches them ſeverely for this Action, and conjures them to reconcile themſelves ſpeedily to him.

In the 244*th.* he exhorts Conrade, King of the Romans, to re-eſtabliſh the Pope, and Puniſh the Rebels of Rome; giving him to underſtand, that it is as much for his Intereſt as for that of the Holy See, that the City of Rome which is Metropolis of the Empire, ſhould be under his Subjection.

In the 245*th.* he commends the Zeal which Pope Eugenius ſhew'd in oppoſing King Lewis the Younger's obliging Elias Biſhop of Orleans to quit his Biſhoprick.

In the 246*th.* he recommends this Biſhop to the Pope, being before but an humble Monk, and entreats his Holineſs to take Pity on his Condition, and to provide for the Payment of his Debts, out of the Revenues of his Biſhoprick.

In the 247*th.* he Prays the ſame Pope to permit Sampſon, Archbiſhop of Rheims, to make uſe of the Pallium which he had been forbidden, on Account of his having crown'd King Lewis in the Church of Bourges, in Preſence of the Archbiſhop of that City.

In the 248*th.* he adviſes this Pope not to ſuffer himſelf to be over-reach'd by the Biſhop of Seez, who was coming to wait on him, to get himſelf re-eſtabliſh'd.

St. Bernard.

In the 249*th.* he recommends to the ſame Oribert the Prior of Chaiſe-Dieu, Biſhop Elect of Valence, choſen in the Year 1145.

In the 250*th.* he acquaints the Prior and Monks of Portes, that they ought not to take it amiſs that the Pope would not allow one of their Fraternity to be Biſhop, though he was Choſen. He ſays, that perhaps his Holineſs would not admit of him, becauſe he was too Young, and that he would have nothing to be ſaid afterwards againſt the Election. And as for his own Part, he ſays, he never oppos'd it in the leaſt. Afterwards, he tells them, that he is ſorry that the Abbot of Troyes had written to them ſo very harſhly, and he concludes his Letter with theſe Humble Words. My Monſtrous Life and my afflicted Conſcience cry towards you for Compaſſion, for I am a kind of Amphibious Creature, that neither live altogether as an Eccleſiaſtick nor a Recluſe; and it is now a long while ſince I have quitted the Life of a Monk without forſaking the Habit. I eſteem it needleſs to acquaint you with what you may eaſily hear from others, that is, what I do, what I employ my ſelf about; what Hazards I expoſe my ſelf to in the World, and through what Dangers I am compelled to go: If you are not acquainted with theſe I beſeech you to inform your ſelves of them, and when you have thoroughly learnt them, to favour me with your Advice and Prayers.

In the 251*ſt.* he intercedes to Pope Eugenius in behalf of the Monks of Baume, whom this Pope had puniſh'd by changing their Abby to a Priory, for their having ſlighted the Authority of the Holy See.

In the 252*d.* he conjures the ſame Pope to put in execution the Sentence pronounc'd by Innocent II. againſt the Archbiſhop of York.

The 253*d.* is an Anſwer to a Letter from Hugh Abbot of Premontre, who had made ſeveral Complaints againſt the Monks of Clairvaux. St. Bernard tells him, he did not do well to complain of him and his Order, ſince he has always had an Eſteem for that of Premontre, and that he has done them ſeveral Services upon divers Occaſions: He brings ſeveral Examples of what he aſſerts, and at length juſtifies himſelf againſt what that Abbot had allegded againſt his Order. Towards the End, he admoniſhes them not to break the Union betwixt them, acquainting them that for his part he ſhall never be wanting in the Duties of Charity and Friendſhip.

In the 254*th.* he commends Guarini, Abbot of the Alpes, in endeavouring to reform his Monaſtery, and exhorts him, not to diſcontinue ſo good a Work out of fear of not being able to accompliſh it while he lives, ſince the ſhort Time we have to live is not ſufficient Excuſe for not endeavouring to make our ſelves perfect, and that ſuch as do not labour after a Progreſs in Spiritual Affairs, go backwards inſtead of advancing.

In the 255*th.* he exhorts Lewis the Groſs, King of France, not to hinder the holding of a Council which he believes neceſſary for the good of the Church. It is of the Council of Piſa that he ſpeaks, conven'd in the Year 1134. ſo that this Letter ought to precede the others by many Years.

In the 256*th.* he exhorts Pope Eugenius not to be diſheartned becauſe of ſome Loſſes the Chriſtians had ſuſtain'd in the Eaſt, but to ſuccour and aſſiſt them to his Power. He moreover tells him, that he was more than ordinarily ſurpriz'd when he heard that he was pitched upon for General of the Army, that was to go thither, being no ways qualify'd for that Employ.

In the 257*th.* he writes to this Pope in Favour of Philip, who was become a Monk of Clairvaux, after he had been ſuſpended from his Biſhoprick of Tarentum, and deſires his Holineſs to be kind to him.

The three following Letters were writ concerning Rualenus, who had been choſen Abbot of St. Anaſtaſius. St. Bernard after having requeſted of his Holineſs by the firſt of theſe Letters to diſcharge him from his Burthen. In the Second, conſents that he ſhall continue it, ſince his Holineſs deſires it, and by the third, he admoniſhes this Abbot not to be uneaſie under his Vocation.

In the 261*ſt.* he deſires Eugenius to take off the Excommunication pronounc'd againſt the Abbot of St. Urban, who had beſtow'd the Habit of that Order on a Knight Templar.

The 262*d.* is a Letter of Recommendation to the Pope, in Favour of the Monks of Monzon.

The 263*d.* is addreſs'd to the Biſhop of Soiſſons, in Favour of the Abbot of Cheſy.

The 264*th.* is a Letter from Peter, Abbot of Cluny, to St. Bernard, in which, he extreamly commends St. Bernard, and begs of him to ſend him his Secretary Nicholas.

The 265*th.* is St. Bernard's Anſwer, in which, he rejects the Praiſes given him, and moreover informs him, that he cannot ſend the Perſon he deſires, by reaſon, that he was with the Biſhop of Auxerre, where he was ſo Sick that it was impoſſible he ſhould come to Clairvaux without great inconvenience.

The 266*th.* is written to Sugerus, Abbot of St. Denys, a little before his Death. He exhorts him to prepare courageouſly for Death, and profeſſes a great deal of Friendſhip for him.

St. Bernard.

By the 267*th.* he tells Pope Eugenius that he was groſly deceiv'd when he rais'd to the Eccleſiaſtical Dignity a Perſon convicted of Crimes and condemn'd for them, by Lambert Biſhop of Angouleſme, and therefore begs of his Holineſs to revoke what he had done.

In the 269*th.* he ſends him Word that he would not have him give Credit to a Letter he lately wrote him, about a Perſon who had over-reach'd him by a Recommendation from the Biſhop of Beauvais.

In the 270*th.* he writes again to the Pope, in Favour of Anthelmus, Prior of the great Charter-Houſe, who having expell'd ſome of his Monks for Diſobedience and Irregularity, they had gone to Rome, and obtain'd a Re-eſtabliſhment from the Pope. St. Bernard ſays, that from the firſt Foundation of this Order, he had never heard that a Carthuſian who forſook his Cloyſter had ever been receiv'd again, without making ample Satisfaction; that theſe Monks who had thus forſaken their Order did yet worſe in returning to it. 'And what good (ſays he to the Pope) does 'your Holineſs believe, that theſe Monks could do, whoſe 'leaving their Monaſtery was an Effect of Diſobedience, 'and their returning to it the Product of Pride? They re'joyce for the Ill they have done, and inſult over thoſe 'whom they have offended; and, in a Word, they even 'triumph for having obtain'd the Victory. The Prior is 'no more Prior; he bears his Office with Regret, not be'ing willing to ſee the Deſtruction of his Order, and he 'would have left his Monaſtery long ſince, could he have 'gone out alone.——Conſider therefore moſt Holy Father, '(continues he,) how you have been over-reach'd, and 'what Puniſhment he deſerves, who has thus deceiv'd 'you!——Take Care then that the Prior be reſtor'd, to 'the End, that Iniquity may not triumph over Juſtice. He afterwards acquaints the Pope with the Death of Raymond, Abbot of Ciſteaux, and that Gozvin, Abbot of Bonneval, had ſucceeded him. This Abbot dy'd in the Year 1151. This Letter therefore belongs to that Year.

The 271*ſt.* he excuſes himſelf to Thibaud, Count of Champagne, for not caring to be concern'd in promoting his Son's having Benefices while he was but a Child, and this for Conſcience ſake, well knowing that Eccleſiaſtical Dignities ought only to be beſtow'd upon ſuch as are able to acquit themſelves of their Functions, and moreover, it being not allowable for one Perſon to enjoy ſeveral Benefices at a time, unleſs by Diſpenſation or ſome other conſiderable Reaſon that the Church may have.

In the 272*d.* he exhorts the Biſhop of Laon, (Gautier Abbot of St. Martin who was made Biſhop of that See in the Year 1151.) to be reconcil'd to the Bearer of that Letter.

The 273*d.* is written to the Abbot and general Chapter of Ciſteaux: He gives them to underſtand that he could heartily wiſh his Affairs would give him leave to Aſſiſt in their Chapter, and moreover admoniſhes them to labour in the Reformation of their Order.

In the following, he thanks Pope Eugenius for the Letter full of Charity and Zeal which he had written to his Chapter, and moreover entreats him to continue always the ſame good will towards his Order. He acquaints him towards the End that he is Sorry that he had taken from them Hugh Abbot of the Three Fountains, to make him a Cardinal.

In the 275*th.* he gives this Abbot of the Three Fountains, to underſtand, that he repents having writ to Rome, in Favour of the Nephew of Hugh Biſhop of Auxerre then lately Dead.

In the 275*th.* he acquaints the Pope with the Diſturbances that had happened in the Election of a Biſhop to the Church of Auxerre, and what he had been Inform'd by one of his Monks, ſent thither concerning the double Election there made.

In the 276*th.* he acquaints him likewiſe that the Will of the late Biſhop of Auxerre, had been made by Suggeſtion of Deacon Stephen, at whoſe Requeſt he had given his Nephew ſeveral Benefices and Church-Lands.

In the 277*th.* written alſo to the Pope, he recommends to him Peter Abbot of Cluny, who was on his Journey towards Rome, and begs that his Holineſs would not give him Leave to quit his Abby altho' he ſhould deſire it.

The 278*th.* is a Letter of Recommendation to the Pope in Favour of Henry Biſhop of Beauvais.

In the 279*th.* addreſs'd to Henry Son of Thibaud, Count of Champagne, he begs of him to do Juſtice in behalf of the Abbot of Chatillon, on the Lord of Belfort, whoſe Servants had taken ſeveral Cattle from him.

The 280*th.* is written to the Pope concerning the Election of a Biſhop of Auxerre. The Pope having Underſtood that there were two different Elections, deputed St. Bernard, with two other Perſons to proceed to a New one, St. Bernard and one of the Electors pitched upon one Perſon who is thought to have been Alain who got the better, but the third gave his Vote for another. Hereupon St. Bernard prays the Pope to procure the Conſent of the third Perſon, Aſſuring his his Holineſs, that he could not have thought of a more proper Perſon to ſerve the Church, and to prevent the Deſigns of the Count of Nevers upon the Church of Auxerre.

St. Bernard.

The 281*ſt.* contains a reprimand which he gave the Abbot of Cherval, for the Liberty he had taken to talk injuriouſly of him.

In the 282*d.* he exhorts Lewis the Younger, King of France to give his Conſent to the Election which had been made of a Biſhop of Auxerre.

In the 283*d.* he writes to Pope Eugenius touching the Reſtitution demanded by the Monks of the Monaſtery of the Mirrour, of the Order of Ciſteaux, upon the Monks of Gigny of the Order of Cluny, of 30000 Sols. Hereupon the Abbot of Cluny and St. Bernard had endeavour'd to accommodate the Difference; and the Monks of Gigny, having little to ſay for themſelves, St. Bernard has Recourſe to the Pope, that he would be pleas'd to do Juſtice in behalf of thoſe of the Mirrour.

In the 284*th.* he recommends to this Pope the Archbiſhop of Rheims, the Biſhop of Arras, the Abbot of Aucourt, and ſome others.

The three following Letters were written in Favour of Odon Succeſſor of Sugerus in the Abby of St. Denys. The two firſt are addreſs'd to the Pope, and the third to Hugh Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia.

In the 288*th.* addreſs'd to Andrew his Uncle, a Knight Templar, he acquaints him with his concern for the ill Succeſs of the Croiſade occaſion'd by the ill Conduct of the Chriſtian Princes, and ſays he hopes to ſee that Enterprize accompliſh'd before he dies.

In the 289*th.* he gives wholeſom Advice to Meliſenda Queen of Jeruſalem.

In the 290*th.* addreſs'd to Hugh Cardinal-Biſhop of Oſtia, he writes againſt the Conduct of Jordain des Urſini, Cardinal Legate of the Holy See in Germany. Your Legate (ſays he) has left behind him ſhameful Marks of his Expedition where-ever he has been, for he has fill'd all the Churches of Germany, France, and Normandy with Sacrileges. It is ſaid that he has done a great many ill Things unworthy of his Character, Robb'd the Churches where-ever he came, and every where plac'd Young Men in Eccleſiaſtical Dignities; That ſeveral have paid him great Sums of Money to keep him out of their Country; That by his Emiſſaries he has extorted and exacted Money from thoſe Places whither he could not go himſelf: In a word he is become the By word of the World: Every Body ſlights and ſpeaks ill of him: The Poor Monks and other Clergy complain of him: Theſe of his Profeſſion have the greateſt Abhorrence of his Life and Converſation; and Laſtly he has little Reſemblance with John Paperans, who was Legate at that time in Ireland, and who was juſtly honour'd and rewarded for his Faithful and Prudent Miniſtery. St. Bernard deſires his Letter may be read to the Pope, to aſſiſt him in his Proceedings againſt this looſe Legate.

In the 291*ſt.* he prays the Pope to have Compaſſion on the Monaſtery of St. Eugende on Mount-Jura which was almoſt ruin'd.

In the 292*d.* he reproves a Man of the World, for having endeavour'd to diſſwade one of his Relations from turning Monk.

In the 293*d.* he writes to Peter Abbot of Celles concerning a Monk of the Abby of Cheſy whom he had receiv'd into his Monaſtery.

In the 294*th.* he recommends to the Pope, William de Paſſavant Biſhop of Mans, accus'd by one of his Clergy.

In the two following Letters he recommends alſo the ſame Perſon to the Cardinals Henry, and Hugh Biſhop of Oſtia.

In the 297*th.* he ſends back a Monk of the Abby of Montier-Ramey who had quitted his Monaſtery, and now was deſirous to return to it.

In the 298*th.* he writes to the Pope, that Nicholas who came from the Abby of Montier-Ramey to his of Clairvaux, and who alſo had been his Secretary, was run from him, and had taken away ſeveral Books, a great Sum of Money and divers Seals of Value. That he had for ſome Time been Jealous of him, but that he all along hop'd that God would convert him, or that that he would betray himſelf as he now had done. That he does not Queſtion but he has written to ſeveral People in his Name. At length he deſires his Holineſs not to receive him.

In the 299*th.* he writes to the Count of Angouleſme in behalf of the Monks of the Monaſtery of St. Amand de Boiſſe.

In the 300*th.* he comforts Matildis Counteſs of Blois concerning the extravagant Courſes of her Son, and that he hop'd Age would work an Alteration upon him, but however he Adviſes her to treat him with Mildneſs.

In the 301*ſt.* he prays Sancha, Siſter to the King of Spain, to accommodate a Difference that had happened between the Monks of the Order which ſhe had newly eſtabliſh'd in Leon, and the other Monks of the Country.

The 302*d.* is written in Favour of the Archbiſhop of Mentz, to the Legates of the Holy See ſent into Germany to determine the Matter. This Archbiſhop was Henry, and the Legates were the Cardinals Bernard and Gregory who ſuſpended this Archbiſhop, notwithſtanding the Recommendation of St. Bernard, having as was ſuppos'd been corrupted by Money.

St. Bernard.

In the 303*d.* he writes to King Lewis the Younger, that he ought not to let a Lord of Britany, being excommunicated for Adultery, have the Eſtate that belongs to his Wife.

In the 304*th.* he thanks this King for his kind Enquiry after his Health, and moreover recommends to him Robert Couſin to this Prince.

In the 305*th.* he ſends Pope Eugenius Word that he has hindred Henry Biſhop of Beauvais from going to Rome; as likewiſe recommends to him the Affair of this Biſhop, deſiring him to delegate the Archbiſhop of Rheims for its Determination.

In the 306*th.* he acquaints the Cardinal of Oſtia that he has not been able to encline the Monks of the Three Fountains, to elect Nicholas for their Abbot whom this Cardinal deſir'd might ſucceed in this Abby, yet notwithſtanding the Monks had choſen Turolde; that he knew nothing in that Perſon which could deſerve that Dignity, and that if he had a mind to out him of it, for his Part he would not oppoſe it.

In the 307*th.* he excuſes the Conduct of the Biſhop of Beauvais to this Cardinal, altho' he ſays he does not deſerve it. He promiſes him to recall as ſoon as poſſible Robert his Monk who was with that Biſhop; and moreover ſends him word, that Heraclius, Archbiſhop of Lyons, was on his Journey to Rome, but that falling Sick at Montpelier, he had ſpent all the Money he had laid apart for his Voyage. He gives him likewiſe to underſtand, that he had been almoſt at Death's-Door, but was now ſomewhat recover'd.

The 308*th.* is addreſs'd to Alphonſo King of Portugal. He writes him word, that he will do all in his Power to comply with his Commands; gives him ſome Account of his Brother Peter, and likewiſe acquaints him, that one of his Monks nam'd Roland, brings him a Letter from the Pope, whereby his Holineſs grants him many Favours. He laſtly recommends this Monk to him, as alſo all of his Order within his Majeſty's Dominions.

The 309*th.* was written before the foregoing, in the lifetime of Sugerus, Abbot of St. Denys, whom he thereby recommends to the Pope.

The 310*th.* addreſs'd to Arnaud, Abbot of Bonneval, is the laſt which he writ before his Death. He therein gives his Friend to underſtand the ſaid Condition he is in, and deſires his Prayers.

Theſe three hundred and ten Letters compoſe the ancient Collection of thoſe of St. Bernard, compil'd by his Diſciples, and left in the Monaſtery of Clairvaux. There have ſince been found ſeveral others which are thoſe which follow, continuing the Number.

The 311*th.* is addreſs'd to Haimeric, Chancellor of the Holy See, and written in the Name of Hugh Abbot of Pontigni, and of St. Bernard. It contains Complaints againſt thoſe who envy other Men's good Actions, and exceſſive Commendations of Haimric's Conduct in his Miniſtry.

The 312*th.* is a Letter of Compliment to Rainaud Archbiſhop of Rheims.

In the 313*th.* written to Geofrey Biſhop of York; he ſays that thoſe Monks that have a mind to quit a—Life for a more Auſtere, ought not to be hinder'd, but after having embrac'd it, they are not to be releas'd, for fear of becoming Apoſtates.

The 314*th.* is written to Pope Innocent II. about the time that St. Bernard negotiated the Affair of the People of Lombardy with his Holineſs. He ſends him word, that he can neither prevail upon thoſe of Cremona, nor thoſe of Milan.

In the 315*th.* he begs of Maud Queen of England, to grant him what he had formerly requeſted of her in Favour of the Abbot of La Chapelle.

In the 316*th.* he deſires alſo Henry Archbiſhop of Sens, and Haimeric Chancellor of the Church of Rome, not to oppoſe the Reſtitutions of ſome Eccleſiaſtical Goods, which a certain Lord has a mind to make to the Monks. 'When 'Laicks (ſays he) who are in Poſſeſſion of Churches or 'Church-Revenues have a mind to quit them, it is com-'mendable; and when they are diſpoſed to give them to 'the Miniſters of God, it is doubly ſo. But this being to 'be done only by the Hands of the Biſhop, he cannot re-'fuſe it without being guilty of two Faults, nor conſent 'to it, without being the Cauſe of two good Things. This 'Lord requeſts a Thing of you which you ought to have 'asked of him; for which do you think does it better be-'come to be in Poſſeſſion of Church Revenues, a Soldier 'or a Saint? No body that has heard of this Action, but 'has been ſurpriz'd. Make then no more Difficulties to 'receive from Laicks what belongs to the Church and the 'Miniſters of God's Word.

In the 317*th.* written from St. Bernard to Geofrey Prior of the Monaſtery of Clairvaux; he gives him to underſtand that the Church of Rome is at preſent in Peace; that the Party of Peter of Leon have done Fealty and Homage to Pope Innocent; that in like Manner, all the Clergy that had ſided with that Cardinal were come over to the Pope: And in fine, that God having thus fulfill'd his Wiſhes, he ſhall be ſpeedily on his Return. This Letter was written in the Year 1138.

St. Bernard.

In the 318*th*. he acquaints Pope Innocent II. with the Danger the Church of Rheims was in, by reaſon of the great Conteſts about the Election of an Archbiſhop.

In the 319*th*. he exhorts Turſtin Archbiſhop of York, not to lay down his Archbiſhoprick, or in Caſe that he be obliged to do it for ſome ſecret Reaſon, or in Obedience to the Pope's Commands, he adviſes him to enter into the ſtricteſt Cloyſter.

In the 320*th*. he admoniſhes Alexander, Prior of the Monaſtery of Fountain in England, to take care that the Election of a new Abbot be made without Heats and Diſpute.

In the 321*ſt*. he enjoyns Henry de Murdach to accept of the Abby of Fountain, in Caſe he be elected.

The 322*d*. contains wholſom Inſtructions to a young Monk, which he gives to Hugh, then but a Probationer, and afterwards Abbot of Bonneval.

The 323*d*. is written in Favour of the Archbiſhop of Treves, againſt the Abbot of St. Maximin.

The 324*th*. is a Compliment to Robert Abbot of Dunes, who was afterwards Succeſſor to St. Bernard, in the Abby of Clairvaux.

In 325*th*. he writes to the ſame Abbot, that he is not to admit a Probationer, if he have not well acquitted himſelf during his Probation-ſhip.

The 326*th*. is a Letter from William Abbot of St. Thierry, to Geofry Biſhop of Chartres, and to St. Bernard, againſt the Errors of Abaelard, which he has there reckon'd up. We ſhall ſpeak more of this when we treat of the Doctrine of Abaelard.

The 327*th* is an Anſwer of St. Bernard's to this Letter, wherein he acquaints him, that he intends ſpeedily to have a Conference with him upon that Subject.

The 328*th*. is written to Pope Innocent II. againſt him that had been choſen Biſhop of Rhodes.

The 329*th*. is written to the Biſhop of Limoges, againſt the ſame.

The nine Letters following were written in the Year 1140. againſt Peter Abaelard. The 330*th*. and the 337*th*. to Pope Innocent, and the reſt to the Cardinals. The 337*th*. is written in the Name of the Biſhops of France, and contains a Relation of what had paſſed againſt Abaelard in the Council of Sens.

In the 339*th*. he recommends to Pope Innocent, Aloiſius Biſhop of Arras, and ſays that thoſe who have accus'd him are only Calumniators.

In the Letter following he recommends to the ſame Pope Ulger, Biſhop of Angers.

The 341*ſt*. is written to Malachy, Archbiſhop of Armagh in Ireland, who had ſent two young Monks to him, to learn the Manner of living in Clairvaux, with Deſign to found a Monaſtery of the ſame Inſtitution. St. Bernard promiſes to ſend them back well inſtructed in a ſhort Time.

In the 342*d*. he writes to Joſſelin Biſhop of Soiſſons, to appeaſe the King who had been incens'd without Cauſe againſt Geofrey de Loroux, Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux, who had incurred the Diſpleaſure of this Prince, by ordaining Grimoard, who had been canonically elected Biſhop of Poitiers, in the Year 1140.

The two following Letters were written by Bernard, Abbot of St. Anaſtaſius, and afterwards Pope Eugenius III. The firſt to Pope Innocent II. and the ſecond to St. Bernard. In both he expreſſes a great deal of Concern, for having been forced from the Monaſtery of Clairvaux, and ſent into Italy.

The 345*th*. is a Letter of St. Bernard's to the Monks of St. Anaſtaſius, to whom he recommends living always in ſtrict Obſervance of their Order, and in Charity one towards another. He moreover tells them, that though any of the Monks be ſick, they muſt make Uſe only of ſome common Sorts of Herbs, it being repugnant to the Spirit of Religion to buy Drugs, to ſend for Phyſicians, or to take Phyſick.

In the 346*th*. he exhorts Pope Innocent II. not to favour the unjuſt Cauſe of William Archbiſhop of York.

In the 347*th*. he recommends to him the Deputies which went to Rome to complain of this Archbiſhop.

In the 348*th*. he recommends to the ſame Pope Arnoul, elected Biſhop of Liſieux, who had a Diſpute in the Court of Rome, about his Election, with Geofrey Count of Angers.

The three following, are alſo Letters of Recommendation to the ſame Pope.

The 351*d*. contains a Privilege granted by Pope Innocent to St. Bernard and his Succeſſors, in Conſideration of the great Services he had done the Church of Rome, during the Schiſm caus'd by Peter of Leon, by which this Pope takes under the Protection of the Holy See, all Revenues Preſent, and to come, belonging to the Abby of Clairvaux; as likewiſe, grants to the Monks of Ciſteaux, Leave to chooſe an Abbot out of their Order, and to the Abbies which have others under them; he grants Permiſſion to chooſe any of thoſe Abbots for their Head, or any of the Monks belonging to ſuch Orders. He forbids the Biſhops to conſtrain the Abbots of Clairvaux, and the other Abbots of the Order of Ciſteaux, to come to any Council, providing it be not about Matters of Faith. He prohibits all Perſons to receive any Friars of their Order, after they are profeſs'd; and laſtly, declares the Monks of this Order exempt from paying Tithes of Fruits or Cattle.

St. Bernard.

In the 353*d*. he comforts William Abbot of Rivau, in the Dioceſs of York, in that the Archbiſhop of that See has been countenanc'd at Rome, aſſuring him withal, that the Sacraments adminiſtred, and Ordinations made by bad Miniſters are Valid, ſince it is God that baptizes and conſecrates.

In the 354*th*. he comforts Meliſenda, Queen of Jeruſalem, for the Death of Fulk her Husband, and exhorts her to govern her Kingdom with Prudence and Juſtice.

In the 355*th*. he recommends to this Queen the Monks of Premoutre, who were on their Journey to the Holy Land.

By the 356*th*. he ſends back to Malachy, Archbiſhop of Armagh, the Monks which he had ſent him. He likewiſe recommends them to him in the Letter following.

In the 358*th*. he writes to Pope Celeſtine II. to pardon Thibaud, Count of Champagne.

The 359*th*. is written to the ſame Pope, in the Name of the Monks of Clairvaux, who beg of his Holineſs not to permit Rainaud Abbot of Morimond, to quit his Monaſtery to go to Jeruſalem.

In the 360*th*. he again exhorts William Abbot of Rivau, to bear patiently with the Archbiſhop of York.

In the 361*ſt*. he recommends to Thibaud Archbiſhop of Canterbury, John Biſhop of Saliſbury.

In the 362*d*. he recommends to Robert Pullus, Cardinal and Chancellor of the Church of Rome, to behave himſelf becoming his Dignity, to Eugenius III. newly elected Pope.

In the 363*d*. he exhorts the Chriſtians of France and Bavaria to take up Arms for Relief of the Holy Land; and moreover admoniſhes them neither to put the Jews to Death, nor ſo much as to perſecute them.

In the 364*th*. he invites Peter Abbot of Cluny to an Aſſembly to be held after Eaſter at Chartres, there to deliberate on the Manner of relieving the Chriſtians of the Holy Land.

In the 565*th*. addreſſed to Henry Archbiſhop of Mayence, he writes againſt a Monk named Radulph, who by his preaching, authoriz'd killing of the Jews.

The 366*th*. is addreſs'd to Hildegarda Abbeſs of Mont-Saint-Robert near Bingben, in the Dioceſs of Mayence. After having rejected the Praiſes given to him, he congratulates her upon the extraordinary Gifts ſhe has received from God, and exhorts her to make a ſuitable Return thereto by Humility and Devotion.

The 367*th*. is a Letter of Recommendation to Guy Chancellor of the Church of Rome, in favour of Stephen Biſhop of Metz.

The 368*th*. is a Letter of Compliment to a Cardinal which contains wholeſome Advice to wean him from the Cares of the World.

In the 369*th*. and 370*th*. he congratulates Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, in having reform'd the Church of St. Genevieve, by introducing regular Canons into it. He exhorts him to do the ſame Thing in the Church of St. Victor.

In the following Letter addreſs'd to the ſame, he diſſuades him from making the Match between the Count of Angers and the King's Daughter, by Reaſon of their near Kindred.

In the 372d. he commends Peter Biſhop of Palenza, for his Humility and Application to the reading of good Books.

The 373d. is a Letter of the Abbot of Epine in the Dioceſs of Palenza, addreſs'd to St. Bernard, by which this Abbot teſtifies the great Concern he has for having been drawn out of the Abby of Clairvaux, and charg'd with the Government of a Monaſtery, which he earneſtly entreats St. Bernard to get him diſcharg'd from.

In the 374*th*. he comforts the Monks of his Order in Ireland, for the Death of their Abbot. St. Malachy.

In the 375*th*. he complains to Ida Counteſs of Nivernois, that her Servants moleſt and detain thoſe who go to the Abby of Vezelay.

In the 376*th*. he exhorts Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, to hinder the Duels which certain French Lords were engaged in againſt each other.

In the 377*th*. he commends this Abbot in that he deſign'd to aſſemble the Clergy for the publick Good.

The four Letters following are likewiſe addreſs'd to Sugerus, whereof the two firſt are Letters of Recommendation. The third is concerning the Eſtate the Church of the Eaſt was then in; and in the laſt, ſays, that he is ſorry that this Abbot is accus'd of the Diſturbances in the Kingdom, and and wills him therefore to do his utmoſt to prevent 'em, and not to ſuffer any in his Abby, which are any ways the Cauſe of them.

St. Bernard.

In the 382*d.* written to Leonius Abbot of St. Berthin; he expreſſes his Gratitude for the Favours he has receiv'd from him, and moreover acquaints him, that Thomas of St. Omer who had left his Order to come to his of Clairvaux, could not poſſibly return.

In the 383*d.* addreſs'd to the ſame he thanks him for the many Proofs of Friendſhip which he has received from him. He paſſes the ſame Compliment on the Monks of St. Berthin in the following Letter; and in the 385*th.* he commends them for having reform'd themſelves, and exhorts them to endeavour to perfect themſelves every Day more and more.

The 386*th.* is written to St. Bernard, by John Abbot of the Houſe of St. Mary, in the Country of Verulo, to comfort him about the unſucceſsful Expedition to the Holy-land, whereof St. Bernard had been the Promoter. He imputes the Fault thereof to the Wickedneſs of thoſe that had the Management of it.

The 387*th.* is written to Peter Abbot of Cluny, to whom St. Bernard excuſes himſelf about a ſharp Letter written in his Name, affirming that the Blame ought not to be caſt on him, but on the Authors of it; to which Peter Abbot of Cluny, anſwers by the following Letter, expreſſing a great deal of Value and Eſteem for St. Bernard, profeſſing himſelf well ſatisfy'd with his Excuſe; and moreover mentioning a Legacy depoſited in the Treaſury of Cluny, which was left to the Monaſteries of Clairvaux and Ciſteaux, which he ſays he will not contend with him about, nor concerning the Election of a Biſhop of Grenoble, which the Carthuſians oppos'd.

St Bernard gives a ſhort Anſwer to this Letter, by the Three Hundred Eighty Ninth.

The 390*th.* written to Eskile, Biſhop of London in Denmark, and Legate of the Holy See in Swedland, contains only Matter of Compliment, in which St. Bernard aſſures him of his Affection, and thanks him for that which he had profeſs'd for him.

The 391*ſt.* is addreſs'd to the Abbeſs of Favernay, in the Dioceſs of Bezançon, whom he admoniſhes to endeavour to re-eſtabliſh the religious Houſes, and to reform the Monaſtick Diſcipline.

The 392*d.* contains Inſtructions concerning Humility given to Radulph, Patriarch of Antioch.

The following Letter contains the like, being addreſs'd to William Patriarch of Jeruſalem.

In the 394*th.* he blames the Archbiſhop of Lyons, for having depos'd the Abbot of Aiſnay, and admoniſhes him to revoke his Decree.

In the 395*th.* addreſs'd to Alviſus Biſhop of Arras, he acquaints him that Thomas, a Monk of St. Berthin, being enter'd into the Monaſtery of Clairvaux, cannot reaſonably be expected to return to Berthin.

In the 396*th.* written to Ricuin Biſhop of Toul, he excuſes himſelf for having receiv'd into his Monaſtery a Clerk of his Church without knowing of him.

In the 397*th.* written to Odon Abbot of Marmoutier, in the Name of Hugh Abbot of Pontigni and of St. Bernard, they give him to underſtand, that his Monks ought not to take it ill that they have loſt ſome Churches which they pretended to by the Arbitration and final Determination of Geoffrey Biſhop of Chartres, and Thibaud Count of Champagne, therefore perſuades them to acquieſce in that Judgment. They further obſerve in this Letter, that Churches and Church Revenues belong naturally to the Clerks who are oblig'd to ſerve at the Altar, and conſequently ought to live by it. When the Profeſſion of Monks and the Examples of their Predeceſſors learn them that they are to get their Living with the Sweat of their Brows, and not to ſubſiſt on the Profits of the Church. Nay even tho' the Church ſhould be neglected by the Clerks, they are not to partake of the Revenues tho' they do of the Trouble. For, ſays he, with what Face can you, O Monks, pretend to the Wine of the Vines which you have not planted, and to the Milk of the Flock which you have not govern'd? How comes it that you would exact ſomething from them for whom you never did any Service? And if you will needs lay Claim to it, why don't you baptize their Children, bury their Dead, viſit their Sick, give Benedictions in Marriage, inſtruct their Ignorant, reprimand Sinners, excommunicate ſuch as deſpiſe Inſtruction, and give Abſolution to Penitents? In a Word, why don't ye open your Mouths and preach, you whoſe Duty it is to live in Repoſe and Silence? But it is a moſt odious Thing to reap where you did not ſow, and live upon the Gains of another. Laſtly St. Bernard ſays, that altho' they had the Right they pretended, yet ought they not to diſſent from their Abbot who had already agreed to the Judgment of the Arbitrators.

In the 398*th.* he writes to Guy Abbot of Montier-Ramey, and to the Monks of his Monaſtery, who had deſir'd St. Bernard to compoſe Leſſons and Hymns for them to read on the Feaſt of St. Victor, whoſe Body they pretended was bury'd in their Church, to which he anſwer'd, That he durſt not undertake a Work ſo much above his Capacity, and which requir'd a Perſon of greater Authority, of a Life more holy, and who was Maſter of a better Stile. He adds moreover, that in the Celebration of ſo ſolemn a Feaſt, new Prayers of ſmall Authority ought not to be made uſe of, but rather authentick and ancient Compoſitions which may be proper to edify the Church, and which ſavour of Eccleſiaſtical Gravity. That if there be a Neceſſity for ſomething new, and the ſubject ſo requires it, ſuch Pieces ought only to be us'd as command Reſpect from the Grandeur of their Stile and the pious Life of their Author. As for the reſt, ſays he, the Expreſſions therein contain'd ought to be of unqueſtion'd Veracity: They ought to inſpire Juſtice, teach Humility, inculcate Equity, enlighten the Mind, model the Manners, extirpate Vice, inſtil Devotion, and reſtrain the Liberties of the Senſes. The Singing ought to be grave, without intermixing any Thing either effeminate or ruſtick. It ought to be Agreeable without being too delicate, and ſhould affect the Heart by ſurprizing the Ear. And in a Word, it ſhould comfort Sadneſs, and appeaſe Diſcontent, but not drown the Sound of the Words, but rather increaſe it; for it is no ſmall Diſadvantage to a ſpiritual Life when the Charms of Singing divert the Attention from Thoughts, and fix them rather upon modulating the Voice, than comprehending the Senſe of the Words. Theſe are the Sentiments of St. Bernard concerning Prayers and celebrating the Divine Office, and altho' he had all the Qualifications which he requir'd in an Author of this Kind, yet would he not undertake what was requeſted of him, and contents himſelf with ſending only two Sermons on the Life of St. Victor to the Monks of Montier-Ramey.

St. Bernard.

The 399*th.* is a Letter of Recommendation which he gave to a Monk of the Monaſtery of St. Michael, who was about to go in Pilgrimage to Jeruſalem. He endeavours to diſſuade him from this Deſign, by reaſon that he thought a Monk, however criminal he were, could not do Penance better than within the Walls of his Monaſtery. He deſires Lelbert Abbot of this Monaſtery to receive him.

The 400*th.* is another Letter of Recommendation granted to Robert a Monk of Lieſſies, that his Abbot might uſe him more kindly.

The two Letters following contain nothing remarkable.

In the 403*d.* addreſs'd to Henry Archdeacon of Orleans, he anſwers to a Queſtion propos'd to him, to wit, If a Child who was in Danger of Death had been baptiz'd by a Laick under this Form, I baptize you in the Name of God and of the holy and true Croſs, whether the Baptiſm had been valid; or whether, providing the Child had liv'd, it muſt have been baptiz'd again. St. Bernard is of the Mind that it had been well baptiz'd, becauſe he cannot think that the Difference in Words can prejudice the Truth of the Faith, and the good Intention of him that baptiz'd it. His Reaſon is, becauſe under the Word God the Trinity is comprehended, and by adding the holy and true Croſs, he had made Mention of our Saviour; that when one is baptiz'd according the Cuſtom of the Church, in the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt, and as we may read in the Acts of the Apoſtles, that ſome were baptiz'd in the Name of Jeſus Chriſt only, it cannot be doubted but that thoſe who have been baptiz'd in the Name of the holy Croſs, have been ſufficiently ſanctify'd, inſomuch that the Confeſſion of the Croſs implies the Confeſſion of Jeſus Chriſt crucify'd. Moreover that in Reſpect of him who had baptiz'd, his Simplicity and good Intention excus'd him, but nevertheleſs that if any ſhould endeavour to introduce this Manner of Baptiſm, they would be inexcuſable. This Opinion of St. Bernard diſagrees with that of the Divines, who maintain that Baptiſm of this Kind is, ipſo facto, null and void.

The 404*th.* is addreſs'd to Albert a Recluſe Monk, who deſir'd of St. Bernard, that he might faſt after his own Fashion, and permit Women to enter into his Cell. St. Bernard anſwers, that he has no Power to command him, but that he has ſeveral Times adviſ'd him to eat at leaſt once a Day, to receive no Viſits from Women, and to live by hard Labour.

In the 405*th.* he takes Notice to an Abbot that one of his Monks was qualify'd to be Profeſs'd, and therefore he ought not to diſpenſe with him.

The 406*th.* is addreſs'd to the Abbot of St. Nicholas in the Woods, to whom he recommends a certain Monk.

In the 407*th.* he blames Odon Abbot of Beaulieu, for not having paid a Legacy to a poor Man, and tells him he had better have ſold a Chalice from the Altar, than have ſuffer'd this Perſon to want.

In the 408*th.* he recommends to William Abbot of the Regular Canons of St. Martin of Troyes a Clerk who had a Mind to retire from the World, and who was not able to undergo the Way of Living at Clairvaux.

In the 409*th.* addreſs'd to Borgon Abbot of Abbeville, he makes him a Compliment upon his deſiring to ſee him, and deſires him to beſtow a ſpare Piece of Ground belonging to his Abby, to the Monks of Alchy.

St. Bernard.

In the 410*th.* he recommends to Gildwin Abbot of St. Victor of Paris, Peter Lombard who was come from Boulogn in France, and had been recommended to St. Bernard by the Biſhop of Lucca.

The 411*th.* is written to Thomas Provoſt of Beverlake in England, and contains Exhortations to a holy Life.

The Letter following is written upon the ſame Subject to a young Man, who had enter'd into a Vow to imbrace a Monaſtick Life.

In the 430*th.* he recommends a Probationary Monk to Rainaud Abbot of Foigny, adviſing him to ſend him back after he had corrected his Faults.

In the Letter following, he blames a Monk of this Monaſtery, for having oppos'd the Return of this Perſon.

By the 415*th.* he exhorts a Man to perform the Vow he had made to become a Monk of Clairvaux.

In the 416*th.* he anſwers a certain Perſon who had complain'd to him that he had had no Share of the Alms given by Count Thibaud, that he was not concern'd in the Diſtribution of them.

The two following Letters contain nothing remarkable.

Theſe are all the Letters which are moſt commonly aſcrib'd to St. Bernard, tho' Father Mabillon has added ſome others which are doubtful, and might very probably have been written by other Perſons. He alſo adds ſome Charters which may reaſonably admit of the ſame Doubt, all which nevertheleſs continue the foregoing Numbers.

The 419*th.* is an Exhortation to Probationers, the which Father Mabillon believes does not belong to St. Bernard, by reaſon that the Stile is more reſtrain'd, and contains Maxims unlike thoſe of St. Bernard, ſuch as this, That we muſt praiſe God even for our Damnation. It likewiſe appears to me that this Letter differs in Stile from thoſe of St. Bernard.

The two following Letters are alſo unlike the Stile of St. Bernard.

The 422*d.* is only a ſhort Billet addreſs'd to King Lewis;

The 423*d.* is a Draught of a Letter concerning the Croiſade, which might probably be his as well as the Letter following. He therein recommends the Son of Count Thibaud going to the holy War to Emanuel Commenes Emperor of Conſtantinople.

The 425*th.* is a Copy of the twenty fifth Letter of St. Bernard.

The 426*th.* is a Judgment by Arbitration pronounc'd by St. Bernard, between Hugh Biſhop of Auxerre, and William Count of that City.

The 427*th.* is a Letter from Geofrey Biſhop of Chartres, to Stephen Biſhop of Paris, by which he adviſes him to refer himſelf to St. Bernard, touching the diſpute he had with Stephen de Guarlande.

The 428*th.* from Bernard Abbot of St. Anaſtaſius, to St. Bernard Abbot of Clairvaux, concerning a diſobedient and haughty Monk.

The 429*th.* is an Elogium of St. Bernard ſent to him by Hugh Metellus a Regular Canon of St. Leon.

The 430*th.* is a Letter from the ſame, written to St. Bernard, which contains an Apology for his Monaſtery.

The 431*ſt.* is alſo from the ſame, written in the Name of Siebaud Abbot of St. Leon, to Abbot William, to excuſe him for having anſwer'd the Calumnies of Herbert with too great Severity.

The two following Letters are written by Haimon Archdeacon of Chalons, to St. Bernard: In the firſt he acquaints him with his Sickneſs, and in the other he ſends to him for his Sermons.

The 434*th.* is a Letter addreſs'd to St. Bernard to excuſe Thierry Biſhop of Amiens from his Voyage to the holy Land.

The 435*th.* is a Charter, by which Sampſon Archbiſhop of Rheims gives to the Congregation of Clairvaux the Church of Mores, which he had obtain'd from the Monks of St. Denys there to build a Monaſtery of his Order.

By the 436*th.* Henry Biſhop of Troyes makes the like Gifts of the Church of Billencourt to the Abby of Clairvaux.

The 437*th.* is a Letter of Hugh Cardinal Biſhop of Oſtia, to the general Chapter of Ciſteaux, concerning the Death of Pope Eugenius III.

The 438*th.* is a Letter of Bartholemew, a Monk of Foigny, who had been Biſhop of Laon, addreſs'd to Sampſon Archbiſhop of Rheims, by which he juſtifies himſelf againſt his being accus'd, that he had imbezelled the Goods of the Church of Laon, while he was Biſhop there.

The 439*th.* is a Letter from Turſtin Archbiſhop of York, to William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, containing a Relation of what had ſhappened to him, when he had endeavoured to introduce the Cuſtoms of Ciſteaux into the Monaſtery of St. Mary at York.

The 440*th.* is a Letter of Faſtrede the fourth Abbot of Clairvaux, to an Abbot of his Order, whom he blames for for going too richly dreſs'd, and living too delicately. He therein renews the Maxim of St. Bernard, That a Monk ought not to make uſe of any external Remedies.

The 441*ſt.* is written by Peter de Roye, a Probationer of Clairvaux, to the Provoſt of the Church of Noyon, in which he ſhews the Difference between the Life led in Clairvaux, and that which is led at large in the World.

St. Bernard.

The 442*d.* is a Letter of a General Chapter of the Province of Rheims, who were call'd the black Monks, to Pope Adrian IV. whereby they beg that Godfrey Abbot of Lagny may be ſuſpended.

The Letter following is from the ſame, addreſs'd to Pope Alexander III. upon the ſame Subject.

Laſtly, the 444*th.* is a Letter from an unknown Hand, addreſs'd to the Abbot of Reatino, which contains nothing remarkable.

St. Bernard's Treatiſe of Conſideration.

The ſecond Tome of St. Bernard's Works, comprehends divers Treatiſes, whereof the firſt is intitled, Of Conſideration, divided into five Books, and addreſs'd to Pope Eugenius III. to ſerve him for Inſtruction. The Conſideration he treats of in this Work, is as himſelf defines it, the Thoughts which he imploys in Search after Truth, and more particularly relating to the Duties of his Profeſſion. In the firſt Book, he ſhews that the Condition of a Sovereign Pontiff would be but very unhappy, had he no Regard to himſelf, for it would be a very indiſcreet Thing of him to ſpend all his Time in hearing and deciding other Mens Differences, and all the while neglect to imploy himſelf ſometimes in Contemplation. He exclaims againſt the great Number of Cauſes that are brought into the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, as likewiſe againſt the many Abuſes committed there. He ſhews that this is more conſiſtent with the Secular Power than the Eccleſiaſtical. He ſays, he would not have Eugenius follow the Examples of his Predeceſſors, who apply'd themſelves more to Buſineſs than Contemplation, but that he ſhould imitate St. Gregory, who when Rome was threatned to be beſieg'd by the Barbarians, labour'd on an Expoſition of the moſt difficult Paſſage of the Prophet Ezekiel. He there proves, that Conſideration ſerves to form and imploy the four cardinal Virtues. Laſtly, he takes Notice of the unbecoming Bickerings at the Eccleſiaſtical Bar, and exhorts Pope Eugenius to endeavour after a Regulation.

In the ſecond Book, after having juſtify'd himſelf for adviſing the Expedition of the Croiſade, which had been unſucceſsful; he admoniſhes Pope Eugenius to conſider as to his Perſon, who he is, and as to the Dignity of his Profeſſion, what he is. Firſt, he is to reflect whence he is deſcended, which may ſerve to abate his Pride. He gives him to underſtand, that he is not ſet over others, to domineer over them, but to be their Miniſter and watch over them; that if this Dignity has procur'd him great Riches, he is not to think they belong to him by the Right of Apoſtleſhip, ſince St. Peter had no Power to diſpoſe of what he never enjoy'd: That he indeed had given him the Charge of all Churches, but not an arbitrary Dominion over them, which he expreſly forbids, and the Goſpel diſallows. That the ſame Perſon cannot well execute the Civil Government and the Papacy, and therefore he who graſps at both, ought juſtly to loſe both. In a Word, he adviſes him particularly to avoid being haughty on Account of his Supremacy, 'for (ſays he) you are not ſupreamly Perfect by being ſupream Biſhop, and take Notice, that if you think your ſelf ſo, you are the worſt of Men. But let us conſider you, as you ſtand in the Church of God, and what Figure you make. You are the Chief Prieſt, the Sovereign Pontiff, the firſt among the Biſhops, the Heir of the Apoſtles, Abel in Priority, Noah in Government, &c. 'Tis to you that the Keys of Heaven have been intruſted, and to whom the Care of the Flock has been committed; but there are other Door-keepers of Heaven, and other Paſtors beſides you; yet you are ſo much the more above them, as you have receiv'd the Title after a different Manner. They have every one a particular Flock, but you are Superintendent over them all; you are not only ſupream Paſtor over all the Flocks, but likewiſe over all the Shepherds.' He eſtabliſhes this Privilege upon the Words of our Saviour in the Goſpel, and he adds ſome Lines afterwards.—— 'Others are but call'd to a Part of the Care, when the full Power is confided to you. Their Power is limited, when yours extends even over thoſe who have a Power over others; for it is your Buſineſs to excommunicate a Biſhop, and ſuſpend him if you ſee Occaſion. This is what you are at preſent by your Office to remember alſo what you were, and who you are perſonally, for you are ſtill what you were once, and the Dignity which has been ſuperadded to you, has not been able to diveſt you of your Nature. You were born a Man; you have been made a ſovereign Biſhop, yet you are ſtill a Man, ſo that you ought to conſider your ſelf as a Man; draw the Veil which covers you, diſperſe the Clouds that environ you, and you will find your ſelf to be no better than a poor, naked, wretched Creature, that is diſſatisfy'd with his Nature; that is aſham'd of being naked; that grieves for being born; that murmurs at being deſtin'd to Labour, and not to Eaſe; and in a Word, that is born in Sin, with a ſhort Life abounding in Miſeries, and full of Fears and Complaints.' From theſe two Conſiderations he paſſes to a third, which is to conſider

St. Bernard.

consider his Manners and Conduct, wherein he counsels Eugenius to make a serious Reflection upon those Things. He admonishes him in the Conclusion of this Book to be constant in Adversity, and humble in Prosperity; to fly Sloth and unprofitable Discourse, and to practise no Manner of Partiality in his Judgments.

In the third Book he treats of the Consideration that the Pope ought to have towards those that are under him, and they are the Faithful over all the World. He admonishes him again not to affect an arbitrary Power over them, which he repeats, says he, because there is no Poison nor Arms that he ought to dread more than the Spirit of Tyranny. He afterwards proceeds to treat of the Duty of a Pope towards his Inferiors, and first in Respect to those who are out of the Church, as well Jews and Infidels, as Christians and Schismaticks. He says it is a Pope's Duty to bring over those that are in an Error, to keep those from straying that are already brought over; and lastly, to reconcile and fix Wanderers. For this Purpose he must pitch upon unbyassed Preachers, and who shall be apt to be mov'd neither by Ambition nor Avarice: Such as these now adays swarm in the Court of Rome, and that is the Reason that there is so little Good done, and that Religion seems as it were at a Stand. He speaks afterwards against the Grievance of Appealing to the Court of Rome: 'We must, says he, make a severe Reflection upon these Appeals, for fear a Remedy prove fruitless when it is established, for it seems to me, that a great deal of Mischief may be occasioned by these Means, if Moderation be not made use of. Every Body appeals to your Holiness; 'tis a Badge of your Primacy, yet if you are wise, you will rather endeavour to procure the Welfare of the Church, than insist upon the Grandure of your See. Men appeal to the Pope, and would to God it was to a good End. Would to God that those who oppress others, would feel the Effect of Protection granted to such as are oppressed. But on the contrary, nothing is more common, than for the Oppressors to have Cause to rejoyce, and for the oppressed to have Reason to mourn. The Court of Rome seldom considers, either the Fatigue or Expence of a Journey in a just Cause, and rarely are incens'd against him or them that were the Cause of it. Rouze thee then, O Man of God, when these Things happen: Be touch'd with Compassion for the Sufferer, and mov'd with Indignation against the Oppressor, Let the first be comforted by a Redress of his Grievance, by a full Satisfaction for the Injury done him, and let the last repent of what he has done, and let him have no Power to do the like again. The same Punishment is to be inflicted upon those that appeal without Cause, for no small Injury accrews that Way; Men may be permitted to appeal where they are injured, but to appeal with Design to injure others, is an Injustice that ought not to be suffer'd. One may reasonably appeal from a Sentence, but it would be ill done to do so before any be pronounc'd, insomuch that as then no manifest Wrong appeared. Whoever appeals without being injured, has either Design to molest his Adversary, or to gain more Time for his Defence.' He adds, that every Body complains and murmurs against the great Number and Confusion of Appeals made to Rome, and that they are the Occasion of innumerable Mischiefs. He confirms this by some Examples; and moreover counsels the Pope not to suffer any longer such as promote Injustice. He also in this Book condemns the Abuse of Exemptions. 'I have a mind, says he, to speak of the Complaints and Murmurings of the Churches who cry continually that they are torn to pieces and dismember'd, and that there are few or none, but either feel this Damage or fear it. If you ask wherefore? It is because the Abbies are wrested from the Jurisdiction of their Bishops, the Bishops from that of the Archbishops, and the Archbishops from that of the Patriarchs or Primates. Does this consist with Order? Can this be any ways excus'd? You may thereby indeed shew the Absoluteness of your Power, but it is to be fear'd you can at the same Time produce but little Justice. You do thus because you have a Power to do it, but the Question will be only whether you ought to have done it. You are set above others, only to preserve to every one his Rank and Quality, and not to injure any one.' He proves afterwards, that these Exemptions are neither just nor profitable; that they confound the Oeconomy of the Church; that they occasion a great deal of Trouble, and raise a Contempt as well of the lawful Powers establish'd by God Almighty, as of those of the Pope; and in a Word, that they destroy the Ecclesiastick Hierarchy establish'd in Imitation of that of the Angels. 'But what (may it be objected in the Pope's Name) will you then forbid me to grant Dispensations? No certainly, but to ruin the Church you ought not. I know you are establish'd universal Dispenser, but still it is to edifie and not to destroy. When there is a Necessity for Dispensation it is excusable; when it is profitable it is likewise commendable, but when there is neither of these, it is rather Dissipation than a faithful Dispensation. There are several 'Monasteries in most Bishopricks, which belong peculiarly 'to the Holy See, according to the Will of their Founders, 'but then must those be distinguish'd which have been gain'd 'on account of Devotion, from those that have been co-'veted by Ambition.' And lastly, St. Bernard says, that the Pope ought in general to watch over the Church, and see strict Discipline and Ecclesiastical Institutions duly observed. He recommends to him more particularly to take Care of the Reform, enjoyn'd by the Council of Rheims, relating to the Habits and Manners of the Clergy, as likewise to the Age and Qualifications of such as were to be admitted to Benefices.

St. Bernard.

In the fourth Book, St. Bernard considers the Pope's Duty towards the Clergy, the Inhabitants of Rome, the Cardinals, and other Officers of his Court. He tells him, his Clergy ought to be extreamly regular in all their Actions, because it is they that are to set Examples to others. In Relation to the People, he observes that it is enough to say, it is the People of Rome to denote what Disorders they live in. That it is a People that have never been accustomed to Peace, that love Disturbances and Tumults, that are cruel and untractable, and who never submit, but when they have no Power to resist: That he is nevertheless obliged to exhort them, though they seem irreclaimable. He farther admonishes the Pope in particular to endeavour a Reformation of Luxury and Sumptuousness. He gives him a great deal of Advice, concerning the Qualifications that are to be requir'd in Cardinals and other Ministers, which he shall pitch upon to be near his Person, and counsels him to take Care that they be neither selfish nor arrogant; and in a Word, he admonishes him to discharge his Domestick Affairs with true Oeconomy. Lastly, he makes a Recapitulation of all the principal Qualities that a Pope ought to have. 'Consider above all Things (says he to him) that the Church of 'Rome, over which God hath plac'd you as Supream, is 'the Mother, and not the Commandress of other Churches; 'and moreover, that you are not a Soveraign Lord over the 'other Bishops, but only one among them; that you are a 'Brother of those that love God, and a Companion of such 'as fear him; that you ought to be a living Example of 'Justice, a Miror of Holiness, a Model of Devotion, the 'Support of Truth and Defence of Faith, the Leader of 'Nations and Guide of Christians, the Friend of the Bridegroom, and Conducter of the Bride to her Spouse; the 'Ordainer of the Clergy, the Pastor of the People, the Instructer of the Ignorant, the Sanctuary of the Oppressed, 'the Advocate of the Poor, the Hope of the Miserable, the 'Support of the Fatherless, the Judge of Widows, the Eye 'of the Blind, the Tongue of the Dumb, the Staff of Age, 'the Revenger of Crimes, the Terror of the Wicked, and 'Glory of the Good, the Rod of the Powerful, the Scourge 'of Tyrants, the Father of Princes, the Mitigator of Laws, 'the Dispenser with Canons, the Salt of the Earth, the 'Light of the World, the Pontiff of the most High, the 'Vicar of Christ, the Anointed of the Lord; and lastly, 'the God of Pharaoh.

In the last Book, he admonishes Pope Eugenius to consider the Power that is above his, that is, that of God and the Angels, which gives him Occasion to treat of the Angels and of the Divinity.

St. Bernard began this Work in the Year 1149. and the first Book of it was finished the same Year. The second was sent to Pope Eugenius, in the Year 1150. after the ill Success of the Croisade. The third in 1152. and the two last, some small Time after.

These Books, Of Consideration, were follow'd by a Treatise of the same Nature, address'd to Henry Archbishop of Sens, concerning the Manners and Duty of Bishops. St. Bernard therein shews how difficult it is to behave ones self in that Office, and the Necessity there is for having good Counsel. He afterwards lays down the Obligations for Bishops to prove an Honour to their Ministry by their Virtues, and not by Vanity and Luxury. He treats more particularly of the Virtues requir'd in a Bishop, such as Chastity, Humility and Pastoral Care; and lastly, he blames the Conduct of those Abbots who had a Mind to exempt themselves from the Episcopal Jurisdiction, and wear Pontifical Habits. This Treatise was compos'd about the Year 1127.

About the same Time St. Bernard being at Paris, writ a Discourse to the Clergy of that City, intitled, Of Conversion, which follows the Treatise of the Duty of Bishops. It contains a moral Exhortation to Repentance and Change of Life, and towards the End, he speaks against ambitious and incontinent Clerks.

The Treatise of Commands and Dispensations was compos'd by St. Bernard, about the Year 1131. to serve for an Answer to the Monks of St. Peter of Chartres, who had consulted him upon this Subject, and which is address'd to Roger Abbot of St. Colombe, near Sens, and not to these Monks of Chartres, because they had written to him with the Leave of their Abbot. The first Question he treats of is, Whether all those Things which are contained in the Order are Obligatory to them who profess them, or whether they are only monitory and inſtructive. And again, if one Part ought to be taken for Precepts, and the other for Counſel. He anſwers, that the Order of St. Bennet is propos'd to all Mankind, but not offer'd to be forc'd upon any Body. That any Perſon is free to be admitted of it, but when one is once engag'd in it, it becomes neceſſary ſo to continue; ſo that excepting a few Particulars which relate to ſpiritual Matters, ſuch as Charity, Humility, &c. which are inſtituted only by God, and therefore not to be chang'd, all the other Rules of the Order are only Inſtructions and good Counſel to them who are not yet profeſs'd, but to ſuch as are, they become Commands, and it is criminal to violate them; that they are voluntary to the firſt, and compulſory to the laſt; yet however they may be diſpens'd with upon an extraordinary Occaſion: That this Power of diſpenſing belongs only to Superiors, and who cannot do it upon juſt Grounds, and not meerly out of Fancy. To explain the utmoſt Extent of theſe Diſpenſations, St. Bernard reckons up three Sorts of neceſſary Things, which are, one eſtabliſh'd, two inviolable, and three immutable. The eſtabliſh'd are thoſe which are found to be ſo very neceſſary, that every Body is not allow'd to alter them but Superiors only: Theſe are Monaſtick Rules, which having been inſtituted by Saints, are as it were eſtabliſh'd, and cannot be chang'd by private Perſons, but as thoſe who eſtabliſh'd them were Men, thoſe Men alſo who by a Canonical Election have ſucceeded to theſe Saints, have Authority to give Diſpenſations without Abuſe and Diſorder, according to the Circumſtances of Time, Place and Perſons; and moreover, theſe having been inſtituted for the Increaſe and Preſervation of Charity, as long as they are conducing thereunto they cannot be alter'd, even by Superiors; but if it at any Time happens that they become contrary to the Intereſt of Charity, in the Obſervation and Judgment of thoſe that are oblig'd to inſpect them, then it is but reaſonable, that what was at firſt inſtituted for the Benefit of Charity, ſhould be either omitted, interrupted or alter'd for the Sake of Charity, and it would be unjuſt, that what had been eſtabliſh'd on Account of Charity, ſhould ſubſiſt and flouriſh in Prejudice thereof. Theſe Things we term eſtabliſh'd, are fix'd and immoveable, even in Regard to Superiors, but then it muſt be as long as they are ſerviceable and aſſiſting to Charity. The ſecond Sort of neceſſary Things are call'd inviolable, for that not having been inſtituted by Men, but eſtabliſh'd by the Commandments of God, they cannot be chang'd but by the Authority of God himſelf, who was the Author of them. As to the third Kind of neceſſary Things which he terms immutable, are thoſe which are of ſuch a Nature, that even God himſelf could not change them on whatſoever Account. Under this Kind are comprehended all the Inſtructions which Chriſt gave his Diſciples on the Mount, and moreover, ſuch as both the Old and New Teſtament have ordain'd relating to Charity, Humility, &c. all theſe Things being ſuch in their Nature, it would not be either allowable or profitable to retrench them, their Excellency being immutable and founded on the Principles of the Law of Nature. Of theſe three neceſſary Things, the firſt is covenanted by free Will and a Promiſe. The ſecond proceeds from the Authority of him that commanded. And the third is grounded on the Dignity of Precept.

St. Bernard.

From theſe Principles St. Bernard concludes, that an Abbot cannot diſpenſe with any Thing that belongs to Spirituals in his Order, and as to outward Obſervances, he muſt not be guided by his Pleaſure and Fancy, but by Charity, becauſe he is not above the Order which he profeſſes himſelf a Member of: That the Letter of the Rules muſt give Way to Charity when Neceſſity ſo requires it: That even Superiors cannot reſtrain the Obligation of a Vow, unleſs upon an abſolute Neceſſity; nor extend it, unleſs the Inferiors conſent: That nevertheleſs an Inferior whoſe Obedience does not exceed his Vow, is imperfect, becauſe perfect Obedience is not comprehended within any Bounds, but imbraces willingly, and accepts courageouſly whatever is commanded: That there is no Diſobedience but what is to be avoided, but that ſeveral Kinds of it are not equally criminal: That there ought to be a Difference put between the Perſon that commands and the Things commanded: That in Regard of the Perſons, we ought to be moſt afraid of offending our Superiors, who have the greateſt Authority over us; for it is better to obey God than Man, our Superiors than our Equals, and amongſt our Superiors thoſe of our own Country rather than Strangers: That in Relation to Commands, we ought to take more Care of thoſe which are of Importance, than of thoſe of leſs Conſequence, and that a Perſon is more or leſs culpable according as the Command is of more or leſs Importance: That this Difference is in the Commandments eſtabliſh'd by Men, becauſe they command with more or leſs Affection according as they ſee Occaſion: That perfect Obedience conſiſts in not ſlighting the leaſt Commands and obeying the greateſt, conforming ones ſelf to the Intent of the Superior: That ſlight Matters, ſuch as forbidding Laughing or Speaking, when they are once commanded become Obligatory, and they who diſobey them commit a Sin, tho' no Crime, providing they do it not with Contempt; but when they contemn the Law they are more than ordinarily faulty: That God is to be obey'd, as likewiſe is Man that commands in his Name, providing the Command be not contrary to the Law of God: That in doubtful Matters the Commands of Superiors are to be follow'd: That all Sins of Diſobedience are not equal; and that in Reſpect of thoſe which are committed againſt the Monaſtick Rules, ſome are more conſiderable than others: That it ought not to be thought that the Obſerving of Monaſtick Rules is impoſſible, becauſe that cannot be but either thro' Neglect or Inadvertency.

St. Bernard.

St. Bernard proceeds afterwards to anſwer ſome Particulars which theſe Monks had propos'd to him.

The firſt was, Why an erroneous Conſcience does not ſometimes change the Bad to Good, in like Manner as the Good to Bad? He anſwers, that to the End that an Action may be good, it ought to be effected by the Knowledge and Love of God: That he that does a good Action, believing it to be bad, has not the Love of God in him, and by Conſequence his Action muſt be bad, but that he that does a bad Action, believing it to be good, is ignorant of what is good, and therefore his Action cannot be eſteem'd good, tho his Intention was ſo: That his Good-will ſhall not be altogether depriv'd of a Reward, altho' thro' a deceiv'd Simplicity he be not altogether exempted from Ill. But what, perhaps you may ſay, did not he act according to his Conſcience? Yes, replies St. Bernard, but according to a falſe and erroneous Conſcience, which does not exempt him abſolutely from Sin.

St. Bernard's Apology to William Abbot of Thierry.

Next he anſwers the ſecond Queſtion, which was, If in Relation to Commands, Diſobedience be proportionably as criminal, as Obedience is meritorious? He ſhews that in certain Caſes Obedience is more meritorious than Diſobedience criminal.

They had likewiſe demanded of him, How far they were oblig'd to be reſident, and where they might take a Liberty to quit their Monaſtery? He anſwers, That a good Monk ought never to forſake his Monaſtery without Leave firſt obtain'd from his Abbot, when he is able to undergo the Injunctions of his Order; but if the ill Lives of thoſe which he lives amongſt, hinder him from ſo doing, then is he to chuſe and go to another Monaſtery, where he may accompliſh thoſe Vows, he could not ſo well perform there: That altho' it be not allowable for a Monk, who is in a well regulated Monaſtery, tho' leſs auſtere, to leave it without Permiſſion of his Superior, for one more auſtere; yet if it happen, that one having left it, enters into another, none ought to adviſe him to return, unleſs the Monaſteries be near to each other, and he be ſpeedily recall'd.

The fourth Queſtion they propos'd to him was, Why St. Gregory the Great receiv'd a Perſon that had quitted his Order, into the Communion, and did not rather oblige him to return to a Monaſtick Life. And why St. Auſtine teaches that a Marriage contracted by ſuch as had made a Vow of Continence is not to be diſſolv'd. St. Bernard owns freely, that he is not of thoſe holy Biſhops Opinion: And that it belong'd to them to make good what they had aſſerted.

He moreover anſwers a fifth Queſtion, concerning the Biſhops which St. Gregory had cloyſter'd up in Monaſteries by Reaſon of the Crimes they had committed, the Queſtion was, Whether they were to continue their Epiſcopal Habit there, or to wear that of the Monks. He ſays, He knows little of the Matter, but that it is likely they ought not to take upon them the Habits of the Order, becauſe they had never before done it, and becauſe they were to continue in thoſe Monaſteries but for a Time, and that they were confin'd to theſe Places only that they might have more Leiſure to repent.

The ſixth Queſtion which he anſwers is, Why of all the Kinds of Repentance that among Monks has the Privilege of being term'd a ſecond Baptiſm? He ſays, he believes it is, by Reaſon that they have abſolutely renounc'd the World, and practiſe a ſpiritual Life after a very excellent and extraordinary Manner; That they are anew cloath'd with Jeſus Chriſt, and retire from the Darkneſs of Sin into the Light of Piety and Virtue.

The ſeventh Queſtion they ask'd St. Bernard is, If when an Abbot dies, or is depos'd, they have, during the Interval, a Liberty to go out of their Monaſteries to go to another? St. Bernard anſwers, they have not, becauſe the Vow they made is not to be limited by the Death of the Abbot, but only authoriz'd by his Preſence, and that therefore a Monk ought to conſider his Vow by the Limits of his own Life, and not by that of another.

They alſo demanded of him, What a Monk ought to do that has a ſecret Averſion to his Abbot, whoſe Election he looks upon to be inconſiſtent with the Rules of the Order? To which St. Bernard anſwers, that when the Election is not manifeſtly irregular, the Monks ought to obey.

The other Queſtions of theſe Monks being of leſs Conſequence, St. Bernard anſwers them in few Words, and there is but one which deſerves to be mention'd, which is,

If

St. Bernard.

If a Perſon who has offended another be ſo diſpoſed as not to deſign to do him any Harm, and yet is not concern'd if any happen to him, be in a Condition to approach the Altar. St. Bernard anſwers that he ought not to do it till his Paſſion and Reſentments be over.

St. Bernard's Apology addreſs'd to William Abbot of St. Thierry, is a Work in which he undertakes to Juſtify himſelf and thoſe of his Order againſt their being accus'd of ſpeaking ill of the Order of Cluny, that is to ſay of all the Benedictin Monks who had not embrac'd the Reform of Ciſteaux. Altho' this Work be entitled an Apology, he nevertheleſs ſeverely reproves in it the Monks of Cluny; but to have the better Colour for doing ſo with greater Freedom, he begins by declaring that neither he nor any of his Monks have ever ſpoken ill of that Order. He approves of the different Kinds of Religious Orders, and particularly commends that of Cluny. He exclaims againſt thoſe that Judge raſhly of the Manner of living of this Order, who think themſelves more Holy, becauſe they lead an Auſterer Life. He ſhews that Spiritual Exerciſes are more profitable than Corporal, and that a Man may be a good Monk without practiſing all theſe Auſterities, and that alſo all theſe Auſterities are Unprofitable when they are not accompany'd with Charity and Virtue. But for fear that he may not ſeem to approve of the Irregularities which were practis'd in the Abby of Cluny, he falls upon and condemns them in the ſecond Part of this Work. He ſays that the Manner of Living among the Order of the Abby of Cluny, ſeems to be a Work of Saints, becauſe being willing to ſave a great many Perſons they have temper'd the Rigor of the Rules of his Order in Favour of the Weak without altogether ruining it at the ſame Time. But I cannot believe they have nevertheleſs allow'd of the many Diſorders that are to be found in moſt Monaſteries. For I can never enough Admire (ſays he) how ſo great a Licentiouſneſs in Meals, Habits, Beds, Equipages, and Horſes can get in and be eſtabliſh'd as it were, among Monks; inſomuch that thoſe who have thus wholly abandon'd themſelves to theſe Exceſſes, ſeem to have had a mighty regard to the Spirit and Religion of their Anceſtors: In a manner that by theſe extravagant Proceedings they have procur'd Vices the Name of Virtues, and on the contrary Virtues the Name of Vices. When a moderate Expence ought to be call'd Covetouſneſs; Sobriety, if not Extraordinary, Auſterity; and Silence, Sadneſs; they on the contrary call a looſe Behaviour the Effect of Diſcretion; Profuſeneſs, Liberality, and much Talking but common Civility. Immoderate Laughing with them is no more a Vice, but goes under the Name of a neceſſary Gaiety. Luxury in Habits and Pride in Horſes are look'd upon as the good Breeding of a Monk, and ſuperfluous Ornaments are the Furniture of his Chamber. Yet whatever they thus Laviſh away can it be call'd Charity? No; Unhappy Charity that deſtroys the True! Irregular Diſcretion that confounds in us that of Virtue! Cruel Pity that has greater regard to the Body than the Soul! What a ſtrange Charity is this, to provide ſo well for the Fleſh, and to take no Care of the Spirit! What Diſcretion to give all to the Body and refuſe all to the Soul! He afterwards proceeds to compare the Sobriety of the Antient Monks with the Intemperance of thoſe of his Time, and gives a very lively Deſcription of the Exceſſes of theſe laſt, whereof ſome of his Expreſſions follow. Are not their Mouths and Ears equally fill'd with Victuals and confus'd Voices? And while they thus Spin out their Immoderate Feaſts, is there any one who offers to regulate the Debauch? No certainly: Diſhes after Diſh, and for Abſtinence which they Profeſs, two Rows of fat fiſh appear ſwimming in Sauce upon the Table: Are you cloy'd with theſe? The Cook has Art ſufficient to Pruck you up Others of no leſs Charms? He'll provide Sauces as different as your Diſhes. Thus Plate is devoured after Plate, and ſuch natural Tranſitions are made from one to the other, that they fill their Bellies, but ſeldom blunt their Appetites, for the Palate is always ſo agreeably entertain'd with ſo many Novelties that it has not leiſure allow'd it to be ſatisfy'd. Now Hunger is reviv'd again, the Appetite is awaken'd and they fall on with the ſame Greedineſs and Guſt. The Belly having no Eyes ſees not how much it takes in, and it is at laſt rather fill'd than glutted. And becauſe the ſimplicity of Nature is not entertaining enough, we make Mixtures and Hotchpotches of different kinds, and by exquiſite and elected Sapours ſupport and encourage our Intemperance, yet notwithſtanding tho' we recede ſo much from Nature, yet are we not able to fill the vaſt Bounds of our Deſires. He then reproves very ſeverely, their Exceſs and Niceneſs in Drinking, and ridicules a pleaſant Cuſtom of ſome Monks who being Young, Healthy and Strong, would retreat at Sacrament time into the Infirmary to Eat and Drink. From their Exceſs in Eating and Drinking he proceeds to Dreſſing. We don't think our ſelves well Dreſt (ſays he) unleſs we have the beſt of every Thing on our Backs. We don't ſearch after the moſt decent and commodious but the Gayeſt Cloaths. We don't enquire for the warmeſt but the fineſt Cloath. In a word, we don't deſire (purſuant to our Vows) what may be moſt ſerviceable to us, but what may cover us moſt with Vanity? —— Don't we ſee every Day that theſe Habits which were given to the Monks as Marks of Humility, are ſo contriv'd that they ſerve rather to exalt their Pride? Scarce can a whole Kingdom furniſh them ſuitable to their Extravagant Deſires. The Soldier and the Monk almoſt participate of the ſame Habit in the Field and the Cell. Will not a Monk's Habit now a Days become a Man of the World? A Prince likewiſe, providing he were in Faſhion, would not look Amiſs in their Garments. But you'll tell me perhaps with the Proverb, That the Habit does not make the Monk, and that it is Virtue alone which governs the Heart tho' the Perſon be never ſo ſplendidly cloath'd. Very well: Then I would Ask you when you traverſe the Town, viſit all Fairs, and the Merchants Houſes, overturn the Magazines, unfold the Silks, feel them with the Fingers, view them with your Eyes, hold them up to the Light, reject ſome and like Others, whether you have not more Vanity than Virtue? He adds moreover that the Abbots do not only neglect to reform theſe Diſorders, but even authorize and encourage them by their Silence and Example. 'I am accus'd (ſays he) of being Arrogant; No matter I cannot hold my Tongue? I muſt always take the Liberty to enquire how the Salt of the Earth comes to be ſo deprav'd: What occaſions Men, who in their Lives ought to be Examples of Humility, by their Practice to give Inſtructions and Examples of Vanity? And to paſs by many other Things, what a Proof of Humility is it to ſee a vaſt Retinue of Horſes with their Equipage, and a confuſed Train of Valets and Footmen, ſo that the Retinue of a ſingle Abbot outſhines that of two Biſhops. May I be thought a Lyar if it be not true that I have ſeen one ſingle Abbot attended by above 60 Horſe. Who could take theſe Men for the Fathers of Monks and the Shepherds of Souls? Or who would not be apt to take them rather for Governors of Cities and Provinces? Why, tho' the Maſter be four Leagues off, muſt his Train of Equipage reach to his very Doors? One would take theſe mighty Preparations for the Subſiſtence of an Army, Or for Proviſions to travel thro' a very large Deſert. Cannot Wine and Water be pour'd undefil'd out of the ſame Cup? Cannot a Candle give Light but in a Gold or Silver Candleſtick? Cannot you ſleep upon any other Bed but one of Tiſſue? Will not one Servant ſuffice to guide the Horſe, ſerve at Table and make the Bed? If you tell me it is to ſave Charges in an Inn that you carry ſo many Things, then will I ask you why every one does not carry his own Proviſions. He alſo does not ſpare the Monks in their Buildings. 'But all this (ſays he) is Little or Nothing. Let us proceed to Matters of greater Conſequence, and ſo much the greater as by how much they are more Common. I ſhall not take Notice of the Dimenſions of our Churches, of their Stately Heighth, of their Exceſſive Length and Superfluous Breadth, of their Sumptuous Ornaments and Curious Pictures, which, attracting the Eyes of the Congregation do not a little, I fancy, divert their Devotion, and which ſeem to me not much more allowable than the Ceremonies of Ancient Judaiſm. As for my Part I would have all Devotion and Places of Worſhip tend to the Glory of God. I would fain ask the Monks (for I am a Monk my ſelf) a Queſtion which a Pagan heretofore demanded of Pagans. Tell me ye Prieſts (ſays he) what has Gold to do in Holy Places? Now I would make Uſe of his Senſe tho' not of his Words. Tell me Poor Souls then ſay I (if you may be call'd Poor Souls) what has Gold to do in the Sanctuary? I do not ſpeak of Biſhops and their Churches, for they may take a greater Liberty, but I ſpeak of the Churches of Monks. We know that Biſhops are indebted both to Wiſe Men and Fools, and muſt be allow'd to ſtir up Devotion in the People by Images, and other ſuch Senſible Objects, which they could not raiſe by their Preaching. But we that are now no more of the World; that have forſaken all the Pleaſures and Riches of Life, for Jeſus Chriſt's ſake; who have caſt at our Feet all that glitters in the Eyes of the World, and have fled from Concerts of Muſick, Fragrant ſmells and Feaſting our Senſes, ſhall we (I ſay) Interrupt our Devotion by theſe Bawbles which we have left for its Sake? What can we expect if we ſhould Acquieſce in all theſe Vanities? The Admiration of Sots or the Satisfaction of Fools. Is it not the Commerce we entertain'd with the World that cauſes us to offer Incenſe to it's Idols? And to ſpeak more plainly, is not Avarice the Cauſe, the very worſt of Idolatries? Is it not true that we have greater regard to People's Riches, than their Salvation? If you ask me how comes this to Paſs? I will diſcover the wonderful Secret to you. There is a certain Art to multiply Riches by exhauſting them, and like a River to make them encreaſe while they flow, for here Profaneneſs is the Cauſe of their Abounding. Here the Eyes and Minds of the Spectators are ſo ſeduc'd by theſe coſtly Vanities, that inſtead of offering their Hearts to God they ſacrifice their Purſes to Man. Thus you may ſee how Riches ſwallow up Riches, and how the Money of the Monks proves a Bait for that of Fools; for Men have I know not what Inclinations to throw Wa-

St. Bernard.

St. Bernard.

'ter into the Sea, and to heap Riches upon thoſe that have 'em in Abundance. The Monks cover the Relicks with rich Attire, and the Pilgrim for fear of being dazled approaches them with ſhut Eyes and an open Purſe. The beſt adorn'd of theſe Images are ever the moſt Holy. Men crowd to pay them Devotion, but firſt they muſt be conſecrated with the Holy Water, and after are led to the Image where they for the moſt part admire the Ornaments more than the Thing it ſelf. Next the Church is hung round not with Crowns of Thorns, but Rows of Pearls. The Lights of the Lamps are hightned by the Luſtre of Diamonds, and inſtead of Candleſticks you ſee great Branches of Braſs mounted, whoſe Weight and Work-man-ſhip are equally to be admir'd. What do you think can be the Cauſe of all theſe fine things? Are they more to put you in mind of your Sins than to move your Admiration? No Certainly. O Vanity of Vanities! But this is not ſo much a Vanity as Folly. The Church ſhines in its Walls and ſuffers in its Poor. It covers its Stone with coſtly Garments and leaves its Children the Misfortune of being naked. Here the Eyes of the Rich are fed with the Bread of the Poor. The Curioſity of Men is indulg'd when the Miſeries of the Indigent are neglected. Nevertheleſs if we are Inſenſible of the Wants of Men, we ought to have more reſpect to the Images of our Saints, than to Pave our Churches with them. What Shame is it for us to ſpit in the Mouth of an Angel, and tread on the Face of a Saint? But all this while if we have an Indifference for the Carving, why do we not ſpare the Beauty of the Painting? Why do we paint with our Hands, what we intend to deface with our Feet? Why do we take ſo much Pains in embelliſhing what we intend to defile the next Moment? What ſignify ſo many fine Stroaks when they are immediately to be cover'd with Duſt? In a Word what Occaſion is there for all theſe Vanities among Poor Monks who have renounc'd the World, unleſs we have a mind to Anſwer this Pagan Poet with David; Lord, I have been all enflam'd with Zeal for the Honour of thy Houſe and the Tabernacle of thy Glory. Well then I agree with you; I conſent to theſe Exceſſes in the Church. The Simplicity and Devotion of Prayers may poſſibly ſanctify that that would be a Crime in a Prodigal; but in Cloyſters, to what purpoſe are thoſe Paintings Carwings, before People who weep for their Sins. Towards the End of this Treatiſe he makes an Apologue for what he had ſaid before. I hope in God (ſays he) that no Body will be offended at what I have writ, for I do not Queſtion but that in reproving Vice ſo ſeverely, I have a little grated the Ears of ſome that Practiſe it. But it may be if God is ſo pleas'd to have it, that even thoſe whom I may be thought to have anger'd, may not be ſo. But this cannot poſſibly happen unleſs they ceaſe to be what they are, unleſs they ceaſe to calumniate every Day according to Cuſtom; to Judge ill of their Brethren by Reaſon they do not viſibly lead ſo Auſtere a Life; and if on the Contrary thoſe that are leſs mindful of exterior Rigor, do not take Care to retrench all their Superfluities. Laſtly he blames thoſe who thro' their Inconſtancy go from one Order to another. 'I have known ſome (ſays he) who had a mind to change the Moderation of their Order, for the Auſterity of ours; What had they a mind to do then? Why what but to deprive their Brethren of the Scandal of their Inconſtancy, and bring it to us? and they have not been leſs Troubleſome to us by their wretched Converſation, than they were to them by their leaving them; and becauſe they have deſpiſed through Pride the Profeſſion which they had embrac'd, and preſum'd to aſſume a new one beyond their Abilities, God's Juſtice has ſuffered their Baſeneſs to appear, for they have been oblig'd to quit our Order through the ſame Imprudence that they engaged in it, and ſhamefully to reſume that which through Inconſtancy they had forſaken, for not having entered on it, but by the Impatience they had to continue in their own, and not through any hearty Deſire of living with us, they have ſufficiently ſhewn what they were, and going thus from one to the other, they have left Scandal with both. I don't here mean every Body, for thanks be to God, we have found ſome, who as they have begun generouſly, have perſever'd honeſtly; for it is much better to perſevere in what we undertake, than to undertake what we are not able to perſevere in. But above all, let us all take Care with the Apoſtle, that our Actions be conceiv'd in the Spirit of Charity.

St. Bernards Treatiſe in Commendation of the new Militia.

The Treatiſe in Commendation of the new Militia addreſs'd to Hugh, great Maſter of the Knight Templars, was written by St. Bernard, about the Year 1135. This Order had been eſtabliſh'd in the Year 1118. by ſome pious Knights who had made a Vow to the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, that they would live like regular Canons in Chaſtity, Obedience and Poverty. The firſt that made this Vow, was Hugh de Paganis, and Geofrey de St. Aldemar. The King of Jeruſalem gave them for their Habitation a Place near the Temple, whence they afterwards took upon them the Names of Knights-Templars. The Patriarch and Biſhops gave them for Employment the Guard of the High-Roads that led to Jeruſalem, to defend the Pilgrims from Robbers. The firſt great Prior of this Order was this Hugh de Paganis to whom this Treatiſe of St. Bernard is dedicated. In the Beginning of this Inſtitution they were but nine Knights, but afterwards their Number ſoon encreaſed. Their Inſtitution was approved of by the Council of Troyes, in the Year 1128. who drew up the Rules they were to Obſerve; ſome believe they were drawn by St. Bernard, but it is certain that it was John de St. Michael, nam'd by the Council and by St. Bernard, who drew them up according to the Relation of the great Prior and the other Knights, and as may appear in the Prologue of theſe Rules. The Treatiſe of St. Bernard which we ſpeak of, does not conſiſt of Rules, but is an Elogium on this Order, and an Exhortation to the Knights of the Temple, to acquit themſelves well of their Duty. The World bears (ſays he) with Aſtoniſhment, that there is a new Militia eſtabliſh'd in the Country, which Chriſt honoured with his Corporal Preſence, to the End, that as he had exterminated the Prince of Darkneſs from thence by the force of his Arm, he might likewiſe at preſent drive away his Guards by the proweſs of his Courageous Soldiers, and conſequently redeem his People anew. This kind of Militia is altogether new, and paſt Ages have known nothing like it. They are ingaged in two Combates at once, one againſt the Fleſh, and the other againſt the Enemies of Chriſt; in one they reſiſt a Corporal Foe by force of Arms, and in the other declare War againſt Vice and the Devil. He adds, That the Occaſion and Deſign of this Inſtitution is not leſs to be admir'd; for whereas all Wars among Men, are either begun on Account of Anger, Ambition or Vain Glory, or out of a Deſire of getting Poſſeſſion of Something, and the End propos'd is always ſome Temporal Intereſt. Theſe Knights of the Temple acted by a quite different Motive, and had quite another End in their Enterprizes. Their Buſineſs was to fight the Battles of the Lord, without fear of Sinning, if they kill'd their Enemies; or Periſhing, if they were kill'd themſelves; becauſe whether they kill or were kill'd, it was altogether to further the Cauſe of Jeſus Chriſt. In a Word, the Lives and Behaviour of theſe Knights ought to ſhame all thoſe, who now-a-days practiſe the Art of War, for they did nothing but by Command of their Prior, had nothing but what he gave them, us'd nothing Superfluous in their Habits, liv'd regularly without Wives and Children, pretended to nothing of their own, nor even ſo much as wiſh'd for more than they had; they moreover never gave their Minds to any Sports, delighted in no Shows, nor ſought after any Honour, but wiſely and diligently waited for the Victory of the Lord. After this great Commendation, St. Bernard exhorts them to acquit themſelves courageouſly in their ſeveral Poſts, having always a ſtrict Regard not to prophane the Holy Places upon which he makes divers Myſtical Reflections.

St. Bernard.

St. Bernards Treatiſe of the Degrees of Humility and Pride.

The firſt of the Works compos'd by St. Bernard, is his Treatiſe on the Degrees of Humility and Pride, which follow in order of the Edition, the Treatiſe which we have juſt mentioned before. The Title ſufficiently acquaints you with the Subject: It ſuffices to obſerve that it is very moving, conſiſting of Abundance of Piety and good Matter.

St. Bernards Treatiſe of the Love of God.

The Treatiſe of the Love of God was written ſome Time after the foregoing. St. Bernard therein treats of the Manner, Reaſons, Source, Degrees and Obligation of loving God. He ſays, that the Manner of loving God, is to love him without Reſerve; the Reaſon of loving him, is becauſe he is God, and loves us; for the Recompence of loving him, is the Love it ſelf which makes our Happineſs; then that the Source and Origin of this Love is Charity, which God affords us through Mercy. Laſtly, that four Degrees of this Love may be diſcover'd; the firſt is that by which Men love themſelves; the ſecond, whereby they love God for their own Sakes; the third, by which they love God, both for him and themſelves; and the fourth, whereby they love God on his Account only. This fourth Degree is the ſupream Perfection to which it is impoſſible to arrive in this Life, which even the Martyrs never did, and which the Souls of the Bleſſed cannot attain to, till they are ſeparated from their Bodies, to which they have always a natural Tendency. He moreover diſtinguiſhes Chaſt and Pure Love from that which is intereſſed; the Love of Slaves from that of Children, and at length, in reſpect of the Obligation to the Love of God he ſhews that it is Natural ſo to do, and that it has an univerſal Influence upon Mankind.

St. Bernards Treatiſe of Grace and Free-will.

The Treatiſe of Grace and Free-Will, addreſs'd to William Abbot of St. Thierry, was written by St. Bernard, about the Year 1128. upon occaſion of a Conference in which a certain Perſon had objected to him, that he had allowed too much to Grace, becauſe that ſpeaking of the Graces which God had done him, he had ſaid that God had prevented him in doing Good, for that he ow'd to his divine Grace all the Progreſs which he had made therein, and that he hop'd that he would in Time grant him a full Perfection. One of the Standers by, hearing him talk thus, ſaid to

St. Bernard.

to him, What have you done then of your self, and what reward can you expect when you confess God has done all? This Question occasion'd St. Bernard to write upon this Subject to explain the Agreement of Free-Will with Grace. He therein follows the Principles of St. Austin, and first he says, that Free-Will is saved by Grace, together with which it cooperates in consenting voluntarily to its Motions; that this Consent is effected by Grace it self, but that it is not less Free, because it is without constraint and voluntary. Where-ever there is Consent (says he) there is a Will, and where there is a Will, there is a Freedom or Liberty. Ubi voluntas, ibi Libertas: The Will is a reasonable Movement, which presides over the Senses, and the Appetite which Reason accompanies, follows and instructs without imposing any Force on it, so as that it may either incline to ill by pursuing inordinate Desires, or to Good, by following Grace. The Will only is capable of both Happiness and Misery, and 'tis by its Consent and Approbation, that Men are either Wicked or Good, Happy or Miserable. He afterwards divides Freedom into three Sorts, 1. Freedom or Exemption from Sin. 2. Freedom or Exemption from Misery. 3. Freedom or Exemption from Necessity. He calls the last Freedom that of Nature, the second, that of Grace, and the first, the Freedom of Life or Glory; for first, says he, Man was made an excellent Creature, with a Will altogether Free; secondly, he has been re-establish'd in Innocence to be a new Creature in Jesus Christ; thirdly, he is translated into Glory, to become a perfect Creature in Spirit. The Freedom of Necessity is to be found in all rational Creatures in whatever Condition they be; in Angels as well as Men, in the Blessed as well as the Damn'd, in the Righteous as well as the Wicked. They that would do well and cannot, are free from this Freedom, but they are not nevertheless free from the Freedom of Sin, which ought rather to be call'd free Advice than Free-Will. This second Freedom is found only in such as have Grace, as the Freedom of Misery, which he calls Liberum Complacitum, is to be met with alone among the Blessed, because those only can enjoy the Good that pleases them, and be exempt from the Ill that displeases them, they being only endued with Grace that can do Good, Grace being absolutely requisite to do it; so the Will of Free-Will to be absolutely Perfect, has need of two Gifts of God, viz. of Conversion to Good and Confirmation in it, the first is granted through Grace to the Just in this Life, and the second is the Effect of Beatitude. The first Man, over and above the Freedom of Nature, had likewise the Freedom of Counsel and the Freedom of Compliance, but nevertheless in an imperfect Degree; for these two Freedoms have both their Degrees, one being Superior, and the other Inferior. The first Man in the State of Innocence had this last, but lost it by his Fall, insomuch that he afterwards retain'd only Free-Will. He fell by his Crime, and the ill Use he made of his Will, but then he could not raise himself again by the same Power, by reason that he might not have fell unless he had so pleas'd, but being once Fallen, it was not allow'd him to Rise. What then says one, is Man's Free-Will lost because he cannot avoid Sinning? No, answers he, but rather the Free-Warning he had not to Sin. He says moreover, That 'tis by Reason of this treble Liberty of the first Man, that he was created after the Image, and in the Resemblance of his Maker; that the Blessed have this Resemblance in the greatest Perfection, because they enjoy this treble Freedom, after a more excellent Manner than the first Man, and that those redeemed by Jesus Christ, during their stay on Earth, through Grace receive a Part of this Freedom, because that though they cannot be altogether free from Sin and Misery, yet with the Assistance of Grace, they may be able to prevent being Over-come by Sin and Misery. Let no body think then, says he, that Free-Will is so call'd because it keeps as it were, the Will in balance betwixt Good and Evil, in a manner that it can do one as easily as the other, for if this were so, neither God, the Angels nor Saints, who can do no Ill, could be exempted from doing it no more than the very Devils, who can do no Good. It is rather call'd Free-Will, because let the Will be inclin'd either to Good or Ill, it is still Free, it being in the power of no Person to be either Good or Bad, without the Consent of his Will: Now Grace does not take away this Freedom, because it sets the Will at Work, and changes the Evil to Good; but nevertheless, by its free Consent: So those who act through fear of Death or Punishment, do not fail to act with Freedom, because the Will cannot be constrain'd but by its self, and that cannot be forc'd by a Violence purely passive on its own Part. That in a word, excepting original Sin only, all others are an Effect of the Will which inclines to Sin without being oblig'd by any exterior Force: That we cannot pretend to any Thing meritorious without Grace, but also that Grace cannot make us to merit without our Will. Merit consists in the Consent that Free-Will gives to Grace, but at the same time this Consent does not proceed from Free-Will, because that cannot have a good Thought of it self, and that God is the Occasion of all Good in us, whether it be the Product of Thought, Will or Action, for he does as it were prevent us by inspiring us with good Thoughts, and changes our bad Will by making us consent to Good, which he alone causes us to perform. That he Effects the first without us, the second with us, and the third by us, for the Beginning of our Salvation proceeds from God; we our selves are not the Occasions of it, neither are we present at its being done, but the Consent and Action, although they do not proceed from us, yet are they not without us, insomuch, that we ought to take care when we feel good Motions in us, not to attribute them to our Will which is weak, but to the sole Grace of God. These are the Principles and Maxims which St. Bernard establishes in this Treatise, which agree with the Doctrine of St. Austin, concerning the Nature of Free-Will, and the Necessity and Efficacy of Grace, without which Man could not perform any Thing towards his Salvation.

St. Bernard.

The tenth Treatise of St. Bernard, is a Letter address'd to Hugh of St. Victor, against some Opinions which an Anonymous Author had laid down; which were,

St. Bernard's Letter to Hugh of St. Victor.

1. That the Baptism of Jesus Christ had been obligatory, ever since our Saviour had said to Nicodemus, Whoever is not born anew by Water and the Holy Spirit, shall never enter into the Kingdom of Heaven.

2. That no Body can be sav'd without actually receiving the Sacrament of Baptism, or Martyrdom in its stead.

3. That the Patriarchs of the Old Testament had as clear a Knowledge of the Incarnation as the Christians.

4. That there is no such thing as a Sin of Ignorance.

5. That St. Bernard was mistaken in that Passage of his Homilies, where he says, that even the Angels were not acquainted with God's Design touching the Incarnation.

As to the first, he says that it would be a hard Case, that what Jesus Christ spoke in Particular, should be taken for a general Precept, to oblige all Mankind. He is of Opinion, that Original Sin was remitted to the Jews by Circumcision, during the time of the ancient Law, and to the Faithful amongst the Gentiles, either by their own Faith, or by that of their Parents, and that the Obligation of being baptiz'd under Penalty of Damnation, did not commence till after the Promulgation of the Gospel.

As to the second, he is of Opinion that the Adult may be sav'd without actually receiving Baptism, if so be they cannot be baptized, although they desire it, because that actual Baptism is here supply'd by Faith and Vows. This he proves from divers Passages out of St. Ambrose and St. Austin, who (says he) are two Authorities which I cannot possibly dissent from, but with whom I am always resolved to be, either in the right or the wrong. He adds, that what supplies Baptism in case of Martyrdom is not the Pain, but the Faith of him that suffers. In relation to Infants who can have no Faith, he owns that they cannot be saved without Baptism, although they might be sav'd by the Faith of others, when they actually receive it.

As to the third, he says that if the Faithful of the Old Law had as clear a Knowledge of our Mysteries, as we our selves, God would have been either too liberal to them, or too reserv'd towards us: That the Gospel would not have been then above the Law; that St. Paul would have been in the wrong, to boast that he and the other Apostles receiv'd the first Fruits of the Spirit of God; that this would be to do a considerable Injury to St. John Baptist. And lastly, that the Prophets have not been all equally enlightned with our Mysteries, and that even among Christians, some have more Knowledge in those Matters than others.

As to the fourth, he affirms that there are Sins of Ignorance, and that the Author of this Proposition ought to agree with him, since he has before maintain'd that the Precept of Baptism given to Nicodemus in private, obliged those who could have no Knowledge of it; that it was moreover evident by the Holy Scriptures, that there are Sins of Ignorance, for that the Prophet David expresly prays to God not to lay his Sins of Ignorance to his Charge; also Moses speaks of Sins committed through Ignorance, and St. Paul is said to have persecuted the Church without knowing what the Church was; and our Saviour Christ beg'd of his Father to forgive them that crucify'd him, in that they were ignorant of the Sin they committed.

The Life of St. Malachy, &c.

As to the fifth, he explains what he had said concerning the Angels, knowing nothing of the Mystery of the Incarnation, before Gabriel came to acquaint the Virgin of the Circumstances of Time, and Place of the Incarnation, the Manner thereof, and the Person chosen to be the Mother of God.

We will forbear speaking of the Treatise against the Errors of Abaelard, till we come to the History of that Author, so that there remains no more of the Treatises of St. Bernard in this second Tome, than the Life of St. Malachy, and the Tract concerning Singing, neither of which require any Observation.

St. Bernards Sermons.

The third Tome contains St. Bernard's Sermons throughout the whole Year, upon the several Feasts, and other Matters matters of Moment. Theſe are his other Works, being writ with an elaborate Spirit, and abounding with lively and ſolid Thoughts, very proper to move the Heart. He preach'd moſt of them to his Monks, whom moſt commonly he exhorted publickly every Day. Father Mabillon ſhews in his Preface, that although there might have been ſeveral Converts among theſe Monks who did not underſtand Latin, yet for the moſt Part theſe Sermons were delivered in that Language, as their Style ſufficiently demonſtrates. He owns alſo that St. Bernard might ſometimes have preach'd in the Vulgar Tongue, for the Benefit of thoſe that did not underſtand Latin.

St. Bernard.

The laſt Tome of the firſt Volume of St. Bernard's Works, contains his Sermons upon the Canticles, amounting to the Number of 86, and being upon the two firſt Chapters, and the firſt Verſe of the third Chapter, they comprehended an infinite Number of both Moral and Spiritual Thoughts which he draws out of the Words of the Text, either by explaining the Text after a Myſtical Manner, or giving it an allegorical Senſe, or adapting it to other Subjects. It is a wonderful Thing to conſider how ready he is at this Manner of Writing, and how he could be capable of compoſing ſo vaſt a Work of ſuch different Matters upon two ſuch ſhort Chapters as thoſe of the Canticles.

Gilbert Abbot of Hoiland.

The ſecond Volume of Works that go under St. Bernard's Name, is divided into two Tomes. The firſt contains a Continuation of the Commentary on the Canticles. This belongs to Gilbert of Hoiland, a little Iſland between England and Scotland, where there was a Monaſtery of Monks and Nuns, whereof he was Abbot, depending on the Biſhop of Lincoln. He was of the Order of Ciſteaux, and dy'd in the Year 1172. in a Monaſtery of the Dioceſs of Troyes in Champagne. This Continuation is of the ſame Nature with the Work of St. Bernard. and is divided into forty eight Sermons, all which do not go beyond the 10*th*. Verſe of the 5*th*. Chapter. This is follow'd by ſeven other Aſcetical Treatiſes, and four Letters by the ſame Author.

This Tome contains ſeveral other Tracts, attributed to St. Bernard, although it is certain he was not the Author of them.

William Abbot of St. Thierry.

The firſt is a Letter or a Book addreſs'd to the Friars of Mont-dieu, which is a Charter-Houſe in the Dioceſs of Rheims near Monzon. This Book has been quoted under the Name of St. Bernard, by Gerſon and others; but nevertheleſs, ſeveral ancient Manuſcripts aſſure us that it was written by William Abbot of St. Thierry, ſince Monk of Signy, as well as the Treatiſes of the Contemplation of God, and that of the Nature and Dignity of Love, both which go under St. Bernard's Name, and come next after. This William was Native of Liege; he came to Rheims with his Brother Simon; they embraced a Monaſtick Life in the Monaſtery of St. Nicaiſe; afterwards Simon was made Abbot of St. Nicolas, in the Dioceſs of Laon, and William ſucceeded Geofrey, tranſlated from the Abby of St. Thierry, to that of St. Medard of Soiſſons, in the Year 1120. He had a very particular Correſpondence with St. Bernard, and retir'd to the Monaſtery of Signy of the Order of Ciſteaux, in the Year 1135. where he dy'd about the Year 1150. His Works over and above the firſt Book, being the Life of St. Bernard, and the three Treatiſes juſt mention'd, comprehend a Treatiſe call'd the Mirror of Faith; another intituled the Ænigma of Faith; a Book of Meditation; a Treatiſe of the Nature of the Body and the Soul; another againſt Abaelard; a Book of the Works of William de Conches; a Treatiſe upon the Sacrament of the Altar; and laſtly, an Expoſition of the Canticles. All theſe Works are to be met with in the fourth Tome of the Bibliotheque of Ciſteaux. There is moreover Mention made of a Collection of Proverbs and Sentences, being only a Manuſcript, with ſome other Works, which are loſt. The Abridgment of the two firſt Chapters of the Canticles, which immediately follows the preceding Works is only an Extract of remarkable Things in the one and fifty firſt Sermons of St. Bernard upon the Canticles.

Gregory Abbot of Igny.

The Declamations and Diſcourſes on the Words of St. Peter with our Saviour Chriſt, are the Work of Geofrey Abbot of Igny, extracted out of the ſeveral Works of St. Bernard whoſe Diſciple he was.

Guigue Author of the Ladder of the Cloyſter.

The Treatiſe of the Ladder of the Cloyſter, or the Method of Praying, which was found among the Works both of St. Auſtin and St. Bernard, has been ſince reſtor'd to Guigue, Prior of the Grand Charter-Houſe, upon the Credit of a Manuſcript of the Charter-Houſe of Colen, having in the Beginning of it a Letter of this Guigue, addreſs'd to Gervaſe, and which ſerves for a Preface to the Book.

Works belonging to Anonymous Authors, found among thoſe of St. Bernard.

The pious Meditations concerning the Knowledge of Human Nature, found amongſt the Works of Hugh of St. Victor, belong neither to him nor St. Bernard, but rather to ſome more modern Author.

The Treatiſe of the Edification of the Inner Houſe or of Conſcience, found alſo among the Works of Hugh of St. Victor, belongs to ſome Monk, in all probability of the Order of Ciſteaux, who liv'd much about the ſame Time with St. Bernard. The ſame Judgment may be given concerning another Treatiſe of Conſcience, and of another Treatiſe of the model of Life and Manners, which follows this. St. Bernard.

The Treatiſe of Charity is compoſed of Matters drawn out of the Works of Richard of St. Victor, Peter of Blois, and of St Bernard.

The Treatiſe entituled the Myſtical Vine, upon the Words of our Saviour Chriſt, I am the true Vine, though it does not belong to St. Bernard, yet was written by ſome Author not long after him.

The Meditation on the Paſſion and Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt, which bears the Name of St. Bernard in ſome Manuſcripts, yet is not at all like his Stile, no more than the Lamentation on the Paſſion of our Saviour, and the Treatiſe on the three principal Myſteries of our Religion.

The Treatiſe of Virtues is not likewiſe of St. Bernard's Stile, but rather belongs to ſome Benedictin Monk, who writ it for Probationers, on the three Virtues of Humility, Obedience and Charity.

The Expoſition on the Lord's Prayer belongs to the ſame Author.

Theſe Treatiſes are follow'd by ſome Sermons of St. Aelreda, of Nicholas Diſciple and Secretary to St. Bernard, who came from the Monaſtery of Monſtier-Ramey to Clairvaux, and who left this in Diſguſt to St. Bernard; of Oger, Abbot of Lucedio, in the Dioceſs of Verceil, who liv'd a little while after St. Bernard; and of ſome other Sermons whoſe Authors are unknown; but which are attributed to St. Bernard, together with ſome other Opuſcula of Piety of the ſame Nature, without Authors Names, among which there is a Treatiſe on theſe Words, Why are you come? Which is printed in the Bibliotheca Patrum, under the Name of David of Augsbourg, of the Order of Minorites, with another Treatiſe on the Manner of living well, dedicated by an Anonymous Author to his Siſter.

This Tome ends with ſome pieces of Proſe, likewiſe falſely attributed to St. Bernard.

The Works of Guerric Abbot of Igny.

The ſixth Tome contains the Sermons of Guerric, Abbot of Igny, whom St. Bernard brought to Clairvaux, in the Year 1131. from Tournay, where he was a Canon, and whom he had made Abbot of Igny, about the Year 1138. after that Humbert had laid down. Some Spiritual Letters of Guigue, fifth Prior of the Grand Charter-Houſe, Author of the ancient Statutes of this Order. And the Hiſtorians of the Life of St. Bernard, whereof the firſt Book was compoſed, as we have ſaid before, by William Abbot of St. Thierry. The ſecond by Arnaud, Abbot of Bonneval, and the three laſt by Geofrey, Secretary and Diſciple to St. Bernard, who had before been a follower of Abaelard, and who after having been Abbot of Igny, ſucceeded in the Year 1162. in the Abby of Clairvaux at Faſtrede, and in the Year 1175. retir'd to Foſſa Nova in Italy, of which he was Abbot, as alſo afterwards of Haute-Combe, about the End of this Century. He alſo writ a Commentary on the Canticles, the Life of St. Peter of Tarantaiſe, and divers other Treatiſes or Sermons which were never Printed. Cardinal Baronius has given us a Letter of this Geofrey, addreſs'd to Henry Cardinal-Biſhop of Albany, againſt Gilbert of La Porre, which Father Mabillon has alſo placed at the End of this Volume, together with a Sermon of the ſame Author for the Anniverſary on the Death of St. Bernard, and a Letter of the ſame to Joſbert on the Lord's Prayer. Works of Geofrey, Diſciple to St. Bernard.

The Hiſtory of the Miracles of St. Bernard.

The five Books of the Life of St. Bernard are follow'd by two Others containing an Account of his Miracles, one whereof conſiſts of divers Pieces, that is of three Letters. One of Philip a Monk of Clairvaux to Sampſon Archbiſhop of Rheims. The other writ by the Monks of this Monaſtery to the Clergy of Colen, and the third by Geofrey Abbot of Igny to the Biſhop of Conſtance: The ſecond is drawn out of the Book entituled the Great Beginning of the Order of Ciſteaux.

Other Lives of St. Bernard.

Beſides theſe Authors Father Mabillon gives us likewiſe the Life of St. Bernard compos'd by Alanus, who from being Abbot of Larivoir was made Biſhop of Auxerre in the Year 1153. and retir'd to Clairvaux in the Year 1161 where he dy'd in the Year 1181. Alſo ſome Fragments of a third Life of St. Bernard which was believ'd to belong to Geofrey. And a fourth Life of St. Bernard written about the Year 1180. by John the Hermit, who had liv'd with St. Bernard's Diſciples. He alſo adds a Poem of the Monk Philotheus of the Life and Praiſes of St. Bernard, with Verſes likewiſe of other Authors in his Commendation. And laſtly the Bull of the Canonization of this Saint together with the Teſtimonies that divers Authors had given of him, which concludes this Volume.

Nicholas. a Monk of Clairvaux.

He might alſo have put into this Volume the Letters of Nicholas of Clairvaux Secretary to St. Bernard, publiſh'd by Father Pitart a Regular Canon of St. Victor, and inſerted in the 22*d*. Tome of the laſt Bibliotheca Patrum. They are about fifty five all full of wit and Written in a very engaging Style; but they contain nothing remarkable either on Account of Doctrine or Church-Diſcipline. This Nicholas after

St. Bernard.

after having left Clairvaux, retir'd into his Monastery of Monstier-Ramey, where he dy'd about the Year 1180. M. Baluze has also given us two of his Letters in the second Tome of his Miscellaneous Works.

The Character and Judgment of St. Bernard.

St. Bernard's Stile is lively, noble and concise; his Thoughts sublime and his Diction pleasant and curious. He equally abounds with good Matter, Tenderness and Force. He is sweet and violent: He engages the Mind by his insinuating Manner, and touches the Heart with his Movements. His Exhortations are pressing; his Admonitions full of Gravity; his Reprimands efficacious; his Reproaches so temper'd with good Nature, that it is easy to perceive that he is in Charity with the Person that he rallies, and reproves rather to correct than to insult or domineer over him. He knows how to commend without Flattery, and to tell Truth without offending. He diverts, recreats and pleases; he instils Dread and inspires Love; his Knowledge is more useful and wholsome Doctrine than curious Learning. He is so full of the Holy Scriptures, that scarce a Period passes but he has some Words or Expressions out of them. St. Ambrose and St. Austine are those of the Fathers which he has follow'd most, and which he considers as two Patterns that he is indispensably bound to imitate. He also understood very well the Canons and Rules of Discipline of the Church; but he more particularly apply'd himself to Divinity and Morality. His moral Sentences are noble, lively, weighty, and contain a great Deal of Sense in few Words. He is ingenious and very fertil in Allegories. He treats of Doctrines after the Manner of the Ancients, and not according to the Methods of the Scholasticks, and Controversiaries of his Time, which has gain'd him the Title of the Last of the Fathers. Altho' he has taken most of his Thoughts from the Ancients, yet has he manag'd them with so great Address that they seem to be his own. He was in so great Reputation for Piety and Learning while he liv'd, that all Potentates desir'd to have their Differences determin'd by him, and they look'd upon his Decisions as indispensible Laws. The proudest Kings and Princes have willingly condescended to obey him. The Bishops not only had Recourse to his Knowledge, but likewise regarded his Decisions as so many Oracles; and have referr'd themselves to him about the most important Affairs of the Church. The Popes themselves have taken his Advice, and look'd upon it as the greatest Support of the Holy See. And all People had a very profound Respect and particular Veneration for his Person and Character. In a Word, it may be said of him, that even in his Solitude, he govern'd all the Churches of the West. But what is most remarkable is, that he knew how to join the Love of Silence and a Retreat with so many Occupations and Imploys, as likewise a profound Humility with so great an Elevation.

Editions of St. Bernard's Works.

No Father of the Church has had his Works so often Printed as St. Bernard. The first Edition is that of his Sermons on the Times and Saints, printed with his Book dedicated to the Knights Templars, in the Year 1475. at Mayence by Peter Schoiffer. About the same Time the Treatise of Consideration, the Apology to William Abbot of St. Thierry, and the Treatise of Commands and Dispensations were printed at Roan. In the Year 1481. his Letters with his Sermons were printed at Brussels. This Edition was followed by that of Paris, in the Year 1494. which contains 310 Letters with his Sermons on the Canticles. The Editions of Bresse of the Year 1495. of Spires in the Year 1501. and of Venice in the Year 1503. are also very imperfect. That of Paris in the Year 1508. contains almost all this Saint's Works: They were collected by the Care of John Bouchard and printed by John Petit. In the Year 1515. Josse Clicton printed them at Lyons with the Sermons of Gilbert de Hoiland on the Canticles. This Edition has been several Times reprinted at Paris and Lyons. In the Year 1520. two Monks of Clairvaux publish'd a new Edition of St. Bernard's Works more correct than the former, printed the first Time at Lyons. Some time after Francis Comestor of the College of Sorbonne revis'd the Works of this Saint, and printed a new Edition at Paris in the Year 1547. Whilst this Edition was selling and reprinting, Anthony Marcellin publish'd another at Basil in the Year 1552. In which St. Bernard's Works are rang'd after a new Order, and divided into four Parts: The first containing his Sermons, the second his Letters, the third his Treatises, and the fourth his suppos'd Works. In the Year 1566. Francis Comestor's Edition was reprinted as printed with the Additions found in the Edition of Basil and some other Treatises. After this John Gillot undertook to present the Publick a new Edition of St. Bernard's Works, more correct and more ample than the former: This was printed at Paris by Nivelle in the Year 1572. and afterwards reprinted several Times, particularly in the Year 1586. In the Beginning of the following Century, Edmund Tiraqueau a Monk of Cisteaux publish'd a new Edition of St. Bernard's Works, in the Year 1601. And eight Years after John Picart gave another which was reprinted several Times in divers Places. At length James Merlon Horstius labour'd seriously to get a good Edition of this Father's Works, and after a considerable Time, and a great deal of Pains taken, he produc'd one, and printed it in the Year 1641. This Edition was receiv'd with Applause, and reprinted in divers Places. Nevertheless Horstius having past over several Faults in the Text, which might be corrected by Assistance of the Manuscripts, Father Chantelon of the Congregation of St. Maur undertook to revise his Edition, and presented the Publick with his Sermons on the Times, and the Saints corrected, in several Places. This Father dying before he had finish'd his Design, Father Mabillon was pitched upon to continue what he had so well begun, who publish'd this Saint's Works entire, in the Year 1666. in a great and small Volume, according to the Model of Horstius, and review'd and corrected by divers Manuscripts. But as this Edition was the first Work of this learned Monk, he sometime after discovered several Errors which he had pretermitted before, and therefore undertook a second Impression at Paris, in two Volumes in Folio, in the Year 1690. In which the Order is altogether new, and which is moreover enrich'd with fine Prefaces, and divers short Notes at the Bottom of the Pages, and which reach to the End of first Volume. It is this Edition we have follow'd in these Extracts which we have made.

St. Bernard.

CHAP. V.

The Life and Writings of Peter, sirnam'd the Venerable, Abbot of Cluny.

Peter the Venerable.

PEter Maurice sirnam'd the Venerable, the ninth Abbot of Cluny, descended from a noble Family of Auvergne. His Father Maurice, and his Mother Rangarda presented him to the Monastery of Cluny, where he took upon him the Habit of that Order at the Hands of Hugh the first Abbot of Cluny of that Name. Whilst Pontius was Abbot he was made Prior of Vezelay, and then of Domnus; and at last elected Abbot of Cluny in the Year 1123. on our Lady's Assumption-day, when he was but thirty Years old or thereabouts. He dy'd in the Year 1157. on Christmas-day.

Whilst he was Abbot he wrote a great many Letters, of which they have made a Collection divided into six Books. In the last Book is inserted a Treatise against the Jews, and another Tract against the Petrobusians. He likewise compos'd two Books, containing the Narratives of several Miracles which happen'd in his Time; four Sermons; a particular Letter against those who maintain'd that Jesus Christ was not in express Terms call'd God in the Gospel; several Pieces of Prose, one an Encomium of our Saviour, another upon St. Benedict, a third upon the Resurrection of our Saviour, a fourth in Honour of St. Hugh; two Hymns, the one upon the Virgin Mary, and the other upon Mary Magdalene; and a Discourse in Prose upon the Virgin Mary. He procured the Alcoran to be turn'd out of Arabick into Latin, and made a Treatise to refute it in Opposition to Mahometanism.

Peter the Venerable.

We have almost all these Works printed a-part at Paris in the Year 1522. at Ingoldstat in 1546. in the Library of Cluny, and in the last Bibliotheca Patrum.

Among this Author's Letters there are several which contain several considerable Points, both of the History and the Discipline of these Times; so that we cannot forbear giving you an Abstract of them.

The first Letter of the first Book is directed to Pope Innocent II. He acquaints him that the Archbishop of Bourdeaux who was a zealous Promoter of the Interests of his Holiness, had given him Intelligence of the News he had receiv'd: That he was heartily glad at the happy Success of his Affairs, and that he congratulated him for the great Care he took in reforming the Church. He declares to him that he is very much concern'd that he is not in a Posture of being an Assistant in so great an Undertaking. He exhorts him to persevere in the vigorous Maintenance of his Dignity, in hopes that God, who had already subdu'd Part of his Enemies, would at last bring the rest under his Feet. He assures him, that he shall always be inviolably at the Devotion of his Holiness, and that where, or in what Circumstance soever he should be, he would always regard him as the Soveraign Pontiff. In the Close of this Letter he intreats

Peter the Venerable.

the Pope to remember, that the Church increaſed at firſt by Sufferings and Perſecutions, and that it ſurmounted all Oppoſition by Patience: That he had combated againſt its Enemies ſeven Years already, that in the eighth it was to be hop'd, he would ſing Praiſes of Joy and Exultation. This Concluſion makes it appear, that this Letter was wrote in the ſeventh Year of the Pontificate of Innocent II. Anno Chriſti 1137.

In the ſecond of the ſame Book he wrote Word to the Biſhop of Albany, that the Biſhop of Troyes was ready to beſtow one of the Prebends of his Church on the Monks of Cluny, as formerly the Prebends of Chartres and Orleans had been beſtow'd on them. He intreats him to promote this Buſineſs at Rome, if he thought in Conſcience he could ſafely do it. He likewiſe intreats him to prevail upon the Pope to remit to him the Trial of a Prieſt within his Juriſdiction, who was gone to Piſa, where the Court of Rome then was, in order to have his Cauſe heard there.

In the third he wrote to Haimeric Chancellor of the Church of Rome, concerning the Affair of the Monks of Aniana, who had preferr'd great Complaints againſt the Biſhop of Bezius. He therein takes Notice, that in his Time the Members of the Church were very much disjoynted in his Country, that the Superiors inſulted over the Inferiors, and the Biſhops over the Monks; ſo that, ſays he, it ſeems as if their Aim and Deſign was not to feed their Flocks like Shepherds, but fleece and drain them like Hirelings.

In the fourth he acquainted Hugh Archbiſhop of Roan, of the Death of one of his Clerks, whom he had aſſiſted in the laſt Moment of his Life. He takes Notice that they had given him the Extreme Unction before the Viaticum, and that afterwards he receiv'd the Sacrament twice.

In the eleventh he intreats Pope Innocent to be favourable to the Church of Orleans, by confirming the Election of Heli Abbot of St. Sulpicius to the Biſhoprick of that Church.

By the fifteenth he acquaints Adela of the Death of Henry King of England, who departed this Life on the 2*d*. of December, 1135. after he had receiv'd all his Sacraments, as he obſerves in this Letter.

In the ſeventeenth he acquainted Pope Innocent II. of the Murders committed on the Subdean of Orleans, and Thomas Archdeacon of Paris, and prays him to confirm, by his Apoſtolick Authority, the Sentence paſs'd in France againſt the Murderers.

The twentieth, directed to Monk Ciſtebert, contains a long Inſtruction about the Duties and Virtues of Monks.

In the twenty third he declares to Pope Innocent that he had much ado to reſolve upon ſending any of his Religious to re-eſtabliſh the Abby of Luxeu, becauſe he fear'd it would prejudice his Monaſtery by drawing off the Monks from thence; and that beſides it was eaſier to found new Monaſteries than to re-eſtabliſh old ones: That however in Obedience to the Commands of his Holineſs, he had offer'd to the Monks of the Abby of Luxeu, who had waited upon him, to ſend them an Abbot and ſome Officers; but that they had rejected the Religious which he had offer'd them. He intreats the Pope, that if they were ſtill reſolv'd to have a Monk of Cluny for their Abbot, he would not grant them Liberty to chooſe whom they pleas'd, but order them to be ſatisfy'd with his Choice.

In the twenty ſeventh he complains to the ſame Pope, of the Outrages offer'd to the Archbiſhops, Biſhops and Abbots, among whom he was preſent in the Town of Luni.

The twenty eighth is an Apology for the Order of Cluny againſt that of Ciſteaux, directed to St. Bernard; wherein after he had paſs'd ſeveral Compliments upon him for his Learning and Piety, he relates the Points, upon which the Monks of Ciſteaux pretended, that thoſe of Cluny deviated from the Rule of St. Benedict; which are as follow. 1. That they beſtow'd the Monaſtick Habit on Novices aſſoon as they were preſented, without ſtaying till their Probation Year was over, according as the Rule preſcribes. 2. That they made uſe of Habits made with Skins. 3. That they wore Breeches always, though it was not permitted by the Rule, unleſs in caſe of Travelling. 4. That they had thicker covering on their Beds than was preſcribed by the Rule. 5. That they had more than two Diſhes ſerv'd up at Table with a ſecond Courſe. 6. That they always admitted the religious Apoſtates, tho' the Rule preſcribes that they ſhould admit them only thrice. 7. That they did not obſerve the Faſts which the Rule preſcribed. 8. That they did not inure themſelves to any Manufacture. 9. That when they entertain'd Strangers, they did not bow to them, and that the Abbot did not waſh their Hands and Feet, as the Rule preſcribes. 10. That the Abbot kept not an Inventory of all the Tools and Utenſils of the Monaſtery. 11. That when they are out of their Monaſtery, they do not bow the Knee, as uſual in ſaying their Office. 12. That the Table of the Abbot is not ſet apart for the Entertainment of Strangers. 13. That when two Monks chance to meet, the Younger does not ask Bleſſing of the Elder. 14. That they do not make one of the eldeſt Monks Porter of the Monaſtery Gate. 15. That the Porter does not reply Deo Gratias, i. e. Praiſed be God, to thoſe who knock at the Gate of the Monaſtery. 16. That they renew the Vows that they have made in one Monaſtery, when they admit themſelves into another. 17. That they admit the Monks of another Monaſtery into theirs, without the Leave of their Abbot. 18. That they would be exempted from the Juriſdiction of their Biſhop. 19. That they hold Pariſhes and Tenths, which are only the Propriety of thoſe who preach and adminiſter the Sacraments. 20. That they are Poſſeſſors of Lands, and concern themſelves with the Affairs and Buſineſs of this Life, as if they were mere Seculars having Territories, Seignories, Vaſſals, Banks, and Monks who are imploy'd as Sollicitors and Advocates.

Peter the Venerable.

He returns a Reply to all theſe Objections, in the Name of the Monks of Cluny, and at firſt ſays in general, that they who make thoſe Objections, are an upſtart Sort of Phariſees, who were for diſtinguiſhing themſelves from other Folks, and would be reckoned better than them. He asks them, how it comes to paſs that they who boaſt to be ſuch ſtrict Obſervers of the Rule, forget at the ſame Time the Obſervation of one Article, wherein the Monks are enjoyn'd, not only to call, but alſo ſincerely to eſteem themſelves to be the Refuſe and Vileſt of all Mankind. 'Is it, 'ſays he, the Effects of this Article, which injoyns us to 'believe and aſſert our ſelves to be worſe than others, to 'undervalue their Actions, and overprize our own, to contemn them, and ſet too high an Eſteem upon our ſelves? '———You ſtile your ſelves the only true Monks now 'extant in the World, and treat all other Monks as Impoſtors and Corrupt; you wear an Habit of extraordinary 'Colour to diſtinguiſh your ſelves from others, and you 'brag to be the white Monks in the midſt of black ones, 'though the black Habit was made Choice of by our Fa'thers out of Humility; and though we read that St. Martin, that admirable true Monk, wore a long black Habit, 'and not a ſhort white one as yours is. Now don't you 'violate the Rule of which you pretend to be ſo great Obſervers, ſince it declares it ſelf againſt Monks being con'cerned for the Colour or the Quality of the Stuff which 'they wear? Are not you Prevaricators in changing that 'Colour which is moſt conformable to Humility and Auſterity, for another more glaring and the Emblem of 'Joy.

After he had made theſe Reflections on the Monks of Ciſteaux, he maintains that thoſe of Cluny do not tranſgreſs the Rule, in following the Traditions of their Fathers, ſince they derive them from the Saints, who authorize them by the Sanctity of their Lives, and by their Miracles, and who had a Privilege of preſcribing Laws to them. Afterwards he returns a more particular and direct Anſwer to the foremention'd Objections. 1. That as to what related to the Admittance of Novices, they therein follow'd the Rule of Jeſus Chriſt, who order'd the rich Man in the Goſpel who deſir'd to be perfect, immediately to ſell all he had, to give it to the Poor, and to follow him; and who order'd the Man that was willing to go bury his Father before he would follow him, to leave the Dead to bury the Dead, and to follow him without any more ado. And that they therein imitated the Example of the Apoſtles who follow'd Jeſus Chriſt aſſoon as ever he call'd them, and who receiv'd into the Chriſtian Church all thoſe who offer'd themſelves. He owns that the Letter of the Rule is againſt this Cuſtom; but withal averrs that the End and Intention of the Rule being Charity, and the Salvation of our Neighbour, which are in Force ſo long as any one practiſes the Rule, even in the ſtrict and literal Senſe, one may with Reaſon deviate from the Letter of the Rule. He adds, that ſince the Diſcipline of the Church has been alter'd with Reſpect to a great many Points, 'tis no ſuch extraordinary Matter that the Monaſtical Diſcipline ſhould be ſubject to the ſame Alterations. 2. That St. Benedict in his Rule had preſcrib'd nothing directly concerning Habits: That he had no where prohibited the wearing of Leather; that he only order'd that they ſhould be different according to the Variety of Climates: That a Leathern Habit was moſt ſuitable to Auſterity and Solitude. That the Prophets Elias, St. John Baptiſt, and the ancient Hermits were cloath'd with Leathern Garments: That we find in Story that St. Benedict himſelf wore ſuch an Habit: That laſtly, it muſt be left to the Diſcretion of the Abbot to preſcribe the Quality of Habits, according to the Climate, the Seaſon, and the Conſtitution of thoſe who wear them. 3. That they wear Breeches for Decency and Modeſty's Sake. 4. That the Rule leaves the Abbot full Power to preſcribe what ſort of Covering the Monks ſhould have on their Beds. 5. That with Reſpect to Eating, we ought not ſcrupulouſly to adhere to the expreſs Terms of the Rule, ſince St. Benedict gives the Abbot Liberty to augment the Portion of Bread and Wine, if they have work'd more than ordinary: And that 'tis well ſaid of him, that 'tis enough to allow the Monks two Diſhes of Meat upon the Account of their Infirmities, that ſo if they have no Stomach to the one, they may eat of the other; but that if it ſhould ſo happen, that they could not eat of either of theſe two

Peter the Venerable.

two Dishes, he has no where prohibited the allowing them a third or fourth Dish: Lastly, that we ought to proportion the Quality and the Quantity both of Meat and Drink to the Constitution and Strength of Men, and to refer all to Charity, which is that Soveraign Rule, by which we ought to be rul'd and govern'd. 6. That in receiving the Religious as often as they were willing to return, they did nothing but what was agreeable to the Evangelical Law, and to the Practice of the Church: That what St. Benedict says on this Subject in the Rule, was only by Way of Commination. 7. That as to the Fasts they observ'd what was prescrib'd by the Rule, viz. from the 13*th.* of September to the Beginning of Lent, they did not eat on any Day, except Sundays, till None; but that from Whitsuntide to the 13*th.* of September they did always eat at Noon, tho' the Rule seems to prescribe that on Wednesdays and Fridays they should not eat till the Hour of None, because it leaves the Abbot at his Liberty to augment or diminish the Fast. 8. That they had particular Reasons for not working with their Hands, since such a Labour was injoyn'd the Monks only to keep them from being idle, and that they being engag'd in other more useful Imployments, were dispens'd from that. 9. That it was a sort of Childishness to condemn the Order of Cluny, because the Religious and the Abbot of that House did not prostrate themselves before all the Strangers the came to them, nor wash their Feet; and besides, that this Imployment would wholly divert the Monks from all their other Duties, by reason of the great Number of the Strangers: That however to avoid the total Neglect of what the Rule prescrib'd, each Monk every Year washes the Feet of three Strangers, and presents them with Bread and Wine. 10. That the Abbot was discharg'd from the Care of keeping an Inventory of the Tools and Utensils of the Monastery, provided another Man did it, since it is impossible for him to do all Things himself. 11. That they do not omit those Genuflections which they are requir'd to make during the Office, tho' they say it abroad, unless when the Badness of the Weather hinders them, and that then they say a Miserere. 12. That the Abbot orders an Allowance of Meat and Drink to be given to all Strangers, but that it was not proper to introduce all Manner of Persons without Distinction into the Refectory; nor that he should leave the Religious to wait upon others. 13. That the young Monks do ask Blessing, viva voce, of the elder, when they meet them out of the Bounds of their Monastery; but that within those Bounds they only ask it by a low Bow without saying any Thing, that they might preserve their Silence. 14. That if they do not place at their Gate an elderly Monk, yet they set one there of known and approv'd Fidelity and Wisdom; that the Monastery-Gates are almost always open in the Day-time, and that 'tis sufficient that they have one to open them when they are shut. 15. That 'tis not at all necessary that the Porter should cry Deo-Gratias to all Comers. 16. That there was no Inconveniency for the Monks when they change their Monastery to renew their Vows, and that the Rule it self in express Terms permits the Renewing of the Vow of Constancy. 17. That they are satisfied that a Monk cannot leave his Monastery without the Leave of his Abbot, so long as that Abbot discharges the Duty of a Pastor; that is, so long as he takes Care to provide for the Bodily Necessities of his Religious: But that if it should so happen that a Monk cannot live or be safe under an Abbot in one Monastery, he may leave that Monastery without the Licence of his Abbot: That 'tis upon this Account that the Abbot of Cluny has obtain'd a Privilege from the Holy See, of entertaining all the Religious who are fore'd to leave their Monastery for either of these Reasons. 18. That they have for their Bishop the Chief of all Bishops, and the Bishop of all the Churches, namely the Bishop of Rome, who has granted them the Privilege of being exempted from the Interdictions or Excommunications of all other Bishops besides himself: That notwithstanding this they receive the holy Chrism, the holy Oils, holy Orders, and the Consecration of their Churches from the Hands of other Bishops: That to find Fault with their Privileges is the same Thing as to question the Authority of the Holy See; that several other Monks enjoy the same Privileges; and that St. Gregory granted such to a great many Monasteries. 19. That the Pope has given them Leave to have Parishes, and to enjoy Tenths: That 'tis reasonable for them who offer up continual Prayers for the Faithful to live by the Offerings of the Faithful; and that as Secular Clerks have a Right to enjoy the Revenues of Ecclesiastical Estates, because they administer the Sacrament, and preach the Gospel, so the Monks likewise may receive the Oblations of the Faithful, upon the Account of the Psalms which they repeat in their Behalf, upon the Account of the Tears which they pour out to divert the Justice of God, and upon the Account of the Alms, and other good Works which they practise. 20. That the Religious are not forbid holding Temporal Estates of what Kind soever; and that they may maintain their Estates by all Manner of just and lawful Ways. Lastly, he observes that we ought to make a Distinction between two Sorts of Precepts, the one immutable, which can never be chang'd, such as our Love to God and our Neighbour, whatever else is commanded by the Laws of God, and others which may be chang'd for a greater Good, or for the avoiding a greater Evil; and he avers, that whatever they had alter'd in the Rule of St. Benedict, was of the latter Kind; and that they did not change it but only for the greater Benefit, and to fulfil Christian Charity, which ought to be the supream Rule and Law.

Peter the Venerable.

N. B. [And now upon this whole Debate or Controversie between the Monks of Cisteaux and those of Cluny, we cannot forbear making this one Remark, that according to our old course English Proverb, here has been a great Cry, but little Wool; a great Noise and Clamour about the Externals, but scarce one Word said, pro or con, about the Internals of Religion, which sufficiently shews, that when Men are once wedded to any Party in Religion, their greatest Heats happen about the Circumstantials of Religion, to which that Party adheres, and that they have little or no Concern for the Fundamentals of the truly Catholick and Christian Church.]

The twenty ninth Letter is likewise written to St. Bernard, upon a particular Quarrel about one of the Monks of Cluny, elected to the Bishoprick of Langres, whereof St. Bernard makes Mention in his 164*th.* Letter, and in those that ensue. Peter of Cluny in this Letter says, that St. Bernard being prejudic'd against this Monk upon some false Reports, oppos'd his Ordination.

The thirty third is written to Pope Innocent, about another Difference between the Monks of Cluny, and those of Cisteaux. This Pope in the Year 1132. had exempted the Monks of Cisteaux from paying Tenths. This was a considerable Prejudice to the Monks of Cluny, particularly to the Abby of Gigny, which had considerable Tithes to receive from the Lands belonging to the Monastery of Miroir. The Monks of Gigny were for demanding them, for which the Pope had interdicted their Church; whereupon Peter the Venerable conjures him not to deprive the Monks of Gigny of a Right which belong'd to them, and to suspend the Interdiction which he had pronounc'd against them, that so they might have Time to inform him of the Justice of their Cause. About the same Time he wrote upon the same Subject, the thirty fourth Letter to Haimeric, Chancellor of the Church of Rome, whereby he represents to him more at Length the Injustice which he pretends was done to his Order; and directed another Letter to the Chapter General of Cisteaux, whereby he exhorts them to quit this their Pretension. This is the thirty fifth Letter, which is written with a great deal of Smartness and Discretion. However, because several Abbots of the Order of Cisteaux were displeased at it; the next Year he sent them a Letter of Excuse, which is the thirty sixth and last of this Book. The Monks of Gigny not being able to obtain of the Pope what they desired, were for doing themselves Justice, and some few Years after went to the Monastery of Miroir, where they committed great Outrages. Pope Eugenius III. Innocent's Successor being inform'd thereof, wrote to Peter the Venerable about it, and threatned the Monks of Gigny to punish them severely, in Case they did not make Reparation for the Wrong which they had done to the Monks of Miroir. St. Bernard and Peter the Venerable, met at Cluny to adjust the Affair; the Damage was estimated at above thirty thousand Sols; but the Monks of Gigny having made but very inconsiderable Offers of Reparation, St. Bernard wrote to the Pope about it. At last the Affair terminated in an Accommodation made after the Death of St. Bernard, in the Year 1159.

The first Letter of the second Book is wholly Doctrinal. He therein proves against a Man, who was fain into the Error of the Apollinarists, that the Humanity of Jesus Christ was composed both of Soul and Body.

The second is directed to Peter Archbishop of Lyons. He congratulates his being advanc'd to the Primacy of a Kingdom, which acknowledg'd no other Superior than the Holy See, and which had an Authority over all the Churches of France. He exhorts him to use his utmost Diligence for the Restoration of Piety, particularly within his Dioceses. In this Letter, he gives us a Description of the Irregularity of the Manners of the Ecclesiasticks and Religious.

In the Third he complains to Pope Innocent of the Coldness which he shew'd to the Cardinal Bishop of Albany, to whom he lay under great Engagements; and exhorts him to leave him in France with Authority, where he was capable of doing a great deal of Good, till such time as he could recal him with Honour to Rome.

In the fourth he exhorts Gilo Bishop of Frescati to abandon the Party of Peter de Leon, which could not be the true Church, since it was reduc'd to a small Number of People shut up in several Forts of Italy or Poitou. The thirty fourth is likewise directed to the same Bishop, upon the same Subject.

Peter the Venerable.

In the ſeventh, he ſhews Theotard Prior de la Charité, that he is bound both in Duty and Obedience not to quit his Charge.

In the tenth, he with a great deal of Freedom remonſtrates to Pope Innocent, that he does not do well in recalling the Cardinal of Albany to Rome.

In the eleventh, he complains to that Cardinal, that they had turn'd out ſeveral Monks out of the Monaſtery of Verdun, to put ſome Clerks into their Places.

The ſixteenth is a circular Letter to all the Superiors of the Monaſteries of his Order, whereby he recommends to their Prayers his Mother Raingarda, who departed this Life on the 22d. of June, and orders them to ſay thirty Maſſes for the Peace of her Soul, and to feed twelve poor People in the Monaſteries where it could be done, and that in the others, the Prieſts ſhould ſay two Maſſes, beſides the general Maſs.

In the next Letter, he tells us after what Manner he receiv'd the News of his Mother's Death, who was become a Religious of Marſigny. He therein makes her Encomium, and deſcribes the Circumſtances of her Death, which was wholly Chriſtian. Theſe and the following Letters inform us that ſhe dyed at the Time of his Return from the Council of Piſa, held in the Year 1134.

The twenty ſixth is a Letter of Pope Innocent directed to Peter of Cluny, wherein he recommends himſelf to his Prayers, and diſpenſes with him from coming to Rome, becauſe of his Infirmity.

In the twenty eighth, Peter Abbot of Cluny intreats Pope Innocent, not to take the Prior of Vezelay out of his Monaſtery, to make him Biſhop of Langres.

The thirty firſt is written to William Biſhop of Orange, who had interdicted the Monaſtery of Puy, becauſe the Monks retain'd a Church which had been given them by the Predeceſſor of that Biſhop. Peter of Cluny, prays him to do them Juſtice, if not, to appoint a Day wherein he would have the Affair diſcuſs'd before the Pope's Legate.

The thirty third is written to Atto Biſhop of Troyes about the Difference which had been between him and the Biſhop of Auxerre, about the Ordinations of ſeveral Monks of the Order of Cluny, made at La Charité upon the Loire. Peter of Cluny was willing to ſend him the Privileges of the Holy See, which allow the Monks of Cluny to be ordain'd by what Biſhop they pleas'd, when he once could underſtand that this Affair was adjuſted. He deſires he would be pleas'd to ſend him an Account thereof, and writes to him about two other private Affairs, the latter of which relates to a Clerk of his Church nam'd Guarin, who deſir'd to have the firſt vacant Prebend conferr'd upon him.

The next Letter is written to the ſame Biſhop, about Gebwin his Archdeacon, who was gone to Rome about ſome Difference which he had with his Biſhop. In his Journey he ſtop'd at Cluny, and had promis'd Peter to return to Troyes, and adjuſt Matters with his Biſhop.

Atto in the thirty fifth Letter returns an Anſwer to the foregoing Letter.

The following Letters of Peter of Cluny contain nothing in them of Moment, till you come to the ſeventh of the third Book; wherein he replies to the Queſtions which had been propos'd to him by one of his Monks nam'd Gregory, who was a great Student. The firſt Queſtion was, Whether the Virgin Mary had received an Increaſe of Grace, in receiving the Holy Ghoſt with the Apoſtles on the Day of Pentecoſt? Peter of Cluny replies, that ſhe had received no Increaſe of Charity or of ſanctifying Grace, ſince throughout her whole Life, ſhe had a Fulneſs of Grace and Sanctity; but that ſhe might have receiv'd an Augmentation of ſome particular Gifts, ſuch as Knowledge, Prophecy, the Power of working Miracles, of ſpeaking ſeveral Tongues, which yet was not very certain. The ſecond Queſtion is, How the Virgin Mary could poſſibly be ignorant of any Thing after ſhe had conceived the Son of God. Peter of Cluny proves, that ſhe was ignorant of a great many Things, nor is he of Opinion, that ſhe had ſuch a perfect Knowledge of God, as the Angels and Souls of good Men made bleſſed have; and he poſitively denies, that here below ſhe enjoy'd Beatitude, though he owns that ſhe had more Knowledge and Wiſdom with Reſpect to Spiritual Things, than all other Mortals? The third Queſtion is upon a Paſſage of St. Gregory, wherein that Father ſeems to aſſert, that the Word was united to the Manhood before it was born of the Virgin Mary. Peter of Cluny ſays, that this Paſſage has given ſome an Occaſion of aſſerting, that our Lord brought down his Humanity from Heaven, which is entirely contrary to the Sentiment of St. Gregory, who explains his Thoughts by ſaying, that though Jeſus Chriſt was not yet born of the Virgin, yet the Union of the Perſon of the Divine Logos with the Manhood was already typify'd and foretold, though it was not as yet known or reveal'd.

[We cannot but here obſerve, that this is one of the moſt modeſt Accounts of the Perfections of the Virgin Mary to be met with among any Romaniſts, and ſuch as does not all favour the Notions of ſome of the modern Papiſts.]

Peter the Venerable.

In the third Letter of the fourth Book, he writes to Pope Innocent in Favour of Lewis the Younger, King of France, and intreats him to have ſome Condeſcenſion for him, if his Youth had inclin'd him to do any Thing that was not convenient This was written upon the Occaſion of the Difference between that Prince and the Archbiſhop of Bourges. He likewiſe gave the Pope to underſtand, that the Monaſtery of Luxeu, which he would have reform'd the laſt Year, by ſending thither ſeveral Monks of Cluny, was ſtill wholly irregular, and in a worſe Condition than before.

The fourth is that Letter which he wrote to the ſame Pope about Abaelard.

By the fifth, he recommends to that Pope a Canon of Lyons nam'd Heraclius.

In the ſeventh, he writes again to that Pope in Favour of Arnulphus, Archdeacon of Seez, elected and conſecrated Biſhop of Lizieux, that the Pope might confirm him in Spite of the Attempts made by the Count of Angers, to the contrary.

In the eighth, he complains to Milo Biſhop of Terrouanne, for his having publickly declaim'd in his Church againſt the Monks of Cluny, accuſing them of being proud and diſobedient to Biſhops. He ſhews him, that if he had any Thing to ſay againſt their Conduct, he ought to let them know of it, and reprove them for it privately, and not to declaim againſt them ſo publickly. Afterwards he clears them of the Accuſation, and complains that that Biſhop had hinder'd the beſtowing a Canonſhip of Abbeville on them, though it did not belong to his Dioceſs, but to the Dioceſs of Amiens.

In the ninth, he recommends to Pope Innocent the Biſhop of Salamanca, Archbiſhop elect of Compoſtella, and intreats him to approve of this Tranſlation.

In the tenth, he intreats him to grant Hugh Archbiſhop of Tours, Leave to return to his Archbiſhoprick. For Hugh in his Journey to Rome fell ſick in the Monaſtery of La Charité, where he had taken upon him the Habit of that Order.

In the eleventh, he exhorts the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, who was very old and infirm, to quit his Archbiſhoprick, and to retire to Cluny. This Letter was written from Spain, to which Place he had travelled.

The ſixteenth is the two hundred and twenty eighth Letter of St. Bernard, to which Peter of Cluny reply'd by the ſeventeenth, which is likewiſe the two hundred and twenty ninth of St. Bernard's Letters, of which we have given you an Abſtract. Peter of Cluny does therein at firſt declare, that the Difference which had been between them, whether about the Biſhoprick of Langres, or for Tenths, had abated nothing of the Charity, Friendſhip or Eſteem which he had for him. In the cloſe of this Letter he ſends him Word, that he therewith ſent him a Verſion of the Alcoran, which he had tranſlated whilſt he was in Spain, to ſhew the Errors and Follies of the Mahometan Religion. Afterwards he gives him a ſhort Account of Mahomet and of his Doctrine.

The eighteenth is a Letter of Compliment to Pope Celeſtine II. upon his Advancement to the Popedom.

The nineteenth is written to Pope Lucius, to whom he likewiſe made ſeveral Compliments, and asked him, whether he ſhould ſend him the thirteen Religious, according as he had order'd him when he was at Rome. This Pope by the next Letters return'd him Anſwer, that he would do him a great Favour in ſo doing.

The twenty firſt is that which he wrote to Heloiſſa, upon the Death of Abaelard.

The twenty ſecond is written to Lucius, in Favour of the Biſhop of Orleans, who was accus'd by ſeveral of his Clergy.

By the twenty fourth, he recommends to him the Religious whom he ſent him.

In the twenty fifth, he wrote to Pope Eugenius III. in Favour of the Archbiſhop of Beſanſon.

In the twenty ſeventh, he exhorts Atto Biſhop of Troyes to retire to Cluny.

In the thirtieth, he blames thoſe who caus'd to be ſung or recited ſuch Hymns or Hiſtories in the Church, as are full of Fictions; and he ſays, that not long ago he was very much put to the Bluſh in being forc'd to hear ſung, and to ſing himſelf in the Church, an Hymn in Honour of St. Benedict, which contains twenty Falſities at leaſt, without mentioning the Impropriety of the Language, and the Falſeneſs of Quantity, which had engaged him to make another Hymn in Honour of that Saint.

The thirty ſixth is written to King Lewis the Young, exhorting him to punish the Jews, not by putting them to Death, but by taking away from them ſuch Effects as they had unjuſtly gotten by their Uſuries and Extortion.

In the fourth Letter of the fifth Book, he writes to Pope Eugenius III. the Cauſes which the Abbot de la Chaiſe-Dieu alledg'd againſt the Archbiſhop of Arles, and the Biſhop of Viviers, nominated by his Holineſs to take Cognizance nizance of the Difference which was between the Biſhop of Niſmes and that Abby.

Peter the Venerable.

In the fifth he wrote to the ſame Pope, about the Refuſal which the Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux had made of ordaining him, who had been elected Biſhop of Angoulême.

In the ſeventh, he replies to ſeveral Queſtions which had been propos'd to him by Thibald Abbot of St. Colomba of Sens. Among the reſt was this, Why they repeat the Unction of the Sick at Cluny. Peter the Venerable ſays, That the Caſe is not the ſame with the Unction of the Sick, as with the Unctions of Baptiſm and Confirmation, whoſe Efficacy is ſimple and only One; nor the ſame as with the ſacerdotal Unction, or the Unctions of Churches and Holy Veſſels, which imprint a Conſecration which can never be effac'd. Whereas the Effect of the Unction of the Sick being only Remiſſion of Sins, wherein Men fall after they are recovered of their Sickneſs, it ought to be repeated in the next Sickneſs.

The ſixth Book contains ſeveral Letters of Peter of Cluny to St. Bernard, and of St. Bernard to Peter of Cluny, of which the fourth is ſomewhat remarkable. Peter of Cluny therein intreats St. Bernard to procure an Union between the Monks of Cluny and of Ciſteaux, by ordering that whenever the Monks of Cluny ſhould come into the Monaſteries of thoſe of Ciſteaux, they might be entertain'd as the Monks of the Monaſtery, and admitted into the Refectory; the Dormitory, and the other Regular Places.

There are likewiſe in the ſame Book ſeveral Letters to Pope Eugenius III. in one of which (viz. the ninth) he aſſures him that the Archbiſhop of Vienna does not at all oppoſe the Intereſts of the Order of Cluny, as the Pope had ſuppos'd, and ſent him word in the preceding Letter.

In the twelfth, he advertiſes him of the Diviſion which was in Chartreux the Great, upon Occaſion of a Perſon elected to the Biſhoprick of Grenoble.

In the twenty fifth, he gives him to underſtand of the Irregularities of the Biſhop of Clermont.

In the twenty ſeventh, he wrote to him in favour of Humbert of Beaujeu, who returning from beyond Sea, was ſetled in the Neighbourhood of Cluny, and had put a ſtop to the Wars and Robberies committed there in his Abſence, and had quieted all the Country thereabouts; but becauſe he had quitted the Order of Knights Templars, and taken his Wife again, the Pope could not endure that he ſhould live in the World. Peter of Cluny in this Letter remonſtrates to him, that it was very proper for him to uſe his Indulgence towards this Lord, and to grant him a Diſpenſation of living with his Wife, and of leading a ſecular Life.

In the twenty eighth, he wrote to him againſt the Provoſt, Abbot, and other Eccleſiaſtical Lords of Brionde, who had turned a Clerk out of his Church, and his demeans without any Form of Juſtice, nay, ſo much as denying him to clear himſelf by the Tryal of Fire, as he had offered them to do.

The 41d. 43d. 44th. and 45th. Letters are likewiſe written to Eugenius III. The firſt in Favour of the Abbot of Breme, and the ſecond in Favour of Guy Lord of Domnus, who had been interdicted by the Pope, for having married a ſecond Wife in the Life-time of his firſt. Peter of Cluny ſhews the Pope the Reaſons upon which he believes that the firſt Marriage ought not no ſtand, and prays him to determine this Affair according to this Remonſtrance, and to take off the Interdiction which he had iſſued out againſt this Lord. The third is in Favour of the People of Placenza, who were unwilling to admit of a Biſhop, conſecrated by the Archbiſhop of Ravenna, and they thought they had Reaſon for it, becauſe they were to admit of no Biſhop but who was ſent by the Pope. In the laſt, he acquaints the Pope of a Treaty which he had made with a Lord of his Neighbourhood.

The 15th. Letter of this Book, is a circular Letter written by Peter of Cluny, to all the Superiors of the Houſes of his Order, wherein he warmly reproves the Abuſe which was eſtabliſh'd among the greateſt part of his Religious, of eating Meat every Day in the Week except Friday. He ſhews, that this was forbidden by the Rule of St. Benedict, which enjoyns them to eat nothing but Fiſh, and by the Example and Inſtitution of Odo, one of the Founders of their Order.

The 17th. 18th. 19th. and 20th. Letters, are about the Croiſade. Peter of Cluny had been invited by Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, and by St. Bernard to meet at that Aſſembly which was to be held at Chartres upon this Deſign; he excuſes himſelf from coming by two of his Letters, but withal commends that Deſign. Peter the Venerable.

In the 26th. written to Everard, Grand-Maſter of the Order of Knight Templars, he commends their Inſtitution, and interceeds for Humbert of Beaujeu, who had left them.

The 39th. written to his Nieces, is in Commendation of a Virgin Life.

The 7th. Book contains three Letters written by Peter of Cluny, to Sugerus Abbot of St. Denys, an Anſwer of that Abbot; three Letters of St. Bernard, and one Letter of Peter of Celles, written to Peter of Cluny.

Beſides the Letters we have already mentioned, there are a great many others, which are either Letters of Compliment, or on Affairs of little Moment, and ſeveral other Moral ones about the Spiritual Monaſtick Life, ſuch as the ninth and tenth of the firſt Book; the twelfth, fifteenth, twenty ſecond, and fiftieth of the ſecond, the fourteenth, thirty ninth, fortieth, forty firſt and forty ſecond of the fourth Book; the third of the fifth; and the thirteenth and fourteenth of the ſixth. All theſe Letters are penn'd with a great deal of Purity and Pleaſantneſs of Style, full of Life and ſolid Thoughts. They are not indeed ſo Airy as the Letters of St. Bernard, nor ſo full of Turns and playing upon Words, but the Style is more Correct, Even and Pure.

Theſe Letters are follow'd by the Tracts of Peter of Cluny.

The 1ſt. is dedicated to Peter of St. John's, who in a Conference which they had together, had told him, that ſome of thoſe with whom he convers'd, had aſſerted that Jeſus Chriſt is not expreſly call'd God in the Goſpel. Peter of Cluny in this Treatiſe, proves the contrary from all thoſe Paſſages in the Goſpel where Jeſus Chriſt is Styled God, and has ſuch Attributes apply'd to him, as belong to none but God.

The 2d. Tract is againſt the Jews, wherein he proves the Divinity of Jeſus Chriſt, that he is the Meſſias who had been foretold by the Prophets, and refutes ſeveral Fables of the Jewiſh Talmud.

To theſe two Tracts are annexed two Prefaces, the one is Peter's of Cluny, and the other Robert's of Rediues, upon the Verſion of the Alcoran, with an Abridgment of the Hiſtory and Errors of Mahomet. The five Books which Peter of Cluny, has compos'd againſt the Alcoran, have not as yet been printed.

We ſhall ſpeak of the Treatiſe againſt the Petrobuſians, when we come to treat of thoſe Hereticks.

The two Books of Miracles contain the Relation of a great many Miracles that happened in his Time. In the ſecond, we meet with the Life of Matthew Prior of St. Martin in the Fields, and afterwards Biſhop of Albany, and the Account of the Conteſt between Pontius and Peter the Venerable, about the Abby of Cluny.

Of the four Sermons penn'd by Peter of Cluny, we have only that about the Transfiguration remaining.

The Pieces of Poetry which we have of his, are an Apology in Hexameters, or Pentameters againſt thoſe who found fault with the Verſes of Peter of Poitiers; ſeveral Pieces of Proſe on the Life of Jeſus Chriſt, on the Reſurrection, in Honour of the Bleſſed Virgin, upon St. Mary Magdalene, and in praiſe of Hugh Abbot of Cluny. Two Hymns, one on the Feſtival of St. Benedict, and the other upon the Tranſlation of his Body; and ſeveral Epitaphs on Count Euſtachius, Bernard Prior of Cluny, Reginald Archbiſhop of Lyons, and Peter Abaelard. It had been well if he had written as well in Verſe as in Proſe.

Peter of Cluny made likewiſe a Collection of the Statutes of his Order, which were made whilſt he was Abbot, and at the End of each Statute, has explained the Reaſon of their being enacted. Theſe Statutes relate to the Divine Service, to Faſts, the Form of Habits, and ſeveral other Cuſtoms of the Monks of that Fraternity.

Father Mabillon in the third Tome of his Analects, p. 481. has given us two Letters of this Author, of the Aſſociation of Prayers for the Dead, between thoſe of Chartres, and the Senators of Venice.

CHAP. VI.

An Account of the Hereſies which prevailed in the Twelfth Century.

Of the Hereſies in the twelfth Century.

WE have already obſerved, that in the Beginning of the foregoing Century, there appeared in ſeveral parts of France, ſuch Hereticks as were accus'd of impious Doctrines, who openly attacked the Sacraments of the Church, and ſubverted its moſt ſacred Rites and Ceremonies. The Severity with which thoſe who were taken were condemn'd, did not prevent the Sect from ſpreading further, nor this Doctrine or ſome ſuch like, from over-running the Kingdom, ſo that in this Century, a great many Hereticks appeared, whoſe chief Aim Aim was to divert Men from the receiving of the Sacraments, and to overthrow the Hierarchy and Discipline of the Church.

Of the Heresies in the twelfth Century.

An Account of the Heretick Henery.

The first who appeared were Peter of Bruis, and an Hermit nam'd Henry, his Disciple. They first began to broach their Doctrine in Provence, from whence the latter went to Lausane, and afterwards into the Country of Mans. We will give you the Description which the Historian of the Bishops of Mans made of him, in speaking of Hildebert. 'About this time there arose in that Country a certain Hypocrite, who for his wicked Actions, for his corrupt Morals, and for his abominable Doctrines, deserv'd the severest Punishments. This Man conceal'd the Rage of a Ravenous Wolf, under the Appearances of an innocent Sheep. His Countenance and Eyes look'd like a ruffled and tempestuous Sea: He was as yet very young: He wore short Hair, his Beard shav'd, was large in Stature, but very sorrily cloath'd; walk'd apace, and bare footed even in the hardest Time of Winter; he was pretty Affable, had a strong terrifying Voice, and liv'd in a Manner quite Different from Others. His ordinary Retreats were the Cottages of Peasants; he liv'd all Day under Portico's; eat and slept on some Hill or other in the open Air, and had acquir'd a great Reputation of Sanctity. The Women applauded him, cry'd him up for a great Servant of God, and gave out that no Person could have a greater Faculty than him of converting the most obdurate Hearts; and that he was endued with the Spirit of Prophecy, to discern the most inward recesses of the Conscience, and the most private Sins. This Fame having rendred him very desirable in the Diocess of Mans. He sent thither two of his Associates and Disciples, who liv'd in the same Manner as he did. Those Men arrived at Mans on Ash-Wednesday, where they were received by the People as Angels. In imitation of their Master they carryed Staffs, on the top of which was an Iron Cross, and they wore the Dress of Penitents. Bishop Hildebert was surprized at the Sight, and received them kindly. He just upon his Departure for Rome, ordered his Archdeacons to give Henry Leave to come into his Diocess, and permit him to preach to the People. He was no Sooner come, but they flocked from all Parts to hear his Sermons, and the Clergy themselves excited the People thereto. He had a Natural Eloquence, and a Tone of Voice resembling Thunder. He soon spread his Errors in his Sermons, and stirred up the People against the Clergy, so that a great many Ecclesiasticks were abus'd by them. The Chapter of Mans perceiving this Disorder, wrote to him, and gave him Notice by one of the Canons, that they prohibited him from preaching any more, either in Publick or Private within their Diocess. The People had like to have kill'd the Canon who brought him this Message, and Henry continued to preach in the Churches of St Germain and St. Vincent. He taught, that the Women who had not liv'd continently, ought to strip themselves, to burn their Hair, and to renounce their Worldly Goods, to lead a Life of Poverty, by marrying likewise Poor Men. 'Tis easie to guess how much Disturbance such a Doctrine put in Practice would raise in the Diocess. Hildebert being returned from Rome, Henry retired into the Castle of Calais, and continued there to vent his Doctrines. and the People still follow'd him, and were so far infatuated, that they would scarce acknowledge their Bishop, or receive his Benediction. The Bishop to undeceive the People, went to Henry, and entring into a Conference with him, ask'd him what Profession he was of. He answered him, that he was a Deacon. The Bishop asked him whether he had assisted that Day at Divine Service? He said no; then reply'd the Bishop, let us say our Mattins. Henry declared that he could not say his Office; the Bishop began to recite the Psalms of the Office of the Virgin-Mary; but Henry was still as Ignorant as ever, so that being in a Confusion, he was forc'd to owne that he knew nothing at all, but that he had made it his Study to make Discourses to the People. Hildebert having gain'd the Conquest over him, prohibited him from preaching or staying any longer in his Diocess. Two of his Disciples nam'd Cyprian and Peter, recanted and left him, after they understood that his Life was Infamous, and his Doctrine Heretical, as Hildebert informs us in his 78*th*. Letter. All this happened about the Year 1110.

The Errors of Peter of Bruis.

Whilst Henry preach'd in France, Peter of Bruis continued likewise to publish his Errors in Provence. Peter the Venerable Abbot of Cluny, who has refuted them, makes mention of five. (1.) His denying that Baptism was of any Advantage to Infants, and maintaining that only adult Persons ought to be baptized; a Doctrine which they put in Practice by Re-baptizing all those who initiated themselves into their Sect. (2.) His condemning the Use of Churches, Temples and Altars, and beating them down. (3.) His rejecting the Worship of Crosses, and breaking them. (4.) His believing that the Mass was useless, and that none are oblig'd to celebrate it. (5.) His Teaching, that Alms and Prayers for the Dead are of no avail, and forbidding to sing the Praises of God. He likewise takes Notice, that a great many accus'd them of wholly rejecting all the Canonical Books of the Old and New Testament, and of not believing either in Jesus Christ, or the Prophets, or the Apostles; but he would not impute the Error to them, which was only attributed to them by common Fame. 'Tis no hard Matter to comprehend how much Trouble such a seditious Doctrine must needs raise both in Church and State. In Provence there was nothing else to be seen but Christians re-baptized, Churches prophan'd or destroy'd, Altars pull'd down, and Crosses burnt. The Laws of the Church were publickly violated, the Priests beaten, abus'd and forc'd to marry, and all the most sacred Ceremonies of the Church abolish'd. These Disorders excited the Zeal of the Bishops of that Country, who with the Assistance of the Princes drove out this Heretick, and put a stop to the Fury of his Followers. But he went from thence into Languedoc, where he vented the same Errors at Tholouse, and in other Cities, till he was apprehended and burnt alive at St. Giles's in Languedoc.

Of the Heresies in the twelfth Century.

The Publication of the Errors of Henry and of Peter of Bruis.

His Disciple Henry who was likewise returned to Languedoc, after he had been driven out of Mans, preach'd there the same Doctrine, and added thereto several new Errors, so that within a short Time, that Country was so infested with those detestable Maxims, that there were to be seen (as St. Bernard says) a great many Churches without People, a great many People without Priests, a great many Priests despised by their People, and a great many Christians without Jesus Christ. The Churches there were become like so many Synagogues; the Sanctuary was divested of its Sanctity; the Sacraments looked upon as prophane Things; the Festivals lost their Solemnity; Men dy'd in their Sins, without Absolution, and without receiving the Communion, Baptism was deny'd to Infants; they dirided the Prayer and Sacrifices for the Dead, and the invocation of Saints; the Excommunications of Bishops, the Pilgrimages made for the sake of Devotion, the Consecration of the Holy Chrism and of the Holy Oyls. And in a Word, a general Contempt was cast on all the Ceremonies and Customs of the Church. St. Bernard brought into that Country by Alberic, Cardinal Bishop of Ostia, and Legate of the Holy See; put a stop to those Disorders, and undeceiv'd part of the People by his Preaching and his Miracles. Henry thought of making his Escape, but was apprehended and carryed in Chains to Tholouse, and put into the Bishop's Hands. St. Bernard undertook the Journey in the Year 1147.

The Heresticks of Perigueux.

'Tis very probable that the Hereticks of Perigueux were the Disciples of Peter de Bruis and of Henry. We will give you an Account which a Contemporary Monk nam'd Herbert has left us of them, in a Letter address'd to all Christians, wherein he admonishes them to beware of these false Prophets. 'There are (says he) in the Country of 'Perigueux a great many Hereticks, who boast that they 'lead an Apostolical Life, eat no Flesh, and drink no 'Wine, unless in a very little Quantity, and that from one 'three Days end to another, who fall upon their Knees an 'hundred times a Day, and receive no Money. Their 'Sect is very Corrupt and Hypocritical; they do not say 'the Gloria Patri, but instead of it say, because yours is the 'Kingdom, and you have a Power over all Creatures for e-'ver and ever, Amen. They make no Account of Alms-'giving, because they believe that no Man ought to possess 'any Thing as his own Property. They bear no Regard to 'the Mass, and teach that one ought not to receive the 'Communion, but only a piece of Bread. If any one of 'em out of Hypocrisie says Mass, he never recites the Ca-'non, nor receives the Communion, but throws the Host 'besides the Altar, or into the Missal. They do not adore 'Crosses or Crucifixes, and condemn those of Idolatry who 'do them any Honour. This Sect is mightily increased, 'and not only a great many Persons of Quality leave their 'Estates to be of their Number, but likewise a great many 'Ecclesiasticks, and a great many Religious of both Sexes 'follow them. The most stupid and senseless among them, 'within less than eight days time became very expert and fit 'to teach, and be Examplars to the rest. 'Tis a hard Matter 'to take them, for wherever they be apprehended, the Devil 'helps them out of Prison again. They do work some 'Miracles, such as filling a Vessel with Wine, by pouring 'some drops of Water into it. The chief of this Sect is 'called Pontius. St. Bernard in his Journey confronted 'likewise these Hereticks.

The Heresy of Tancheline.

About the same time Tancheline vented the same Errors in Flanders. He was a Laick who ventured to preach, and became so proud, that he caus'd extraordinay Respects to be paid him, and he carried his extravagant Folly so far, that (if we may believe Abaelard in the Case) he caus'd himself to be styled by the People the Son of God, and a Temple to be built in Honour of him. That which is more certain, is that he taught that the Churches were only 'Places of Prostitution, that the Eucharist which the Priests 'consecrated signifyed nothing. That the Sacraments were 'rather Abominations than Sacred Things; that the Efficacy 'of the Sacraments depended on the Sanctity of the Mi-'nisters.

Of the Heresies in the Twelfth Century.

'nisters. The Bishop of Tournay established in the Church of St. Michael, a Congregation of twelve Ecclesiasticks to oppose these Errors. This Church was afterwards bestowed on St. Norbert. Tancheline went as far as Rome with a Priest nam'd Evervachier, who was one of his principal Followers. 'Tis not known what became of him afterwards, but for the Priest he returned to Utrecht, where he made a great many Disciples. The Bishop of Utrecht sent word thereof to Frederick Archbishop of Cologne, who oppos'd the Heresie in its very Birth, which began to spread it self in his Dioceses, as is observ'd in the Letter of the Church of Utrecht to that Archbishop.

The Hereticks of Cologne.

In spight of all his endeavours it was established there, and there continued, as we are informed by a Letter of Enervin, Provost of Stemfeld near Cologne, written to St. Bernard, wherein he gives him to understand, that within a short time they had discovered several Hereticks near that City, some whereof had abjur'd their Errors; and two others having maintain'd them obstinately, had been burnt by the People. These Hereticks taught, that they were the only Persons among whom the true Church had subsisted, because they alone had follow'd the Example of Jesus Christ, and had possess'd nothing of this Worlds Goods. They forbid the eating of Milk meats, and the Flesh of Beasts. They would not discover what their Sacraments were; however they had own'd that they believe that the Bread and Wine which they did eat every Day was consecrated by the Lord's Prayer, for the Nourishment of those who were the Members and the Body of Jesus Christ, that in this Sense it became the Body of Jesus Christ; that Others had not the true Sacraments but only the Appearance of them, and that they held a false Tradition of Men. They admitted of a Baptism by Fire and the Holy Ghost, as more Excellent than the Baptism of Water, for which they had no great Esteem. They believ'd that their Elect had a Power of Baptizing and Consecrating. They distinguish'd three sorts of Persons among them, Hearers, Believers and the Elect. Lastly they condemn'd Marriage without giving any Reason for it.

The same Author likewise takes Notice, that there were likewise in that Country several other Hereticks different from the former, (who had been even Instrumental in discovering them) who deny'd that the Body of Jesus Christ was consecrated on the Altar, because all the Priests of the Church are not consecrated, and that the Ministry is corrupted by the secular and prophane lives of the Ecclesiasticks: That therefore they have no other Power than to teach and preach, and that all their Sacraments are Null except the Baptism of Adult Persons; for they did not believe that Infants ought to be baptiz'd. They likewise taught that only Marriages contracted between a Man and Maiden were lawful, and that all others were no better than Fornication. They had no trust or Confidence on the Mediation of Saints. They asserted that Fasts and other Mortifications were not all necessary for the Just, no nor for Sinners themselves. They styl'd all the Usages of the Church which were not establish'd by Jesus Christ and the Apostles, Superstitions. They deny'd Purgatory, and maintain'd that the Souls departed, immediately went into the Place allotted for them, and by Consequence they render'd the Prayers and Sacrifices of the Church for the Dead, Null and Void.

These are the Errors which Enervin attributes to those two Sorts of Hereticks to oppose which he excites the Zeal of St. Bernard, who at that time in discoursing upon these Words in the Canticles, take us the little Foxes, took an Occasion from this Text to write against those Modern Hereticks, whom he compares to Foxes. At the first he represents their Morals in the 65th. Sermon, wherein he accuses them of being Proud, Lovers of Novelties; of making no scruple to swear and forswear themselves; of concealing their Mysteries; of leading dissolute Lives; of being too familiar with marry'd Women and Maids; of being Cheats and Hypocrites. Afterwards in the 66th. Sermon he refutes in particular their Errors about Marriage, Abstaining from Meats, Infant-Baptism, Purgatory, Prayers for the Dead, the Efficacy of Sacraments and the Like. Lastly he speaks of their false Constancy which made them suffer Death and the greatest Torments: And he reproves several Princes, and even several Bishops who tolerated those Hereticks by receiving presents from them. Those Sermons of St. Bernard were written about the Year 1140. which serves to fix the Epocha of the time wherein those Hereticks of Cologne first appear'd.

These are the same Hereticks, whom sometime after Ekbert Abbot of St. Florin in the Dioceses of Treves oppos'd in his Tracts dedicated to Reginald Archbishop of Cologne. He had often had Conferences with them whilst he was Canon in the Church of Bonne, and whereas they were frequently discovered to be in the Dioceses of Cologne, he thought himself oblig'd to expose their Errors and refute them. This is what he has done in six Discourses which are to be met with in the Bibliotheca Patrum. He therein takes notice that those Hereticks in Germany were call'd Cathari, in Flanders, Piphri, in France Fisserani, and makes them to be the Off-spring of the Manichees. We will now give you an Account of the Errors which he attributes to them and refutes in those Discourses. 'They condemn (says he) Marriage, and threaten Damnation to those who 'dy'd in a marry'd State. Some among them only condemn such Marriages as are contracted between any besides such as have never been marry'd: They eat no Flesh because they believe it to be unclean; which is the Reason which they give of it Publickly; but in private they say that Flesh is the Devil's Creature. They have divers Opinions about Baptism: Some of them say that 'tis of no Use to Infants: In secret they add that the Baptism with Water is of no avail, for which reason they Rebaptize those who enter into their Sect in a particular Way, and assert that 'tis the Baptism of the Holy Ghost and of Fire. They Believe that the Souls of the departed enter the very Day of their Death into a State of Everlasting Happiness or of Everlasting Misery; and do not believe Purgatory: By consequence they reject the Prayers, the Alms, and the Masses for the Dead. If they come to Church, hear Mass, and communicate there, 'tis only for show; for they suppose that the Sacerdotal Order is utterly extinct in the Church and only subsists in their Sect. They do not believe that the Body of Jesus Christ is consecrated on the Altar, but call their own Flesh the Body of Jesus Christ, and in taking of Food say, that they make the Body of Jesus Christ. I have heard (adds he) from a Man who had left their Sect, after he had discover'd the Turpitude and the Errors thereof, that they asserted that Jesus Christ was not born of the Virgin; that he had not real Flesh; that he did not rise again really, but in a Figure: He believ'd that 'tis for this Reason that they keep not Easter, but have another Festival which they call Bema. Lastly he accuses them also of teaching that the Souls of Men are those Apostate Angels who were turn'd out of Heaven.

Of the Heresies in the Twelfth Century.

The Hereticks of Toul.

This Sect had likewise some Followers in the Dioceses of Toul, as we are inform'd by the Letter of Hugh Metellus, a Regular Canon of that Dioceses, written to his Bishop Henry, wherein he gives him to understand that in his Dioceses there were dangerous Men who began to start up, whom one might rather stile Beasts than Men, because they led a Life wholly Brutal: who detest Marriage; abominate Baptism; deride the Sacraments, and abhor the Name of Christian.

The Hereticks of Italy called Cathari.

In Italy there were likewise Hereticks of the same Nature, who went under the Name of Cathari. Bona-cursus, who had been formerly one of their Teachers at Milan, has given us a Tract of them after his Conversion, publish'd by Father Luke Dachery in the thirteenth Tome of his Spicilegium. He therein says that some of them maintain'd that God created all the Elements: That others say, It was the Devil who created them; but that they all believ'd that it was the Devil who separated and rang'd them in their Order: That they likewise believ'd that it was he who fram'd the Body of Adam out of the Clay of the Earth, and that he therein infus'd an Angel of Light: That he likewise made Eve, and lying with her, begat Cain of her Body: That they assert that the Fruit which Adam was forbidden to Eat, was the Carnal Knowledge of Eve: That they maintain that all the Bodies which are in the Air, on the Earth, and in the Water were made by the Devil: That it was the Devil who appear'd to the Patriarchs, and who is the God of the Old Testament whom they reject: That they likewise condemn St. John Baptist: That they teach that Jesus Christ had not a Body animated with a Soul, and that he neither Drank, or Eat, or did any other humane Action really, but only in Appearance: That they did not believe either his Descent into Hell, or his Resurrection, or his Ascension: That they do not believe him to be equal to the Father: That they affirm that the Cross is the Character of the Beast: That St. Silvester is Antichrist: That ever since the Pontificate of that Pope the Church had been extinct; and that no Person could be sav'd in a marry'd State: That they condemn the Holy Fathers: That they forbid the eating of Flesh, Eggs, Milk and every Thing else that proceeds from Animals: That they do not believe that the Holy Spirit is conferr'd by the Baptism of Water; not that the Visible Substance of the Bread and Wine is chang'd into the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ; and that they assert that all those who swear shall be damn'd: That they say that no Man can be sav'd but by Imposition of Hands, which they stile Baptism: That they assert that the Sun is the Devil; that the Moon is Eve, who Ly together as Man and Wife once a Month: That all the Stars are Dæmons; and Lastly that no Man can be sav'd, unless he be of their Sect.

The Passagians.

The same Author speaks of other Hereticks whom he calls Passagians, who taught that one ought to observe the Law of Moses even in the Literal Sense; and that the Sabbath, Circumcision, and the other Ceremonial Practices of the Law ought to be still in Force: That Jesus Christ was not equal to his Father: That the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost were distinct Substances.

Of the Hereſies in the twelfth Century.

Laſtly he ſpeaks of the Arnoldiſts, the Diſciples of Arnold Native of Breſſe, who went from Italy into France, where he was the Scholar of Peter Abaelard. Upon his Return to his own Country, he took upon him the Habit of a Monk, and his Head was full of this Thought, that neither the Pope nor the Clegry ought to hold any Demeans. Upon this Footing he ſet himſelf to preach, that the Clerks who held any Demeans, as their own Property, the Biſhops who were poſſeſs'd of Royalties, and the Monks who enjoy'd any Lands could not be ſav'd; that all thoſe things appertain'd to Princes. Beſide this, he taught the ſame Errors as other Hereticks, about Infant-Baptiſm and the Sacrament of the Altar. He was forc'd out of Italy by Pope Innocent II. and oblig'd to retire into Switzerland. After that Pope's Death he return'd into Italy and went directly to Rome, where he ſtirr'd up a Sedition againſt Pope Eugenius III. and afterwards againſt Adrian IV. who interdicted the People of Rome till ſuch time as they had drove out that Heretick and his Followers. This Menace had its Effect; the Romans ſeiz'd upon the ſtrong Houſes which thoſe Hereticks kept in, and forc'd them to retire to Otricoli in Tuſcany, where they were kindly receiv'd by the People, who look'd upon Arnold as a Prophet. However he was apprehended ſometime after by Cardinal Gerard, and in ſpight of the Endeavours of the Viſcounts of Campania, was brought to Rome, and condemn'd by the Governor of that City to be ty'd to a ſtake and burnt to Aſhes, for fear the People ſhould pay any Honour to his Relicks.

The Hereſy of Arnold of Breſſe.

Thirty of thoſe Hereticks croſs'd over from France into England about the Year 1160. where they would likewiſe willingly have ſown the ſame Doctrine: But they were apprehended and exterminated, and communicated that Error only to one Woman, who recanted. The Author which makes Mention of this takes Notice that they were call'd Poblicans or Publicans. William of Malmsbury the Hiſtorian, who did not live much after this time, ſays that thoſe Hereticks being examin'd; anſwer'd pretty well about the Nature of the Heavenly Phyſician, namely Jeſus Chriſt; but that when they were told of the Remedies which he has left us, namely the Sacraments, they then reply'd very ill, and declar'd that they condemned Baptiſm, the Euchariſt, and Marriage; and that they deſpis'd the Catholick Unity.

All that we have hitherto related concerning the Hereticks of the Twelfth Century is taken out of Cotemporary Authors, and ſhews that two ſorts of Errors were predominant at that Time; One ſort Common to all thoſe Hereticks, and others were Peculiar. Their common Errors regarded the Sacraments, the Practices of the Church, and the Hierarchical Order, againſt which they had all conſpir'd. The particular Errors were ſuch as had ſome relation to Manichæiſm, to Arianiſm, and other Impieties into which many had been led by a ſtrange ſort of Blindneſs.

The Condemnation of the Hereticks in the Council of Touloufe in the Year 1119.

Theſe Hereticks were condemn'd in ſeveral Councils. The firſt which paſs'd a Law againſt them was that of Toulouſe in the Year 1119. held in the preſence of Calixtus II. the third Canon whereof runs thus. We condemn and turn out of the Church of God as Hereticks thoſe who under pretence of Religion reject the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, Infant Baptiſm, Prieſthood, Holy-Orders, and lawful Marriages. We enjoyn that they be ſuppreſs'd by the Secular Powers. We ſubject their Defenders under the ſame Condemnation, if they do not repent. This Canon was repeated in the ſame Words and confirm'd in the ſecond general Lateran Council held under Innocent II. in the Year 1139. in the 23*d*. Canon.

The Condemnation of the ſame in the ſynod of Oxford.

Thoſe who went into England were convicted and condemn'd in an Aſſembly of Biſhops held at Oxford in the Reign of Henry II. King of England in the Year 1160. This Prince order'd them to be branded with a red hot Iron in their Cheek, to be whip'd publickly, to be driven out of the City half-naked, and left them to be ſtarv'd to Death.

Their Condemnation in the Council of Tours.

The Council of Tours held in the Year 1163. enjoyns that for the ſuppreſſing of that Hereſy which ſpread it ſelf in Gaſcogne and in other Provinces, all thoſe ſhould be Anathematiz'd who held any Correſpondence with thoſe Hereticks: That the Princes ſhould confiſcate their Goods, and prevent their Meeting.

The Council of Lombez to the Hereticks.

In the Year 1176. A Solemn Sentence was paſs'd in a Synod held at Lombez againſt ſeveral of thoſe Hereticks, going then under the Name of Bons hommes, who had been apprehended by the Inhabitants of that City. The Judges pitch'd upon by both Parties were Girald Biſhop of Albi, Gauzelin of Lodeba, the Abbot of Caſtre, and three other Abbots, and Judgment was paſſed in the preſence of Pontius Archbiſhop of Narbonne, Arnulphus Biſhop of Niſmes, the Archbiſhop of Toloufe, the Biſhop of Agda, ſeveral Abbots and Superiors of Monaſteries who aſſiſted at the Synod. The Biſhop of Lodeba by the Order of the Biſhop of Albi, interrogated thoſe Bons hommes, and in the firſt place ask'd them, whether they receiv'd the Law of Moſes, the Prophets and the Books of the Old and New Teſtament. They reply'd that they did not receive the Law of Moſes, nor the Prophets nor the Pſalms, nor any part of the Old Teſtament; but only the Goſpels, the Epiſtles of St. Paul, the ſeven Canonical Epiſtles, the Acts of the Apoſtles and the Apocalypſe. In the ſecond place he demanded of them an Explanation of their Faith: They return'd him Anſwer that they would not explain it unleſs they were conſtrain'd to do it. The third Queſtion was about Infant Baptiſm: They reply'd that they had nothing to ſay on that head. The fourth Queſtion was about the Euchariſt, where and by whom it was conſecrated, who were the Perſons who receiv'd it, and whether it were better conſecrated by a Good than by a wicked Prieſt. They return'd him Anſwer that thoſe who receiv'd it unworthily ſhould be damned, but withal averr'd that it might be conſecrated by any good Man, whether Prieſt or Laick. The fifth was about Marriage. They declar'd that they had nothing elſe to reply to that than what St. Paul has ſaid, viz. That a Man and Woman are joyn'd together to avoid Incontinence and Fornication. The ſixth Queſtion was whether Repentance at the Hour of Death could ſave any Man; and whether one was oblig'd to confeſs ones Sins to the Prieſts, or whether one might confeſs them to Laicks. They reply'd that the Sick might confeſs them to whom they pleas'd: As to others they were not willing to determine any Thing, becauſe the Apoſtle St. James ſpeaks only of the Sick. Then they were ask'd whether Contrition and Confeſſion alone were ſufficient to obtain Remiſſion of Sins, without thinking it neceſſary to make Satisfaction, to obſerve Penances, Faſts, Almsgiving, and other Auſterities. They reply'd that the Apoſtle St. James had order'd nothing elſe beſides Confeſſion as neceſſary to Salvation. They declar'd likewiſe without being ask'd, that they believ'd that one ought not to take an Oath: That all thoſe who were ordain'd without having the Qualifications preſcrib'd by St. Paul for Biſhops, were Wolves and Devourers, to whom no Obedience ought to be paid. Thoſe Errors were refuted by Pontius Archbiſhop of Narbonne, by Arnulphus Biſhop of Niſmes, and by two Abbots, which ſerv'd only as Teſtimonies of the New Teſtament. Afterwards the Judges declar'd theſe Bons hommes Heretical, condemn'd Oliver, and his Followers, and all who were of the ſame Opinion with the Hereticks of Lombez, and authoriz'd their Judgment by ſeveral Paſſages out of the Holy Scripture, oppos'd to the Errors which we have been relating. This Sentence was pronounc'd by the Biſhop of Lodeba. Thoſe Hereticks proteſted againſt it, by ſaying that the Biſhop who had pronounc'd it was an Heretick, an Hypocrite, their Enemy, their Perſecutor, and that they were ready to demonſtrate by the Teſtimony of the Goſpel and the Apoſtles, that neither he nor any of the Biſhops were Paſtors, but Mercenaries and Hirelings. The Biſhop reply'd upon them that his Sentence was Juridical, and that he was ready to demonſtrate in the Court of Pope Alexander, in the Court of Lewis King of France, and in that of the Count of Toloufe or of the Counteſs his preſent Wife, and of the Lord Trencavelle who was likewiſe there preſent, that thoſe whom they had condemn'd were Hereticks. Upon this they being thus convinc'd turn'd about to the People, and declar'd that they would make a Profeſſion of their Faith out of Charity, and for the Honour of the Aſſiſtants. The Biſhop bid them obſerve that they did not ſay for the Honour of God, but for the Honour of Aſſiſtants. They made Profeſſion of all the Articles of the Creed, and added that they acknowledg'd that they ought to confeſs with their Mouth the Faith which they conceiv'd in their Hearts: That they believ'd that no Perſon was ſav'd, unleſs he receiv'd the Body of Jeſus Chriſt, which is not preſerv'd but in the true Church; that none elſe beſide Prieſts had Power of Conſecrating it; and that the Bad conſecrated it as well as the Good; that no Body could be ſav'd without Baptiſm, and that Infants are ſav'd by this Sacrament; That Men and Women may be ſav'd tho' in a married State: That every one ought to receive with Heart and Mouth Repentance from the Prieſt, and to be baptiz'd into the Church; and that Laſtly they were ready to acknowledge all that could be demonſtrated to them by the Authority of the Evangeliſts and the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles: The Biſhop urg'd them to ſwear that they would keep to the Doctrine, and to declare whether they ever had any other Opinions. They reply'd that they could not ſwear, becauſe the Goſpel had prohibited all Oaths. The Biſhop determin'd that they ought to ſwear, if they would be credited, and prov'd by ſeveral Inſtances taken out of the New Teſtament, that Oaths were not abſolutely forbidden. They reply'd that the Biſhop of Albi had promis'd them that they ſhould not be oblig'd to ſwear at all. The Biſhop of Albi deny'd that he had made them any ſuch Promiſe, and confirm'd the Sentence pronounc'd by the Biſhop of Lodeba, which was ſign'd by all the Aſſiſtants.

The Hereticks condemn'd at Toulouſe.

Some time after this there appear'd a great many of thoſe Hereticks in Toloufe: The Pope's Legate went thither in the Year 1178. attended by ſeveral Biſhops. They conſtrain'd them to ſubmit to publick Penance, raz'd the Forts wherein in they met, excommunicated and baniſh'd thoſe Hereticks who retir'd into Albigenſis, where they were ſecure. For Roger Count of Albi countenanc'd and made uſe of them in detaining the Biſhop of his City Priſoner. From this Time forward they went under the common Title of Albigenſes. There were a great Number of them not only in that Country, but likewiſe in all Languedoc and Gaſcogne. There were likewiſe Banditi in thoſe Provinces without Law or Goſpel, who ran about the Country, ravag'd, pillag'd and maſſacred all without Diſtinction of Eſtate, Age or Sex; and in an eſpecial Manner aſſaulted Churches and Monaſteries; ſome of them were call'd Barbancons, others Arragoniſts, Navarriſts, and Baſcani; others Cotteraux and Triverdini. The General Council of the Lateran held in the Year 1179. excommunicated all of them, prohibited the interring them in holy Ground, exhorted the Catholick Princes to wage War againſt them, to confiſcate their Goods, and to make them Slaves; granted to thoſe who took up Arms againſt them proportionable to their Services and according to the Diſcretion of the Biſhops, excommunicated thoſe who gave them any Protection, ſuffered them in their Territories or had any Commerce with them.

Of the Heresies in the twelfth Century.

The Condemnation of the Albigenſis in the Lateran Council, A.D. 1179

That Council ſays that the Hereticks of Albi were call'd Cathari, Patarini, Publicans, and went under a great many other Names; which ſhews that they were deſcended from the Hereticks who appear'd in the Beginning of this Century, and were ſo call'd. The Publicans or Poblicans held a great many Caſtles in Gaſcogne. In the Year 1181. Henry Abbot of Clairvaux Biſhop of Albi being in the Quality of Legate, rais'd a great many Troops, and went to give them a Viſit. To divert this Storm they pretended to abjure their Errors; but the Danger once paſt, they follow'd their old Courſe of Life again.

The Hereſy of Terrick.

This Infection ſpread it ſelf in ſeveral Provinces on each ſide the Loire. One of thoſe falſe Apoſtles nam'd Terrick, who lay a long Time conceal'd in a Grott at Corbigny, in the Dioceſs of Nevers, was taken and burnt. Several others ſuffer'd the ſame Puniſhment in other Parts, particularly two old Women in the City of Troyes, to one of whom 'tis ſaid, that this Terrick gave the Name of Church, and to the other the Name of St. Mary, that ſo when his Followers were examined, they might ſwear by St. Mary that they held no other Faith than that of the Holy Church.

Of the Heresies in the twelfth Century.

The Publicans.

Theſe Publicans were likewiſe condemn'd in the Council held at Sens in the year 1198. which depos'd the Abbot of St. Martin's of Nevers, and ſuſpended the Dean of the Church of that City, accus'd of that Hereſy, and referr'd them to the Holy See.

The Errors of Eon de l'Etoile.

There was in the ſame Century a Viſionary who was preſented to Pope Eugenius III. at the opening of the Council of Rheims. He was a Gentleman of Bretagne nam'd Eon de l' Etoile, who was ſo ignorant, that having heard it ſung in the Church: Per eum qui venturus eſt judicare vivos & mortuos; he imagin'd and aſſerted, that it was he who was to judge the Quick and the Dead. He was follow'd as a great Prophet; ſometimes walk'd with a great Train of People at his Heels, ſometimes liv'd in Solitude, and afterwards appear'd in greater Splendor than before. 'Tis ſaid that he was a Magician, and that to draw the Mob after him, he made great Entertainments, but that they were meer Illuſions, and that the Victuals which were eat at his Table, and the Preſents which he made bewitch'd Mens Minds. The Archbiſhop of Rheims having apprehended him, preſented him to his Holineſs, and the Council. His Anſwers were ſo full of Frenſy and Enthuſiaſm, that they look'd upon him as a Fool, and ſhut him up in a Cloſe Priſon, where he dy'd ſoon after. A great many of his Diſciples, a great deal more ſenſleſs than himſelf, choſe rather to be burnt than to renounce him.

Theſe were the Heretical Sects which appear'd in the twelfth Century, and were ſo full of extravagant Errors. If we enquire into the Cauſes of the amazing Progreſs which they made in ſo ſhort a Time, we ſhall find that the Relaxation of Church Diſcipline, the Avarice and Covetouſneſs of Eccleſiaſticks, the common Abuſe which was made of the Sacraments, the Credulity and Ignorance of the People, the pretended Virtues of thoſe new Preachers, and the Deſire of Reformation contributed very much to the ſpreading of thoſe upſtart Opinions.

CHAP. VII.

The Hiſtory of Peter Abaelard, of his Writings, Errors and Condemnation.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

THE famous Peter Abaelard has himſelf given us an Account of his Life and Adventures, which are both diverting and ſingular. We have the Relation thereof in his firſt Letter written to one of his Friends, of which we now give you the Abſtract. He was born in the Village call'd Palais, about three Leagues from the City of Nantes. His Father Berengarius, though a Man of Arms, was yet ſomewhat given to Study, and took Care to give all his Children Learning. Abaelard who was the youngeſt, and very much inclin'd to Letters, renounc'd the Profeſſion of War, to give himſelf up wholly to the Study of Philoſophy. With this Deſign he left his native Country, and after he had frequented ſeveral Schools, came to Paris, where that Science was then in Vogue, and choſe for his Maſter William of Champeaux Archdeacon of Paris, the moſt famous Profeſſor of that Time. After he had liv'd for ſome Time with him in good Repute, he incurr'd his Diſpleaſure, becauſe he undertook to refute his Opinions, and to diſpute againſt him with ſo much Strength, that he ſometimes ſeemed to have the Advantage over him. The great Opinion which he had of his own Parts, made him, though but young, very deſirous of teaching others, and of ſeeking out a convenient Place where he might profeſs publickly. The Caſtle of Melun, which was then a Royal Seat, was pitch'd upon by him as very proper for his Purpoſe, becauſe of its being near to Paris. He obtain'd a Licenſe to teach there publickly, in ſpite of the Oppoſition which William of Champeax made, who did not like, that Abaelard ſhould teach ſo near Paris, for fear that the Reputation which he acquir'd would leſſen his. In Effect Abaelard had no ſooner begun to teach Logick, but the Reputation of William began to ſink, which inclin'd Abaelard to go and ſettle at Corbeil, that ſo being nearer Paris, the Diſputes might be more frequent. Some Time after, this Abaelard was conſtrain'd by a Sickneſs contracted by his great Application to Study, to return to his own Country. During his Abſence, William was made Regular Canon in the Monaſtery of St. Victor, that ſo (as was ſuppos'd) he might with greater Eaſe obtain a Biſhoprick, as happened accordingly, being within a ſhort Time after elected Biſhop of Chalons. Whilſt he ſtay'd at Paris he continued his Lectures in St. Victor; and Abaelard being returned to that City, had ſtudied Rhetorick under him, and renewed the Diſputes in Philoſophy, which he had formerly with him, eſpecially concerning that univerſal à parte rei, which he urged ſo far, that William was forc'd to change his Opinion. which acquir'd Abaelard ſo much Credit, that the Perſon who had ſucceeded William in teaching Logick at Paris, ſurrendred his Place to him. William ſoon after outed both of them, ſo that Abaelard return'd to Melun, from whence he ſoon came back to Paris, and held his publick Lectures at St. Genevieve, where he had a great many Pupils, who were very frequently engag'd in Diſputes with the Scholars of William. But when his Father became Monk, and his Mother Lucia was deſirous likewiſe to live retiredly, Abaelard was forc'd to take a Journey into his own Country. At his Return, he found that William was made Biſhop of Chalons, and he went to that City to ſtudy Divinity under Anſelm, Canon and Dean of the Church of Laon, who profeſs'd it with a great deal of Repute. Abaelard did not find that this Man's Learning anſwer'd the Fame thereof, and ſoon left off going to his Lectures. Several of the Scholars having ask'd him, what he thought of reading the Holy Scriptures; he reply'd, that it was a very uſeful Study, but that he wonder'd that Men of Learning ſhould not be ſatisfy'd with the Commentaries and Gloſſes of the Holy Fathers; without having Recourſe to other Maſters. When they ſmil'd at the Propoſal, he told them that he was ready to make it appear to them that it was poſſible, and to give them an Experiment by explaining to them the moſt difficult Books of the Scriptures, with one ſingle Commentator. They took him at his Word, and made Choice of the Prophecy of Ezekiel. He began to explain it on the Morrow, and thoſe who were preſent at his Explication, thought he had acquitted himſelf ſo well, that they brought a great many others to hear his enſuing Lectures. Anſelm began to grow jealous of him, and moved thereto by Alberic of Rheims, and Lotulphus or Leutaldus of Novar, who had the Repute of being his beſt Scholars. He forbid Abaelard to continue his Lectures, under a Pretence, that if he ſhould advance any erroneous Opinion, it might be imputed to him. Hereupon Abaelard return'd to Paris, where for ſome Time he profeſs'd very quietly, continuing to expound the Holy Scriptures. The Repoſe which he enjoy'd, the Applauſes which he receiv'd, and the Money which he got by this Profeſſion, puff'd him up with Pride, and caſt him into a debauch'd Courſe of Life. But God puniſh'd him for both, by permitting him to be depriv'd of thoſe Parts which had ſerv'd as an Inſtrument to his Luſt, and to be conſtrain'd to burn with his own Hands that Book which he prided himſelf moſt upon; ſo that he became chaſt by Neceſſity, and humble by Force. We will give you now an Account how this came about. There was at Paris a young Woman nam'd Helloiſſa, Niece to Fulbert, Canon of Paris, handſome and well ſhap'd, whom her Unckle who lov'd her tenderly, brought up to Learning. Abaelard who was her Tutor, immediately fell paſſionately in Love with her, and that he might the more eaſily enjoy her, he pray'd the young Woman's Unckle to take him to Board, under a Pretence that he could beſtow more Time upon her, lodging in the ſame Houſe, that beſides he would do him a Kindneſs by eaſing him of the Trouble of Houſe-Keeping, which was not ſuitable to a ſtudious Man. The Unckle who neither diſtruſted the Virtue of his Niece, nor the Prudence of Abaelard, who had hitherto liv'd very regularly, accepted freely of the Propoſal, and intruſted him with Helloiſſa, whom Abaelard courted ſo much the more eaſily, becauſe the Pretence of Study furniſh'd him with an Opportunity of being often alone with her. Sub occaſione diſciplinæ (ſays Abaelard himſelf) amori penitus vacabamus, & ſecretos receſſus, quos Amor optabat, ſtudium Lectionis offerebat. Apertis itaq; Libris plura erant oſcula quam ſententiæ. i. e. Under the Pretence of Learning we had our Fill of Love, and our Study afforded thoſe private Receſſes which our Love required. We opened our Books indeed, but Love, not the Leſſon, was the Burthen of our Diſcourſe, and more Kiſſes were intermingled than Sentences read. The young Woman it ſeems was not ſo hard-hearted, but ſhe anſwered his Flame, and in a ſhort Time the Buſineſs was known to every Body; beſides the Unckle who was the laſt that found it out. Aſſoon as he was inform'd of it, he turn'd Abaelard out of Doors; within a few Days Time after, Helloiſſa, whoſe Love was ſtill the ſame, notwithſtanding this Separation, writ Word to Abaelard, that ſhe was with Child. He brought her off from her Unckle's Houſe, and carry'd her to his own Country, diſguis'd in the Habit of a Nun, where ſhe was brought to Bed of a Boy, who was nam'd Aſtrolabe. The Unckle of Helloiſſa overwhelm'd with Grief at the Loſs of his Niece, would have reveng'd the Affront upon Abaelard's Perſon, had he not been afraid that ſhe would have underwent the ſame Fate. Abaelard to pacifie him, went to wait upon him, and offered to marry his Niece, provided the Marriage were kept ſecret. The Unckle conſented to it, and Abaelard went away immediately to fetch her and make her his Wife. She oppos'd the Reſolution a long Time, foreſeeing that ſhe ſhould be the Ruin of the Fortune, and the Reputation of a Perſon whom ſhe paſſionately lov'd. At laſt, yielding to the preſſing Importunities of Abaelard, ſhe return'd with him to Paris, where ſhe was marry'd privately in a Church in the Preſence of her Unckle, and of ſeveral of their Friends. After they were marry'd they parted, and came together very ſeldom and very privately. The Unckle and his Friends immediately publiſh'd the Marriage abroad; but Helloiſſa, who preferr'd the Honour and Intereſts of Abaelard to her own, and who fear'd that if the Marriage were diſcover'd, he would loſe a Prebend which he had, and his Reputation too, ſwore that nothing could be falſer. This gave her Unckle an Occaſion of abuſing her, ſo that Abaelard reſolv'd upon putting her into the Monaſtery of Argenteuil, where ſhe had been formerly educated, and making her take upon her the Habit of a Nun, but without the Veil. This made her Uncle and her Relations believe that he mock'd them, and deſign'd to abandon her; whereupon they reſolv'd upon being reveng'd of him after a moſt barbarous Manner, and in Effect, enter'd the Chamber of L'Auberge, where he was; and puniſh'd him, by depriving him of thoſe Parts whereby he had injur'd them. It cannot be imagined what Confuſion Abaelard was in, to ſee himſelf in that Condition. He owns that it was this, more than Devotion, which induc'd him to imbrace the Monaſtick Life, after he had perſuaded Helloiſſa to become a Nun. They both made Profeſſion at the ſame Time; Abaelard at St. Denys, and Helloiſſa at Argenteuil. The Diſgrace which Abaelard fell into, did not hinder ſeveral Perſons from waiting upon him at St. Denys, and intreating him to continue his Lectures to them; ſo that the Abbot and the Religious of St. Denys made uſe of this Pretence, to ſend him to teach School in one of their Houſes, that ſo they might be free from the Reproaches which he caſt upon them for their Diſorders. His Reputation drew thither ſo many Scholars from all Parts, that the Place where he was, was not capable of receiving them, nor the Country of providing for them. He taught them the Liberal Arts and Theology. This great Concourſe of Scholars, ſoon rais'd the Jealouſie and Envy of other Maſters againſt Abaelard, who to ſuſpend him from all Sorts of Profeſſions, gave out that it was not proper for a Monk to teach the Liberal Arts, and that he could no longer expound the Holy Scriptures, ſince he had learn'd it without a Maſter.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

The Council of Soiſſons.

The Treatiſe which he compoſed about the Unity of God and about the Trinity, gave his Adverſaries an Occaſion of accuſing him of Error. Alberic and Lotulphus, who taught at Rheims, and who would after the Death of William of Champeaux and Anſelm of Laon, ſucceed alone to their Reputation, being jealous of Abaelard, excited Rodolphus Archbiſhop of Rheims againſt him, who having ſent for Conon Biſhop of Paleſtrina, the Pope's Legate in France, held a Council at Soiſſons, in the Year 1121. and cited Abaelard thither, ordering him to bring his Book along with him. He obey'd that Order, preſented his Book to the Pope's Legate, and ſubmitted it to his Judgment, aſſuring him, that if he had written any Thing contrary to the Catholick Faith, he was ready to correct it, and to make Satisfaction. The Legate order'd him to put his Book into the Hands of the Archbiſhop of Rheims, who ordered it to be ſhown to his two Adverſaries, who read it over and over, to ſee if they could find any Error in it. Alberic met with a Paſſage, wherein Abaelard deny'd that God could be ſaid to generate himſelf. Abaelard juſtify'd it by the Authority of St. Auguſtine, which he had cited, and maintained to his Face, that if he ſhould aſſert the contrary, he would fall into the ſame Hereſie with thoſe who believed, that the Father was the Son of himſelf. Alberic was not ſatisfy'd with this Reply, but continu'd his Proſecutions againſt Abaelard. In the laſt Seſſion of the Council, they put it to the Queſtion, what Order they ſhould make about his Book and about his Perſon. Geofrey Biſhop of Chartres ſaid, that they ought to interrogate Abaelard, and give him Liberty to make his Defence, but his Adverſaries would not venture to ſtand it out with him. The Legate thought it adviſeable to refer this Affair to a more numerous Council; and in the mean Time to ſend Abaelard back to his Monaſtery, where he ſhould be tried. But his Adverſaries made the Legate alter his Mind, and perſuaded him to condemn his Book, to order it to be burnt publickly, and to ſhut up the Author for ever in a Monaſtery; ſaying there was ſufficient Grounds to condemn him, for having undertaken to teach publickly, without having had a Miſſion from the Pope or the Church. When the Biſhop of Chartres perceived that this Reſolution was taken, he advertiſed Abaelard of it, and adviſed him to ſuffer it patiently, and the rather, becauſe this Violence would be more prejudicial to his Enemies than to himſelf, aſſuring him that he ſhould not be long confin'd, becauſe the Legate who did all this againſt his Will, would quickly ſet him at Liberty. Upon this Promiſe he came into the Council, caſt his Book into the Fire with his own Hand, and there recited St Athanaſius's Creed as a Declaration of his Faith. Afterwards he was ſhut up in the Abby of St. Medard of Soiſſons. The Monks of that Monaſtery treated him very civilly, and did what they could to comfort him, but he was a great deal more concern'd at the Affront which had been then offer'd him, than at that Misfortune which happened to him formerly. However the Legate kept to the Promiſe which the Biſhop of Chartres had made him, and within a few Days after ſent him back to his Monaſtery. He was as unacceptable to his fellow Monks, as he had formerly been, and they took Occaſion to give him freſh Diſturbance, becauſe he had aſſerted that St. Denys of France was not the Areopagite, founding his Aſſertion on what Bede ſays, that the Areopagite had been Biſhop of Corinth, whereas 'tis believed that Denys of France had been Biſhop of Athens. This Propoſition did ſo far incenſe the Abbot and the reſt of the Religious againſt him, that he not thinking himſelf ſecure in that Abby, made his Eſcape by Night, and retired into the Territories of Thibaud, Count of Champagne, and dwelt in Provence in an Hoſpital belonging to the Monks of Troyes, the Prior whereof was one of his Friends. His Abbot would fain have had him out again, but dy'd within a ſhort Time after. Abaelard with much ado, obtain'd Leave by the Intereſt of ſome great Lords to live in what Place of Solitude he would, provided he would not enter into any other Monaſtery. After he had obtain'd this Leave, he retir'd to a Solitude near Troyes, where he built a Chappel in a Field, which was given him by ſome private Perſons of the Place, by Conſent of the Biſhop of Troyes. He was no ſooner ſettled there, but he was follow'd by a great Number of Scholars, who built little Cells round about his Lodge, ſo that one would have thought that they were rather Hermits than Scholars. They furniſhed him with all that he had Occaſion for, either for his Nouriſhment or Refreſhment, and built him a Church which was dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Abaelard gave it the Title of Paraclete, in Memory of the Conſolation which he had received in that Place. His Adverſaries found Fault at that Appellation, pretending that one could not dedicate a Church to the Holy Ghoſt alone. Upon this Abaelard obſerves, that the Name of Paraclete might be very well apply'd to all the three Perſons of the Trinity; and that if it were only the peculiar Title of the Holy Ghoſt, yet one might without any Scruple dedicate a Temple to the Holy Ghoſt, though it might be ſo cuſtomary. His Enemies perceiving that they were not ſtrong enough of themſelves to ruin him, ſtirred up two great Perſons againſt him, who were Men of the higheſt Eſteem. One was the Reſtorer of the ancient Life of the Regular Canons, and the other of the Life of the the Monks. ('Tis St. Norbert and St. Bernard which he here means.) Theſe two Men declaim'd againſt both his Life and Morals, before the Eccleſiaſtical and Secular Powers. To eſcape this Storm, he accepted of the Abby of St. Gildors of Ruy's in the Dioceſs of Nantes in Bretagne, though the Monks thereof were very barbarous and cruel, with whom it was very difficult for him to converſe. This happened at the ſame Time when the Abbot of St. Denys took to himſelf the Abby of Argentevil, and the Nuns of that Place being diſpers'd, Abaelard gave to Heloiſſa, who was Prioreſs thereof, and to ſeveral other of the Religious who had follow'd her, the Church of the Paraclete and its Dependencies. This Donation was confirmed by the Biſhop of Troyes, and by Pope Innocent II. and by Degrees, this Convent which was very poor at its firſt Riſe, was plentifully endowed by the Liberality of the Faithful. Abaelard went often thither to aſſiſt them in their Needs, which gave Occaſion to the Malicious of accuſing him, of having ſtill a Paſſion for Heloiſſa, and of attributing to the Motions of his fleſhly Luſts, what he did out of a pure Motive of Charity, or to avoid the ill Treatment of his Monks, who perpetually ſought for an Opportunity to get rid of him.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

The Letters of Heloiſſa to Abaelard.

This Letter of Abaelard fell into the Hands of Heloiſſa, whereupon ſhe ſent him Word, that having known his Hand-writing, ſhe could not forbear to read it over with all the Eagerneſs which the Paſſion ſhe had for him could inſpire into her. That it was but very reaſonable ſince ſhe had ruin'd him, that ſhe might at leaſt receive ſome Conſolation by the reading of his Letters. That this however had very much afflicted her, by putting her in Mind of the Miſeries which had happened to him, and letting her know of the Danger wherein he was: That ſhe conjur'd him to ſend her often Word how he did, that ſo ſhe might partake with him either in his Grief or his Joy: That ſince he had been pleaſed for the Satisfaction of his Friend to ſend him an Account of his Misfortunes, he lay under greater Obligations to write to her and her Religious, whom he ought to eſteem not only as his Friends, but as Perſons entirely at his Devotion; not as Companions, but as his own Daughters, who were beholden to him alone for the Monaſtery which they were in Poſſeſſion of: That it was he who firſt rendred that Solitude Habitable, and was the Founder of that Houſe: That it was his Duty likewiſe to beſtow all his Cares upon it; and that having done ſo much for others, it was very reaſonable he ſhould be ſerviceable to them alſo. That he was farther oblig'd thereto, upon Conſideration of the Relation ſhe had to him, of the extream Love which ſhe always had for him, and the great Loſs which ſhe had ſuffer'd by parting from him. Afterwards ſhe expreſſes the Sentiments of her quondam Paſſion to him, ſo as not only to ſay that ſhe never lov'd any Thing in him beſides his own Perſon, but alſo that the Name of Concubine ſeem'd more eligible to her than that of Wife, becauſe it would wound his Reputation leſs, and have made her a greater Sacrifice. She adds, that altho' the Emperor would have had her in Marriage, and beſtowed the whole Empire upon her, yet ſhe choſe to be Abaelard's Miſtreſs, rather than Empreſs. (By this you may perceive the Violence of a Woman's Paſſion.) To this ſhe ſubjoins the Remembrance of ſeveral other reciprocal Teſtimonies of Love, which they had given each other; and afterwards ſhe upbraids him for that, though in Obedience to him ſhe was made a Nun; yet that he had ſo far ſlighted or rather forgot her, that ſhe had received no Refreſhment by his Viſits, nor Comfort by his Letters. 'Is it, ſays ſhe, be-'cauſe the Bond which tyed you to me was rather the Heat 'of Luſt than the Force of Love?' She avows, that it was not out of Devotion, but in Obedience to her Husband's Commands, that ſhe had embrac'd the Monaſtick Life; that ſhe could not expect any Reward from the Lord for it, for whoſe Sake ſhe had not done it: That ſhe had follow'd, or rather preceded her Husband, and that one of thoſe Things which troubled her moſt was, that he had ingag'd her to dedicate her ſelf to God, before he had reſolv'd upon it himſelf, as if he had ſome Diſtruſt of her Fidelity. She aſſures him, that even at preſent, ſhe had him ſtill in her Mind, and lov'd him ſtill. She intreats him to conſider what a Piece of Ingratitude it would be in him to refuſe to viſit her, and comfort her with his Letters, ſince that would be a Means of her ſerving God with the leſs Diſtraction. And laſtly, that ſince he had formerly writ ſo many Love Letters to excite a diſhonourable Paſſion in her, it was very reaſonable that he ſhould write ſome to her now to incline her to God.

Abaelard's Letter to Heloiſſa.

Abaelard return'd an Anſwer, That it was not out of Negligence that he had deferr'd writing to her, but becauſe he had ſo much Confidence in her Piety and Learning, as to think that ſhe ſtood in no Need of his Advice: That if ſhe thought that ſhe wanted it, ſhe might inform him of the Points wherein ſhe deſir'd his Inſtruction, and that he would ſatisfie her therein. He thanks her for being ſo kind as to participate in his Afflictions, and recommends himſelf to her Prayers, and the Prayers of her Fraternity. From this he takes an Occaſion to ſhew how grateful the Prayers of Holy Virgins are to God. In particular he takes Notice to her of a Form of Prayers, which he deſired that they would ſay for him at the Cloſe of the Canonical Hours; and tells her, that after his Death, he would have his Body be brought to their Monaſtery to be there interr'd, that they might pray to God for the Quiet of his Soul.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

This Letter very ſenſibly affected Helloiſſa, becauſe Abaelard therein ſpeaks of his Death, as if near at Hand. She had ſo much Affection for him, that ſhe could not bear this Thought, without being very much diſturbed at it. She declares thoſe Thoughts to him in a very pathetical Manner in the Letter, which ſhe ſent back to him, wherein ſhe could not forbear reflecting upon the Misfortune which had happened to Abaelard through her Means. She deſir'd that ſhe might undergo a Penance worthy of her Fault. and owns that ſhe is ſtill ſo weak, as not to efface out of her Memory the Remembrance of paſt Pleaſures, but that they continually preſent themſelves to her Mind, which gives her great Cauſe of Humiliation, and of rejecting the Praiſes which he had beſtowed upon her.

Another Letter of Heloiſſa.

Abaelard's Reply.

Abaelard endeavoured to comfort her by excuſing himſelf of the Reproaches which ſhe had caſt upon him in that Letter, which he reduced to four Heads. The firſt was about the Complaint which ſhe made of his having nam'd her firſt in the Inſcription of this Letter. The ſecond about the Reproach which ſhe had caſt upon him, of having increaſed her Grief, rather than afforded her any Conſolation. The third about the Reflections which ſhe had made upon their paſt Misfortunes. And the laſt about her Refuſal of the Praiſes which he had given her. As to the firſt Head, he ſatisfy'd her by ſaying, that ſince ſhe was become the Spouſe of Jeſus Chriſt, ſhe was according to St. Jerom's Phraſe his Miſtreſs, and that upon that Account, he had Reaſon to name her firſt. From thence he took an Occaſion to give her ſome Inſtructions about the Virtues requiſite for the Spouſe of Jeſus Chriſt. Upon the ſecond Head he ſays, that he had not mention'd any Thing of his Death, or the Danger wherein he was, in his Letter, if ſhe had not conjur'd him to do it. Upon the third Head, he approves of her rejecting all Praiſes, provided it were ſincere, and if ſhe did not contemn them out of a Principle of Pride. As to the fourth Head, he intreats her to make no farther Complaints of a Misfortune which he really deſerv'd, as due to his Sins, whereof he was throughly ſenſible. He adviſes her rather to give God Thanks for the Favour he had ſhewn to both of them, by bringing them out of a diſorderly Courſe of Life, to lead a more regular one. He look'd upon that Pain which had been inflicted on him as very light, in Compariſon of the Crimes which he had committed, and thought himſelf very happy in being deliver'd from that which had been the Cauſe of his Sin. He concludes with a Prayer which the Religious of the Nunnery of Paraclete ought to ſay for him and Heloiſſa.

The Letter of Heloiſſa

In the next Letter Heloiſſa in Obedience to the Order which Abaelard had given her, made no more Mention of their Misfortunes, but intreated him on Behalf of her ſelf and her Religious, in the firſt Place to inform them of the Original of their Order, and of the Authority thereof. In the ſecond Place, to compoſe a particular Rule, and ſuch as might be proper for them, which had not as yet been done, the Monks and Nuns profeſſing the ſame Rule of St. Benedict, wherein were a great many Things which were only applicable to Men; as for Inſtance, that which is ſaid about Habits, Functions, the Abbot, the Entertaining of Strangers, Manufactures, and other Practices which their Sex was not capable of: That if according to the Intention of St. Benedict, the Rule ought to be moderated in Favour of the Weak, it was very reaſonable to do ſo in Favour of the Virgins; that the external Exerciſes which are ſuch as they were the leaſt capable of, were likewiſe the leaſt neceſſary. For this Reaſon ſhe exhorts Abaelard to draw up a diſcretionary Rule for them, which might be ſuited to their Weakneſs, particularly with Relation to the Faſts and Service of the Church, it being very reaſonable that he who under God was the Founder of their Monaſtery, ſhould be likewiſe the Inſtitutor of their Rule.

Abaelard's Reply to Heloiſſa.

Abaelard anſwers the firſt Queſtion of Heloiſſa in the ſeventh Letter, wherein he pretends that the Monaſtical Orders as well of Men as Women, drew its Original from the Manner of Jeſus Chriſt's living here on Earth. That there were ſeveral Examples of this in the Old Law: That the Women who attended our Saviour and the Bleſſed Virgin, who liv'd in Common with the Apoſtles, the Virgins and Widows of the Primitive Church, led a religious Life. Afterwards he enlarges himſelf on the Praiſes of the Sex, and particularly on thoſe of Virgins, of whom he makes a learned Encomium throughout the whole Letter.

He ſatisfied Heloiſſa in her ſecond Demand, by ſending to her a full Inſtruction about Continence, voluntary Poverty, Silence and Solitude, to which are annex'd particular Conſtitutions for the Abbeſs, and for the other Officers of the Covent, and about the Order which they ought to obſerve in the Divine Service, in Meats, in Habits, and in reading of the Holy Scriptures, to which he adviſes them above all Things. This Rule is full of very useful Instructions, and of fine Passages out of Scripture, and the Writings of the Fathers apply'd very much to the Purpose. There is to be found in the Manuscript of the Abby of Paraclete another Collection of particular Rules which are attributed to Heloissa.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

Fulcus Prior of Deuil bore likewise a Share in the Misfortune which happened to Abaelard, and wrote him a Consolatory Letter upon that Subject, wherein he advises him to stay in his Monastery, and not to undertake a Journey to Rome to demand Justice of the Canon, who had been the Cause of his being so abus'd. This is the first Letter of the second Collection which relates to Abaelard.

The Letters of Abaelard.

The second is a Memoir of Abaelard, directed to Adam, Abbot of St. Denys, and to the Monks of that Monastery, and to prove against the Testimony of Bede, that Denys the Areopagite was not Bishop of Corinth, but Bishop of Athens.

In the third directed to a Regular Canon, who despis'd the Monks and extoll'd the Regular Clerks, and maintain'd that the Monastical Order was inferior to the Clerical; Abaelard takes the Monks Part, and maintains that the monastical Order was not in the least inferior to that of the Regular Canons, whether one regard the Figure which they make among Men, or that which Religion gives them in the Sight of God. The Reasons which he alledges for this were, that we see every Day Clerks who embraced the Monastical Life, and that after they had done so, were not permitted to re-enter into the Clerical Order. That the Monks who were made Choice of to execute the Clerical Functions, never quit their Habit: That they often made Choice of Monks to make them Bishops, whereas they never chose Clerks to preside over Monasteries: That in the Litanies and Prayers of the Church, the Suffrages of the Monks were implor'd: That the Monks are advanc'd to Holy Orders, and even to Priesthood it self: That St. Jerome prefers the Monastical State to that of Clerks, as being more perfect: That St. John Baptist quitted the Priesthood to lead a solitary Life: That the Monks are in less Danger of their Salvation, than the Clerks, who are oblig'd to converse so much with the World: That the Monks embrace the contemplative Life which our Saviour preferr'd before the active Life: That the Regular Canons whose Institution was but new, imitate the Monks in living in Common in Cloysters: That lastly, the Life of Monks is more painful and more austere than that of the Clerks.

The fourth Letter is against those who condemn the Use of Logick. Abaelard compares them to the Fox in the Fable, who slighted the Fruit at which he could not get. He says, that those Doctors do in the same Manner despise Logick, because they have not a Genius to comprehend it. He makes it appear, that the Holy Fathers, and particularly St. Augustine have commended this Art, and thought it necessary for the right Explication of the Holy Scriptures. He owns that one ought to avoid the Love of Disputing, and the Desire of deceiving others by Sophisms; but he would have Men have an Insight both into Logick and Sophistry, to discern good Argumentations from false ones. He maintains, that without Logick 'tis very difficult to refute Hereticks.

The fifth is writ to St. Bernard, about the Intelligence which Abaelard had received from Heloissa Abbess of Paraclete, that that Saint coming to that Monastery, had observed them to repeat the Lord's-Prayer quite different from what was done in other Churches, and looked upon it as a Novelty, which he thought Abaelard had introduc'd. All the Difference consisted in that they said our Super-substantial Bread, instead of our daily Bread. Abaelard observes, that the first Phrase being in the Text of St. Matthew, who has given us the Lord's-Prayer more entire and compleat than St. Luke, and whose Phrases are follow'd except in this; it seem'd more reasonable to change nothing in the Text, and to make use of the Phrase which St. Matthew has used, than to insert into St. Matthew's Text a Phrase taken out of St. Luke's Gospel. That therefore one ought not to accuse those of a Novelty, who in repeating the Lord's-Prayer say, Give us our Super substantial Bread, instead of our daily Bread, since they are the very Words used by St. Matthew, whose Form was follow'd. That however he did not blame the contrary Usage; but that he did not believe this Usage was to be preferr'd to the Truth, and the rather, because the Greek Church had retain'd the proper Terms of St. Matthew's Gospel. That St. Bernard had the least Reason of any Man to find Fault with this Alteration, since there were in his Order a great many Novelties contrary to the ancient Customs and Usages of the Monks and Clerks, even in the Divine Service; such as, for Instance, the Singing of new Hymns, the Singing of the same Hymn on different Festivals; the not repeating the Suffrages which were elsewhere said after the Lord's-Prayer; the omitting the Commemoration of the Virgin and of the Saints at the End of the Office; the having excluded almost entirely the Usage of Processions; the Singing Alleluiah even to Quinquagesima-Sunday; the not reciting the Apostles Creed at Prime and the Vespers, and the Singing of the Invitatory, the Hymn and the Gloria Patri the last three Days in the holy Week. Tho' those Practices were contrary to the common Usage of the Church, yet St. Bernard did not think himself oblig'd to leave them, because he esteem'd them more reasonable and more conformable to the Rule. From hence Abaelard concludes, that upon a stronger Reason one could not well disapprove the Alteration which he had made in the Lord's-Prayer, tho' it might seem a Novelty; and the rather because the Novelties which are prohibited are not those of Expressions, but those of Opinions, since the Church has invented new Phrases to explain our Mysteries: That lastly, there be a world of different Customs in the Church with respect to Ceremonies; That in Rome no Church beside the Lateran observes the ancient Usage of the Holy See: That in Milan only the Cathedral Church observes its ancient Rites: That the Church of Lyons is the only Church which has retain'd it's ancient Office; and that the Diversity of Ceremonies has likewise its Advantages. Lastly, he concludes by saying, that every one might abound in his own Sense, and repeat the Lord's-Prayer in the Way which he should think most proper: That he does not pretend to persuade others to imitate him therein: That he left those who would at their Liberty to change the Words of Jesus Christ, but for his Part he would endeavour all he could to keep to the proper Terms of Jesus Christ, as well as to his Words.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

The sixth Letter is an Exhortation to the Religious of Paraclete, to study that they might be capable of reading and understanding the Holy Scriptures: It hardly consists of any Thing else but Passages out of St. Jerome upon that Subject. He congratulates their Happiness in having such a learned Abbess as was able to teach them Latin, Greek, and Hebrew; the Languages which were necessary for their rightly understanding of the Scriptures. He recommends to them the having Recourse to the Original Text, which is the Foundation of all Versions; and to study Hebrew and Greek, the Study whereof, he complains, was very much neglected in his Time. He wishes that those Nuns would recover that Learning, which the Men had suffer'd to be lost. And takes notice, that they might apply themselves to it the more easily, because they were less capable of working with their Hands than Men, and were the more oblig'd to it by the Quietness and Sedateness of their Lives, and because the Weakness of their Sex render'd them more liable to Temptations, which they might divert by being thus employ'd.

The seventh is a Panegyrick on St. Stephen, dedicated to the Nuns of Paraclete.

The Christs brought against Abaelard.

From the Year 1121. wherein Abaelard was forc'd in the Council of Soissons to call his Book of Theology into the Fire, he had met with no Disturbance about his Doctrine, tho' he had still continu'd to write and teach the same Things as before. The first who renew'd the Charge of Errors against him was William Abbot of St. Thierry, who having read two Books of Theology compos'd by Peter Abaelard, and therein found such Propositions as put him to some Disturbance, and which he thought to be contrary to sound Doctrine, sent an Account of them to Geofrey Bishop of Chartres, and to St. Bernard Abbot of Clairvaux, exhorting them to declare themselves against those Novelties, and to get them to be condemn'd. His Letter is the three hundred and twenty sixth among the Letters of St. Bernard. He therein says, that he is very much abash'd to speak his Mind at a Time wherein those whose Duty it was to do it held their Peace; but that he could not be silent when he saw the Faith of the Church corrupted by very dangerous Errors, and the rather because the Contest was about the Faith which related to the Trinity, the Person of our Mediator, the Holy Ghost, the Grace of Jesus Christ, and the Sacrament of our Redemption; and because the new Notions which Peter Abaelard taught and writ, were spread through the World, and taught and maintain'd publickly, and had (as 'tis said) some Repute even in the Court of Rome. He exhorts Geofrey and St. Bernard to undertake the Defence of the Faith, and tells them that he apply'd himself more particularly to them, because Abaelard fear'd them more than all the World beside. He afterwards relates thirteen Propositions, which he said he had taken out of the Writings of Abaelard: viz. 1. That he defin'd Faith to be the Idea of Things not seen. 2. That he asserts that the Names of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are not properly applicable to God: But that 'tis only a Description of the Plentitude of the Soveraign Good. 3. That the Father is a full Power, the Son a certain Power, and the Holy Ghost no Power at all. 4. That the Holy Ghost does not partake of the Substance of the Father and the Son, in the same Manner as the Son does of the Substance of the Father. 5. That the Holy Ghost is Anima Mundi, i. e. The Soul of the World. 6. That one may do either Good or Evil by one's own Free-will, without the Influence and Assistance of the Grace of God. 7. That Jesus Christ was not made Man, and did not suffer to deliver us from the Bondage of the Devil. 8. That Christ as God-Man is not one of the three Persons of the Trinity. 9. That in the Sacrament crament of the Altar, the Form of the Substance of Bread and Wine which was there before the Consecration, remains the same afterwards. 10. That he maintains that the Suggestions of the Devil are infus'd into Man by Physical Causes. 11. That we do not contract the Guilt, but the Punishment only of Original Sin. 12. That there is no Sin, unless in the Consent we give to Sin, and in the Contemning of God. 13. That there is no Sin of Concupiscence, Lust or Ignorance. These are the Articles which William Abbot of Thierry says, that he drew out of the Book of Abaelard's Divinity. He adds that he heard say, that he had written likewise several other Opuscula, whereof one was intituled, the Yea and the No; another, Know thy self, and several others, the Doctrine of which he was affraid was as monstrous as the Titles were extraordinary and singular. After this Letter William writes a Treatise levell'd expressly against those Errors, which is to be met with in the Library of Cisteaux, and to which this Letter serves as a Preface.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

St. Bernard return'd William this Answer, that he perceiv'd that the Zeal which he express'd against the Errors of Abaelard was reasonable and necessary, and that the Book which he had compos'd to refute him seem'd very useful, tho' he had not as yet time but only to read it cursorily, and not exactly; but that since this was a Business of great Consequence, he desir'd to have a Conference with him about it, which yet he thought could not be before Easter, for fear of interrupting his Devotions in the Season of Lent. That besides he would not have been so long silent, if he had had a perfect Knowledge of the Errors of Abaelard.

When he was inform'd of them and had examin'd Abaelard's Book himself, he very charitably admonish'd him to retract his Errors and to correct his Books, and advis'd his Disciples to read them no more. This Admonition serv'd only to exasperate Abaelard, who made loud Complaints against St. Bernard: So that this Saint perceiving that the private Admonition which he had given him prov'd ineffectual, he thought it his Duty to tell it to the Church, and wrote against him to Innocent II. and to several Prelates of the Court of Rome, accusing him of making Degrees in the Trinity with Arius, of preferring Free-Will before Grace with Pelagius, of dividing Jesus Christ with Nestorius, by excluding him out of the Number of the Persons of the Trinity. He exhorts them warmly to oppose those Errors and condemn them. This is the Subject Matter of the hundred and eightieth, the three hundred and thirtieth, the three hundred and thirty first, thirty second, thirty third, thirty fourth, thirty fifth, and thirty sixth Letters of St. Bernard.

The Decrees of the Council of Sens against Abaelard.

Abaelard seeing himself thus accus'd, made his Application to Henry Archbishop of Sens, and intreated him that he would summon St. Bernard to the Council which was to be held, that so he might enter into dispute with him about the Principal Errors which he imputed to him. The Archbishop of Sens wrote to St. Bernard to come on the Day appointed on the Octave of Pentecost in the Year 1140. to the Synod, that he might enter into a Conference with Abaelard in presence of the Bishops. St. Bernard made some Scruple at first of coming thither, whether he thought (as he said) that he was too strong for him in Disputes, or whether he thought that the Truths of the Christian Faith ought not to be expos'd to the Argumentation of Humane Reasonings. He at first answer'd that the Writings of Abaelard were sufficient to convince him, and that it was not his Business, but the Bishops to whom of right did belong the Determination of the Doctrines of Faith. Abaelard made an Advantage of this Refusal, and spread abroad that he would be at Sens on the Day appointed to answer St. Bernard. Upon this, St. Bernard's Friends fearing that his Absence would prove an Offence to the People, and create a Confidence in his Adversary, and confirm his Error, advis'd him to go to the Council of Sens. He advertises the Bishops and his Friends of it in a Circular Letter, which is his hundred and eighty seventh, and exhorted them to undertake the Defence of a Cause which was more properly theirs than his own.

The Bishops met at Sens on the Octave of Whitsuntide, when the Relicks were to be shewn in the Cathedral Church of that City. All the Bishops of the Province of Sens met there, except the Bishops of Nevers and Paris viz: Geofrey of Chartres Legate of the Holy See, Elias of Orleans, Hugh of Auxerre, Hatto of Troyes, Manasses of Meaux. Sampson Archbishop of Rheims was likewise there with three of his Suffragans, viz: Josselin Bishop of Soissons, Geofrey of Chalons, and Alvisus of Arras; a great many Abbots, Deans and Persons of Learning and Piety were likewise there. The King himself (Lewis the Young) was likewise present with William Count of Nevers. The Council being set, St. Bernard produc'd there Peter Abaelard's Book, recited the Erroneous or Absurd Propositions which he had extracted thence, and urg'd Peter Abaelard either to disown that he had writ them, or if he would acknowledge them to be his, to prove or retract them. Peter Abaelard had recourse to Shifts, and would not answer expresly, tho' he had Liberty given him to do it, had very favourable Judges, and was in a place where he needed not to fear any Thing. But whether he fear'd an Insurrection of the People, if Otho of Frisingen's Word be to be taken in the Case, or whether he thought he should have greater Advantage at Rome, where were Cardinals and Prelates who thought it an Honour to be his Disciples, he appeal'd to the Pope, and afterwards withdrew from the Assembly attended with those of his Party. Tho' the Bishops were of Opinion that this Appeal was not Regular, because he appeal'd to Judges of his own Choosing; yet out of Respect to the Holy See, they would not pronounce any Sentence against his Person; but they condemn'd his Opinions after they had been read over several times, and refuted publickly by St. Bernard. This Sentence being pass'd, the Archbishop of Sens and his Suffragans, and the Archbishop of Rheims with his three Suffragans who were at the Synod wrote severally to Pope Innocent II. to desire him to confirm the Sentence which they had pass'd against the Errors of Abaelard, and to intreat him to prevent his teaching any longer, and his having any Countenance at the Court of Rome. Their Letters are the hundred and ninety first, and the three hundred and thirty seventh among the Letters of St. Bernard, who doubtless compos'd them himself. He wrote likewise in his own Name to the Pope the hundred and eighty ninth Letter wherein he earnestly exhorts him to proscribe the Errors of Abaelard, and to hinder him from having any Countenance in the Court of Rome. He likewise sent him the Heads which he had found fault with in Abaelard's Book, with an ample Refutation of his Errors. This is the hundred and ninetieth, or ninety first Opuscule. Lastly to prevent Abaelard from making Use of that Credit which he had at Rome in his Favour, he wrote to three Cardinals his Friends, to do what they could, that Abaelard might not succeed in his Designs. This is the Subject Matter of the hundred and second, the hundred and third, and three hundreth and thirty eighth Letters.

The Confirmation of the Sentence pass'd by the Council of Sens, by the Pope.

The Pope return'd Answer to the Prelates of the Council of Sens, and to St. Bernard, that he commended the Zeal which they had express'd against the Errors of Abaelard: That after he had advis'd with the Bishops and Cardinals he had condemn'd the Heads which they had sent him, and all the Errors of Peter Abaelard with the Author of them, on whom he impos'd a perpetual Silence as on a Heretick, and that he had adjudg'd that all the Followers and Defenders of his Errors ought to be excommunicated. This Letter which is the hundred and ninety fourth among St. Bernard's bears date July the 16*th*. in the Year 1140. In an Order of the same or the foregoing Day, directed to the same Bishops and St. Bernard, he joyns Peter Abaelard to Arnulphus of Bresse, and orders the Bishops to imprison them, and to burn their Books where-ever they found them.

Abaelard's Apology.

Abaelard to justify himself compos'd an Apology, or rather a Confession of Faith, wherein after he had taken Notice, that it was a hard matter, when one writ, to avoid Reproach; he protests in the presence of God, that he is not at all Sensible of being Guilty of those Things whereof they accus'd him; and that if he were satisfied of his having advanc'd any Error, he was resolv'd to maintain it no longer: That it might happen that by carelessness he might have writ what he ought not to have writ; but that he calls God to Witness, that as to those Points whereof he was accus'd, he had advanc'd nothing out of an ill Design, or Pride; That he always spoke in Publick, and never conceal'd his Writings: That if in that great Number of Lectures which he had held, he had faln into any Extravagancies, he would never be stiff in the Maintenance of them, but would be always ready to give Satisfaction by correcting or blotting out what he might have advanc'd improperly: But that as it was his Duty to correct the Faults which he had committed, he was likewise oblig'd to refute those Accusations of Error which had been falsly laid to his Charge, because as St. Augustine says, he who is negligent of his Reputation is an Enemy to himself, and Silence is a kind of Confession: That 'tis for this Reason that he Answers those Heads which are publish'd against him, to let all the Faithful know that he is a true Son of the Church; that he receiv'd whatever it receiv'd; that he rejected whatever it rejected, and that he always continu'd in the Union of the Church, tho' he were not equal to others in the Sanctity of his Life. He thereupon in this Apology rejects the Errors whereof he was accus'd, and professes the contrary Truths, by declaring (1.) That he abhorr'd the Proposition which had been maliciously imputed to him, that the Father had a perfect Power, that the Son had only a certain Power, and that the Holy Ghost had no Power at all; and he professes that he believes that the Son and Holy Ghost are of the same Substance with the Father, and that they have the same Power, and the same Will, and pretends that it was either out of Malice or Ignorance that they had accus'd him of having said that the Holy Ghost was not of the same Substance with the Father. (2.) That he professes to believe that the Only Son of God was made Man to deliver us from the Slavery of Sin and from the Bondage of the Devil, and to open an Entrance to us to Heaven by his Death. (3.) That Jeſus Chriſt is the true and only Son of God, Born of the Subſtance of the Father before all Worlds; and that the Holy Ghoſt is the third Perſon of the Trinity who proceeded from the Father and the Son. (4.) That the Grace of God is ſo neceſſary to all Men, that neither Nature, nor Free-will are ſufficient to Salvation, becauſe Grace prevents us that we may Will, follows that we may do what we Will, and accompanies us that we may perſevere. (5.) That God cannot do any Thing but what is agreeable to his Nature for him to do, and that he has indeed Power of doing a great many Things which he will never do. (6.) That there are Sins of Ignorance, eſpecially when it proceeds from an Omiſſion of having learn'd what we are oblig'd to know. (7.) That God often hinders Evils, either by preventing the evil Wills of wicked Men, or by changing them. (8.) That we have all contracted the Guilt and Puniſhment of Adam's Sin, which has been the Cauſe and Original of all our Sins. (9.) That thoſe who crucified Jeſus Chriſt committed a notorious Sin by nailing him to the Croſs. (10.) That the Perfection of Charity was in Jeſus Chriſt. (11.) That the Power of Binding or Unbinding was granted to the Apoſtles and their Succeſſors, and that all Biſhops be they Worthy or Unworthy have that Power, ſo long as the Church acknowledges them as Biſhops. (12.) That all thoſe who are equal in Charity, are equal likewiſe in Perfection and Merit. (13.) That the Father is as Wiſe as the Son, and the Son as Beneficent as the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe the Glory of the three Perſons of the Trinity is coequal. (14.) That one cannot attribute to the Father the laſt Judgment or Advent. (15.) That the Soul of Jeſus Chriſt did not only deſcend into Hell in Power, but likewiſe really and ſubſtantially. (16.) That he had not maintain'd, that neither Action, nor the Will, nor Luſt, nor Pleaſure were Sins, and that we ought not to pray for the quenching of our Luſts. Laſtly he aſſerts that they did him wrong in attributing a Book of Sentences to him which he had never compos'd; and conjures all the Faithful not to injure his Innocence, which the Truth ſhelters from all the Faults aſcribed to him, and the rather becauſe Charity requires us to put the beſt Senſe on doubtful Matters.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

The Retreat of Abaelard to Cluny and his Death.

After he had publiſh'd this Apology, he ſet out on his Journey towards Rome; but being arriv'd at Cluny, he was detain'd there by Peter the Venerable, Abbot of Cluny. Whilſt he was there, the Abbot of Ciſteaux coming thither likewiſe, endeavour'd to bring him to make his Peace with St. Bernard. Peter the Venerable urg'd the ſame Thing to him alſo, perſuaded him to go and wait upon him with the Abbot of Ciſteaux, and adviſ'd him that in caſe he had ſaid or writ any thing which might be Offenſive to the Ears of the Catholicks, to advance no ſuch ſuch thing for the future, and to ſtrike it out of his Books. He took his Advice, waited upon St. Bernard, and was reconcil'd to him by the Mediation of the Abbot of Ciſteaux. He return'd afterwards to Cluny, where he reſolv'd to ſpend the reſt of his Days in Repoſe free from the Hurry and Fatigue of the Schools. Peter the Venerable thought himſelf oblig'd to allow this Favour to his Age, to his Weakneſs and to his Piety: Not Queſtioning withal but that his Learning would be very Advantageous for the Inſtruction of his Monks. He wrote about it to Pope Innocent and pray'd him to grant that Abaelard might ſpend the remainder of his Life with them. 'Tis to be believed that the Pope granted him that Favour; for Abaelard reſided in that Community till he dy'd, and behav'd himſelf with a great deal of Piety and Humility for two Years together. Towards the End of his Life he found himſelf very much oppreſs'd with Infirmities, and was ſent to the Monaſtery of St. Marcellus of Chalons upon the Seyne, as being a more healthful and pleaſant Place, where he dy'd in the Year 1142. in the ſixty third Year of his Age. Peter the Venerable acquainted Heloiſſa of his Death by a Letter, wherein he gives her an Encomium of his Manner of Living ever ſince he had retreated to their Society, annexes thereto an Epitaph in his praiſe, and ſent his Body to the Abby of Paraclete to be there interr'd. He afterwards went himſelf to viſit that Abby, where he ſaid Maſs, made an Exhortation to the Religious in the Chapter Houſe, gave them the Euchariſt, and promis'd Heloiſſa to put up Prayers to God for her in the Society of Cluny for thirty Days together after her Death. She thank'd him for all thoſe Favours in a Letter which ſhe ſent to him, and at the ſame time intreats him to ſend her Abaelard's Abſolution, and to procure a Prebend for her Son Aſtrolabe. Peter the Venerable ſent her this Abſolution, and promis'd her to do his beſt for the procuring a Prebend for her Son, tho' the Biſhops were very Scrupulous in granting thoſe Sort of Benefices.

The Works of Abaelard.

The Works of Abaelard which are now extant are the Letters which we have mention'd in the Courſe of his Hiſtory, Expoſitions of the Lords Prayer, of the Apoſtles Creed, and of the Creed of St. Athanaſius, a Reply to the Queſtions or Problems propos'd by Heloiſſa, a Book about Hereſies, a Commentary on the Epiſtle to the Romans divided into five Books, thirty two Sermons on the Feſtivals of the Year, an Introduction into Theology divided into three Books, the laſt of which is imperfect. Thoſe which are loſt, or have not as yet been printed, are his Logick, of which he makes mention in his firſt Letter and in the third Book of his Theology; his Notes upon Ezekiel, his Morals intituled Noſce Teipſum, Know thy ſelf: another Book intituled, Sic & Non, Yea and No, which is to be met with in Manuſcript in the Library of St. Germain of Prez, ſo intitul'd, becauſe 'tis a Collection of ſuch Sentences out of Holy Writ, as are in Appearance contrary to each other, and a Treatiſe of the Creation of the World, dedicated to Heloiſſa, which is likewiſe a Manuſcript in the ſame Library.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

In abſtracting his Works we will begin with his Introduction into Theology; which is the Book which has made ſo great a Noiſe in the World, it being that which Contains the Principles of his Doctrine, and the Heads upon which he was reprehended and condemn'd.

He begins the firſt Book with the Explication of Faith, Hope and Charity; he ſays that there are three Things neceſſary to Salvation, Faith, Charity, and the Sacrament; for he believes that Hope is comprehended in Faith, as a Species in its Genus. He defines Faith to be the Eſtimation or Idea of inviſible Things; and Hope the Expectation of ſome Good Faith, according to him, has Reſpect to Good and Evil, both preſent and future; whereas Hope has only regard to future Good. He defines Charity to be an honourable Love directed to its due End or Object; and Luſt on the Contrary to be a ſhameful and diſhonourable Love. Love in General is that Good Will and Affection which one has for another, whereby one wiſhes to an other ſome Good upon the Sole Eſteem which he has for him: Charity is the Love of God; Luſt or Concupiſence is the Love of the World: God is the Ultimate End or Object of the Former, Man is the Ultimate End or Object of the Latter. He obſerves that Man is the Cauſe, but ought not to be the End of his Actions, and that what he does for himſelf ought to have a Reſpect to God. As for the Sacrament he defin'd it to be an outward and viſible Sign of the inviſible Grace of God: Thus for inſtance (ſays he) when a Man is baptiz'd, the outward waſhing of the Body which we behold, is the ſign of the Inward Waſhing of the Soul. Faith is the Foundation of other Virtues, becauſe we only hope for what we believe: For which Reaſon 'tis defin'd by the Apoſtle Heb. 11. 1. to be the Subſtance, i. e. the Foundation and Origin of Things hop'd for; Things Inviſible or future are properly the Object of Faith, tho' ſometimes we apply this Term to Things which are ſeen. Among the Things which may be believ'd, there be ſome which 'tis no Matter whether they be believ'd or no; ſuch as whether it pleaſe God it ſhould or ſhould not rain to morrow: But when one ſpeaks of Faith, one means only that which relates to ſuch Things which we are oblig'd to believe under the Pain of Damnation; and which belong to the Catholick or Univerſal Faith, the which is ſo neceſſary that without it no Man can be ſav'd. This Faith has for it's Object the Nature of God and his Benefits ſhewn to mankind. In the firſt place 'tis requiſite to treat of that which relates to the Nature of God, and to explain how there is but one God and three Perſons.

After he had eſtabliſh'd the Unity, Simplicity, and Immutability of God, he treats of the Trinity of Perſons. He ſays that one of the Divine Perſons is not the Other; That the Father, for Inſtance, is not the Son, nor the Son the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe they are of the ſame nature and diſtinguiſh'd only perſonally; That the Property of God the Father is, not to be begotten: That of the Son, to be begotten, but not made nor created; That of the Holy Ghoſt, to proceed from the Father and the Son, but not made nor created. The Names of the three Perſons comprehend the Eſſence which is ſupremely or infinitely perfect. The Power of God is denoted by the Name of Father, the Wiſdom by that of the Logos or the Son, and the Love of God towards Men by that of the Holy Ghoſt, the three Things which make up the Supreme Good. The Diſtinction of theſe three Perſons ſerves to perſuade Men, to render to God the Worſhip and Adoration which they owe to him; for two Things inſpire into us Reſpect, viz. Fear and Love: The Power and Wiſdom of God make us to fear him, becauſe we know that he is our Judge; that he can puniſh us, and that nothing is hid from his Eyes; and his Goodneſs makes us to love him, becauſe 'tis but juſt and reaſonable to love him who does us ſo much Good. This likewiſe ſerves to render the Works of God the more admirable; ſince he can do whatſoever he pleaſes; that he knows how to preſerve what he has made, and Wills that every Thing ſhould be made and ſubſiſt in its Order. He takes notice that yet we ought not to believe that thoſe Attributes do ſo agree to each of the Divine Perſons, but that they may be common to them all; ſo that we are not to believe that the the Father is only Powerful, the Son only Wise, and the Holy Ghost only Merciful; But on the contrary, that these three Persons have the same Power, Wisdom and Mercy: That these three Properties are only attributed to the three Divine Persons in an especial Manner, as their particular Operations are attributed to them, tho' all the Divine Operations which relate to the Creatures, are common to all the Three Persons, namely the Creation to the Father, the Incarnation to the Son, and the Regeneration to the Holy Ghost. Afterwards he proves the Mystery of the Trinity by several Passages out of the Old Testament, and by the Testimonies of the Heathen Philosophers, of whom he quotes a great many.

He foresaw that these Citations out of the Heathen Philosophers concerning the Mystery of the Trinity would seem extraordinary, and displease a great many People, therefore he makes use of Part of the second Book to justify himself in this Particular. 1. By the Example and Testimonies of St. Jerome and the other Fathers. 2. By demonstrating that Logick and the other Sciences are not useless to Religion, provided a right Use be made of them. 3. By showing that 'tis useful to explain Mysteries as well as one can, by Instances and Comparisons, and to demonstrate that they are not contrary to Reason, especially when they were to treat with Jews, Heathens, and Hereticks. 4. By refuting those who maintain'd that one ought not to make use of Reason, but only Authority to prove the Mysteries of Faith. 5. By maintaining that one might have some Knowledge of Mysteries, and that as we have Terms whereby to explain them, 'tis requisite likewise that we have Ideas to answer those Terms. 6. Because without taking any Notice of Jews and Pagans, there are likewise some Hereticks or Persons erroneous about our Mysteries; viz. a certain Laick nam'd Tacheline in Flanders, who caus'd himself to be stil'd by the People, The Son of God: And Peter of Bruis in Provence, who had so far subverted the Order and Discipline of the Church, as to oblige a great many People to be rebaptiz'd, and taught that one ought not to celebrate the Sacrament of the Altar any longer, nor make use of the Cross; That it was not requisite any longer to pass by in Silence the publick Professors who taught Errors contrary to the Catholick Faith and sound Doctrine, among whom he opposes four, one in France, another in Burgundy, a third in Angers, and a fourth in Bourges. He gives a particular Account of their Errors, which it may not be amiss to insert here. 'The first (says he) asserts that several of those who liv'd before the Coming of Jesus Christ were sav'd without having believ'd his future Coming; That our Saviour proceeded out of the Virgin's Womb after the same Manner as other Men, and that God begat himself. The second teaches that the three Properties which distinguish the three Divine Persons, are three distinct Essences of the same Person, and of the Divine Nature: That the Body of our Saviour did not increase, but was of the same Bigness in the Virgin's Womb and in the Manger, as it was upon the Cross. That the Marriages of Monks or Nuns are valid, and that one ought not to divorce them, but only to injoyn them Penance. The third not only maintains that the Attributes of the Divine Persons are Things distinct from the Godhead, but likewise that all the other Attributes, such as Justice, Mercy, &c. are Qualities and Things distinct from God. The fourth has been so extravagant, as to assert that since Things may happen otherwise than God foresaw they would, 'tis possible for him to be deceiv'd.

From this Digression he returns to his Subject, and treats of the Divine Nature. He says that God is not an Accident, nor properly a Substance, if you take that Word to signifie an Essence which supports Accidents; that he may be call'd an Essence; that he is not comprehended under any of Aristotle's ten Categories; that we want proper Terms whereby to express his Nature and Perfections, but that we make use of energical and figurative Terms, and give Examples and Similitudes to explain imperfectly what agrees to this ineffable Nature. He produces several of these about the Mystery of the Trinity, and in the first Place observes that Things may be One, either by Resemblance, or in Number, or in Propriety, and that as in one and the same Thing there are a great many Properties, so in one and the same Divine Essence there are Three distinct Persons who have distinct Properties, because the Father begets, the Son is begotten, and the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son. That 'tis true indeed, that we have not among created Beings any Instance wherein one and the same Essence are three Persons; but that we are not to seek for a perfect Resemblance, since 'tis sufficient to bring some Comparisons. He produces that of a Seal, compos'd of the Material, and the Figure engraven thereon. The Seal is neither the simple Material, nor the simple Figure, but a sort of an Integer compos'd of both, and yet in Reality the Seal is nothing else but the Material, thus or thus engraven, though the Figure is not the Material, nor the Material the Figure.

After this he distinguishes between the Procession of the Holy Ghost, and the Generation of the Word, in that the Logos being Wisdom, partakes of the Power of the Father, and may therefore be said to be of the Substance of the Father; whereas the Holy Ghost being denoted by the Name of Love or Charity, which is not a Power, is not of the Substance of the Father. He immediately corrects the Notion of Arianism, which those Words seem to imply, by saying, that the Holy Ghost is of the Substance of the Father, in the Sense that he so proceeds from him, as to have the same Substance with him; but that though he be consubstantial to the Father, yet properly speaking, he is not begotten of his Substance. (This is a hard and improper Expression, contrary to the Manner of the Father's speaking, and conformable to that of the Arians, though Abaelard rejects their Error.) He says, that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son, because Love, or rather the Effect of Love, proceeds from Power and Wisdom, since the Reason of God's doing good, is because he has Power to do it, and Wisdom to know that it is good.

This gives him an Occasion of refuting the Opinion of the Greeks concerning the Procession of the Holy Ghost from the Son alone, and of shewing that one might add something to the Creed, provided it were not contrary to the Faith. He explains the Co-eternity of the three Divine Persons, by the Instance of the Light and Rays which proceed from the Sun, and which exist the same Moment with the Sun. Lastly, he pretends that the Heathen Philosophers have acknowledg'd the Trinity.

In the third Book he treats particularly of the Power of God, and maintains that God cannot do any Thing but what he does do, and cannot do all that he does not do, because God can only do what he wills; but he cannot Will to do any Thing but what he does do, because it is necessary for him that he should Will whatever is convenient; from whence it follows, that whatever he does not do is not convenient; that he cannot Will to do it, and consequently cannot do it. He himself owns, that this is his own particular Notion, that scarce any Body else is of this Opinion, that it seems contrary to the Doctrine of the Saints and to Reason, and to derogate from the Greatness of God. Hereupon he starts a very difficult Objection: 'A Reprobate (says he) may be sav'd; for he knows no 'Being but what God does save, wherefore God may save 'him, and consequently do something which is not neces- 'sary to be done.' To this he replys, that one might very well assert that such a Man may be sav'd by the Relation to the Possibility of Human Nature, which is capable of Salvation; but that it could not be affirm'd that God could save him, if we have respect to God himself, because 'tis impossible that God should do any Thing but what he ought to do. He explains this by several Examples: A Man who speaks may hold his Tongue, but that 'tis impossible for one who speaks to be at the same Time silent. A Man's Voice may be heard, but one who is deaf cannot hear it. A Field may be cultivated and till'd, though a Man may not cultivate it, &c.

From the Power of God he proceeds to his Immutability; he says that God does not change himself when he produces new Effects, because in him there are not such new Motions and new Inclinations as are in us, but only new Effects proceeding from an eternal Will; that he cannot change Places, since he is Omni-present, and that when 'tis said that he descended into the Virgin's Womb, 'tis to denote his Humiliation; but that in being made Man, he was not chang'd, because the Divine Substance is united to the Humane Nature without a change of its Nature; and that the Person of Jesus Christ is a Compound of the Divine Logos, the Soul, and of the Flesh; That those three Natures are united in such a Manner as that they retain each their own Nature; and that as the Soul is not chang'd into Flesh, so the Divine Nature is not chang'd, though it be personally united to the Soul and the Flesh. Lastly, he treats of the Divine Knowledge and Wisdom. He says that God has foreseen and pre-ordained all Things; and so with respect to God nothing happens by Chance, though his Prescience does not destroy Free-will. He defines it to be a free Determination of the Will, and asserts that it has been frequently experienc'd, that the Will is not constrain'd by any Violence, and that it has a Power of doing or not doing a Thing. He observes that this kind of Freedom in the Will does not relate to God, but only to Men, who may alter their Will, and do or not do a Thing. He produces the Opinion of some who believ'd that this Freedom consists in a Power of doing both Good and Evil; but he maintains that those who are so happy as to have no Power of sinning, are nevertheless free, and are so the more because of their being delivered from the Servitude of Sin. From hence he concludes, that generally and properly speaking Free-will is when one may voluntarily and without Constraint accomplish that which it has resolved upon; a Liberty which is in God as well as in Men, and in all who are not destitute of the Faculty of Willing. He adds several Philosophical Niceties about the Prescience and Determination of Propositions concerning future Contingencies.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

The Explications of the Lord's-Prayer, and of the Creeds of the Apostles, and of St. Athanasius, contain nothing in them which is very remarkable.

The Problems or Questions which were propos'd to him by Heloissa, are almost all of them upon hard Texts of Scripture, which Abaelard explains with a great deal of Justice and Accuracy.

The Book of Heresies is a summary Account of the principal Errors of the Hereticks, against which he produces several Passages out of the Holy Scriptures. He therein particularly refutes the Errors against the Sacraments of the Eucharist and of Baptism, against the Administration of Penance, against the Ceremonies of the Church, and against the Invocation of Saints. Some have thought that this Piece was not Abaelard's, but 'tis not unworthy of him, and there is nothing to hinder us from thinking it to be his.

The Commentary upon the Epistle to the Romans, is a literal Explication of that Epistle, wherein he shews the Coherence and Consequence of the Apostle's Discourse, and renders his Terms intelligible by paraphrasing upon them.

Abaelard's Sermons are not very eloquent, but such Discourses as contain in them Reflections upon the Words of Scripture, which agree to the Mysteries whereof he treats, together with several Moral Instructions. The Sermon upon St. John the Baptist, is a very sharp Satyr against some Monks, and several Canons of his Time, and particularly against St. Norbert.

Abaelard's Doctrine examin'd.

St. Bernard in the general, accuses Peter Abaelard of treating of the Trinity like Arius, of Grace like Pelagius, and of the Incarnation like Nestorius; of having bragg'd that he was ignorant of nothing, and of being never willing to say, Nescio, i. e. I do not know; of being willing to expound inexplicable Things, and to comprehend incomprehensible Mysteries: Of giving a Reason for that which was above Reason; of believing nothing but what Reason discovers to us; of placing Degrees in the Trinity, Terms and Limits to the Majesty of God, and Numbers in Eternity. These are the general Reflections which he cast upon him.

In particular, he finds fault with those Expressions of Abaelard concerning the Holy Ghost, viz. That he is not of the same Substance with the Father, as the Son is. He is astonish'd to find him on one side, owning that he is consubstantial to the Father and the Son, and on the other side, denying that he proceeds from the Substance of the Father and the Son. He maintains that the absolute Attributes of God, such as his Omnipotence, Wisdom and Mercy, does not agree more to one than to another of the Three Divine Persons. He opposes Abaelard's Comparison taken from a Seal and the Material whereof 'tis made. He finds fault with the Definition of Faith which Abaelard makes use of, because he therein gives to Faith the Name of Estimation, which is of too loose a Signification.

He omits speaking to several other Propositions of Abaelard; That Jesus Christ had not the Spirit of Fear: That the Fear of God will not subsist in the other Life: That the Accidents of the Bread and Wine after the Consecration are in the Air: That the Demons do not tempt Men, but only by the Virtue of some Stones, and of some Herbs, which they know and make use of: That the Holy Ghost is the Soul of the World. Proceeding afterwards to what relates to the Incarnation, he in the first Place cites the Proposition wherein Abaelard maintain'd that Jesus Christ did not come into the World on Purpose to redeem Mankind; upon this he urges the Business very home to him, and shews, that neither Scripture nor Tradition acknowledge any other End of the Incarnation, beside the redeeming of Mankind from the Bondage of the Devil, into which they had fallen by the Sin of their first Parent. He charges him with such Things as he only advanc'd in his Commentary by Way of Query. He demonstrates in Opposition to Abaelard, that the End of Redemption does not consist in the Love of Jesus Christ, since Infants are redeem'd by Baptism, before they arrive to the Use of Reason, and consequently before they are capable of loving at all. Lastly, he considers three Things in the Incarnation; The Example of Humility which God has given us by thus abasing himself; The Measure of Charity, which he extended so far as to the Death upon the Cross; and the Sacrament of Redemption, whereby he has deliver'd Men from Death by his Death. These are the Heads whereof St. Bernard treats in his large Letter against Abaelard, directed to Pope Innocent II. which makes the eleventh of his Opuscula.

But to come to an exact Knowledge of all the Errors charged upon Peter Abaelard, 'tis sufficient only to consult the Collection of the Propositions extracted out of his Works, which was read in the Council of Sens, and sent to the Pope. It consists of fourteen Propositions. The first is the Comparison which he makes of a Seal of Copper, to explain the Mystery of the Trinity. The second is that which he says of the Holy Ghost, viz. That the Holy Ghost is not a Power, nor of the Substance of the Father, though the Three Persons of the Trinity are of the same Substance. The third, that God cannot do any Thing else but what he does do. The fourth, that the End of the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, was not only to redeem Mankind, but to inlighten the World with the Lustre of his Wisdom. The fifth, that speaking properly and without a Figure, we cannot say that Jesus Christ is a third Person of the Trinity. The sixth, that God has not given more Grace to him who is sav'd, than to him who is not, before the former has co-operated with his Grace; that he offers his Grace to all the World, and that it depends on the Freedom of Men's Will, whether they will make use of it or reject it. The seventh, that God ought not nor cannot hinder Evil. The eighth, that when 'tis said that Infants contract Original Sin, this ought to be understood of the Temporal and Eternal Punishment which is due to them because of Adam's Sin. The ninth, that the Accidents which remain after the Consecration of the Eucharist, are not join'd to the Substance of the Body of Jesus Christ, as they were to the Bread and Wine, but are in the Air: That the Body of Jesus Christ retains its Figure and Lineaments, and that what we see are false Appearances under which the Body of Jesus Christ is hid. The tenth, that 'tis not the outward Action, but the Will and the Intention which render Men either good or bad. The eleventh, that the Jews who crucified Jesus Christ in Ignorance and out of Zeal for the Law, did not commit any Sin in so doing, and shall not be condemn'd for this Action, but for their former Sins which merited this Blindness. The twelfth, that those Words, Whatsoever you shall bind on Earth shall be bound in Heaven, are to be understood thus: Whatsoever you shall bind in this present Life, shall be bound in the present Church: That none but the Apostles had this Power, and that if it had been communicated to their Successors, 'tis to be understood only of those who have the Holy Ghost. The thirteenth, that neither the Suggestion nor the Pleasure which follows it are sinful, but the Consenting to an evil Action, and the Contempt of God. The fourteenth, that Omnipotence belongs only to the Father as a Personal Attribute.

Abaelard in his Apology disowns the Heretical Meaning of those Propositions, but the Question which still remains is to know in what Sense he advanc'd them. It cannot be deny'd, but that he had Catholick Notions about the Mystery of the Trinity, and did believe that the Three Divine Persons were of the same Nature. The Comparison of a Seal which he makes use of to explain this Mystery is not altogether exact, nor does he pretend that it is; but he owns that we can find nothing among the Creatures, which perfectly resembles this incomparable Mystery. Nor does he deny that Power, Wisdom and Love are such Attributes as are common to the Three Divine Persons; he declares the contrary even in express Terms; but he attributes Power to the Father, Wisdom to the Son, and Love to the Holy Ghost, only by Way of Appropriation; wherein he seems not to disagree from the Doctrine of the Fathers and Divines. But in the third Proposition, he does not agree with others in the Manner of thinking and expressing his Thoughts; wherein he says that God can only do what he does do, and cannot do what he doth not do. This does not proceed from his dis-believing, that the Power of God in its own Nature can extend it self to other Objects; but he pretends that it being consider'd as joyn'd to the Wisdom and Will of God, he could not do any Thing beside what he Wills, nor does any Thing besides what he Wills and actually does.

As to that which relates to the End of the Incarnation, (which is the fourth Proposition) 'tis not to be believ'd that he deny'd that Jesus Christ had redeemed and deliver'd Men from the Slavery of Sin by his Death; he asserts the contrary in several Places; but he might have pretended that this Redemption of Mankind from the Captivity of Sin and the Devil, was not the only Motive of the Incarnation, nor the only Advantage which Men reap'd from thence, and the Divine Logos was likewise come into the World to enlighten the Nations thereof, and to give them an Example of Virtue; the Holy Fathers have said the same Thing in a great many Places of their Writings.

The fifth Proposition is only a Question about a Name. He owns that the Divine Logos is one of the Persons of the Trinity; but disapproves of this Expression, viz. That Jesus Christ is a Third Person in the Trinity, a Way of speaking which is not usual in the Fathers or the Schoolmen.

The sixth Proposition about Grace, is not agreeable to St. Augustine's Principles, nor is it Pelagianism nor Semipelagianism, since he acknowledges the Necessity of Grace for the producing of any Good in us, and only maintains that God has given equal Grace to all Men, whereof every one might make a good Use, or reject.

The seventh Proposition is a Consequence from his Way of speaking in the third.

The eighth is not to be met with in Abaelard's Writings which are now extant; he acknowledges on the contrary in his Apology, that Original Sin consists in the Guilt.

The

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

The ninth depends upon a Philosophical Dispute about the Nature of Accidents, and is of no Prejudice to the Faith about the Mystery of Transubstantiation, which Abaelard own'd; and when he says that they are false Appearances, by this he understands that they resemble Bread which is not there.

The tenth may be taken in a good Sense, so that by Works we understand only the external Actions, which are not expresly good or bad, but as they become voluntary.

The eleventh Proposition is insufferable.

The twelfth is an extraordinary and intolerable Exposition of our Saviour's Words about the Power of Binding and Loosing.

He disowns the thirteenth as that which he never writ.

With Respect to the fourteenth we have explained in what Sense he attributes Power to the Person of the Father. He declares in his Apology, that when he deny'd the Fear of God to be in Jesus Christ and in his Elect, he thereby only understood a servile Fear and not a filial Fear, which he owns will laste to all Eternity: And he therein maintains, that he had never deny'd that the Soul of Jesus Christ descended really into Hell. By the Name of Estimation which he applies to Faith, he does not mean an uncertain Opinion, but an Idea which we form to our selves of the Mysteries which are reveal'd to us, and which we firmly believe.

The Life and Adventures of Abaelard.

As to the general Reflections which are cast upon him, it must be own'd that his Way of speaking and explaining the Mysteries was novel; that he rely'd too much upon his own Reasonings; and that he was for prying too curiously into incomprehensible Mysteries. But at the same time it must likewise be own'd that he happen'd to be in such Times when this Kind of Learning was in its Infancy; and that if in some Places he swerv'd from the Truth, yet he argues very justly and very solidly on a great many Subjects. In a Word, no body can deny but that he had great Parts, much Learning and Logick, a profound Genius and Penetration of Thought. We have only one Edition of his Works publish'd by the Care of Francis Amboesa Councellor of State, and printed at Paris in 4to. in the Year 1616.

CHAP. VIII.

An Account of the Errors and Condemnation of Gillebert de la Porree, Bishop of Poitiers.

Gillebert de la Porree.

Gillebert de la Porree, a Native of Poitiers, after having been Professor of Divinity in that City, was chosen Bishop of the same Diocess, A. D. 1141. He had the most able Divines of his Time for his Tutors, viz. Hilary at Poitiers, Bernard at Chartres, Anselm and Radulphus at Leon; but forasmuch as it is difficult, when one takes too great a Latitude in philosophizing on the Mysteries of the Christian Religion, not to wander out of the right Way; he maintain'd in his Commentaries on the Book of Psalms, on St. Paul's Epistles, and on the Works of Boethius, certain Propositions about the Godhead, which gave Offence to those who were not accustomed to handle Theological Matters after such a Manner. He was more especially censur'd for asserting four Points concerning the Godhead, viz. 1. That the Divine Essence was not God. 2. That the Properties of the Divine Persons were not the Persons themselves. 3. That the Divine Persons were not an Attribute in any Proposition. 4. That the Divine Nature was not incarnate; as also upon account of two other Articles, which were look'd upon as less considerable, viz. That there is none that merits but Jesus Christ, and that the Elect only are truly baptiz'd.

Gillebert continuing to maintain this Doctrine, even when advanc'd to the Episcopal Dignity, and not forbearing to assert those Propositions, in a Discourse that he made to his Clergy; an Information was brought against him by his two Archdeacons, Arnold and Calon to Pope Eugenius III. who was then at Sienna, ready to set forward in his Journey to France. The Pope deferr'd the taking Cognizance of the Affair till his Arrival in that Kingdom; and the Archdeacons in the mean while engag'd St. Bernard on their Side.

The Council of Paris about the Affair of Gillebert.

The Examination of Gillebert's Doctrine was begun at Auxerre in an Assembly conven'd there in the Beginning of the Year 1147. and continued in another held at Paris on the Festival of Easter in the same Year. Gillebert appear'd in the latter before the Pope, the Cardinals, the Bishops and the other Prelates of the Assembly, whilst two Doctors, viz. Adam de Petit Pont Canon of Paris, and Hugh de Champfleuri, the King's Chancellor vigorously oppos'd him, deposing upon Oath, That they had heard him justifie some of the Errors of which he was accus'd; but St. Bernard was the first and principal of his Accusers. Gillebert deny'd that he maintain'd those Opinions that were laid to his Charge, and some of the Bishops, who had been his Pupils, were call'd to witness on his Behalf, among whom were Raoul or Radulphus Bishop of Evreux, and Ives Doctor of Chartres, who declar'd that they never heard him assert any Thing of the like Nature. Therefore to convict him, his Adversaries demanded that his Commentary on Boethius's Book of the Trinity might be produc'd, in which (as they averr'd) those Errors were laid down in divers Place. But this Book not being to be found, certain Propositions were alledg'd, taken out of the loose Papers of his Scholars, and amongst others, That as Man is call'd Wisdom, by reason of the Form of Wisdom; after the same Manner, God is said to be his Goodness, his Wisdom, &c. St. Bernard oppos'd that Expression, and Gillebert continu'd to deny, that he ever taught or wrote, That the Godhead was not God, or that there was in God any Form or any Essence that was not God himself. He prov'd what he said, by the Testimony of the two Persons but now mention'd, and nevertheless maintain'd in the Heat of the Dispute, That that which constituted God the Father, was different from that which constituted him God: This Expression gave Offence to Josselin Bishop of Soissons. Gillebert was likewise censur'd for calling the Three Divine Persons, in a Prose or Hymn on the Trinity, Three Singulars; and Hugh III. Archbishop of Rouen on the contrary affirmed, that it ought to be said, That God was a Singular. The Pope wearied with these Disputes, which continued two Days, and not having at Hand, Gillebert de la Porree's Book, that was call'd in question, thought fit to refer the Determination of that Affair to the Council of Rheims, which was held in Lent in the following Year.

Gillebert de la Porree.

In the mean while Gillebert sent his Commentary on Boethius's Book of the Trinity to Pope Eugenius, who deliver'd it to be examined by Goteschalchus Abbot of Mount St. Eloy, of the Order of Premontre, afterwards ordain'd Bishop of Arras, who having carefully perus'd it, made an Extract of some Propositions, which he judg'd to be erroneous, and annex'd to them certain Passages of the Fathers contrary to those Opinions: He presented this Memorial to the Pope with Gillebert de la Porree's Book. Alberic Cardinal Bishop of Ostia, and Legate of the See of Rome in Aquitaine, in like Manner made an Enquiry into Gillebert's Life and Conversation, and about the Errors that he had spread abroad; but he died before the meeting of the Council of Rheims. In that Council, the Propositions contain'd in the Memorial which the Abbot Goteschalchus had drawn up were examin'd, but in regard that he had not a ready Tongue, the Pope caus'd the said Paper to be put into St. Bernard's Hands. The Council was compos'd of the Pope, the Cardinals, and divers Bishops of France, Germany, England and Spain; the chiefest among those of France were Geffrey de Loroux Archbishop of Bourges, Gillebert's Metropolitan, Milo Bishop of Teronane, Josselin Bishop of Soissons, and Suger Abbot of St. Denys, who had the Administration of the Government in the Absence of King Lewis the Young, during his Expedition in the Holy Land. These Prelates publickly condemn'd Gillebert de la Porree's Propositions, except Geffrey, who acted more cautiously, because he had heard it given out, that the principal Cardinals were inclin'd to be favourable to the accus'd Party.

A Council at Rheims.

On the first Day of the Assembly, Gillebert caus'd large Volumes of his Works to be brought, saying, That his Adversaries only produc'd a few mutilated and mis-interpreted Passages taken out of them. Then a certain Proposition found in his Book, was alledg'd, viz. That the Name of God does not signify the Substance that is, but that by which he is. When that Proposition began to be debated, St. Bernard told Gillebert de la Porree, That 'twas not necessary to enter upon such Disputes, and that the Scandal proceeded only from hence, that many were persuaded that he was in an Error, and that he gave it out, That the Essence or the Nature of God, his Godhead, Wisdom, Goodness, and Omnipotence is not God, but the Form by which he is God. Now declare, said he to him, whether this be your Opinion or not? Gillebert had the Boldness to reply, That the Form of God, or the Godhead by which he is God, is not God himself. Then St. Bernard said, we have an Answer to our Question, let this Declaration be committed to Writing: The Pope order'd the same Thing, and Henry of Pisa Cardinal, brought Pen, Ink and Paper.

The Condemnation of Gillebert in the Council of Rheims.

Gillebert de la Porree.

Gillebert, as he was writing, cry'd out to St. Bernard, Write that the Godhead is God: St. Bernard anſwer'd without any Heſitation, Yea, let it be written with a Steel Pen and on a Diamond, or let it be engrav'd on Stone, That the Divine Eſſence, Form, Nature, Godhead, Goodneſs, Wiſdom, Virtue, Omnipotence and Greatneſs is truly God. Afterwards that Propoſition was debated, and St. Bernard preſs'd Gillebert de la Porree, telling him, That if the Form of God were not God, it would be more perfect than God. He likewiſe cited divers Proofs out of St. Auguſtine's Works, which he ſent for from the Library of the Church of Rheims, in which that Saint aſſures us, That the Goodneſs, Omnipotence, and other Attributes of God, are not different from God himſelf. Geffrey, afterwards Abbot of Clairvaux, objected againſt Gillebert, that he diſown'd the preceding Year the ſame Propoſition that he now aſſerted. Gillebert reply'd, That whatever he ſaid then, he maintain'd it at preſent.

Afterwards they paſs'd from that Propoſition to a ſecond, viz. That one God is not the three Perſons, nor the three Perſons one Thing; altho' they be one God by the ſame Godhead, as far as they are one by the ſame Thing. This Propoſition was likewiſe committed to Writing, and St. Bernard oppos'd divers Paſſages of the Fathers. The next Day, they continued to produce many other Teſtimonies of the Fathers contrary to that Doctrine; and then the other two Articles were propos'd and written, viz. That the Perſonal Properties and the Eternal Attributes of God, are not God, and that it cannot be ſaid, That the Divine Nature aſſum'd the Humane Nature, but that it ought to be ſaid, That the Perſon of the Son took our Nature. When they had diſputed for a long Time about thoſe Propoſitions, the Cardinals declar'd in the End of the Aſſembly, that after having duly conſider'd what was alledg'd on both Sides, they would decide the Matter, and determine what ought to be believ'd. The Archbiſhops and Biſhops being juſtly offended, that the Cardinals ſhould take upon them arbitrarily to paſs their Judgment in that Affair, and fearing leſt they ſhould acquit Gillebert de la Porree, whom they apparently favour'd; went the next Day to meet St. Bernard: Then they drew up with his Advice, a Writing that contain'd Gillebert's Propoſitions, as alſo a contrary Confeſſion of Faith; and after having ſign'd it, put it into the Hands of Hugh Biſhop of Auxerre, and of Milo of Terouane, with Orders to make Application to the Abbot Suger, to get it preſented to the Pope and the Cardinals; and to acquaint them, that they had patiently heard ſeveral Diſcourſes which ought not to have been made, purely out of Reſpect to their Character; but being inform'd that they deſign'd to proceed to Sentence, they thought fit to offer them their Confeſſion of Faith, to the end that they might be enabl'd to paſs a right Judgment between both Parties: Laſtly, That their Eminences already had Gillebert's Confeſſion, who deliver'd it with a Proteſtation to correct it, if they ſhould judge it expedient; but as for their Parts, they proteſted that they would not ſuffer any Alteration to be made in their Form. The Cardinals at firſt took it very ill, that the Biſhops and St. Bernard had prepar'd a Confeſſion of Faith before-hand, and by that Means prevented their Judgments; imagining, that it belong'd only to the Holy See to make ſuch Forms, and to judge definitively of Matters of Faith. But St. Bernard qualify'd their Reſentments, by remonſtrating to them, That neither he, nor the Biſhops pretended to exhibit a final Deciſion, but only an Explanation of their Sentiments. Whereupon the Pope declar'd, That they all approv'd the Doctrine contain'd in the Biſhops Confeſſion of Faith; and that if ſome of the Cardinals were favourable to Gillebert's Perſon, yet none approv'd his Errors. However, he did not confirm this Determination by a ſolemn Decree, but contented himſelf only to cauſe Gillebert to appear in an Aſſembly held in the Archbiſhop's Palace at Rheims; and after having oblig'd him to retract his four Propoſitions, he condemn'd them, and forbid the reading or the tranſcribing of his Book, till it were corrected by the Church of Rome. Gillebert promis'd to do it, but the Pope anſwer'd, that he ſhould not be left at Liberty to correct it at his Pleaſure: But nothing was decreed againſt his Perſon, ſo that he return'd to his Dioceſs reconcil'd with his Archdeacons. St. Bernard was ſatisfy'd, that his Recantation was ſincere, and that he really acquieſc'd in the Judgment of the Synod; nevertheleſs, ſome of his Followers could not be perſuaded to abjure his Opinions, but ſtill perſiſted to maintain them, and therefore St. Bernard endeavours to confute theſe Miſcreants, in his 80*th*. Sermon on the Canticles, and treats them as Hereticks. Thoſe erroneous Doctrines were likewiſe impugned by Geffrey Abbot of Clairvaux, in a Treatiſe written purpoſely on that Subject, in which he collects divers Paſſages of the Fathers, directly oppoſite to Gillebert's four Propoſitions.

Gillebert de la Porree.

Some other Errors were alſo attributed to him, but forasmuch as they were not found in his Books, 'twas judg'd ſufficient to tear in Pieces the looſe Papers that were in the Hands of his Scholars or Pupils, and in which they were written. Geffrey cites a Paſſage taken out of this Author's Gloſs on the Pſalms, in which he aſſerts, that the Humanity of Jeſus Chriſt ought not to be ador'd with a Worſhip of Latria, but with that of Dulia; as alſo another extracted out of his Gloſs on St. Paul's Epiſtles, where he ſays, That the Name of God, and of the Son of God, is not attributed to the Humane Nature in Jeſus Chriſt, unleſs by Adoption.

The Works of Gillebert de la Porree were never yet printed, except one Letter on the Euchariſt, publiſh'd by Father Luke Dachery in the Notes on Guibert de Nogent. His Commentaries on the Pſalms, and on St. Paul's Epiſtles, and his Theological Treatiſe of the Trinity, are extant in Manuſcript in divers Places; but we may judge by the Paſſages that are cited out of them, that the too great Subtilty of that Man's Genius, caus'd him to fall into Expreſſions contrary to the ſimplicity of the Faith; a Misfortune that very frequently happens to thoſe, who deviate from the Scripture and Tradition, to philoſophize on the Myſteries of the Chriſtian Religion. He died, A. D. 1154.

The Letter but now mention'd, is directed to Matthew Abbot of St. Florin, who had conſulted him to know what ought to be done, in reference to a certain Prieſt, who thro' Inadvertency had perform'd the Conſecration, when there was no Wine in the Chalice, and having perceiv'd his Miſtake, made a new Conſecration of the Bread and Wine. He returns for Anſwer, That 'twas requiſite that that Prieſt ſhould forbear ſaying Maſs for ſome Time, and that he ſhould do Penance for his Tranſgreſſion. For the reſt, that he had done ill, in making a new Conſecration of the Bread and Wine, becauſe the Body of Jeſus Chriſt is altogether entire under each Species, and in regard that his Body and Blood was under the Species of Bread, altho' no Wine were conſecrated: And that therefore the Communion might have been adminiſter'd with the conſecrated Bread; as Children receive it under the ſingle Species of Wine, and ſick Perſons under that of the Bread. This Letter is very remarkable.

CHAP.

CHAP. IX.

An Account of the Lives and Letters of the Popes who poſſeſs'd the See of Rome from Eugenius III. to the end of the Century.

Of the Popes of Rome.

Anaſtaſius IV.

Anaſtaſius IV. was a Citizen of Rome, and was called Conrad before his promotion to the Papal Dignity. He was at firſt Abbot of St. Anaſtaſius, in the Dioceſs of Velitri, afterwards Cardinal Biſhop of St. Sabina, and ſucceeded Pope Eugenius, July 10. A. D. 1153. He poſſeſs'd the See of Rome only during one Year, four Months and ſome Days, and died December, 4. 1154.

Adrian IV.

He had for his Succeſſor Adrian IV. an Engliſh-Man by Nation, who was nam'd Nicolas Break-ſpear, before he attain'd to that Station, and was Cardinal Biſhop of Albany. Eugenius III. ſent him in quality of a Miſſionary into Norway, where he converted a great Number of Infidels. He was generally reputed to be a Man of a gentle and liberal Diſpoſition. In the Beginning of his Popedom, Arnold of Breſcia and his Followers excited ſome troubles in Rome, and wounded Cardinal Gerard. Whereupon the Pope having ſuſpended the City from Divine Service till the Romans had expell'd him and his Adherents, ſo that the latter were forc'd to make their eſcape by flight, and retir'd to Otricoli in Tuſcany, where they were favourably receiv'd by the People; who look'd upon Arnold as a Prophet, but he was apprehended ſoon after, and notwithſtanding the Oppoſition made by the Viſcounts of Campania, who had reſcu'd him, he was deliver'd up to the Prefect or Governor of Rome, who caus'd him to be burnt at a Stake, and his Aſhes to be thrown into the River Tiber, leſt the People ſhould honour him as a Saint. This Pope pronounc'd an Anathema againſt William King of Sicily, who had refus'd to receive his Letters, becauſe he did not give him the Title of King, and who had ſeiz'd on ſome Territories belonging to St. Peter's Patrimony. Then his Holineſs went as far as Sutri to meet Frederick, who was arriv'd in Italy, accompany'd him to Rome, and ſet the imperial Diadem on his Head. A little while after, he made Peace with William King of Sicily, and granted him the Royal Style of King of both Sicilies. In writing to the Emperor Frederick about the Affair of the Biſhop of London, he incurr'd the diſpleaſure of that Prince, by inſinuating that the Empire was a Donation receiv'd by him from the Holy See; inſomuch, that the Pope was oblig'd to explain himſelf in a ſecond Letter, and to ſay, that he meant only with reſpect to his Coronation and Conſecration. However this did not fail to ſet them at variance, and their Quarrel was inflam'd, becauſe his Holineſs refus'd to confirm a certain Perſon, whom the Emperor had nominated to be Archbiſhop of Ravenna. 'Tis alſo reported that the Pope deſign'd to excommunicate the Emperor if he had liv'd longer, but he died of a Quinſie in the City of Anagnia, September 1. A. D. 1159. But his Body was tranſlated to Rome, and interr'd in St. Peter's Church.

Alexander III.

After the Solemnization of his Funeral Obſequies, 23 Cardinals met together, and choſe at the End of three Days, Roland Cardinal Prieſt, with the Title of St. Mark, and Chancellor of the Church of Rome, who was nam'd Alexander III. But there were three Cardinals, viz. Octavian, John of St. Martin, and Guy of Crema, who undertook to carry on another Election, and Octavian having obtain'd the Suffrages of the two others, aſſum'd the Quality of Pope, and the Name of Victor III. Afterwards he caus'd himſelf to be cloathed in the Pontifical Habit; took poſſeſſion of St. Peter's Church by force, and ſet a Guard of Senators over Alexander and his Cardinals, who were confin'd in the Fort during nine Days. The latter was remov'd to a Caſtle on the other ſide of the Tiber, and after having been ſhut up therein three Days, the People began to raiſe a Mutiny, inſomuch, that he was conducted with divers Biſhops and Cardinals acroſs the City, to a Place call'd Nero's Victory, and was there conſecrated. The Emperor Frederick was then in Italy beſieging Cremona, and the two Competitors having made application to him to get their Intereſt maintain'd, he order'd them both to repair to Pavia, to take their Trial in a Council. Alexander not thinking fit to go thither, retir'd to Anagnia; and the Emperor in the mean while caus'd the Parties to be ſummon'd to the Council which he had conven'd: The former refus'd to appear, but Octavian preſented himſelf according to Order. Then the Emperor after having inform'd the Biſhops, that the Right of calling Councils belong'd to Princes, referr'd the Deciſion of that Quarrel to their Judgment. The Council was compos'd of fifty Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and of a great Number of Abbots. Victor, who was preſent there without an Adverſary, carry'd the Cauſe without any difficulty, upon making Proof, that he was firſt inveſted with the Pontifical Mantle; put in poſſeſſion of the Holy See; and acknowledg'd by the Clergy. Thus his Election, notwithſtanding its irregularity, was confirm'd by the Council, and that of Alexander declar'd null: The next Day, the latter and his Adherents were ſolemnly excommunicated. We have ſtill in our poſſeſſion the Acts of that Council, held, A. D. 1160. with the Synodical Letter of the Fathers aſſembled therein, that of the Emperor, that of the Biſhop of Bamberg, and that of the Canons of St. Peter at Rome, concerning the Election of Victor, and the Judgment paſs'd in his favour. They accuſe the Cardinals, who choſe Alexander, of having met together even in Pope Adrian's Life-time, to ſubſtitute Roland in his Room, and of having carry'd on the laſt Election in a tumultuous Manner. Alexander being inform'd of what was tranſacted againſt him in the Aſſembly of Pavia, excommunicated the Emperor Frederick.

Of the Popes of Rome.

The Declaration of the Kings of England and France, in favour of Alexander.

The other Princes of Europe were ready to do more Juſtice to Pope Alexander; for Henry II. King of England and Philip II. King of France, being perſuaded by their Prelates of the Equity of their Cauſe, favour'd him under Hand; but not to do any thing raſhly in an Affair of that importance, they call'd Aſſemblies of the Prelates of their reſpective Kingdoms, viz. the former at Newmarket in England, and the other at Beauvais in France. It was agreed in thoſe Conventions that Alexander's Right was moſt preferrable; but the Princes before they openly declar'd their Sentiments, ſollicited Frederick to own him as Pope, and to abandon Octavian. But perceiving him to be altogether inflexible to authorize their Declaration to the beſt advantage, they call'd a general Aſſembly of the Prelates and Noblemen of their Kingdoms, in which the Legates of the two Competitors were alſo preſent, in order to take a full cognizance of the Cauſe, and afterwards to declare for him, who ſhould be acknowledg'd as lawful Pope in that Aſſembly, for hitherto out of reſpect to the Emperor they did not think fit publickly to eſpouſe Alexander's Cauſe, altho' they were well inform'd of the Validity of his Right. The matter being debated for ſome time in the Council, it evidently appear'd, from the Relation of the Cardinals, the Teſtimony of many Witneſſes, and even the Confeſſion of thoſe of Victor's Party, That the latter ſeiz'd on the See of Rome by force; was cloath'd in the Pontifical Veſtments by Lay-men, without any Canonical Form; was excommunicated before his Conſecration; and was choſen by three excommunicated Perſons: On the other ſide, That Alexander was elected by all the other Cardinals; that he might have been immediately inveſted with the Pontifical Ornaments, if he had not at firſt refus'd to accept of them thro' Humility; that he afterwards aſſum'd them in a ſolemn Manner; and receiv'd Conſecration from the Hands of thoſe, who had a right to adminiſter it. It was alſo made appear, That the Emperor declar'd for Octavian, a long time before the meeting of the Aſſembly of Pavia; that that Convention was not compos'd of 153 Biſhops, as his Imperial Majeſty gave it out, but only of 44; that the Prelates had taken a Reſolution to ſuſpend their Judgment, and not to own either of the two Competitors as Pope, till a general Synod were call'd, conſiſting of the Prelates of divers Kingdoms, or till they knew which of them was approv'd by the ſound part of the Church; that they agreed to give the ſame Advice to the Emperor, but that he could not be induc'd to follow it; and that on the contrary, he had compell'd the Biſhops, to confirm him whom he had already receiv'd; except 24, among whom was the Biſhop of Pavia, in whoſe City, that Aſſembly was held: Therefore the Prelates of England and France, being well ſatisfied with theſe Reaſons, acknowledg'd Alexander as lawful Pope, at the ſame time Excommunicating Octavian with his Adherents, and the two Kings in like Manner follow'd the Judgment of the Council.

The Emperor being inform'd of the Tranſactions in France, held a ſecond Aſſembly at Lodi, in which aſſiſted Pilgrin Archbiſhop of Aquileia, Guy elect Archbiſhop of Ravenna, divers Biſhops, a great Number of Abbots and ſome Noble-men. He caus'd the Election of Octavian to be be confirmed therein, and several Letters of Excuse were read, that (as it was given out) were sent by the Kings of Denmark, Norway, Hungaria and Bohemia, as also by six Archbishops, twenty Bishops, and many Abbots, as well of the Order of Clairvaux as of other Congregations, and in which they acknowledg'd Octavian as Pope: Hubert Archbishop of Milan, the Consuls of that City, and the Bishops of Placentia, Brescia, Bononia and some others were excommunicated in that Council, which was held in the Month of June, A. D. 1161. and continu'd during some Days.

Of the Popes of Rome.

Alexander III. passes over into France.

In the mean while Alexander took Sanctuary in the Dominions of William King of Sicily, because the Emperor Frederick was Master of a great part of Italy, and waited for a favourable Opportunity to pass over from thence into France, where the distress'd Popes always met with a Place of Refuge, during the Persecutions that were rais'd against them. At last he found means to set out to Sea, and arriv'd in France on the Festival of Easter, A. D. 1162. where he was receiv'd by the Kings of France and England, who went to meet him as far as Torcy sur Loire, alighted in his presence, and conducted him on the Road, each of them holding the Reins of his Horse's Bridle. Frederick perceiving that Alexander retir'd to a place of safety, and was own'd by all the Christians of Europe, except the Germans and some Italians, caus'd a Proposal to be made to the King of France, that there should be an Interview between them at Avignon, or in some other Frontier-Town; that he would bring Victor along with him, and that the King should in like manner cause Alexander to appear there; that the Election of both should be thoroughly examin'd in an Assembly compos'd of the Prelates of Germany, France, and Italy, and that all Parties should entirely submit to their final Decision. His Design was to cause both Competitors to be rejected, and to procure the Election of a third Person. However, the King of France approv'd his Proposal, and went to the Place appointed; but Alexander being more mistrustful than that Prince, refus'd to accompany him, and contented himself only to send some Cardinals thither to maintain his Right. The Emperor was highly offended, that the King had not brought Alexander; and forasmuch as he was the stronger, 'twas much to be fear'd lest he should hem him in on every side, and take him Prisoner, if the King of England had not speedily caus'd his Troops to march on purpose to rescue him. This unexpected Recruit having broken Frederick's Measures, he caus'd another Proposal to be made to the King, viz. that he should come to meet him with the Prelates of his Kingdom, to receive the Sentence that should be pronounc'd by the Prelates of the Empire, as to the Contest between the Competitors to the Popedom; affirming, That they only had a right to judge of the validity of the Election of a Pope: The King reply'd, That his Prelates and Clergy being the Sheep of the Pope of Rome, 'twas their Interest to take Cognizance of the Person, who was to be their supreme Pastor. Whereupon the Intercourse was discontinu'd, and the King retir'd with his Forces.

A Council held at Tours by Alexander III.

Pope Alexander arriv'd at Paris, A. D. 1163. and at his departure from that City, held a Council at Tours, where he renew'd the Anathema's published against Octavian and Frederick. The Antipope Octavian died the next Year at Lucca on the Festival of Easter, and his Followers substituted in his room, Guy of Crema, who took the Name of Paschal III. The Death of Octavian weaken'd his Party, and the Italians wearied with the Emperor's tyrannical Government, began to incline towards Alexander's side; besides that Conrad chosen Archbishop of Mentz, and many other Bishops of Germany, declar'd in his favour. Therefore Alexander taking the Advantage of so favourable a Conjuncture return'd to Italy, and made his publick Entry into the City of Rome in the Month of November, 1165. after having resided three Years in France. He was joyfully receiv'd by the People: But on the other side, Frederick us'd his utmost Endeavours to maintain Paschal the Antipope, and to that purpose call'd an Assembly at Wurtzburgh, A. D. 1166. in which he himself took an Oath, and caus'd the like Oath to be given to the most part of the Lords and Prelates of the Assembly, that they would not acknowledge any other Pope but Paschal, and that they would cause all those who depended on them, to submit to his Authority. The Deputies of the King of England, who was at variance with Pope Alexander, by Reason of the Contests he had with Thomas Archbishop of Canterbury, took the same Oath.

Alexander III. returns to Rome.

An Assembly at Wurtzburg in 1166.

Afterwards Frederick appear'd at the Head of an Army, and pass'd into Italy to put Paschal in possession of the Papal See: He enter'd Lombardy, besieg'd Ancona, and the next Year encamp'd near Rome; then he defeated the Romans in Battel; took part of the City; seiz'd on St. Peter's Church, and would have made himself Master of the whole City, if a Distemper, that rag'd in his Army had not oblig'd him speedily to retire to Lombardy. Alexander being thus deliver'd from so imminent a Danger, had recourse to his thundering Bulls, and pronounc'd a Sentence of Deposition against Frederick in a Council held at Lateran, A. D. 1168. The Italians animated by that Sentence, revolted against the Emperor, submitted to Alexander, and expell'd the Schismatical Bishops. Frederick having attack'd the Milanese Troops, lost twenty thousand Men, and was forc'd to shut himself up in Pavia, but not believing himself to be safe there, in regard that the whole Country of Lombardy had declar'd against him, he at last found Means to escape into Germany, not without much Difficulty. In the mean While Paschal continu'd in Possession of St. Peter's Church, and Alexander resided at Benevento: The latter return'd from thence in the End of the Year 1169. and receiv'd the City of Frescati under his Protection: Whereupon the Romans were incens'd against him, and only promis'd to give him Admittance into Rome, as their Sovereign, on Condition that he should cause the Walls of Frescati to be demolished. He did it accordingly; but the Romans not having kept their Word, he caus'd that Place to be fortified again, left a Garrison therein, retir'd to Anagnia, and from thence pass'd to Benevento, where he receiv'd in 1170. the Proposal made to him by Manuel Comnenus Emperor of the East, to reunite the Greek Church to the Latin, and to own the supreme Authority of the See of Rome, on Condition that he should crown him Emperor of the West. The Pope commended his Design about the Re-union of the two Churches, and promis'd to contribute, as far as 'twas possible towards the carrying it on; but as for the Demand of the Empire, he answer'd, That the Matter appear'd to him to be too difficult, and that it did not lye in his Power to grant what he desir'd.

Of the Popes of Rome.

Some Time after, Paschal the Antipope died at Rome, and those of his Party chose for Pope, John Abbot of Struma: Altho' Frederick had own'd his Authority, yet he did not forbear to send the Bishop of Bamberg to Alexander to negotiate a Treaty of Peace with him. That Prelate had a Conference with Alexander in Campania, and told him that his Master did not design any longer to act contrary to his Interest, but forasmuch as he refus'd to declare plainly, that he would acknowledge him as lawful Pope, or to promise Obedience to him, they parted without concluding any Thing. Altho' Alexander's Affairs prosper'd every Day more and more; nevertheless the Romans could not be induc'd to receive him into their City, and he usually resided either at Frescati or in Campania.

Frederick carry'd on a War in Italy, A. D. 1175. but not being successful in his Enterprizes, he renew'd the Negotiations of Peace; so that the Pope sent Legates to treat with him about it, but they were not able to come to any Agreement. The next Year Frederick's Army was entirely defeated by the Milanese Forces, insomuch that he was constrain'd to send Ambassadors to Alexander to conclude a Treaty of Peace: The Conditions were propos'd, and were at last ratify'd in 1177. at Venice, where the Emperor and the Pope had an Interview: The former abandon'd the Party of Octavian, Guy and John of Struma, and promis'd Obedience to Alexander, who took off the Excommunication denounc'd against Frederick, and re-admitted him to the Communion of the Church of Rome. Some Authors relate divers fabulous Circumstances concerning this Reconciliation, and amongst others, that the Pope made an Escape to Venice in a Disguise; that he was forc'd to implore the Assistance of the Doge; that the Emperor sent his Son Otho with a Fleet to oblige the Venetians to deliver up the Pope into his Hands; that they defeated him and took him Prisoner; that the same Son agreed upon certain Articles of Peace with the Pope; that Frederick came in Person to confirm the Treaty; that he prostrated himself before all the People, at the Feet of the Pope, who set his Foot on his Neck, pronouncing these Words; It is written, thou shalt tread upon the Basilisk, and trample under Foot the Lion and the Dragon; that Frederick answer'd, I do not obey you but Peter; and that Alexander reply'd, Both me and Peter. All these Particulars are so many Fables, the Falshood of which is prov'd by Alexander's Letters, and by the Testimony of the Historians of that Time. 'Tis worth the while to observe, after what Manner Alexander speaks upon Occasion of that Peace in his Letter.

'On the 21*st*. Day of July (says he) by the Emperor's 'Order, the Son of the Marquis Albert, and his Imperial 'Majesty's Chamberlain, took an Oath, in the Presence 'of divers Ecclesiastical and Secular Princes of the Empire; that upon the Emperor's Arrival at Venice, he should 'ratify by Oath, the Articles of the Peace of the Church, 'that were already agreed upon; that he should grant Peace 'to William King of Sicily for fifteen Years, and a Truce 'for seven, to the Lombards. On the 24*th*. Day of the 'same Month, the Emperor came to the Church of St. 'Nicolas, at the Distance of a Mile from Venice, and having abjur'd the Schism, as well as all the Bishops and 'German Princes, he receiv'd Absolution with them; af-

'terwards

Of the Popes of Rome.

'terwards being arriv'd at Venice, he gave us the Marks of 'his Obedience, with all Manner of Humility, at the En-'trance of St. Mark's Church, in the Preſence of an in-'numerable Multitude of People; receiv'd from us the 'Bleſſing of Peace; gave us the Right-hand; and conduct-'ed us with Devotion to the Altar. The next Day, being 'the Feſtival of St. James, we went to St. Mark's Church 'to celebrate Maſs; the Emperor came to meet us with-'out the Church; gave us the Right-hand; re-conducted 'us when Divine Service was ended; held the Stirrup, 'whilſt we got up on Horſe-back; and perform'd all the 'Devoirs and Reſpects due to us, that his Predeceſſors 'were wont to do.' The Matters of Fact are thus related by the Pope himſelf in three Letters.

The next Day, the Emperor went to pay a Viſit to the Pope, and on Auguſt 1*ſt*. he himſelf took an Oath, the ſame Thing being likewiſe done by the German Lords, to obſerve the Peace that was concluded. Afterwards Abſolution was given to thoſe that had taken Part with the Antipopes, and who promis'd for the Future, to obey Pope Alexander and his Succeſſors. On September 16. the Pope held a Council of the Biſhops of Italy and Germany, in which the Treaty of Peace was confirm'd, and the Anathemas renew'd againſt the Schiſmaticks, who were not as yet return'd to the Boſom of the Church, and the Emperor ratify'd it by publick Letters. Laſtly, the Emperor before he left Venice, concerted with the Pope Matters relating to the Reſtitution of the Revenues of the Church of Rome; and ſet forward in his Journey to Lombardy, whilſt the Pope went to Anagnia, where he arriv'd December 14. and from whence the next Year, he was recall'd to Rome by the Clergy, Senate and People of that City. Thus an End was put to the Schiſm of the Church of Rome, and Alexander continu'd in the peaceable Poſſeſſion of that See till his Death, which happen'd in the Month of Auguſt, A. D. 1181.

Lucius III. Cardinal Humbald, a Native of Lucca, was choſen in his Place, and ſirnam'd Lucius III. He was expell'd Rome by the Senators, and retir'd to Verona, where he died, November 25. A. D. 1185.

Urban III. Lambert Archbiſhop of Milan, ſucceeded him under the Name of Urban III. Theſe two Popes had ſeveral Conferences at Verona with the Emperor Frederick, about the putting of the Treaty of Peace in Execution, and the Election of the Archbiſhop of Trier. The latter had alſo ſome Conteſts with the Emperor, about certain Territories left by the Princeſs Mathilda to the Church of Rome; the Diſpoſal of the Eſtates of the Biſhops after their deceaſe, which the Emperor claim'd as his Right; and the Taxes that were allotted to be paid to the Abbeſſes. And indeed, Matters were carry'd to that Height, that Urban threaten'd to excommunicate the Emperor, and that Prince call'd an Aſſembly of the Prelates and Princes of Germany at Geinlenhuſen, A. D. 1186. to maintain his Rights, in which it was determin'd to write to the Pope about that Affair. Their Letter extremely incens'd his Holineſs, and caus'd him to take a Reſolution to denounce a Sentence of Excommunication againſt the Emperor, which would have been actually put in Execution, if the Inhabitants of Verona had not entreated him not to do it in their City. Therefore he departed from thence with that Deſign, but was prevented by Death, which happen'd October 17. A. D. 1187.

An Aſſembly at Geinlenhuſen in 1186.

Gregory VIII. The next Day, Albert, Cardinal Prieſt of St. Laurence, and Chancellor of the Church of Rome, was plac'd on that See, and bore the Name of Gregory VIII. His Popedom did not continue during two entire Months; for he died December 16. in the ſame Year.

Clement III. After a Vacancy of twenty Days, the See of Rome was fill'd up by Paulinus Cardinal of Paleſtrina, choſen Jan. 26. A. D. 1188. and nam'd Clement III. Under his Popedom the Chriſtian Princes undertook a Cruſade for the recovering of the Places that Saladin had taken from them in the Levant. The Emperor Frederick, Richard I. ſirnam'd Cœur de Lion King of England, and Philip II. King of France, were engag'd in that Expedition. The firſt was drowned in 1190. as he was waſhing himſelf in a ſmall River between Antioch and Nice, and his Son Henry ſucceeded him in the Imperial Dignity. Pope Clement III. died April 10. A. D. 1191.

Celeſtin III. Hyacinthus, Cardinal Deacon with the Title of St. Mary, was choſen in his Place, under the Name of Celeſtin III. and after having been ordain'd on Holy Saturday, was plac'd in St. Peter's Chair on Eaſter-day. At that Time, Henry arriv'd with an Army near Rome, and determin'd to enter the City to be crown'd Emperor. Foraſmuch as the Pope put him off from Time to Time, the Romans ſent Deputies to promiſe him, That if he would engage to preſerve their Rights and Privileges, and to demoliſh the Caſtles that were built at Freſcati, they would admit him, and would oblige the Pope to ſolemnize his Coronation. He accordingly conſented, and took an Oath before the Pope, at the Door of St. Peter's Church, that he would maintain the Eccleſiaſtical Rights; reſtore St. Peter's Patrimony; and raſe the Citadel of Freſcati. Afterwards the Pope caus'd him to enter the Church, and actually crown'd him Emperor, and Conſtance his Wife, the Daughter of Roger King of Sicily, Empreſs. William ſirnam'd the Good, King of Sicily, the Nephew of that Princeſs, dying, ſhe laid Claim to the Crown; but Tancred her baſtard Brother excluded her, and got Poſſeſſion of the Throne, which gave Occaſion to the War that Henry undertook to ſubdue that Kingdom. He march'd into Italy with a formidable Army, A. D. 1196. and treated the Nobility of Sicily in ſo outragious a Manner, that his own Wife being ſenſibly afflicted with the Calamities of her Nation, joyn'd with them againſt her Husband, and compell'd him by Force to grant them reaſonable Terms of Peace. Henry did not long ſurvive that Reconciliation, for he dy'd at Meſſina in 1197. Pope Celeſtin excommunicated him ſome Time before, for detaining Priſoner, Richard King of England, whom Leopold Duke of Auſtria had ſold to him, after having ſeiz'd on that valiant Prince in his Territories, as he was returning from his Expedition to the Holy Land. Upon Account of that Excommunication, the Archbiſhop of Meſſina refus'd to bury him in conſecrated Ground, till he had conſulted the Pope. Therefore he went to meet his Holineſs, and requeſted of him three Things, viz. 1. A Licence to interr the Emperor's Body according to due Form. 2. The Deliverance of Marcowald his Imperial Majeſty's Chief Juſtice, who was beſieg'd by the Romans. And 3. That Frederick the Son of Henry, might be crown'd King of Sicily. Celeſtine reply'd as to the firſt Article, That the Emperor could not be bury'd without the Conſent of the King of England, and till the Money were reſtor'd to that Prince, which he had exacted from him for his Ranſom: As to the ſecond Article, That the ſetting of Marcowald at Liberty depended on the Pleaſure of the Romans. He granted the laſt Article, on Condition that the Sum of a thouſand Marks of Silver ſhould be paid to him, and as many to the Cardinals; and after that the Empreſs had taken an Oath upon the Holy Goſpels, That Frederick was begotten in lawful Wedlock of her and Henry: As for the Succeſſion to the Empire, it was conteſted between Philip the Brother of Henry deceaſed, and Otho the Son of the Duke of Saxony, as we ſhall have Occaſion to ſhew hereafter. Pope Celeſtin did not long ſurvive the Emperor Henry; for he fell ſick on the Feſtival of Chriſtmaſs in the ſame Year, and died Jan. 8. A. D. 1198.

Of the Popes of Rome.

It remains only for compleating the Hiſtory of theſe Popes, to give ſome Account of their Letters.

Anaſtaſius IVth's Letters.

The Letters of Anaſtaſius IV. are few in Number. In the firſt, he reprehends Engebaud Archbiſhop of Tours, for neglecting to acquaint him with the high Miſdemeanours of which the Biſhop of Treguier is accus'd, and orders him inceſſantly to ſummon that Prelate to appear in his Court; and if he find him guilty of the Crimes laid to his Charge, that is to ſay, of having riotouſly waſted the Revenues of his Church; of having conferr'd Orders contrary to the Canonical Conſtitutions; and of having committed Simony and Perjury; to ſend him to the Holy See, to the end that he might be puniſh'd according to the Severity of the Canons.

In the ſecond, he writes to Hugh Archbiſhop of Sens and to his Suffragans, to look upon the Inhabitants of Vezelay, as under a Sentence of Excommunication, by reaſon of the Perſecutions that they rais'd againſt Ponce Abbot of the Monaſtery of that Place. He writes the ſame Thing to the Count and Lords of Burgundy in the third, which only differs from the former in the Superſcription.

By the fourth, he orders Peter Archbiſhop of Bourges to excommunicate the Count of Nevers and the Inhabitants of Vezelay, unleſs they gave Satisfaction to the Abbot and Monaſtery of Vezelay, within thirty Days after the Monition is exhibited to them.

He writes again on the ſame Subject to Lewis VII. King of France, to the Biſhops of that Kingdom, and to Ponce Abbot of Vezelay, in his fifth, ſixth and ſeventh Letters.

In the eleventh, he confirms the Statutes of the Regular Canons of St. John at Lateran.

In the twelfth, he takes into his Protection, the Order of the Knights of St. John at Jeruſalem, and ratifies their Privileges.

Adrian IVth's Letters.

The firſt of the Letters attributed to Pope Adrian IV. is a Privilege granted to the King of England, to make himſelf Maſter of Ireland, referr'd to by Matthew Paris. But it is a very doubtful Piece, and there are no Grounds to rely upon it.

The ſecond, is the Letter that gave Offence to Frederick, and in which the Pope complains, That the Biſhop of London was miſus'd in the Emperor's Dominions, as he was returning from the Holy See, and that he did not take Care to revenge that Indignity. To induce him to do it, he entreats him to call to mind, with what Kindneſs he was receiv'd at Rome the preceding Year, as alſo the Honour and Dignity that he had conferr'd upon him in ſetting the Imperial Crown on his Head. He declares at the ſame

Of the Popes of Rome.

Time, That he does not repent of having given him Satisfaction, and that he ſhould be very glad to find an Opportunity, to beſtow on him greater Favours if it were poſſible.

This Letter being deliver'd to Frederick, by Bernard Cardinal of St. Clement, and by Roland Cardinal Prieſt of St. Mark, whom the Pope had ſent on Purpoſe to bear it: That Prince at firſt entertain'd them very honourably, but at the ſecond Audience, having read that Paſſage of the Letter, in which it was expreſs'd, That the Pope had conferr'd on him the notable Benefit of the Crown, he fell into ſo great a Paſſion, that he could not forbear reviling the two Legates who had brought it, ordering them immediately to retire out of his Dominions. After their Departure, he prohibited all his Subjects to go to Rome, and ſet Guards on the Frontiers, to ſtop thoſe who were about to travel thither. Adrian having heard this News, wrote the third Letter to the Biſhops of France and Germany, in which after having related the Matter as it happen'd, he entreats them to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to oblige Frederick to return to his Duty. At the ſame Time he wrote to him in the fourth Letter, That it was not his Meaning that the Word Beneficium ſhould be taken for a Fee, but for a good Action; that in that Senſe, it might well be ſaid, That he had done him a Favour in conferring on him the Imperial Crown, becauſe he perform'd an Act of Kindneſs in ſo doing; and that when he wrote, that he gave him the Imperial Crown, Giving denotes no more than that he ſet it upon his Head: That they who had otherwiſe interpreted thoſe Terms, were ſpiteful Perſons, that only ſought for an Opportunity to diſturb the Peace of the Church and of the Empire: Laſtly, if that Expreſſion were offenſive to him, he ought not nevertheleſs to have acted as he had done, nor to forbid all his Subjects in general to go to Rome, but he might have given him Notice of it by his Ambaſſadors. He gives him to underſtand that he ſent two other Cardinals, by the Advice of Henry Duke of Bavaria, and entreats him to receive them favourably, to the end that the Buſineſs might be accommodated through the Mediation of that Duke.

The Letter in which Frederick deſires the Confirmation of Guy the Son of the Count of Blandrata choſen Archbiſhop of Ravenna, follows the former. It is written in very reſpectful and ſubmiſſive Terms.

The Pope denies him that Favour in the fifth Letter, under Pretence, that he was unwilling to remove Guy from the City of Rome; and in the ſixth, complains of Frederick's Letter, becauſe he ſet his own Name before that of the Pope, exacted Homage and Fidelity of the Biſhops; refus'd to admit his Legates to Audience, and hinder'd his Subjects from going to Rome.

The ſeventh is written to the Archbiſhop of Theſſalonica, whom he exhorts to be reconcil'd with the Church of Rome, and to procure the Re-union of the Greek Church.

The eighth is a Confirmation of the Treaty made with William King of Sicily.

The fifteen following, are taken out of the fourth Tome of the Hiſtorians of France by Du-Cheſne. The ten firſt, and twenty fourth, are written in Favour of Hugh, Chancellor of that Kingdom, to whom he grants an Archdeaconry of Arras, and the Revenues of a Prebend in the Cathedral of Paris: He likewiſe wrote to the Biſhops of Arras and Paris, and to ſome other Perſons on the ſame Subject. The three other Letters are directed to King Lewis; and in the twenty firſt, he adviſes him to bring the Inhabitants of Vezelay under Subjection to the Abbots of that Place, and to oblige them to reſtore what they had taken from him.

The twenty fifth, twenty ſixth, twenty ſeventh and twenty eighth, relate in like Manner to the Abby of Vezelay.

By the twenty ninth, he renders the Abby of Baume in the Dioceſs of Beſanſon, ſubject to the Juriſdiction of that of Cluny, as a Priory that ought to depend on it.

The ſix following, relate to the Primacy of Toledo, and the Affairs of Spain.

The thirty ſixth, thirty ſeventh, thirty eighth, thirty ninth and fortieth, treat of Matters concerning the Primacy, Patriarchate and Rights of the Archbiſhop of Grado.

In the forty ſeventh and laſt, publiſh'd by M. Baluzius and directed to Berenger Metropolitan of Narbonne, he confirms the Declaration made by Ermengarda Lady of the Mannor of Narbonne, by which ſhe prohibited the Alienation of the Revenues and Eſtates of the Archbiſhop of that Province after his Deceaſe, and denounces an Anathema againſt thoſe who ſhould preſume to do it.

Father Dachery has inſerted in the firſt Tome of his Spicilegium, a Privilege granted by Pope Adrian IV. to the Monaſtery of Caſaure.

Alexander IIId's Letters.

The firſt Letter of Alexander III. is written to the Canons of Bononia about his Election.

The ſecond to Arnulphus Biſhop of Liſieux on the ſame Subject, and about the Aſſembly of Pavia.

The third is the Bull for the Canonization of Edward I. King of England.

The following relate to the Affair of Thomas Becket Archbiſhop of Canterbury, except the thirty ſecond, which is an Inſtruction to the Sultan of Iconium, who was deſirous to embrace the Chriſtian Religion.

Of the Popes of Rome.

The forty fifth, forty ſixth, and forty ſeventh, are the Letters which were written by him, concerning the Treaty of Peace, that he made at Venice, with the Emperor Frederick.

In the forty eighth, he recommends to a certain Indian King, commonly call'd Preſter John, the Legate, whom he ſent into his Country.

In the forty ninth, he returns Thanks to Hugh, for a Book which he had ſent to him, and entreats him to endeavour to procure the Reconciliation of the Emperor of Conſtantinople, with the Church of Rome.

The fiftieth, is the Letter for the calling of the General Council at Lateran.

The fifty firſt, is a Letter about the Opinion of Peter Lombard, who maintain'd, That Jeſus Chriſt, quatenus Man, is not a Thing.

The fifty ſecond, is a Confirmation of the Rights and Privileges of the Archbiſhop of Colen.

The two following, relate to the Erection of the Biſhoprick of Alexandria della Paglia, a City newly built in the Milaneſe Territory. He nominated the firſt Biſhop, but to the end that that Nomination might not be prejudicial to the Inhabitants, he left them the Liberty of proceeding to an Election for the Future.

The fifty fifth, fifty ſixth, and fifty ſeventh, contain the Confirmation of the Promotion of John to the Biſhoprick of St. Andrew in Scotland, againſt Hugh who was nominated by the King.

By the fifty eighth, directed to Caſimir Duke of Poland, he ratifies certain Conſtitutions made by that Prince for the Preſervation of Church Revenues.

The fifty ninth, is a circular Letter directed to all the Chriſtian Princes, in which he exhorts them to afford Succours to the Chriſtians of the Holy-Land, and renews to thoſe that do ſo, the Privileges and Immunities granted by Urban and Eugenius his Predeceſſors, and puts their Eſtates, Wives, and Children, under the Protection of the Holy See.

The ſixtieth, is directed to all the Biſhops of Chriſtendom on the ſame Subject, to the end that they might publiſh the preceding Letter in their reſpective Dioceſſes, and induce the Princes and People to ſo pious an Undertaking.

In the three following Letters, directed to certain Prelates of England, he gives them an Account after what Manner he concluded a Treaty of Peace with the Emperor at Venice.

Theſe are the Letters of Pope Alexander III. that are contain'd in the firſt Collection, to which three Additions have been ſince annex'd; the firſt of thoſe Additions comprehends fifty ſix Letters, publiſh'd by Father Sirmondus, in the End of the Works of Peter Abbot of Cellet.

In the firſt eighteen, which are almoſt all directed to Peter Abbot of St. Remy at Rheims, he nominates him in a Commiſſion with others to determine divers particular Affairs.

The nineteenth, directed to the Archbiſhop of Upſal in Sweden and his Suffragans, contain ſeveral Conſtitutions againſt Simony, and againſt the Privileges of Clergymen, taken out of the Councils and the Decretals of the Popes.

In the twentieth, he recommends to the Charity of the Northern Chriſtians, Fulcus Biſhop of the Eſtons, a People of Sweden.

In the twenty firſt, he exhorts the Northern Kings and Potentates, to perform the Duties of Chriſtian Princes, to endeavour to procure the Advancement of the Church by encountering its Enemies.

In the twenty ſecond, directed to the Archbiſhop of Upſal and his Suffragans, he ſpecifies the Penances that they ought to impoſe for the Crimes of Inceſt and Uncleanneſs, and inveighs againſt two Abuſes that prevail'd in their Country, viz. the firſt, That the Prieſts were wont to celebrate Maſs with the Lees of Wine, or with Crumbs of Bread ſteept in Wine; and the ſecond concerning clandeſtine Marriages, that were contracted without the Benediction of the Prieſt.

The following relate to many particular Affairs of Churches or Monaſteries, which he himſelf decides, or for the Determination of which he grants a Commiſſion to other Perſons in the reſpective Places.

In the ſecond Addition, are compris'd 109 Letters directed to Lewis VII. King of France, or to the Prelates of his Kingdom, the greateſt Part of which relate to the Affairs of the Churches of France; as alſo ſome to the Conteſt between Alexander and Victor, and others are only recommendatory Letters or full of Compliments. They are taken out of the Collection of the Hiſtorians of France, by Du-Cheſne.

The laſt Addition contains 22 Letters, of which the ſix firſt are written on the Schiſm rais'd by Victor; the two following following treat of the Privileges of the Canons of Challon: In the ninth, he acquaints Henry Archbiſhop of Rheims, after what Manner he was receiv'd in Rome: The five following were written in Favour of the Church of Vezelay: In the fifteenth, he commends Hugh Biſhop of Rhodez, for eſtabliſhing a general Peace in his Dioceſs: The ſeventeenth and eighteenth, are the Bulls for the Canonization of Edward King of England and St. Bernard: The twentieth, twenty firſt and twenty ſecond, are Acts of Approbation of the Order of the Knights of St. James in Spain; of that of the Monks of the Abby of St. Saviour at Meſſina; and of that of the Carthuſians, and of their Conſtitutions. There are alſo in the Addition to the tenth Tome of the Councils, five other Letters attributed to Alexander III. of which the four firſt relate to the Immunities of the Schools and Chapter of Paris, and the laſt to thoſe of the Chapter of Anagnia.

Of the Popes of Rome.

Lucius IIId's Letters.

Lucius III. having poſſeſs'd the See of Rome but a little While, has left us only three Letters.

By the firſt, he takes off the Excommunication of William King of Scotland, and the Suſpenſion of his Kingdom, denounced by the Archbiſhop of York, in Pope Alexander's Life-time, for oppoſing the Conſecration of John, elected Biſhop of St. Andrew.

The ſecond Letter is directed to Henry II. King of England, in which he exhorts that Prince to permit a Tax to be rais'd in his Kingdom, for the Relief of the Holy-Land.

The third is a Decree againſt the Hereticks of that Time, in which he pronounces a perpetual Anathema againſt the Cathari, the Patarians, thoſe that ſtyle themſelves the Humbled or the poor People of Lyons, the Paſſagians, the Joſepins and the Arnoldiſts, and prohibits all Sorts of Perſons to profeſs Divinity or to preach publickly, unleſs they have obtain'd a Licenſe from the Holy See, or from the Dioceſan Biſhop. He likewiſe condemns all thoſe who preſume to maintain any Doctrines or Practices different from thoſe of the Church of Rome, concerning the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, Baptiſm, the Remiſſion of Sins, Marriage, or the other Sacraments, with their Abetters and Adherents: He ordains, That Clergymen, convicted of thoſe Errors ſhall be depos'd, and Laicks deliver'd up into the Hands of the Secular Judges to be puniſh'd, unleſs they immediately adjure them, without allowing any Pardon to Relapſes: He enjoyns the Archbiſhops and Biſhops to make a Viſitation every Year, either perſonally or by their Archdeacons, in order to diſcover ſuch Miſcreants: He exhorts the Counts, Barons, Lords and Magiſtrates vigorouſly to aid and aſſiſt the Clergymen in the Proſecution of thoſe Hereticks, under Pain of Excommunication, and Privation of their Dignities: And in that Caſe, he grants a peculiar Juriſdiction to the Archbiſhops and Biſhops, over ſuch Perſons as enjoy certain Immunities, and are ſubject only to the Holy See, provided they be obey'd as the Pope's Delegates, notwithſtanding all Manner of Privileges.

Urban IIId's Letters.

Urban III. gave Notice to all the Biſhops, of his Election by a circular Letter, dated January 11. A. D. 1186. which is the firſt of his Letters.

The ſecond, dedicated to William King of Scotland, relates to the Conteſt between the Biſhops of St. Andrew and Dunckell, the Trial of which was referr'd to the See of Rome, in the Time of his Predeceſſor, but could not be determin'd, till the Popedom of Urban, who entreats the King in this Letter to take the Biſhop of Dunckell into his Protection, and makes the ſame Requeſt in the following, to Jocelin Biſhop of Glaſco.

In the fourth, he writes to Baldwin Archbiſhop of Canterbury, about the building of a new Church in Honour of St. Stephen and St. Thomas.

In the laſt, he approves the Foundation of a Houſe of Hoſpitallers at Bononia, and ratifies their Conſtitutions and Privileges.

Gregory VIIIth's Letters.

Gregory VIII. was no ſooner advanc'd to the Papal Dignity, but he wrote a circular Letter to all the Faithful, to exhort them to relieve the Holy Land. He gives a lively Deſcription of the moſt deplorable Calamities that befel the Chriſtians, when the City of Jeruſalem was taken by Saladin, and earneſtly preſſes the Faithful to undertake an Expedition for the Recovery of it out of the Hands of that implacable Enemy of Chriſtianity. He grants Indulgences to thoſe, who ſhall take upon them the Croſs for the holy War, and renews in their Favour, the ſpecial Privileges that were allow'd by his Predeceſſors in the like Caſe.

In the ſecond Letter, he ordains, That to deprecate the Wrath of God, the Faithful ſhould be oblig'd to faſt during five Years, on all Fridays from Advent to Chriſtmaſs, and that they ſhould abſtain from Fleſh on Wedneſdays and Saturdays.

Of the Popes of Rome.

By a third Letter, he confirms the Orders that his Predeceſſors had given to all the Eccleſiaſtical Judges to determine the Law-ſuits of private Perſons.

Clement IIId's Letters.

The five firſt Letters of Clement III. relate to the Conteſt that aroſe between John and Hugh about the Biſhoprick of St. Andrew in Scotland.

In the ſixth, he confirms the Rights and Immunities of the Church of that Kingdom.

The ſeventh, is the Act for the Canonization of Otto Biſhop of Bamberg.

Celeſtine IIId's Letters.

The firſt Letter of Celeſtin III. is directed to the Prelates of England, whom he orders to excommunicate all thoſe, who ſhall refuſe to obey William Biſhop of Ely, Legate of the Holy See and Regent of the Kingdom in the Abſence of King Richard, who was engag'd in the Expedition to the Holy-Land.

By the ſecond, he takes off the Excommunication denounced by Geffrey Archbiſhop of York, againſt Hugh Biſhop of Durham.

The third is the Act for the Canonization of St. Ubald Biſhop of Eugubio.

The fourth, is an elegant Exhortation to induce the Chriſtian Princes to make Peace, that they may be in a Condition to regain the Holy-Land.

In the fifth, directed to the Biſhop of Lincoln, he gives him a Commiſſion to take Cognizance of the Miſdemeanors and Crimes of which the Archbiſhop of York was accus'd.

The ſixth, ſent to the Dean and Archdeacon of the Church of Lincoln, is written on the ſame Subject.

In the ſeventh, he conſtitutes Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, his Legate in England; and in the eighth, orders the Biſhops of England to acknowledge and obey him in that Quality.

The ninth, is a Fragment of a Letter directed to the Archbiſhop of Sens, in which he declares null the Divorce that Philip King of France had made with Queen Batilda, the Daughter of the King of Denmark, under Pretence of nearneſs of Kin, and enjoyns him to re-take her.

In the tenth, he entreats Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, to levy Recruits to be ſent into the Holy-Land to King Richard.

